Regents' staff proposes 11.5% hike

By Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

In-state students in next year's senior class would pay $965 more in tuition and mandatory fees than what they paid when they were freshmen if a tuition increase proposed Wednesday is approved by the state of Iowa Board of Regents.

The proposal from the regents' staff calls for an 11.5 percent rise in base tuition for next fall. With mandatory fees figured in, the UI's base cost would increase by 12.5 percent, representing the largest hike in 14 years and an effort to make up for record state-funding cuts.

Only 2 percent of the increase would be set aside to improve quality at the university; the rest would cover inflation.

The regents will consider the increase at their Sept. 12-13 meeting at the UI. In October, regents will vote to either approve it or adjust it as they see fit.

If passed, the hike would increase UI tuition and fees for in-state students by $441 to $3,963. Out-of-state students would pay $13,361, an increase of $1,489 from this year.

Extra resources needed

Funding shortfalls from the state this year further compounded budget problems for all three state universities and contributed to the large tuition hike, UI President Mary Sue Coleman said. Coleman was forced to cut $14.4 million this year after a slowing economy put a $300 million hole in the state's budget.

"I'm quite worried about our ability to increase our resources and maintain what we've got," she said. "We are going to do the

Grad students get delay on tuition change

By John Molseed
The Daily Iowan

The UI will postpone for two years implementing a proposed tuition policy for some UI graduate students, pending a review by the state of Iowa Board of Regents.

The UI Graduate College proposed last spring that the policy be implemented this semester, but revisions made in response to protests by the UI Graduate Student Senate will likely delay its debut until fall 2003.

"We switched our frame of thinking and agreed with the students to give them and the departments some time to adjust to the changes," said John Keller, the interim dean of the Graduate College.

Post-comprehensive exam doctoral students may have to pay for at least two semester hours of tuition or for the number of credit hours they take starting in the fall of 2003 instead of the current $70 fee administered each semester. Two semester hours would cost $412 this year. The regents will review the issue during their Sept. 13 meeting.

The new tuition policy addresses the regents' concerns "in a much broader way" than the creators of the original See GRAD STUDENTS, Page 8A

Police don't match I.C. in diversity

By Mike Dhar
The Daily Iowan

It's midnight at the Iowa City Police Department. Someone calls, asking for assistance in a language no one there understands. The police call David Solis at his home, so he can translate into English a Spanish plea for help.

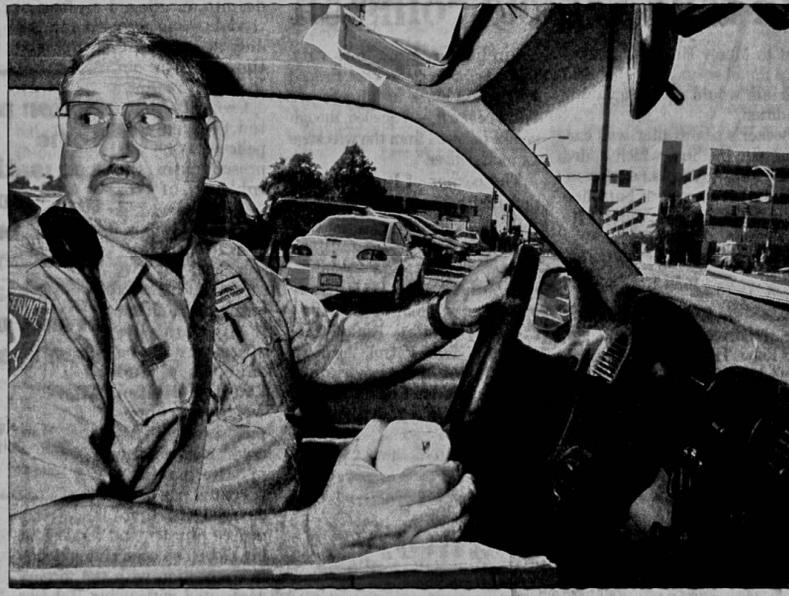

Solis, an Iowa City community service officer, and Jeff Fink are the only Spanish-speaking officers in the Iowa City Police Department — a department Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake says fails to reflect the diversity of the city it serves.

Attempting to recruit minority police officers when he tests applicants in January is one way Winkelhake plans to break the language barrier. He wants more police to speak a different language and more minorities to reflect the ethnicity of Iowa City.

"Iowa City should have more diversity within its police department," he said. "I think the confidence of the community is greater if it is reflected in the police department."

Two Latino and two black officers serve the department, together composing less than 3 percent of the department. It lacks any Asian officers, an ethnic group composing 5.6 percent of the Iowa City population. Blacks make up 3.7 percent of the city's population, and Latinos 2.9 percent, according to 2000 U.S. Census figures.

The department especially wants to attract Spanish-speaking police as the number of Spanish speakers increases in Iowa City, Winkelhake said. "If you can converse with them in their native language, you'll do a better job," he said.

The department has access to translators representing 27 different countries; however, questions of accuracy can arise when dealing with translators, he said.

Spanish speakers present difficulties for 911 operators, said Nancy Sereduck, the police emergency communications supervisor.

"If someone calls and he needs help right away, we can't give him all the help we could to someone who speaks English," she said.

On occasion, dispatchers instruct callers on how to stanch blood loss and perform CPR and the Heimlich maneuver, Sereduck said. Explaining the complicated procedures could pose problems if Spanish translators aren't available, she said. Emergency situations requiring instructions make up 5 percent of all calls placed to the Iowa City police, Sereduck said.

Solis, a North Liberty resident, said it takes him 20 minutes to respond when the department calls him at home asking for a translator.

"So far, it's been fast enough," he said.

Along with language barriers, officers have to work past cultural differences when working with minorities, Solis said. Many Central American cultures permit parents to spank their children and consider it a husband's right to hit his wife, he said.

"I try to explain to them that here in the U.S., you can't do that," Solis said. "I tell them someone's going to get arrested."

Virus helps HIV patients live longer

By Mike McWilliams
The Daily Iowan

A UI study found that HIV patients who also have a non-threatening virus are more likely to live longer than those who do not.

The study shows that patients with both GB Virus type C, a non-threatening virus, and HIV live longer than those with only HIV. The findings could have implications for the treatment of HIV, said UI researchers.

"At this point, we have a promising avenue for more research if we can figure out how this virus inhibits HIV," said Daniel Diekema, UI assistant professor of internal medicine and a member of the study. "It would then be likely that we could use that mechanism to treat HIV infection."

Although the study indicates that GBV-C benefits HIV treatment, it is too early in the research process to infect non-GBV-C patients with the virus, he said.

"We would not recommend intentionally infecting people with GBV-C because we don't know enough about the virus," Diekema said. "I think a lot more needs to be understood before we can take that step."

The study looked at data from 362 HIV patients, of which 144 had GBV-C. Approximately 28 percent of patients with both HIV and GBV-C died, while almost 56 percent of patients with only HIV died.

