2 detained in alleged sexual assault

Public Safety says no charges were filed in the early Sunday morning incident

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

UI Public Safety detained two men for allegedly sexually assaulting two women at an undisclosed campus location over the weekend.

Officer Shawn Sharp detained the two men for the alleged incident, which occurred at about 4 a.m. Sunday. They were later released; no charges were filed.

A guard near the location observed suspicious activity and reported it to police, said Public Safety Director Chuck Green. The women alleged that their assailants had "forced intercourse without permission,"

Green said.

Officers investigated the incident as third-degree sexual abuse, a Class C felony. If charged and convicted, the two men would face up to 10 years in prison.

The alleged perpetrators and women were neither students nor employees affiliated with the university, police said.

Public Safety officers seized physical evidence from the scene, but the victims decided not to file charges, Green said. The evidence seized will be used if the two women decide to press charges, he said.

Green said alcohol was a factor in the incident, adding it is not uncommon for more crimes to occur when school starts and more people are out.

Public Safety said it will not release the location of the incident to protect the identity of the women but confirmed the assault did not occur in a public place.

It is not uncommon for victims to be afraid of filing charges, officials said. "They're embarrassed, they're hurt, and sometimes they may not want their families to know they were here," Green said.

He said he will record the sexual assault in Public Safety's crime statistics, to be released to education officials and the public for the year 2001.

"We really wrestle with whether or not to put it in our stats," Green said. "We try to manage it so it accurately depicts the numbers, but often victims don't want to be identified."

Green said the vast majority of sexual-abuse cases occur between acquaintances.

Three incidents of sexual abuse were reported to Public Safety in 1999, and two were reported in 2000. Police say 341 incidents of attempted sexual abuse were reported in 1999 and 286 in 2000.

Frat quiet on past

Lambda Chi Alpha returns to UI after being banned in the aftermath of a pledge's death

By Jennifer Sturm
The Daily Iowan

Men who choose to join the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity this fall may have no idea that the organization was banned from the university six years ago when one of its pledges died of excessive drinking after a ceremony.

The fraternity is starting from scratch to rebuild and reorganize the house by recruiting members during this fall's rush. Organizers are trying to escape the stigma slapped on the fraternity after Lambda Chi Alpha pledge Matthew Garofalo died — information representatives aren't divulging to new recruits unless asked.

"For the most part, not a lot of people who are pledging know," said Matt Detjen, the director of expansion for Lambda Chi Alpha International. "We have been telling them we pulled the plug because of risk management. If they ask for more information, then we tell them."

The attempt to re-establish the frat has yielded no pledges although 50 prospective pledges chose to meet with Lambda Chi Alpha last week, Detjen said.

"It's tough to compete with [frats that have houses and members]," he said. "It's kind of a wake-up call for us."

Matthew Garofalo's mother, Monica Garofalo, declined to comment on the fraternity's effort to re-establish a chapter at the UI, saying she didn't want to speak to the media because the family is still mourning the death of her son.

The Garofalo family's attorney, Edward Gallagher Jr., said he has no concerns about Lambda Chi Alpha's return.

"I'm sure it's a whole different world with new people," he said. "[The fraternity] certainly has a stricter policy, and I'm sure the university does not want anything like this to happen again. I do not want this to happen again."

Chad Diehl, the Lambda Chi Alpha mentor to Garofalo at the time of his death and purchaser of the alcohol, will be tried in December in a lawsuit brought against him by the Garofalo family.

The fraternity was banned from the campus in 1995 after Garofalo, then 19, died following a "Big Brother/Little Brother" pledge ceremony at the Lambda Chi Alpha house, 222 Clinton St., on the night of Sept. 7,

GRADE INFLATION PART 2 OF A 3-PART SERIES

UI: Inflated grades start in high school

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

Evan Johnson was a good student in high school. He sported a 3.8 grade-point average without studying.

But after struggling through his first two years at the UI, Johnson's GPA was 2.7. He said he grew frustrated with his limping grades and decided to take this school year off to work.

Grade inflation starts in high school, university officials say, where grades have increased while ACT scores have stabilized. The result is a system that does not adequately prepare some students, such as Johnson, for an undergraduate education.

"I didn't think it would be a cakewalk, but I figured I was ready," he said of enrolling at the UI.

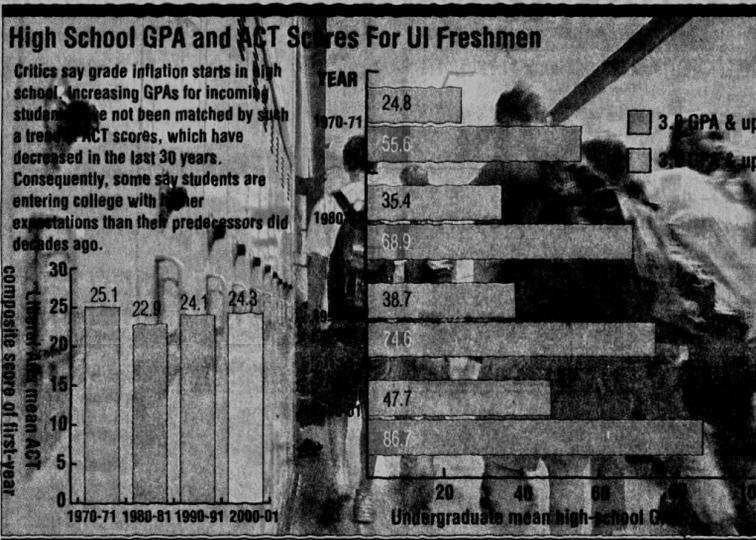

The percentage of incoming UI students who carried a 3.5 GPA or higher during high school has doubled during the past 30 years, records show. In the fall semester of 1970, only 24.8 percent of UI freshmen carried a 3.5 or better. By 2000, that number had increased to 47.7 percent.

"I believe there has been grade inflation in the high schools," said Lola Lopes, the UI associate provost for undergraduate education. "It's very hard to find students with a C average in high schools. The average is much closer to a B or above."

Mike Barron, the UI director of Admissions, said higher GPAs for incoming students reflect both high-school grade inflation and more qualified applicants.

He still considers grades to have a major role in the application process.

"Success in high school is the single biggest predictor of a student's performance in college," he said.

Despite the rising grades, the average ACT scores for UI incoming-freshmen during the past 30 years declined from 25.1 to 24.3, according to the registrar.

National ACT scores have also remained stable since 1989, officials said. The national mean composite score in 1989, 20.6, is now 21, said Wes Hadley, the director of the ACT Office of Educational Practices.

Fred Antczak, the UI associate dean of liberal arts academic programs and services, attributes rising grades to better-prepared, more competitive students. The readiness of incoming students has risen because of an 11-year-old rule making some college prerequisites in high school required for admission at Iowa's three state universities, officials said.

Economy, tax cut ... poof, goes surplus

By Curt Anderson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The sour economy and President Bush's tax cut will force the government to tap $9 billion in Social Security reserves this year, congressional analysts concluded in a report Monday, igniting a bitter political fight over the dwindling surplus.

"Houston, we've got a problem," said Rep. John Spratt, D-S.C., the ranking Democrat on the House Budget Committee. He used the famous Apollo 13 line to underscore the pessimistic projections from the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office. "What we've got here is the hard job of adjusting the budget to reflect reality."

The CBO report had been scheduled for release today. It was obtained Monday by the Associated Press from congressional sources.

Democrats said the CBO update, coming less than a week after a sunnier White House budget forecast, would severely crimp the ability of the president and Congress to fund their priorities: increasing defense and education spending, providing a Medicare prescription-drug benefit, paying for a new farm-subsidy program, and extending popular expiring tax breaks.

House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., said the 10-year, $1.35 trillion tax cut is causing an "alarming fiscal crisis," draining away the surplus cushion just as

Cheating is on the rise

By Jackie Hammers
The Daily Iowan

Plagiarism and cheating are on the rise at the UI because of increasing Internet use, a university report says.

The 15th Annual Report of the Office of the Ombudsperson didn't release exact numbers but warned of the trend.

Fred Antczak, the UI associate dean for liberal arts academic programs and services, estimates that incidents of plagiarism and cheating have tripled in the past five years.

And another university official blames the Internet.

"It is a combination of information being so readily accessible on the Internet and, to a certain extent, we have lost our ability to educate students how to properly reference work," said John Keller, the dean of the Graduate College. "Our skills in that area still haven't been honed."

Students have failed to learn proper attribution and plagiarism ethics from grammar school through college — a problem teachers must learn to address, he said.

To combat the problem, the UI has created a class to help instructors detect plagiarism. In the course, professors are directed to some Web pages listing commonly used sites known as "paper mills" that generate papers that students can turn in as their own writing.

Many teachers are familiar with Web sites commonly used in cases of plagiarism and cheating through their own research, Antczak said.

Universities across the nation are using computer software such as Moss, Turnitin, and Scanexam to deter and catch students cheating. Some UI professors also use electronic means to detect plagiarism and cheating, Antczak said.

The ombudspersons' report encouraged faculty to alert students if they are using such software.

"There is no rule that professors have to tell students, but it would be useful to do so because that in itself would be a deterrent," Antczak said.

Incidents of plagiarism and cheating, a trend at both the graduate and undergraduate levels, and subsequent disciplinary actions are handled by individual colleges within the university, said Maile Sagen, a university ombudsperson.

Students caught plagiarizing may be given a failing grade for their assignment or course by the instructor. A department dean may also choose to impose such disciplinary actions as probation, suspension, or expulsion.

Though cheating may be easier with the Internet, said Nancy Hauserman, the associate dean for the undergraduate program in the Tippie College of Business, she has not seen a noticeable increase in cheating in the business school.

"As far as cases that have come to me, most of them have not involved Web plagiarism," she said, adding that she felt that by being more clear in their expectations for assignments, professors could prevent some plagiarism.

UNI student dies after choking

CEDAR FALLS (AP)—An 18-year-old University of Northern Iowa freshman had been struggling with something lodged in his throat before he died, a university official said.

Kevin A. Reedy of Council Bluffs died after collapsing while taking a shower.

He was pronounced dead Sunday at Sartori Memorial Hospital in Cedar Falls.

Reedy was discovered unconscious in UNI's Dancer Residence Hall about 3:30 a.m. Sunday.

"It appears that Kevin was struggling with something in his throat in the shower area, and he'd indicated to somebody that he'd be OK," said David Zarifis, the university's Public Safety director.

His death remains under investigation, and the State Medical Examiner's Office will conduct an autopsy. Toxicology tests will take approximately six weeks. Preliminary autopsy results indicate drugs and alcohol did not play a role, Zarifis said.

The campus was busy over the weekend with students preparing for the first day of classes on Monday and parents helping their children settle in for the start of academic year.

"This is the weekend of the year that's usually pretty joyful," said James O'Connor, the director of media relations for the university.

"Obviously, our first thoughts are with his family."

Leader on hunger issues wins food prize

DES MOINES (AP)—A Denmark native who quit school to become a farm laborer and later devoted his work to helping malnourished and starving people was named the winner of the 2001 World Food Prize on Aug. 22.

Per Pinstrup-Anderson is the director of the International Food Policy Research Institute, a Washington, D.C.-based think-tank on hunger issues.

He will receive a $250,000 prize during a ceremony on Oct. 18 in Des Moines.

The World Food Prize, now in its 15th year, honors those who have made a vital contribution to improving the quality, quantity, and availability of food.

Ken Quinn, the president of the World Food Prize Foundation, said Pinstrup-Anderson will be recognized for 30 years of agricultural research and food policy.

He began his work in the midst of the so-called "Green Revolution," when food was abundant but not available to the poor or disadvantaged.

Freshmen swell to test city's new alcohol ordinance

By Grant Schulte and Casey Wagner
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City's recently implemented alcohol ordinance may not result in fewer infractions because the number of incoming UI freshmen is swelling to more than 300 above last year's enrollment.

"You're going to have more violations based on a sheer increase in students," said Iowa City police Sgt. Doug Hart.

Police made 12 arrests for possession of alcohol under the legal age this past weekend — compared to 62 at this time last year — and 20 arrests for public intoxication.

