Recovering from a bomb nightmare

Zach Boyden-Holmes/The Daily Iowan
 Members of the Johnson County Bomb Squad work outside of a Burge room on the night of March 22. Three students were charged for their alleged involvement.

■ One of the three UI students arrested for allegedly making pipe bombs last year shares his story.

By Kellie Doyle
 The Daily Iowan

Adam Fisher remembers vividly watching from inside Burge Residence Hall as hundreds of students poured out of the building in fear.

Fisher took a plunge to rock bottom that March evening. For days following, he stayed locked up in his bedroom at his Marion home, depressed. He even started seeing a counselor, but it didn't help.

"I couldn't believe it," Fisher said of the bomb scare he's accused of helping cause in his dorm room. "It was like a dream. I was just sitting back watching everybody flood out of Burge. And I was like, 'This can't be happening.'"

Four months later, the former UI student is back on his feet, determined to push aside the March 22 incident that not only led to his arrest and a frightening night in jail but also an uncertainty about his future.

The 19-year-old was arrested for allegedly making three pipe bombs in his Burge dorm room. Nathan Krotz, 19, and Andrew Ritchie, 19, who both resided in Currier Residence Hall at the time of the incident, were also taken into custody for their alleged involvement.

The Johnson County Bomb Squad was called to the scene to remove and neutralize the pipe bombs.

The three each face pending charges of possession of explosives or incendiary materials or devices and joint criminal conduct. They later allegedly told police they were going to use the bombs to fish.

The trio is not allowed on university property, Fisher said, declining to elaborate or offer information concerning further guidelines they were ordered by police and university officials to follow.

All three have pleaded not guilty to

I.C. mourns the loss of Hebert

■ The friends and family of the homicide victim say he was a man who would do anything for people.

By Bridget Stratton
 The Daily Iowan

The friends and family of homicide victim Donald James Hebert will celebrate his kindness and leadership as they lay him to rest today at St. Wenceslaus Church in Iowa City.

Hebert was found dead from suffocation and strangulation July 20 in his River Realty business, 2747 Second St. Apt. 2, Coralville.

Friends and family say they'll remember the 76-year-old Iowa City resident as a man who would do anything for anyone and as a true local leader for over 30 years.

"He appeared to have good health and all the ingredients of living a long life," said Iowa City lawyer Bob Downer, a friend of Hebert's. "It is very sad."

Hebert, said by many to be a "true gentleman," was a longtime member, and 1978 president, of the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce.

"I always said there are two kinds of people in Iowa City: Don's friends and those he hasn't met yet," said Mayor Ernie Lehman, a friend and former chamber member.

While a member of the chamber, Hebert was an important advocate in maintaining the vitality of downtown, and he brought people together during the divisive urban-renewal project, Downer said.

"He had a positive vision for the community," he said. "His death is not only a tragedy for his family but a major loss for the community as well."

Hebert, who also served on the Planning and Zoning Commission, always looked on the bright side of any situation, Lehman said. The two used to bowl in the same husband-and-wife league Wednesday nights at Colonial Lanes.

Iowa City City Councilor Mike O'Donnell said he has been a friend of Hebert's since 1962, when O'Donnell walked into St. Clair's, a clothing store once owned by Hebert.

"I went in [his store] to buy a red blazer when I was going to City High," O'Donnell remembered. "He was the most amazing man. Don didn't meet a stranger. He will be sorely missed."

Despite the "senseless" tragedy surrounding Hebert's

China issues two harsh sentences

■ The action comes just four days prior to a visit by Secretary of State Colin Powell.

By John Leicester
 Associated Press

BEIJING — A court sentenced two U.S. residents Tuesday to 10 years in prison on charges of spying for Taiwan, clouding hopes for improved U.S.-China ties just days before a visit by Secretary of State Colin Powell.

Chinese-born business professor Li Shaomin, whom China promised to expel after he was convicted of spying earlier this month, was deported to the United States, the Foreign Ministry said.

After the sentencing of Gao Zhan and Qin Guangguang, Chinese-born scholars with residency rights in the United States, the White House called for their release on humanitarian grounds.

Both sides had hoped that Powell's visit, which will begin Saturday, would ease relations following strains caused by a collision in April between a U.S. spy plane and a Chinese fighter jet.

"We're following it carefully, and we'll see what happens next," Powell said in Vietnam, where he will meet Chinese Foreign Minister Tang Jiaxuan today on the sidelines of an Asia-Pacific conference.

But in Washington, Chinese Ambassador Yang Jiechi played down the importance of the sentences to overall U.S.-China relations, saying, "Some things should not be built up way out of proportion."

who travel to China for research. In April, the U.S. government infuriated Beijing by warning Chinese-born Americans that they risked detention in China if they have been involved in activities or published writings critical of Beijing.

Gao, 39, is a researcher at American University in Washington. She was detained Feb. 11 during a visit to China. Chinese officials also temporarily held her 5-year-old son, an American citizen, without notifying the U.S. Embassy as required by treaty.

Qin reportedly taught at U.S. universities and worked for a U.S. medical group in Beijing.

They were sentenced by Beijing's No. 1 Intermediate People's Court.

Glitch zaps some Webmail addresses

■ Some UI students and staff had their Webmail address books erased over the weekend.

By Casey Wagner
 The Daily Iowan

Some UI students and faculty could get a surprise the next time they want to retrieve an e-mail address from their Webmail account address books: They could be empty.

Rex Pruess, a university systems-support manager, said Information Technology Services officials became aware of a failure in one of two UI Webmail servers Monday after they received calls from customers complaining that their address books had been erased.

ITS officials believe that one of the server's software failed on July 21 and continued to have problems through Sunday, said Mike Noth, the university's director of systems and platform administration. When the software failed, the servers' replication process was corrupted, which in turn erased some users' address books, he said. Officials do not know the cause of the failure, Noth said.

Replication is used by the Webmail servers to keep information between both servers updated and identical.

Noth said that only e-mail accounts that were used

Sunday were affected.

The incident is the first time the Webmail system has had a problem with corrupted information, he said.

Students, faculty, and staff whose address books were erased can call the ITS help desk at 384-HELP and ask to have their address books restored. ITS will then use the servers' back-up information to restore erased addresses.

Carter attacks Bush on policies

■ Rare case of president vs. president, Jimmy Carter criticizes almost everything the president has done.

Associated Press

PLAIN, Ga. — In a rare instance of one former president criticizing a current one, Jimmy Carter is taking issue with just about everything George W. Bush has done in office.

Carter criticizes Bush for not pressuring Israel to withdraw from the Gaza Strip, for threatening to abandon the Antiballistic Missile treaty and for not supporting human rights more strongly.

He says Bush has ignored moderates in both parties and calls Bush's proposed missile-defense shield a "technologically ridiculous" idea that will "escalate the nuclear arms race."

"I have been disappointed in almost everything he has done," Carter told the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer in an interview last week from his home in Plains.

Asked to comment, White House spokesman Scott McClellan said:

"President Bush is just returning from successful, productive meetings with European leaders, including a

School officials eye further language-arts improvements

■ The Iowa City School Board discusses changes and further improvement in the program.

By Sara C. Konrad
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City School District has met several of its language-arts goals for the upcoming academic year, clearing the way for additional developments in years to come, said district officials.

Discussion at the School Board meeting Tuesday focused on the future of the language-arts program.

Pam Ehly, the district director of instruction, and Jan Smith, the district's language-arts coordinator, presented proposed changes and development in the program.

Ehly said the program improved at all levels. The accomplishments included acquiring additional instruction materials for first-graders, providing junior-high school language-arts teachers with "inservice," and increasing the number of reading-strategies classes at the senior-high level.

Concerns raised at last night's meeting included professional development, curricula design, and class sizes — especially in high-school English classes.

"English teachers spend hours grading papers written by students," Smith said. "If we could cut the class sizes, that would lessen the load on the teachers."

The proposal shows that language-arts teachers and directors want more instructors to take part in national conferences, which, Smith said, would help them develop and rejuvenate their teaching strategies.

Board members said they wanted to develop a system that would track the success or failure of changes they choose to implement. Ehly and Smith said they would look into developing a review process.

"We need to look for opportunities to find out how effective these changes are," said board member Don Jackson.

The board suggested revisiting the issue in six to 12 months to re-evaluate the efficiency of the changes already in the program.

"Maybe at that time, we'll need to think in terms of alternative ways to achieve our goals," said board member Nick Johnson.

Smith admitted that it is possible not all the proposed changes will improve the program, but, she said, implementing them is the only way to discover their strengths and weaknesses.

"We want to provide opportunities and materials and give kids individualized attention," Smith said. "None of this can happen without some bumps."

Farmers displeased by gas superhighway

■ A coalition may build a new natural-gas pipeline, which would cut through parts of Iowa.

Associated Press

CALAMUS, Iowa — It's likely Iowa will be home to a new ribbon of pipeline if a natural-gas company coalition builds a new line that would stretch from Alaska's North Slope to Chicago.

Clinton County farmer Robin Hower is worried about the future of his farmland if it becomes a superhighway for gas pipelines.