Patients were observed between 1988 and 2000. Those infected with HIV but not GBV-C were 3.68 times more likely to die than those with both viruses, said Jack Stapleton, a UI professor of internal medicine and researcher, in a prepared release.

Researchers also found that cells infected with both GBV-C and HIV produced 30 to 40 percent less HIV cells than cells infected only with HIV, said Stapleton, who is one of seven researchers involved in the study.

Researchers aren't certain why GBV-C, discovered in 1995, appears to slow down the

Coralville wary of collaborative smoking ban

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

The Coralville City Council is not ready to join Iowa City in drafting a collaborative ordinance banning smoking in local restaurants, councilors said Wednesday.

"I think at this point, we're indicating that you should proceed on your own," Coralville Mayor Jim Fausett told Iowa City councilors during a joint meeting. "It might change, but at this point we're not ready."

Iowa City councilors had believed joining forces would be in the towns' best interests to avoid an uneven playing field between businesses. But regardless of Coralville's decision, Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman said, Iowa City officials feel an ordinance is necessary and will proceed developing a draft on their own. Coralville councilors expressed concern about details Iowa City is discussing for its ordinance, which has yet to be drafted.

The ordinance Iowa City is considering would include only restaurants, defined as establishments that generate 50 percent of their revenue from food sales, according to the city attorney's office. A local group, Clean Air For Everyone, came up with the proposal.

"If I were going to be supportive of it, I'd include bars and vacuum cleaner stores if it's truly a health issue," Coralville councilor John Weihe said. "Why Mondo's and not the Union?"

Coralville Councilor Dave Jacoby pointed out that the city has two establishments that are smoke-free.

"(Coralville citizens) would be more pro-ordinance if there were no options," he said.

He added that he disagrees with the ordinance Ames recently developed — a sunset time in which the smoking bans in restaurants expire in the evening.

"Either do it, or don't," Jacoby said.

Developing a county-wide plan was another option briefly mentioned during the meeting. Officials turned it down, however, after learning Iowa City and Coralville would not be included. Only unincorporated areas would be affected by a county-wide ordinance, officials said.

In other business, the Johnson County Board of Supervisors reported to the councils that even the alternatives to transporting inmates to other jails have price tags. And these alternatives to fight overcrowding — including sending non-threatening inmates through a pre-trial release program — are only "temporary fixes," the supervisors said.

Report: Financial aid spikes 23 percent

By Casey Wagner
The Daily Iowan

Student financial aid available through state universities has surged 23 percent in the last five years, according to a financial-aid report released Wednesday.

The total hit a record-high $483,763,996 during 2000-01 — which is good and bad news for students. While there is more aid available, the major reason for the increase is because tuition has risen at about the same rate. The university sets aside 15-16 percent of tuition revenue for financial aid.

More money available balanced against a 12.5 percent tuition increase proposed Wednesday could ease the burden for needy students, said Mark Warner, UI director of financial aid.

"Clearly we are trying to help meet 100 percent of students' needs," Warner said "But it has to be understood that their needs are being met in a variety of ways."

More than seven out of 10 undergraduate students at Iowa's three public universities receive some type of financial aid, according to the report prepared by the staff of the state of Iowa Board of Regents. But more than 82 percent of UI undergraduate students received financial aid last year.

More federal-government money has also been available, supporting student aid in the form of grants, loans, and scholarships, Warner said.

More than $118 million was awarded to students at state regent institutions in 2000-01 in the form of grants and scholarships, representing a 29 percent increase in the last five years, according to the report.

The Iowa Work-Study program, however, is not funded this year because of state budget cuts.

The program paid 65 percent of the wages for students who are now participating in a similar federal work-study program.

More students are beginning to look to financial aid for assistance, and are able to choose from more options in the form of grants and scholarships, Warner said.

"The financial aid helps a lot," said UI freshman Samantha Lefler, adding that it's still a burden to keep up with tuition hikes.

UI graduates leave college averaging school-loan debts of $11,000, but about one-third incur no debt.

Firefighters work to extinguish a flaming truck and semitrailer on Interstate 80 near the Dodge Street exit Tuesday.

Driver killed, one injured in four-vehicle collision

By Nick Narigon
The Daily Iowan

A driver was killed in a four-vehicle collision that sent another person to the hospital and reduced a semitrailer to a husk of twisted, burning metal on the outskirts of Iowa City.

The cause of the accident has not been determined, but a semitrailer truck speeding through a construction area on Interstate 80 at about 9:36 p.m. Tuesday might have been a contributing factor, said Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Brotherton. Charges are pending against Edward Becker of Dyersburg, Tenn., he said.

Fire investigators said they estimated the wreck caused about $500,000 in damage.

The vehicles, three semitrailers and a pick-up truck, were traveling westbound in one lane on Interstate 80 and collided in a chain reaction as traffic slowed through a construction zone west of the Highway 1 overpass. The construction had closed off one lane of the two-lane interstate.

The pick-up truck driver was killed after the vehicle was crushed between two semitrailers. It exploded, causing the fourth semitrailer to catch fire, police said. The deceased driver's identity is being withheld, pending notification of the family. No other passengers were in the truck, Brotherton said.

Becker, whose semitrailer was destroyed in the inferno, was sent to Mercy Hospital in Iowa City for observation. Hospital officials would not release his condition.

Becker's semitrailer was carrying vinyl siding, which added to the intensity of the explosion, said Jim Humston, a battalion chief with the Iowa City Fire Department.

"It is a flammable plastic," Humston said. "We had concerns of toxicity."

Allen Mumm, of California, was the driver of the first semi, and Robin Larouche of Montreal, Canada, drove the second rig. Larouche's semitrailer sustained structural damage so severe it was towed away, Humston said. Brotherton said neither driver was treated for injuries.

Firefighters from Iowa City, Coralville, Solon, and West Branch fought the blaze for almost two hours before it was quelled, though smoke billowed from the wreckage for much longer.

The corner of Interstate 80 and Dodge Street was closed off in both directions at the corner all night. The westbound lane opened at about 9 a.m. Wednesday, and the eastbound lane opened up at 7 a.m.

Johnson County Ambulance, the Iowa State Patrol, the Iowa Department of Transportation, and the Johnson County Medical Examiner's Office also assisted at the scene of the accident.

Judge allows Memmer eyewitness testimony

By Sara Faiwell
The Daily Iowan

Judge David Remley ruled Wednesday that witnesses weren't tainted by newspaper photos of Jonathan Memmer.

Witness testimony is admissible in Memmer's Oct. 2 trial, Remley wrote in his ruling. He ruled against defense attorney Clemens Erdahl's Aug. 21 request to dismiss eyewitness testimony that he contended would hurt his client's case. Erdahl could not be reached for comment.

The photos of Memmer published in local papers were not suggestive, Remley ruled. However, the practice of showing a witness a single photo of a suspect that has been released to the press is potentially suggestive, he said.