The influx of incoming students has led some bars to become more vigilant in rooting out underage drinkers, said local bar employees. Most bars plan to respond to the student influx with conventional methods, said Dave Moore, a co-owner of the Field House Restaurant & Bar, 111 E. College St. For the last five years, the Field House has used a bracelet and hand-stamping system to prevent minors from buying alcohol.

"If they continue to bug a server, we tell them to leave," he said.

Police Lt. Dan Sellers said the department is not changing its practices in an effort to enforce the new ordinance, which is aimed at curbing underage and binge drinking. Officers will continue to do walk-ins at bars and will answer calls about violations, he said.

"If we walk in and someone is doing something he or she is not supposed to do, we'll gather all the information and go to the city attorney," Sellers said. "If we have enough evidence that shows a violation, then we'll file charges."

There is no current plan to place undercover officers in bars, he said, adding that they will be used if the need arises.

Mayor Ernie Lehman said he and other city councilors want to make sure the ordinance is effective before making any more decisions on alcohol-related issues, adding that they are willing to change the ordinance if it fails to serve its purpose.

The ordinance, which went into effect Aug. 1, still confuses students, Moore said, adding that the city has done "nothing" to educate them.

Selling unlimited drinks at a fixed price or more than two drinks per patron are among the practices prohibited by the ordinance, which also increased the severity of penalties against underage drinkers caught possessing alcohol and establishments found selling to minors.

UI tests cancer treatment

By George Pappas
The Daily Iowan

UI Health Care physicians are the first in the nation to test a breakthrough in the treatment of prostate cancer.

The new treatment, which underwent approximately five years of pre-clinical studies, involves using an adenovirus-prostate-specific antigen vaccine to treat patients. Using a vaccine in cancer treatment is promising because it promotes the buildup of the patient's immune system and T-cells, said Richard Williams, the head of the UI urology department.

The UI researchers want to determine if the vaccine will cause tumors to shrink; they also want to detect how the body's immune system responds to the medicine.

"We've tested it on animals with human tumors, and it's worked extremely well," Williams said. "Its effect on humans is entirely different ... It's still way too early to determine its effectiveness."

The vaccine causes the body's immune system to kill cancer cells itself, as opposed to previous methods, which used drugs to combat the cancer, he said.

"The primary goal of the Phase I trial is to determine the safety of the vaccine," said David Lubaroff, a UI professor of urology and microbiology who is co-leading the research with Williams.

Researchers first give a group of patients a low dosage of the drug to monitor potential side effects. Patients then take the medication in increasing doses until they either reach the maximum recommended amount or begin to experience side effects.

Researchers are also using an experimental, advanced substance called Gelfoam instead of a saline solution to carry the vaccine through the system, Lubaroff said.

Three cancer patients currently use the experimental vaccine, and two or three new patients will be added weekly until 18 patients have taken the vaccine, Williams said.

Patients qualify for the clinical trial depending on their unresponsiveness to previous treatments. Researchers are only measuring large tumors that have spread beyond the prostate so they can track their reduction after taking the vaccine.

Patients must undergo CAT-and bone scans and have their blood purified to ensure that no complications will arise as a reaction to the vaccine.

Prof named to Hall of Fame

By Vanessa Miller
The Daily Iowan

Ursula Delworth never married, making her educational endeavors and service to the community the primary focus in her life, a friend of hers said.

The deceased UI professor and administrator was one of four women inducted into the Iowa Women's Hall of Fame last weekend in Des Moines. Delworth was recognized for her contributions to multicultural issues and women's studies.

"Ursula deserves to be honored because of her passion for recruiting and training minority students," said friend Sandra Damico, the dean of the UI College of Education. "She would want to be remembered for her support of diversity and minorities. I know that in this community she was highly cared for and deeply respected."

Delworth, a San Diego native, died in May 2000 at the age of 65. Her desire to mentor and lead minorities was always her top priority, Damico said.

Delworth was the director of the University Counseling Services in 1976 and was associate dean of the College of Education. She was also involved in many psychology organizations.

Tom Rocklin, the chairman of the Psychological and Quantitative Foundations and a longtime friend of Delworth's, said he most misses the way she acted as a conscience for the department.

"Her leadership would constantly make us think, 'What would Ursula do in this situation?'" he said. "She showed people they could accomplish their goals, and her overall contributions were simply outstanding."

Delworth has been recognized nationally and locally for her contributions to education and women's issues.

"Ursula was very ambitious, and she started her career before any other women were really working," said friend Janet Ervin, the Psychological and Quantitative Foundations office coordinator. "I couldn't think of anyone better to induct, because she was so conscientious of others and she wanted to help people in any way she could."

Delworth also spent time in Iowa City helping animals, serving as president of the Humane Society and as a member of the Coralville/Iowa City animal-control board.

Joining Delworth in the Aug. 25 induction was Lt. Col. Phyllis Propp Fowle, the first female Judge Advocate General Officer in the United States Army; Phyllis Hughes, a lawyer and political activist; and Ann Pellegrino, a pilot who served on Iowa's Aeronautics Commission and the Department of Transportation Commission.

"Women's issues are important, and I think it would be safe to say Ursula Delworth was a pioneer in the area of gender equity," Rocklin said. "She was instrumental to the success of many students, and she was a very effective leader."

Amendment supporter to run

By Nick Narigon
The Daily Iowan

A local attorney filed papers Monday to run for a seat on the Iowa City City Council, setting up a race against the critics of three amendments to the city's charter that he helped to draft.

John Robertson is the sixth candidate vying for two at-large seats. He will face off with Mayor Ernie Lehman and City Councilor Mike O'Donnell, both of whom oppose the amendments, which would make the positions of city manager and police chief elected, four-year terms and would permanently incorporate the Police Citizen Review Board. The amendments also call for fewer arrests for nonviolent crimes, preferring that police issue citations.

The current council is not responsive to the citizens of Iowa City, said Robertson, 44. His first goal, if elected, is to provide a more open government for the people. The second key to his platform deals with law enforcement, he said.

"Iowa City is not the kind of city that needs aggressive targeting for public intoxication and drug users," Robertson said. "This city, over the last few years, has basically declared war on students."

The city needs to be more prudent when dealing with development issues, such as the use of historical land, Robertson said, adding that he doesn't want his campaign to focus on the charter amendments.

Councilor Steven Kanner said he agrees with Robertson's positions.

"An open and accountable government is important," Kanner said. "I think it's quite abhorrent, and I apologize to the citizens of Iowa City for the way the charter amendments have been handled. I'm glad to hear that John Robertson is supporting these issues."

Candidates for the at-large seats include Iowa City residents Leah Cohen, Brian Davis, and Aaron Winter.

Lehman said he is not familiar with Robertson and could not comment on his candidacy. However, Lehman said, Robertson "seemed well-spoken" when he spoke at a council meeting.

Robertson was a long-practicing attorney in Iowa City until three years ago, when he joined the Linn County Advocate in Cedar Rapids. His wife, Julia Beasley, is the Episcopal Campus Minister; they have a 3-year-old son, David.

Councilor Connie Champion is also up for re-election; as of now, she will face challenger Tim Borchardt for District B. Candidacy papers must be filed by Aug. 31.

No quick rhetoric at UI UI adds to the Bush squad

By Sara Faiwell
The Daily Iowan

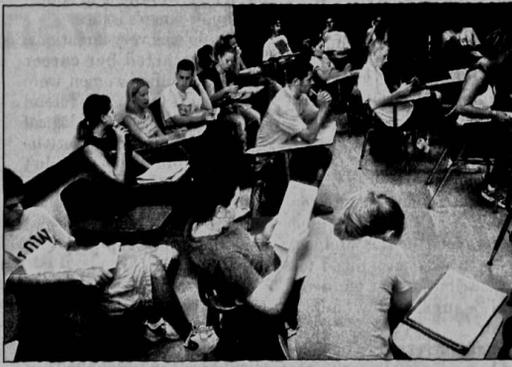

The UI will not implement a program similar to one at Iowa State University that lets students complete an introductory composition class after five weeks if they earn a B or better. The Fast Track Program at ISU is a result of several years of planning and is aimed at decreasing overcrowding in the required English class.

If the enrollment in UI rhetoric classes were to skyrocket, said Carol Severino, the associate chairwoman of the department, hiring more teachers — not a program like ISU's — would be an option. Rhetoric is a required course for UI freshmen, as is the composition class at ISU.

"Maybe these ISU students are getting the short end of the stick, because people tend to get a lot out of first-year rhetoric or composition classes," Severino said.

Rhetoric classes, which typically have 22 students, are not overcrowded this year, but the department is experiencing staff shortages and financial problems because of the budget cuts, she said. Some class sizes did increase by one or two students, she said.

ISU implemented Fast Track because there are usually a handful of students who don't need the class, said Margaret Graham, the ISU director and instructor of first-year composition

Meghan Bruno/The Daily Iowan
Freshmen wait to begin their first rhetoric class with Professor D. Charles Kirkpatrick. The university is offering more than 200 sections for the required class this fall.

first-year composition. Under the program, students are evaluated at the end of five weeks; they have the opportunity to pass out of composition if their grades warrant it. Another evaluation takes place after 10 weeks, at which time composition students are given a final chance to pass out of the 15-week class early.

All of the ISU faculty she has spoken to think the program is a great idea, Graham said.

The ISU professional guidelines limit each class to 20-22 students. Currently, at least 26 students are enrolled per composition section. Graham said the program is necessary because ISU will not receive more money to hire teachers, and smaller classes are needed.

"It's kind of like a midway point between a traditional class and testing out of the class before entering college," she said.

Severino said there is a slight difference between UI rhetoric classes and ISU's composition classes because rhetoric entails not only writing but speaking and reading skills as well. Comparing the classes is not completely accurate, she added, because the UI classes cover a variety of topics in a semester.

UI freshman Bianca Hertel said her first day of rhetoric was nothing unusual.

"The classroom probably had about 25 people in it, but that is what I am used to from high school," she said. "I'm sure the teacher will have time to talk with all of us."

While other UI students began the academic year taking notes in a lecture hall, senior Josh Bowen feasted on congressional breakfasts on Capitol Hill.

Bowen and UI junior Christian Kurasek are working at the White House Office of Political Affairs this semester.

"I'm just another member of the team. I've been working on presidential schedule requests, writing letters, and basically helping with anything and everything to get [President George W. Bush] re-elected," Kurasek said.

Bowen said he hopes to meet such politicians as Colin Powell during his internship, and he will go to great lengths to do so.

"I am very excited to be working for the White House," said Bowen, a finance major. "Even if it means making copies all day."

Both Bowen and Kurasek worked for UI Students for Bush. They learned about the internship from UI alumnus Mike Davis, the founder of the organization.

"This is a very valuable experience for Christian and Josh," said Tim Hagle, a UI associate political science professor and the Students for Bush faculty adviser. "It will help them gain perspective, and the internship will help them to become very valuable people when they apply for a job."

In order to work at the Office of Political Affairs, both Kurasek and Bowen underwent extensive background checks by the White House staff and the FBI.

Both interns said they feel secure around Washington, even after the disappearance of intern Chandra Levy.

Levy, an intern for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, disappeared while in Washington; she was last seen April 30 at the Washington Sports Club near her apartment in Dupont Circle.

"There has never been a direct reference to Chandra Levy," Kurasek said, referring to his personal safety. "I have not seen or heard of any change in policy or procedure for interns since Chandra Levy disappeared."

The only hurdle Kurasek reported having encountered was learning to navigate southeastern D.C.

"To live in Washington and see how the government works has been amazing," he said. "My experience is way beyond anything I expected. I'm right in the middle of what is happening."

MidAmerican readies plant for the Philippines

Associated Press

DES MOINES — An Iowa-based utility company is completing one of the largest hydroelectric projects in the world, a plant that promises to irrigate farm fields in the Philippines and help farmers grow enough rice to feed millions of people.

The $645 million Cascanan Project power plant — built by MidAmerican Energy Holdings Co. of Des Moines — will begin generating electricity in late September.

The plant will deliver irrigation water through a 16-mile tunnel to help farmers grow enough rice to begin exporting to other countries.

The work includes economic assistance to native tribes in the Caraballo Mountains and construction of nearly 50 miles of roads in an area formerly served only by footpaths.