His rural neighborhood recently found out that the coalition may build a new $15 billion to $20 billion natural-gas line that could cut through their fields.

The route under tentative consideration would roughly follow one created by the recently completed Alliance Pipeline of Canada, which cuts through Clinton and Scott counties in Iowa and Rock Island and Whiteside counties in Illinois on its way to Chicago.

Some farmers are still recovering from that project. Dozens filed complaints with the company, the Iowa attorney general's office and in the courts about soil damage left behind after its construction.

A majority of those claims have been paid, but some say the removal of precious topsoil and crop drainage problems still are leaving their mark on the crops.

"There's still damage," Hower said. "I've got beans curled up, and the land looks like a roller coaster."

Grand Mound farmer David Whitman said a long swath in his cornfields shows exactly where the pipeline rests below — the stalks stand about 2 feet shorter than the rest of the crop.

"You can tell right where the pipeline is," he said.

Bob Brammer, a spokesman for the Iowa attorney general's office, said a staff member has spoken with representatives from the new gas-company coalition, and the office plans to monitor the feasibility process.

If more pipeline construction happens, the state will work with North Dakota, Minnesota, and Illinois to create mitigation agreements that protect the interests of affected landowners along the route, he said.

"This new pipeline might be better than the last one," Whitman said. "Or it might be worse."

But the project is still in the early stages and may never come to fruition.

"Is it a done deal? Absolutely not," said Dave MacDowell, the external-affairs manager for the Alaska Gas Producers Pipeline Team, based in Anchorage, Alaska. "We have not identified this as an economic project. We're contemplating this thing."

In December 2000, three gas-production companies — BP Canada Energy Co., Exxon Mobil Resources, and Phillips

You can tell right where the pipeline is.

— David Whitman, Grand Mound, Iowa, farmer

Petroleum Resources — banded together to form a joint feasibility team that was created to study whether such a pipeline should or could be built. Approximately 100 people from those companies have been working as the Alaska Gas Producers Pipeline Team from offices in Anchorage and Calgary, Alberta, in western Canada, and the study process is extremely complicated.

"It's an enormous undertaking," MacDowell said.

Before the team can rule at the end of this year whether the project would be cost-effective, members first must determine exact calculations of how large the pipe would be, what volume of natural gas would be pumped through it daily, the thickness of the pipe, how deep it would be buried, and other details.

Coralville council dedicates room

■ E. Virgil Bowers, a Coralville resident for 85 years, left a legacy of planning and developing.

By Lisa Kanning
The Daily Iowan

When E. Virgil Bowers was a child in 1915, Coralville only had 30 buildings. Now, with hundreds of buildings in the town, the Coralville City Council dedicated the west meeting room in his memory.

Bowers, a native of Coralville who died a year and a half ago, was a member of the Fire Department and School Board as well as other community organizations. He left behind a legacy through his planning, developing, building, and sale of many of Coralville's properties. Along with his real-estate business, from which he retired in 1990, Bowers farmed and owned a saw mill and appliance store.

Bowers was an icon in Coralville and was well-liked, said Rex Brandstatter, who worked with him.

"He was a friendly guy who didn't wear a tie and was good at whatever he did," Brandstatter said.

The avid bowler not only served the community through volunteering but also contributed to the private sector as a builder.

Moving around Coralville nearly 48 times, Bowers was known to build a house, move his family into it, and then sell it when he built a new one, Brandstatter said.

"Finally, [Bower's wife] told

Members of Bower's family and close friends were in attendance at the ceremony.

"It's a real honor to have the room dedicated to him. Coralville was very important to him," said Jim Bowers, E. Virgil Bowers' son. "He had so many stories and was a staunch Coralville-ite."

Bowers was a friend of Mayor Jim Faustet.

During a flood in 1943, Bower's daughter Jean Eckhoff said she remembers being with her dad while he helped save Coralville from a breaking dam.

Bowers is survived by his wife of nearly 70 years, Irene Bowers, two daughters — Eckhoff of North Liberty and Shirley Bowers of Mesa, Ariz. — and two sons — Jim Bowers of Dekalb, Ill., and Larry Bowers of Los Angeles.

him she didn't want to move anymore," he said.

The plan to dedicate the meeting room was brought to the council eight months ago by Bowers friends Brandstatter, Larry Smith, and David Bourgeois.

"It was certainly a well-deserved honor. He was certainly involved with the city from the beginning," said Mayor Jim Faustet.

STATE BRIEF

Lawmakers accuse agency of concealing Medicaid shortage

DES MOINES — Members of a legislative oversight committee accused state human-services officials Tuesday of concealing a $20 million shortfall in the state's Medicaid program.

By delaying telling lawmakers about the shortage, the officials effectively prevented lawmakers from deciding how to handle it, lawmakers complained. "We could have explored a number of options and decided what to do," said Rep. David Millage, R-Bettendorf, the co-chairman of the Legislative Fiscal Committee. "We weren't told what was going on."

Department of Human Services officials told the committee the shortfall comes because a sour economy has driven up the number of people eligible for the low-income health program, which wasn't clear until recently.

"I'm not sure we know what the trend will be," said Jan Clausen, a financial expert with the agency. "Much, I suspect, will depend on the economy."

Agency officials told the committee they were transferring $19.9 million from other human-services programs to cover the shortfall.

As of May, 8,200 people have been added to the program beyond what was projected, Clausen said. Approximately $4 million will be shifted from other agency programs, and $15.9 million will be transferred from a federal program for the elderly.

By Ron Fournier

CAMP BONDSTEEL, Yugoslavia — Fifty miles from heavy fighting, President Bush urged ethnic Albanians in Kosovo to stop sneaking weapons across the border to Macedonia, where rebel attacks threaten to spark a new Balkan civil war.

The president, in his first trip to the troubled region, also renewed his commitment Tuesday to the NATO-led peacekeeping mission here in Kosovo. Even so, he told cheering U.S. troops he hoped to "hasten the day" they can return home.

"Your diversity and close cooperation ... in the cause of peace, is an example to the people of this region," he told 2,000 flag-waving soldiers, some of them from other countries in the NATO-led force. being smuggled across the 100-mile border shared with Macedonia, where 500 more U.S. troops are based.

A supporter of the Macedonia government, Bush said, "We need you to keep patrolling the border and cutting off the arms flow" to rebels.

The militants launched their insurgency against government forces in February, demanding greater rights and recognition for minority ethnic Albanians, who make up approximately one-third of Macedonia's population of 2 million.

"Those here in Kosovo who support the insurgency in Macedonia are hurting the interest of ethnic Albanians throughout the region," Bush said in a statement. "The people of Kosovo should focus on Kosovo" and build a peaceful, democratic society, he said.

The admonition was delivered on paper, not in person, a contrast to President Clinton's visit to Kosovo in 1999. Clinton, addressing an audience of Kosovo citizens, urged them to seek peace.

On the question of U.S. involvement in the Balkans, Bush seemed to be seeking a balance between his allegiance to NATO and long-held skepticism about peace-keeping missions.

"NATO's commitment to the peace of this region is enduring, but the stationing of our force here should not be indefinite," he said in the statement.

Fla. vote czar looks at House seat

■ With the infamous Florida vote behind her, Katherine Harris is now readying a bid for Congress.

By Brent Kallestad
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Secretary of State Katherine Harris, who was at the epicenter of Florida's disputed presidential vote last year, will run for Congress in 2002, a top Republican official said Tuesday.

Harris' political advisers are "trying to put together the best campaign team that they can," state GOP Executive Director David Johnson told the Associated Press.

"Harris, who has nearly a year to formally enter the race, refused to confirm she was running. She said only that she's been convinced she can 'make a difference' in Congress."

"People have been extremely encouraging and supportive," she said.

Johnson said she will seek the 13th District seat being vacated by Rep. Dan Miller, a Republican who has said he plans to retire after his fifth term.

Harris, 44, is easily Florida's best-known female politician following the five-week recount that sent George W. Bush to the White House.

She became a favorite target of Democrats and took a drubbing in the media, but she won praise from Republicans for her handling of the recount. She also helped push through an election-reform package to quiet critics.

A former Democrat who became a Republican in 1986, Harris cannot seek re-election because voters decided to make secretary of State an appointive office when her current term ends in January 2003.

Democrats are expected to put up an opponent.

"No doubt about it," Democratic Party spokesman Tony Welch said. "She is the most polarizing figure in the Republican Party, and she will turn out thousands more Democratic voters who want a chance to vote against her."

Even with adjustments under next year's reapportionment, the district would favor a Republican candidate, especially one with Harris' name recognition and wealth. She listed her net worth at $6.5 million in her most recent financial disclosure.

"She's going to have name recognition beyond reason," said Ed Moore, the president of the James Madison Institute, a conservative public-policy research group in Tallahassee. "Anybody that doesn't know the name Katherine Harris in the state of Florida has been asleep the last 12 months."

A former real-estate agent, Harris earned degrees at Harvard University and Agnes Scott College, a women's school in Atlanta, and studied in Europe. Her husband, businessman Anders Ebbeson, spends most of his time in Sarasota.

