UI to repair Coleman's house

■ The university would replace an aging service elevator and rebuild the back porch.

By Mike Dhar
 The Daily Iowan

UI President Mary Sue Coleman said Sunday she is not worried that a $22,000 renovation to her house is poor spending, saying the project is justified even in the face of record budget cuts.

The project involves the installation of a service elevator in the house, 102 E. Church St., and reconstruction of a back porch, pending anticipated approval this week from the state of Iowa Board of Regents.

The elevator will be used to transport catering carts, replacing an electric lift, according to the proposal sent to regents. A wooden rear porch that has developed dry rot and is in need of significant repair will also be rebuilt, the proposal says.

Coleman said she didn't think the funds would come from state money, which was sliced by $18.8 million by state lawmakers for the current fiscal year in what university officials say are the biggest cuts to ever hit the UI.

According to the proposal, funding will come from a building-renewal fund or other sources. The renewal fund falls under the UI's General Education Budget, 61 percent of which is made up of general appropriations from the state.

The project is justified because the 20-year-old lift,

A "substantial" increase in funding for federal agencies this past fiscal year may carry over to the total amount of money the UI received from external research funding, if the past is any indication.

The amount of external funding the university received for fiscal year 2001 in the form of grants, gifts, and contracts will be revealed at an 11 a.m. press conference today in the IMU South Room.

University officials declined to say whether the amount will surpass last year's $252.5 million, but a 15 percent increase in funding to such agencies as the National Institutes of Health and the National Science Foundation, two major contributors to university research, may affect the amount.

After the university received a record-breaking amount of external research funding in 1999 — $259.5 million — UI President Mary Sue Coleman partially attributed the increase to growth in federal appropriations that year.

UI federal lobbyist Derek Willard said he hopes the 2001 amount has increased from fiscal year 2000.

"Congress was generous in its appropriations to the [gov-

Bush considers Mexican amnesty

■ Nearly 3 million undocumented immigrants would get legal residency if the president approves.

By Scott Lindlaw
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is considering granting legal residency to millions of undocumented Mexican immigrants living in the United States.

Such amnesty would give a permanent reprieve to certain Mexicans living undercover in this country, largely in the border states. It also could be a political boon to the Republican president as he seeks Latino support.

There are 3 million Mexican-born people living illegally in the United States, according to a report last week by Mexico's National Population Council.

An immigration task force of top Justice and State Department officials planned to send President Bush a report today on the broad outlines of U.S.-Mexico border issues. It will recommend that the United States take action to address illegal immigration,

Missile test pleases Pentagon

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon's successful missile-defense test on July 14 bolsters President Bush's hopes for building at least a rudimentary defense against ballistic-missile attacks on the United States and its allies by 2004.

The destruction of a mock warhead in space by a missile interceptor launched from Kwajalein Atoll in the Marshall Islands was an important step for the Pentagon's missile-defense effort, but it must be followed by more successes in more frequent and more realistic tests, officials said.

The success late on July 14 followed two dramatic test failures during the Clinton administration.

Regents may retire UI's early retirement

■ UI staff leaders oppose the stance of officials in the regents' office.

By Kellie Doyle
 The Daily Iowan

An early retirement program that the state's three public universities have offered for 15 years should be discontinued, state officials have recommended, despite pleas from UI staff leaders.

The Early Retirement Incentive Program would be terminated on June 30, 2002, pending approval by the state of Iowa Board of Regents this week. Employees eligible to take part in the program past its expiration date, however, may be granted a two-year extension, which would allow them to apply for acceptance through June 30, 2004.

"We would like to still see some type of early retirement program," said former UI Staff Council President Pat Kenner. The council sent a resolution to the regents last month, encouraging them to maintain the UI's program.

"We see it as a benefit for faculty and staff for their years of service," Kenner said, noting that the "Baby Boomers" generation will be nearing retirement within the next several years.

More than 2,000 faculty and staff statewide have participated in the program since its inception in 1986. In the last 10 years, 1,679 employees have entered the program.

Regent Mary Ellen Becker said board members had several questions concerning the program, including its benefits and who specifically is affected, during its meeting last month. She suspects that there will be more discussion concerning the issue during meetings in Cedar Falls on Wednesday and Thursday, but she would not speculate on whether the regents would follow the recommendation put forth by officials in the board's office.

"One of the questions is: If we let the current policy go, should we be considering a new kind of policy?" the first-year regent from Oskaloosa said.

Officials have estimated that 250 UI employees could take advantage of the early retirement program before July 2002.

However, administrators say the program is no longer need-

New home for journalism leads UI priorities

University officials want $13.4 million to construct a new building next to Becker.

By Gian Sachdev
The Daily Iowan

The construction of a new journalism building is now the UI's top priority for fiscal year 2003 and the fourth-highest on a long list of recommended building projects at the state's public universities.

University officials announced they are seeking $13.4 million for the new building, the third-largest request on a list of projects totaling $71 million that the state of Iowa Board of Regents will ask lawmakers to provide during the 2002 legislative session.

Leaders from the state's universities will present their priorities to the regents at a two-day meeting in Cedar Falls Wednesday and Thursday.

The project, which did not receive funds for fiscal year 2002 from the state as requested, would entail the construction of a state-of-the-art building that would be located between the Becker Communications Building and the CRANDIC railroad tracks.

The three-story facility would contain approximately 20 technologically advanced classrooms and six multi-purpose laboratories — including new dark rooms and television sets — and serve as the new home for the School of Journalism, said Associate Journalism Professor Dan Berkowitz.

