UI freshman Alexandra Caldwell sews a patch on a pair of jeans in her Burge Residence Hall room Monday.

BUILDING AN IDENTITY

Not the average freshmen

Alexandra Caldwell and Liz Van Deusen are new to the UI. Theirs are two faces among thousands and two stories of lessons learned in a world in which they sometimes stand out from the majority. As minorities on a campus as large as the UI, Caldwell and Van Deusen represent a small but significant part of the student body. As they establish their identities at the university, the DI will chronicle the lives of these two freshmen three times each semester to learn about the world from a unique perspective.

Alexandra Caldwell

She's not Indian or Persian or Pakistani, but the UI freshman has been asked if she is all three.

Then Alexandra Caldwell, 17, usually hears the timid question: "Are you black?"

Her answer is always yes, but it includes an afterthought. She's also a Latina.

But for Caldwell, who has been busy adjusting to her first semester in college, ethnicity has been the last thing on her mind.

Caldwell said it took her sense of humor to overcome a threatening rhetoric instructor, a book-buying chase, and an embarrassing spill in what turned out to be the wrong class.

With a stash of napkins from Burge Residence Hall, the freshman quickly wiped up soda leaking from her backpack and walked out. "I felt really stupid because I was sitting in the front row," she said.

The young woman comes from a family of two cultures

Flex dollars vex students

By Sara Faiwell
The Daily Iowan

All flex dollars left unused by May 19, 2002, will be kept by the university, Schoenfelder said, adding that she doesn't know where the excess money will go.

"In the past, people would have to plan what meals they wanted to eat every day," she said. "[Flex dollars] now make meal options more portable, which is good."

The UI created a committee last year to study board plans and new meal options with the help of student surveys and focus groups. It decided to implement the flex-dollars program so that students could fill in gaps between meals, said committee member Greg Black, the head of food service.

However, Senuma said that meal plans were more flexible last year without the addition of flex dollars.

"We could still do the same thing before and more easily by just using cash," he said. Flex dollars shouldn't be limited to food, said UI freshman Steven Burrows, who signed Senuma's petition.

"I have a $72 calculus book, and I don't see why my flex dollars can't pay for that," he said. "If we are paying for this $200 regardless, we should be able to use it for whatever we feel is fit, because the university is going to get the money either way."

The program is confusing, he said, adding that many students haven't even heard of flex dollars.

Senuma said he was trying to use up the flex dollars because leftover money from the account will not be refunded to him.

Student group zooms in on UITV

By Pam Dewey
The Daily Iowan

Student Video Productions is pushing to revive its presence on UITV after five years of inactivity on the channel.

Group members said they hope to provide the university with increased access to student-made programming on the station, Channel 12.

The group, which airs some programs on Iowa City Public Access Television, Channel 2, hopes to reach more students by putting its work back on UITV, said UI senior and group member Mike Tolva. PATV is not available to students living in residence halls.

"The university station has lain dormant for several years, and we need to get more students involved to bring it back to what it used to be," said UI senior Amanda Brown, the group's contracts manager.

The group's main focus this year is to produce a biweekly variety show that it hopes to air on UITV, she said, adding that the group is uncertain when broadcasts will begin.

The variety show's programming would include student-video projects and live studio segments, said UI senior Jon Petersen, the group's production coordinator.

"We have just walls and walls of tapes from years past. We'd like to sort of recycle those things that people seem to like," Petersen said. "But we are pretty much open to whatever people want to do."

Last year, the group drafted a letter to Broadcasting Services, UITV's governing body, in an effort to stabilize the station's submission rules and, in effect, regain use of the station. UI Student Government helped Student Video Productions in the process.

"It seemed like every time we brought a project to it [to air on UITV], it would try to apply a different set of rules," Tolva said.

The group was able to establish a set of submission rules for UITV last year that are the same as those for PATV.

The group will hold weekly meetings Fridays at 4:30 p.m. in the Student Activities Center of the IMU.

U.S., Israel ditch racism conference

By Chris Tomlinson
Associated Press

DURBAN, South Africa — The United States and Israel pulled out of the World Conference Against Racism on Monday, denouncing efforts to condemn Israel in the meeting's proposed declaration.

Secretary of State Colin Powell, who had remained in Washington and was not part of the U.S. delegation, denounced the draft declaration's "hateful language."

"Today, I have instructed our representatives at the World Conference Against Racism to return home. I have taken this decision with regret because of the importance of the international fight against racism and the contribution that this conference could have made to it," said the statement, which was released in Durban.

"But following discussions today by our team in Durban and others who are working for a successful conference, and others, I am convinced that it will not be possible," the statement added.

Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres announced in Israel that the Jewish state was also pulling out of the conference because of anti-Israel and anti-Semitic comments.

"The Durban conference is a farce," he said.

The Arab League had led a concerted effort to single out Israel and blame it in unacceptable terms for the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, he said.

The European Union said it would stay at the conference and endorsed a new proposal by South Africa to draft completely new text on the Middle East.

Several Jewish delegations pulled out, according to Shimon Samuels, the chairman of the Jewish caucus.

"The conference turned into a tribunal against Israel," the Israeli Foreign Ministry said in a separate statement. "The conference against racism turned into a racist conference against Israel."

Soon after the U.S. announcement, several hundred angry demonstrators protested outside the conference center, chanting "Shame, shame, U.S.A."

Norway and Canada had attempted to mediate a compromise between the Arab states and Israel on the conference's draft declaration.

The Durban conference is a farce.

Where there's smoke, there's a program

By Deidre Bello
The Daily Iowan

The UI is now offering its first program that counsels students who are trying to quit smoking, but few students have taken advantage of it so far.

Tobacco Cessation Consultations at Student Health debuted in late July as an addition to the Health Iowa Program. Health educator Katie Boutott currently consults with four patients.

Boutott said she educates patients about withdrawal symptoms, the benefits of quitting smoking, and the barriers that they will face.

The program is free for students because it is funded through student fees.

A substantial number of students aren't taking advantage of the service, but Boutott foresees the program becoming more popular if Iowa City and Coralville officials decide to ban smoking in restaurants.

"All the smoking bans will make them aware of the health risks and force them to seek help," she said.

Boutott is the sole member of the consultation staff. A graduate assistant will join her in the future, she said.

Approximately 30 percent of last fall's 1,284 freshmen surveyed in an annual health assessment said they were smokers, compared with 34.4 percent of freshman reporting the year before.

The findings for this year's student survey on tobacco habits will come out in the next few weeks, said Christopher Squier, the university's associate provost for health sciences and a volunteer for Clean Air

Iowa Child readies for change

By Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

An announcement early next week will determine any changes in location for the Iowa Child project, previously planned for a site northeast of the intersection of Interstates 80 and 380 in Coralville.

The new plans might also include modifications of the design of the center and how it will be funded, but project officials declined to unveil details of discussion from the last four months.

A meeting to be scheduled for next week in Coralville will announce any modifications in the project, said David Oman, the vice chairman of the Iowa Child board.

Oman said that when he joined the board in April, he was prepared to make changes to the project's proposal of a $293 million educational center, which includes a five-acre enclosed rain forest, a 600-room hotel, an aquarium, and offices.

"When I came on board, my goal was to question everything and lead an effort for improvement," he said. "These changes are in the best interest of the project and for the community, as well."

Although the Iowa Child board has considered locating the project in Coralville, city officials said members of the board said they are not sure if the project will stay in Coralville.

Coralville Mayor Jim Faussett

said he has heard rumors the project is moving from Coralville — perhaps to Marion. If that's the case, he said, he would be disappointed.

"We put a lot of time and finance on the project," he said. "You just have to roll with the punches."

Even so, the city continues to offer property options on the West Side of town, he said.

Marion Mayor Victor Klopfenstein said he has not been contacted by any Iowa Child officials. Oman would not comment on the rumors of a move out of Coralville.

While leaders discuss possible changes to the project, Robert Yager, a UI professor of science education, will join the Iowa Child Educational Design Team. The team gathers professionals from around the country to work to create the educational curriculum for the Iowa Child Project.

Oman said if the center is built, professors will focus studies on informal teaching about the environment — outside of the classroom — using the proposed Iowa Child facility.

Yager, who has worked at the UI since 1956, said he had been interested in the Iowa Child project because of how it could improve Iowa's education reputation.

"This is a place to take risks and try new things," he said of the project. "I hope the vision attracts enough people to make it a reality. It's not something that's going to happen overnight."

UISG outlines goals, notes lack of power

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

UI Student Government leaders laid out their goals for the academic year Monday, but they admitted they don't have as much power to represent students as they would like.

"We're basically just an advisory board," UISG Vice President Dan Rossi said during an interview with DI editors. "Nothing that we pass has any teeth whatsoever."

"Anything we pass, anything we do, can be 'vetoed' by the administration," UISG President

Nick Klenske said.

Klenske and Rossi said that during the remaining seven months of their year-long term, they will try to "lay the foundation" to build UISG's power for the future.

"We want to make student government the actual government of students," Klenske said. "We probably won't get it done this year ... It's our long-term goal."

The lack of power in student government was highlighted during the first few months of their term as the leaders tangled with Phillip Jones, the university's vice president for Student Services, over the use of left-over student fees.

The student assembly passed legislation directing that left-over student fees to go back to priority-1 student groups, such as the University Lecture Committee and SCOPE. Currently, those fees go to an account that Jones can use at his discretion.

Jones halted the legislation from being implemented when he found it inconsistent with university policy. Student leaders said Jones' explanation was too vague and, after further research, believed they could implement the policy.

But they decided the legislation wasn't worth fighting for, and they changed their focus. Now, they are pushing for a compromise in which Jones would have to gain approval from UISG to use the money. Student government would also have to ask the administration to dip into the account.

The compromise is a small step in the larger picture of giving UISG more power and making university officials more accountable, Klenske said.

Jones, who is in South Africa at the United Nations Conference on Racism, has not been recep-

Bikers, beware – Iowa City police are watching you

By Casey Wagner
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police say they are stepping up patrols in downtown to catch cyclists who violate the law by riding their bikes on the Pedestrian Mall.

Police will increase bike and foot patrols within the next two weeks and issue more $28 tickets to violators, said Sgt. Mike Brotherton. Police will also impound parked bikes if they are not chained to bike racks, he said.

"The people who ride bikes downtown on sidewalks and through the Ped Mall are a safety issue," Brotherton said. "Right now, we want to go easy on all the new students. However, if an officer suspects that you've been here a while, then you'll get a ticket." City law requires bicyclists to walk their bikes when in the central business district. Skateboards, scooters, and roller blades are also prohibited downtown.

More bicyclists are taking short-cuts through the Ped Mall or riding on sidewalks to avoid street traffic, police said. Those people have received warnings, but Brotherton said police are now getting tougher on bicyclists because of the risk they pose to senior citizens and pedestrians.

Iowa City resident Dennis Ungs said he always walks his bike whenever he's downtown because of the dangers encountered on the sidewalks.

"It's just common sense," he said. UI senior Drew Selim said he has had no problems with riding in the street when bicycling to and from classes.

"It's more dangerous to ride on the sidewalk," he said.

Police will also be watching for dog-walking violations downtown, Brotherton said. City law prohibits walking dogs downtown, with an exception made for seeing-eye dogs. Owners of unleashed dogs walked outside of the downtown area also face tickets, as do people who litter or drop cigarette butts on the Ped Mall, Brotherton said.

pus with the goal of seeing whether expanding the program for good is feasible.

A wide-ranging initiative that they say will increase campus safety. Plans include unveiling a Web site that puts all information on campus safety into one place. That information will be turned into a CD-ROM to be distributed to incoming students.

Alleged killer of seven arrested, held in Sioux City

Associated Press

SIoux CITY, Iowa — The brother of the man accused of killing a Sioux City mother and five children and a local businessman said he thought his sibling had turned his life around.

"He started to go to church. He got a job," said Jason Moss, the younger brother of Adam Moss, who has been charged with seven counts of first-degree murder.

"He was different than before," Jason Moss said of his brother. "I sensed a change in him. He seemed to have been rehabilitated."

Jason Moss, 21, said his family was shocked to hear Adam was charged with the slayings of Leticia Aguilar, her five children, and businessman Ronald Fish.

"We want people to know how sorry we are this happened. We can't offer any answers," Jason Moss said. "I never could have believed my brother could have done something like this."

He speculated that drugs may have played a role.

"It had to be due to drugs. ... Drugs can cause demonic influence. ... Even though he's my brother, he needs to answer for what he did. I love him, but I don't love what he did," Jason Moss said.

He said he and his four brothers and a younger sister grew up in Sioux City, the children of Mary and Donald Moss, who now are divorced. A younger brother was killed in a car accident. Adam Moss was the middle child. He turns 24 Wednesday.

"When he began to reach his teenage years, he started hanging out with his friends. He got in with the wrong crowd," Jason Moss said. "I knew he was getting into trouble — breaking into homes and cars."

He attended an alternative school for two years, returned to West High School, then dropped out before graduation.

Nati Harnik/Associated Press

Law-enforcement officers lead Adam Matthew Moss, center, to a patrol car on Aug. 31 in Sioux City, Iowa.

Jason Moss said after he bought his house in Morning-side last November, Adam Moss moved in and agreed to help make the house payments.

Adam Moss worked at Smurfit-Stone Container Co. where he met Aguilar, 31. About three months ago, Adam Moss didn't come home at nights anymore. He said his brother stayed with his mother and then with Aguilar.

He said Adam Moss considered Aguilar's children "his kids."

Adam Moss had fathered several children by other women and had discussed paying to help Aguilar reverse a tubal ligation to have a child with her.

To get the money, his brother may have returned to his old ways.

"He admitted to a previous girlfriend he started back on drugs — cocaine. And he may have been dealing cocaine to get money," Jason Moss said.

He said he wasn't aware of any problems Adam Moss was having until mid-August, when Adam Moss conveyed a rage Jason Moss said he had not seen before.

"I knew something was not right," Jason Moss said.