Johnson said Adam Goodman, a veteran GOP media adviser, would handle Harris' campaign advertising. Goodman served as Harris' media adviser in 1998, when she ran successfully for secretary of State after one term in the Florida Senate.

Rebels attack Sri Lanka airport

■ In a bold assault, Tamil rebels blow up a dozen planes, crippling the national airline.

By Dilip Ganguly
Associated Press

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Tamil rebels attacked Sri Lanka's international airport and main air base Tuesday, blowing up a dozen aircraft with explosives and mortars and battling soldiers in one of their most audacious assaults in 18 years of civil war.

Terrified tourists and Sri Lankan travelers scattered in the terminal, diving for cover behind ticket counters and luggage carts, as explosions and weapons fire blasted outside. The six-hour battle ended when the last three of the 13 rebels blew themselves up with explosives strapped to their bodies.

The pre-dawn assault, launched on the anniversary of bloody 1983 riots, left 13 rebels and seven soldiers dead and devastated the national carrier, Sri Lanka Airlines. Hours later, the government retaliated with air strikes on bases of the rebel Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam on the northern Jaffna peninsula.

At the airport, the 13 rebels' bloodied bodies lay in pools of blood on a tarmac slippery with oil leaking from wrecked planes. One rebel's face was burned black by an exploding plane. Seven military men were also killed.

Gemunu Amarasinghe/Associated Press
Supporters of the main opposition United National Party run away as police fire tear gas and rubber bullets during a protest march outside Colombo, Sri Lanka.

Black smoke from a fuel tanker explosion enveloped the terminal. A lounge hit by a mortar was on fire and bus windows were riddled with bullets.

"Suddenly it all went off — explosions, a couple of planes got blown up, no one really knew what was going on," said Australian tourist Dave Bursil, 32, who threw himself into a drainage pit when the firing began. "The airport was ablaze; you could see a huge blaze in the background where planes were on fire."

Eight military aircraft — two Israeli-made Kfir bombers, one MiG-27, three trainer aircraft, and two helicopters — were damaged or destroyed, Brig. Sanath Karunaratne said.

Five of Sri Lanka Airlines' fleet of 12 planes were damaged, including two Airbuses that were destroyed, said Civil Aviation Minister Jeyaraj Fernando, putting the damage at $350 million.

It was the first military assault by the Tamil Tigers so close to the Sri Lankan capital and was a dramatic, damaging blow following Norwegian attempts to mediate peace negotiations that stalled earlier this year. The Tigers — who maintain that Tamils are discriminated against by the majority Sinhalese — have been battling since 1983 for a homeland in the northern and eastern parts of the island.

The attack on Bandaranaike International Airport and the adjacent military base cut off the only regular transportation link to the outside world and threatened the tourist industry, which has grown despite the war.

Roadwork deaths on the rise

■ More construction plus drivers' speeds equal a record number of deaths in U.S. work zones.

By Jonathan D. Salant
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A record number of people are being killed in highway work zones as motorists speed through construction areas — confused or frustrated, or both, by ever-increasing miles of narrow lanes and orange cones.

In 1999, 872 people died in work zones, more than 700 of them motorists or passengers in vehicles speeding through the construction sites, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. The previous record: 828 in 1994.

Increased federal highway spending is fueling a boom in road construction. But the orange cones and lane shifts are unwelcome sights, particularly for motorists already crawling on overcrowded highways.

The number of deaths in work-zone crashes grew 25 percent between 1997 and 1999, as the amount of money spent on highway construction rose. Federal spending on roads grew from $49 billion to $58 billion over the same two-year period, an increase of 18 percent, and it will rise to a projected $65 billion in the current fiscal year, according to the Road Information Program, a research group financed by the construction industry.

"People are frustrated not being able to move in the fashion they are used to," said Vincent Schimmoller, the Federal Highway Administration's deputy executive director. "That causes, perhaps, drivers to not do the things they should when they're behind the wheel." Along the Maine Turnpike, for example, construction crews tried to widen the highway while motorists sped by at 75 miles an hour — 20 mph over the posted limit.

House to sustain funding for Andean anti-drug activities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted on Tuesday to protect money for fighting drugs in South America from lawmakers who argued that foreign-aid dollars would be better spent against AIDS and other world health problems.

The defeat of amendments to shift money from the Andean anti-drug initiative to health programs was a victory for the Bush administration, which said that any reductions below what the president wanted "would undermine the effort to develop healthy, licit economies, and strong democratic governments in the Andes."

The $15.2 billion foreign-aid spending bill for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 contains $676 million to fight drugs and advance economic and political stability in Colombia and its neighbors. That total is already $55 million lower than the president's budget request.

But many lawmakers, led by Democrats, questioned the wisdom of military aid to Colombia and said combating the ravages of AIDS and other disease should be a higher foreign-aid priority.

By 2005, 100 million people around the world will be infected by HIV-AIDS, said Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif. "How much more staggering would the numbers have to become for us to respond in a way that is commensurate with the leadership of our country?"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Anti-smokers hide their true agenda

"We have the right to refuse service to anyone." It wasn't long ago that signs like this were posted in retail establishments. These signs weren't used to discriminate against people based on race, creed, or color. These signs were posted to send the message "I own this establishment. You are invited to come in. If you behave in a way that I disapprove of, I will ask you to leave."

Owners understood that private businesses were unlike government or public operations, which were required to provide service to everyone. Owners determined their own rules. Owners invited people to come in, but everyone understood that it wasn't a blank check. Each side had to respect the other to get business done.

Today we have a group called CAFE (I call it Citizens Against Free Enterprise) that is trying to get the City Councils of Iowa City and Coralville to redefine who has control over private businesses. This group is trying to define private businesses as public places. Its argument is that because business owners invite lots of people into their places, they are therefore public places.

The problem is that unlike a driver's license station, a person doesn't have to enter a private business. If people don't like Big Macs and want Whoppers instead, they don't ask the council to pass a law that says only Whoppers can be sold. Of course not! They go to Burger King. If enough people do the same, Big Macs go away.

Militant anti-smokers have only one goal in mind: total elimination of smoking. Most people agree that smoking causes health problems. As a former smoker, I realize this. However, when I choose to not be around smoke, I go to establishments that are smoke-free. I take responsibility for my own health.

But militant anti-smokers don't think you are worried enough about your own health — in other words, you are not as smart as they are. They say they know what you need to do. But instead of taking the time to persuade you that they are right, they are pressuring your local government to get involved.

Militant anti-smokers are now attacking restaurants, hoping for an easy target.

Years ago, separate areas for smokers and non-smokers were arranged. That wasn't done because of health risks, but because people thought it was annoying to have other people's smoke ruin a nice meal.

Restaurants may be an easy target because we already have smoking restrictions in them. But people who like good food without smoke have already made smoke-free restaurants fun and profitable. These days we have more choices than ever in smoke-free entertainment.

Militant anti-smokers want to take away choice along with secondhand smoke. They hope you believe it's for your own good. They want to take over restaurants and tell owners how to run their businesses. They want to sacrifice freedom in the name of health.

Each person must take responsibility for her or his health. As long as this country is free, people will make choices about the products and services they buy and sell. If you don't like secondhand smoke, go to a place where the owner makes the same choice you do.

Take responsibility for your personal health choices and keep as much freedom as possible in this country of ours. Make those militant anti-smokers get out of council chambers and onto the streets like any other self-respecting missionaries who want to convert people to a better way of life. If you're not free to make a wrong choice about your own health, then you're not really free at all.

Local policing assaults 4th Amendment

"The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized." — Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States

Johnson County recently removed a monument containing a plaque with the Ten Commandments from the lawn of the Johnson County Courthouse. Perhaps in its place should go a tombstone that represents the demise of the Fourth Amendment.

Recent newspaper coverage has focused on the controversial search conducted by Iowa City police, later endorsed by Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake, where consent to search a private home was allegedly obtained from an 11-year-old boy. This incident is only one among many which illustrates the extent to which the Fourth Amendment has been eroded by aggressive law-enforcement practices and weak judicial oversight.

As a criminal defense attorney in private practice, I see only a small slice of the search-and-seizure cases that occur each year in Iowa City, but the cases I see show the sorry state of the Fourth Amendment in our city. For example:

- Based solely on an anonymous tip, two officers in black uniforms knock on an apartment door at 10:30 at night. A young woman, in pajamas, answers the door. The police gain entry by claiming to need help with an "incident in the neighborhood" and then intimidate her into a consent to search. Less than one-sixteenth of an ounce of marijuana is found, and another person is handcuffed, fingerprinted, disrobed, dressed in an orange suit, jailed, and appears in court.

- Investigating an anonymous tip, police officers seize curbside garbage and find paperwork belonging to the residents and "stems that appear to be from the marijuana plant." Based on this information, a judge grants a search warrant. Despite a federal court opinion from Ohio finding that issuing such a warrant is tantamount "to subjecting to a full and probing search the home of a cocktail party host, whose guests, perhaps unbeknownst to him, indulge in illicit substances and discard the remainder," the search warrant is upheld by a reviewing judge.