In this situation, one eyewitness was able to positively identify Memmer in a photo lineup after speaking with him at a local bar for approximately an hour the night of March 18, 1999, Remley wrote. The witness, a bartender at Chauncy's, reportedly talked to and served the subject he identified, according to Johnson County Court records.

Because of the bartender's exclusive attention to Memmer, Remley ruled that under the totality of the circumstances, the suggestive single photo-identification procedure does not give rise to a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification," Remley wrote.

The bartender was "100 percent certain that it was the man he had seen," the judge wrote.

Remley also allowed testimony from another witness from an Iowa City QuickTrip who said she encountered a man resembling Memmer who revealed several details about the murders. The witness said she recognized one of the men in a photo lineup from the newspapers but that he was not the same person at the Quick-

Trip, records show.

Witnesses saw a photo lineup of six men of similar age with similar beards, hair, and glasses, according to Johnson County Court records, a practice Remley said is not misleading.

Memmer, 26, is accused of killing Laura Watson-Dalton, then 29, and Maria Therese Lehner, then 27, on March 19, 1999. Both were found at Apt. 4, 427 S. Van Buren St., after Memmer allegedly set fire to the apartment.

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White refused to comment on the ruling.

Coop alleges he witnessed robbery

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

Authorities say it is too early to decide whether to charge Daniel Coop with murder, despite an alleged confession that he was present for the July 20 robbery that preceded the death of an Iowa City realtor.

Coop, 43, admitted to Coralville police that he was present during the robbery of 76-year-old Donald James Hebert, court records show.

Hebert was strangled to death in his Coralville office, and police said Coop and Bradley Hylton went on a shopping spree with his credit card shortly after the murder.

Hylton has been charged with first-degree murder and forgery; so far, Coop has been charged only in connection with the forgery associated with using Hebert's credit card.

The alleged confession is documented in a request made by Coralville police for samples of Hylton's blood, hair, and saliva in an attempt to use physical evidence linking him to the robbery. The samples will be taken today at the Johnson County Jail. Police will not say whether they took physical evidence from Coop during the investigation.

Hylton, 26, allegedly admitted to duct-taping Hebert's airways to prevent him from surviving the attack, then strangleing him.

Coop allegedly touched Hebert to see if he was breathing after Hylton allegedly strangled him, Coralville police Lt. Ron Wenman wrote in an affidavit.

It's too early in the investigation to implicate or clear Coop of the murder, Wenman said. However, in the affidavit, many of Coop's and Hylton's statements describing the crime scene matched.

"Hylton made some accusations that Coop was there, but said that Coop only participated in events other than the murder," Wenman said.

Coop's faces seven counts of aiding and abetting forgery. He allegedly used Hebert's credit card to make purchases totaling $1,367.12 at the Coral Ridge Mall and Wal-Mart in Iowa City.

He will also stand trial for third-degree sexual abuse and lascivious acts with a child, charges from an unrelated incident involving a 9-year-old girl.

Coop surrendered to Keokuk officials on July 23 after a four-hour rooftop standoff and was transported to the Johnson County Jail. Coralville police arrested Hylton the day after Hebert's murder.

Coop's trial on the forgery charges is set for Oct. 15; the trial concerning the alleged sexual abuse is scheduled for Dec. 17.

Developers propose building apartments on lot

By Peter Rugg
The Daily Iowan

Developers proposed building commercial and apartment units on a downtown parking lot at a public meeting Wednesday night.

Southgate Development and Original Town Development are two of four developers competing for Parcel 64-1A, a parking lot between the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., and the Sheraton Hotel, 210 S. Dubuque St. Original Town Development bid approximately $1.8 million for the property, valued at $1.76, while Southgate offered the city $500,000.

Southgate proposed constructing a $25 million building that would contain Wells Fargo Bank, four stories of apartments, two stories of commercial office space, a possible skywalk link to the library, and several two-story condominiums overlooking the Pedestrian Mall. Southgate estimates the number of tenants at 200.

"The main advantage to this structure is that it can adapt to change in the marketplace," said Glenn Siders, Southgate construction manager.

The design would also expand the convention space of the Sheraton Hotel.

"Giving the Sheraton more room would be great for the city because it will allow them to attract more groups to the downtown area who wouldn't have been interested in coming before," said Mark Seabold, a Shive-Hattery architect and head designer for the project.

Several Iowa City residents in attendance questioned how compatible the building would be with downtown parking. Siders estimated that 100 stalls in the Dubuque Street parking ramp would need to be reserved for the building's employees in addition to an unknown number for library staff.

"I suppose if you can afford a luxury condo, you can afford a parking permit," said Carol Spaziani, a 42-year Iowa City resident. "But with the library staff and the bank and the tenants, I don't know where any-one else is going to park."

The parking problem will have to be dealt with in the future, Sider said.

"I don't know how we'd fix it," he said. "Parking is one of those unique problems downtown Iowa City has."

Original Town Development proposed constructing a parking facility with spaces for 190 cars and three stories of apartments, housing up to 275 people.

Joe Holland, the development company's attorney, said they would not request tax increment financing or tax abatement, meaning the property would not appear on tax rolls until it was completely developed. The project could take up to ten years.

"What will happen with our plan is that instead of giving a property tax to the city to distribute, we'll take the money and put it directly into the building to make sure it's in good condition," Holland said.

Two additional developers will present their proposals at a public meeting tonight at the public library at 7 p.m. A committee of city staffers will recommend a developer's proposal to the Iowa City City Council on Sept. 24.

'Syllabi don't grow on trees'

By Jackie Hammers
The Daily Iowan

Some UI students are being asked to purchase their class syllabi from a university copy center in what officials say is a cost-saving measure.

Approximately 800 students in Associate Professor John Solow's Principles of Microeconomics class must purchase the 13-page syllabus at a cost of 75 cents from the Pappajohn Business Building copy center. The syllabi are available on the Internet. However, students must turn in a contract only available with the paper copy stating that they have read and understand the syllabus in order to receive a grade for the class, Solow said.

"I want to spell out to the students their responsibility," he said of the contract. "It is ultimately the students' education."

The move saved more than half his annual budget of approximately $600, he said, adding that he is providing syllabi free of charge to smaller classes with shorter syllabi. Solow said he has asked some of his classes to purchase their syllabi from the copy center for at least four years.

One student has complained about the practice this year, he said.

"This is economics — there ain't no such thing as a free lunch," Solow said. "Paper and syllabi don't grow on trees."

Providing syllabi for the Microeconomics class alone would use more than half the money budgeted for general expenses, such as phone bills, office supplies, and other photocopying, Solow said.

"What it reflects is how tight things are," said Fred Anctzak, UI College of Liberal Arts and Sciences associate dean for academic programs.

The UI College of Liberal Arts and Sciences requires all instructors to furnish a paper college's associate dean for undergraduate programs.

Economics classes are required to abide by rules in both the liberal arts and business colleges because economics is a major in both.