"To have the high caliber of journalism we promise to teach, we will need this new building," he said. "We've been compromising for a long time."

"There will finally be a place people have in mind when they think about UI journalism."

A new building would "dramatically improve the university's ability to meet its current instructional needs," which is currently hampered by a lack of sophisticated classrooms and general capabilities, according to the board's proposal.

The state funding would be combined with more than $3 million in private donations that have already been generated in a fund-raising campaign that was led by John Soloski, the former journalism-school director who recently resigned to take an administrative position at the University of Georgia. The pri-ivate money would fund furnishings and advanced equipment.

Seashore Hall has housed, temporarily, the journalism school for the past several years. Original plans to return the school to the Communications Center were dropped because of the building's inability to provide the space needed for the improvements.

The UI's second priority and the board's seventh will be $9.8 million renovations to the Chemistry Building. The heavy use of the building's classrooms has forced the university to request funding for remodeling, modernization, and expansion of the facility. Architects and engineers are in the process of detailing these requests.

County charges man in HIV case

Prosecutors allege that a man had unprotected sex in Iowa City without telling his partner he was HIV-positive.

By George Pappas
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Supreme Court recently upheld the constitutionality of a law that Johnson County is using for the first time to prosecute a man accused of knowingly transmitting HIV.

Aaron Dahlberg, 23, of Inver Grove Heights, Minn., has been charged with criminal transmission of the AIDS virus through sexual contact with an Iowa City man. He made his initial appearance in Johnson County court July 13 in connection with the alleged mid-March unprotected sexual encounter. He was released after posting a $35,000 surety bond.

Police allege that Dahlberg disclosed his status to the local man by a telephone call in which he asked, "What's the worst thing that could happen to you?"

Dahlberg now faces up to 25 years in prison under an Iowa law passed in 1999. Opponents of the law assert that it may discourage people who suspect they may be HIV-positive from getting tested, that it punishes individuals because of their drug use as well as their transmission of the virus, and that its wording is too vague.

But the state's highest court ruled July 5 that anyone of reasonable intelligence should know to disclose her or his HIV-positive status before having sexual relations.

Further, justices wrote that for one to be prosecuted, "it must simply be shown that transmission of the HIV from the infected person to the exposed person was possible considering the circumstances." Authorities do not believe the local victim has contracted HIV.

There are currently 31 states that have passed some form of criminal HIV-transmission legislation. Iowa's version of the law considers it a felony to knowingly transmit HIV in three ways specifically: through sexual contact, by donating or selling one's blood and/or organs, or by exchanging contaminated tissue-piercing drug paraphernalia, such as needles.

Dahlberg faces the possibility of additional charges for allegedly having similar relations with a Cedar Rapids man. After meeting that person, whose identity has not been disclosed, police said Dahlberg returned to the man's residence. There, he allegedly had a conversation in which he denied that he was HIV-positive. After receiving this information, the two engaged in sexual activity on two separate occasions.

Dahlberg is the third person in Iowa who has been charged with knowingly transmitting HIV since the enactment of the law.

Justin Keene, 23, and Robert Bradfield, 46, both of Dubuque, were charged in two unrelated incidents in which they failed to reveal to their victims that they were HIV-positive before possibly sexually transmitting the virus.

Keene was charged with exposing the disease to a 23-year-old woman identified as C.J.H. with whom he had a brief romantic encounter. His appeal, which claimed the wording of the law was so vague that it was unconstitutional, reached the Iowa Supreme Court. His argument was denied.

Keene, who pleaded guilty in exchange for a suspended prison sentence, maintained that he had not meant to infect C.J.H. and believed that he stopped the intercourse before ejaculating.

Bradfield was charged last year with passing the virus to a 12-year-old boy. Along with the HIV charge, he also faces charges of second-degree sexual abuse, lascivious acts with a child, and three counts of dissemination of obscene materials to a minor, for which he now faces up to 58 years in prison.

Since 1984, there have been 1,125 cases of the AIDS virus reported to the Iowa Department of Public Health, giving Iowa one of the lowest AIDS rates in the nation.

Florida admits to ballot discrepancies

But election supervisors say GOP pressure didn't affect the absentee-ballot count in Florida.

By David Royse
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida elections supervisors on Sunday acknowledged discrepancies in how strict they were in deciding whether to accept overseas ballots in the presidential election.

But several supervisors denied Republicans pressured them to accept ballots from overseas military personnel that would likely favor George W. Bush.

The New York Times reported Sunday that Republicans pressed election officials in GOP-leaning counties to accept overseas absentee ballots that didn't comply with state election laws and sought to have overseas ballots disqualified in counties won by Al Gore.

"This story confirms our worst fears about the Bush team's campaign to manipulate the Florida vote," said Democratic National Chairman Terry McAuliffe. "It proves that President Bush was determined to win by any means necessary, including violating the spirit, if not the actual letter, of the law."

In response to the Times story, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said, "This election was decided by the voters of Florida a long time ago. And the nation, the president, and all but the most partisan Americans have moved on."

The Times published results of a six-month examination of the 2,490 overseas ballots accepted after Election Day. It found 680 questionable votes, most of which lacked the required postmark.

Four of five questionable ballots were accepted as legal in counties carried by Bush, although the newspaper could not determine for whom those votes were cast. Bush won by a final tally of 537 votes.