- Police officers observe a young man discard a cigarette butt on the Pedestrian Mall and issue him a littering citation. Despite a ruling from the U.S. Supreme Court prohibiting a search in such circumstances, the officers proceed to conduct a public and humiliating search of the man's person and backpack. No contraband is found. Later, at a public forum sponsored by the Iowa City Police Citizens Review Board, a captain from the Iowa City police publicly defends the search.

These incidents are not isolated anecdotes, occurring only in Iowa City. They are typical of incidents across the nation, whereby judicial rulings erode protections of the Fourth Amendment. Coupled with police practices that push the envelope of what is constitutionally permissible we see that citizens are not "secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures."

Race, class, and age play a key role in public support for such police practices and judicial rulings. People of color, lower-income people, and the nation's young people are disproportionately the victims of such constitutional violations — whether it is Rudy Giuliani's New York police frisking young men of color at random, New Jersey state troopers stopping cars driven by black and brown people, or here in Iowa City with the police focusing resources on arresting students.

In Iowa City, it is clear that the leadership of the police department, the current City Council, and the judiciary will not stop the erosion of our constitutional liberties. I therefore urge the voters of Iowa City to strongly support the proposed reforms to the Home Rule Charter, which will allow the citizens to have a voice in the selection of the police chief, establish stronger civilian review of the police force, and curb the most egregious current police practices. If the charter reforms pass, we could erect a monument on the courthouse lawn celebrating the renewal of the Fourth Amendment.

UI Lecture Committee strives to represent all

In regards to Calvin Hennick's July 9 editorial on the UI Lecture Committee's unbalanced lineup, there are a couple of points I would like to address.

First, the Lecture Committee does in fact strive to represent "the full range of interests, specializations, and ideas of the university community." However, while we may dedicate ourselves to this goal of providing a diverse group of speakers to represent all facets of the university community, this end is not always feasible.

It remains a brute fact of the lecture business that "conservative" speakers charge honoraria that are often upwards of twice that charged by their respective "liberal" counterparts. While we do pursue conservative speakers, their cost is often beyond what our cash-strapped budget permits, leaving us with only the option of significantly cutting our other lecture programs. But even despite the inherent difficulties, the lecture committee has brought conservative speakers to the university in the past. Gen. Lewis MacKenzie is but one example.

So while this past year may look "liberal" at a glance to Hennick, closer inspection reveals that the Lecture Committee has provided — and will continue to provide — a full range of discourse for the university community.

Nothing wrong with free trade

Just a few days after the end of the G-8 summit in Genoa, fast-track trade-promotion authority is before Congress. If Congress knows what's good for America and the rest of the world, fast-track authority will be quickly renewed.

Prior to 1994, the president had fast-track authority. It allowed the president to take a trade agreement before Congress and receive a straight up or down vote. The Republican Congress let the authority expire.

Currently, the president must present trade agreements to Congress, but he will not receive a straight up or down vote. Congress can make amendments and force the president back into negotiations. It is an extremely difficult way of moving forward toward free trade.

While congressional Republicans held fast track since 1994, it may now be Senate Democrats who prevent fast-track authority. Whoever opposes fast track, or tries to limit it in some way, does a great disservice to America.

Fast track is good because at its core, it leads to increased free trade. Free trade is good for everyone involved. It is good for countries with either trade deficits or trade surpluses. Too often, people in America complain about our trade deficit. A trade deficit is not a bad thing. Whether free trade expands or contracts, a trade deficit is irrelevant to the fact that free trade is good.

To put it in perspective, consider your individual trade relations. If you are a student, you are running a huge trade deficit. Your employer (if you have one) is the only party with whom you run a trade surplus. The grocery store, your landlord, the university, and others give you a gigantic trade deficit overall. Is this bad? Of course not. Whether you are being financed by your parents or student loans, you are making a huge investment in yourself. The trade deficit allows you to invest huge amounts in yourself without having to earn the cost of that investment now. The trade deficit that you run is good.

Now, imagine if there were a trade barrier between you and any party with whom you run a trade deficit. Would it be better if it were more difficult to buy an education, or food, or rent? Of course not. The trade deficit is good, and you are better off with a trade deficit than without a trade deficit. Just imagine what it

JAMES EAVES-JOHNSON

Currently, the president must present trade agreements to Congress, but he will not receive a straight up or down vote.

You would work harder. And at the end, you would have little more than you have by running a trade deficit.

The same is true for America. We run a trade deficit because we are like a student in college. We are investing tremendous amounts for our future, and that investment is paid for with a trade deficit. The only difference is that instead of an education, we are receiving capital improvements in our economy. We are buying things that allow us to move forward without being forced to pay for it right now. Like a college student, if we had to avoid a trade deficit, we would all be working much harder, and it would take much longer for the same amount of economic growth. But perhaps the most often missed point is that free trade helps the world's poor. President Bush made this point several times when commenting on the protesters in Genoa at the G-8 summit. Without free trade, people in less-developed countries are often locked in an economic system with little opportunity, few employment options, radically low wages, death, disease, crime, and a whole list of other horrible conditions. With free trade, these things can be ameliorated. Free trade can bring new jobs to less-developed countries. Free trade often brings an international corporate presence that is interested in preserving the rule of law. Free trade brings money into an area that can pay for the health care, infrastructure, and the consumer goods Americans take for granted.

Perhaps this is why anti-globalization folks have such a wrong idea about international trade. An anti-capitalist sees a Third World person struggling to get by while working for an American company who pays its American laborers much more. Meanwhile, the Third World person sees a company that has lifted her or him out of dire poverty, brought opportunities to the country, and given hope to the children.

Of course, there are exceptions to this story. The anti-globalization folks will try to press the horror stories, which are really just as likely to happen in America as any foreign country. But in so doing, their political actions threaten the world's poor with continued hardship. Hopefully, anti-globalization politics will not continue to depress the world's poor and slow down American growth by stopping fast-track authority.

CBS fires back on Condit-Levy criticism

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — "CBS Evening News" was unfairly scrutinized for its lack of coverage of the Chandra Levy story while other news outlets gorged on it, CBS News President Andrew Heyward said Tuesday.

"It seems to me that the harsh light of criticism should be directed at the end of the spectrum that's most guilty of tabloid excess," he said.

Heyward told the Television Critics Association he was most disturbed by the implication that there is an "orthodoxy of conformity" in news coverage that requires media to be in lockstep.

The decision by "CBS Evening News" to remain silent until last week on the story about the federal intern who went missing in Washington and who was linked romantically to Rep. Gary Condit provoked much second-guessing.

The newscast ended its holdout when there was a development "worthy of national note," anchor Dan Rather said on July 18. Levy vanished three months ago.

death, laughter through tears was in abundance, as those who attended the memorial service spoke of his life, said former business partner and friend Craig Gustavson.

"He could be a tough and gruff man at times, but he had a heart of gold," Gustavson said. "Many people attribute their success [in the clothing-store business] to what Don taught them. That is what people tell me they hope to remember. They say they learned from the best, and that is certainly a good tribute to his life."

Police allege that Hebert was slain by Bradley Joseph Hylton, 26, 2747 Second St. Apt. 6. Along with Hylton, Keokuk resident Daniel Joseph Coop allegedly used Hebert's stolen credit card to make purchases and ATM withdrawals totaling $1,367.12 at the Coral Ridge Mall and the Iowa City Wal-Mart. Coop 43, was arrested Monday and made his initial court appearance Tuesday. He is charged with seven counts of aiding and abetting forgery and is being questioned in connection with Hebert's death. Coop is being held at the Johnson County Jail on $10,000 cash bond for the forgery charges. His preliminary hearing is set for Aug. 3.

Hylton was arrested Sunday and allegedly admitted to killing Hebert. He is being held on $1 million bond.

Coop has been wanted since June on charges of second-degree sexual abuse and lascivious acts with a child. His bail for those charges is set at $25,000.

the charges. Fisher's pre-trial conference, which had been scheduled for Thursday, will be delayed because his attorney, Leon Spies, is on vacation until Aug. 6.

Fisher declined comment on the case, but he said he knows he wants to stay out of jail.

"Jail is the last place I want to be," he said, recalling his overnight stay in March during a two-hour long interview with The Daily Iowan. "I felt kind of dehumanized."

All three were released on their own recognizance and returned to their Iowa homes, where they have remained for the past several months.

"I think about [the case] all the time because the courts haven't decided anything yet," Fisher's mother, Roberta Fisher, said. "We're taking it day by day, waiting for the courts to decide."

The first five days following his arrest were the roughest for Fisher, who was a cymbal player in the UI marching band. He was a wreck.

But his former roommate in Burge, UI sophomore Adam Carlson, motivated him to realize life wasn't over.

"Carlson said, 'You can take this two ways,'" he said. "You can either let this take over your life and let it drag you to the ground, or you can take the punch, roll with it, and make something of it."

Fisher chose to take the latter route, and "started living again," he said. No longer did he fear the possibility of not finding a job or not being accepted into a college.

Now, he works approximately 50 hours a week at three jobs, including acting as a drum-line instructor for the Marion High School marching band. He has taken two summer courses at Kirkwood Community College and is busier than ever.