On Aug. 22, Adam Moss called Jason Moss at work and they argued about a car that Adam Moss had left parked at Jason Moss's house. Adam Moss became angry and threatened Jason Moss.

"He said he would give me major problems and said he was going to 'snap' on me," Jason Moss said.

After that, Jason Moss obtained a temporary restraining order against his brother. District Judge Philip S. Dandos granted a permanent protective order Aug. 30 in a hearing that Adam Moss was supposed to attend, but did not.

That evening, the bodies of Aguilar and her five children were discovered in their home, and Fish was found murdered at his home.

Police officers contacted Jason Moss later that evening and told him he was in danger.

"I guess they thought Adam might show up here. They also said my mother had to leave her house," Jason said.

That night, his mother stayed at the home of their minister and his wife. Jason said he has been staying with friends, mainly to avoid the dozens of reporters who have been hounding him.

Beware of bites, officials warn

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Health and agriculture officials are warning Iowans to take precautions against mosquito bites because various types of encephalitis, spread by mosquitoes, have been found in the state.

One type of the disease, rare in the state, has been found in horses in northeastern Iowa.

Secretary of Agriculture Patty Judge urged Iowa horse breeders and owners to vaccinate their animals for Eastern Equine Encephalomyelitis.

A case of the disease was reported in northeastern Iowa; several have been reported in south-central Minnesota and western Wisconsin.

The disease is spread through a virus carried by mosquitoes; it affects the central nervous system. It can be transmitted to humans by an infected mosquito but is not transmitted between horses and humans directly.

"The key to preventing this disease is focus around vaccinating horses and controlling mosquitos,

Judge said. "I am urging all horse owners to have their animals vaccinated."

Symptoms in horses include drowsiness, circling, irregular gait, inability to swallow, inability to get up after being down, and convulsions or seizures.

State veterinarian John Schiltz said it is unusual to have the disease in Iowa. Vaccination is the most effective preventative measure, he said.

Even though a horse may have been vaccinated earlier this year, if it has been six months or longer, another vaccination may be necessary, he said.

The Iowa Department of Public Health said the equine encephalomyelitis is 90 percent fatal to horses.

In humans, though extremely rare, the disease is 30 percent fatal for those who show symptoms.

Many humans bitten by a mosquito carrying the virus show no symptoms.

While there are not symptoms that point only to encephalitis, some signs that indicate the disease in humans are headaches, fever, excessive tiredness, and a stiff neck.

Victims may also have seizures.

Only a blood or spinal-fluid test can confirm the disease.

There is no treatment or human vaccine for most mosquito-borne illnesses, said Dr. Patricia Quinlisk, the state epidemiologist.

"On rare occasions, encephalitis can be fatal or lead to serious disability, so Iowans need to reduce their exposure to mosquitos," she said.

Quinlisk recommended limiting outdoor activity at dusk, when mosquitos are most active, using repellents containing DEET, wearing long-sleeved shirts and long pants, and draining standing water around homes to reduce mosquito-breeding areas.

Quinlisk said state health and agriculture officials continue to monitor the state for signs of West Nile Virus, another mosquito-borne brain infection. The illness has not been seen in Iowa or neighboring states, she said.

Bush's holiday message: I care

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

KAUKAUNA, Wis. — President Bush said Monday there are "some problems on the horizon" for the economy, but he promised American workers during a Labor Day trip to union country that better times lie ahead.

"Even though people are hurting today — and I know they are — I'm confident with the basic underpinnings of the economy. I'm confident we can recover," Bush told several hundred unionized carpenters as he sought to make inroads with a traditionally Democratic voting bloc.

He said the economy is not "clicking on all cylinders."

The eight-hour trip to Detroit and this blue-collar Green Bay suburb reflected a new strategy to help Bush weather the political effects of an economic slowdown. He will travel to several key states this month to express sympathy with hard-bitten workers while using the budget showdown in Washington to frame his economic message.

Bush's father, former President Bush, lost his 1992 re-election bid after then-Arkansas Bill Clinton portrayed the incumbent as out-of-touch with middle-class workers struggling with a sour economy.

Determined to avoid his father's plight, Bush used the word "concerned" at least three times. Twice, he said he was worried about laid-off workers and their families. His message: I care.

"We've got some problems on the horizon. One of my jobs is not to shrink from the problems but to deal with them," Bush said. "On this Labor Day, I've got to tell you, I'm concerned about working families. I'm concerned about our economy. It's not as strong as it should be."

He said the economy has grown by 1 percent in the past year.

"That's not good enough for America," Bush told a friendly crowd at the Northern Wisconsin Council of Carpenters before heading to Detroit to attend a Teamsters picnic, where the reception was less enthusiastic.

Some White House aides say they are concerned that using the bully pulpit to express sympathy with troubled workers could exaggerate the economic situation, lower consumer confidence, reduce consumer spending, and further damage the economy.

The president and his political advisers determined this summer that he could not afford politically to play down the economic woes, aides said. The officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said Bush believes he has struck the right balance in expressing both sympathy and confidence.

Bush is courting organized labor and rank-and-file union members, hoping to drive wedges wherever possible in a key Democratic voting bloc. His schedulers carefully chose the friendliest possible audiences; the carpenter's union broke away from the Democratic-leaning AFL-CIO last year, and the Teamsters have a history of supporting GOP candidates.

Fox seeks better deal for migrants

By Mark Stevenson
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Mexican President Vicente Fox will set out today for Washington, hoping to sell the U.S. Congress on the first "integrated" approach to migration: temporary work visas for Mexicans, amnesty for undocumented migrants, and U.S. aid for their impoverished hometowns.

Despite the unprecedented close relationship that has grown between Fox and President Bush, who is playing host to Fox at his first state dinner, the visit really has as much to do with the two nations' congresses as with their presidents.

Fox needs a victory on the migration issues to show Mexico's restive, opposition-dominated Congress that he's making progress on some fronts. And, in a planned address to a joint session, he needs to persuade the U.S. Congress that his plan will stem the tide of migration — not turn it into a flood.

"Fox is going to put to the test all the democratic credentials and the confidence in his government he says he has won in the U.S.," columnist Roberto Zamarripa wrote of the trip in the daily newspaper Reforma.

The problem for Fox, Zamarripa noted, "is a conflict of timing."

"The 2002 elections are far more important for U.S. legislators than the time frame of a new Mexican government trying to get off on the right foot."

Fox had to endure severe questioning during his state-of-the-nation speech to Mexico's Congress on Sept. 1, where opposition legislators held up signs reading "Blah, blah, blah" and accused him of accomplishing little during his first nine months in office.

Moreover, Fox has had to defend his new, closer relationship with the United States at a time when the U.S. economic downturn has cost hundreds of thousands of jobs in Mexico, quashing what Fox had promised would be the economic fruit of cooperation.

The visit also comes as other thorny bilateral issues have surfaced for Fox.

U.S. agricultural imports have helped spark a crisis in Mexican farming, the U.S. Congress continues to stall on allowing Mexican trucks to use the country's roadways, and the United States is demanding repayment of a water debt from drought-stricken northern Mexico.

Migration — like water, trucking, and trade disputes — is a political hot potato that the U.S. Congress would rather not deal with. On the other hand, Fox's administration sees a migration accord as a chance to right historic wrongs and change the whole bilateral relationship.

FBI finds new head

By Matt Kelley
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Robert Mueller, who starts work as head of the FBI today, takes over an agency that faces more than a half-dozen investigations and backlash from a series of recent embarrassments.

Mueller, a former top Justice Department official, has said the bureau will admit to its mistakes, hold agents and managers accountable, and work to fix problems.

Congress, the Justice Department, and outside experts are reviewing several FBI blunders, including:

—The case of veteran FBI counterintelligence agent Robert Hanssen, who was caught and confessed earlier this year to selling secrets to the Russians.

—Why the FBI took until just before Timothy McVeigh's scheduled execution to turn over hundreds of documents to the Oklahoma City bomber's lawyers. The problem prompted Ashcroft to delay McVeigh's execution for more than a month.

—Whether top FBI officials are immune from punishment while agents take the blame. Justice Department Inspector General Glenn Fine is also looking into claims of retaliation against the agents assigned to review the FBI's handling of the bloody 1992 standoff with white separatists in Ruby Ridge, Idaho.

A report earlier this year by prosecutor Randy Bellows was highly critical of the FBI's handling of the spy investigation of Los Alamos National Laboratory scientist Wen Ho Lee.

Bellows wrote that the FBI botched the Lee investigation by relying too heavily on Energy Department suspicions of the Taiwan-born nuclear scientist. Lee was never charged with spying, and the criminal case against him for mishandling nuclear secrets crumbled after a federal judge accused FBI agents of making misleading statements.

Lee, who had been charged with 59 felonies and held in solitary confinement for nine months, pleaded guilty to one charge. He was set free last year.

By Anne Gearan

WASHINGTON — Most workdays, Clarence Thomas beats his eight Supreme Court colleagues to the office. He drives his black Corvette through the suburban-Virginia dawn and scoots into the court's guarded garage by 6 a.m.

After a decade on the nation's highest court, Thomas has settled into a comfortable routine that balances the court's heavy workload of reading and writing with a busy life of travel, lecturing, and raising a young grandnephew.

He has also found a comfortable home on the court's far right. He remains in the shadow of ideological bunkmate Antonin Scalia but is willing to write separate manifestos that stake a more absolutist position on cases involving religion, free speech, and other issues.

The court term that begins this fall offers Thomas, the second black to serve on the court, another chance to rule against affirmative action. He steadfastly opposes it as an insult to the values of hard work and self-reliance.

"Justice Thomas enjoys marching to his own drummer," said Clint Bolick, the vice president of the libertarian law firm Institute for Justice. Bolick has known Thomas since they worked together in the 1980s.

Comfort has not come cheaply for the man whose searingly public job interview in the fall of 1991 featured naughty words, allegations of lewd office come-ons, and Thomas' famous, furious charge that he was the victim of a "high-tech lynching."

An array of liberal and civil-rights groups had opposed Thomas from the start and described him as a potentially dangerous far-right extremist. But 10 years later is it probably the surprise allegations of Thomas' young accuser, Anita Hill, that linger in most Americans' minds.

Thomas denied Hill's allegations, President Bush stuck by him, and Thomas was confirmed by a 52-48 vote. He took his seat in October 1991.

"He has been every bit as conservative and more as his critics thought he would be," said Earl Maltz, a constitutional-law professor and Supreme Court specialist at Rutgers University's law school. "I think he has also been more of an intellectual force to be reckoned with than people thought he would be."

Thomas is still haunted and aggrieved by the fight over his nomination, associates say, and the whispers of tokenism and intellectual inadequacy that persisted when he took the bench.

Reno steps toward a run

By Ken Thomas
Associated Press

MIAMI — Janet Reno plans to take the first official step today in the race for Florida governor, setting up a possible matchup between the former U.S. attorney general and the president's brother, the Associated Press has learned.

Reno will open a campaign account to enable her to raise money for the gubernatorial bid, two Democratic sources said Monday. The sources, who are close to Reno, spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Earlier Monday, Reno said she planned to announce whether she would seek the office.

"I think you should stay tuned," she told reporters at a Labor Day picnic near her home in southwest Miami-Dade County.

Her face shaded by a wide-brimmed straw hat on a steamy afternoon, Reno said she had not "made up my mind yet" on the race and planned to make a few last-minute calls to supporters.

"People want somebody who will lead with independence, with strength, who will work hard for what is important," she added.

Three union members handed her an anti-Jeb Bush T-shirt outside the small pavilion where 40 members of the South Dade Democratic Club gathered for hot dogs and hamburgers. The words "Jeb 2002" were circled and crossed out on the T-shirt with the words "Nuff Said" emblazoned underneath.

"I think it's a perfect fit," Reno said with a smile.

She is the only potential Democratic candidate who has yet to open a campaign account. She has said she would do so only if she plans to seek the nomination.

Polls have shown Reno beating other Democrats seeking the nomination but losing to Bush, who is running for re-election. Democrats are watching the race closely because many believe Bush worked behind the scenes to help his brother beat Al Gore in the Florida balloting and recounts. The governor has denied the allegations.

For the last four months, Reno has traveled the state in her red pickup truck, talking to voters at small gatherings and sounding out a potential candidacy through radio and television interviews.

Some of the controversies that dogged Reno during her term as President Clinton's attorney general could resurface during the race, including her ordering the assault at Waco in 1993 and her approval of the seizure of Elian Gonzalez from his Miami relatives last year.

California gubernatorial race sees more money, candidates

By Alexa Haussler
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — With big money already raised for the 2002 governor's race and at least one wealthy candidate still mulling a run, California could be set to break its own national spending record for a statewide campaign.

More than a year before the November general election, Gov. Gray Davis is on pace to raise $50 million and is already approaching the $35 million he spent for his 1998 campaign.

During that race, four candidates shelled out a combined $120 million, including two wealthy Democrats who outspent Davis in the primary. It stands as the nation's most expensive non-presidential political campaign, said Ed Bender, the research director for the National Institute on Money in State Politics in Helena, Mont.

This time, Davis faces no challenger. But his GOP rivals say running against the fund-raising juggernaut is going to take tens of millions of dollars.

"We know in order to be a viable candidate, we certainly will have to be in Gray Davis' ballpark," said Bob Taylor, a campaign consultant for Los Angeles businessman William E. Simon Jr.

Simon, the son of former Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, has tapped into the Wall Street network both he and his father worked for years and raised $3.1 million in the first six months of the year. His goal is to collect at least $20 million.

"If he can't raise a significant amount of money, he's going to take a good, hard look" at whether to stay in the race, Taylor said.

Secretary of State Bill Jones, also an announced GOP candidate, battled sagging support from Republicans in the first half of the year and raised less than $1 million — far less than what analysts say he'll need.

Corruption charges dog Spanish leader

By Jerome Socolovsky
Associated Press

MADRID, Spain — Prime Minister Jose Maria Aznar's government and party denied allegations of corruption Monday as a $100 million investment-fund scam threw his conservative leadership on the defensive.