"In general, I would instruct all faculty to include [syllabi] in the course packet, and that should be paid for by the students at the lowest possible cost that we can set," said Gary Fethke, dean of the College of Business. "Tuition nowhere near covers the cost of an education at the UI, and the cost has to be borne by somebody."

Funding will continue to be a major issue in classrooms, Hauserman said.

"People are looking to save money wherever they can," she said. "We don't ever want to do that at the expense of good teaching."

Syllabi will probably become more common on the Web and charging for them won't likely catch on, Hauserman said.

copy of their syllabi.

The policy may have to be reconsidered, as students can just as easily access syllabi on-line, Anctzak said.

The UI Henry B. Tippie College of Business doesn't specify policies regarding syllabi distribution, which varies from one professor to the next, said Nancy Hauserman, the

Faculty members celebrate college's new name

One hundred faculty members of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences celebrated the new name of the century-old college at a ceremony Wednesday.

"The new name of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences expresses more appropriately the breadth and depth of the college," David Skorton, vice president for research and interim vice president for external relations, told listeners.

Some science departments expressed interest in changing the name of the college, said Rex Honey, UI professor of geography and former faculty assembly president.

"I think everybody saw some merit in doing this," he said. Before the renaming took effect this summer, Linda Maxson, dean of the college, said professors from other universities thought it was odd for her to be in liberal arts because she is a biologist.

"If you look at other colleges of liberal arts, they don't include the sciences," she said.

Other ideas have been considered for how to display the sciences to the outside world, including a request in the mid-90s to split the college.

"It would be difficult on departments that transcend those boundaries; it was much better for these straddling disciplines that we maintained the college," Honey said.

Blooming Prairie employees approve contract

After several months of contract negotiations, Blooming Prairie Warehouse employees voted 27-23 Wednesday night to approve a contract proposal put forth by representatives of the company and the Teamsters Local 238. Approximately 100 workers are members of the bargaining unit at the company's Iowa City location.

"There was give and take on both sides, and we are pleased to reach an agreement," said Blooming Prairie CEO Jesse Singerman. "It's been a long process and we are very happy it's been brought to a successful conclusion. We're pleased to move forward and get back to work."

The current contract will cover the next two years and many employees are happy the process is over, said Larry Beardshear, a Blooming Prairie employee.

"We got a contract; we needed some protection," Beardshear said. "This was the final part of a long process. We just needed to end it."

Blooming Prairie distributes natural and organic products throughout the upper Midwest and has been in business in Iowa City since 1974. The company has close to 200 employees at its Iowa City warehouse. Blooming Prairie also operates a warehouse in Minnesota.

Policeman hurt by bomb aimed at Catholic School

By Chris Fontaine
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Schoolgirls screamed and their parents ducked after Protestant extremists hurled a homemade grenade at them Wednesday, the third day of a hate-fueled confrontation outside a Catholic elementary school in Northern Ireland.

Two police officers were knocked to the ground by the blast; one suffered shrapnel wounds in his legs, authorities said. Three Protestant militants were arrested in connection with the blast.

"It was awful that a policeman was hit, but it could have been one of those little girls. That has been my fear all along," said the Rev. Aidan Troy, governor of the besieged school in the north Belfast neighborhood of Ardoyne.

The girls were walking with police and their parents through a Protestant neighborhood for a third day of classes at Holy Cross Primary School.

"When the bomb went off I was scared to turn round to look behind me. I thought the children and parents that were just behind me were dead," said Isabel McGrann, who had escorted her 7-year-old daughter, Emma.

A young Roman Catholic girl is comforted by her mother after arriving at Holy Cross Roman Catholic school in north Belfast Wednesday. The Catholic children came under attack from stone-throwing Protestant protesters for a third day as they made their way to school.

China, media companies near deal to trade programs

By Ted Anthony
Associated Press

BEIJING — Looking to spread its culture through television, China said Wednesday that it is near an extraordinary agreement to allow direct foreign broadcasts into citizens' homes — if an English-language channel run by the Chinese government is disseminated across the United States.

The agreement, if successful, would mean American cable boxes could serve up authentic Chinese cooking shows, homegrown kung-fu dramas, and even newscasts straight from the central government in Beijing.

Under the proposed deal, News Corp. and AOL Time Warner could broadcast programming to homes in parts of southern China.

In return, the two companies would ensure wide access to the United States for CCTV-9, which is part of China's main state television network, said a spokeswoman for the State General Administration of Radio, Film, and Television.

China's insistence on access for CCTV-9 reflects efforts to improve the government's image in the United States. "Many Chinese understand the United States, but Americans don't know much about China," said the spokeswoman, who wouldn't give her name.

News Corp's Asian subsidiary, STAR, confirmed it was in "advanced discussions" with the Chinese government.

"China's increasing openness augurs well for the whole broadcasting industry," James Murdoch, STAR's chairman and the youngest son of media magnate Rupert Murdoch, said in the statement. "We are hopeful that we can reach a positive conclusion soon and launch a new service."

Islamic aid build mosque

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Before giving away five freshly baked pieces of bread, Atta Mohammed carefully studied the soiled white card offered up by a small boy.

The bread was cooked at a bakery run by Al-Rasheed Trust, the largest of several new Islamic charities to open in Afghanistan. The boy, Hamid, is the son of a government worker who likely earns less than $4 a month.

In just four months, Kabul's landscape has changed: White signs emblazoned with the name of the Pakistani-based Al-Rasheed Trust have suddenly appeared on every other street.

"The money is collected from Muslims clerics all over the world," said Mohammed. Most aid recipients are poorly paid government servants.

Facing walkout threat, delegates struggle for compromise at racism conference

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — Under threat of a devastating European walkout, the World Conference Against Racism held closed-door meetings Wednesday to try to find compromise language on the Israel-Palestinian conflict and reparations for slavery.

France warned it and the European Union could follow the United States and Israel by quitting the U.N. meeting, which was meant to highlight discrimination around the world but has been marred by discord over efforts to condemn Israel for "racist policies."

"If comparisons between Zionism and racism remain, the question of France's, and the European Union delegation's, departure would be posed immediately," French Prime Minister Lionel Jospin told a Cabinet meeting, according to spokesman Jean-Jack Queyranne. "France and the European Union would seek a departure from this conference, which would mark a failure."

EU delegates said they had set a deadline of Wednesday night to make substantial progress on the issue.

Koen Vervaeke, spokesman for Belgian Foreign Minister Louis Michel, who is leading the EU delegation, said the EU would not sign a document that takes sides in the Middle East conflict. However, he said the delegation had no immediate plans to leave.

"Walking away is not on the agenda at this moment," Vervaeke said. "Everybody has to gain from a successful outcome to this conference."

Delegates from the 15 EU countries said they would act as a bloc along with 13 nations that are candidates for EU membership.

Terry Nichols faces state murder charges

By TIM TALLEY
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — Ending months of speculation over whether he would drop the case, the new district attorney in Oklahoma City said Wednesday that he will prosecute bombing conspirator Terry Nichols on state murder charges that could bring the death penalty.