"It's a good project," MidAmerican Chairman David Sokol told the Omaha World-Herald.

The hydro plant will generate $120 million a year in revenue for the company through 2021. The plant will then be handed over to the country's federal government.

Sokol, of Omaha, met recently with Philippines President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo, who took office in January. The meeting, to open discussions about the project and the government's energy policies, also included the country's energy and finance ministers, Sokol said.

The meetings went well, he said, adding that he hopes to resolve a dispute over $45 million in taxes that the company has paid to the government. The taxes originally were to be refunded, but the previous government had delayed that payment.

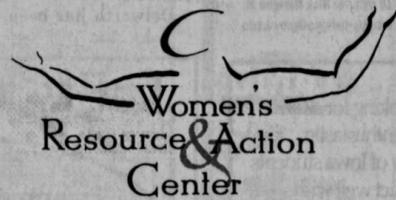

Sokol said that in developing countries such as the Philippines, there are sometimes questions about whether new governments will honor agreements made by officials of previous administrations.

The Cascanan Project, which began six years ago and employed more than 2,500 workers, is approximately a year behind schedule, but, Sokol said, the new government appears to be committed to following through on past agreements.

The government also plans to sell its National Power Corp. to private businesses. Sokol said MidAmerican might bid to purchase part of the power system, depending on terms of the sale and other factors.

The Cascanan Project will bring MidAmerican's investment to $1.4 billion in the Philippines, where the company already has geothermal electric plants.

WASHINGTON — Federal health officials have identified the 64 embryonic stem colonies that researchers use in government-funded studies. Some researchers are uncertain about the quality of the cells and wonder if the number is enough to invest the full benefits of new medical science.

The National Institutes of Health said Monday that international companies and research labs had produced colonies that will be eligible for use by federally funded scientists.

In an announcement on its Web site, the NIH said the lines, or self-replenishing colonies of cells, are derived from 64 "genetically diverse" embryos. Four labs are in the United States; two each in India and Sweden. Australia and Israel each has one.

The NIH has met extensively with each of the investigators who derived these cells, an announcement said. Scientists are very interested in working with the NIH on the research.

It was the next step in a process begun Aug. 9, when President Bush announced that he would allow federal funding for research using human embryonic stem cells.

That decision came after strong opposition from religious groups and members of Congress. The funding requires the death of an embryo; many consider that tantamount to homicide.

Bush chose to permit the use of funds for research on stem cells established before the embryos were dead. He barred the use of money for research on embryonic stem-cell lines established in the future.

He also limited the funding to lines derived from embryos that were surplus to fertility treatments. Those embryos also had to be uncompensated research from their fully informed parents.

Officials ID eligible stem-cell lines

WASHINGTON — Federal health officials have identified the 64 embryonic stem-cell colonies that researchers can use in government-funded studies. Some researchers are uncertain about the quality of the cells and wonder if the limited number is enough to harvest the full benefits of this new medical science.

The National Institutes of Health said Monday that 10 international companies and research labs had produced colonies that will be eligible for use by federally funded U.S. scientists.

In an announcement on its Web site, the NIH said the cell lines, or self-replenishing colonies of cells, are derived from 64 "genetically diverse" embryos. Four labs are in the United States; two each are in India and Sweden. Australia and Israel each has one.

"The NIH has met or spoken extensively with each of the investigators who have derived these cells," the announcement said. "These scientists are very interested in working with the NIH and the research community."

It was the next step in a process begun Aug. 9, when President Bush announced he would allow federal funds for research using human embryonic stem cells.

That decision came despite strong opposition from some religious groups and some members of Congress. Creating embryonic stem cells requires the death of a human embryo; many consider that tantamount to homicide.

Bush chose to permit federal funds for research on stem-cell lines established before Aug. 9 because those embryos already were dead. He barred federal money for research on embryonic stem-cell lines established in the future.

He also limited the funds to cell lines derived from embryos that were surplus at fertility clinics. Those embryos also had to be an uncompensated research gift from their fully informed parents.

While many scientists thought that only about a dozen such cell lines existed, the NIH officials said they found others in a confidential, worldwide polling of labs.

Still, some scientists were skeptical. Last week, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, one of the world's largest federation of scientists, challenged NIH to identify the cell lines.

And that was what happened Monday.

"The knowledge that these ... cell lines exist and will be available for research should inspire our nation's best scientific minds," Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson said in a statement. "The scientific community must seize the moment."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said the announcement means that before scientists can translate "research into miracle cures," they must overcome the limited number of cells and "significant legal hurdles at every turn."

Kevin Wilson, the director of public policy at the American Society for Cell Biology, said many researchers believe "there is a question about the quality of the cell lines and if they are of sufficient genetic diversity for scientists to do the work that needs to be done."

Human stem cells were first isolated by Dr. James Thomson of the University of Wisconsin. As is customary there, he turned the patent for five cell lines and for the method of deriving them over to the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation.

That organization is claiming it has an interest in any cell line that derived from using the Thomson methods. This means some labs with stem-cell lines may have to make licensing agreements with the foundation.

But officials at CyThera Inc. of San Diego, which the NIH said has nine cell colonies, said they did not use the Thomson method for deriving their cells, and they have applied for a patent of their own.

Michael J. Ross, the CyThera chief executive, said CyThera scientists will further study cells before they are released for government-funded research. The cell lines should be ready next year, he said.

Ross said the government money for the research is an "evolving process" and that if the 64 cell lines fail to meet the scientific needs "then they could change the policy. But this is a very good start."

"Many scientific questions can be answered under the rules set up by President Bush," said Lutz Giebel, CyThera's chief scientist.

Andrew Cohn of the Wisconsin foundation said his organization has distributed cell lines to 30 scientists in the United States and elsewhere.

"We have enough cells from one line to fulfill [the] need of as many as could possibly get federal funding," he said.

The foundation charges $5,000, which experts say is a "break-even" for two vials each containing approximately 1 million stem cells.

Tony Mazzaschi, a research-policy expert at the Association of American Medical Colleges, said there is concern that cell lines that worked in one lab could not be nurtured in another — a common experience in complex biological research. Should many cell lines prove unreliable in other labs, he said, "it could be a major stop sign" for the research.

Embryonic stem cells are the basic building blocks for the 260 or so cell types in the body. During development, stem cells transform into heart, muscle, brain, skin, and other tissue.

Researchers hope that by guiding this transformation, they can coax stem cells to make cells that could be used to treat diabetes, Parkinson's, heart disease, and other disorders.

The knowledge that these ... cell lines exist and will be available for research should inspire our nation's best scientific minds.

— Tommy Thompson, Health and Human Services secretary

Israel kills senior Palestinian leader

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

RAMALLAH, West Bank — Raising the stakes in the Mideast conflict, Israeli helicopters fired a pair of rockets through office windows Monday and killed a senior PLO leader, the highest-ranking Palestinian slain in years.

Thousands of angry Palestinian protesters poured into the streets, and a red-eyed Yasser Arafat declared three days of mourning for Mustafa Zibri, 63, leader of the hard-line Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. In immediate retaliation, gunmen killed an Israeli in an ambush on a car in the West Bank.

The Palestinians said Israel was waging an "all-out war," while Israel said Zibri was involved in bombing attacks and was planning more.

Throughout the months of conflict, Israel has targeted Palestinians believed responsible for attacks against its soldiers and civilians, but most were considered mid-level operatives, such as bombmakers. Zibri was one of the top five figures in the PLO, headed by Arafat, the Palestinian leader. The killing took place barely 200 yards from Arafat's West Bank headquarters in Ramallah.

Zibri, widely known as Abu Ali Mustafa, headed "an active and deadly terrorist organization," said Ephraim Sneh, Israel's transportation minister and a retired general. Zibri was involved in seven bomb attacks in the past six months, including a blast last week in central Jerusalem, Sneh said.

Zibri's group had claimed responsibility for the attacks shortly after they took place. The army said no one was killed in those attacks.

Upon hearing the news of Zibri's death, Arafat, who was in Gaza City, withdrew to his office for about half an hour, his aides said.

Arafat later greeted Palestinian demonstrators who shook his hand and kissed him on the cheeks. They included the leaders of militant groups that have carried out the deadliest bombing attacks against Israel, including Abdullah Shami of Islamic Jihad and, according to sources, Sheik Ahmed Yassin of Hamas.

Before the Palestinian uprising began, Arafat's security forces had jailed Shami on several occasions and cracked down on group members. But Arafat's security forces have refused Israeli requests to arrest Islamic militants during the uprising, which has brought together Palestinian groups previously at odds.

The Palestinian Authority said in a statement that "with its latest criminal act, the Israeli government confirms that it has decided to open the doors to an all-out war."

Nabil Aburdeneh, an Arafat adviser, accused President Bush of a pro-Israeli bias that, Aburdeneh said, encouraged Israel to carry out the killing.

"This policy of assassinations which is being conducted with a green light from the United States will push the area into a new cycle of violence and danger," Aburdeneh said.

The United States has condemned the targeted killings. However, Bush has been sharply critical of Arafat, saying he could do more to rein in militants.

Dore Gold, an Israeli government spokesman, said Zibri "may himself not have been an operative in the field, but he was directly involved in an overall effort by the front to engage in bombings in Jerusalem."

In an outpouring of anger, Palestinians marched in the streets of West Bank towns in the hours after the killing. In Arabe, Zibri's home village in the northern West Bank, about 5,000 people marched, led by gunmen firing in the air.

In a first retaliation, the front claimed responsibility for killing an Israeli in an ambush near the Jewish settlement of Elon Moreh in the West Bank.

Shots were also fired Monday evening from the West Bank town of Beit Jalla at the Jewish neighborhood of Gilo, built on land Israel captured in the 1967 Mideast war and annexed to Jerusalem. Gilo has been a frequent target of Palestinian shooting attacks. One Israeli resident was moderately wounded, police said. Israeli troops returned rifle fire.

In the Monday morning helicopter attack, Zibri was sitting at his desk in his second-floor Ramallah apartment, which doubled as the front's headquarters. Rockets came through two windows of his corner office, decapitating Zibri and scorching the walls. No one else was hurt.

WORLD BRIEF

Peru likely to charge Fujimori for crimes against humanity

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Disgraced former President Alberto Fujimori faced the likelihood Monday that Peru's Congress would clear the way for charges that he committed crimes against humanity in connection with two state-sponsored massacres in the early 1990s.

In a special session Monday night, Congress planned to debate an investigative committee's recommendation that Fujimori's constitutional immunity be lifted so that prosecutors can charge him with homicide and forced disappearances committed by a paramilitary death squad.

The "constitutional accusation" was expected to be approved overwhelmingly by Congress. Fujimori's party, which once controlled the legislature, now has only three seats in the 120-member body.

Peruvian officials argue that forced disappearances and politically motivated killings against groups of people qualify as "crimes against humanity," charges that require trial under international treaties on human-rights violations.

Peruvian legal experts hope such new charges could force Japan, where Fujimori fled last fall, to extradite him. But because Japanese law bars Japan from sending Fujimori to Peru, the experts believe Japan would at least have to try him in its courts because it has signed international human-rights treaties.

Despite casualty, NATO collects arms

By Elena Becatotos

OTLJA, Macedonia — Showing resolve despite suffering its first casualty, NATO began collecting arms Monday from ethnic Albanian rebels who handed over mortars, machine guns, and other heavy weaponry.

The British-led mission began within hours after marauding youths threw a block of concrete that struck a British soldier in the head and killed him Sunday evening. The death of Ian Collins, 20, of Britain's 9 Parachute Squadron Royal Engineers was the first to strike Operation Essential Harvest.

NATO Secretary-General Lord Robertson called the attack "absurd," saying the troops were in Macedonia "to assist the people and the government ... in achieving a peaceful and lasting solution to the current crisis."

Although the killing underscored the tensions in the troubled Balkan country and the risks the 3,500 troops will face, NATO launched the weapons collections in Otlja, a village approximately six miles west of the city of Kumanovo.

"This regrettable incident will not affect the resolve of Task Force Harvest to complete the mission," said Brig. Barney White-Spunner, the top-ranking British commander. The rebels condemned the attack; so did President Boris Trajkovski, who said his country remained committed to cooperating with the troops.