In heavily Republican Okaloosa County in the Panhandle, officials initially rejected several ballots, then later counted ballots without proper postmarks, elections supervisor Pat Hollarn acknowledged.

But ballots were reconsidered only because the county was under federal court order to do so, she said.

In a case brought by Republicans, U.S. District Judge Lacey A. Collier ordered six counties to reconsider overseas ballots rejected for lack of a postmark or date or for other reasons.

"You don't ignore a federal judge," Hollarn said. "We allowed the Republicans and Democrats to file their protests. We took note, filed them away ... and did what we thought was right."

STATE BRIEF

Teacher-pay plan leaves some short

DES MOINES (AP) — Although the Legislature approved $40 million for a new pay plan for teachers, many of the state's smaller schools may still come up short.

Ted Stilwell, the head of the Iowa Department of Education, acknowledged that some districts may not be able to participate in the teacher-pay plan without raising significant money on their own.

He defended the formula used to distribute the state aid, maintaining that the system is fair and treats urban and rural districts equally, perhaps giving rural schools an edge.

The shortfalls, however, appear to hamper mostly small Iowa schools, where teacher salaries are historically low.

"It's terrible," said Lynn Hansen, the superintendent of the Graettinger school district in Palo Alto County. "This is just another way to move small schools out of the picture."

originally designed to accommodate the handicapped, now presents a safety concern, Coleman said. Repairs to the house could end up costing more if they are neglected now, she added.

"[The old elevator] is quite dangerous, and it breaks down," she said. It was designed to transport people, she said, not the catering carts it now carries. Some of the carts are too heavy, and therefore, are dangerous for the students who work as caterers, she said.

The frequent breakdowns are the major problems, said Mary New, the executive assistant to the vice president of University Relations and head of events at Coleman's house.

"It breaks down about every fourth time we use it," she said, but she added that she's not worried about the old elevator falling. When the elevator breaks down, it is unusable until repaired.

Caterers have needed a new lift for the past three to four years, New said. The renovation is coming now because the old elevator has been increasingly unreliable, breaking down more frequently, she said.

The old lift became obsolete as a handicap elevator after the front entry to the house was reconstructed to accommodate handicap visitors and has since been used by catering staff only.

The old lift, located on the north side of the house, opens on a dining area, New said. Officials say this presents a problem because caterers have to drag carts across the dining room floor, creating the potential for damage. The new elevator would also be on the north side of the house but would open directly into the kitchen.

The officials in charge of caring for the president's house decided the repairs were necessary, Coleman said, adding that she was not consulted about this project.

"I was told we were going to do it," the UI's top leader said.

Board policy calls for the universities to ask permission when projects to the houses of university presidents exceed $10,000. The regents will vote on the request during their two-day meeting in Cedar Falls on Wednesday and Thursday.

FUNDING

The increase is "unusual" and not expected to continue under President Bush, who is recommending a 13.5 percent increase for the NIH, Willard said.

The UI ranked 32nd out of more than 2,000 institutions in the amount of grant money it received, approximately $120 million, from the NIH for fiscal year 2000, according to the institute's Web site. NIH contributed more than 50 percent of all the university's external funding last year, Willard said.

"Although the figures are going to change ... the proportional break out [of funding to each area] will probably be the same," he said.

Funding for medical research and pharmaceutical trials of new drugs topped last year's list in terms of dollars received, $123 million and $34 million, respectively.

In fiscal year 2000, external funding dropped by 2.3 percent from the '99 figure, to $252.5 million. The amount failed to meet the university's 2000-05 strategic plan, which anticipates a 10-12 percent annual growth in external grants and contracts for research funding.

Although a majority of external funding is spent on research, some money is allocated for fellowships and scholarships and student financial aid, among other expenses.

Missile test pleases Pentagon

"This test is just one on a journey, one stop on a journey," said Air Force Lt. Gen. Ronald Kadish, the head of the Pentagon's missile-defense program. He held a news conference at the Pentagon less than an hour after the collision of the interceptor and its target created a huge white flash in space.

"We will press on to the next test," he said.

That test, scheduled for October, may include some additional complexities, such as extra decoys aboard the target missile. In the July 14 test, just one decoy was used.

A White House spokeswoman said the president was pleased with the result.

Russia, however, renewed its warning that Bush's missile-defense plans will hurt global security rather than boosting it by threatening the structure of nuclear-disarmament treaties.

Bush and Russian President Vladimir Putin are expected to discuss missile defense and existing arms-control pacts when they meet this weekend in Italy at a gathering of leaders of the world's industrial powers.

The successful intercept provides a political boost for a project that some congressional Democrats believe risks upsetting relations with Russia and China and has the potential to create a new arms race.

"They hit a bullet with a bullet, and it does work. We can develop that capability," said Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., on "Fox News Sunday."

One skeptic, Sen. Joseph Biden, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, congratulated the military while cautioning that "it's not a real-world test yet. And we have a long way to go, and we should continue to pursue it."

Bush has asked Congress for $8.3 billion to finance missile-defense research and testing in 2002, a $3 billion increase over this year. The July 14 test cost approximately $100 million, Kadish said.

"We should put this right at the top of the agenda," Lott said.

Biden, D-Del., was more cautious. "We don't know what his program is yet," he said on Fox. Asked if the spending request was worthwhile, Biden responded: "It depends on what he's going to use it for. The answer is maybe."