Opposition leaders want to know why regulators failed to prevent the Gescartera investment fund from squandering the savings of major institutions, including the national organization for the blind and several Roman Catholic dioceses.

A parliamentary investigation is to begin this week. Meanwhile, Aznar's allies said the government deserves credit for breaking up the scam.

"This government was the one who discovered this scandal," Javier Arenas, the Popular Party secretary general, told reporters after an executive committee meeting with Aznar. He promised that the government's own investigation would reach every "dark corner, no matter how tiny."

Newspapers have revealed that the former deputy treasury minister, Enrique Gimenez-Reyna, had money invested in Gescartera and that his sister was one of its senior managers.

The government has also been embarrassed by revelations that the president of the National Stock Market Commission, Pilar Valiente, lunched twice over the past year with Gescartera's 35-year-old chief shareholder, Antonio Rafael Camacho.

Camacho, who was sanctioned in 1999 for accounting irregularities, has been jailed since June 16, a day after Gescartera's operations were suspended by the agency, the equivalent of America's Securities and Exchange Commission.

The inquiry was demanded by Socialist leader Jose Luis Rodriguez Zapatero, who last month called on the political leaders responsible for the regulatory oversight to resign.

Finance Minister Rodrigo Rato recalled that the Popular Party pushed for transparency when the long-ruling Socialists were implicated in a series of scandals that led to their defeat in a 1996 election, when Aznar ran on the promise of clean government.

"The Socialists have apparently forgotten who were the deceivers in order to wear down the government, or to settle political scores," said Rato.

Founded in 1992, Gescartera lured 2,000 investors with promises of returns as high as 10 percent in what has been described by some as a classic pyramid investment scheme.

Growing numbers of investors complained that Gescartera and its smooth-talking salespeople were slow to make interest payments or return investments to clients who became fed up and wanted out.

Camacho said the $98 million in missing money had been invested in two U.S.-based firms. Later he said he'd lost it all in the Spanish stock market.

Jose Maria Arroyo, the head of the ONCE Foundation for the blind, told a board meeting Monday that its members had been cheated out of $2.9 million in investments placed by two senior foundation officials, who have since resigned.

He said that ONCE's image "as a leader in the social integration of people with disabilities has been seriously damaged."

Another day of death in the Middle East

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Four bombs exploded on the streets of Jerusalem early Monday, and Israel responded with a helicopter strike that sent missiles through the roof of a Palestinian security building in the West Bank.

In a day of violence on several fronts, two Palestinians were killed and at least 20 were wounded, while at least six Israelis were hurt.

In the center of Hebron, Israeli soldiers and Palestinian gunmen battled Monday evening. Two Palestinians were killed, and approximately 20 were injured in widespread Israeli gunfire, the Palestinians said. Two Israeli soldiers were hurt in an explosion, one seriously, the army said.

South of the West Bank city, a Jewish settler was shot and seriously wounded when his car was ambushed by Palestinian gunmen, the army and rescue services said.

Hebron has been the scene of repeated clashes throughout the recent Mideast fighting. About 500 Jewish settlers live in several small enclaves in the city, home to about 130,000 Palestinians.

Israel's Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said he was still trying to arrange truce talks with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat. Nothing was set, but speculation focused on a possible meeting this week in Italy, where both have been invited to a conference.

Asked whether a cease-fire could be reached, Peres said: "That is my hope."

"I think [Arafat] also needs it. The uprising is not yielding so much fruit. On the other hand, it is yielding more and more fatalities, unfortunately, and is causing great hardship," Peres told Israel radio.

Even if a meeting were arranged, the prospects of a breakthrough to end 11 months of fighting are slim. Peres and Arafat have met twice in recent months, but they have failed to reduce the bloodshed.

In a bid to bring the two sides together, European Union foreign-policy chief Javier Solana met with Palestinian negotiators Monday; he planned to hold talks with the Israelis.

Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon took his case to Moscow, where he will meet with President Vladimir Putin today.

The prime minister wants to build on the existing relationship between the two nations and explain "Israel's outstanding need to fight against terror," Sharon aide Raanan Gissin said.

Russia has largely left the Middle East stage to the United States despite Moscow's official role as a co-sponsor of the peace process. Arab leaders, among them Jordan's King Abdullah II, who was in Moscow last week, have urged Russia to get more involved.

In Jerusalem, three of the four bombs went off in and around French Hill, a neighborhood in the northern part of the city built on land Israel captured in the 1967 war. Two explosions occurred before dawn, startling sleeping residents but causing no injuries. Shortly before 8 a.m., a bomb placed in a car exploded, injuring one woman, setting the vehicle on fire, and scattering debris in the street.

The fourth bomb was placed in a municipal pickup truck in French Hill, police said. A municipal worker, unaware of the bomb, drove the vehicle early Monday to the Gilo neighborhood, which has been the scene of Palestinian sniper attacks, and that bomb exploded just before 8 a.m. Two people were slightly injured.

NEWPORT, R.I. — The president of Salve Regina University has come up with an unusual solution to the school's housing crunch — she's invited four freshmen to bunk with her.

The four women, who will begin classes on Wednesday, will be living in chambers of the president's house normally reserved for distinguished alumni and special guests.

Housing officials at this 1,800-student Roman Catholic school said they were left more than 20 beds shy of what they need for the school year, thanks to a record freshman class and more returning students than expected. They converted doubles into triples and remade student lounges into dorm rooms, but they still faced a shortage.

That's when the president, Sister M. Therese Antone, suggested that she'd take in the four freshmen — among the last to pay their housing deposits.

Christine Otero, from Shrub Oak, N.Y., arrived on campus early for field-hockey practice and got a chance to check out her new home — the living and dining rooms, three bedrooms, and two full baths, not to mention a VCR, microwave, and refrigerator at least twice the size of the squat fridges usually found in dorm rooms.

When I walked in, I was like, "Wow! I can't believe I'm staying here. Is this really a college campus?"

"When I walked in," Otero said, "I was like, 'Wow! I can't believe I'm staying here. Is this really a college campus?'"

The women will stay in the house until the school can find more housing, which could happen within a few weeks as some of the students expected to return don't show up.

Sister Antone, 62, said she's excited about having some young blood around her home, a wood-and-stone former carriage house built in 1912.

Former homeless man wins $1 million in McDonald's giveaway

HOLLY HILL, Fla. (AP) — A formerly homeless day-laborer had a happy meal at a McDonald's over the weekend.

McDonald's corporate managers awarded Patrick Collier with a $1 million prize they said was randomly given out as part of the restaurant chain's effort to restore consumer confidence in its sweepstakes promotions.

Managers approached Collier, 35, and his fiancée, 29-year-old Sandi Fabian, as they sat down just after 10 a.m. on Sept. 1 to have breakfast.

"I thought I had done something wrong, but I was confused when they handed me this certificate telling me I had won a million dollars," Collier said.

Collier and Fabian had been frequenting the restaurant for about six weeks and lived across the street in a hotel room they shared with Collier's mother. Just months ago, they were homeless, sleeping on cardboard boxes and earning $50 a day as laborers when they could find work.

McDonald's said the restaurant in Holly Hill, approximately five miles north of Daytona Beach, was one of five selected at random to distribute five $1 million grand prizes. Fifty people will also be given $100,000 awards during the giveaway.

Elderly nuns serve time, their consciences

By Jay Hughes
Associated Press

PEKIN, Ill. — They wear prison-issue green clothes, but Dorothy Hennessey, Gwen Hennessey, and Elizabeth McKenzie do not blend in with the rest of the prisoners at Pekin Federal Prison Camp.

The most obvious difference is their ages. The average age of a prisoner at the facility is 40; Dorothy Hennessey is 88, her sister is 68, and McKenzie is 71. There are other differences, which are not as visible. While most of the inmates are in prison for crimes such as drug offenses, theft, fraud, and robbery, these three women are serving six months each for repeatedly trespassing on military property during protests of a U.S. Army school for Latin American soldiers at Fort Benning in Georgia.

They're also Catholic nuns, and the combination of their ages and religious vows has drawn international attention to the women and support for their cause.

"I think the Army made the biggest mistake ever when they sent Dorothy to prison," McKenzie said.

They are among 26 people sent to prison for trespassing at Fort Benning during a November 2000 protest against School of the Americas, which is located on the base.

Critics contend graduates of the school have been linked to murder, torture, and other human-rights abuses. Military officials say the school's goal is to teach democratic principles to future Latin American leaders.

The three women have spent much of their lives working on civil rights and social issues, activities they continue to participate in within their own communities. They said they see their roles in School of the Americas Watch, an organization dedicated to shutting the school down, as an extension of that work and their religious beliefs.

I think the Army made the biggest mistake ever when they sent Dorothy to prison.

—Elizabeth McKenzie, a nun imprisoned for repeatedly trespassing on Fort Benning

That includes breaking the law. "The law of God is higher than the law of man. We were trained to follow our conscience," Gwen Hennessey said.

Their consciences led them to a lifestyle they did not want to experience. Before they were jailed, McKenzie had a private apartment in St. Paul, Minn., and the Hennessey sisters lived in a Dominican religious center in Dubuque.

They've traded those environments and the fellowship of their religious orders for cots in dormitory housing divided into 9- by 10-foot living spaces, each shared by two prisoners. The majority of their companions are felons; 63 percent are serving time for drug-related crimes.

Life at the prison camp, which has no bars or fences, is regimented. Days begin with breakfast at 6 a.m., followed by an inspection. Lunch is served at 11 a.m., and dinner comes after a 4:15 p.m. head count. Prisoners are free to move around the campus when not working.

Dorothy Hennessey said the 34 years she spent living in convents helped her adjust. "I'm not used to luxuries," she said.

Hennessey was returned to a halfway house in Dubuque on Aug. 31, where she will finish her prison term. Corrections officials said the federal prison was not able to meet the elderly nun's health-care needs. She was not moved because of any medical problems, they said.

Chilly reception for MTV in Windy City

By Martha Irvine
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Welcome to the real world, MTV.

That's the message in a Chicago neighborhood, where cast members from the network's latest installment of "The Real World" have had to contend with shouting protesters, graffiti calling them "DORKS," and even an unrelated shooting that ended with a dead man outside their building.

Now MTV is handing out its own dose of reality. Network officials are pressing charges against several people who demonstrated against the "reality-based" show because — in their eyes — it presents an unrealistic and overly posh view of young American life.

"They're trying to sell us an image of our lives," says Nato Thompson, one of 11 arrested protesters who showed up in court last week to face charges of disorderly conduct, among other things. "And if you don't agree with that image, you go to jail."

The charged include a 19-year-old pastry chef, a 22-year-old animator, and a 24-year-old college student.

Thompson, 29, an arts curator, spoke for the group. He claims he was arrested for simply writing the words "What is real?" in chalk on the sidewalk in front of "The Real World" building during a protest.

MTV officials in New York have declined to comment, saying that they don't want to influence how the cast members respond to their surroundings before filming finishes in November.

Normally, "The Real World" thrives on drama, at least on-screen. Earlier casts survived any number of spats, confessions, and breakdowns during episodes filmed in such cities as New York, Miami, and Los Angeles.

But MTV officials may have gotten more than they bargained for when they chose a three-story brick building on an avenue that is the dividing line between Chicago's trendy-yet-edgy Bucktown and Wicker Park neighborhoods, northwest of downtown Chicago. (One protester calls the digs "an impossibly swanky loft that none of my peers would be able to afford.")

The two neighborhoods, long known as an eclectic hodgepodge of artists, young professionals, and families, once had a reputation as one of the city's most diverse.

But in recent years, the mix of residents has turned progressively whiter and richer as hot-dog stands, thrift stores, and greasy-spoon diners have been replaced with upscale restaurants, salons, and bakeries.

The transformation has made the area a lightning rod for political debates — from gentrification and race relations to even more far-reaching issues like commercial globalization, evidenced by protests and window-smashings at a new Starbucks in Wicker Park earlier this year.

Trouble began at "The Real World" building in July after two men not related to the show were shot in a car that ended up outside its doorstep. One of the men died. The incident brought attention to the MTV show, and protests soon followed, along with graffiti hits, paint-splashings, and window-breaking.

The art major plans to attend the UI for two years. She hopes her boyfriend, a senior in high school, will attend the UI next year.

Caldwell eventually would like to enroll at the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York with the ultimate goal of becoming a fashion designer. She is lured by New York, she explained, because of its social climate and urban landscape.

And even further into the future: She has contemplated heading a progressive clothing chain and snuffing out the competition.

"I want to have a whole bunch of stores, a big chain store like the kind that suffocate all the little stores, so people go, 'I hate that store because they're so horrible,'" Caldwell said.

But Caldwell is busy learning that education comes before fashion. And buying books precedes education.

Caldwell went to the University Book Store five times during the first two days of classes.

When she first tried to buy her used Modern Astronomy book, they told her she didn't have the paperwork signed by her parents in the right campus location — Jessup Hall.

So Caldwell had to find the paperwork, get it to Jessup Hall, and then go back to buy her books. By the time she trekked to the bookstore, all the used textbooks were gone. She paid an extra $30.

"That's been the least happy part of all of it," she said.

And with a week under her belt, she's even starting to uncover major insights regarding the University. After eating at Burge Food Service the first day, she realized that she wanted to avoid any contact with tater-tot casserole. She now hikes to Hillcrest for a better meal.

"Maybe if Hillcrest burns down and I have no where else to eat, I will eat at Burge," she said.

Liz Van Deusen

Liz Van Deusen's first crush came when she was 15 years old, and her heart chose her best girlfriend. Shortly after coming to terms with her affection, she affirmed her homosexuality.

"I liked her forever," said Van Deusen, now an 18-year-old UI freshman. "I didn't want to admit it, but finally, I just did."

After her first week in college, however, her father only offers support for her educational endeavors. He has nothing to say about her sexual orientation.

"I support her going to school, and I support her in a lot of other ways," said Robert Van Deusen of River Forest, Ill. "I'm very proud of her and her scholastic achievements."