Mission spokesman Maj. Alexander Dick said NATO collected more than 300 assault rifles, between 60 and 80 light machine guns, 10 heavy machine guns, and several anti-tank weapons, as well as mortars, ammunition, grenades, and land mines.

"The atmosphere at the collection point was formal — not friendly but without antagonism," Dick said. Some rebels, however, were visibly annoyed when told by NATO troops that they could not drive along the road past the weapons collection site.

NATO soldiers were cataloguing the weapons ahead of shipping them to a staging area for destruction. Unstable ammunition was to be destroyed on the spot.

A leader of ethnic Albanian rebel forces in the area who goes by the name Commander Shpati confirmed that his men had started handing in their weapons and that everything was going smoothly.

"I don't want the war. Now I'm going to be a civilian," an 18-year-old rebel soldier named Zejno said after turning in his gun.

A new peace accord envisions a step-by-step process in which the rebels hand over weapons to NATO in exchange for political reforms. Parliament is to begin debating the reforms once a third of the weapons are handed over, which could happen by the end of the week, and it will vote on the legislation only after all weapons have been collected.

But as the 30-day mission got under way, both the rebels and the government expressed doubts whether it would bring a lasting peace to Macedonia. The rebel National Liberation Army took up arms in February, saying it was fighting for greater rights for Macedonia's minority ethnic Albanians.

"We had an order to give up our guns. We're giving them, but we're not at all sure about the situation," said an NLA fighter in the rebels' 114th Brigade who gave his name only as Musafet. "From our side, the war is over, but we don't trust the Macedonians. We will stay here until everything is over."

Dozens of rebels, still fully armed, patrolled the nearby village of Matejce and other surrounding areas. The village commander, who goes by the name Met, cradled a Kalashnikov rifle in his arms, saying he would give it up "only when all the Macedonian soldiers go back to their barracks."

The Macedonian government, which considers the rebels to be "terrorists" bent on seizing territory, characterized the mission as a farce because NATO has agreed to collect only 3,300 rebel weapons. The government insists that the militants have tens of thousands of arms.

"The NATO mission is heading toward failure from the very beginning, because the figures of weapons to be collected are ridiculous," government spokesman Antonio Milososki said Monday. "Instead of being Essential Harvest, this mission will become Theatrical Harvest ... There will be a war in Macedonia as long as terrorists are armed."

New unit to fight sexual abuse

By Anne Webbeking
The Daily Iowan

While Public Safety Detective Derek Hyche has had more than six years' experience working on investigations, he said he will now be able to better understand the sexual-assault victim's emotional state of anger and sadness after joining the new Public Safety Sex Crimes Unit.

He is one of seven officers specially trained to handle sexual-assault reports. Public Safety officials say they will try to have at least one such officer on duty at all times.

Hyche used his new training and experience while questioning Johnny Lee Jones, who was arrested Aug. 7 for allegedly assaulting three women at the UI Hospitals and Clinics two days earlier. Jones was charged with assault and false imprisonment, said Public Safety Director Chuck Green.

Hyche, who previously did not have much experience questioning sexual-abuse victims, will be able to interview them better in the future because of his training with the Sex Crimes Unit, Green said.

The seven officers began their special training in October 2000, learning how to investigate sex crimes by reviewing old cases. They also talked to representatives from the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, the Johnson County Attorney's office, the Johnson County Sexual Assault Response Team, and the Sexual Assault Nurse Examiners.

Sara Siebert, the director of RVAP volunteer programs, 320 S. Linn Street., is optimistic that the new unit will help sex-crime victims. Police should be better equipped with more officers to handle such crimes, she said, and people will also know help is available because of this summer's publicity surrounding the Sex Crimes Unit.

The unit directly confronts the problem of sexual abuse, rather than merely pointing out the prominence of the problem in Iowa City, Siebert said.

"It sheds a really good light on the community," she said.

Hyche said he isn't sure how the new unit will fare.

"I can't say it's going to solve every case — or any case really," he said.

Grade inflation fuels expectations

GRADE INFLATION

Are prerequisites working?

When students arrive on the UI campus, officials say steps taken by the university have helped increase their readiness for college-level work and, consequently, their grades.

Changes in the undergraduate curriculum, including the creation of prerequisite courses, have resulted in a better-prepared student body with higher grades, Lopes said. "Students aren't getting into classes they're not ready for," she said.

But other professors say that's not the case. Grade inflation has caused some students to pass prerequisite courses with good grades despite not being ready to advance, some say.

UI psychology Professor Irwin Levin said he's heard more frequent complaints in the last 10 years from faculty who say students aren't as prepared as they used to be for advanced classes. Professors teaching advanced classes want to know that their students are coming in with a certain amount of knowledge, Levin said.

"With grade inflation, a student could get a ... C or above in a prerequisite and not know the material," Levin said. Higher grades, he said, do not signify a better-prepared student body.

Higher expectations

Inflated high-school grades apparently have students expecting higher grades at the college level. The percentage of high-school students who believe they will earn at least a

B average in college jumped from 52 percent in 1999 to 58.1 percent in 2000, according to UCLA Higher Education Research Institute surveys. In 1971, only 26.7 percent expected grades better than B's.

One result of the new expectations is increased pressure on professors from students more frequently questioning their grades, some say.

UI senior Jennifer Clary said confrontations with professors occur primarily because professors want to keep their students involved with the curriculum and fear bad grades will deter them.

"If I'm doing poorly in class, I'll definitely go discuss it with my professor," she said.

Danse Macabre, the Faint's third full-length release on Omaha label Saddle Creek, is an aptly titled album. Not only is it built on a solid foundation of vintage synth-pop beats and keyboards, it has also been known to incite near-riotous events of skinny-tie-wearing, mid-80s dance revival — of which Iowa City will get a taste at the Green Room, 509 S. Gilbert St. on Wednesday.

The influences of old school Depeche Mode and New Order are evident, as are their familiar bleak themes of isolation and disappointment. A Kraftwerk sense of detachment, however, saves the band from the over-emoting and morbidity of other bands in the genre. Lead singer Todd Baechle's songs of disaffection are complemented by sparse guitar, layers of keyboard, and the ever-present driving rhythm tracks, as well as a dark and sleek aesthetic sense. Danse Macabre is tastefully dated, but by no means nostalgic or kitschy.

The band's inherent anachronisms aside, it is the Faint's vivacious live performance that truly sets it apart. In the moment the Faint steps on-stage, makeup-laden and inevitably black-clad, it becomes clear that one does not have to go to the frat-row bars to have a good time these days. Adorning the stage with an armada of synchronized, colored his debut solo project.

Beats by Swizz Beats, the Neptunes, DJ Premier, and Timbaland lay the templates, as charismatic rhymes by Snoop Dogg, Fiend, Nas, Nate Dogg, and several members of the Ruff Ryder entourage, including DMX and Eve, drive this album even closer toward platinum status.

Simply put, "We Gonna Make It," Jada's first single off Kiss, is effortlessly overshadowed by a number of harder drive-by anthems. Rash, bust-yo-shit-open tales of ghetto homicide and slow torture echo through trigger-happy tracks "Show Discipline," featuring Nas, and "None of Y'all Betta," via one of NYC's most respected hip-hop producers, DJ Premier.

The album's dialogue quickly shifts in "Knock Yourself Out," Jada's desperate plea calling for granting the female whatever her body desires. Later, hip-hop innovator Timbaland provides a tightly laced beat, as Carl Thomas drops a swanky chorus in a Southern gem titled "Nasty Girl."

Snoop and Jada elaborate on their "playalistic" tendencies in "Cruisin'." Unfortunately, the track's weak melody will keep it from reaching even MTV2-status.

Chill-out hip-hop resurfaces in "Kiss is Spittin'," as Nate Dogg appears toting his deep, soothing vocals over a softer version of Nate and Warren G's gangsta rap classic "Regulate." Additional album highlights include "It's Time I See You," "What You Ride For," and "Un-Hunh" featuring DMX.

Despite some redundancy in Jadakiss' lyrics and Swizz Beatz' beat-making, Kiss The Game Goodbye features about 10 tracks that should keep hip-hop connoisseurs pleased.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Let's see, Cameron Crowe's upcoming Vanilla Sky is a reinvention of the Spanish thriller Open Your Eyes, with Penelope Cruz reprising the role she played in the original.

This summer's Planet of the Apes was a "re-imagining," not a remake, says director Tim Burton — of the 1968 sci-fi hit. Down to Earth updated Heaven Can Wait, itself a remake of Here Comes Mr. Jordan.

The Mummy Returns and Dr. Dolittle 2 were sequels to remakes, while 102 Dalmatians was a sequel to a live-action remake of an animated movie. The Musketeer and The Count of Monte Cristo will be Hollywood's umpteenth interpretations of those Alexandre Dumas classics.

Whether for honorable artistic reasons, crass commercial ones, or simply because it's time to trot out some old ideas again, there sure are a lot of remakes kicking around Hollywood.

Remakes can put modern twists on classic films and introduce the stories to new audiences. Some are considered great: The Ten Commandments, Ben-Hur, and Alfred Hitchcock's remake of his own The Man Who Knew Too Much.

With response in place, prevention is next step

With the debut of its new Sex Crimes Unit on Aug. 20, UI Public Safety took a decided step forward in its treatment of sex crimes.

The unit has been hard at work since the beginning of its training in October 2000. The recent capture of a man accused of assaulting three women in the UI Hospitals and Clinics served as proof that the resources directed at forming the unit were well worth it.

In order to better serve the Iowa City and campus population, seven Public Safety officers underwent intensive training, including classes, conferences, and meetings with members of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program. Previously, only one officer was specifically trained in dealing with sexual-abuse victims. This left to chance whether the officer responding to a call was properly trained to handle the special circumstances that accompany sexual crimes. The addition of six more officers will allow educated personnel to be available at all times, rather than during just one shift.

While the officers are trained to facilitate medical treatment, collect evidence, and conduct on-campus investigations, Sgt. David Visin reports that almost 99 percent of sexual-abuse victims will immediately be referred to RVAP for further counseling. It is reassuring that if victims calling are unsure whether they've contacted the right person, they will be met by professionals who are trained to respond sensitively. Furthermore, victims are assured the proper counseling for their situation, whether from Public Safety officers in the short term or RVAP counselors in the long.

According to Public Safety records, from the beginning of 2000 to the end of July 2001, five cases of sexual abuse were reported, as well as two reports of attempted sexual abuse. During the same period, 83 assaults were reported to Iowa City police. RVAP reports record 125 assaults in Johnson County between July 2000 and March 2001.

These numbers indicate an urgent need for the Sex

Crimes Unit, and in acting, Public Safety showed a keen awareness of community circumstances.

But it is not enough to stop at effective response training for Public Safety.

Prevention programs should be at the forefront of the war on sexual assaults. Public Safety offers Rape Aggression Defense classes, which are free for university students. The classes receive inadequate publicity, however, and, consequently, little attention. The university also offers Safewalk, a nightly service in which volunteers escort students, faculty, and staff home after dark for no charge. Though the program is free, use of its services has all but vanished on campus.

Though response programs such as the Sex Crimes Unit and RVAP are necessary, it is also essential that prevention programs emerge to aid in creating a safer community.

Iowa City residents and UI students must also take the initiative to learn about prevention. Prevention and response must be promoted with equal vigor to achieve a truly safe environment for university students and Iowa City residents.

The creation of a new Sex Crimes Unit is an important step forward.

Mutant tree toads are coming to take us away

So here we all are once more, stuck inside of Immobile with the Shrubness blues again.

Things could be worse, I guess. We could all be in Des Moines. Or Nebraska.

Actually, there is a fairly large school of thought that posits that Des Moines is the true capital of Nebraska.

Of course, saying things like that tends to bring down the wrath of people from the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Nebraska because this is the era of PC and God forbid that we should ever laugh. In these modern times (as opposed to those modern times in the parallel universe), wealthy white men are allowed to steal elections with train-car loads of lucre, but you're not allowed to be funny because you might hurt someone's feelings. Go figure.

