Health director says adiós

■ County officials praise the work of Graham Dameron, who is leaving after 25 years of service.

By Lisa Pogue
The Daily Iowan

Scholar, father of twins, husband, health director, refugee adviser, naval officer, Peace Corps Volunteer, and distinguished member of more than a dozen associations and committees — Graham Dameron has held numerous titles in his lifetime.

Most recently, grandfather was added to the list. But on Saturday, Dameron will resign and hand down the title of Johnson County public-health director to a successor, who will be named next week.

County officials know Dameron as a man who juggles a lot of balls, delegates authority with confidence, and successfully pursues grants — building a strong team that has led the Johnson County Public Health Department to become one of the best in Iowa.

"Graham goes beyond expectations," said County Supervisor Terrence Neuzil. "He's been incredible for Johnson County and has enabled the Department of Public Health to be recognized as the top in the state."

The Colorado native and UI alumnus said he will pursue other options in search of a "career-track change," and he plans to be a full-time employee elsewhere. He's unsure of what field he'll delve into next, and he hasn't made any

Mezvinsky pleads insanity in fraud case

■ Anti-malaria drugs and bipolar disorder impaired his judgment, the ex-Iowa congressman says.

By Ron Todd
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Former Iowa Rep. Edward M. Mezvinsky, charged with swindling banks and clients out of $10.4 million, will plead not guilty by reason of insanity to fraud charges, defense papers say.

Lawyer Mark Cedrone notified U.S. District Judge Stuart Dalzell that Mezvinsky, 64, a one-time Iowa City resident, would raise the insanity defense based on a long history of mental illness, "most likely bipolar disorder."

"Essentially, Mr. Mezvinsky takes the position that even though he may have engaged in much [although not all] of the conduct attributed to him in the indictment," he did not intend to defraud anyone, Cedrone wrote in papers filed Tuesday in federal court.

Mezvinsky represented Iowa's 1st District from 1973 until 1977, when he was unseated by Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa. He served on the House panel that voted to impeach Richard Nixon. Mezvinsky is married to former U.S. Rep. Marjorie

Gerard out for 60 days

■ The Iowa Supreme Court reprimands the local judge for his sexual relationship with a prosecutor.

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

District Associate Judge Stephen Gerard II will receive a 60-day suspension without pay for engaging in a sexual relationship with a prosecutor who regularly appeared in his courtroom, the Iowa Supreme Court ruled Thursday.

Because Gerard, 51, secretly maintained the relationship with former Assistant Johnson County Attorney Angela Boeke for almost three months, the high-court judges wrote, the recommended 45-day suspension from the Commission of Judicial Qualifications wasn't enough.

The suspension of Gerard, a six-year district associate judge who graduated from the UI law school in 1975, will begin July 9.

"This conduct was a serious misuse of the judge's privilege to work and serve as a servant of the citizens of Iowa," the judges wrote. "While in hindsight he can admit that he acted improperly, this is no buffer for the public erosion of confidence that resulted from Judge Gerard's indiscretions with the assistant county attorney."

Macedonia, rebels agree to cease-fire

■ While NATO cheers the action, fighting breaks out after the cease-fire deadline.

By Colleen Barry
Associated Press

SKOPJE, Macedonia — Macedonian leaders and ethnic Albanian rebels agreed Thursday to a cease-fire, clearing the way for NATO to disarm the rebels and take steps to ensure that an insurgency does not engulf this Balkan nation in war. But fighting flared after the deal was announced.

The deal, brokered by NATO and European Union officials, was aimed at easing tensions that have hampered a political agreement on ethnic Albanian demands for better protection of their rights.

"It is a major step forward," said Nikola Dimitrov, the national-security adviser to President Boris Trajkovski. "Of course, it is not the end of the crisis, but it will create the conditions for political dialogue, and of course, it is one of the conditions for disarmament to be realized."

"We think and we hope this will bring peace to the Macedonian citizens," he said.

The breakthrough comes amid intensified diplomacy by EU envoy François Leotard and his U.S. counterpart, James Pardew, and just a day after Trajkovski announced progress in political dialogue among the major Macedonian Slav and ethnic Albanian political parties. The dialogue had stalled after rioting early last week.

U.S. State Department spokesman Richard Boucher welcomed the cease-fire.

"We believe it's a very important and necessary step toward resolving the crisis in Macedonia. We urge the parties to fully honor the agreements that they negotiated with NATO and the European Union," he said.

The midnight cease-fire deadline approached amid heavy fighting around Tetovo, a mostly Albanian city 20 miles west of the capital. Just hours after the deal was announced, the rebels rained shells and opened gunfire on police positions near the sports stadium in the city, striking houses. Eleven civilians were injured, five seriously, with gunshot and shrapnel wounds, hospital director Rain Thaci said.

The government responded with maximum force, using tanks, warplanes, and helicopter gunships to target rebel checkpoints around the neighboring villages of Poroj and Dzepiste, as well as suspected rebel positions.

Center celebrates turning 30

■ The Latino Native American center will welcome back alumni from across the nation.

By Peter Boylan
The Daily Iowan

Celebration and plenty of memories will mark the 30th anniversary of the Latino Native American Cultural Center today through July 8.

Alumni from as far away as Texas and California will converge at the center's 308 Melrose Ave. location in order to honor and sort through the moments of the past 30 years.

"It's a reunion," said anniversary Chairwoman Adele Rodriguez. "We're bringing alumni together from all across the country. The first-ever manager of the center back in 1971 will be attending."

The festivities will kick off today with a reception from 3-5 p.m. at the center. The reception will be followed by an outdoor concert on the Pedestrian Mall by UI Writers' Workshop alumna Joy Harjo and her band, Poetic Justice.

On Saturday, the event will continue with a buffet breakfast in the Levitt Center's fourth-floor assembly hall from 8:30-9 a.m. A keynote address delivered by the three founding members of the original Chicano Indian American Student Center — Antonio Zavala of Chicago, Ruth Pushetonequa of Davenport, and Dr. Nancy "Rusty" Barcelo of Seattle — will follow at 9:15.

The celebration will encompass exhibits, tours, and displays at various locations across campus, including the center's archives exhibit in the Special Collections sections on the third floor of the Main Library.

"It's a pretty good sampling," said university archivist David McCartney. "There are a number of different materials."

Among the items on display are a number of photographs from social and political events that the center either sponsored or hosted over the years. T-shirts from past fund-raisers, sample newsletters, and excerpts from The Daily Iowan have been included, he said.

Saturday's activities will conclude with a dinner banquet and dance in the IMU second-floor ballroom. The dance will feature the music of the Latino Pride band of Des Moines, headed by UI alumnus Jesse Villalobos.

"We want to make the UI, Iowa City, and the communities of the state of Iowa aware of just how important the cul-

Each event is expected to draw anywhere from 75-200 people, the organizers said, and the celebration comes at what may be a turning point in the center's history. Phillip Jones, the university's vice president for Student Services, has proposed relocating the center in a new West Side residence hall that would be located at the center's current site, which would mean tearing down the house. The Afro-American Cultural Center and the first-ever Asian-American Cultural Center would also be housed in the residence hall.

Subdivision wait continues

■ Oakes Construction will wait, for now, to see whether it can build an 18-lot subdivision.

By Deidre Bello
The Daily Iowan

After a brief discussion of minor problems, the Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission moved to defer decision on an addition of 18 lots for a residential subdivision.

Oakes Construction has applied for rezoning to allow for a single-family, residential, 18-lot subdivision located at the west end of Bristol Drive, but commission members said they want to discuss the issue at greater length before approving the rezoning.

The lots for the homes range from a quarter-acre to 1.6 acres in size, said Jim Kenyan, a managing partner of Oakes Construction.

"It's the sixth addition to the area," he said.