The intercept was the Bush administration's first test of the "hit-to-kill" technology it hopes will become a key element of a missile-defense network. Of three previous tests in 1999 and 2000, two failed and one succeeded.

The administration also is exploring the feasibility of other missile-defense weaponry, including an airborne laser, ship-based missile interceptors, and space-based weapons. The system tested July 14, using a land-based interceptor to hit the target during the midcourse of its flight, is the most technically advanced.

The failure of the most recent previous test, in July 2000, sealed a decision by President Clinton not to move forward with deployment of a national missile defense. Clinton said the failure showed that the technology was not yet sufficiently proven.

Since then, the Pentagon's missile-defense contractors, including Boeing Co., which has the lead contract, have improved their test preparations, Kadish said.

Early retirement may see an end ed because of low unemployment rates, the difficulty of replacing employees who participate in the program, and the increasingly competitive hiring environment at universities.

The universities have argued that replacing retired employees can be costly — sometimes a new employee of high skill may demand a higher salary than the former employee in that position. Also, the rate of recruitment is not always as quick as the rate of retirement, often resulting in short-staffed departments.

When the program's termination was brought up in May, UI officials said the university has been less selective than Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa in allowing its employees to take part in the program.

The Early Retirement Incentive Program provides incentives to eligible faculty, professional, and scientific and merit system staff members employed by regents' institutions. Participants must be at least 57 years old and have 15 years of service at a state-funded Iowa university.

They receive a paid-up life insurance policy of $2,000 to $4,000 — equal to what an individual would have received had he or she retired at the age of 65 — among other benefits.

The board office also recommended approval of a phased-retirement program as currently structured through June 30, 2007. The program allows participating employees to gradually move from full-time status to no more than a half-time appointment before retiring.

Bush ponders immigration amnesty

but it will stop short of offering concrete proposals, a Justice Department official said Sunday.

The task force is considering several options, including a proposal to give the illegal Mexican immigrants permanent residency, said the official, speaking on the condition of anonymity. That is what Mexican President Vicente Fox has been pressing Bush for.

Major questions remain unanswered about how the administration would administer such a program. The official said issues under consideration include how quickly the immigrants could earn legal status and whether they would gain such status based on date of entry into the United States or by occupation, such as farm worker.

The working group was formed after Bush and Fox met in February. Attorney General John Ashcroft and Secretary of State Colin Powell head the task force, which hopes to have recommendations for the two presidents by September, when Fox visits Bush in Washington.

Ashcroft is meeting with Mexican officials in California and Arizona later this month to discuss border issues. He and Powell also will meet with their Mexican counterparts in early August.

The preliminary report will be presented to Bush as Fox completes a five-day visit to the United States this week. Fox planned to meet in Detroit with auto executives and union officials today.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said he would back the kind of amnesty move now under consideration.

"I believe that these people are living here, and it's a recognition of reality. They are working here," he said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

But Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., sounded a more cautious note.

"Just to summarily grant legal status to 3 million people, many of them that got here illegally and have violated the law while they're here — I'd want to make sure we do this carefully," he said on "Fox News Sunday."

Any guest-worker or amnesty program proposed by Bush would require approval by Congress. Some Democrats also object, mindful of union fears that guest-worker and amnesty programs could drive down wages and decrease job opportunities for Americans.

Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, introduced legislation last week to create a program that lets farm workers now working in the United States become permanent residents after working 150 days a year for four years.

Bush drew 35 percent of the Latino vote in November; he has continued to woo them since then. Recent Census figures indicate the number of Americans of Mexican ancestry has grown 53 percent over the last decade.

NETWORKS' COVERAGE OF CONDIT-LEVY QUESTIONED ...

A questionable lack of coverage

While it is still unclear whether Rep. Gary Condit, D-Calif., and his lawyers asked Anne Marie Smith to sign an affidavit denying her relationship with the congressman, it cannot be disputed that Condit is a liar and a hypocrite. Until last week, Condit had not been truthful about his relationship with Chandra Levy. However, his conduct is not the only disturbing aspect of recent events. The way major networks, especially CBS' "Evening News with Dan Rather," have covered this story — or more accurately, failed to cover it — is deplorable.

When the story of Bill Clinton's and Monica Lewinsky's sexual escapades first broke, Clinton decided upon the same route of denial Condit recently chose. During the resultant investigations, Condit was very aggressive about the importance of Clinton revealing all of the facts of the situation. The congressman was steadfast about Clinton not keeping anything undercover.

However, when faced with a similar situation, Condit chose the same route. He decided it would be better for himself to save face and deny the intimacy of his relationship with Levy than to offer the truth in order to aid in the investigation surrounding her disappearance. Although proof that he asked Smith to sign an affidavit denying their sexual relationship would add to already existing evidence of his lack of credibility, his actions have already proved he is a coward and a hypocrite.

The way the networks have chosen to cover this story is also appalling. CBS officials said their reason for not airing the story was a desire not to "tabularize" the relationship between Condit and Levy. One can understand, after the way the Clinton-Lewinsky affair was handled, why the networks would be apprehensive.

However, the networks have neglected a story. Condit lied about his relationship with Levy and only came clean after Levy's aunt detailed publicly the true extent of the relationship. He was not honest with investigators, the Levy family, or the public — something that is more than worthy of drawing media attention.

One has to wonder how the networks would have handled the story had it been a Republican in the same situation. Would they have been so merciful then? It's doubtful. One only needs to look at how they handled President Bush's very distant past during the last election for evidence.