So you can't say something like, Nebraska is duller than ancient dishwater on a cloudy day, even though it's true. Nor can you point out that all one needs to know about the Cornhusker state is that it once had a race track named Ak-Sar-Ben, which is Nebraska spelled backwards. Of course, Nebraska backward is the world's prime example of a redundancy.

No, you can't say either of those. In the world according to PC, appearance is everything, and veracity is less than zero. Thus, in PC-ville, if we appear to be non-racist, we're not racist.

Yeah, right. And George W. Shrubness wasn't appointed president by five shriveled turkey gizzards posing as Supreme Court justices.

In any case, here we all are again, PC'd out of our minds and stuck inside of Immobile, which is known as Iowa City to outsiders. But we veterans know better.

Why Immobile, you ask? Have you tried getting around in this town yet?

Everywhere you turn, there's a construction zone. As those of you who are new here will soon discover, the basic purpose of the city and the university, their raison d'être for being placed on the planet, is to race each other to see who can tear more stuff down and build new stuff faster.

You rookies probably thought education was the prime purpose of the university. Hah. That's a good one.

Although going to school here and living in Immobile does teach you the most basic lesson of life: You can't get there from here.

Which, of course, is neither here nor there.

The wonderful thing about all the building and rebuilding going on and on, as you will soon find out, is that we wind up with such beautiful new stuff.

Take the splendor and grandeur of Clock Tower Place, for instance. Tower Place would be the parking ramp disguised as a bakery-cum-health spa that lurks at the intersection of Linn and Iowa and resembles a mutant tree toad with a clock tower implanted in its skull. And some people think stem-cell research is bad.

The most wonderful thing about Tower Place, for those of you who weren't here this summer and missed it, is that once the city got the clock up and running, it spent next to forever being five minutes slow. It was as if the city were broadcasting its motto to the world: Five minutes behind the times and proud of it.

The other wonderful thing about Tower Place is the shark fins in the middle of all the windows. The fins prevent anyone inside from looking up or down the street; you can only look straight ahead, as if you had blinders on, a city employee who works there told me. But the architect insisted on the shark fins.

Well, it's not all bad. With blinders on is another good motto for this town.

Besides, the fins are a sign that when the ocean returns to Immobile and environs, Tower Place will be ready.

And given the incredibly imaginative non-strategy that Stealth President Cheney and His Fraudulency have dreamed up for global warming (just stick your head in the oil and ignore it; global warming will go away), the ocean might return a lot sooner than we think.

Last one in the water is a mutant tree toad.

Court jettisons race-conscious admissions

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal appeals court ruled Monday that a University of Georgia affirmative-action policy is unconstitutional because it arbitrarily gave nonwhite applicants a statistical boost.

The three-judge panel of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a lower court's ruling in favor of three white women who were denied admission in 1999.

The appeals court said the policy, which awarded race-based points to borderline students, violated the Constitution's equal-protection clause.

"UGA's policy is not only rigid and incomplete, the benefit it awards each and every nonwhite applicant is wholly, and concededly, arbitrary," the court said.

The university suspended the consideration of race last year while it awaited the court's decision. The school could appeal Monday's ruling to the full appeals court or to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ninety percent of students at the university were accepted on grades and test scores alone. The policy applied only to the remaining 10 percent, assigning them points on factors ranging from alumni relatives to race, with nonwhite applicants getting a boost.

Lee Parks, an attorney for the women who challenged the practice, cheered the ruling.

"The policy that was in place was functioning as a quota," Parks said. "Under any set of rules that would be unconstitutional."

Similar admissions policies at other schools have been challenged; the issue may ultimately be decided by the U.S. Supreme Court, which can resolve differences among appeals courts' rulings.

The economic downturn is hitting home.

The CBO provides the budget numbers Congress is required to use.

"The numbers don't lie," Gephardt said.

The CBO now projects the total budget surplus for the fiscal year that ends Sept. 30 at $153 billion. That is down from the $275 billion estimate in May but still an enormous amount.

The first installment of Bush's tax cut accounted for two-thirds of the reduction, with most of the rest due to dwindling tax revenues from the slowing economy, the congressional budget analysts said.

The CBO said the government will have to divert $9 billion in Social Security money to make ends meet this year, something Democrats and Republicans have pledged repeatedly not to do.

The government will return to a small non-Social Security surplus of $2 billion in fiscal 2002 — assuming somewhat higher spending next year compared with 2001. But the CBO projects the government will use $18 billion out of the retirement program in 2003 and $3 billion in 2004 as more of the tax cuts kick in.

Over the next 10 years, the CBO is forecasting a $3.4 trillion surplus counting Social Security, down from $5.6 trillion in its May forecast. The tax cut and the associated changes in interest costs account for more than $1.7 trillion of the surplus reduction.

The White House Office of Management and Budget last week also forecast a shrinking surplus, but it projected a non-Social Security surplus of $1 billion this year and next.

Diverting Social Security money has no practical effect on the program, although it does prevent the government from paying down public debt as quickly as it otherwise would. Making Social Security exempt from such invasions has become a political priority, as Republicans and Democrats seek the mantle of being its greatest protector.

White House Budget Director Mitch Daniels portrayed the differences as relatively tiny and said the Social Security pledge was "symbolic." He said it would be "a big mistake" to make Social Security so sacrosanct that other priorities are discarded.

"These are reasonably small differences when you take everything into account," Daniels said.

Republicans blamed the economy for the shrinking surplus and argued that the tax cuts will help spark a recovery. House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, said in a written statement that controlling spending will cure the fiscal woes. He noted that the Democratic-run Congress routinely tapped Social Security reserves in years past.

Democrats' "sudden concern for the surplus is a mask to disguise their true intentions — repeal tax relief and spend the money on more risky spending schemes," he said.

Recognizing the popularity of this summer's $40 billion in tax-refund checks, Democrats largely have avoided calling for repeal of the tax cut even as they decry its effect on the surplus.

Bush said last week the Social Security fund should not be tapped unless the nation was at war or in a recession. CBO analysts say the economy should "narrowly" avoid a recession, but they project growth next year at 2.6 percent; the White House projected 3.2 percent growth.

The Bush administration last week forecast a surplus of $153 billion for this year, $173 billion next year, and $3.1 trillion over the next 10 years. Over the decade, the White House figured defense spending at $198 billion above the numbers used by the CBO, and Medicare spending $37 billion higher.

The White House used a Social Security accounting change and a few other assumptions to assert that Social Security would remain untouched this year; the CBO did not use those same assumptions.

LADELL BETTS

Offensive lineman Alonzo Cunningham and Bruce Nelson carry senior running back Ladell Betts on their shoulders. Behind an experienced offensive line, Betts is poised to have another 1,000-yard season.

Going out on top

By Tyler Lechtenberg
 The Daily Iowan

Most experts agree that T.J. Duckett and Damien Anderson control the stage when it comes to star Big Ten running backs.

Most experts also overlook a humble Hawkeye tailback whose past three seasons have put him at the doorstep to stardom.

Ladell Betts doesn't mind; a football career outside of the limelight suits the Hawkeye senior running back.

"I don't mind it ... I don't necessarily like being in the spotlight anyway," he said. "If I sneak up in there, that's fine, and if I don't, that's fine, too."

Life in the shadows isn't the only thing undervalued — Betts remains one of the most underrated players in the country.

The 5-11, 210-pounder racked up 2,626 yards — third all-time for the Hawkeyes — and 15 touchdowns in the last three years and started 29-straight games.

He's only 1,530 yards shy of breaking former Hawkeye Sedrick Shaw's all-time career rushing record.

This season, though, Betts may have to get used to squinting at the bright lights. For the first time in his career he will have a sturdy offensive line to run behind.

"The offensive line for the Hawkeyes is pretty much the opposite of what it's been in the past," he said. "There's a lot of stability and depth. Those guys are bigger, stronger, and faster now, and I think they're hungrier than ever."

Coming off a 1,090-yard season in 2000, Betts is still his biggest critic; he said he Will Iowa go to a bowl game?

For the past three years, I've saved my money for a bowl game, only to have my Winter Break plans altered by another disappointing football season.

Granted, that money went toward great Spring Breaks, but my college experience will be incomplete without a trip to a bowl.

With this 2001 Iowa team, you can book my ticket.

Yes, preseason hype means zilch, but there has been zero hype under the Kirk Ferentz regime — until now.

The schedule is favorable, the Big Ten is wide open, and Iowa's fan support leaves those remaining bowl blazers eager to hand out an invitation.

In addition, 48 letters returned from a team that would like to split last season into November (2) and these other weeks (1-8).

Back are the top quarterbacks, the best rushers, the bulk of the defense, almost the entire offensive line, the kicker, and the whole coaching staff. That should equal wins.

The Hawks will be led by veterans at nearly every position, and those athletes will be backed up by other veterans, producing more depth than shown in previous seasons.

Even quiet, mild-mannered senior Ladell Betts said the season would be a disappointment if it didn't include postseason play. He's been around awhile; he should know when a team has the talent.

Don't worry, Tyler. I'll send you a postcard.

— Melinda Mawdsley

Let's take a deep breath, folks. After all the hoopla surrounding this year's team, this is still a Hawkeye squad that's only won four games in the last two years.

Yes, I believe the team will be an improvement over the last three. Yes, I believe Kirk Ferentz has turned things around here in Iowa City.

But a bowl berth? Not this year.

All of the buzz about this year's team is simply speculation; the Hawkeyes have yet to prove in the field that they are indeed for real. Preseason press conferences and player sound bites aren't proof. Everyone has wined or himself into a lather, but all that's out the window if the team comes out flat against Kent State.

Plus, Iowa hasn't exactly wowed people with its play in the first few games of Ferentz's two seasons. Remember the Hawks choking on the supposed cupcake that was Western Michigan? Can anyone say Miami of Ohio?

If Iowa skates through the nonconference schedule unscathed, it still has to win three games in the Big Ten, and everyone else in the conference has just as high expectations as the Hawkeyes. Indiana thinks it can be Big Ten champs, for crying out loud.

Even if Iowa does finish with a 6-5 record, a bowl berth isn't guaranteed.

To me, there are just too many "ifs" in the equation.

Iowa hires two new baseball assistants

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

Tim Evans thought he had a good thing going when he joined the Iowa State baseball program as a hitting coach prior to last season.

Then, just weeks into the season, came a meeting he would never forget.

That gathering of coaches and team members was when Evans and the Cyclones learned ISU Athletics Director Bruce Van De Velde had decided to cut the baseball and men's swimming programs.

Now, just four months after learning he would be unemployed following the 2001 season, the Cedar Rapids native has found work in Iowa City.

Iowa baseball coach Scott Broghamer announced the hiring of Evans and former Hawkeye C.J. Thieleke as assistant coaches Monday morning. Evans will replace former Iowa assistant Elvis Dominguez, and Thieleke will serve as a volunteer assistant coach to replace Dan Fitzgerald. Dominguez left Iowa to become the head coach at Eastern Kentucky University, while Fitzgerald joined the Minnesota Twins organization to become a pro scout.

"To add both C.J. and Tim to our program is a real benefit for us," Broghamer said.

Evans and Thieleke bring impressive credentials to the table and join pitching coach Travis Wyckoff as coaches with professional playing experience under their belts. Evans spent five seasons with the Houston Astros, advancing as high as AAA, and he was a Midwest League All-Star with the Quad City River Bandits in 1993.

Thieleke spent parts of three years with the Twins organization, all at Rookie-level Elizabethton in the Appalachian League.

"C.J. has a great work ethic," Broghamer said. "He certainly made the most of his ability."

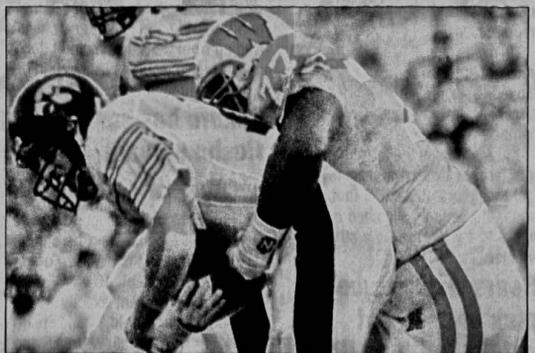

Thieleke had spent the past three seasons as an assistant at Mount Mercy College in Cedar Rapids before joining the Hawkeyes. His primary responsibilities included developing the defense and coaching base running as well as assisting in recruiting.