An area with trees that are more than 200 years old will not be cleared, Kenyan said. Trees that are only 20-25 years old will be removed, he said. The wooded buffer is on the south side of Interstate 80.

Ten acres would become a subdivision, and 20 acres would be dedicated for recreational space for the public, said John Yapp, a planning and zoning staff member.

Rough areas have potential to become trails, and the flatter areas could potentially be used to house playground equipment, he said.

The commission discussed the possibility of constructing secondary access to the subdivision and extending Bristol and Oakes drives. But because the neighborhood does not require special measures and receives fewer than 500 trips of traffic daily, there is no need for a secondary access road, Yapp said.

Now is the time to do this; it will make the least impact as a whole.

— Jim Kenyan,
Oakes Construction
managing partner

The city is planning to extend a water main to connect to the water plant, which would involve clearing trees surrounding the main. The city has not yet identified the extent of woodlands to be removed, but a city ordinance allows for 20 percent to be cleared.

"The part proposed to be built on is pretty wooded," said Ann Bovbjerg, the commission chairwoman.

Properties to the south are on septic systems, and it would be beneficial to connect them to the public sewer system in anticipation that the subdivision would be built in the future, Yapp said.

"Now is the time to do this; it will make the least amount of impact as a whole," said Kenyan. "Many of the residents are supportive of the addition."

CITY BRIEF

Man arrested for alleged theft and drunk driving

An Iowa City man who allegedly spent his birthday driving a stolen car on Dubuque Street was arrested by Iowa City police Wednesday.

Johnny Hicks, 56, was allegedly heavily intoxicated when officers approached him just before 5 p.m., Johnson County District Court records said. Officers reportedly spotted Hicks trying to put the car in drive while holding a 12 oz. can of La Crosse beer, the records said.

City Park on track toward wider trails

■ The park's 5,500 feet of trails will be brought into ADA compliance with $300,000 in renovations.

By Michael Dhar
The Daily Iowan

City Park is one step closer to undergoing nearly $300,000 in renovations to its trail system that would bring it into compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

The Iowa City City Council will vote to receive bids and move forward with specifications and a contract for repairs to the trail system at its formal work session July 10.

The city estimates that renovations to the park's 5,500-foot-long trail system will cost $275,000, plus an additional $20,000 for the baseball fields service road.

The trail is too narrow, very old, and in very poor condition," Councilor Dee Vanderhoef said.

Trails will be expanded to 10 feet in width, and the Park Road sidewalk will be expanded to 8 feet in width — approximately 5 feet wider than they currently are. The changes will be made to meet standards set by the ADA, Vanderhoef said. The act requires 8- to 10-foot-wide trails in parks so that they can be used by walkers.

joggers, bicyclists, and others. The project will involve completely rebuilding the trails, she said.

"Because we're widening it, we have to tear up the old trail," Vanderhoef said. "Otherwise, [the project] would involve patching down the sides."

The proposed construction would also include rebuilding and widening the sidewalk on Park Road and relocating a section of roadway in lower City Park.

Funding for the project will come from general-obligation bonds, road-use tax funds, and miscellaneous transfers, which will probably be surplus money from previous projects, Vanderhoef said.

City officials put the project together approximately a year ago, said City Manager Steve Atkins. Vanderhoef added that councilors expect to review bids over a period of three to six weeks.

Neither Atkins nor Vanderhoef knew how long construction would take or when it would begin.

"We'll have a better idea after we've gone over some of the bids," Vanderhoef said.

As public health director, Dameron has been responsible for supervising four to six employees, preparing the department's budget, authorizing purchasing, and preparing and presenting policy recommendations and long-range public-health programming, among many other duties.

"What I appreciate most about Graham is his vision about what public health is all about," said Supervisor Sally Stutsman. "He's always thinking outside the box and benefits the community through programs such as Women, Infants, and Children and Well Child."

The supervisors have conducted a nationwide search for Dameron's successor, who will take over in the fall, and they are in the final stages of selecting a candidate.

Dameron said he will miss the camaraderie he shares with his several job-related contacts and the department staff.

"You can spend a great deal of time on minor things, but you really don't have time for everything at this position," he said.

"The big picture in public health is prevention. You can't solve the problem just by treating the patient; you have to go into the environment and prevent it," he said.

And from the friendly laughter of the front office to the "buckle up" sticker on the exit door, Graham Dameron's passion for the well-being of others is as distinct and unmistakable as the awards covering his office, testifying to his legacy.

Mezvinsky to use insanity in fraud case

Margolies-Mezvinsky, D-Pa., who served from 1993 to 1995.

Because of Mezvinsky's mental illness, Cedrone wrote, "he did not appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct and consequently, was legally insane."

Cedrone said the illness affected his client's judgment, blinding him from the risks associated with a pyramid-like financial scheme he allegedly entered into with con-artists from Africa. In a pyramid scheme, early investors are paid off with the proceeds of later investors.

"An individual suffering from a severe bipolar disorder sees no downside to even the most bizarre financial investment," Cedrone said, adding that such people "frequently go bankrupt and destroy their lives and the lives of others."

He said Mezvinsky's mental problems were exacerbated by the use of the anti-malaria drug Lariam.

The federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention advises travelers not to take the drug, also known as mefloquine, if they have "a history of severe mental illness or other psychiatric disorders."

Mezvinsky was indicted in March on 66 counts of fraud and related charges. The next day, he filed a lawsuit in Philadelphia Common Pleas Court alleging that Lariam contributed to his mental problems.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Zauzmer has said that after looking at Mezvinsky's medical records and researching the drug, authorities concluded that the defense had no merit and Mezvinsky was in his right mind.

Under federal sentencing guidelines, he would likely face around seven to nine years in prison if convicted on all counts, prosecutors said.

Since 1999, Mezvinsky and his wife have been the target of lawsuits alleging they owe at least $7.4 million to banks and individuals.

Margolies-Mezvinsky has not been charged with any criminal wrongdoing. Both have filed for bankruptcy.

After leaving Congress, Mezvinsky moved to Pennsylvania, where he served as chairman of the Democratic State Committee before running an unsuccessful campaign for state attorney general in 1988.

His wife lost her bid for re-election to Congress in 1994 after casting the deciding vote in favor of former President Clinton's tax-raising budget in 1993. She ran unsuccessfully for lieutenant governor in 1998.

Both are good friends of the Clintons.

Macedonia reaches cease-fire pact with rebels

in neighboring hills.

Each side accused the other of using the last hours before the cease-fire to try to improve its positions. The rebels claimed to control a road from a northern Tetovo neighborhood, near the stadium and Macedonian army barracks, north to a crossing with Kosovo, where they have established four check points. Commander Sokoli, an insurgent spokesman, said he believed his soldiers would respect the midnight deadline.

Fighting around Tetovo ceased by midnight, but state radio reported lower-level clashes at Radusa, 15 miles west of Skopje, the capital, after the deadline. It also said the rebels attacked police stations at Terce village, near the Kosovo border and Lesok, northwest of Tetovo, after midnight. There was no immediate comment by either the government or the rebels on the reports.

NATO wants to ensure that the cease-fire is holding before sending troops to begin the difficult task of disarming the rebels, who have moved relatively freely through the mountainous northern region bordering the southern Yugoslav province of Kosovo.

The so-called National Liberation Army drew heavily on forces from the now-disbanded Kosova Liberation Army, which fought its own insurgency to throw off Serbian rule. The province is now under international administration.

NATO's role "has to be in what we call a benign and consensual environment," said NATO spokesman Paul Barnard in Skopje. "We are not here to enforce the disarmament."

Reid Adm. Craig Quigley, speaking for U.S. Defense Minister Vlado Buckovski said some 3,000 NATO troops from 15 nations would be deployed by mid-month and that the actual disarmament would begin two weeks later after collection sites are identified.