In defense of the Chicano House mural restoration

I am a UI student who has been aware of the restoration work being done on the 26-year-old mural at the Latino Native American Cultural Center (popularly known as the Chicano House).

The building was initially secured for use as a cultural center by the efforts of Latino and Meskwaki students with help from university personnel.

Because of the extensive damage with cracks, holes, and chunks of paint falling off the old painting, the mural looked disastrous before the restoration. The poor condition it was in made it impossible after plaster was applied to fix the damage to make a more exact replica of the original artwork. Inevitably, this would be a factor in its eventual appearance.

As I read the article about the controversy surrounding the mural in the July 9 DI, I was saddened by the reactions of some of the alumni.

Reading about the criticisms made by Sylvia and Arnulfo Ramirez made it seem as if they were referring to the large eagle in the painting.

But actually, they were talking about the design on one of the buttons appearing on the man's red bandanna. It has been explained to me by the artist doing the restoration that there is a collage he created hanging in the same room as the mural. In this collage is a picture of Cesar Chavez and members of the United Farm Workers union. This includes the emblem of the black silhouetted eagle in question, and on the button, it is facing in the direction that it now appears in the mural. As I understand from what the restoring artist has explained, the Ramirezes first complained that the buffalo on the second button in the bandanna was now an "Indian white buffalo" instead of a "Chicano brown buffalo." Both the eagle and buffalo designs were originally painted solid black, the button with the eagle represented the Latinos, and the buffalo design on the other button represented the Native American side. The white buffalo now depicted is the result of the fact that the volunteer artist, who is a Chicano of Native American and Spanish ancestry, whose "homeland" is in northern New Mexico and southern Colorado, has been a Sun dancer for more than 10 years.

They claimed the artist did not go through the proper channels and does not respect the work of the original painter. The artist who is restoring the mural would not have been able to start the work had he not had permission to do so. He has put in hundreds of hours working on the restoration, working off and on for the past year for free, and he paid for most of the paints himself. He has also paid for matts, frames, and glass and has put them onto half the pictures hanging on the walls of the center. He has not only left the main subjects of the mural intact, but has also transformed the piece that originally portrayed a man with very angry and harsh features into a person with pride and determination who seems to be spiritually inspired. He actually used a UI student as a model to combine with the original face to create a composite rendering for the new profile.

I understand from the Ramirezes' comments that the original painting took six people 60 hours to finish in three days. To say that the volunteer artist has no respect for the original art work is slander and ridiculous. I would like to remind readers of the controversy over the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel at the Vatican.

The artist has used the opinions and suggestions of students to make it a mural that is symbolic for our day and age while keeping the main elements that were important in 1974, and are today, and will forever be.

It is an embarrassment to me as a student here that a few members of the university staff have cried out about this issue and worked behind the back of the artist to keep him from finishing the mural — especially when he has volunteered so much of his time to restore beauty to the center.

If the critics were so concerned about the mural's condition, why didn't they do something about it before the restoration began? It is near completion; let the artist finish.

Students: Use your voices and let the UI know that there is no place for vindictive, petty personal attacks on volunteers at our school. If you have not seen the mural at the cultural center yet, you are missing out on a beautiful, artistic representation of Latino and Native American pride.

Renee Harper is a UI student.

GUEST OPINION

RENEE HARPER

If the critics were so concerned about the mural's condition, why didn't they do something about it before the restoration began? It is near completion; let the artist finish.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Ped Mall police focus misguided

I'm a 17-year-old high-school student who lives in the downtown area, and personally, I am disgusted at what is going on with the police presence on the Pedestrian Mall. People are really getting the wrong impression of the kids that hang out there. These teens are being made out to be criminals.

I hang out on the Ped Mall frequently, and I am no criminal. I may be an underage smoker, and I may be a skateboarder, but I'm no criminal. That I'm smoking one year before it's legal doesn't affect anyone but me, so why is that a crime? In the seven years that I've been skateboarding, I have never hit a pedestrian while on my skateboard. So why is riding it a crime?

We have been getting a bad rap, and it keeps getting worse.

The main point of the article "Ped Mall Focus Slows Local Police" (DI, July 9), is the Iowa City police are spending time on the Ped Mall and not taking care of the rest of the city. To me, the police officers' comments make it seem like the police have to be on the Ped Mall at all times. They don't.

One officer believes, "The police have been forced to respond less promptly to calls from outside downtown in order to keep an officer downtown as much as possible." That sounds like an excuse to me. Police officers are sitting around on the Ped Mall, staring at and every now and then harassing people, instead of going out to fight crime. They say it's because they're protecting the people downtown, but I think it's because they're lazy. Whatever their reasoning for "patrolling" the Ped Mall so much, it's not necessary. These kids don't pose a threat to other citizens. They're just a group of friends hanging out in the only place they can without having to always buy something or pay a cover charge, so why persecute them for that? Would it be all right for the police to walk into a high-school cafeteria and start writing tickets for sitting on the tables, swearing, or chewing loudly? These are the same kids, but instead of sitting on tables, they're sitting on ledges.

So are these kids dangerous? I don't think so. According to the DI article, business owners want police officers downtown because of overcrowding during the day and vandalism at night. Well, guess what? It's the Pedestrian Mall. It's going to get crowded because it's supposed to draw people. And as for the vandalism, that's not even us. The article stated that most vandalism occurs during the early morning. What it left out was the fact that "early morning" really means between 1:30 and 3 a.m. on the weekends. We aren't the ones breaking windows, damaging cars, and stealing street signs. It's the drunk people. I suppose there should be more police watching the drunks, but I assure you, more police presence is not necessary during the day and evening.