Evans also has a proven track record as a coach. Before helping the Cyclones to a sur-

Bryant hungry for more college ball

Former Iowa QB Scott Mullen gets sacked by Wisconsin's Wendell Bryant early in second quarter during a game on Nov. 13, 1999. Bryant is the Preseason Big Ten Defensive Player of the Year.

The Badger defensive tackle is tabbed the Big Ten's best defensive player

By Tyler Lechtenberg
 The Daily Iowan

After an outstanding junior season, Wisconsin standout defensive lineman Wendell Bryant had his chance to take the next step in his football career — and declined. Even when two of his teammates, Michael Bennett and Jamar Fletcher, decided to jump to the NFL a year early, Bryant didn't change his mind. He wanted to stay in school.

"It all depends on the situation," Bryant said. "There was no reason to leave my situation. The money is out there, but I think if I have a good year this year, hopefully, it'll still be out there. I love college football, and I felt that I should stay."

Hungry for more college football glory, the 6-4, 293-pound Badger heads into his final year of college football as this year's Big Ten Preseason Defensive Player of the Year.

In 2000, Bryant was a first-team All-Big Ten pick by the coaches and a second-team selection by the media after recording 48 tackles and a team-high six sacks. For his career, Bryant has 120 tackles and 16 sacks, and he shared the Big Ten's Defensive Lineman of the Year award with Minnesota's Karon Riley last season.

Bryant continually sees double- and triple-teams from the

Kitna gets Bengals' starting QB job

CINCINNATI (AP)—Jon Kitna got the quarterback job that no one keeps for long.
The Cincinnati Bengals picked Kitna as their starter Monday, culminating a three-way competition that produced very little in three preseason games. Coach Dick LeBeau chose Kitna over Scott Mitchell, who had nearly identical statistics in preseason.
"In my opinion, you could have flipped a coin," said Akili Smith, knocked out of the competition by a sore shoulder.
Kitna becomes the fourth different quarterback to start a season in the last four years. In each of those seasons, the Bengals switched quarterbacks to try to prop up a struggling offense.

Bears waive three, pick up two, put safety Smith on IR

LAKE FOREST, Ill.—The Chicago Bears waived linebacker Donta Jones, kicker Vitaly Pissetsky, and tackle Chris Brown on Monday.
They also claimed two ex-Philadelphia Eagles, defensive end Uhuru Hamiter and tackle Stan Bennett, off waivers, and put safety Frankie Smith, a special-teams standout, on injured reserve with a fractured shoulder blade.
Smith was hurt in the Aug. 25-24-20 exhibition loss to Arizona and will miss the entire season.
Hamiter played in the final seven games for the Eagles last season after being elevated from the practice squad on Oct. 31.
The Bears' roster stands at 73, including four NFL Europe exemptions that expire Sept. 2.

Gardner's back still a concern for Miami

DAVIE, Fla.—Daryl Gardner's lower back continues to be a source of concern for the Miami Dolphins.
Gardner did not play Aug. 25 against Green Bay because of back spasms. He missed practice Monday and probably won't play in Miami's preseason finale Friday night against Minnesota, either.

The 6-foot-6, 310-pound defensive tackle is optimistic about returning for the season opener Sept. 9 against Tennessee, but he doesn't know how long he will be able to play before his back starts hurting again.

"Frustrating is not the word," said Gardener, who had 54 tackles in 10 games last season. "I don't look good wearing a miniskirt and cheer-leading from the sideline, and I don't think my behind can take it sitting on a bench with splinters in it."

Sehorn has sore knee flushed Monday

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.—Giants cornerback Jason Sehorn had his sore right knee flushed to reduce swelling on Monday, and he should be able to play in their season opener at Denver on Sept. 10.
"The surgery went exactly as we had hoped it would," said team physician Dr. Russell Warren, who performed the arthroscopic procedure. Sehorn missed the last two preseason games because of the knee. He will not play in Friday's preseason finale at Baltimore.
"We're still on track with Jason," head coach Jim Fassel said. "We expect him to begin running early next week, and we're hopeful that he will have enough practice time to play the opening game in Denver."
Sehorn had reconstructive surgery on his right knee in 1998 after he was injured returning the opening kickoff in a preseason game against the Jets at Giants Stadium. He missed the entire 1998 season. His 1999 season ended when he broke his left leg against the Jets.

San Fran releases Junior Bryant

SANTA CLARA, Calif.—The San Francisco 49ers released one-time starting defensive lineman Junior Bryant on Monday after he failed yet another physical in an attempt to return from a serious neck injury.
Bryant hasn't played since last September, when he was injured in a game at St. Louis. Bryant announced a comeback bid earlier this month, but the team said he needed to pass a physical before being allowed to play.

A six-year veteran with the 49ers, Bryant was contemplating retirement after tests earlier this year showed little improvement in his condition. But after he was examined by team doctors, the 49ers let Bryant decide whether he'd attempt to return this season.

Falcons' Tuggle told to retire

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga.—Jessie Tuggle is pondering whether to retire or play for a team other than Atlanta, with whom he has spent his entire 14-year career.
But his career with the Falcons is over.
On Sunday, coach Dan Reeves told Tuggle, the NFL's leading active tackler, that the Falcons want him to retire so they won't be forced to release him.
"Jessie understands where we're coming from," Reeves said Monday. "He wants to end his career as a Falcon, and we're going to try to honor that as best we can and try to work out the details."
The 36-year-old middle linebacker was not interested in speculating on his future when contacted at his home. He cleaned out his locker and had his name plate removed from his cubicle on Sunday.
"I have no comment," Tuggle said. "I'm not talking until tomorrow."

Who's HOT

Sammy Sosa is batting .323, with 51 homers and 133 RBI.

Who's NOT

The starters have a 6.11 ERA, and the team is 10-27 since the All-Star break.

Mild-mannered Betts a quiet leader for Iowa

can make improvements in every aspect of his game, but one area can use the most work.

"I think the biggest thing personally I need to do better is read my blockers better — understand who's doing what," he said. "And once I get that down, it makes my job as running back easier."

Betts, who coach Kirk Ferentz called his unquestioned starter and most proven running back, was voted to this year's 12-member leadership group by his teammates, something that holds a good deal of significance.

"It means a lot as a player when guys on the team feel that you're a capable leader," he said.

The group acts as a sort of liaison for the coaching staff, Betts said. If there are problems within the team or issues that need to be brought up, players go to the members of the leadership group, who in turn approach the staff with the issues.

But don't expect to see much hooting and hollering on the field from Betts; he said he subtly makes his presence known.

"I'm more of a lead-by-example type of person — I'm not so vocal," he said. "I try to set an example in my play out on the field and in the way I practice."

Betts has made a good impression on the men that block for him; junior center Bruce Nelson has nothing but praise for him.

"He's a tough character; he's got a tough mind," Nelson said. "He doesn't complain, even though he probably has a right to sometimes."

Sophomore offensive lineman Sam Aiello likes Betts' personality. "He's a good guy — he's down to earth. He's right there to crack a joke with you," Aiello said. "He's an unbelievable athlete, and I look up to him. I think Ladell's going to run wild this year; it's going to be something fun. I know the kid can play."

Betts will take his act public this week against Kent State — and don't look for him to get stage fright. "I've been the starter for three years, so I don't ever come out here nervous," Betts said.

"I expect big things out of myself, and the coaches do, too."

He helped turn the Eagles into one of the best-hitting Juco teams in the While Evans says he was happy in Ames, he is overjoyed at the thought of becoming a Hawkeye.

"I'm in the best place to be in the state of Iowa," he said Monday afternoon. "I've always wanted to be a Hawkeye and to help this program out."

Dallas tops Oakland in American Bowl

By John Rice

Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Dallas rookie Quincy Carter rebounded from an awful first start with an impressive performance rushing and passing as the Cowboys beat the Oakland Raiders, 21-6, Monday night, snapping their nine-game exhibition losing streak.

Playing before 88,309 fans at Mexico City's Azteca stadium, the Cowboys, who had lost 17 of their last 18 preseason games, looked like the hungry young team they were billed to be.

The Raiders — considered Super Bowl contenders — often looked confused, though many of their starters played sparingly, and quarterback Rich Gannon did not play.

Carter, who was 5-of-17 for 27 yards against New Orleans on Aug. 19, wound up 6-of-11 for 99 yards on Monday night, with no interceptions, and he scored on a darting 16-yard touchdown run in the second quarter.

"This is just step one. I take the good and the bad, like I said last week," Carter said. "We have to go from here and keep improving."

The Raiders — with most of their starters — dominated the first quarter with a stolid, grinding attack. Quarterback Bobby Hoying completed seven straight passes and ate up more than eight minutes of the clock on a 71-yard drive.

But the drive ended with a field goal, and Oakland never seemed to regroup.

"They moved the ball, but we were able to keep them out of the end zone," Cowboys coach Dave Campo said. "After that, we began to control the line of scrimmage, which helped shut down their running game."

The Cowboys — especially Carter — came alive in the second quarter after starting safety George Teague picked off a pass by Hoying at the 35 and returned it eight yards.

There's more to Bryant than football opposition, but he said that should not be an excuse for a lower level of play.

"I feel that, as a football player, I've got to rise above double-teams and triple-teams," he said. "No matter what's out there, I feel that I've got to go out there and perform to a level that I'm comfortable with. I know what I have to do to be one of the greatest football players ever to play at Wisconsin."

Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez said having a dominant player such as Bryant helps take some pressure off of the rest of the Badger defense, which ranked seventh in the conference in defense last season.

"It really helps you because he commands a double-team most of the time, which allows somebody to run free," Alvarez said. "People try to do things away from him — he's a guy that disrupts an offense."

Wisconsin lost some key members from last year's Sun Bowl team, and it will look to underclassmen, including a few true freshmen, to fill the void this season.

Bryant said this is not a cause for panic.

"With our football team, we've always gelled pretty well, and I don't think it should matter whether it's a freshman or an old guy — if you're coming into our huddle, you know you have to be about business," he said.

This season, Bryant will take on a new role: team captain. He plans to use his experience to help the new guys deal with the step up to Division I football.

"Basically, I'm going to try to help them along and watch out for them and make sure no harm becomes them," he said. "When we're on the practice field, I'll try to teach them and try to help them out as much as possible."

Alvarez had nothing but good things to say about his standout defensive lineman, but more goes into evaluating Bryant than purely football skills.

"No. 1, he's a great person," Alvarez said. "He's fun to be around, very intelligent, and a very loyal person. I look for him to have his best year ever this season."

Nevada boxing official Ghanem dies

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Elias F. Ghanem, who as chairman of the Nevada State Athletic Commission presided over the Mike Tyson ear-biting case, died Monday at his home. He was 62.

Ghanem had been diagnosed with kidney cancer in 1998. A Lebanese immigrant, he rose from emergency-room doctor to become one of Las Vegas' most prominent physicians. Nicknamed the "physician to the stars," Ghanem's patient list included Elvis Presley, Michael Jackson, Bill Cosby, Ann-Margaret, and gaming giant Barron Hilton.

"He was an amazing man, [and] I count it a great privilege in my life that I got to be his close personal friend," said former President Bill Clinton, who visited Ghanem last week at a Las Vegas hospital.

Previous champions prevail in first round of U.S. Open

By Hal Bock
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Patrick Rafter struggled Monday in beginning his bid for a third U.S. Open title with a 7-6 (3), 6-3, 7-5 victory over wild card Bob Bryan.

Two other former champions, Martina Hingis and Lindsay Davenport, also advanced on opening day of the Grand Slam event.

Top-seeded Hingis used precise if not power tennis to eliminate wild card Laura Granville, 6-2, 6-0, in 46 minutes. Davenport, seeded No. 3, ousted Andrea Glass, 6-2, 6-3.

Rafter, who won the U.S. Open in 1997 and 1998, was a first-round casualty each of the last two years. The Aussie seemed in trouble again when Bryan forced him to a first-set tiebreak.

But Rafter shrugged off punishing heat and humidity to win the tiebreak, 7-3, and then held off Bryan's 116-mph serves through the next two sets.