Macedonian Defense Minister Vlado Buckovski said some 3,000 NATO troops from 15 nations would be deployed by mid-month and that the actual disarmament would begin two weeks later after collection sites are identified.

Still, he said, the United States welcomed the cease-fire. "We're very, very pleased to see that; it's a very important step," he said. "It just goes to what both the United States and many other nations have been saying, that indeed you need to have a political solution to this, not a military one."

The final composition of the new NATO force has not been determined, but Barnard said British troops would lead the operation, working with Greek, Italian, and French forces to collect the weapons, which are to be removed from the country and destroyed. U.S. troops would handle logistics, he said, without elaborating on whether that would be their only role or explaining what logistics entails.

Macedonian Defense Minister Vlado Buckovski said some 3,000 NATO troops from 15 nations would be deployed by mid-month and that the actual disarmament would begin two weeks later after collection sites are identified.

The operation is expected to be completed in four to six weeks.

Macedonia's chief of general staff, Pante Petrevski, signed a cease-fire document with NATO on Thursday in Skopje, and Ali Ahmeti, the rebel NLA's political leader, signed a separate deal with NATO Wednesday evening in the southern Kosovo city of Prizren.

PATV asks city for $125,000 grant

Rene Paine, the PATV director, adding that the city expected at the inception of the not-for-profit organization that it would eventually have its own building.

PATV has agreed on a purchase price of $285,000 for the new building, and it expects to spend an additional $100,000 in renovations.

The Iowa City City Council has been waiting for a solid proposal from PATV before approving the allocation of the grant.

Time constraints based on the pending sale have sped up the city's approval process. The organization needs a letter from the council approving the grant by July 20 in order to purchase the building by mid-August.

Before the council can approve PATV's request, the city's Telecommunications Commission must meet to generate a recommendation for the council, said commission member Kembrew McLeod. Commission members have scheduled a special meeting for next week to discuss the subject, he said.

The city's grant money and contributions from PATV fundraising events will help finance yearly mortgage payments. An alliance between PATV and the Evert Conner Center for Independent Living will supply the rest of the necessary funding.

Part of the building would house the Evert Conner Center, which would lease space on a rent-to-own basis from PATV for $1,600 a month. The center provides services to disabled persons. The arrangement would provide a "revenue stream" for PATV, Paine said, and would also support a common mission of providing people with access to community resources.

Money collected from cable-television subscribers will pay for the city's grant. AT&T charges each of its customers 50-cents for local programming, which is passed directly through to the city for community and public-access programs, Paine said. PATV is asking for money from the AT&T fund.

"[PATV] is essentially requesting a loan from the city against future money going into that account," McLeod said.

When the fee was first applied, officials expected to use some of the money to obtain a joint facility for PATV and the city channel, Paine said. Since then, $125,000 has already been allocated for the city channel to move into its current location at Tower Place.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wife of Rep. Gary Condit, D-Calif., was questioned by law-enforcement officers Thursday in the disappearance of former federal intern Chandra Levy, the congressman's lawyer said.

Carolyn Condit and the investigators met in the Washington area, said a statement from the lawyer, Abbe Lowell.

Law-enforcement officials have given no indication why they wanted to question Carolyn Condit other than their repeated statements that they wanted to talk to anyone who might shed light on the case. Carolyn Condit was on a rare trip to Washington during the time when Levy disappeared, said Mike Lynch, Condit's chief of staff.

Levy, 24, of Modesto, Calif., was last seen April 30 at a Washington health club. Her internship at the U.S. Bureau of Prisons had ended, and she was planning to return home to attend her graduation ceremony at the University of Southern California.

Standards and Conduct. She resigned effective Nov. 11, 2000.

In their suspension of Gerard, the judges cited the commission's goal, which is "not to punish the wrongdoer but to restore public confidence in the system and its officers."

The judgment comes also as a result of Gerard's inability to process cases in a timely, efficient manner, the judges wrote. White testified that some pretrial rulings were delayed so long that criminal cases had to be dismissed. Gerard, who described himself as a "procrastinator" during his hearing, had promised to accept the high court's decision.

As a result of Gerard's absence, District Associate

Judge Patrick Grady of Linn County will take Johnson County cases every Monday through Wednesday, and other judges will fill in on Thursdays and Fridays.

Gerard's substitutes may vary from day to day, said 6th District Court Administrator Carroll Edmondson. With the faster pace, a higher volume of cases, and other judges on vacation, it could take anywhere from a few days to a couple of weeks to adjust. Currently, there are 20 judges in District 6, but only Gerard and five others are associate judges.

"[Because] there was speculation he would get more [time than proposed], we developed a contingency plan," Edmondson said. "We've been talking about it since about three months ago."

UNION BAR'S CLOSING A MERE SLAP ON THE WRIST ...

A futile punishment

On June 24, the Union Bar began serving a 21-day liquor-license suspension resulting from its infamous "bikini contest" fiasco this spring. In addition to the bar's closure, Union Bar owner Jim Pohl was issued a fine of $2,000 for the incidents occurring throughout the duration of the contests.

Lynn Walding, the administrator of Iowa's Alcoholic Beverage Division, accepted the closing and the dates on which it would occur, saying that he "wasn't willing to let them do it when school was not in session."

He continued: "The punishment had to have some meaning."

Meaning? Oh, please. One could find more meaning in the slurred speech of a freshman on her or his first barhop.

A substantial portion of the UI population is gone for the summer. The late-night, downtown scene of summer evenings is incredibly dismal in comparison with school-year weekend nights. The majority of these out-of-town students won't even hear of the bar's short-lived shutdown.

The majority of these out-of-town students won't even hear of the bar's short-lived shutdown.

However, according to state regulations, penalties such as these must be served within 60 days of the judgment against the particular establishment in question. And by rushing the bar's closure, Walding believes that the bar will discover the "meaning" in the punishment he appears to so adamantly advocate.

This entire ordeal has wasted far too much time and effort. And what will be gained by this decision? Merely a further display of the lack of cognitive ability in the Powers That Be. Walding is sure "they [the bars] won't do it again." Many, on the other hand, are substantially less convinced.

PERMANENT ARTIFICIAL HEART IS ONLY THE START ...

Technology benefits humanity

With the implantation of the first permanent artificial heart Monday, we have taken another step toward total human-machine integration. For now, most people with mechanical implants have them out of necessity. Many heart patients have pacemakers, while some amputees have had motorized replacement limbs attached. However, why should we only replace faulty body parts? Why not enhance what we already have, or possibly create new tools to be implanted for use?

Currently, most healthy people shun the idea of mechanical augmentations, because many tend to see the human body as a perfectly engineered tool that is impossible for humans to improve upon. However, in reality, we have been trying to improve upon ourselves throughout history. Toolmaking is an attempt to use our large brains to make up for our weak survival skills. Medicine, which has been practiced by all cultures in some form or another, is an attempt to counteract the injuries and diseases that our imperfect bodies often endure. Even now, people are scrutinizing the human genome in an attempt to discern what genes are responsible for everything from cancer to obesity. If flaws and defects are coded directly into our DNA, should we not do everything possible to counteract them?

In movies, characters that augment themselves with implanted machines are often portrayed as losing some of their intrinsic "humanity." For example, in Star Wars, Darth Vader is described as more machine than man, with the implication that this is a bad thing.

Is it wrong to alter our bodies in order to make them better? Are people with pacemakers or artificial limbs any less human than the rest of us? Of course not, because people's humanity is visible through their actions, not through what materials make up their arms, legs, and internal organs.

Human-machine integration is inevitable, but more importantly, it is desirable. The machines and tools we have created have improved the quality of our lives a million fold. We have changed the very face of our planet by building huge cities and massive artifacts.