Knowing his family and friends remained supportive also helped. His relationship with his mother, he said, has grown stronger since the incident.

"Eventually, after talking to people, after realizing they were still there being supportive, that helped me get back on my feet," he said. "People look at me the same way as they always did, and that's nice to know."

After spending two years at Kirkwood Community College, where he will make a dent toward earning a degree in business, Fisher said he might return to Iowa City. But he, Krotz, and Ritchie will need to talk to Phillip Jones, the UI vice president of Student Services, before any final decisions can be made.

"I'm going to need some time away from it," he said. "Just to kind of let things settle down."

"I might go to the UI [after two years]. I'm not quite sure yet because I never really shopped around for colleges ... The few months I was there, they were the best times of my life, man — the people, so much to do, Thursday nights going out."

Fisher said he has kept in touch with Krotz and Ritchie, whom he met while practicing with the Marching Band last year. Both are residing in the Riverside, Iowa, area and working. As far as Fisher knows, Ritchie wants to return to the university in the fall; he is unsure of Krotz's intentions.

"Things are mending," Fisher said. "The damage has been done. We've had our time to get back on our feet and start to live our lives again."

"I don't want to be in jail," he said. "I want to be in college. I want to be with my friends, family. I want to have a job, I want to be successful, like everybody else."

China issues harsh sentences

CHINA

"Both collected intelligence for spy agencies in Taiwan, causing a serious threat to China's national security," the official Xinhua News Agency said.

A Chinese scholar, Qu Wei, also was sentenced Tuesday to 13 years in jail. Qu provided secrets and intelligence to Gao and Li Shaomin, an American business professor convicted July 14 of spying for Taiwan, Xinhua reported. China is still thought to be holding Li, although he was ordered deported.

Another American citizen, Wu Jianmin, was detained April 8 on suspicion of spying for Taiwan but has yet to be tried. He often wrote articles on Chinese politics for Hong Kong magazines.

In Hanoi, a spokesman for the Chinese foreign minister wouldn't answer questions about how Tang would handle the issue when he meets Powell.

"We already have enough evidence to show that Gao Zhan was a spy for a Taiwanese spying outfit," spokesman Sun Yuxi said. "She has admitted this, and her case is being handled entirely according to Chinese law."

The sentences were not the first time that Chinese actions have threatened to embarrass a visiting U.S. official and thrust human rights into the spotlight.

In 1994, Chinese authorities detained at least 17 dissidents before and during a visit by then-Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

But China also has used prison releases to try to smooth ties with Washington.

In 1995, China paved the way for a visit by Hillary Rodham Clinton by releasing Chinese-American human-rights activist Harry Wu — but only after sentencing him to 15 years imprisonment on spying and secrets charges. Wu was expelled.

The Beijing court's decision July 14 to order the expulsion of Li and to put Gao on trial on had raised hopes that Beijing was trying to clear their cases out of the way before Powell's visit.

Even after Tuesday's sentences, there was still speculation that China would seek a way out.

"The only rational explanation is that the Chinese plan to release these people either before, during, or shortly after Powell's trip," said Winston Lord, a former U.S. ambassador to China. "Anything else would be mind-boggling stupidity."

He added: "There is no question that this relationship is very complex and will have its ups and downs. Every new president has had a rough time with the Chinese during his first year in office."

A three-judge panel convicted and sentenced Gao after 30 minutes of deliberation and a hearing that lasted two hours and 10 minutes, her lawyer Bai Xuebiao said.

No witnesses were called, but Gao spoke in her defense at least eight times.

She "repeatedly stressed that she loves China, that she would not have done these things if she had known that her actions might have harmed China's interests," Bai said.

After sentencing, Gao's lawyers appealed for parole on medical grounds. The court had no immediate response. Bai said Gao suffers serious heart problems that twice caused her breathing difficulties over the past two weeks.

Gao's lawyer said the sentence was more severe than expected. "She was unhappy," Bai said. "She told me it was too severe."

Gao's husband, Xue Donghua, also expressed surprise and said he believed China was trying to show a hard line to Washington.

"I think they want to tell the U.S. government that they are not listening to what they're saying," he said from their home in Virginia.

Gao's legal team says she gave Li photocopied book and magazine articles about Taiwan and its relations with China. Her lawyers say Gao knew some were not meant for widespread distribution but said she had no reason to know they were secret.

"She admits that she did do some things for some people. But Gao Zhan herself does not regard these activities as espionage," Bai said.

"It would be very easy to restore lost information," Noth said. "All people have to do is tell us."

Most information should be up-to-date, he said, adding that the last time the Webmail servers were backed-up was July 19.

ITS officials originally considered conducting a mass restoration of every address book in the Webmail system, which would both restore lost information and replace current information with the Webmail back-up data. However, Noth said that ITS decided it would be better to deal with the lost data on an individual basis instead of making the problem worse.

Travis Johnson, a UI senior who answers phone calls from students and staff about computer problems, said that ITS received approximately 20 calls regarding erased address books. The number of staff and student complaints were nearly equal, he said.

Pruess said that ITS has no plans to notify customers that their address books may have been erased, adding that many users don't even use the feature.

Carter also was critical of President Clinton during the fellow Democrat's administration, calling the Monica Lewinsky scandal an embarrassment and disparaging Clinton's policy in North Korea and Haiti.

Carter is "a guy with strong views, and I think that's always been the case," said presidential scholar Charles Jones of the University of Wisconsin. "What surprises me is a kind of a sweeping critical analysis, at what has to be said is an early stage."

Carter noted that he had volunteered to be one of the few Democrats at Bush's inauguration because he was optimistic about the administration.

"I hoped that, coming out of an uncertain election, he would reach out to people of diverse views, not just Democrats and Republicans, but others who had different points of view," Carter said. "I thought he would be a moderate leader, but he has been very strictly conforming to some of the more conservative members of his administration, his vice president and his secretary of Defense in particular. More moderate people such as Colin Powell have been frozen out of the basic decision-making in dealing with international affairs."

He was also critical of Bush for not calling for the removal of Israeli settlements on the West Bank.

"George Sr. took a strong position on that issue, and so did I," said Carter, whose offer to mediate the conflict was declined by both the Israelis and the Palestinians.

Court deals a blow to Utah ban on liquor ads

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal appeals court has blocked Utah from enforcing its ban on wine and liquor advertising until a lawsuit that challenges the prohibition as an infringement on freedom of speech is settled.

Utah forbids ads promoting anything stronger than 3.2 percent-alcohol beer. The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said distinguishing between types of alcohol was "irrational."

The ruling, released Tuesday, also signaled that the court agrees that the ban is unconstitutional and sent the case back to a lower court.

In 1996, Catalyst magazine, which wanted to publish a guide listing beers, wines, and cocktails available at local establishments, sued the state on First Amendment grounds. Magazine lawyer Brian Barnard had asked the ban be suspended until the suit was decided.

U.S. District Judge David Sam denied that request. The appeals court's ruling overturned the judge's decision and ordered him to issue an injunction blocking the ban while the suit proceeds.

"In the meantime, Utah unquestionably retains the power to attack alcohol-related problems through methods that do not restrict speech," the appeals court said.

Having your Cake & hearing it, too

By Daniel Wilmoth
The Daily Iowan

Cake does not come in traditional flavors, like love songs or rock anthems. The alt-rockers of Cake like to serve up off-kilter, silly, or even brilliant songs, but they never quite give you what you expect.

It may be that I've been in college too long, but as I listened to Cake's latest album, Comfort Eagle, I began to notice extra layers of meaning.

Take, for example, the song "Love You Madly," a love song with such great lines as "I don't want to wonder if this is a blunder/I don't want to worry whether we're going to stay together till we die." Just when I start to think Cake singer/songwriter John McCrea is sounding like a "smooth operator," the song ends with the sound of a car starting and driving away.

CAKE

Who says only rappers can be players?

That song is one of the easier ones to understand. But what does the chorus of the title track mean? "We are building a religion/We are building it bigger/We are widening the corridors/and adding more lanes."

The next track, "Long Line of Cars," is about a long line of cars that "will never have an end." The last line is "And this long line of cars is all because of me."

Let me guess. Cake is the religion in "Comfort Eagle" and fans are the "Long Line of Cars." Cake is adding more lanes, for more fans. It's symbolism, right? Right?

But enough of the Interp of Lit mumbo jumbo. Is the CD any good?

I give it ★★★★★ out of ★★★★★.

ARTS BRIEFS

Drop down, give me 20, and go write a film

The Screenwriters Boot Camp, a two-day event geared toward potential film writers, will be held on Aug. 4-5 at the Ramada Inn in Des Moines. The tutorial is hosted each year by Robert Jordan, a former story editor for Paramount Pictures, and Shirley Long.

"We've had a lot of success with this in the past," Long said. "One of our students from Iowa State ended up getting a look from DreamWorks, so you never know what will happen."

The Boot Camp features workshops for beginning and experienced writers interested in breaking into the film industry. Many have gone on to secure jobs with television shows and movie studios. "Now that the Writers Guild has completed its negotiations with the studios and production companies, and a strike has been averted, opportunities are again opening up for new writers," Long said.