Rafter's trademark bobbing ponytail will not be part of this U.S. Open. He cut his hair to raise money for charity after the Australian Open in January.

Hingis, ranked No. 1 but without a Grand Slam title since 1999, was in command against Granville, the two-time NCAA champion from Stanford. She won the last nine games and had four aces, but she never pushed her serve up to the speeds so common among today's top women players.

"I know I'm not going to hit it like Venus," she said, referring to the 124-mph serves of Venus Williams. "Placement, mixing it up so the opponent doesn't always know what I'm doing — that's my strategy. I know I'm not going to overpower anybody or hit a hole through someone."

So she picked apart Granville, who was making her first appearance on center court at the open.

"It was a difficult experience because I haven't played on anything even close to the size of that stadium," Granville said. "Hopefully, in the future, I'll be more comfortable on it."

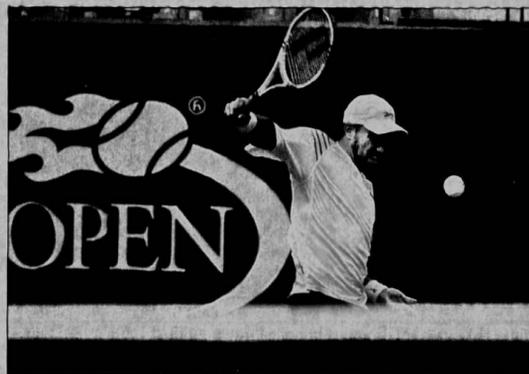

After dropping the first three games, Granville broke to briefly get the first set back on serve.

But Hingis was not about to stumble against the 20-year-old from Chicago, who set an NCAA record with 58 consecutive singles victories over 13 months.

Hingis, who won her only U.S. Open in 1997, did not drop another game, taking advantage of 29 unforced errors by Granville.

Hingis has gone more than two years without a Grand Slam title since winning the 1999 Australian Open.

Davenport, who won the Open in 1998, displayed the power shots that Hingis lacks. She rode a serve that reached 107 mph to six aces and wore down Glass, who missed the 2000 season because of mononucleosis.

Elise Amendola/Associated Press
Australia's Patrick Rafter returns to Bob Bryan of the United States during first-round play at the U.S. Open tennis tournament in New York Monday. Rafter won the match in three sets.

SPORTS BRIEF

Tagliabue, officials in last-minute talks

DALLAS (AP) — Negotiators gathered Monday to try to avert the use of replacement officials for at least the last week of NFL exhibitions, with the two sides differing on how close they were to a resolution. "You ought to be able to hammer it out pretty quickly," said Tom Condon, the lead negotiator for the officials.

Commissioner Paul Tagliabue, on the other hand, said the officials' position "until now has been pretty unyielding."

Since Tagliabue took over as commissioner in 1989, there have been no strikes or lockouts of either officials or players. The labor contract with players now extends through 2007.

But the NFL has been adamant that it will not start the regular season without a deal with officials to replace the one that expired last March.

Replacement officials already are signed and could begin working exhibition games as early as Thursday.

Bronx, N.Y., pitcher Danny Almonte throws against the Netherlands Antilles during the consolation game at the Little League World Series in South Williamsport, Pa., Aug. 26.

Little League looks into Almonte's age

By Dan Lewerenz
Associated Press

SOUTH WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — Little League is investigating pitcher Danny Almonte after being shown a document that indicated the ace from the Bronx might be older than allowed.

The Rolando Paulino Little League insists Almonte is 12 years old, born April 7, 1989, in Moca, Dominican Republic.

But Little League World Series officials were shown an affidavit Monday by a Sports Illustrated writer that indicated a Danny Almonte was born April 7, 1987, in the town, said league spokesman Lance Van Auker.

Documents previously submitted to Little League by the Rolando Paulino team to prove Almonte's eligibility showed him being born to the same parents in the same town, but in 1989. Van Auker said Little League also was faxed another document Monday afternoon that was similar to the one obtained by Sports Illustrated but showing Almonte being born in 1989.

Little League rules prohibit any player born before Aug. 1, 1988, from competing this year. "If this is the same Danny Almonte who played for Rolando Paulino Little League, then we have been deceived, and a fraud has been perpetrated on Little League and the millions of youngsters for whom Little League is so important," said Little League Inc. President Stephen Keener.

In a statement released Monday, Little League officials said they contacted the Rolando Paulino league in the Bronx, N.Y., which insisted all of its players were eligible and promised to provide further documentation.

Rick McCabe, a Sports Illustrated spokesman, said the magazine was "working on a Little League story" but would not comment further until the story was ready for publication.

An official with the Rolando Paulino league questioned the new document.

"Rolando, before he lets the kids into the league, he gets the original birth certificate and a passport, because he doesn't want these kinds of problems. This is a surprise to us," said Joann Dalmau, a spokeswoman for the Rolando Paulino team. "What more can we provide, if we have provided an original birth certificate and a passport? Anything else is irrelevant. I don't know what document they have, but they're wrong," she said.

If Almonte was found to be ineligible, the Bronx team could be forced to forfeit its last win, the consolation game against Curaçao, Netherlands Antilles. Little League could even revoke the Rolando Paulino league's charter.

But Van Auker said that given the documents in Little League's possession, no immediate action would be taken. "We have in our possession now the same type of documentation that it appears Sports Illustrated has," Van Auker said. "The document we have says 1989, the document they have says 1987, so as far as we're concerned, the team is still the third-place team in the World Series."

Bonds homers, Giants win

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Barry Bonds put away his earring, not his power stroke.

Bonds hit his major league-leading 56th home run Monday, becoming the fastest player to reach the mark in major league history, as the San Francisco Giants beat the New York Mets, 6-5.

J.T. Snow hit a tiebreaking, two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning as San Francisco averted a four-game sweep at Shea Stadium and moved a half-game ahead of idle Chicago in the wild card race.

The Giants, who began the day 3½ games behind Arizona in the NL West, begin a three-game series tonight at Bank One Ballpark.

Bonds also doubled, singled and walked. Needing a triple for the cycle — he hit one Sunday night — he grounded out in the ninth.

The Giants' slugger recently removed the diamond stud he wears in his left ear. He did it because of an infection, not this weekend's flap involving Seattle reliever Arthur Rhodes' irritation over being ordered to remove his earrings.

Rick White (3-5) retired Bonds and Jeff Kent on grounders to start the ninth. But John Vander Wal singled, and Snow hit his seventh homer of the season and second of the series for a 6-4 lead.

Phillies 3, Diamondbacks 1

PHILADELPHIA — Robert Person allowed one run in eight innings, and Marlon Anderson's RBI single drove in the go-ahead run as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Arizona Diamondbacks, 3-1, Monday night.

Person (12-6) gave up five hits, tied a career-high with 11 strikeouts, and won for the eighth time in nine decisions as the Phillies closed within one game of first-place Atlanta in the NL East.

Reggie Sanders hit his 29th homer and fourth in four games for Arizona, whose lead over San Francisco in the West was cut to 2½ games.

Person, facing the Diamondbacks for the first time since receiving a six-game suspension for hitting Sanders in a 6-1 loss on May 13, retired 11 of the last 13 batters he faced.

on the first pitch from Jose Cabrera, rallying the Los Angeles Dodgers over the Atlanta Braves, 4-2, Monday.

Mike Remlinger (3-3) allowed a one-out single to Adrian Beltre and walked Jeff Reboulet, then retired Shawn Green on a flyout. Cabrera relieved and Sheffield connected for his 31st homer.

Greg Maddux allowed one run and five hits in seven innings, struck out seven, and walked none. Maddux, who left with a 2-1 lead, was attempting to become the major league's second 18-game winner, following Arizona's Curt Schilling.

Terry Adams (10-6) gave up two runs and eight hits in seven innings and struck out eight. Jeff Shaw pitched the ninth for his 37th save in 43 chances.

Padres 8, Marlins 3

MIAMI — Damian Jackson hit a three-run homer, and Phil Nevin added a solo shot as the San Diego Padres routed the Florida Marlins, 8-3, Monday night.

The Padres roughed up Marlins starter A.J. Burnett, who pitched a no-hitter against them May 12 in San Diego.

Burnett (9-10) allowed seven runs on eight hits and five walks in five innings. He struck out eight and hit a batter, losing for the fifth time in six decisions.

Nevin connected off Burnett for his career-high 32nd homer in the fifth inning, and Ray Lankford went 2-for-2 with a double for San Diego.

Padres starter Brian Tollerberg (7-4) worked five-plus innings, giving up two runs and seven hits. He walked two and struck out three.

David Lundquist struck out three in two innings of hitless relief.

The Padres won the final three games of the four-game series by a combined score of 25-4. In those three games, Florida pitchers gave up 33 hits and 32 walks, including eight Monday night.

Right-hander Foster refuses demotion, becomes free agent

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Pitcher Kevin Foster became a free agent Monday after refusing a demotion by the Texas Rangers.

Foster, a right-hander who was 0-1 with a 6.62 ERA in nine relief appearances, was asked to go to Triple-A Oklahoma of the Pacific Coast League on Thursday.

Foster has a 32-30 record in 100 major league appearances, including previous stints with Philadelphia and the Chicago Cubs. Texas signed him in December, and he earned his way to the majors in July by going 3-1 with a 2.80 ERA in 16 games with Oklahoma.

Mesa gets two-game suspension

PHILADELPHIA — Philadelphia Phillies closer Jose Mesa was suspended for two games on Monday for throwing at St. Louis' Jim Edmonds last week.

Mesa will miss games against the New York Mets on Tuesday and Wednesday. He was eligible to play

Monday night against the Arizona Diamondbacks.

"They have to do what they feel is right," Phillies manager Larry Bowa said.

Mesa would not comment on the suspension.

Grossman to start for No. 1 Gators

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Rex Grossman, not Brock Berlin, will start at quarterback for No. 1 Florida, coach Steve Spurrier said Monday night.

Spurrier said the race was even at the end of spring practice, but Grossman out-played Berlin in the Gators scrimmage Aug. 18.

"We just think he deserves to be the starter right now," Spurrier said. "Brock's ready, but that's our starter. We'll go with it hopefully a long way."

Grossman threw for 21 touchdowns with seven interceptions while completing 61.8 percent of his passes last year as the Gators won their first Southeastern Conference championship since 1996. He started Florida's last eight games after beginning the season behind Jesse Palmer.

That day, Sept. 8, can't come soon enough for folks in Manhattan, and Lubbock especially long wait for fans, who attended home games Aug. 26 and Sept. 2 last year.

"I think everyone gets excited about having two weeks of practice," McCarney said.

Baylor players are looking forward to hitting someone in green and gold after plenty of that in recent years. Coach Kevin Steele has teamed through three major league and three full-season scrimmages, including a workout Aug. 24.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Iowa State doesn't mind the extra time

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press

Here's a rarity: A college football coach who CAN wait for the season to start.

Unlike his anxious counterparts at Baylor, Kansas State, and Texas Tech, Iowa State coach Dan McCarney is glad not to be playing until next weekend.

"I'm very appreciative for the chance to have more time because we're not ready yet," McCarney said Monday. "We need as much practice and preparation time as we can get."

Ready or not, the Cyclones — who will be relying on several young and inexperienced players — open a week from Saturday at home against Northern Iowa.

That day, Sept. 8, can't get here soon enough for folks in Waco, Manhattan, and Lubbock. It's an especially long wait for K-State fans, who attended home games on Aug. 26 and Sept. 2 last year.

"I think everyone gets anxious," Wildcats coach Bill Snyder said. "Our players are certainly anxious about having two weeks to go."

Baylor players are looking forward to hitting someone not wearing green and gold after doing plenty of that in recent weeks. Coach Kevin Steele has put his team through three mini-scrimmages and three full-fledged scrimmages, including a 129-play workout Aug. 24.

"The worst part about it was we had to go home Saturday and Sunday and watch all those other teams play," Steele said, "and we still don't play for 13 days."

He warned the players in March that this was coming. That doesn't make it any easier, though.

There has been some benefit. "I think it's made us a little fresher," he said. "We've gotten our legs back sooner than you usually do."

NCAA rules allow 29 practices prior to the opener. How those are spread out depend on when school starts.