Why should we stop there? We have altered our planet to better suit us, so why not enhance our bodies to better enjoy what we have created?

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

More to segregated graduations

I take issue with Stephanie Anderson's point [in "Pomp and segregation," DI June 25] that because students chose to have segregated graduation ceremony that it is a discriminatory act on the part of the students or the institution. Being a minority student myself at a pardonably white institution, I can understand why some students who are in minority groups would want to share their achievements together in separate ceremonies. In many pardonably white institutions, minority students are already segregated in many respects from the majority-student population. In many of these institutions, there are two communities — the majority-student population and the minority-student population — and each community has its own student organizations such as clubs, frats, and social groups. Being in a minority group and attending a pardonably white institution is not an easy task for minority students, so when these students make achievements in their institution, they naturally want to share with the people who helped them achieve their goals.

These ceremonies are no more discriminatory than the majority-student population sponsoring an event geared toward their group and opening it to the public. These ceremonies are open to the public and anyone who wishes to attend is welcome, including those students not involved in the ceremonies.

As for these ceremonies going against everything fought for by the civil-rights struggle, this is not true because these students are receiving their recognition from an institution that was once closed to them or that people who looked like them were not seen attending. Therefore, these ceremonies are much needed by these minority students to share their accomplishments with students similar to themselves and those who helped them to achieve their goals.

Remembering liberty and our independence

Wednesday, we celebrated the liberty we won after declaring independence from Britain and fighting the Revolutionary War.

It is an important day to reflect upon what we have done to advance the cause of liberty, for which so many of our ancestors died.

In some ways, we have advanced that cause. In his original draft of the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson chastised King George III for perpetuating the slave trade. We have taken the cause further and ended slavery.

Furthermore, we have taken steps to prevent legal privileges or immunities from being extended on the basis of race or sex.

Regrettably, acts advancing the cause of liberty largely end there. Instead of embracing liberty, we Americans have chosen to not trust ourselves to the liberty we deserve. We may have more liberty than the rest of the world, but we have bound ourselves in chains. Though our chains have fewer links than those of the rest of humanity, they are chains nonetheless.

Instead of giving ourselves the liberty to labor in whatever trade we choose as individuals, we have bound ourselves with the regulations of licensure and a massive income tax. We have denied ourselves, with government agencies such as the DEA and FDA, the liberty to determine what we will put in our bodies. We have abridged our liberty to speak under the guises of campaign-finance reform, hate crimes, and other regulations. Indeed there is no aspect of an American's life untouched by government regulation.

Of course, the government-worshippers would have us believe it is for our own good, whether that "good" be safety, security, or some other virtue imposed by government.

Benjamin Franklin warned,

"They that can give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety." In fact, the price of regulation has been just that.

Social Security has cost us our liberty and offers no security to retirees. Retirees at best get pennies for their "investment" and at worst are subject to the budgetary whims of Congress. The FDA costs us our liberty and offers no security to patients. People suffer, waiting years for life-enhancing drugs to get to market. Regulations of all sorts act as sand in the economic engine.

We deny ourselves fundamental liberties with almost every government act and simultaneously deprive ourselves of economic growth and technological advancement that can only be imagined.

Before our nation was independent, we fought in all avenues for liberty. We fought the war in courts and legislatures as well as battlefields. One champion of liberty, James Otis, quit his job as advocate general of the Boston vice-admiralty when asked to support general search warrants for government agents. In 1761, he challenged in court the broad power of government to search private property at will to find tax violations.

Though he lost the case, the first Congress and the American people embraced his ideas in the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution.

Today, we have forgotten Otis and the Fourth Amendment. We let the IRS, OSHA, ATF, and a host of other government agents rifle through our property destroy first.

Thomas Paine told us, "Government even in its best state is but a necessary evil; in its worst state an intolerable one." It would appear that no one in politics today agrees with Paine. Whether it is George W. Bush or Bill Clinton, a Republican Congress or a Democratic one, all propose a government that grows heavier every year and that crushes our liberty with every ounce.

If you are an American who believes that Independence Day has any meaning, I challenge you to answer Patrick Henry's question, "Is life so dear, or peace so sweet, as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery?" Sadly, I think most Americans today would prefer to remain coddled slaves of government than to say, "As for me, give me liberty or give me death!"

uncomfortable in her surroundings, especially when she notices Carlos talking animatedly with a Latina girl. The scene is meant to represent the cultural divide separating Nicole and Carlos, but Nicole's anxiety over Carlos' flirting comes off as mere jealousy, rather than fear that he may be better suited to someone of his own ethnic background.

Later in the film, writers Phil Hay and Matt Manfredi make a second, failed attempt to explore

The entire exchange is laughably implausible and unnecessary. Not only does the scene seem added purely to bolster the film's "serious" content, but the clueless "white boy" character is entirely too tactless to be believable.

With little to speak of in the realm of dramatic tension, all crazy/beautiful has to rely on is the strength of its romance. Unfortunately, it boggles the

The wizard of Ozzfest

NEW YORK (AP) — When the wife of heavy-metal god Ozzy Osbourne came up with the idea of a tour featuring the heavy hitters of metal and hard rock, the reaction from the concert industry was lukewarm, at best.

"In my gut feeling, I felt that it would definitely work, because there was a huge void in the marketplace for it," Sharon Osbourne said. "Not a lot of people in the market agreed with me at the time."

Certainly, no one can disagree with her now.

Ozzfest, now in its sixth year, has consistently ranked as one of the top concert draws of the year, thanks to a lineup that this year features Ozzy Osbourne's own Black Sabbath, Marilyn Manson, Crazy Town, and best new artist Grammy nominee Papa Roach. The tour kicked off June 29 in Chicago; it will end Aug. 12 in Holmdel, N.J.

Gary Bongiovanni of Pollstar, a concert-industry trade publication, noted that many multi-act music festivals, such as Lillith Fair or Lollapalooza, faded away after several years.

Ozzfest is still going strong, however. Last year, it drew some 19,000 per show, said Bongiovanni said. This year, it's averaging approximately 18,000.

"The appeal is to largely teenagers; the male teenage demographic is one of the most active when it comes to concerts," he said.

Ozzfest started in 1996, just around the time Lollapalooza, the summer alternative-rock festival that featured such platinum acts as the Red Hot Chili Peppers, was at its peak.

Moving pictures that really move

■ Local movie buffs can help you plan your own private Cannes this summer.

By Aaron McAdams
The Daily Iowan

If the movies currently gracing local theater screens don't inspire you to sprint breathlessly to the cinema, then maybe this summer is a perfect time for you to expand your film vocabulary.

For those readers stumped for a video to rent, or eager to catch up on those classic films that you know you should see but never have, the DI chatted with a few local movie buffs to generate a list of films that will make for fun and fruitful summer viewing.

The 400 Blows (1959) Francois Truffaut's semi-autobiographical film follows Antoine Doinel, a troubled youth whose misbehavior at home and at school lands him in a center for delinquent minors. "It does a realistic job of how a child will grow up and run into things he can't understand," said David Murray, the owner of the Hut Video, 610 S. Dubuque St. "It's a growing-up, coming-of-age story that's not fabricated at all."

Clerks (1994) Directed by Kevin Smith (Dogma, Chasing Amy), this low-budget comedy follows convenience and video-store clerks Dante and Randall, who spend their time between quirky customers ranting about their slacker existence. "I've worked a lot of behind-the-counter type jobs in high school and college, so I find it very funny," said Ross Meyer, a clerk at That's Rentertainment Video, 218 E. Washington St. "All the things that happen in the movie seem so outrageous, but they're not at all."