Van Deusen told her father she was a lesbian when she was 15 after dropping hints to soften the blow.

"He already knew, and he said that he couldn't condone it," she said. "He thought it was a choice I was making. But he told me that I was still his daughter and he would always love me. He wasn't going to kick me out of the house, but he wasn't marching next to me in a pride parade, either."

Van Deusen is a candid freshman and wants to see greater numbers of gays and lesbians being active on campus and embracing their homosexuality.

"I want to see kids come out, be a group, and be out in the community," she said. "People see that, and they become more comfortable. That's the biggest activist thing you can do as a member of the gay community, just be out and be proud."

Her friends recognize her enthusiasm and say Van Deusen is ready for the challenge of being an openly gay freshman.

"She's eager to meet people and eager to get involved," said UI sophomore Jessica Brackett. "That's about as ready as anyone can be."

Van Deusen, who is adopted, was born in Naples, Fla. When she was 11, her adopted mother died of pancreatic cancer.

Van Deusen was originally slated to attend DePaul University in Chicago before she changed her mind, saying she was concerned about how committed she could be to a school located in a major city.

Soon after deciding against DePaul, Van Deusen attended the National Conference of the Gay Lesbian Straight Education Network in downtown Chicago. At the conference, she met Brackett and UI sophomore Cara Dehart.

"They told me to come out and visit," she said. "I did, and I absolutely loved it. I was scared to come here at first, but now I'm ready to rock. I've been overindulging myself in the fact that there are so many things to get involved in."

Van Deusen has joined the UI Gay Lesbian Bisexual and Transgender Union and Iowa Women Instituting Social Change, among other groups. She hopes to play an integral role in the university and Iowa City gay community.

With one week down and four years to go, Van Deusen is excited about all the opportunities in front of her, even those that deal with matters of the heart.

"I'm currently single, but I either want to be totally in love or totally by myself," she said. "I don't want any flimsy-flimsy dating crap."

Squier said the anti-smoking group supports smoking restrictions because it encourages smokers to quit.

Last fall, the university banned smoking in all nine residence halls. Whether that restriction has had any effect on the number of smokers is unclear because the UI has not studied the issue in-depth, said Mary Ellen Sinnwell, the university's manager of residence life.

A Harvard study that appeared in the Journal of American College Health in March 2001 found that smoke-free dorms may help incoming non-smoking freshmen avoid tobacco addiction during college.

"Being substance-free has been very successful," Sinnwell said. "I think students are really pleased to live in a smoke-free environment. Students like not having to deal with the smell of smoke or with neighbors who smoke."

But Burge Hall resident Katie Cunconan said her smoking habit is worse now that she is in college.

"Every time I walk outside the dorms, I see people smoking, and it reminds me that I need a cigarette," the UI freshman said. "Now, I have more time between classes to smoke."

Cunconan said she wants to quit smoking within the next few months, but she does not plan to seek outside help. "I don't think I'm that addicted," she said.

Danger in the missile-defense plan

Consider it no surprise that the United States reversed its policy of Chinese nuclear non-proliferation over the weekend. In a world increasingly hostile to America's international policy, the Bush administration felt pressure to concede to China in hopes of rallying global support for its national missile defense system. The concession will allow China to increase its nuclear arsenal, and it accelerates the trend toward a more hostile world with more nuclear weapons in the hands of more governments.

When Bush announced his support of missile defense at the start of his tenure, he announced the arrival of unilateralism — an approach to foreign policy that keeps the United States engaged in world affairs in a self-interested way. Rather than first considering the possibly catastrophic downside that accompanies the growth of nuclear armaments and enemies, for instance, Bush has pushed forward with a plan that seems to consider only the interests of U.S. hegemony. If this unilateral approach isn't reversed, the United States could be alone in a world of enemies.

The announcement of the missile-defense plan angered states throughout Europe and in Russia, all of whom dread the prospects of an even larger military disadvantage in comparison with the United States. In addition, the plan threatens to break a treaty nearly 30 years old.

In 1972, President Richard Nixon and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev signed the Antiballistic Missile Treaty, which limited the development of defensive nuclear-weapon systems. With the missile-defense plan still moving forward, the treaty and trust between the two states are quickly being whittled away.

Now, the world has begun to respond. In recent months, relations between Russia and China have become more cordial. Even some NATO states, including Spain, have shown a high degree of disgust with the United States. And with the Cold War 10 years past, these states appear primed to find allies with more multilateral interests.

This situation is not historically unique. Early in the 1900s, Germany broke with the Concert of Europe by quickly building its arms. Soon after, France and England, two longtime enemies — similar to China and Russia today — signed a non-formal alliance in response to the arms race. France and Russia signed a similar agreement. In the next decade, those agreements strengthened in proportion to the threat offered by Germany. By 1914, tensions peaked, and the first shots of World War I rang.

If the United States hopes to avoid such a disastrous ending, the move toward unilateralism, the move toward unilateralism and the national missile defense plan needs to be reversed. The plan incites distrust and threatens states such as China and Russia. Our compromising with these countries is a solution — but a solution that will only bring more nuclear weapons in the hands of more states. The United States cannot prepare for peace while arming itself for war.

Dissent

Rogue threat necessitates defense

A missile-defense system for the United States is becoming more necessary as the likelihood that a rogue nation will use the threat of a nuclear attack keeps increasing. The recent agreement between the United States and China signifies an acceptance from both countries that the world of the future, and the threats that it will produce, can only be met by researching and developing a nuclear deterrence in a spirit of cooperation between countries.

Recent success in missile-defense testing have quieted some of the arguments that the administration should not proceed with its plans to deploy such a system. But by no means has criticism of the administration stopped entirely.

Critics' initial complaint against a missile-defense system was that it would not work. However, this criticism is now beginning to sound more and more like the arguments that people made against President Kennedy when he promised that our country would land a man on the moon before the end of the decade. America has a history of achieving the supposedly unachievable. And so the critics have shifted their complaints.

Now critics insist that the system cannot be made to work "perfectly." But any defense system that manages to shoot down or even deter the launch of a single weapon would easily be considered perfect by those who are saved from destruction.

The belief that a missile-defense system is somehow threatening to other countries is downright silly. The ability our country has to defend itself does not increase the likelihood of our being attacked or of the world plunging into war. Does a family that protects its home with a burglar system increase its likelihood of being robbed? Of course not.

The system that the administration wishes to deploy will benefit the safety of the whole world. It will remove from the table the ability of leaders, such as Saddam Hussein, to use the threat of a nuclear launch to exert their will. It is hard to imagine that Desert Shield would have been successful if Iraq could have held a European city hostage with the threat of a nuclear launch. And who knows what threats the future will hold?

The further adventures of Dick & His Shrubness

A lot of the time, it seems, we live in an insanely ludicrous world — or a ludicrously insane world, depending on which way the wind blows — a place with an address on Dylan's "Desolation Row" or a recipe concocted with equal parts Franz Kafka and Kurt Vonnegut.

At no time is this feeling stronger than when Stealth President Cheney's administration comes out with a policy decision.

Sometimes the policies that the Stealth President and his sidekick, His "What Me Worry" Shrubness, come up with verge on slapstick — the tax cut, for instance. They originally concocted it during the economic boom, and the spin His Fraudulency put on it was the cut would give Americans back their money. Then the economy tanked, and they were forced to invent a new spin: The tax cut was a recession-fighting measure.

It's the same tax cut, no matter which clothes they dress it in; it gives tax breaks the size of the Titanic to the wealthy and a dollop to the middle-income folks, and it basically devours all of the federal government's surplus, as the Congressional Budget Office recently pointed out.

And most of the cuts don't even take effect until five or six years down the line. How does that fight a recession now, you ask? Perhaps Bozo the Clown could explain it to you. You can reach him at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.

Pure slapstick. Well, OK, maybe impure slapstick.

And then there are those Stealth President policies that are downright pernicious. Drilling for oil in the Alaska Wildlife Refuge, for instance. Or encouraging China to build more nuclear missiles.

That's right. Reversing decades of U.S. policy, the Stealth President administration is saying the United States has no objection if China wants to expand its nuclear arsenal from its current tens of missiles that could hit America to thousands.

Cheney and his cohorts are using this as a sop to overcome Chinese objections about the proposed U.S. missile-defense system, which has sort of become the family pet around the White House. It hasn't learned to play fetch yet, but it might someday, and in the meantime, the Stealth President's cronies in the defense industry get billions to play with.

The Chinese-missile policy does, of course, put the United States in the rather odd position of encouraging a foreign power to build more nuclear missiles so that America can build a missile-defense system to defend itself against those nuclear missiles. Thus the Cheney administration would ensure stability and safety.

Of course, once the Chinese start building more nukes, the Russians will build more nukes. Not to mention that if the Chinese stockpile more missiles, the Indians will stockpile more missiles, which means that, just to be on the safe side, the United States will build more missiles because everybody else is, and bingo — we've got another arms race.

But we'll be safer. Why do I continue to get this feeling that we're living in a Kafka story?

But as idiotic as their decisions have been, no Stealth President/Shrubness policy stoops to the level achieved by their Global Gag Rule. This gem, which was the first thing the administration did upon assuming office, prohibits any foreign non-governmental organization receiving U.S. funds from counseling women about abortion. They're not allowed to lobby for reform laws in their countries that would make abortion safer. They're not even permitted to mention the word.

The Center for Reproductive Law and Policy estimates that hundreds of thousands of poor women around the world could die from unsafe abortions because of the gag rule. Some of the countries already affected include Bangladesh, Bolivia, Peru, South Africa, Tanzania, Turkey, and Nepal, according to The Nation. The more you see the effect of the right wing's anti-abortion fanaticism, the more you understand who the true butchers of the world are.

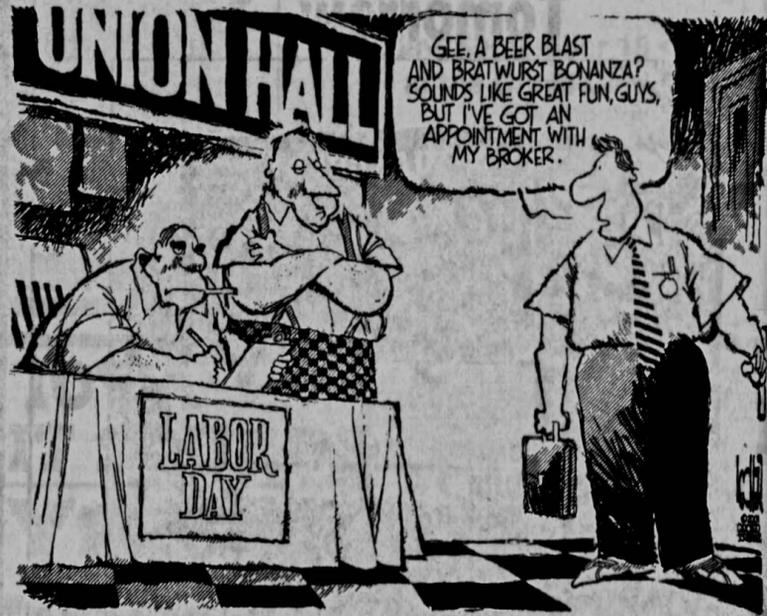

What is also pernicious about the Global Gag Rule is that it imposes free-speech restrictions on Third World countries that would be illegal in this country. It is a perfect example of right-wing arrogance: The First Amendment is good for us but bad for you. Democracy is a tricky thing, so we're going to export it to you in small doses.

This from an administration that was selected because we forgot to export democracy to Florida.

There's a play coming to town called The Vagina Monologues, which is, I hear, about empowering women. It's fairly controversial; apparently, some people are scared of empowered women.

Better The Vagina Monologues than His Fraudulency's Vagina Dictations.

Letters to the Editor

Dialogue cramped by letter restrictions

I have always been disappointed in the DI's Letter to the Editor section. After reading your policy on letters, I finally understood why your paper has never fostered any great debates or even managed to garner much response to any real issues.

A policy that prohibits a person from writing more than one letter per month is uncomfortably restrictive. Few people want to stick their necks out if they won't be able to respond to their detractors again a week later.

You discourage the kind of healthy, witty debate I have seen in the Iowa State Daily in my hometown of Ames. In that paper, everyone from elementary students to college students to grandparents to far-away alumni gets involved. The Aug. 30 DI, in contrast, contained three letters. Two were from Iowa City residents (maybe students, maybe not) and one was from Kentucky. It looked as though your Letters section was mere runoff from the Press-Citizen.

The other major problem with your Letters section is its size. You tuck it into whatever tiny corner is left over after your long-winded columnists and editorial board have finished often-pointless rambles. This is not conducive to getting people to notice or care about the letters. If we, as readers, know it is pointless to send in a letter, how likely are we to bother? Imagine the potential of The Vagina Monologues debate which has just started in the paper. It could cover some interesting new ground — very relevant ground that I'm sure people of both sexes would love to get into. But nip it in the bud with restrictive letter policies, and we will all miss out on an orgy of debate.

The Vagina Letters, Act 2

I write in response to Holly Eggleston's column (DI, Aug. 29) regarding The Vagina Monologues and associated V-Week activities. She characterizes V-Week activities as making women appear "bitter, insane, and militant." What is insane, bitter, or militant about going to a health-care facility and learning more about how one's body works and what your healthy female genitalia look like? What is insane, bitter, or militant about attending a performance of a Broadway play about the wonders of women's bodies? Sounds more like effective preventative health care and high-quality entertainment to me.

The V-Week activities and performances are not about male bashing. They are about celebrating the power and beauty of the female body. Saying that one peach (woman) is beautiful does not mean that the rest of the fruit in the basket are horrid (recognizing the spectrum of gender and that the male/female dichotomy is not reality).

The performance also touches on the facts of sexual violence in our society and how it affects individuals. Eggleston is lucky if she has not been sexually assaulted. One out of three women will be raped before she is 18 years old. This is an actuality that makes me angry. It frustrates me that as a woman, Eggleston is not also angered by this.