Next time you're walking through the Ped Mall, stop and watch for a second. Are these really bad kids? Or are they just kids trying to have a good time? Is that illegal?

A portrait of moments

For Justin Cronin, life and writing are processes of gradual change and continual learning.

By Tracy Nemitz
The Daily Iowan

Emerson once said, "We do not live an equal life, but one of contrasts and patchwork; now a little joy, then a sorrow, now sin, then a generous or brave action."

Whether he was aware of it while writing his newest novel, Mary and O'Neil, UI Writers' Workshop graduate Justin Cronin shares Emerson's philosophy.

Mary and O'Neil takes place over the course of eight chapters, which are more reminiscent of short stories than typical chapters in a novel. Yet when read in succession, the chapters effortlessly fuse together the smaller moments that make up the mosaics of the title characters' lives — first as individuals, but eventually as a family.

"The eight episodes are each truly freestanding stories that paint the portrait of a family," said Cronin, who will read from the novel today at 8 p.m. at Prairie Lights Bookstore, 15 S. Dubuque St. "The form is designed to capture the important moments in their lives, when something changes and the characters can't change back. The short-story form does well when dealing with change in an instant versus a novel, in which change occurs over time."

In one chapter, for example, O'Neil is faced with the sudden loss of his parents while he is in college. In a later chapter, Mary has an abortion after her relationship with a boyfriend fails. Together as a couple, Mary and O'Neil share the joys of marriage as well as the birth of their children. Though these events only occur in a matter of minutes, the ramifications continue to surface and fuse the chapters into one large story as the characters attempt to deal with their pasts.

While Mary and O'Neil is a series of high and low peaks, Cronin displays his ability of avoiding overly sentimental or exaggerated prose to create the mood of the text.

"I really had to exercise a great deal of restraint. How do you write a wedding, for example, without it sounding like a soap opera?" he said. "It all comes down to technique and experience, to the language you use."

While Cronin was writing the novel, he was not only attentive to the language he used, he was also careful to avoid the mundane details in the plot that can tend to consume many other authors. He leaves these details up to his audience's imagination.

"I had an outline but also used a certain amount of discretion," Cronin said. "Some things did not need to be written. If there is a marriage between Mary and O'Neil, for example, it can be assumed that there was a courtship. The courtship can be left out. The reader has to do some work for me." His first work, a novella titled A Short History of the Long Ball, was published in 1990. Since then, he has devoted a great deal of time to teaching. A recent recipient of the Pew Fellowship, a grant awarded to Philadelphia-area artists, he said he plans to focus his attention on writing again.

"I have been teaching for a long time, since 1984," Cronin said. "As an academic, I'm about mid-career. As a writer, I'm still early career."

He has also devoted a great deal of his life to journalism. In addition to writing fiction and teaching, he writes book reviews for various publications nationwide. His first experience in journalism was writing editorials for The Daily Iowan while attending the university.

"I think I got the best education at the DI. At the paper, I went to work and wrote something every day," Cronin said. "Every day, what I wrote was printed, on people's doorsteps, then in the trash. Mistakes never stuck."

Cronin said the most valuable thing he learned at the DI was to take writing with a degree of professionalism.

"I had to get my writing done. I didn't have time to worry about every single sentence," Cronin said. "I learned to treat writing like a job, which is what a lot of writers don't understand — to treat writing like a job and get it done."

Practicing female blonding

Film: Legally Blonde
Director: Robert Luketic
Writers: Karen McCullah Lutz and Kirsten Smith
Starring: Reese Witherspoon, Luke Wilson, and Selma Blair

How adorable ... um; I mean, how talented is Reese Witherspoon? Exhibit A: In Legally Blonde, she plays an irritatingly perky California sorority babe whom you would dread getting stuck next to on a non-stop flight to London, yet somehow manages to make you root for her. Exhibit B: She single-handedly takes a movie that is really nothing more than a second-rate Clueless knock-off and turns it into a fairly enjoyable summer comedy.

Witherspoon stars as Elle Woods, a blonde bombshell who, like Alicia Silverstone's character in Clueless, is a lot smarter than she looks. Poor Elle thinks her fair-haired boyfriend, Warner Huntington (Matt Davis), is about to propose when he reveals that he is dumping her because he needs to find someone who is more serious — in other words, less blonde. Or, as the aspiring future senator so humorously puts it, "I need to marry a Jackie."

Determined to show her serious side and reclaim her man, Elle — a fashion-marketing major — decides to follow Warner to Harvard law school. How exactly does a fashion-marketing major from a non-prestigious state university get into Harvard? For starters, she almost aces the LSAT entrance exam. And it doesn't hurt that the committee reviewing her application, which includes a video essay with several shots of Elle in her bikini, is composed entirely of men.

Of course, in real life, Elle would never get accepted to Harvard, but Legally Blonde doesn't aspire to realism. Director Robert Luketic wisely puts his movie in the hands of his capable star, who perfectly captures Elle's persistent optimism and innocence. She doesn't wear a bikini in her application video because she expects to get in based on her looks — she just happens to be a woman who lounges around the pool all day.