Dancer In The Dark (2000)

Icelandic pop singer Bjork stars as an immigrant single mother who escapes from her troubled life into daydreams of American musicals. "Dancer in the Dark is probably the most powerful film I've seen in years," Meyer said. "It's beautiful in every way — filmmaking, acting, music."

Desperate Living (1977)

John Waters directs this outrageous tale of a maid and a housewife who find themselves in the fictional kingdom of Mortville, where all sorts of Waters' trademark tastelessness ensues. "Waters is famous for being over-the-top, with insane characters doing insane things, offending each other," Murray said. "In Desperate Living, every single scene is an offense to some morality, but it's completely fictionalized, which makes it funny."

The Wizard of Oz (1939)

A tornado carries young Dorothy and her dog Toto from the black-and-white world of Kansas to the Technicolor dreamland of Oz, where they encounter the Tin Man, Scarecrow, Cowardly Lion, and Wicked Witch of the West. "All the lists are wrong. Citizen Kane isn't the most important movie in the world, The Wizard of Oz is," Murray said. "So many people reference it in everything, from music to other movies."

Can 'Survivor' survive rigging rumors?

■ Critics of the hit show contend that some of the "reality" scenes were staged.

By David Bauder

NEW YORK — Ever since Tina Wesson won the second million-dollar jackpot in May, "Survivor" seems to have lost the immunity idol.

A nagging sense that all is not how it seems on the hit "reality" show has followed the news that "Survivor" executive Filming is about to begin for the show's third edition in Kenya. Only when it goes on the air this fall will CBS know whether the unabashed love affair viewers have had with "Survivor" will be tested.

"All signs indicate 'Survivor' is just as popular, if not more popular, than when the second edition ended," CBS spokesman Chris Ender said.

Others aren't so sure.

NATION & WORLD*Bush appoints new head G-man

■ The president names a veteran prosecutor to direct and repair the beleaguered FBI.

By Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush named veteran prosecutor Robert Mueller to take over the FBI and begin repairing the nation's premier law-enforcement agency that has suffered embarrassments ranging from bungled Oklahoma City bombing documents to the discovery of an FBI spy.

Mueller has previously won top-level appointments from Bush's father and from President Clinton, but both Republicans and Democrats suggested there will be pointed questioning at confirmation hearings.

If confirmed by the Senate, Mueller, a 56-year-old Republican and decorated Vietnam War veteran, will fill a 10-year term as the sixth full-time director of the FBI. L. Patrick Gray and William Ruckelshaus served as acting directors during the Watergate era.

Louis Freeh retired last month, two years before his term would have expired.

Attorney General John Ashcroft, who had championed Mueller as a trusted team player, interrupted his vacation in Missouri to attend Thursday's Rose Garden ceremony in which Bush charged Mueller with assuring the nation that the FBI is "independent of politics and uncompromising in its mission."

"The FBI has a great tradition that Mr. Mueller must now affirm, and some important challenges he must confront," the president said.

The most immediate challenge will be winning over senators fed up with what they see as the FBI's we-know-best attitude and with its headline-making mishaps: the botched investigation of former nuclear scientist Wen Ho Lee, the mishandling of evidence in the Oklahoma City bombing trial that forced the postponement of Timothy McVeigh's execution, and the discovery in February that veteran FBI agent Robert Hanssen had been spying for the Russians for more than 15 years.

As low-key as his reputation, Mueller spent just 48 seconds at the microphone Thursday. He pledged to "enforce our nation's laws fairly and with respect to the rights of all Americans."

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said Mueller inherits an FBI "beleaguered by a series of high-profile mistakes and by a culture that too often does not recognize and correct its errors."

Added Leahy: "I will be interested in hearing Mr. Mueller's views, his willingness to acknowledge and correct the bureau's problems, and his ability to meet these challenges head on."

Another committee member, Republican Charles Grassley of Iowa, said he wants personal meeting with Mueller to see if he is equipped to overhaul the agency's "management culture with an air about it that the FBI can do no wrong" and to restore public confidence in federal law enforcement.

FBI Deputy Director Tom Pickard, who was named acting director June 22, will continue in that post until Mueller is confirmed.

Bush settled on Mueller on June 29, some three or four weeks after interviewing him in the Oval Office, said White House spokesman Ari Fleischer.

Mueller had long been the front-runner for the job, but subsequent to his interview, Bush ordered aides to take one last look at other candidates. He wanted, aides said, a director capable of reining in the independent streak that the FBI had taken on under Freeh, who had a bitter and distrustful relationship with the Clinton administration.

Asked about the kind of relationship Bush wanted to establish between his Justice Department and any reshaped FBI, Fleischer told reporters: "It's not a question of deference; it's a question of judgement. The president believes that under Bob Mueller, the FBI will be headed by a man with sound judgment based on matters of law and justice — and not politics."

Mueller, a former acting deputy attorney general at Justice, won Ashcroft's support by aiding in the transition from the Clinton administration from January until May, when he resumed his job as U.S. attorney in San Francisco — the appointment he was given by Clinton.

Under the first President Bush, Mueller served as assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's criminal division, where he supervised the prosecutions of Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega and mobster John Gotti and headed the investigations of the BCCI banking scandal and the 1988 bombing of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland.

FBI watchers said Mueller's task now will be to change the bureau's culture, opening it to greater scrutiny by outside and internal watchdogs.

"People who are going to be sitting in judgment of his nomination will want to hear that," said Michael Bromwich, a former Justice Department inspector general.

Japanese police get rape suspect

■ Officials await a U.S. go-ahead for handing over an American serviceman.

Associated Press

OKINAWA CITY, Japan — A U.S. Air Force sergeant suspected of raping a woman on Okinawa island arrived at a police station here today, but the U.S. ambassador said talks on his handover were still under way.

Police believe Timothy Woodland, a 24-year-old staff sergeant stationed at Okinawa's Kadena Air Base, assaulted a local woman in her 20s last week in the parking lot of a popular tourist area. Woodland has denied the allegations.

A U.S. official in Washington, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said earlier today that the U.S. government had agreed on a handover for arrest by Japanese authorities.

But U.S. Ambassador Howard Baker said the deal hadn't yet been clinched.

"We are still working on the final details," he said in a statement. "We are hopeful that we can resolve the issue yet today."

Japanese authorities also refused to immediately com-firm that Woodland was to be arrested today.

Woodland becomes only the second American serviceman turned over to Japanese authorities prior to the filing of actual charges, and the first on Okinawa. He had been held in U.S. military custody following the June 29 attack.

Police here obtained an arrest warrant for Woodland on Monday, but under a bilateral pact, they generally need U.S. approval to assume custody of military suspects.

Washington's delay in giving that approval has generated anger on Okinawa and renewed criticism of the special legal status granted to the 26,000 troops stationed there.

Huge protests on Okinawa following the rape of a 12-year-old schoolgirl by three U.S. servicemen in 1995 prompted Washington to agree to consider handing over suspects before charges are filed.

The first such handover was made in 1996, when an American was suspected of attempted murder near Nagasaki. He was later convicted and sentenced to 13 years in prison.

Police on Okinawa said they wanted Woodland turned over to them in order to wrap up their investigation as soon as possible. But Washington had stressed Woodland's rights must be protected.

As is customary in Japan, no defense attorney has been present during the pre-arrest questioning of Woodland, said Okinawa police spokesman Akira Namihira. An interpreter has been provided.

A senior State Department official in Washington said the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo had been authorized to tell Japanese officials at a meeting today that the sergeant will be transferred to Japanese custody.

If charges are filed, Woodland will likely be tried in a Japanese court and face several years in a Japanese prison if convicted. Japan's conviction rate for cases that go to trial is more than 95 percent.

In a resolution before the arrest, the Okinawa prefectural assembly noted that this small island on Japan's southern fringe bears most of the burden of hosting the nearly 50,000 U.S. troops in this country.