"If you've ever thought you could do a better job than some of the films in theaters, this is a good time to take that movie idea out of your back pocket and learn to turn it into a professional screenplay," she said.

Interested writers can call (515) 964-4599 or check out screenwriters-bootcamp.com for details.

'Big Brother' worth the risk, CBS says

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Reality shows such as "Big Brother," in which one contestant pulled a knife on another, are risky but represent an effort to try something different, CBS executives said Tuesday.

"I'm tired of putting on 'Diagnosis Murder' reruns in the summer. There's a quest to put on new forms of programming," CBS President Leslie Moonves told the Television Critics Association.

Under sharp questioning, Moonves said the network believes "Big Brother" is worthwhile but does require vigilance.

The reality show, which shuts people in a camera-filled house for three months, ejected contestant Justin Sebik after he held a knife to a female player's throat and asked, "Would you get mad if I just killed you?"

"It's an unfortunate situation, but that's the risk you do run," CBS Entertainment President Nancy Tellem said.

A background check by CBS failed to show that Sebik, 26, of Bayonne, N.J., had an arrest record for assault.

Moonves, calling "Big Brother" a "summer experiment," said the network considers each of its shows carefully and is "trying to act responsibly."

Asked if the series would have been canceled if a stabbing had occurred, Moonves declined to answer.

"Big Brother" producer Arnold Shapiro, who was brought in to revamp the series after it debuted last summer to disappointing ratings and reviews, has the network's support, Tellem said.

Olsen twins cashing in on a full house

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — John Stamos can laugh about the financial success of his former "Full House" co-stars Ashley and Mary-Kate Olsen.

The Olsen twins, who were youngsters when they began on the ABC sitcom, have since reaped millions with movies and a variety of kid-related merchandise.

"I've bugged them to borrow money and stuff. They're rich," Stamos said.

"Full House" ran from 1987 to 1995. Stamos, who will return to ABC this fall in the series "Thieves," said he recently saw the twins, who turned 15 in June.

"They've just grown into the most beautiful, smart, humble, sweet kids. Really," he said.

Would Stamos consider working for them?

"I do wash their cars on occasion," he joked.

Mob attacks embassies in Macedonia

■ Macedonia accuses Western officials of bias, as rebels advance in Tetovo.

By Aleksandar Vasovic
Associated Press

SKOPJE, Macedonia — Ethnic Albanian rebels attacked an army barracks and surrounded four villages on Tuesday, while mobs in the capital accused NATO of siding with the guerrillas and attacked the U.S., British, and German embassies.

Protesters threw stones at the U.S. Embassy, breaking windows as riot police looked on but failed to intervene.

A mob of several hundred people smashed the main doors of the German and British embassies and the front of a McDonald's restaurant. Vandals burned several cars belonging to the United Nations and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe before the violent protests subsided earlier today.

Government spokesman Antonio Milososki on Tuesday called NATO "a big friend of our enemies."

The protests came as rebels clashed with government forces in Tetovo on Tuesday. The

The father of a Macedonian Muslim soldier, middle, is consoled by villagers at his son's funeral in the village of Elovo.

Defense Ministry said that the rebels were advancing and had surrounded four nearby villages.

Lightly armed Macedonian police abandoned several checkpoints and were replaced by rebels in Tetovo, Macedonia's second largest city, Macedonian media reported.

A rebel commander, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said police were handing out arms to people at one checkpoint. Rebels attacked Tetovo's army barracks, but further details were not available.

Amid the growing hostilities, Macedonian authorities closed the border with Kosovo, and hundreds of residents fled Tetovo and surrounding villages, several of them now in rebel hands.

Army sources said fighting was still going on around 9 p.m. in and around Tetovo. "Terrorists are using heavy machine guns and mortars," one source said, adding that rebel activity was particularly intense in the Drenovec and Proj suburbs.

Climate accord a 'geopolitical earthquake'

■ "The world has defied George W. Bush on climate change," one activist says.

By Geir Moulson
Associated Press

BONN, Germany — The Kyoto Protocol to combat global warming emerged from crucial talks in Bonn with hefty concessions to some of the world's leading industrialized countries, but environmentalists weren't disheartened Tuesday.

Activists said setting in motion a worldwide effort against climate change was in itself a landmark, and they argued that the initiative could be strengthened over time.

"It's huge," said David Doniger of the Natural Resources Defense Council, a U.S.-based group that attended the talks. "It's historic to have this agreement with this sound architecture and to have it go into force."

Although her group highlighted the effects of concessions on Kyoto's targets, Jennifer Morgan of the World Wildlife Fund described the agreement as "a geopolitical earthquake."

"The world has defied George W. Bush on climate change," she said, adding that the deal "sends a very unambiguous message to industry to begin investing in technology that reduces emissions."

The Kyoto treaty aims to cut emissions of greenhouse gases, which are blamed for warming the Earth's atmosphere, by 5.2 percent from their 1990 levels. Environmental groups said the allowance for "sinks" — forests and farmlands that absorb carbon dioxide — diluted the commitment. Japan, Canada, and Australia had pushed for that concession.

The World Wildlife Fund estimated the reduction would be closer to 1.8 percent.

But "the actual levels that are in the agreement frankly are secondary," Doniger argued. "It has a clear compliance structure that has all the right incentives to make countries comply."

horoscopes

Wednesday, July 25, 2001 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Catch up on work that was put on the back burner. Travel and correspondence appear to be unsettled due to delays. You might want to be alone and sort out your private thoughts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Others may well recognize your creative talent today. Don't be afraid to push your beliefs and attitudes. You have the ability to capture the interest of others. Just use your imagination and your charm to woo people.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Stay calm, and everything will settle down. Those you live with may be hard to handle. Do your share of the work and then stay active outside the house.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can make your point heard if you aren't too shy to express your opinions. Others will admire your splendid solutions. You know how to deal well with complex situations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take a look at your personal situation and future intentions. Update papers and make positive changes. Someone may be upset with your course of action.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Those you live with will be ready to toss you out if you don't stop playing mind games. Secret affairs or hidden matters may be confusing and preoccupying you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Re-evaluate your motives. Think twice about how you are handling loved ones. Take time to look over your personal papers and make changes in your domestic life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Communicate with both business and emotional partners. Make sure that they understand your intentions. You can easily acquire additional knowledge. Try visiting the library or spending some time on the computer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be aggressive at work if you wish to move up the ladder. You can make financial gains if you play your cards right. Don't neglect domestic duties or your mate will be upset.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Travel for pleasure will be conducive to new love connections. Sudden changes in relationships and at home will cause disruptions and outbursts of temper.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your emotional well-being will fluctuate. Don't let those close to you get under your skin. An inability to complete your work will result if you let your emotions interfere.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can ferret out secret information if you listen to others. Your ability to work with detail will aid in achieving your goals.

Safe summer driving advice

Road construction zones can provide major headaches during the summer. But remember that while some call these "obstacles," others might call them "places that you can still sort of drive through."

When making obscene gestures to annoying drivers, be sure to extend one arm fully outside the window while keeping the other on the wheel.

If you happen to be pulled over by police, then it's probably a good time to practice your Spanish. "No comprende, señor" has always been a highly underrated phrase.

When smuggling narcotics across the Mexican border in your van, be discreet about it. No more of that firing-guns-and-swerving-from-cops stuff, OK?

While talking on your cell phone, fiddling with the radio, and eating tacos, remember to check on the road in front of you from time to time.

Seat belts, while effective, are no guarantee of complete safety. Next time, don't forget to drive without your helmet, goggles, and inflatable rubber suit.

When seeking to impress girls with your Camaro, make sure that you peel out effectively and keep your stereo loud.

quote of the day

Every time we put a picture near him, he ducked his head. He wouldn't make eye contact ... he became extremely nervous.

— LAPD Officer Lee Perry, after apprehended a man who had escaped from a Los Angeles jail by using a fake ID bearing a picture of Eddie Murphy that he had cut from an ad for Dr. Dolittle 2. The man, wanted for attempted murder, was on the lam for more than two weeks.

A Hawkeye awakening

■ Incoming hoops recruit Erik Hansen was taken aback by the excitement around Iowa basketball.

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

Incoming Hawkeye basketball recruit Erik Hansen noticed something a little different between Iowa and his home state, Texas — but it had nothing to do with corn and pigs.

"People are a lot more basketball crazy than down South," he said. "At first, it was a little strange."

When Hansen, a 6-11, 200-pound center, arrived in Iowa City this summer, the number of people who already knew who he was and asked for his autograph came as a surprise.

Now that he has been here for almost two months, the focus on basketball and the intensity of the Iowa program has turned out to be a plus for the freshman.

Hansen's own focus on basketball in high school made him into one of Texas' elite basketball players last season.

An athletic shot-blocker who runs the floor well, Hansen averaged 12 points, 10 rebounds, and 6 blocks at Trinity High School in Euless, a school of approximately 2000 students.

He was named to the first-team class 5A All-State basketball team and was his district's Defensive Player of the Year.