District Attorney Wes Lane said he will pursue the 160 first-degree murder counts brought by his predecessor two years ago.

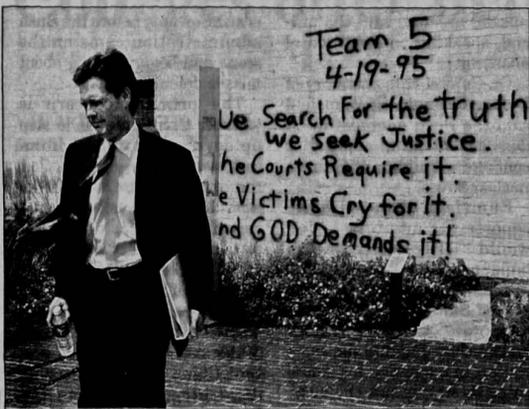

"Accountability with the laws of Oklahoma demand that we stay the course," Lane said at the site of the 1995 bombing that killed 168 people.

Nichols, 46, was convicted in federal court of conspiracy and involuntary manslaughter and is serving a life sentence. But he has appealed, and Lane said he wants to make sure Nichols does not escape punishment.

"I simply do not know what might loom out there on the legal horizon which would place Terry Nichols' federal conviction in jeopardy," he said. "The interests of the people of the state of Oklahoma cannot be vindicated by the blind reliance upon the federal government or Terry Lynn Nichols."

The state murder charges were filed in 1999 by District Attorney Bob Macy, who was removed from the case last year after explaining to the media how he wanted to put Nichols to death.

Fox surprises Bush with timetable

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press White House Correspondent

Doug Mills/Associated Press
President Bush stands with Mexican President Vicente Fox during an arrival ceremony at the White House in Washington.

WASHINGTON — Mexican President Vicente Fox, the first state visitor of the Bush presidency, challenged the United States on Wednesday to strike an agreement on immigration reform by the end of the year. President Bush said "there is no more important relationship" than Mexico's, but did not embrace Fox's ambitious deadline.

The public challenge surprised U.S. officials who have been trying to lower expectations for a deal on the complex and politically risky issue. Even some Mexican officials said they had no notice that Fox would push for quick action.

The two-day state visit, important to both Bush and Fox, began promptly at 9 a.m. EDT when a military band struck up a Sousa march and the two presidents strolled shoulder-to-shoulder onto the White House back lawn.

Military honor guards stood stone-faced as their battle ribbons, jostled atop flag poles by a cool wind, whipped at their faces.

Bush, hoping to court Hispanic voters for his 2004 re-election bid, said Wednesday's formal welcoming ceremony, one-on-one Oval Office session, rare joint Cabinet meeting, and state dinner — along with his and Fox's joint trip today to Ohio — amounted to a "recognition that the United States has no more important relationship in the world."

With all the pageantry a president can muster, Bush welcomed Fox to what he called the "Casa Blanca" and said, "We understand that our two nations must work together in a spirit of respect and common purpose to seize opportunities and tackle challenges on the issues that affect the lives of our citizens, including migration, the environment, drugs, crime, corruption, and education."

Bush administration defends stem-cell limits

By Laura Meckler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fewer than half the embryonic stem-cell lines approved for federal funding are ready for research, the Bush administration admitted Wednesday as it defended the president's restrictions to skeptics on Capitol Hill.

Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson said he expects more of the existing cell lines to be developed fully by the time federal grants are issued next year. Even if they aren't, he said, two dozen cell lines are enough to get the science moving.

Thompson also announced the administration had reached its first — and most important — agreement on patent issues that will allow research to go forward. Under the agreement, the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation, which holds patents on the method of isolating cells, will allow widespread use for research.

"Our challenge now is to move beyond the halls of debate and into the labs of science," Thompson told the Senate Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee in the most extensive public debate since President Bush said he would allow limited federal funding for research using stem cells from human embryos.

Thompson faced clear skepticism from senators who argued the Bush policy will hamper researchers and delay treatments for millions of Americans who suffer from Parkinson's, Alzheimer's, and other diseases. Scientists hope they can coax stem cells, which can develop into any sort of human tissue, into new cells to treat disease.

"It would be unacceptable to offer these patients and their families the promise of effective stem-cell research but deny them the reality of it," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the committee's chairman.

Kennedy called the Bush restrictions "very troublesome," but it remained unclear whether research proponents have sufficient support to overturn the Bush plan.

The research is controversial because the stem cells come from days-old embryos, typically those left over from fertility clinics that are scheduled to be destroyed. Despite this, some people believe it's morally wrong to use them for research.

Last month, Bush struck a "middle ground," saying federal money could support this research but only on stem cell colonies in existence on Aug. 9, 2001, the date of his speech. Embryos already had been destroyed in such cell lines.

China to modernize its military

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — China intends to modernize its nuclear and other military forces whether or not the United States follows through with development of a defense against long-range missiles, a Chinese diplomat said Wednesday.

Upgrading China's forces is a natural development along with growth of the Chinese economy, the official said. They go hand-in-hand, he told reporters at the Chinese Embassy.

China will hold to its pledge under the international test ban treaty not to conduct a nuclear weapons test explosion, he said.

But there are other ways, in the laboratories and using computers, to improve China's missile arsenal, said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

On Capitol Hill, Secretary of Defense Donald H. Rumsfeld said the Bush administration does not intend to approve or condone a buildup of China's nuclear forces.

Rumsfeld disputed news reports the administration would tacitly accept such a buildup.

"The suggestion that the United States has or is poised to approve of China's military and nuclear buildup for some reason in exchange for something is simply not the case, notwithstanding what people are reading in the press," Rumsfeld told a Senate appropriations subcommittee.

Meanwhile, a senior U.S. official told the Associated Press that China's forces were slated for expansion and modernization long before the Bush administration came on the scene and began talking about missile defenses.

The primary concern is whether China intends to step up development of medium-range and long-range missiles, the official said. China is far behind in both areas, but it is barred from developing intermediate-range missiles as the United States and Russia are by treaty, the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The official said the United States can do nothing to prevent China from modernizing its strategic forces, but the Bush administration would not sit idly by if it did.

For one thing, he said, the administration intends to enforce stringently an agreement reached with China last November to curb the spread of missile technology.

Bush wants documents secret

By John Soloman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Setting up a legal showdown, President Bush prepared to invoke executive privilege to keep secret documents about prosecutors' decision-making as a congressional committee stepped up pressure Wednesday to obtain the materials.

The White House move, if made, would be Bush's first known use of executive privilege, a doctrine recognized by the courts to ensure presidents can get candid advice in private without fear of it becoming public.

White House Counsel Alberto

Gonzales recommended that Bush make the privilege claim if a Republican-led House committee subpoenas the memos about three Clinton-era cases or seeks to question Attorney General John Ashcroft about them, administration officials told the Associated Press.

The House Government Reform Committee drafted subpoenas demanding the disputed documents and planned to serve Ashcroft today.