ARTS BRIEF

Kirk Douglas tries to save Cinerama relic

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Kirk Douglas is trying to save a local movie theater that houses the nation's largest Cinerama screen. Methodist Health System recently bought the Indian Hills Theater, which closed in September 2000, and it plans to demolish the cinema for a parking lot.

"The world does not need another parking lot," Douglas wrote in a letter to Methodist officials. "Instead, please allow this theater to remain and continue to bring the magic of movies to our lives."

Methodist Health System says renovations would be too costly.

The 84-year-old Douglas, whose films include Spartacus and The Bad and the Beautiful, joins Janet Leigh, movie critic Leonard Maltin, and other Hollywood figures in asking that the theater be saved.

Indian Hills is one of only three theaters left in the nation capable of showing big-screen Cinerama films. The theater's curved, floor-to-reiling screen is 70 feet wide.

Wasting away in Springfield-ville

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Bud Ford wants Jimmy Buffett to flip-flop onto the Illinois State Fair grandstand.

Ford, the state fair's manager, has been pursuing Buffett, best known for his 1977 hit "Margaritaville," since the close of the 1999 fair.

"I said I'd take him even if he had to come in a walker," said

Ford, whose latest tactic includes newspaper ads featuring a petition asking Buffett to appear at next year's fair. Fans can clip the ad and mail it to the singer's secretary in Key West, Fla.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will want to watch how much you spend. You should be careful not to give too much to those having a good sob story. Your empathetic nature will be your downfall. It's time to reconsider your approach to others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You don't know which way is up. You want it all and yet don't really know where to begin. Think twice before you take action regarding your personal life. Hasty decisions can land you in trouble.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): This is not the time to take chances, and you know it. Do some backtracking and see if you can come up with a suitable solution that will help get your life back in perspective.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can make a difference if you join worthwhile groups, but don't feel that you have to go broke doing so. Expand your circle of friends, but don't spend too much time with those who are likely to be hangers-on. You can't do everything for everyone. Be your own person and let others adjust.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You'll have a problem with your boss if you haven't come to terms with the way you're expected to do your job. Be reasonable and let her or him see things from your point of view.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You need to experience the rush of love. The possibilities are present. You just have to get out and start meeting new people. Don't be afraid to join groups that interest you. Now is the time to take some new chances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Financial changes will occur in joint ventures. A legal matter should be left alone until a later date when you are more likely to win. Don't let others talk you into doing things you don't want to do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A quiet, intimate evening for two should be on your mind. Don't bring your work home. It will interfere with your personal life more than you think. Be careful about your eating habits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Added stress will cause minor illness. Watch your diet. Someone may be trying to outsmart and take advantage of you regarding a project at work. Be careful. It's time to start a new exercise routine to improve your body image.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can make a world of difference to your image if you make some positive alterations to your appearance. You need to feel good about yourself to present yourself well. If all else fails, just pretend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Changes at home will not run as smoothly as you had hoped. Don't blame the ones you live with. Try to ease tension by looking at the humorous side of the dilemmas facing your family. Try some relaxing activities that will ease your mind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You won't want to spend time with someone who has been nagging and complaining. Get out with friends who can provide insight. Look into new activities or job opportunities.

quote of the day

When they put their degrees up on their wall, particularly if they were not local, they found people saying, "That's a joke, isn't it?" or "That's not for real."

—Bette E. Landman, the president of Beaver College. The school has switched its name to Arcadia University, and it is offering replacement diplomas for those who want them. The school has already received more than 800 such requests.

With big crowd, Phillies top New York

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jimmy Rollins walked on the field, saw his first sellout crowd at Veterans Stadium, and couldn't believe it.

Joe Torre couldn't believe what he saw, either.

Scott Rolen hit a go-ahead RBI single, and Philadelphia's bullpen didn't allow a run in four innings as the Phillies beat the New York Yankees, 9-3, Sunday.

The Phillies, who tied the Chicago Cubs for the worst record in the majors last season, lead the NL East by one game over Atlanta.

The three-time defending champion Yankees have lost three of four since the All-Star break, prompting Torre to hold a closed-door meeting for about 25 minutes after the game.

Derek Jeter made his 13th error, Mark Wohlers threw a wild pitch, and Jorge Posada had three passed balls, raising his season total to 13 — two more than his total last year.

"It was ugly. We were terrible and we've got to straighten it out," Torre said. "We had a meeting. That's a product that we put out there today that we're not proud of."

A sellout crowd of 59,470 — nearly one-third New York fans — turned out to watch the two division leaders.

It was the second-largest crowd in the majors this year and the most fans at a Phillies game since opening day of the 1993 season, when 60,985 came out.

Despite being in first place for all but four days this season, the Phillies have the third-lowest attendance in the National League.

Cardinals 5, Twins 1

ST. LOUIS — Dustin Hermanson pitched scoreless ball into the eighth inning to win for the first time in nearly a month as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Minnesota Twins, 5-1, Sunday.

The defending NL Central champions got back to .500 and handed the AL Central-leading Twins only their fourth loss in 19 games.

Minnesota (57-34) missed a chance to go 25 games above .500 for the first time since finishing the 1991 season 95-67.

White Sox 3, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE — Rocky Biddle won for the first time in 15 starts since April 9, and Sandy Alomar hit a go-ahead home run Sunday as the Chicago White Sox beat the Milwaukee Brewers, 3-2.

Biddle (2-5) had been 0-5 in his previous 14 starts. He allowed two runs, three hits, and four walks in six innings.