My anger does not make me unreasonable or unprofessional or hateful of men. My anger is part of what makes me want to be constructively involved in making this world a better place. My anger makes me grateful to work at the Emma Goldman Clinic — a feminist health-care facility in which clients get an education about their bodies and receive nonjudgmental, high-quality health care.

Yes, you may hear some anger within The Vagina Monologues. You will also hear about the joy and fullness of womanliness. You will hear about the excitement that can come from knowing more about your body and about female orgasm (yes!).

For more information about The Vagina Monologues and V-Week activities, go to <http://www.uiowa.edu/hancher/vweek.html>. Come, participate, and decide for yourself.

Karen Kubby
executive director, Emma Goldman Clinic

I am a single, Latina, straight, liberal, Christian female writing in response to Holly Eggleston's editorial. I hope that is enough classification for Eggleston as she seems to need to classify people as well as herself.

Eggleston was not correct in her assumptions about The Vagina Monologues. This play is a celebration of womanhood, not a man-bashing bitch fest, as she seems to believe. Perhaps she will take the time to better prepare herself next time she writes an editorial.

As for her musings on the V-Week activities, she is again sorely misinformed. She may not agree with what goes on at the Emma Goldman Clinic or Planned Parenthood, but it is important for women to know how to do self-exams and have yearly pap tests. These establishments provide services at no cost for women who might not otherwise be able to afford it, and for that they should be applauded.

I hope Ms. Eggleston never has to see a loved one suffer from breast or cervical cancer because they (a) did not know how to do a self exam or (b) could not afford a pap test.

As for the other events that week, they are asking for nothing less than for women, in this country as well as others, to be able to live without worry of a physical or sexual assault. If Eggleston sees that as an insane request than I would surely dislike living in a world run by her.

I, too, grew up in a happy household with amazing parents and I, too, love men. But I have been fortunate to have been surrounded by men who have treated me with respect and dignity. Not all women have been as fortunate as Eggleston or myself, and rather than ridiculing those women, perhaps Eggleston should reach out to them and learn to understand and respect their feelings.

Diana Ruiz
UI junior

What I found to be the most disturbing aspect of Holly Eggleston's article is that rather than trying to understand what V-Week is actually about, Eggleston constantly relies on her stereotypes to put women into basically two groups: "conservative women" or "hemp-wearing women with hairy underarms."

This article read as a wake-up call to me that there are still people who are so into their own lives that they can't stop to think that maybe, just maybe, everyone's differences should be embraced rather than thrown into a category that society has put upon everyone.

V-Week gives many women the chance to collaborate in love, not the hating of men or any women with different viewpoints. I believe that Eggleston does not realize that just because a woman is proud to be a woman does not mean that she hates men.

And for the record, I, too, "am a white, straight girl who grew up in a happy home with amazing parents," but I have found a reason to be angry. I'm angry that there are people who take their time to use negative words and emotions as their way to make a point.

And, oh yeah, I think "a single red rose on the front seat" would be nice, but wouldn't it be even nicer if women would stop belittling other women just because of their beliefs and differences?

U.N. seeks more extraditions

By Dusan Stojanovic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — The chief U.N. war-crimes prosecutor came to Yugoslavia on Monday to seek more extraditions of high-profile suspects, including Serbia's figurehead President Milan Milutinovic.

As Carla Del Ponte landed in Belgrade, more than 1,000 supporters of war-crimes suspect Slobodan Milosevic gathered downtown, chanting "Freedom for Slobodan!" and denouncing the U.N. tribunal they perceive as anti-Serb. Milosevic was extradited to the court in the Netherlands in June.

Del Ponte's daunting mission is to make the new, pro-democracy leadership in Belgrade hand over all of about 15 men indicted for alleged atrocities in the 1998-99 crackdown on ethnic Albanians in Kosovo and two previous Balkan conflicts.

Most of the suspects are at large in Serbia, the main republic of the Yugoslav federation.

Despite a major change in the political climate here since Milosevic was ousted as Yugoslavia's president in a popular revolt last October, new President Vojislav Kostunica and others have been reluctant to comply with the tribunal's demands.

"Del Ponte can demand whatever she wants, but the Serbian government doesn't have to discuss it," Serbian Justice Minister Vladan Batic told independent B-92 radio hours before Del Ponte's arrival.

The hand-over of Milosevic deepened rifts among the country's new leaders. Kostunica maintains that Milosevic's extradition was unconstitutional.

Serbia's Prime Minister Zoran Djindjic supported Milosevic's extradition, saying it opened the way for more than $1 billion in Western aid. However, he has indicated he opposes further extraditions.

Del Ponte will start official meetings today to urge the hand-over of Milutinovic and others, including former Yugoslav Army commander Col. Gen. Dragoljub Ojdanic, former Serbian Interior Minister Vlatko Stojiljkovic, and former Deputy Prime Minister Nikola Sainovic.

While pledging to meet some of the U.N. tribunal's demands and suggesting that some war-crimes trials can be held locally, Djindjic and others say that Milutinovic is protected from extradition by his presidential immunity.

Most of Milosevic's associates lost power along with him, but Milutinovic was allowed to remain president of Serbia as long as he refrained from appearing in public or exerting influence. Del Ponte insists his immunity does not apply to the U.N. court in the Hague.

Serbian officials suggested they will press demands that the U.N. court indict Croats, Bosnian Muslims, and Kosovo Albanians they suspect of war crimes against Serbs in the Balkan wars of the past decade. Most of the suspects indicted by the court have been ethnic Serbs.

Fearful first day in N. Ireland

By Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Terrified Roman Catholic schoolgirls clung to their parents Monday as riot police held back crowds of angry Protestants trying to keep them from walking to school through their neighborhood on the first day of classes.

The confrontation provoked clashes throughout the day, with violence building after dark as rival mobs of Protestant and Catholic men attacked police and some of each community's homes.

The day's tensions began in Ardoyne, a mostly Catholic district, where police wielding clubs, shields, and attack dogs drove back Protestants who were trying to block a road outside a Catholic elementary school. A Catholic mother was hit in the face with a bottle and hospitalized.

Most of the pupils — girls as young as 4 wearing brand-new red uniforms — were sent home early, in tears, from Holy Cross Primary School. A fleet of Catholic-run black taxis ferried them past lines of police with helmets and shields, while many of the Protestants shouted curses and insults.

"This looks like Alabama in the '60s," said Brendan Mailey, the leader of a Catholic parents group that refused to use a rear entrance and insisted on using the front door of the school, which lies in the small Protestant section of Ardoyne.

"It's beyond my worst nightmare," said the Rev. Aidan Troy, a Catholic priest who was appointed governor of the school during the summer vacation break. "The abuse I heard was unbelievable. It was one of the most savage experiences of my life."

At a school meeting Monday night, Troy urged approximately 150 Catholic parents to use the rear entrance to the school in coming days. The most hard-line parents rejected that option during previous confrontations in June, and before the meeting, they said they didn't want to buckle to Protestant threats. Protestants have not challenged Catholics using the rear entrance.

Local Protestants said that they were responding to Catholic attacks on their neighborhood, which is separated from the Catholic part of the district by high metal fences. Houses on both sides have been attacked in recent months with stones, gasoline, and pipe bombs and even bursts of gunfire, prompting many residents to abandon their homes indefinitely.

WORLD BRIEF

U.N.: No protection for all online names

GENEVA (AP) — Celebrities like Madonna and companies like Microsoft have already proved they have a commercial interest in protecting their names from cybersquatters who set up Web sites using their famous monikers.

But what about untrademarked people and places, like President Bush, or Champagne, France?

A new U.N. study says little can be done to protect such people, places, or brand names, because they don't have the advantage of trademark law.

For now, that means the rights to tunisia.com are owned by a U.S. company, and afghanistan.com is based in the Caribbean.

For the past 21 months, the issue of Internet names has been governed by a system set up by the United Nations' World Intellectual Property Organization. The system has allowed celebrities and trademarked companies to gain the rights to their Web name from people or companies who registered them first in the hope of reselling them for a fortune.

WIPO's system has so far received more than 3,000 complaints from people complaining of cybersquatting and has solved more than 80 percent of them — using the guidance of trademark law.

You asked for it.

Smith throws no-no

Cardinals rookie Bud Smith tosses a no-hitter against Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bud Smith became the 16th rookie in modern history to throw a no-hitter and the second unlikely pitcher to do it to San Diego this season in St. Louis' 4-0 win Monday night.

Smith, making his 11th career start, showed the poise of a veteran in becoming the first rookie to throw a no-hitter since the Cardinals' Jose Jimenez did it in a 1-0 win against Arizona on June 25, 1999.

He ended it by fielding Phil Nevin's hard comebacker, pumping his fist and running halfway to first base before flipping to Albert Pujols for the final out.

"I was shaking out there knowing that I was going for a no-hitter," Smith said. "I was going on adrenaline."

This was the first time Smith, a native Southern Californian, pitched beyond the seventh inning. He walked four — including all-time walks leader Rickey Henderson twice — and struck out seven.

The 21-year-old left-hander joined A.J. Burnett in no-hitting San Diego this season, making the Padres the first team since the 1996 Colorado Rockies to be no-hit twice in one season. Burnett walked a record nine batters in his no-hitter May 12.

Smith, who was joking in the dugout with slugger Mark McGwire in the top of the ninth, started the bottom half by getting Henderson to ground out.

"We weren't even talking about pitching," Smith said of his short conversation with McGwire. When told it seemed to get his mind off the no-hitter, Smith said: "It worked."

Recruit gives Alford his word

By Jesse Steinfeldt
 The Daily Iowan

Coach Steve Alford's recruiting efforts this past weekend simultaneously yielded good and bad news.

The good news is that Iowa took a step toward solidifying its future frontcourt by receiving an oral commitment from an Indiana high-school player.

The bad news is that he won't be ready to help the Hawkeyes until the 2004-05 season.

J.R. Angle, a 6-6, 185-pound forward at Indian Creek High School in Trafalgar, Ind., committed to the Hawkeyes while in town on a recruiting visit this weekend. The sophomore-to-be averaged 24 points and 11 rebounds per contest during his freshman year. He shot 90 percent from the free throw line and 60 percent from the field, including 51 percent from behind the 3-point arc.

Angle's defection from Indiana signals a trend in Alford's recruiting influence.

Angle will join current Hawkeye guard Brody Boyd as the second small-town Indiana standout in Alford's tenure to choose Iowa over Indiana University, a move that until recently may have seemed ludicrous to Indiana hoopsters.

"People in Indiana are starting to catch on to Iowa basketball," Angle said. "Most Indiana fans are Iowa fans now. He's [Alford] the God of Indiana."

Alford's attraction to Indiana prep stars may stem from his successful career at his alma mater, but this case is more personal.

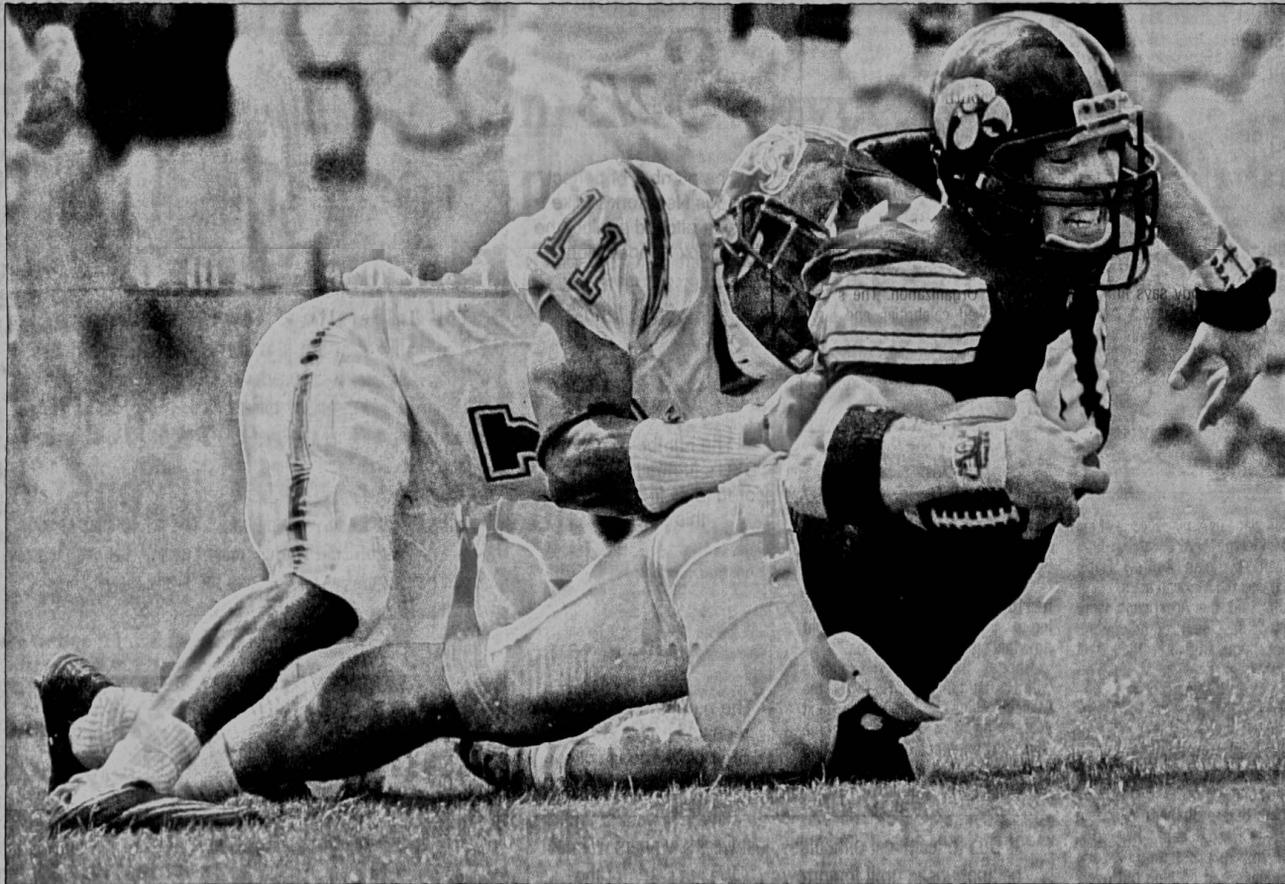

"I have known coach Alford for more than 20 years, having first coached him in the state All-Star game in 1983," said Larry Angle, J.R.'s father and high-school coach. "He was the first one in bed and the first one up in the morning at the camp. That's the type of commitment he brings to coaching."