The committee also expanded its request beyond the three original Clinton cases to include 13 other types of documents involving the FBI's controversial handling of mob informants in the Boston area over three decades, according to a draft of the subpoena obtained by the AP.

The Bush administration has researched at least four other instances in which executive privilege was cited involving similar documents, officials said.

Executive privilege is best known for the unsuccessful attempts by former Presidents Nixon and Clinton to keep evidence secret in impeachment investigations.

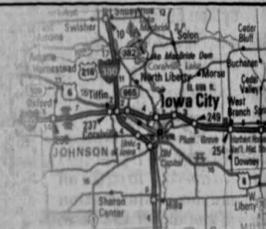

Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., the chairman of the House committee, said the Bush administration's stance threatened Congress' ability to oversee the executive branch.

Colleges offer deferment for housing

By Harry R. Weber
Associated Press

HANOVER, N.H. — A campus housing crunch at schools around the country is so bad that Dartmouth College has offered freshmen the chance to defer their first year in return for a year of free housing.

Fourteen students out of the roughly 2,000 the Ivy League school accepted this year have taken Dartmouth up on its offer — worth about $5,000 — which was extended because of increased student enrollment.

Other colleges and universities in a similar bind are building more dorms, converting study lounges into bedrooms, or even renting hotels.

"A lot of people asked me, 'Aren't you going to be a year behind?'" said Anthony Bramante, who is delaying his entry into Dartmouth. "But others admitted that if given the chance to do it, they would."

Observers cite three reasons for the enrollment increases: the economy, demographics, and the Internet.

With the economic slowdown, more high-school graduates — estimated at 2.8 million this year — are choosing college over jobs, and the children of baby boomers are reaching college age.

On top of that, the Internet has made applying to college easier. With students applying to more schools, admissions officers have had a tougher time gauging who will attend in the fall, said Barmak Nassirian, a policy analyst at the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers.

For instance, Bates College in Lewiston, Maine, is one of 227 schools that all use the same online undergraduate application. Bates has had to house four students, instead of three, in freshmen dorm rooms this year because of increased enrollment.

Overcrowding is "all the more acute at the large public universities and the elite Ivy institutions," Nassirian said.

The problem seems unlikely to go away.

In the next decade, undergraduate and graduate school enrollment is projected to increase 20 percent, from 14.8 million in 1999 to 17.7 million by 2011, according to the American Council on Education.

The council also says more high-school seniors today are deciding to go straight to college than in years past. In 1999, the group says, 63 percent of high school seniors went to college within 12 months of graduation, compared with 49 percent in 1980.

The enrollment increases may force some colleges to become more selective in the future.

"I suspect that a number of the colleges that are a little higher than they want to be in terms of enrollment will have to alter their admissions rates," said Wylie Mitchell, dean of admissions at Bates. Other educators agree.

In Spokane, Wash., Gonzaga University couldn't find enough beds on campus for its 970 incoming freshmen this fall, so it arranged for 80 first- and second-year students to live at the River Inn, a hotel next to campus.

"For us, this really is a first," said Phil Ballinger, dean of admissions.

George Washington University leased an entire hotel in downtown Washington to house its overflow students; the University of Arizona has converted study lounges into bedrooms.

At Dartmouth, 51.7 percent of accepted students enrolled compared to 49.7 percent last year and 48.2 percent five years ago. Next year, Dartmouth probably will count on a higher number of students accepting admission, said Karl Furstenberg, dean of admissions and financial aid.

"We are very heartened by the fact that Dartmouth is so popular among top high-school students," Furstenberg said.

While colleges have been building more dormitories for two decades (six modular units have been constructed at Dartmouth), officials admit the demand has outpaced supply in places.

Gary Schwarzmuller, executive director of the Association of College and University Housing Officers, said the enrollment surge is strongest in the South, New England, and parts of the West.

"Having waiting lists and insufficient capacity is not new. I think what is new is it's particularly intense in a few areas right now," he said.

Bramante, an 18-year-old from Cleveland, will split the next year between working at a group home for mentally handicapped adults and hiking the Appalachian Trail. He also hopes to earn enough to help offset his hefty tuition bill next year.

"They encouraged us to take a year off and made it easy, so I decided to take it," Bramante said. "It all kind of worked out."

Board of Regents' staff calls for tuition increase

REGENTS

but a tuition increase is one of the only ways to make up for funding cuts, said Regent David Neil.

"We can't continue to cut government spending and continue to provide services," he said. "There's no good answer to all of this."

The UI would like to reinvest in the liberal arts next year, adding faculty and catering to majors that demand more resources, Coleman said.

Not as high as first projected

UI Student Government President Nick Klenske said student leaders are pleased the increase isn't as high as the previously projected hike of 15-20 percent. However, Klenske said, UISG is still concerned that the proposed increase will have a large effect, coming as it does on top of past increases.

Next year's seniors from Iowa paid $2,966 when they were freshmen. A slowing economy and a cutback in state support to higher education have led to increases of 6.9 percent and 9.9 percent the past two years.

"This increase jeopardizes the few things Iowa has to offer — a good education at a low price," Klenske said.

The UISG plans to speak at the regents' meeting next week and to continue to rally through October, speaking with regents one-on-one and planning a trip to Ames for the final vote on tuition.

'An added burden'

UI sophomore Chris Chapman said he'll have to start applying for loans and additional scholarships so he can remain at the university if the proposal is approved.

"It will definitely be an added burden to the already high costs," said Chapman, who is from Minnesota. "I think it will hinder out-of-state students down the road from coming to Iowa, and it will negatively affect the university if tuition continues to rise."

Despite the tuition hike, he said he plans on returning to the UI next year and hopefully graduate, unless tuition becomes too unreasonable.

GRAD STUDENTS

policy intended, Keller said.

UI administrators said the current policy is outdated and doesn't take into account university and departmental resources accessible to graduate students. Certain departments require post-comp students to utilize campus resources more than others, Keller said, adding that some departments aren't accurately monitoring such usage.

"The issue is overall cost," he said. "Distant resources are now available to students who may live far from campus."

Opponents of the proposal had originally requested that the policy contain a grandfather clause because some students had been recruited to the university based on the $70 fee. However, Graduate Student Senate President Kyle Gassiott said he's satisfied with how the new policy will be implemented.

"The original idea was progressive implementation of the plan," he said. "This leaves at least this year and next year for students and departments to adjust."

The new policy is a good example of the necessity for student involvement in administrative affairs, Grassiot said.

"I hope graduate students take this as a cue to see who represents them in the Graduate Student Senate and if they are staying informed and working in the students' best interest," he said.

WORLD BRIEF

Colombia sees wider war without extending rebel safe haven

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — President Andres Pastrana warned Wednesday that an effort to retake a controversial rebel safe haven would aggravate Colombia's 37-year war. "If there is no demilitarized zone it will mean war, a heightening of the conflict," he told reporters.