However many days classes are in session before the opener counts against that 29. Whatever is left is divided in half, and that's how many two-a-day sessions are left.

What that basically boils down to is that teams with late starts have fewer two-a-days.

"Last year, we had 13 days of two-a-days — that's 26 practices — and actually only about 18 days to get ready," Snyder said. "This one's going to go almost a full month. So we have almost twice as many days until we play our first ball game."

K-State opens at Southern Cal., Baylor has a home game against Arkansas State, and Texas Tech will be at home against New Mexico.

Oklahoma and Nebraska opened with victories Aug. 25, while Colorado started with a loss Sunday night.

The Buffaloes will try bouncing back Aug. 25, against Colorado State. The Sooners go to Air Force and the Cornhuskers play host to Troy State.

Teams opening this weekend include the Big 12 coaching debut of Gary Pinkel at Missouri, coincidentally against Bowling Green, a rival during his previous 10 years at Toledo, and Les Miles of Oklahoma State at Southern Mississippi.

Also, Texas plays New Mexico State, Texas A&M plays McNeese State, and Kansas plays Southwest Missouri, all home games for the Big 12 schools.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK: "I didn't sleep last night after watching that. It scares you," Missouri coach Gary Pinkel about Colorado committing five turnovers, three of which led to 17 points for Fresno State, in the Buffaloes' 24-22 loss to Fresno State on Sunday.

EXTRA POINTS: Texas A&M is looking for a few good legs. Red-shirt freshman Chris Sims, who was expected to be the Aggies' kicker the next four years, has had to give up football because of an injury. Emergency auditions have been held at Kyle Field, but so far punter Cody Scates has emerged as the likely placekicker. Coach R.C. Slocum is worried because he's never used one person to handle punts and placekicking, and because if Scates gets hurt, A&M would be in real trouble. Scates missed some practice last week with a sore leg. "I'm not concerned as long as Cody's healthy," Slocum said. "The question is what happens if he gets hurt during the season. We're looking for someone who can develop into a backup or starter at kicker." ... Colorado coach Gary Barnett is amazed at how seriously Colorado State takes their rivalry. "It's their motto, they've got it on their Web sites — 'Beat CU.' Before this year, I don't think CU gave them that much attention," he said. He doesn't mind a little extra intensity. "I think it's good for our state," he said. ... Kansas State's depth chart at quarterback "hasn't changed one iota," coach Bill Snyder said. That means sophomore Ell Roberston is holding off junior Marc Dunn. "I think they're both making improvements in some areas and there's some areas where improvement hasn't been as rapid as you would like," Snyder said. "By the same token, I'm not unhappy with their efforts, with the progress they've made."

Wisconsin quarterback not yet cleared

By Sarah Wyatt
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — Wisconsin quarterback Brooks Bollinger was released from the hospital Monday after he was knocked out of the Badgers' home opener with a concussion to the liver.

Coach Barry Alvarez said he was not sure whether Bollinger will play Saturday, when the No. 22 Badgers play seventh-ranked Oregon.

"We will have his health in our interest when we make a decision. That will be our first criteria. ... It will be a day-to-day situation," Alvarez said Monday.

Bollinger was hospitalized Aug. 25 after he was tackled and fell on the ball in the second quarter of Wisconsin's 26-17 victory over Virginia.

Alvarez said Bollinger visited the children's ward a couple times during his stay at the hospital and seemed to be recovering well.

"He's getting along just fine. I don't want to get too technical with it, because I thought the liver that was drawn on [the doctor's] board looked like a lung to me," Alvarez said.

Bollinger was relieved Aug. 25 by sophomore Jim Sorgi, who threw for 150 yards and two touchdowns. Sorgi, who led Wisconsin to two victories last year while playing for an injured Bollinger, said he will be ready to play if Bollinger is out.

"I feel like I always go into every game being ready to start," he said.

Alvarez joked that he could think of only one better option than Sorgi as a potential fill-in for Bollinger: Atlanta Falcon's Michael Vick, the No. 1 overall draft pick from Virginia Tech.

In reality, Alvarez said he "couldn't ask for anything more than Jim Sorgi."

Alvarez said he was impressed with Sorgi's performance last year against Michigan State, when he threw a 45-yard touchdown pass to Lee Evans with 29 seconds left to give the Badgers a 17-10 victory.

"There's no way in the world, having not played and being put in the position that I ever thought he could perform like he did. He performed like a veteran," Alvarez said.

Evans said he was confident in both Bollinger and Sorgi, adding that the Badgers might have a slight advantage having played a game before meeting Oregon.

"They haven't had a chance out there; they've just been practicing. We've got a game under our belts, so we know what we can do, we know what to expect and know what to correct."

Freshman to start at quarterback at UNI

CEDAR FALLS (AP) — Northern Iowa coach Mark Farley announced with conviction that redshirt freshman Tom Petrie would be his starting quarterback.

Then Farley heard how long it has been since the Panthers had a freshman starting at quarterback. It will be the first time in at least 52 years — and maybe longer.

"Whatever that fact is, I didn't need to know that right before going into a game," Farley said.

The first-year coach made that remark in jest. He said Petrie demonstrated last spring and again in pre-season camp that he has what it takes to lead the team. He'll get his first chance to do that Thursday night against Wayne State in the UNI-Dome.

"We're excited," Farley said Monday. "We think Tom will carry the load. He's going to make mistakes, but we told him he doesn't have to look over his shoulder. He needs that freedom to be allowed to make mistakes. I don't want him to have that aspect of worrying about what's happening over on the sideline."

Petrie is a 6-foot-3, 219-pounder from Plymouth, Minn. He was an option quarterback in high school, passing for 1,500 yards and 18 touchdowns as a senior and rushing for more than 1,000 yards.

In the spring game last April, Petrie completed 8-of-18 passes for 132 yards.

"He gives us that steady edge," Farley said. "It's a position we're not going to lean on to win football games, but for us to win football games, that person has to play effectively."

"So we have to give him the plays and the opportunity to be successful in how we call plays."

Petrie won the job in competition with junior college transfer Griff Jurgens and Anthony Howard, a former Iowa Falls standout who transferred from New Mexico State.

Northern Iowa officials checked back as far as 1949 and could not find a freshman who started at quarterback. They did not know if there had been one before then.

Aggies dismiss defensive back for violating rules

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Mike Pinesette, a senior defensive back from La Marque, was dismissed from the team Monday for unspecified violation of team rules, head coach R.C. Slocum announced.

Pinesette transferred to Texas A&M last year from Blinn Junior College. He had seven tackles, playing mostly on special teams.

Nebraska reports minimal injuries from opener

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The Nebraska football team came through its Aug. 25 opener with only minimal injuries.

Coach Frank Solich said nose tackle Jason Lohr sprained an ankle and did not practice Monday, but that was the only injury of note.

Linebacker T.J. Hollowell returned to practice, joining the underclassmen who were able to report after classes started on Monday.

Two Nebraska players picked up conference awards for their play in the Cornhuskers' 21-7 victory over Texas Christian on Aug. 25 in the Pigskin Classic.

Quarterback Eric Crouch was named the Big 12 Offensive Player of the Week, and punter Kyle Larson earned Specialty Teams Player of the Week honors.

Crouch became Nebraska's career leader in total yards when he completed 10-of-18 passes for 151 yards and ran 24 times for 69 yards. The 5,510 yards for his career surpassed Tommie Frazier's 5,476.

Larson averaged 48.6 yards per game punting, pinning TCU inside the 20-yard line five times. Each of his eight punts were 40 yards or more, and four were 50 yards or longer.

Purdue names team captains for 2001 season

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Purdue defensive end Akin Ayodele and center Gene Mruczkowski have been voted captains for the 2001 season by their teammates.

Ayodele, a senior, also was a team captain last year. He ranks third on Purdue's career-sacks list with 20 and eighth with 34 tackles for loss. Ayodele started all 24 games in 1999 and 2000 and was named second-team All-Big Ten both years.

Mruczkowski, a junior, started all 24 games the past two seasons at left guard before switching to center this spring. Last season, he was named second-team Academic All-American and honorable-mention All-Big Ten.

"I think being voted captain is the greatest honor a player can receive because it's decided by your teammates," coach Joe Tillier said. "Akin and Gene are deserving guys. Everybody is eligible to be a captain on our squad, so to be one of the top two vote-getters says a lot about the respect you have earned from your teammates."

by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Travel will be tiring but lucrative. Don't sign contracts until you have gone over them thoroughly. The odds of getting what you want are better if you deal directly with the boss.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Arguments will prevail. Your lover may disappoint you in such a way that estrangement will follow. Be cautious in making personal decisions about legal or contractual matters. Time is on your side.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Business partnerships can be prosperous. Alterations to your living quarters will bring greater comfort. Make special plans for you and your lover.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can make career gains by employing your talents on those innovative ideas. Become involved in projects that will give you freedom and lead to friendships.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spend some time pampering yourself. It may be costly and your partner may not approve, but your state of mind will improve.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You will be pressed for time if you have made too many promises to too many people. Family members will be disappointed if you take them for granted when they most need help.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your ability to see both sides of an issue will help keep things harmonious in group encounters. Changes and busy activities at home will cause fatigue. Be sure to get some rest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may have a greater concern for older family members. Try to help straighten out their personal papers. You will have a tendency to over-react to personal situations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may make a mistake at work unless you get all the facts before making a decision. The best results will come from business travel. Don't get involved in other people's problems.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Sudden changes in partnerships will come as a surprise. It's likely that things are going on behind your back. Quiet action is the best revenge.

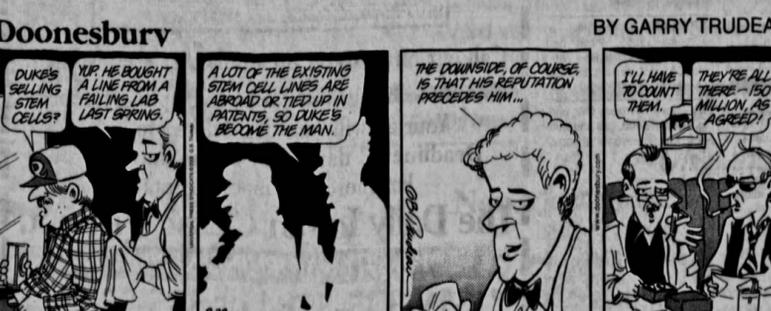

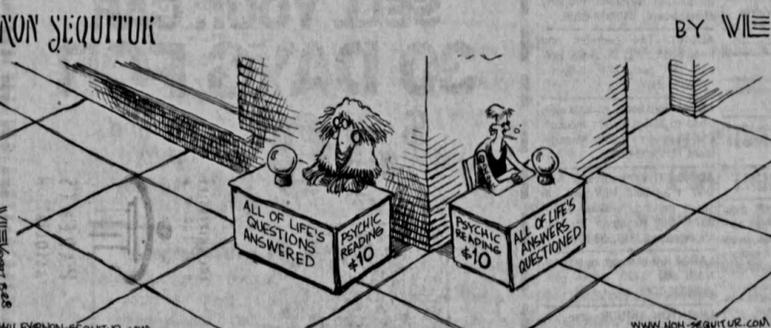

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Interact with those in high positions and present your ideas. Take the initiative to get ahead. Don't hesitate to take a stance on your future.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Tension at home should be expected if you haven't been spending enough time with your mate. Overtime and extra activities have upset your partner more than you realized.

quote of the day

The foodie community used to bash me, too.

a welcome from president coleman

Dear University of Iowa Community:

Welcome to the beginning of a new academic year! To celebrate, I hope that you will enjoy the 2001 Weeks of Welcome activities. These events have been planned to introduce new students to University life and to welcome returning students, faculty, and staff to another academic year. Opening events, sponsored by Orientation Services, Residence Services, and the Office of Student Life, in collaboration with the Office of the Vice President for Student Services, are an excellent opportunity for you to meet new people, learn Iowa traditions, have fun, and enjoy the community that is uniquely Iowa. I know that these activities will encourage you to take advantage of all that The University of Iowa and surrounding communities have to offer you. I look forward to seeing you at other campus events throughout the semester - and again, welcome.

Sincerely,

Mary Sue Coleman