"The recurrence of these crimes by American military personnel is the result of the concentration of U.S. bases here," it said, adding that Washington had used the bilateral pact as a "shield" against turning over Woodland.

Similar criticism was voiced in Japan's media.

NATION BRIEFS*Artificial-heart patient back on ventilator

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The world's first recipient of a self-contained artificial heart was put back on a ventilator Thursday for pre-existing medical problems.

"We continue to be pleased with his progress," Dr. Laman Gray told ABC's "Good Morning America." "We have a pact. He's going to take me fishing and teach me how to bass fish."

The patient, described only as a diabetic in his 50s, had been removed from the ventilator Wednesday and was able to talk to his family.

Linda McGinity Jackson, spokeswoman for Jewish Hospital, said the man was awake and in stable condition Thursday. His family was at his side.

"He squeezes their hands and moves around in the bed a bit," she said.

The decision to place him back on a ventilator was a result of pre-existing medical ailments not related to the heart, the hospital said.

The man has chronic renal and kidney failure and had multiple heart attacks, one of his doctors said. He had coronary bypass surgery around 1992.

The ventilator is expected to be removed within days.

The man was picked as a candidate for the operation because doctors believed he had an 80 percent chance of dying within 30 days and was ineligible for a natural heart transplant.

The softball-sized titanium and plastic pump known as the AbioCor is intended to give recipients more mobility than previous devices. It is wireless, and sends an electrical current through the skin to a control device that regulates the pumping of blood.

Like the human heart, it increases blood flow when the body is more active and decreases it when the body is at rest.

While stressing the man is "an extremely sick gentleman," Gray said there was a chance he could live well beyond the 60 days that is the initial goal of the experimental surgery.

But he and fellow surgeon Robert Dowling say they expect complications from Monday's surgery. Gray said the man could be susceptible to lung problems, infection, stroke, liver, and kidney failure.

Study: Cloning with stem cells causes abnormalities in mice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers have found serious abnormalities in cloned mice, a finding that strengthens the belief of many scientists that the technique used to clone Dolly the sheep should not be used on humans.

The findings are based on the use of embryonic stem cells in cloning and come as the Bush administration considers whether to allow federal funds for non-cloning stem cell research. The research will appear today in Science.

"This study confirms the suspicions of many of us that cloning of humans would be really dangerous," said Rudolf Jaenisch, the senior author of the study and a researcher at the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

David Humphreys, the first co-author of the study, said many of the mice cloned in the experiment appeared to be normal, including having normal genes, but there was evidence that during embryonic and fetal development the genes did not work properly.

"It is quite likely that just the animals that are most nearly normal make it to birth [in cloning], but our study shows that doesn't mean they are completely normal," he said. "There may be changes in gene expression that could affect them later in life."

In cloned humans, Jaenisch said, the gene-expression flaws could affect personality, intelligence, and other human attributes.

Humphreys said there was no evidence that the genes in the cloned animals were altered, but the way in which the genes made proteins was flawed and unstable. In effect, the researchers found that even though the biological blueprint was intact in the cloned animals, the way that the blueprint was read and interpreted was flawed. This could result in abnormal tissues and organs, they said.

Mickelson takes lead, Woods struggles at Western Open

■ It appears that even a vacation can't get Tiger back on track.

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press

LEMONT, Ill. — Stuck in a group of trees so far off the fairway he was past the cart path, Phil Mickelson put his hands on his head and studied his few options.

Two shots later, he was 4 inches from the pin, a tap-in away from par. When you're rolling like Mickelson is, even the tough shots seem easy.

And when you're struggling like Tiger Woods has lately, not even a fishing vacation can bring relief.

"The goal Thursday was really just to get into contention, not to shoot way up the leaderboard," said Mickelson, who followed his Greater Hartford Open win with

M. Spencer Green/Associated Press
Tiger Woods spends time alone while waiting to tee off on the fifth hole during the first round of the Western Open Thursday in Lemont, Ill.

a bogey-free 6-under 66 Thursday to finish one back in the first round of the Western Open.

"The goal is to have a shot on Sunday. This is a nice start."

Woods took last week off after finishing out of the top 10 in consecutive tournaments for the first time since 1999, but the break didn't seem to help. He struggled all day, overshooting greens, missing putts, and hitting shots so maddening he actually broke a club on the 18th hole.

A double-bogey on the par-4 18th left him at 1-over 73, eight strokes behind leader Mark Wiebe. Davis Love III also shot a 66, tying Mickelson at one back.

"I told my wife, when I'm playing well, I know it," said Wiebe, who hasn't won a PGA Tour event since 1986. "I just feel like I'm playing really good golf right now."

Ditto for Mickelson.

After shooting a 75 in the final round of the U.S. Open, Mickelson dug out his old psychology notebooks from college. He practiced some visualization techniques, seeing what he wanted to do rather than worrying about what he didn't want to do.

The trick worked at the GHO, and the good vibes continued Thursday as he birdied his first hole. He hasn't had a bogey since the 15th hole in the second round of the GHO, a 57-hole streak.

Not even those trees on the par-5 9th could stop him. About 300 yards from the front of the green, Mickelson tried to slice a driver. Instead, his shot landed in the trees.

He hit into a bunker in front of the green, and then blasted out, with the ball rolling within 4 inches of the hole. He tapped in for par, smiling widely as the crowd roared.

"You are not going to go low four days, but when you do have it and you start making some putts, you need to capitalize on those rounds," he said. "I still need to have another one or two low rounds to be on top Sunday."

SPORTS*BASEBALL ROUNDUP*St. Louis hands Milwaukee its ninth loss in 11 games

MILWAUKEE — Darryl Kile allowed six hits in eight-plus innings, and rookie Kerry Robinson had three hits as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Milwaukee Brewers, 5-2, Thursday.

The Cardinals handed the free-falling Brewers their ninth loss in 11 games. The Brewers are just 4-11 at Miller Park since June 1.

Kile (9-6), whose start was moved back a day because of a stiff back, struck out eight and didn't walk a batter. Steve Kline relieved Kile after Mark Loretta's leadoff single in the ninth and struck out two batters. Mike Timlin got the final out for his second save.

Right-hander Kyle Peterson (1-2), recalled from Triple-A Indianapolis before the game, wasn't the solution to the Brewers' pitching problems. He gave up five runs, four earned, and nine hits in just 3½ innings.

The Cardinals scored their first two runs on plays in which Brewers outfielders failed to hit the cutoff man.

Expos 9, Marlins 6

MONTREAL — Geoff Blum homered from both sides of the plate and Lee Stevens hit a three-run shot to lead the Montreal Expos over Florida, 9-6, Thursday, the Marlins' seventh loss in eight games.

Blum hit a two-run homer off Chuck Smith (4-5) while batting left-handed to cap a six-run third inning. He added a two-run homer off Jesus Sanchez while batting right-handed in the fifth.

Stevens hit a three-run homer in the fourth following Vladimir Guerrero's game-tying RBI single to put Montreal ahead, 4-1. Stevens' drive was a liner that struck the top of the right-field wall and bounced over.

Reds 7, Pirates 1

CINCINNATI — Aaron Boone had the second two-homer game of his career, and Brady Clark added a three-run shot Thursday as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 7-1, and avoided a four-game sweep.

The Reds nosed back into fifth place in the NL Central, a half-game ahead of the Pirates, and wrapped up another deflating homestand that included three losses in their four-game series.

At 11-31, the Reds have the worst home record after 42 games since the expansion Montreal Expos started the 1969 season with the same mark.

Tigers 7, Royals 1

Detroit — Steve Sparks allowed five hits in eight innings, and Damion Easley hit a two-run triple as the Detroit Tigers beat Kansas City, 7-1, Thursday night for a three-game sweep of the Royals.