The comments by Pastrana and other senior officials suggest the government is planning to extend the duration of the rebel control over the 16,200 square-mile territory, despite growing criticism from the United States and Colombia's military about guerrilla activities in the area.

Interior Minister Armando Estrada said Tuesday that the government was considering a six-month extension after the current agreement expires in October. The alternative would be "all-out war," Estrada said.

I saw enough of that growing up."

For some, the situation can get even stickier if police lack experience with these cultures and fail to understand their beliefs, he said.

Solis grew up in South Texas, where he knew many Central Americans, which has prepared him for what he encounters on the police force.

In an effort to address cultural differences, the department conducts yearly diversity training sessions to teach officers about cultural differences they may confront.

The department also advertises testing dates for potential police officers, and representatives attend job fairs in diverse communities such as Chicago, the Quad Cities, Des Moines, Omaha, and St. Louis, in an effort to attract minorities.

Those efforts have failed, Winkelhake said. The department has contacted other police departments looking for minorities to work in Iowa City, he said.

proportion of HIV. The GBV-C was first thought to cause hepatitis, but was later found not to cause hepatitis or any other disease. GBV-C is found in nearly 2 percent of healthy blood donors in the U.S.

Dr. Sabina Wuenschmann, who was involved in the study, said GBV-C appeared to work better when blood cultures were first infected with GBV-C and then HIV, as opposed to first HIV or both viruses simultaneously.

"We think GBV-C is inducing a cellular factor that is soluble and interfering with HIV replication," she said.

Results of the study will appear in today's New England Journal of Medicine along with a German-led study that also shows GBV-C is beneficial for HIV patients.

An alternative jail site may become another possibility if the other suggestions are unsuccessful, Thompson said. # Evidence against Adam Moss mounts in Fish killing

By Emily Gersema
Associated Press

SIoux CITY, Iowa — The employee who had gone to Ron Fish's home last week to check on the missing businessman found blood running out the front door, according to police reports.

He found the back door open, walked in and saw Fish slumped in the front entryway with a knife in his back.

Adam Moss is accused of killing his girlfriend, Leticia Aguilar, and her five children, and then killing Fish and stealing his car. Moss was being held Wednesday — his 24th birthday — under $7 million bond. Formal charges were expected to be filed this week, with arraignment set for September 11.

Evidence indicates Moss may have waited for Fish or lingered in his home. A half-dozen cigarette butts were found in an ashtray, and another six butts were found on the floor of the TV room in Fish's home, according to police records. An empty beer can sat on the end table.

Friends said Fish, 58, usually drank wine or nonalcoholic beverages.

Police found a serrated knife, a tuft of hair and two bloody footprints in the entryway. A bent claw hammer and bent steak knife were found on the floor of the sitting room. A nine-inch knife blade was found on a bench in the room, records said.

Police also seized clothing lying on the floor and several Mason jars found in the entryway and sitting room. Blood was found on the floor of the master bath and pocket items were found on the bed, records said.

Police Chief Joe Frisbie did not immediately return phone calls seeking comment on the evidence.

District Associate Judge Timothy Jarman denied a motion from Moss' attorney that the crime scenes be preserved for examination by defense experts.

Mike Williams, who was appointed by the court, submitted the motion Wednesday. Neither Williams nor the county attorney, Tom Mullin, would comment.

Jarman set another hearing at 3 p.m. Today, giving attorneys time to review his order.

Police have said Moss formerly worked for Fish, who ran a local tire store with his sister. Fish's sister had sent an employee to check on Fish when he didn't show up for work on August 30.

About the same time, Leticia Aguilar's sister, Yolanda Garcia, and baby sitter, Donna Stabile, were walking into the Aguilar home, where Aguilar and her five children were slain.

Garcia has said she earlier had tried to use her key on the front door, but it wouldn't open. She called Stabile, and the two used her key in the back door.

Stabile spotted the bodies of two of the children, and forced Garcia out of the house before calling police.

Among the items recovered from Aguilar's home were a knife protruding from the front door jamb, another knife atop the refrigerator, and a hammer found beneath Aguilar's bed. Police also seized clothing, including clothes found in the washing machine and on the floor, and bedding.

In both homes, police took photographs and videotapes of the scene. They took fingerprints and swabbed the refrigerator handle and bathroom faucet.

All seven victims died of "blunt and sharp force trauma," according to the state medical examiner's office.

Clown cleared of indecent exposure charge

Associated Press

MOLINE, Ill. — Chuckles the clown was cleared of an indecent exposure charge Wednesday by a judge who decided the entertainer may have flashed children during a performance, but it wasn't a crime.

Chuckles, whose real name is Kimble McLain, 42, of Rock Island, was found innocent after an hour-long trial before Municipal Judge Dana McReynolds, who heard the case without a jury. McReynolds said State's Attorney Marshall Douglas failed to prove McLain exposed himself on purpose rather than by accident.

"The only real evidence the state has mustered here is that he was exposed," the judge said. McLain could not be reached for comment afterward.

He was arrested on May 7, 2000, after allegedly exposing himself to children at the Moline Wal-Mart, where a Mexican food vendor had hired him to do magic tricks and make balloon animals during a Cinco de Mayo celebration.

During the trial, Wal-Mart shoppers and employees testified they could see McLain's genitals while he was within touching distance of children.

McLain told police he was mobbed by children and didn't realize the zipper of his clown costume was open until a boy told him he was exposing himself. McLain said he quickly fixed the zipper and went back to work.

GOP leaders crave tax cuts

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Top congressional Republicans said Wednesday they want new legislation to stimulate the economy including cuts in the capital gains tax rate, despite President Bush's wish to delay such an effort.

The GOP split emerged as Republicans stepped up efforts to combat Democratic claims that this year's tax cut was so costly that, unless savings are found, it could force the use of Social Security surpluses to pay for defense, education, and other increases that both sides support.

In a private meeting, House GOP leaders decided to ask the White House to take administrative actions in the last days of this fiscal year to ensure that Social Security surpluses are not spent, Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., said in a brief interview. Fiscal 2001 ends on Sept. 30, and lawmakers have little taste for enacting 11th-hour spending cuts this year.

As for making sure Social Security surpluses are not siphoned next year, one option House GOP leaders discussed is an across-the-board cut in spending, said another participant in the meeting speaking on condition of anonymity. Congress currently is working on next year's spending bills.

Hastert also said Republicans want to work this fall on a capital-gains tax reduction and other measures that could "keep growing the economy." Just Tuesday, Bush said he preferred to wait until next year to see if the $1.35 trillion, 10-year tax cut enacted this year was bolstering the flagging economy.

"It's saying, 'What else can we do to keep this economy going and to grow the economy,'" Hastert told reporters after meeting Wednesday with Bush. "And that's what we're interested in doing."

Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., also said he wanted to pursue a capital-gains tax cut this fall. He said it could be attached to a minimum wage boost that Democrats want or other legislation.

In addition, House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, and Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., came out for a fresh effort to revive the economy. In separate comments to reporters, each said the measure should include a capital-gains tax cut, strengthened authority for Bush to negotiate overseas trade pacts, or other items.