Originally, Hansen said, he did not want to leave Texas to attend college, so most of the out-of-state schools were eliminated. Why Iowa was not eliminated remains a mystery.

"I have no idea why I left Iowa on the list," he said.

Whether there was a reason or not, Hansen took a closer look at Iowa and knew he wanted to play for Hawkeye coach Steve Alford and the Hawkeyes, rather than staying in Texas and going to SMU or Texas Tech.

"I really like [Alford]," he said. "I like the fact that he played — he knows how hard he had to push himself, so he knows how hard to push us."

The step up from high school to Division I will bring a lot of changes, Hansen said, but the biggest will be the talent level.

"In high school, there weren't a whole bunch of really good players on each team. But there are all good players in college, so there's more expected of you," he said.

This summer, Hansen is taking two classes, Introduction to Sociology and Masterpieces of Art, which will get him six hours of credit before the fall semester begins. When school starts up, he said, taking classes and practicing should not have much of an effect on him.

"At first, I was a little nervous about it, but all the tutors and everything should help," he said.

Tutors may not be necessary though — in high school, he said, school work was held very important in his family.

"I got mostly A's and B's. My parents didn't like C's, and neither did I," he said.

Hawkeye sophomore Sean Sonderleiter, who will play with Hansen in the front court in the coming years, said he thinks Hansen will fit in very well at Iowa.

"He's got a nice short shot, and he's a real nice shot-blocker, which I've found out from open gyms," he said. "He'll be a really good player for us."

Hansen played in the Prime Time League this summer, and he said the intensity of the league surprised him. But soon enough, the tough play fit right into the basketball focus at Iowa.

"I was thinking it would be more like rec ball, but these guys really get serious about it," he said.

Even after settling in at Iowa, he said there is one thing that makes him a little apprehensive about living in the state.

"I don't know what I'm going to do when it gets cold. I'll probably just stay inside," he said, laughing.

Brisk winters or not, Hansen is happy to be a Hawkeye.

Garciaparra goes 0-for-3 in Triple-A return

■ He said he felt no pain in his injured wrist.

By Dan Gelston
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Nomar Garciaparra didn't waste any time testing his injured right wrist.

He swung at the first two pitches he saw and felt no pain or discomfort.

Garciaparra returned from wrist surgery and went 0-for-3 Tuesday night for Triple-A Pawtucket, his first game since last September.

He said he experienced nothing but some soreness during Pawtucket's 11-8 win over the Indianapolis Indians.

"It's what I expected. I assumed everything was going to feel all right and it did, so that was good," he said. "We'll see how it feels tomorrow. That's going to be the bigger question than it is today."

Garciaparra, hit by a pitch above the hip in the first inning, has been sidelined since surgery on his right wrist on opening day.

"I wasn't really thinking of the wrist at all," he said. "My concern was making sure it was loose."

He flied out to center field in the second inning, grounded out to third in the fourth and grounded out to second in the fifth.

"It was good to see a pitch. The last time I saw one was last September," he said. "It's coming back to me a little bit. There are some things I have to work on. For the most, I felt I was able to do everything instinctively. That was the most important thing."

Garciaparra said before the game he was eager to test his wrist in game situations for the first time this season. He said he was happy with the way it held up.

"Things are going to be sore," he said. "I'm sure my body's going to be sore. We'll see how it feels tomorrow."

He had two assists and a putout in his only fielding chances. In the fifth inning, he made a back-handed play in the hole and made a strong throw across his body for an out.

"I was worried more about catching it than I was about throwing it," Garciaparra said of his defensive expectations.

Garciaparra is to play at least three more International League games with the PawSox in Indianapolis, then be re-evaluated by Red Sox team physician Dr. Bill Morgan.

"The only way to recover from the surgery, or any injury, is to go step by step and do a little bit more," he said. "Hopefully, I've done enough where now it's time to go in there and get some innings under my belt and go out there and play a game."

Hansen-Lester will move to Iowa City on Aug. 6. Her family will move in either September or October.

Hansen-Lester will also be an assistant for the women's track and field team at Iowa.

Women's track head coach James Grant is pleased to have her on board.

"We are very happy that we found someone as qualified and successful as both an athlete and a coach," he said.

Iowa will be loaded with Big Ten contenders this year, and it hasn't been that way in my time here.

It appears as if Bob Bowsby and the rest of the administration will finally be able to reap the rewards for putting together this new breed of coaching staffs (something they have had to do in almost every team over the past five years).

Too bad I'll only be here to experience it for one semester.

season long, equaling Imprinted Sportswear's 9-3 overall record and earning the No. 2 seed in the process. It sat at or near the top of the league standings all season long, despite playing without any big-name players.

Merrill Lynch beat a thin Fitzpatrick's team, 79-75, in the semifinals, despite not having strong individual performances.

Five players — David Kruse, Monte Jenkins, Matt Schneiderman, Greg Danielson, and Pete Eggers — scored between 13 and 20 points, and the team overcame a tepid 7-40 3-point shooting performance to advance to the championship.

Merrill Lynch coach Randy Larson said his team will once again look to a group effort in the championship game.

"We'll play our game and hope that team play wins out," he said.

The championship game will be Thursday night at 7:30 in North Liberty.

Armstrong returns to flat land in Tour

■ He finished 15 minutes behind the winner, good for 40th place.

By Michael McDonough
 Associated Press

LAVAU, France — Having all but secured a third-straight title in the mountains, Lance Armstrong returned to flat land in the Tour de France to begin the long ride to Paris.

The Texan finished Tuesday's stage from Pau to Laval in southwest France with the main pack, about 15 minutes behind winner Rik Verbrugghe of Belgium.

The race was the first of six stretches that cover more than 600 miles between the foot of the Pyrenees and Paris, where the Tour ends July 29. The stages are unlikely to significantly affect the overall standings.

Armstrong finished in 40th place Tuesday. He maintained his overall lead, ahead of main rival Jan Ullrich of Germany by 5 minutes, 5 seconds.

Armstrong built his lead by outclassing his rivals in the five tough mountain stages. Barring sickness or accidents, he is expected to maintain a big edge in the remaining flat stages.

At 144 miles, this was the longest leg of the three-week event. Verbrugghe crossed the finish line under blazing sunshine in 5:16:21.

"I dedicate this victory to my wife and my little girl," the Belgian said. "It's an unbelievable season."

This year he won the prologue of the Giro d'Italia and the Wallon Arrow in his home country.

Italy's Marco Pinotti was second, in the same time as Verbrugghe. Countryman Alessandro Petacchi was third, six seconds off the pace.

None of the 25 riders who finished before the main pack is a serious threat to Armstrong or the other race leaders. Their performance did not affect the top of the standings.

American rider Jonathan Vaughters dropped out of the race shortly after the start because of a wasp sting the day before. He was refused permission by the International Cycling Union to treat the sting above his right eye with a cortisone injection.

Eva Gans/Associated Press

 "I've had some horrible luck in the Tour before," the Credit

Agricole rider from Denver said. "It would have been the first Tour that I finished."
 He crashed out of the race in 1999 and 2000. He quit this time after swelling from the sting obstructed his vision.

Duval now hoping for more major victories

■ After taking the British Open, he hopes to keep up the winning ways.

By Doug Ferguson
 Associated Press

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England — No one ever questioned Tom Weiskopf's swing or his ability. He was more a victim of bad luck, and especially bad timing.

The Masters was the one major he coveted more than the others, and four times he had one arm in the green jacket. It always was taken away by a putt that somehow stayed out of the hole, or by clutch shots from the greatest player in the game.

When his career ended, the only major Weiskopf claimed was a British Open.

David Duval hopes his silver claret jug will be the first of many.

The burden of being one of the best players in the world to never have won a major championship was lifted as soon as Duval tapped in a par putt at Royal Lytham & St. Annes to claim his first major in 27 tries.

Recent history shows that the first taste only makes Duval hungrier.

He was a runner-up seven times on the PGA Tour before winning his first tournament in a playoff. Balls that once bounced out of trees into the lake started finding the fairway, and he went on to win three in a row, and 11 out of his next 34.

"I would imagine what it would do is intensify my desire to do it again," he said.

What does that mean? That he will have to win the next five majors to catch Tiger Woods. Odds are that Woods will widen that gap before letting Duval or anyone else get any closer.

Duval would be the first to admit that.

Holding the oldest trophy in golf, he scanned the champions etched in the base of the claret jug and found his name under Woods, who won the British Open last year at age 24 to complete the career Grand Slam.

"I got to look at it closely, and I got to see where his name is," Duval said. "And I like the position of my name right below his. It looks like it is in the right spot."

Such a concession wasn't always part of his thinking.

During a practice round at the Players Championship one year, a reporter pointed out to Duval that his name was missing from the long list of players who had finished second to Woods.
 "And it won't be," Duval interrupted with a grin just sneaky enough to make one wonder how much he was kidding.

SPORTS BRIEFS

DeRonde, Whitaker recovering from broken legs

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa State football players Kevin DeRonde and Chris Whitaker, sidelined last spring with broken legs, are recovering and both should be able to play this fall, coach Dan McCarney said.