J.R. Angle has attracted interest from such Division I schools as Kansas, UCLA, Purdue, Kentucky, and Indiana, but playing for Alford at Iowa is

 The Daily Iowan

Free admission and quarterbacks in red jerseys were the only items missing from Iowa's Sept. 1 season opener turned glorified spring game.

The Hawkeyes' 51-0 victory over Kent State allowed both teams to dump the contents of their rosters onto the Kinnick Stadium field, with Iowa exposing some newly acquired depth, while the Golden Flashes feebly attempted to move and/or stop the football.

Behind senior running back Ladell Betts and senior fullback Jeremy Allen, the Hawkeyes opened the game in classic Big Ten style — running the ball down Kent State's throat. Seven of Iowa's 10 plays on its opening drive were runs, including Allen's 14-yard touchdown jaunt up the middle.

The Hawkeyes also showed the ability to pass the ball, as senior quarterback Kyle McCann sustained three scoring drives with completions to three different receivers.

Junior back-up Brad Banks chipped in as well in the first half, eluding a Golden Flashes tackler for a 38-yard completion to junior tight end Dallas Clark in the second quarter. On the next play, sophomore running back Aaron Greving scored one of his three touchdowns.

Route similar to 1997 blowout

In 1997, I took Iowa's 62-0 thrashing of the Indiana Hoosiers for granted. It was the day I officially committed to the UI. I saw the beer, the beautiful women, the beer, and, most importantly, a very exciting and deep Iowa football team.

It was Homecoming, Oct. 25, 1997, and the sacrificial lamb — Indiana — proved to be no contest for a strong and talented Iowa Hawkeye team. It would be nearly four years before such a game would be replicated at Kinnick Stadium.

It was hard watching Iowa's 51-0 whitewashing of Kent State and not allowing my mind to drift back to that glorious October day. Looking back on that 1997 game, which featured the Iowa's last bowl team, and the one 56,091 football faithful witnessed against Kent State, it's hard not to compare the depth both teams featured.

A lot of players emerged from obscurity in that Indiana game, including Tom Knight, who had

IOWA ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

Sophomore running back Aaron Greiving made good on his first carries as a Hawkeye. He scored all three times he touched the ball Saturday with runs of 1, 14, and 26 yards. His three touchdowns in a row tied the national record for touchdowns scored on consecutive carries. The Ames native played mostly special teams last season but is currently the backup tailback for Ladell Betts.

Sports Briefs

Emergence of Griffin no surprise to Stoops

DALLAS (AP) — Junior tailback Quentin Griffin and the running game were destined to be a keystone of Oklahoma's offense this season no matter who was at quarterback. Sooners coach Bob Stoops said the emergence of Griffin, the Big 12's offensive player of the week and leading rusher, isn't a product of having Nate Hybl at quarterback instead of Josh Heupel, the graduated two-year starter who was a Heisman Trophy finalist last season. "Our goal was to continue to improve the running game and make sure that it is a dangerous part of the our offense," Stoops said Monday. "Even if Josh Heupel was back, we would still be emphasizing it. We want to be very effective when we do run it. We have to create big plays and make defenses honor it." The Sept. 1 44-3 win at Air Force, Griffin ran for 201 yards on 26 carries, including five carries of at least 15 yards. He also caught a pass, extending his school record to 20-straight games with a reception.

U.S. basketball team is making believers

BRISBANE, Australia — The U.S. men's basketball team at the Goodwill Games is making plenty of believers. First, it was Phil Smyth, coach of the Australian team. Then, it was five-time Australian Olympian Andrew Gaze. Finally, it was the Mexican team. Smyth said the Americans were better than last year's gold medal-winning Olympians after they beat the Australians, 109-76, in an exhibition game last week. Gaze echoed Smyth's words during halftime of the Americans' 132-58 destruction of Mexico in the opening game of the Goodwill tournament Monday. "I think they probably could beat last year's Olympic team," he said. After the record-setting victory, the Mexicans had nothing but overwhelming esteem for the Americans, the prohibitive favorites to win their second-straight Goodwill title and third overall. "They have 12 guys, and even their last five guys are unbelievable players," said Mexico center David Crouse, who played at Southern California.

Ex-major leaguer nears Oh's record

TOKYO — An ocean away from major league ballparks, an intriguing home-run chase is developing that has nothing to do with Barry Bonds and Sammy Sosa. Tuffy Rhodes, a marginal outfielder who spent six seasons in the majors, now plays for the Kintetsu Buffaloes and has 49 home runs, six shy of the Japanese record of 55 set by the great Sadaharu Oh in 1964.

"I'm trying not to think of the record," Rhodes said. "We're looking to win a championship, and right now that's all I'm focusing on." Rhodes broke into the majors with Houston in 1990. He joined the Chicago Cubs in 1993. The next year, he hit three of his eight home runs on opening day, tantalizing Cubs' fans with what may come. But it was not to be.

POST-GAME QUOTES
 I'm embarrassed. I'm a good team, but we play well. We missed probably 40 tackles. I don't know if it was good Iowa was, or we were... They (the Pittsburgers) were definitely better than us. Their defense is as good as ours. We lost last year.
 Kyle McCann is our MVP. There's no debate about that. Our hope is to get two guys that we can rely on. We envision him playing every game.

Iowa dominated every aspect of the game, scoring four touchdowns on the ground, four different running backs.

Iowa 51, Kent State 0

A black-and-gold letter day in Kinnick

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Saturday's game was one for the record books for two Hawkeyes.

Kicker Nate Kaeding tied one Iowa record and set another in the 51-0 blowout. The sophomore connected on all three of his field-goal attempts, giving him 10-consecutive field goals dating back to last season. That ties former Hawkeye Rob Houghtlin's record for consistency, which he set in 1985.

The sophomore also broke another of Houghtlin's records, scoring 15 points in the game.

"It's a night-and-day difference from this time last season," said Kaeding on his confidence. He was 14-22 on attempts last season.

Tailback Aaron Greving also made his mark, joining Illinois' Howard Griffith, Virginia's Tiki Barber, and Navy's Chris McCoy as the only players in NCAA history to rush for a touchdown on three-consecutive carries. Greving had touchdown runs of 14, 1, and 26 yards in a sterling Hawkeye debut.

No-passing zone
The Hawkeyes held the Golden Flashes to just 90 yards of passing offense. It was the first time the Hawkeye defense had held a team to fewer than 100 yards in the air since Oct. 24, 1998, when Wisconsin beat Iowa, 31-0, in Kinnick Stadium. It should be noted that while the Badgers had only 45 yards passing, they did have Ron Dayne's 164 yards of rushing to fall back on.

It's a night-and-day difference from this time last season.

— Nate Kaeding, in reference to his confidence so far this season.

Putting up numbers
Iowa's offense racked up 567 yards of total offense. The Hawkeye attack was well-rounded with 331 yards rushing and 236 passing. It was the most offense put up by an Iowa team since a 54-16 win over Tulsa on Sept. 13, 1997. That season Iowa ran up more than 400 yards of offense against opponents four times en route to a 7-5 finish and a berth in the Sun Bowl.

The injury front

Senior Alonzo Cunningham sat out the Sept. 1 game after injuring his ankle in practice on Aug. 28.

Running back Ladell Betts, who rushed for 99 yards on 15 carries, left the game early with what Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz referred to as a "tweak"; he should be more than ready to go Saturday.

Hot ticket

The announced attendance of 56,091 was approximately 6,000 more than estimated earlier in the week. The increase was due to great weather and a large number of walk-up sales with fans standing in lengthy lines to get tickets.

Fans also bucked the popular trend to abandon Kinnick Stadium at halftime, as many stayed in their seats to see how much damage Iowa would do in the second half.

New faces

Part of the luxury of holding a large lead on somebody is that you get lots of younger players some action. Iowa utilized that opportunity on Sept. 1.

Freshman Matt Roth led the team in tackles with seven. Roth spent most of his time on special teams. Junior college transfer C.J. Jones had a 51-yard punt return and two receptions for the Hawkeyes.

PRIME PERFORMERS

Nate Kaeding: Tied former Hawkeye Rob Houghtlin's record for most field goals made in a row, 10. He also had 15 points in the game, breaking Houghtlin's record for most points scored by a kicker.

Aaron Greving: Tied an NCAA record when he scored touchdowns on three consecutive carries.

Kyle McCann: Started the 2001 season completing 12 passes on 18 attempts, good for 165 yards.

Ladell Betts: Had a solid day at running back, posting 99 total yards on 15 carries.

POST-GAME QUOTES

I'm embarrassed. Iowa was a good team, but we didn't play well. We missed probably 40 tackles today. I don't know if it was how good Iowa was, or how bad we were ... They (Iowa) are definitely better than Pittsburgh was last year. Their defense is as good as Purdue's was at this point last year.

— Dean Peas
Kent State coach

Kyle McCann is our starter, there's no debate about that. Our hope is to have two guys that we feel comfortable with. Brad is an energy guy. There's something special about him. We envision him playing in every game.

— Kirk Ferentz
Iowa coach

Aiello: I'm not the type of guy to flip out over one thing

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Sam Aiello admits he was wrong in punching former Hawkeye quarterback Jon Beutjer. Now, he just wants the incident to go away.

Following Iowa's 51-0 rout of Kent State, Aiello briefly addressed questions regarding the July 25 altercation with Beutjer.

Aiello said Beutjer's account of the fight was basically true, meaning that he did initiate the one-sided fight and was wrong for doing so, but Aiello said the incident was not based solely on a $22 cable TV bill.

"Anybody who knows me knows I'm not the type of guy to flip out over one thing," he said. "I could go into great detail about a lot of little things, but I'm not going to because I respect this team and this coaching staff."

An alleged lack of support from Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz and assistant Ken O'Keefe and disagreement over a suitable punishment for Aiello are what Beutjer and his family have cited as reasons for the quarterback's transfer.

However, Athletics Director Bowlsby defended Ferentz's handling of the incident once again on Sept. 1 and said Aiello's in-house punishment was consistent with team rules.

"I think what Coach Ferentz and his staff did was altogether appropriate," he said. "I think it was handled professionally, compassionately, and with fairness to all parties involved."

Bowlsby also said Ferentz was quick to get both young men into outside counseling and that the third-year coach communicated well with both sets of parents throughout.

"All I'll say is, I thought we were in accord, and apparently we weren't," Ferentz said Sept. 1 after Iowa's victory. "Maybe I'm not a good listener."

But if all involved seemed to be on the same page, as Ferentz has said was his understanding, then what led to Beutjer's departure?

"I'm not going to get into talking about the private discussions that were held, but the bar kept changing," Bowlsby said.

He wouldn't elaborate further.

SPORTS BRIEF

Wolverines prepare for Saturday match at Washington

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A long-held belief among football coaches is that a team makes its greatest improvement between its first and second games.

Michigan's Lloyd Carr certainly hopes that's true this week.

The No. 12 Wolverines successfully opened their season with a 31-13 home win over Miami (Ohio). But they'll have to get a lot better in a hurry before a much bigger test Saturday at No. 15 Washington.

This will be one of the more intriguing early season games nationally because it matches two traditional powers who are basically unknown quantities at this stage of the season. It should determine whether either team can legitimately contend for the national championship.

Like Michigan, Washington's defending Pac 10 and Rose Bowl champions suffered big personnel losses, particularly on offense. But that hardly means the Huskies' well has run dry.

"We're going to have to improve a lot this week, because I don't think there's a more talented football team in the country than Washington," Carr said Monday. "This should be a good test for us. I know our players are looking forward to it."

While Michigan has a game under its belt, this will be the season opener for Washington. But playing in noisy Husky Stadium is a notoriously difficult experience for visiting teams.

Ferentz sees plenty of enthusiasm in victory

GAME STORY

By halftime, Iowa had 331 total yards — 178 in the air, 153 on the ground — and a comfortable 23-0 lead.

"There was good enthusiasm out there," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "A lot of guys played in the ball game, and a lot of guys did a lot of good things. We made some big plays and had some newcomers do some things, too, which is exciting."

Conversely, Iowa's defense prevented the big play, which often served as its momentum killer last season. Actually, at the 13:16 mark in the second quarter, the Hawkeyes made one of their own. Two plays after Kent State recovered an Iowa fumble, senior linebacker Roger Meyer forced a bad pass from Golden Flashes QB Jeff Valentino that Hawkeye senior lineman Aaron Kampman snared.

It preserved the shutout and marked the first, and last, time Kent State stepped inside Iowa's 20-yard line.

"The basketball skills came in handy," Kampman joked following the game. "I tried to box some guys out. As a defense, we really want to focus this year on trying to create turnovers."

The second half opened the gate for the Hawkeyes' ground-game reserves. By the final whistle, Iowa's back-up backs — Greving, senior Robbie Crockett, junior Siaka Massaquoi, and sophomores Fred Russell and Edgar Cervantes — compiled 149 yards.

For the game, the Hawkeyes compiled 567 total yards to Kent State's 203, which the score obviously reflected after Iowa posted its most lopsided victory since a 62-0 shutout of Indiana in 1997.

"We're embarrassed," Golden

Flashes coach Dean Pees said. "Iowa is a good team. We knew it would just be plain tough to stop them, but we had chances to stop them."

And Ferentz was the first to admit there were some areas that the Hawkeyes will need to improve upon before the arrival of Miami (Ohio) on Sept. 8. The RedHawks put up a spirited fight against Michigan in Ann Arbor, before falling, 31-13, on Sept. 1.

For the moment, the players relished the win.