Cubs 2, Royals 1

PRIME TIME LEAGUE

Two Iowa guards to face off

After intense play on July 14, the league looks to tonight's games for seedings in the finals.

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

Two Hawkeyes competing for the starting point-guard spot next year will go head-to-head in tonight's final regular-season Prime Time League game.

Indian Hills Community College transfer Chauncey Leslie of Community Motors/Goodfellow will face incoming freshman Pierre Pierce of Fitzpatrick's in a match-up of two of the league's July 14 high scorers.

Pierce broke out with 40 points and 9 rebounds in Fitzpatrick's 98-94 win over Merrill Lynch/Nike. Iowa sophomore Sean Sonderleiter added 24 points and 15 rebounds in the victory.

Leslie followed Pierce's performance with a show of his own; he scored 37 points and hit all 10 of his free throws. Despite his performance, Community Motors lost to Deli-Mart/Iowa City Ready Mix, 109-92.

Although Deli-Mart had only five players, one incoming Iowa freshman — 6-11 big man Erik Hansen of Eules, Texas — more than made up for the absence of some of his teammates with his outstanding shooting.

Hansen made 21-25 field goals, which translated into 48 points and the highest point total by any of Iowa's four recruits in the Prime Time League. He also grabbed 23 rebounds in the win.

In the first game on July 14, both Lepic-Kroeger Realtors/Active Endeavors and Mike Gatens Real Estate/Highland Park Development struggled to score points; in the end, Lepic-Kroeger came out on top, 78-67, in one of the lowest-scoring Prime Time games to date.

Alaska-Anchorage player Peter Bullock led Lepic-Kroeger with 23 points and 13 rebounds, while ex-Drake player Kevin Samms countered with 23 points of his own for Gatens. Hawkeye sophomores Jared Reiner and Cortney

GAME TIME LEAGUE

Union Planters almost gets win

Jennie Lillis drives in for a lay-up for Cullen Painting/Bob's Your Uncle Piza Cafe during Game Time play against Union Planters Bank Sunday night.

The last-ranked league team comes close to upsetting first-place Cullen Painting

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

Union Planters Bank could almost taste its first victory in Game Time League play Sunday night, as it led first-place Cullen Painting/Bob's Your Uncle Pizza Cafe by 17 points in the first half. But when Cullen found its rhythm, Union Planters lost its wind and fell, 81-67.

After a rough first half, Cullen put together its usual high-pace offense and made a run in the second. Although Union Planters led 40-31 at half-time, the score was tied at 40-40 with only three minutes having ticked off the clock.

As Union Planters slowed down with fatigue, the Drake duo of Stephanie Schmitz and Carla Bennett and Iowa State signee Megan McCracken took over the game in the second half, sealing the victory.

The Union Planters bench got a pick-me-up from some outside help when only five of the original squad showed up. Kary Dawson, a member of Goodfellow Printing/Imprinted Sportswear, threw on a green jersey with her red shorts to help out the team.

"Kary Dawson always said that if someone needed an extra player, she would gladly play," Cullen coach Randy Larson said. "She is obviously a woman that can just play all day."

The other help came from Megan Miller, a recent Marshalltown Junior College graduate and Southern Illinois signee who also suited up. Miller was not in the original draft because of a job coaching softball, but now that her job is finished, she will be a regular in the league.

Union Planters first- and second-round draft picks, Anne O'Neil and Stephanie Rich, have played sporadically this season, and the team is paying for it.

"It was hard at the beginning, when there were a lot of people coming one week and then not the next," team member and Iowa junior Amber O'Brien said. "Because that is the time to see how well the team meshes together and when we get to know how everyone plays. It was hard to get into a rhythm, but it's getting better now."

Goodfellow Printing/Imprinted Sportswear 90, HawksNestOnline.com 88
Jerica Watson again claimed the throne of leading Game Time League scorer, knocking down 37 points in the loss. She also snagged 8 rebounds and dished out 5 assists.

But if 36 points proved enough for a victory in her last game, it was not to be Sunday. The more balanced scoring attack of Goodfellow

IOC Prez campaign turns ugly

A South Korean candidate is accused of offering incentives to voting Committee members.

By Stephen Wilson
Associated Press

MOSCOW — On the eve of the election, the campaign for the IOC presidency turned ugly Sunday, with South Korean candidate Kim Un-yeong at the center of an ethics probe of alleged financial incentives offered to voting members.

Kim, among those reprimanded in the Salt Lake City bid scandal, denied promising that members would be given at least $50,000 a year in Olympic-related expenses if he was elected president of the International Olympic Committee.

Kim under investigation

Asked for an explanation by the IOC ethics commission, Kim said he never proposed any specific sum and had only recommended providing delegates with enough funds to maintain offices in their own countries.

While some members suggested the promises amounted to a form of bribery, Kim accused his rivals of leaking information to undermine his campaign.

"This is fiction, they're making fiction," he said. "They will do everything they can to get one more inch. Timing is very important to them."

Kim's troubles only reinforced Belgian surgeon Jacques Rogge's status as favorite heading into today's vote to elect a successor to Juan Antonio Samaranch. Who is stepping down after 21 years in office.

Kim and Canada's Dick Pound were the other main contenders for the most powerful post in international sports. Anita DeFrantz of the United States and Hungary's Pal Schmitt were long shots.

The election comes three days after another landmark IOC vote: the awarding of the 2008 Olympics to Beijing.

"I'm extremely relaxed," Rogge said. "Everything that's outside of my control, there's no reason to