Robert Fick homered for the Tigers, who had lost eight straight before the Royals arrived.

The Royals have lost four straight after a six-game winning streak that included a three-game sweep of the Tigers last week in Kansas City. The Royals hadn't been swept in a three-game series at Detroit since Sept. 4-6, 1989.

Rockies 4, Padres 0

SAN DIEGO — Pedro Astacio matched his career-best by throwing a three-hitter, and All-Stars Todd Helton and Larry Walker homered as the Colorado Rockies beat San Diego, 4-0, Thursday.

Astacio allowed just four baserunners from the fifth inning on in earning his first shutout since May 1, 1997, at Philadelphia, when he was with Los Angeles. He has 10 shutouts and 26 complete games in his career. The Padres were shut out for the eighth time this season.

The Rockies won for just the third time in 16 games, avoided a three-game sweep and dropped the Padres back into last place in the NL West.

Blue Jays 7, Devil Rays 4

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Jose Cruz Jr. homered and drove in four runs as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Tampa Bay Devil Rays, 7-4, Thursday night.

Tampa Bay (25-60) has dropped 16 of 20 to become just the third team in baseball history to lose 60 games by the All-Star break. The others were the 1962 New York Mets (24-66) and Chicago Cubs (35-61).

Cruz hit a two-run homer in the third inning; he has 12 RBIs in 12 games against Tampa Bay this season. He went 3-for-5, adding a run-scoring triple during a three-run fifth and an RBI double in a two-run seventh.

Angels 5, Athletics 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Troy Glaus hit a two-run homer as the Anaheim Angels shook their offensive drought, beating the Oakland Athletics, 5-2, Thursday to snap a seven-game losing streak.

The Angels, who avoided a four-game sweep in Oakland, had just two runs in their previous 46 innings before getting three unearned runs in the third against the A's, who were missing AL MVP Jason Giambi from their lineup for just the third time this season.

One inning after A's right fielder Terrence Long made a spectacular diving catch in foul territory, he dropped a catchable fly ball at the warning track, allowing David Eckstein to score from first base.

Cubs 13, Mets 4

NEW YORK — Jason Bere shut down the Mets for seven innings and helped himself at the plate with two hits in a seven-run third, leading the Chicago Cubs to a 13-4 rout of New York on Thursday night.

Ron Coomer went 4-for-5 with a home run and four RBIs, and Ricky Gutierrez hit a two-run homer for the NL Central-leading Cubs, who need one victory in their next three games to reach 50 before the All-Star break for the first time since 1977.

Bere (6-4), who entered 0-2 with a 9.24 ERA in three career games against the Mets, gave up one run and four hits in an easy victory. He struck out five and walked two.

SPORTS BOX*Valentine and Floyd in All-Star spat

NEW YORK (AP) — Cliff Floyd won't have a problem flying to Seattle if he wants to confront Bobby Valentine in person about being snubbed for the All-Star Game.

Floyd was so certain he would make the team after talking to Valentine that he bought nearly $16,000 worth of plane tickets.

But Floyd wasn't among the selections for the National League team, and on Thursday, Valentine said the Florida Marlins outfielder "misunderstood the conversation" — prompting an angry response from Floyd.

"If he said I misunderstood, then he's lying," Floyd said in Montreal, where the Marlins were playing.

About all Floyd, his agents, and Valentine could agree on Thursday was that someone wasn't telling the truth.

Floyd and Valentine have been having a spat since May, when Floyd called the New York Mets skipper "a stupid manager" during a testy series between the teams.

I think 10th is reasonable, but I think we can do better'

— Iowa guard Luke Recker

Hawks accept preseason hype

■ Two preseason polls have the Hawkeyes riding high, and the team isn't surprised.

By Tyler Lechtenberg

The Daily Iowan

Duke, Maryland, Illinois, UCLA ... Iowa?

The first four schools regularly top national NCAA basketball polls, but this year a new face is poised to stand among college basketball's elite.

According to CNNSI.com and CBSSportsline.com, this season's Hawkeye men's basketball team is for real; both Web sites inserted the Hawkeyes into their preseason top 10 for the 2001-02 campaign.

CNNSI pegged Iowa ninth, and CBSSportsline has Iowa 10th.

With an experienced core of seniors Reggie Evans, Luke Recker, and Duez Henderson, Iowa will likely fill any leadership void left behind by graduated point guard Dean Oliver.

Recker was averaging 18 points a game before he injured his knee in a game against Indiana on Jan. 27. Evans, who had more than 20 double-doubles last year, was also second in the nation in rebounding. Iowa also retains the services of sophomores Brody Boyd and Glen Worley, who showed signs of brilliance last year as freshmen.

Add four prized recruits, led by swingman Marcellus Sommerville and guard Pierre Pierce, and the Hawkeyes will try to pick up where they left off last season — winning the Big Ten Tournament and going to the NCAA Tournament.

In fact, the only Big Ten team ranked higher than the Hawks in either poll is Illinois, last year's Big Ten regular-season champion and an eventual No. 1 seed in the NCAA tourney.

Several important members of next year's team said the rankings should make for an interesting season.

"I think 10th is reasonable, but I think we can do better than that," Recker said. This may only be the beginning of what next year's team can do, he added.

Still, Recker said, this early attention given to the Hawkeyes should be

Golfers mourn death of Callaway

■ The golf-club pioneer died of cancer Thursday morning.

By Doug Ferguson

Associated Press

Annika Sorenstam cried when she was told Thursday morning that Ely Callaway had died of cancer. Stephen Ames stared wide-eyed in disbelief when he heard the news. Others simply marveled at the legacy the golf-club pioneer left behind.

Callaway died at 82

"He raised the bar and educated all of us," said Barney Adams of Dallas-based Adams Golf, a business competitor who admired Callaway for his marketing acumen. "The Callaway Era will be long remembered."

Callaway died 10 weeks after a tumor was found on his pancreas during surgery to remove his gall bladder. He had taken a turn for the worse about a week ago, and Sorenstam was aware that he would not live much longer.