"It was fun out there," Betts said. "Guys were smiling, almost like playing in your backyard again. That's when football is fun, when you can go out there and move the chains, and our defense was shutting them down. I mean, that's what football is all about."

Hawks have hunger for wins that '97 team didn't

three interceptions and went on to become a first-round draft pick of the Arizona Cardinals.

Against Kent State, it was much of the same. Aaron Greving tied a national record on his first three carries as a Hawkeye. Dallas Clark looked like the second coming of Marv Cook at tight end. Freshman linebacker Matt Roth appeared to be every bit the disruptive player that coach Kirk Ferentz said he would be.

The depth displayed by the 2001 Iowa squad was the most promising of many things to come from a game that was over pretty much over before it began. Forget the individual accomplishments for a moment and look at the team as a whole.

Last season, if Ladell Betts were to get hurt as he did against the Golden Flashes, Iowa's ground attack would have been hurting. This season, Ferentz can now choose among Greving, Fred Russell, and Siaka Massaquoi, as all proved to be capable replacements. Hawkeye fans also realized fullback Jeremy Allen wasn't just a blocker for Betts anymore.

There were two quarterbacks who proved capable of leading the team to the end zone in Kyle McCann and Brad Banks. They were helped by three strong wide receivers in Kahlil Hill, Chris Oliver, and C.J. Jones and a career day by Clark at tight end.

The defense held its ground and held the Golden Flashes to just 203 total yards on offense and no points, upholding Derrick Pickens' prediction of a shutout earlier in the week. There were very few holes and even fewer mistakes.

Even the kicking game was strong, with the exception of punter David Bradley, who only got one chance to display his abilities.

It would be impossible to expect Iowa's dominating performance to be replayed each and every Saturday this football season. However, it isn't out of the question to sit back and take stock of what occurred on the field against Kent State and what that could mean for the Hawkeyes as the 2001 season drags on.

The 1997 Hawkeyes relied heavily on a few talented players and a lot of depth to finish 7-5 and earned a visit to the Sun Bowl. The 2001 Hawkeyes have plenty of talent, and more importantly, the hunger that comes from not having had a winning season since 1997.

Now the only question remaining is whether the depth can carry this Iowa football team as far as it did the 1997 version of the Hawks.

Yankees get fifth-straight win

Tucker finished 3-for-4 with a walk and a sacrifice. He also hit his 11th home run of the season, a solo shot in the third inning to give the Cubs a 3-0 lead. Tucker added a two-run single in a four-run seventh that put the game out of reach at 9-2.

Rockies 4, Giants 1
SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds hit his 58th homer on a rare mistake by rookie Jason Jennings, who pitched seven innings of three-hit ball for his third-straight victory as the Colorado Rockies beat the Giants, 4-1, Monday.

Bonds hit a 1-0 pitch over the right-center field wall to open the fourth inning. The majors' home-run leader rounded the bases to a standing ovation for his second homer in six at-bats, but the drive was San Francisco's only success against Jennings.

Brewers 12, Pirates 7, 1st game
PITTSBURGH — Tyler Houston's two-run single keyed a five-run first inning and the Milwaukee Brewers, despite threatening to waste another big lead in Pittsburgh, beat the Pirates 12-7 Monday in a doubleheader opener.

The Brewers were 0-6 in PNC Park, including an 8-7 loss May 20 that saw them squander a seven-run lead.

Indians 6, White Sox 3
CHICAGO — Rookie C.C. Sabathia won his fifth straight decision, and Ellis Burks hit a three-run homer as the Cleveland Indians beat the Chicago White Sox 6-3 Monday night.

Sabathia (15-4) became the first Indians rookie to win at least 15 games since Herb Score won 16 in 1955. Sabathia, who hasn't lost since Aug. 2 against Oakland, allowed three runs and three hits in eight innings. He struck out eight.

Mets 10, Phillies 7
PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Phillies wasted a two-run ninth-inning lead, making a bizarre pair of errors on a routine throw back to the mound that helped give the New York Mets a 10-7 victory Monday.

After Jose Mesa blew a save for the first time since May 28 — also against the Mets — pitcher Jose Santiago let a throw back to the mound bounce off his glove.

Reds 3, Astros 2
CINCINNATI — Calvin Pickering's pinch-hit RBI single in the eighth inning ended Octavio

Dotel's nearly two-month streak of scoreless innings and rallied the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-2 victory Monday over the Houston Astros.

Dotel (6-5) pitched out of a bases-loaded threat in the seventh, but the Reds ended his streak at 31½ innings without allowing an earned run an inning later.

Yankees 7, Blue Jays 5
TORONTO — Alfonso Soriano hit a tiebreaking, two-run single in the ninth inning as the New York Yankees rallied for their fifth straight win, 7-5, Monday over the Toronto Blue Jays.

New York, which opened a season-high 9½-game lead in the AL East over second-place Boston, rallied from a 5-2 deficit on Derek Jeter's RBI single in the seventh and Enrique Wilson's two-run double in the eighth off Paul Quantrill.

Braves 5, Expos 0
MONTREAL — Tom Glavine pitched his 21st career shutout and 50th complete game Monday to lead the Atlanta Braves over the Montreal Expos, 5-0, Monday.

Glavine (13-7), who beat Montreal at home last Wednesday, allowed seven hits in his first complete game since last Sept. 25, a 6-0 win over the Expos at Olympic Stadium. He struck out five and walked two where his heart is set.

"We felt that they [the Hawkeyes] worked the hardest in their interest towards J.R.," Larry Angle said. "We like what Steve stands for away from the court and how he treats his players. What you see is what you get with him."

The burden of the decision of choosing a school has been removed from J.R. Angle, so he can now focus on the three years that he still has left to play high-school basketball.

"I wanted to get it done," he said. "By your senior year, everybody is asking, 'Where are you going to go?' Coaches want you to do this and that — and that can slow down a lot."

While he has orally committed, Angle will not be able to sign an official letter of intent until November of his senior year. NCAA rules prohibit Alford from commenting on a specific recruit before the national letter of intent is signed.

Opening tourney tough on Hawkeyes

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team came home from a very tough trip to California over the weekend with a 1-3 record, beating Manhattan College but falling to Southwest Missouri State, Long Beach State, and Cal-State Fullerton.

The Hawkeyes fell to SMS, 3-1, in their first match of the round-robin Four Points Titan Classic in Fullerton, Calif., on Aug. 31. The young Hawkeye team started out strong, taking the first game, 30-21, but after Hawkeye freshman starter Kassie Petty went down with a sprained ankle, Iowa dropped each of the next three games, 27-30, 23-30, 26-30.

Senior Sara Meyerman led the Hawkeyes with a career-high 33 kills against SMS, and sophomore Renee Hill totaled 51 assists in the loss.

After the SMS match, Iowa traveled to Long Beach State to take on the eighth-ranked 49ers on the evening of Aug. 31. The Hawkeyes fell 3-0, but played well and improved each game, coach Rita Buck-Crockett said.

"I feel pretty good with how we did against Long Beach State," she said. "The women got a lot of experience out of that and a lot of confidence."

The 49ers, who defeated No. 1-ranked Nebraska on Sept. 1, outscored the Hawkeyes 30-13, 30-19, 30-21, but the games were long, and the Hawkeyes' sound fundamentals did not go unnoticed by people close to the 49ers' program, Buck-Crockett said.

"We're not very far away with one senior," she said.

Long Beach State and Nebraska both have lineups dominated by seniors. Iowa, meanwhile, started three freshmen, two sophomores, and a senior.

The Hawkeyes came out flat on the morning of Sept. 1 against tournament host Cal-State Fullerton and lost, 3-1 (30-28, 16-30, 27-30, 26-30).

"None of our people came ready to play the next morning," Buck-Crockett said. "I do think we should have beaten Cal-State Fullerton." After the disappointing loss, Iowa held a team meeting and stepped up against Manhattan, sweeping the Lady Jaspers, 30-25, 32-30, and 30-23.

Tonight, the Hawkeyes will take on Auburn in their first home match of the season at 7 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Buck-Crockett said Iowa will look to improve the serving and transition games against the Tigers.

She also stressed the importance of having good fan support for the team's home games this season.

"We really need more support from our students. We need a lot of noise," she said.

Soccer team wins one, loses one on road

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

The city of Milwaukee proved to be both positive and negative for the Iowa soccer team over the weekend. The Hawkeyes posted a win in their first game of the season against Wisconsin-Milwaukee on Aug. 31, then turned around and suffered a 1-0 loss on Sunday to Marquette.

"There was some disappointment with the loss, but on the other hand, we saw a lot of positives within the two games," Iowa coach Wendy Logan said. "We played extremely hard for the entire two matches."

Logan said she was impressed with her team's execution of the game plans implemented going into both games. However, it was the game plans that needed a little tweaking.

"I think that I have to take some of the blame for the loss," she said. "The game plan worked in the first half, but it just wasn't working in the second half. We needed to change our system to give us a slightly better chance to win. But the coaching staff learns from games like the players do."

Iowa went up, 1-0, in the first half of the Marquette game on a goal by junior Sarah Lynch, but the Hawkeyes couldn't hold on to the lead. The Golden Eagles tied it up in the second half, then scored with only two minutes remaining.

The Hawkeyes suffered another loss when junior midfielder Julie Atkocaitis went down with a severely sprained ankle in the win over Wisconsin-Milwaukee. She will be sidelined for several weeks.

With Atkocaitis injured, Logan is looking for freshman Kitty Montgomery to step into the void. The St. Paul, Minn., native had an impressive collegiate debut, Logan said.

"With Julie out, her role will be even bigger," Logan said. "She got an assist this weekend and was able to control the middle. She contributed to the success this weekend."

Montgomery wasn't the only player Logan singled out for outstanding play. Scoring expert Lynch not only had the game-winning goal against Wisconsin-Milwaukee, she also had a go-ahead goal in the loss against Marquette.

"She is finding her rhythm; I can see her confidence build with each half," Logan said. "It is good to have one of your forwards feeling confident."

The coach also wanted to recognize the play of the entire back line, including goalkeeper Liz Hendel, and defenders Chrissy Howard, Michelle Mobily, Katie Poole, and Teesa Price.

"They are just playing extremely well, very organized, very tough," she said. "They eliminated opportunities for both opponents this weekend."

For the upcoming week, Logan said, she wants the team to focus on its outside-midfield play and the sharpening of the team's fundamental skills and defensive play.

"I think there were more positive things than negative from this weekend," she said. "We want to build off of the positive."

Field hockey goes 3-0 on weekend

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa field-hockey team isn't looking back. Coach Tracey Griesbaum said the Hawkeyes' bumpy 3-3 nonconference start on the road last season wouldn't be an adequate measure of this fall's schedule, which includes 10 solid away games.

So far, it's been true. Iowa maintained a perfect 4-0 record through last weekend's three-game set on the East Coast, including two shutouts.

On Monday, early Hawkeye goals made way for a 3-1 victory over New Hampshire. Big Ten Offensive Player of the Week Lindsay Miller powered Iowa to twin shutouts (5-0 and 2-0) over Colgate and the University of Maine on Aug. 31 and Sept. 1.

New Hampshire is the lone team this season to score against the Hawkeyes. The Wildcats were also the only team to outshoot (15-9) and earn more corners (7-5) than Iowa so far this season.

Freshman Sarah Dawson scored her fourth goal of the year early in the first half before teammate Maria Merluzzi extended the Iowa lead to 2-0. Tiffany Leister converted on the first Iowa penalty corner of the season in the second half.

Samantha Carr broke through the Iowa defense for the lone Wildcat goal with 18:23 remaining. Saleema Rogers stayed strong in the cage against a late-game New Hampshire rally, upping her personal win record to 3-0.

Iowa proved its versatility and offensive power on Sept. 1 by outshooting Colgate, 31-5, and taking nine corners. The Hawkeyes demonstrated a balanced attack, with all five goals from separate players.

Miller scored six minutes into the first half, followed by Pattie Gillern's penalty corner. Dawson and Lauren Edwards each scored unassisted goals early in the second half.

Edwards' goal was her first this season after breaking her nose and orbital bone two weeks ago in practice.

Rogers took the day off from her goal position, and sophomore Barb Weinberg registered her first collegiate win with two saves.

Maine's aggressive defense provided the Hawkeyes with a challenge Aug. 31, but both of Iowa's goals were a result of precise penalty corners.

The Hawkeyes continue their extended road trip Friday at Ball State, followed by Stanford on Saturday.

Gators fall from No. 1

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Larry Coker has more than just his first coaching victory at Miami. He has the No. 1 team in the nation.

Following a dominating 33-7 victory over Penn State, the Hurricanes replaced the Florida Gators at No. 1 in the Associated Press media poll on Monday.

In this week's USA Today/ESPN coaches' poll, released Sunday, Florida remained No. 1 and Miami No. 2.

Miami, winners of four national titles, returned to the top spot in the AP poll for the first time in nine years. The Hurricanes were No. 1 at the end of the 1992 regular season and finished No. 3 after losing to Alabama in the '93 Sugar Bowl.

While Florida also won its opener Sept. 1 — 49-14 against Marshall — the Gators entered the season with a 13-point edge and 12 fewer first-place votes than the Hurricanes.

But now that both teams have played a game, the voters were more impressed with Miami's victory under the 53-year-old Coker, a head coach for the first time.

In Monday's voting by the 72 sports writers and broadcasters on the AP panel, Miami received 37 first-place votes and 1,737 points. Florida had 19 first-place votes and 1,721 points. The team with the most total points gets the No. 1 ranking.

Last week, Miami out-first-placed Florida 33-21, but the Gators outpointed the 'Canes, 1,723-1,710. Voting in the AP poll awards teams 25 points for first place, 24 for second, 23 for third, and down to 1 point for 25th place.

"It's very gratifying to be ranked No. 1 and it's good to see the respect of the national media coming off the win over Penn State," Coker said. "Obviously, it speaks well for the reputation of the program and for the job the players and coaches have done here."