McCarney said DeRonde, a defensive end who broke a bone in his lower left leg, is about a month ahead of Whitaker, a linebacker who broke both bones in his lower right leg.

"DeRonde is running and doing everything everybody else is doing," McCarney said Tuesday. "He isn't missing a thing. He's feeling super, he's up to 260 pounds, he just looks great."

McCarney said DeRonde's outlook is so promising that he's taking him to Dallas this week for the annual Big 12 preseason media day.

Thorpe sets second world record, then blasts FINA

FUKUOKA, Japan — Ian Thorpe powered to his second world record in three days Tuesday, then blasted swimming's hierarchy for tampering with his program and for its lack of action against drug cheats.

The 18-year-old Aussie's two records at the World Championships were his 10th and 11th in individual long-course events. He won three Olympic golds at Sydney last year and already has three world titles at Fukuoka.

Usually unflappable and almost never slipping from his modest and well-rehearsed post-record self-analysis, Thorpe snapped after being told that the 800 freestyle likely would be scrapped from major international meets before the next Olympics.

The Thorpedo won the first 800 contested at the World Championships, in 7 minutes, 39.16 seconds, clipping nearly 2.5 seconds off the world record he set in March.

Michael Phelps of the United States also smashed a world record, breaking his mark in the 200-butterfly with a time of 1:54.58.

Rebuilding defense top priority for Rams

ST. LOUIS — Training camp will be a proving ground for Kurt Warner's head, Marshall Faulk's knee, and a whole new defense for the St. Louis Rams.

Two-a-day practices start about 9 a.m. Thursday at Western Illinois University in remote Macomb, Ill., and the two biggest stars on one of the preseason Super Bowl favorites are possible question marks.

Faulk, the NFL's MVP last year, has had two operations on his right knee since the start of last season. Warner, the MVP two years ago when the Rams won the Super Bowl, reported no after-effects in the two minicamps from the concussion he sustained in the regular season finale.

Success awaits Hawkeye sports

As the summer session begins to wind down here at The Daily Iowan (we stop publishing Friday), I've been spending a lot of time preparing for the fall.

In doing so, it dawned on me that this could be one of the most successful Iowa sports seasons in years.

It looks as if the last four years of this quasi-athletic peril that has loomed over this university could be coming to an end in the 2001-02 season.

Athletics haven't been necessarily terrible around Iowa City, but we did recently witness the temporary demise of the football and women's basketball team.

National rankings for most teams were few and far between.

Now, it's time for Iowa to put itself back on the national map, and the basketball team will lead the way.

A consensus top-10 preseason pick, ESPN's Andy Katz says Iowa is a legitimate contender this year, and not just for the Big Ten. With Luke Recker and Reggie Evans back and a strong supporting cast, it's possible Iowa could find itself in the Final Four come March. That would mark the first time the Hawkeyes have done so since 1980.

The football team, after suffering through some of its worst seasons in school history the past three years, could very well go to a bowl game. We Iowans are beginning to miss those January trips down South.

With 17 starters returning, this winter could be a heck of a lot more fun than the last three.

The women's basketball team, under the guidance of second-year coach Lisa Bluder, will be able to contend for the Big Ten title this year. After all, it did it in her first season.

This will be an exciting season on the mat, because Iowa won't be expected to win the title as it has in almost every season in the last 25 years. Minnesota will likely be the favorite, but next year's young Hawkeyes could surprise a lot of people.

All the focus shouldn't rest on the big sports, however. It's the little ones that will make some of the biggest strides.

The volleyball team is poised to make its first NCAA Tournament bid since 1994. Under the guidance of Rita Crockett, the Hawkeyes have steadily improved over the last three seasons.

The soccer and field-hockey teams are always tough, and Mike Lorenzen put the women's gymnastics team on the national scene this past year.

This coming year, all three groups will likely be even better.

The softball team will be coming off a Women's College World Series bid. Larry Wiczorek, in his fifth year, is proving that Iowa's track team is a force to be reckoned with in the Big Ten.

The list goes on and on. The point is that almost every team on this campus is improving — from football to women's track.

Goodfellow Printing wins GTL

Cullen Painting was forced to compete with only six players

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

Beatrice Bullock looked to the bench and saw three fingers on her coach's hand extended, so she triggered a shot.

Swoosh — the ball dropped effortlessly through the net, and the near-capacity crowd erupted. It looked like she did it every game. However, it is unusual to see Bullock make a 3-point shot; this time, the ball just bounced her way.

"It is a rare occasion that I have the green light on a 3-pointer," she said. "It was a postplayer's dream."

Everything seemed to be in Goodfellow Printing/Imprinted Sportswear's favor during the Game Time League championship, when it beat the early season favorite and regular-season league champion, Cullen Painting/Bob's Your Uncle Pizza Café, 103-71.

Cullen Painting was outmatched from the beginning, with only six players showing up for the game. Absent was the team's assist leader, Stephanie Schmitz, her Drake teammate, Carla Bennett, and high-school standout Megan McCracken.

Schmitz and Bennett had prior engagements, and McCracken was out with a pinched nerve in her back.

"Once I saw our lineup, I knew it was next to impossible," Cullen Painting coach Randy Larson said. "We really missed Megan [McCracken] — I think she is the best defensive player in the league. But she still drove all the way down here to cheer us on, and that is really classy."

The mismatch was obvious from the get-go, although Cullen Painting's Mary Berdo scored the first points on a signature deep 3-point shot. But Goodfellow Printing soon took control.

Cullen Painting looked flustered and frustrated throughout the first half, and the scoreboard showed it, as Goodfellow Printing extended its lead to 49-27 by halftime.

In the second half, things didn't change much for Cullen Painting, which struggled to score the entire game. Goodfellow Printing's feisty interior defense made passes into star player Jennie Lillis difficult.

Goodfellow Printing continued to increase its commanding lead by wearing out the already fatigued Cullen Painting squad with a transition game and subbing new players every two minutes.

"I think it was fun for our team to do well. We are really meshing well right now," said Lindsey Meder, who led her team in scoring with 30 points. "But it was hard for them to only have six players — that will wear any team thin."

A Hawkeye threesome led Cullen Painting's squad, with Mary Berdo notching 24 points, Lillis 21 points and 10 rebounds, and Leah Magner 11 points and 10 rebounds.

"It really didn't disappoint me [to lose]," Larson said. "I think that is why regular-season champions, rather than tournament champions, are a reflection of a team."

When we played Goodfellow Printing for the No. 1 seed, we beat them. I am just really proud of the women."

Meder, although content with the victory, was disappointed that her team didn't beat a full-strength Cullen Painting squad when they met earlier.

"They can use that as an excuse, that they didn't have some of their players here," she said. "But I still think that we would've played a good game."

Teamwork a theme for both PTL finalists

Imprinted Sportswear will have to win again without its star players.

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

Imprinted Sportswear and Merrill Lynch/Nike, Thursday night's Prime Time League championship game competitors, have one thing in common: teamwork.

The top seed, Imprinted Sportswear, is looking to make the championship game its 10th win in a row after losing its first three. Many of those wins came behind strong performances of big men Reggie Evans, J.R. Koch, and Joe Breckenridge. But in the semifinals, Imprinted Sportswear played without those three players and still gutted out a 123-115 overtime win over HawksNestOnline.com.

Without the big horses in the lane, Imprinted Sportswear looked to Buena Vista player Adam Jones, UNI player Aaron Mittendorf, and unlikely force Aliou Keita to keep the team's season alive. Jones and Mittendorf filled the nets from

IOWA WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Hansen-Lester named women's C.C. coach

She brings an impressive résumé to Iowa.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

Joan Hansen-Lester will be heading back to the Midwest after being hired to be the UI women's cross-country coach Monday.

After spending 1996-00 in the same position at Concordia University in Irvine, Calif., Hansen-Lester, whose family is from Chicago, was excited to be heading back to the heartland to coach at Iowa.

"I researched universities and looked on Internet at Iowa and the city of Iowa City, and I was extremely impressed," she said. "With the other teams at the school being so strong, I knew the athletics department was supported. The challenge and strong support system were attractive."

Equally attractive is Hansen-Lester's résumé.

As a competitor, she placed eighth in the 3,000 meters at the 1984 Olympic games. In 1982, she set the two-mile world and American record at the U.S.A. indoor track nationals.

She was also a three-time member of the U.S. national cross-country team.

As a coach at Concordia, she was a two-time recipient of the Golden State Athletic Conference Women's Cross Country Coach of the Year. She was an assistant for the U.S.A. Junior National team in 1992 and at UCLA from 1984-85.

Michelle Lahann, a junior-to-be for the Hawkeyes, said the team was thrilled over the hiring.

"She's very intense. I think it will be a smooth transition," Lahann said. "She's easy to get along with. Each of the women on the team was excited after meeting her."

Hansen-Lester said she got a warm welcome from the team and administration at Iowa. She also said everyone was very enthusiastic about the change.

"The administration practiced a win-win style," she said. "The team had great chemistry, and the members are very excited. They wanted a coach with direction and enthusiasm to build to program."

After receiving a bachelor's degree in kinesiology at Cal State-Fullerton this year,