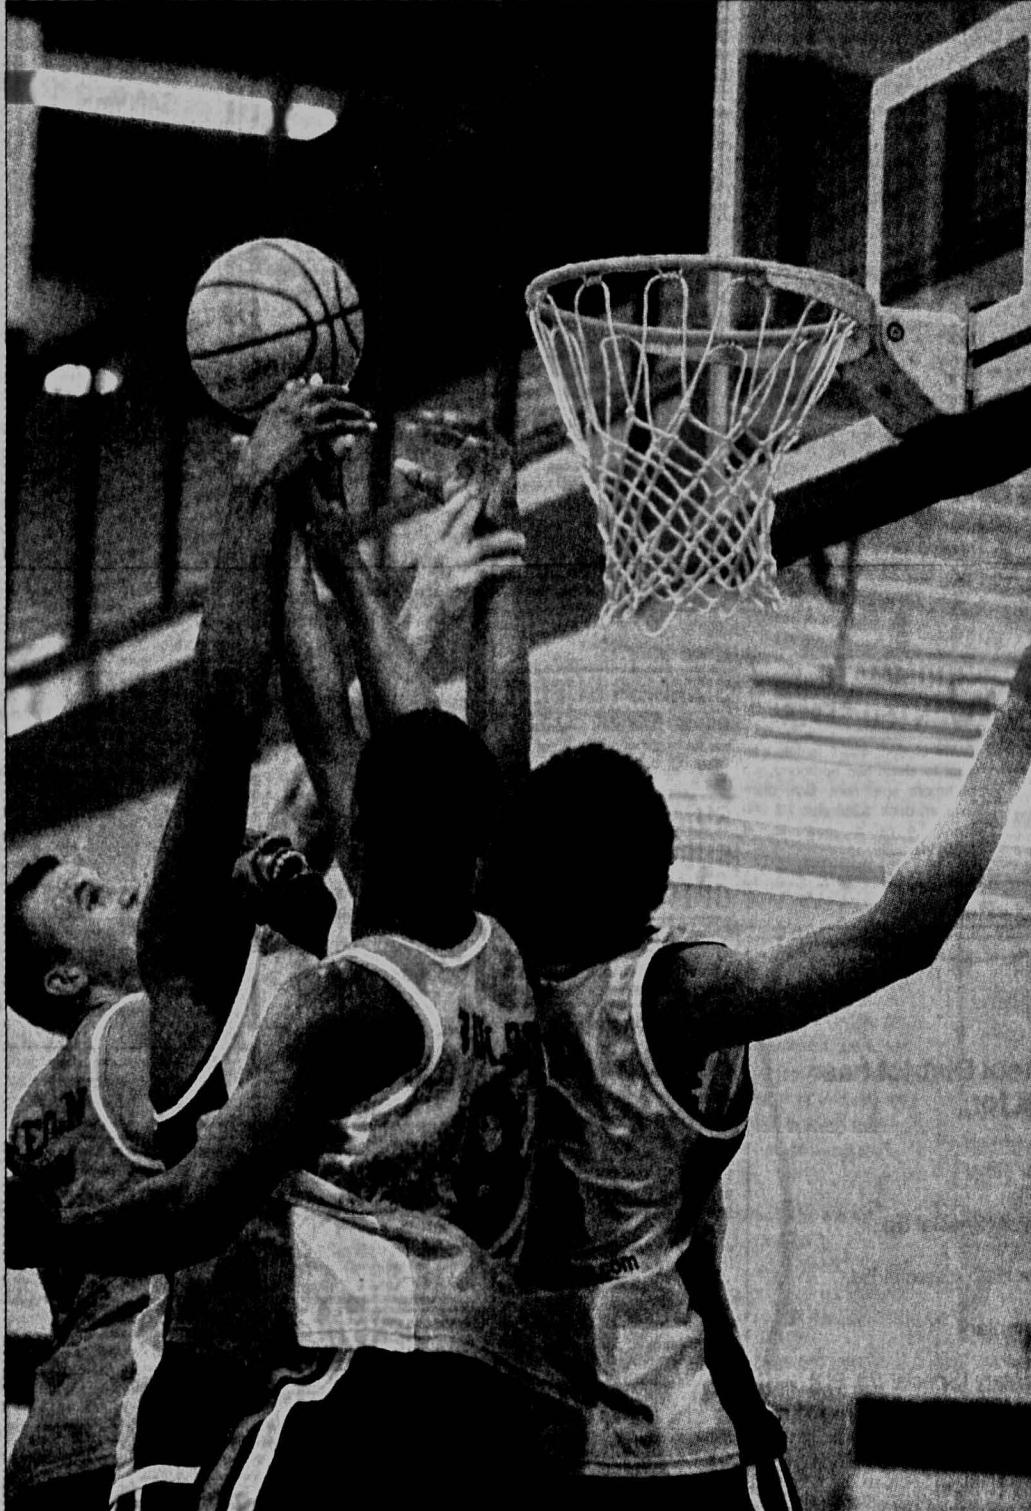

That didn't make the news any easier to take.

The Swede has been with Callaway throughout her career, and she often spent time with him at the Carlsbad, Calif., headquarters — trying new products, working at Callaway Golf's testing center, or simply soaking in the charisma of the 82-year-old founder.

"I felt like he was my grandfather. That's the kind of relationship we had," Sorenstam said before teeing off in the Jamie Farr Kroger Classic in Ohio. "I've been to his house several times and we've had dinner and he's shared his experiences. Even though he was a great businessman, we had a really friendly relationship. It was deep."

Earl, Moses get ejected in PTL

■ Thursday night's games contained as much drama as they did dunks.

By Tyler Lechtenberg

The Daily Iowan

P.T. Barnum may not have been in the building, but the first game of last night's Prime Time League action had all the elements of a circus.

High-flying Darryl Moore's 40 points led Mike Gatens Real Estate/Highland Park Development to an intense 97-96 win over Deli-Mart/Iowa City Ready Mix.

Deli-Mart led, 48-40, at half-time but saw its lead evaporate at the 11-minute mark with the score knotted at 68.

Then the circus began.

After a Gatens basket, a Deli-Mart player went up for a lay-up but was rejected.

Former Hawkeye player James Moses, Deli-Mart's coach, was ejected after arguing for goaltending. Moses fired up off his chair and began arguing with the referee on the court, who issued him a technical foul immediately. Moses continued the berating and was ejected.

Then, former Hawkeye center Acie Earl got into the action. Earl, who had been riding the referees the entire game, argued in Moses' defense from mid-court and was given a technical.

Moore went to the line and hit 5-of-6 free throws to give Gatens a 76-68 lead. It seemed that the tirade was over, but Earl was not through. After lobbying for a foul under the hoop, Earl was issued his second technical and a seat on the bench around the eight-minute mark.

Deli-Mart rallied behind Donald Stokes' 16 second-half points to tie the game at 96 with 12 seconds remaining, but on the next possession, Moore was fouled by Troy Washpun and sunk one of two free throws to win the game for Gatens.

After the game, Earl had few compliments about the refereeing.

"The refs just like to make a circus out of stuff," he said. "It's kind of bad when the fans and all the other guys see it, but the refs don't want to adjust the call. They should call [the game] like they do in the season."

HawksNestOnline.com 98, Lepic-Kroeger Realtors/Active Endeavors 83

Incoming freshman Marcellus Sommerville and Hawkeye sophomore Glen Worley each tallied 20 points in HawksNestOnline's 98-83 win over Lepic-Kroeger. Former Cascade prep Craig Callahan added 21 points to pace HawksNestOnline.

Sommerville added nine rebounds, three 3-pointers, and an off-the-backboard dunk from Sean Hughley to complete a fine all-around

Capriati upset by a teenager

■ Nineteen-year-old Justine Henin ends Capriati's Grand Slam winning streak.

By Steven Wine

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Discussing the end of her Grand Slam winning streak, Jennifer Capriati shrugged, smiled, and summed it up: "Oh, well."

The latest chapter in her career comeback was a setback in the Wimbledon semifinals, but also a reflection of lessons learned. Emotional meltdowns in response to losing are now part of her past.

Justine Henin, a 19-year-old dynamo from Belgium, rallied Thursday to beat Capriati, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2. With the upset, Henin earned a berth in her first Grand Slam final against defending champion Venus Williams, who won a sloppy slugfest against Lindsay Davenport, 6-2, 6-7 (1), 6-1.

Capriati's elimination was a surprise, especially given her early lead over Henin and her 19-match winning streak in major tournaments. The loss ended her bid for a Grand Slam sweep this year but underscored her newfound maturity.

"It's really not a big deal to lose a tennis match," said the 25-year-old Capriati, her voice firm as a forehand winner. "There are a lot worse things that could happen."

"Definitely, that's just part of my growing up, my maturity, what I've come to realize. You know, I've had a lot more losses in different ways than this tennis match."

While learning to cope with defeat, Capriati endured many false starts in her comeback from drug and personal problems as a teenager, and she ended more than one tournament with a teary news conference.

Then she won the Australian Open in January and the French Open last month. Suddenly she was the dominant player in tennis and halfway to a sweep of the year's four major events, something achieved by only five players.

"Everyone was making a big deal out of the Grand Slam but me," she said with a grin. "I'm pretty happy with the way the year has gone so far. I mean, it's hard to win one Grand Slam."

"It's not a disappointment at