Fresno State (2-0), a 44-24 winner over Oregon State on Sunday night, jumped into the Top 25 for the first time since 1993 at No. 19. The Beavers tumbled from No. 10 to No. 22 after dropping their opener.

Oklahoma (2-0), the defending national champions, remained No. 3 after a 44-3 win at Air Force, followed by No. 4 Texas and No. 5 Nebraska. The Longhorns (1-0) and Cornhuskers (2-0) switched places from last week.

The Sooners had 10 first-place votes, the Longhorns two, and the Huskers two.

Florida State, 55-13 winners over Duke, remained No. 6, followed by No. 7 Oregon, No. 8, Tennessee, No. 9 Virginia Tech and No. 10 Georgia Tech.

Michigan, which opened with a 31-13 win over Miami (Ohio), was up one spot to No. 11, followed by No. 12 Kansas State, No. 13 LSU, No. 14 UCLA, No. 15 Washington, No. 16 Northwestern, No. 17 Notre Dame, No. 18 Mississippi State, No. 19 Fresno State, No. 20 Clemson, No. 21 South Carolina, No. 22 Oregon State, No. 23 Wisconsin, No. 24 Ohio State, and No. 25 Georgia.

Rams acquire Martin; Weinke chosen to start

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

The St. Louis Rams solidified their backup quarterback position Monday when they picked up Jamie Martin, who was cut a day earlier by Jacksonville, while veteran Bubby Brister lost his job with Kansas City and last year's Heisman Trophy-winner, Chris Weinke, officially got Carolina's starting job.

The Rams traded Joe Germaine to Kansas City for a sixth-round draft choice. That, in turn, led to the Chiefs releasing Brister, who at 39 had been the oldest active quarterback in the NFL.

In Charlotte, coach George Seifert made it official: Weinke will open for Carolina in Minnesota on Sept. 9. Weinke won the job by default after Jeff Lewis, the projected starter, was a bust in training camp and was released.

"I didn't know for sure because there always could be a trade or anything could have happened," Seifert said.

"But we watch him in practice, we watch him interact, we watch him in games, and you put all that information in and talk about it as an organization, and everyone felt the same way and thought it was the right way to go."

The Rams' dealing was part of a day of maneuvering 24 hours after the 31 NFL teams cut rosters to 53. Many of the cuts were forced by the salary cap, leaving more attractive players available.

For example, safety Devin Bush, who started 12 games for St. Louis last season, was picked up off waivers by Cleveland.

"I don't know what happened," Bush said. "I was shocked. I haven't been in this kind of situation before. But it's the NFL. Things change fast. I'm very surprised."

The Rams made their deals after demoting Germaine to third string behind Marc Bulger, who has never thrown a regular-season pass in the NFL. Last April, they traded experienced backup Trent Green to the Chiefs, where he will start under former St. Louis coach Dick Vermeil.

Martin played for the Rams from 1993-96, when coach Mike Martz was an assistant with them, and spent the last month of the 1997 season with Martz in Washington.

He is likely to be the backup to Kurt Warner after he learns the system. Warner was hurt twice last season, and without him, the Rams' offense wasn't the same.

"The downside to this, what scares me, is for a few weeks it's going to be touch and go," Martz said. "We're living on the edge a little bit."

INDIANAPOLIS — The Colts are about to sign cornerback Thomas Smith, who played with the Bears and Bills, to a $1 million contract.

"He's familiar with the conference, and he wanted to get back to playing against personnel he knew," said his agent, Brantley Evans. "He liked their defensive philosophy, and he knew they needed some depth in the defensive backfield. It's a good place for him."

Smith has spent eight seasons in the NFL, seven with the Bills before signing with Chicago in 2000, and gives the Colts another veteran presence in a secondary that is dominated by young players.

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — The New York Jets, looking for a nose tackle to replace the injured Jason Ferguson, signed veteran free agent Steve Martin.

Martin, a 6-foot-4, 319-pounder, played with Kansas City last season. He also played with Philadelphia and Indianapolis.

Coach Herman Edwards said Martin would be the backup to seventh-round draft choice James Reed, who will start Sept. 9 against the Colts.

Martin's signing apparently means the Jets couldn't come to terms with veteran Russell Maryland, who had been in camp after being cut by Green Bay in a salary cap move.

New York also claimed linebacker Jason Glenn, brother of cornerback Aaron Glenn, off waivers from Detroit.

PONTIAC, Mich. — Ty Detmer, obtained Sept. 9 in a trade with Cleveland, arrived in Detroit and could eventually be a threat to Charlie Batch's starting job at quarterback.

While Batch is picking up the West Coast offense for the first time, Detmer ran for the first seven years of his career in Green Bay, Philadelphia, and San Francisco. With the Packers and 49ers, he worked with Lions head coach Marv Mornhinweg.

"I've always had a very good relationship with Marty, and I'm excited to be in Detroit," he said. "I'm here to back up Charlie, but that doesn't mean I don't think I can't start and win in this league. I'm 33, but look at guys like Doug Flutie who had their success later in their careers."

SAN FRANCISCO — Wide receiver Vinny Sutherland, cut by Atlanta a week ago, was signed by the 49ers. The 5-foot-8, 180-pound Sutherland, Drew Brees' favorite receiver at Purdue, was the Falcons' fifth-round draft pick.

Agassi, Sampras, Capriati make Open quarters

By Hal Bock
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Don't dismiss Pete Sampras from the U.S. Open just yet.

The Grand Slam record-holder with 13 victories returned to the quarterfinals of the Open on Monday with a 6-3, 6-2, 6-7 (5), 6-4 victory over Patrick Rafter.

Struggling without a win in 17 tournaments since setting the Grand Slam record at Wimbledon last year, Sampras arrived at the Open with an uncharacteristically low 10th seed.

This is a tournament he has won four times, and he said he would use it to end the whispers about his vulnerability. Against Rafter, he looked like the old Sampras, blasting serves up to 132 mph and taking advantage of every opportunity.

Sampras' serve was flawless. He had 20 aces just 14 unforced errors, and he ripped 60 winners.

In what may have been his last Grand Slam match, the sixth-seeded Rafter, a two-time Open champion, battled gamely. Trailing 2-5 in the first set, he saved six break points in a 22-point eighth game. It was just a momentary interruption for Sampras, though. He won the set on his serve in the next game.

Sampras lost just 14 points on his serve in the first two sets, and Rafter never found a way to break through it. When the Australian had him at break point in the third set, Sampras came to the net for a cross-court return and punctuated the point with a shout.

Rafter, who is considering retirement after this year, picked up the pace of his game in the third set, forcing Sampras to a tiebreak. He edged in front on a double fault by Sampras and went on to win, 7-5, forcing the fourth set. It was the first set Sampras has lost in the tournament.

They battled on even terms through the fourth set, trading booming serves until the 10th game. Then Rafter's seventh double fault put him in trouble. He saved two match points before Sampras ended it on extraordinary exchange for the final point.

Next for Sampras is two-time Open champion Andre Agassi, who battered Roger Federer, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4.

Also advancing to the quarters for the first time in 10 years was Jennifer Capriati, who continued her straight-sets march with a 6-3, 6-3 victory over No. 19 Barbara Schett.

Federer, who stunned Sampras at Wimbledon, never threatened. Agassi sailed through the first two sets in 48 minutes and quickly put aside any thoughts of an upset by the 13th-seeded Swiss.

Agassi, winner of the Open in 1994 and 1999, converted five of six break opportunities and was never broken in nine chances by Federer.

Capriati, winner of this year's Australian and French opens, took advantage of 33 unforced errors by Schett.

Schett, who beat Venus Williams at the French, had plenty of opportunities. But she failed to convert her first nine break chances, six in the first set, and Capriati, seeded No. 2, took advantage. Capriati won seven straight games, the last three of the first set and the first four of the second, to take control.

Trailing 5-2 in the second set, Schett fought off two match points and finally broke. But by then it was hardly enough. Capriati broke right back, winning the match on a double fault by Schett.

Capriati, enjoying one of the best comebacks in sports this year, was the youngest semifinalist in U.S. Open and Wimbledon history at age 15 in 1991.

Her career plummeted two years later, and in five U.S. Opens since returning to the tour in 1996 she had never advanced beyond the fourth round.

Capriati next plays No. 8 Amelie Mauresmo, who defeated No. 9 Nathalie Tauziat, 6-0, 6-7 (1), 6-3.

Also advancing to the quarters was No. 5 Kim Clijsters, who outlasted 7-5, 4-6, 6-2. Clijsters, who lost a marathon three-setter to Capriati in the finals of the French, faces the winner of Monday night's match between No. 4 Venus Williams and No. 18 Sandra Testud.

Two other quarterfinal matchups were set Sunday. Top-ranked Martina Hingis will meet 18-year-old Daniela Bedanova for the first time and Lindsay Davenport goes against Serena Williams again. Williams has won six of eight meetings with Davenport but lost to her in the Open quarters a year ago.

Yet buried inside emotionally laced fact and personal anecdote thick and creative is brilliant Vonnegut trademark "hobnobbed Kilgore Trout."

Vonnegut spends much of the book inside Trout's head, focusing on his theories and intellectual mishaps. At one point, after a completely normal neuro-episode, Trout responds to a homeless woman who questions his sanity, "Ting-a-ling! Ting-a-ling!"

Trout, and even other character in the book including Vonnegut, gets trapped what he calls the Timequake. It is concept so creative and twisted that no other than Vonnegut himself could have imagined it.

According to Vonnegut, on Feb. 1, 2001, the Timequake that very moment, beings, both living were zapped back 1991, at which point

That same year, Universal Pictures released George Roy Hill's adaptation of Slaughterhouse Five, Vonnegut's classic novel about everyman named Bill Pilgrim who "has cost unstick in time." Ironically, Vonnegut was a huge fan of the film, calling it a "flawless translation of my novel to silver screen," despite the fact that the narrative develops around unique temporal structure, rather than through character development.

Similar to the recent noir twist, Memento, which unfolded in reverse logical order to its main character's perspective, uses the flashback he quote of the day

The Bible certainly saved his life.

— Fla. Sheriff's Deputy Larry King,

on 16-year-old Kenneth Wallace, whose mother shot him Sunday. The blast, fired at close range, struck his Bible and the overcoat he was carrying. He suffered only minor scratches. His mother, Leslie Ann Wallace, allegedly shot and killed her 6-year-old son earlier in the day.

horoscopes

Tuesday, September 4, 2001

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Business opportunities will develop. However, be sure not to let others railroad you into supplying the cash. You will have problems getting back money you loaned to someone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel for the purpose of accomplishing unfinished projects. Don't let others get in your way. This is not a day that you should waste your time on trivial matters. Your professionalism will count.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will have a problem with a client or colleague if you try to convince him or her to think the same way you do. It's best to listen and observe rather than push your own beliefs.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spend time with friends that you don't see very often. If it isn't possible to physically visit, then call and touch base. You need to rekindle some of the connections that you've lost.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take care of pressing legal matters or concerns that involve large institutions or government agencies. You can resolve a great deal if you are persistent in getting your way. Don't take no for an answer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be honest about the way you feel. Your partner will be looking for a commitment, and you should be prepared to make one or move on.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be creative and get moving on those projects at work that need some special attention. Your attention to detail and efficiency will help you win points with the boss.

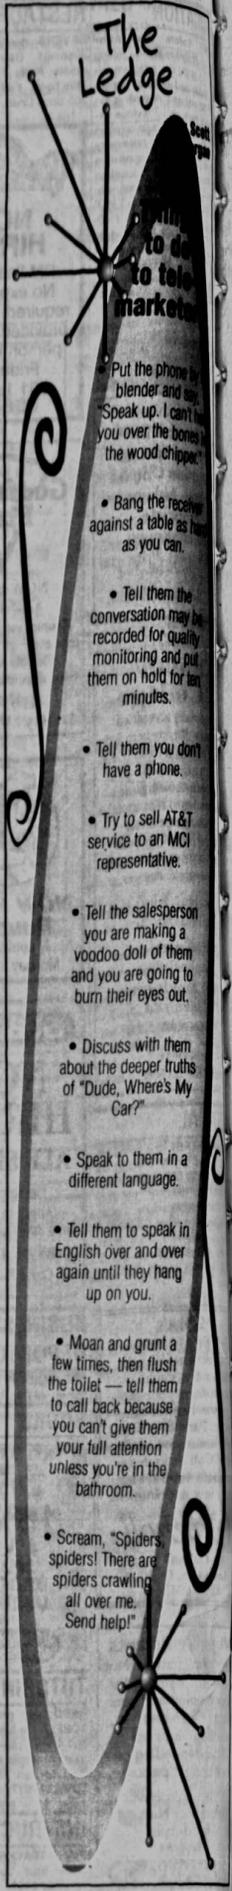

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You should follow your heart and your dreams. Look into activities that will bring you in contact with interesting people. You need to expand your circle of friends and take on new challenges.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone you live with may feel totally neglected. If you can include him or her in your plans, do so. Be prepared to make changes to your personal papers concerning insurance premiums.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You need to put some time aside to catch up on overdue correspondence with friends and relatives. Limitations may result if you become involved in the personal dilemmas of others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will get along well with colleagues if you are willing to accept their ideas. Start a small business.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You will attract attention if you participate in groups or join a co-ed fitness club. You need to socialize more to realize your full potential.

Put the phone on the blender and speak up. I can't hear you over the bones of the wood chipper!

- Bang the receiver against a table as hard as you can.
- Tell them the conversation may be recorded for quality monitoring and put them on hold for ten minutes.
- Tell them you don't have a phone.
- Try to sell AT&T service to an MCI representative.
- Tell the salesperson you are making a voodoo doll of them and you are going to burn their eyes out.
- Discuss with them about the deeper truths of "Dude, Where's My Car?"
- Speak to them in a different language.
- Tell them to speak in English over and over again until they hang up on you.
- Moan and grunt a few times, then flush the toilet — tell them to call back because you can't give them your full attention unless you're in the bathroom.
- Scream, "Spiders, spiders! There are spiders crawling all over me. Send help!"