The divergent timetables for action between Bush and congressional Republicans is fueled by the differing political needs of the two.

GOP lawmakers face November 2002 elections for control of Congress in which they want to be seen as having tried mightily to revive the economy. Bush, nurturing his image as a compassionate Republican for his 2004 re-election bid, has so far distanced himself from a capital-gains tax reduction, criticized by Democrats as an expensive boon to the rich.

Some in party cringe at Reno's run

By Ken Thomas
Associated Press

MIAMI — Janet Reno crisscrosses Florida in a red pickup. Those who have something to say to her can just call her up — she's in the book. And when she announced her run for governor, she didn't call a news conference; she invited reporters over to her rustic house for one-on-one interviews.

In an age of slick, blow-dried politicians, Reno's campaign to be the next governor of Florida promises to be unlike any seen in years.

But to some Democratic Party officials, her unorthodox ways and her close association with the controversies of the Clinton years make her candidacy a nightmare at worst, a giant leap of faith at best.

"She's quality, but I don't want to see this election turn into a Bill Clinton agenda and a Janet Reno agenda from the Clinton years," said Hillsborough County chairman Mike Scionti. "It's crazy. It's the worst thing the Democratic Party could do."

Adam Goodman, a Florida-based GOP strategist, said: "As far as Republicans are concerned, a Reno candidacy is a good thing."

Democratic leaders are aiming to deny Gov. Jeb Bush a second term. They consider the race a golden opportunity for retribution for the overtime 2000 election and a chance to weaken President Bush before the 2004 White House campaign.

But afraid that Republicans will paint her as too liberal, many Democrats are unconvinced that Reno is the answer. Some party leaders tried to persuade Reno to stay on the sidelines, pointing to polls that show her easily winning the Democratic nomination but failing to muster enough swing voters to defeat Bush.

"When you get people telling you that you're wonderful and telling you 'I'll support you,' it's hard not to think you'd win," said Tallahassee lawyer Dexter Douglass. "I imagine it's like serving in combat: A lot of dead people never thought they'd get shot."

This is the first statewide campaign for Reno, who served five terms as a prosecutor in Dade County before becoming President Clinton's attorney general in 1993.

Her journey for governor has been anything but typical. She usually travels alone to campaign stops — sometimes several hours away — in a Ford Ranger she bought when she left Washington. She acts as her own press secretary and scheduler, though she recently opened a small office where one employee works. At town meetings, she speaks so softly that people have to crane their necks to hear her.

Rain smiles on Montana wildfire

By Tom Lacey
Associated Press

WEST GLACIER, Mont. — Desperately needed rain began falling Wednesday on a wildfire that burned into Glacier National Park, giving firefighters hope and breaking more than two weeks of hot, dry, and windy weather that favored the fire.

"God's smiling down on us," Bill Paxton said as he and other fire-information officers watched the rain from a fire camp in Columbia Falls, just outside the park.

But fire bosses warned that the showers were not enough to drown flames that have burned 64,000 acres in northwestern Montana, including more than 14,000 acres in the park.

Firefighters awoke to intermittent showers and cool temperatures Wednesday morning. "We woke up with wet pants and wet ground," said Chadeen Palmer, a fire-information officer.

By late morning, the showers had turned to a steady, constant rain, and a sky that had been faded brown by smoke for days turned dark and overcast with heavy rain clouds for the first time since the fire began.

"This rain is going to stop the (growth) to almost nothing," said fire information officer Bob McKinney. "It won't put it out, but it won't spread very much either."

The rain and cooler temperatures were a welcome change to the more than 1,000 firefighters whose efforts to beat back the flames have been hampered by hot, dry weather and strong winds. On Labor Day, fire bosses yanked all firefighters off the lines and grounded their air attack because of high winds.

The blaze, which began outside the park on Aug. 14, is still considered only about 5 percent contained, but crews expected to gain ground Wednesday. Forecasts through Today call for more cool temperatures and the possibility of more rain.

Parents arrested after son's party with a stripper

NEW CASTLE, N.Y. (AP) — The parents of a high-school football player were arrested for allegedly holding a team party with beer, marijuana, and a stripper who let students as young as 15 lick whipped cream off her body.

Robert and Rochelle Wien were charged with endangering the welfare of a child and unlawfully dealing with a child. The offenses carry up to a year in jail.

"The parents were present and aware of what was going on, not just in terms of the alcohol that was being imbibed by these high schoolers, but in terms of the actual sexual acts that were taking place in their backyard," District Attorney Jeanine Pirro said.

Police said they were responding to a noise complaint September 1 when they found the naked woman on her back performing a lewd act on the Wiens' patio. Pirro said there were 30 to 40 students, including some girls, at the party.

Detective Sgt. James Carroll said the stripper was about halfway through a $325, hour-long act when officers interrupted and told her to get dressed.

Pirro said the stripper apparently was hired by some students. The woman was not charged.

The party marked the end of summer training camp for the team from Horace Greeley High School in Chappaqua.

Macedonian officials deny report of tortured civilians

By Elena Becatoros
Associated Press

SKOPJE, Macedonia — Macedonian forces committed widespread abuses during a village siege last month that killed 10 ethnic Albanian civilians, Human Rights Watch charged Wednesday, and it called for a war crimes investigation. Macedonian authorities rejected the New York-based group's findings as inaccurate and biased, insisting they reacted in self-defense while under rebel fire. Human Rights Watch accused security forces of shooting and killing six ethnic Albanian civilians and burning at least 22 houses, stores, and sheds from Aug. 10-12 in the village of Ljuboten, about four miles northeast of the capital, Skopje. The group said its evidence indicated "the attack on Ljuboten had no military justification and was carried out for purposes of revenge and reprisal."

The government said it launched the offensive in response to a land mine explosion that killed eight soldiers. Indiscriminate shelling killed another three civilians, and one more was fatally shot by government forces as he tried to flee, the group's report said. As hundreds of villagers fled the fighting, police separated more than 100 men and boys from their families and took them to police stations in Skopje, where some were beaten, the report said. It also implicated Interior Minister Ljube Boskovski in the bloodshed, saying local television reported he was there during the operation. His presence "on the day that some of the worst abuses in Macedonia's six-month-old conflict were committed — abuses including the execution-style killing of civilians, house-by-house arson, looting, beatings, and torture — demands an investigation," the report said.

But Boskovski vehemently rejected the allegations, saying he arrived only after the end of the operation. "I do not have any intention to justify myself, because I don't have anything to justify myself for," Boskovski told the Associated Press. He said he would seek legal recourse at the European Court of Human Rights to clear his name. "I want to end this speculation and these lies presented by this quasi-international organization," Boskovski said. Boskovski claimed that after the events in Ljuboten, residents prevented the public prosecutor, magistrate, and ministry experts from entering the village to conduct an investigation or carry out autopsies. He also insisted it was unclear whether those killed were truly civilians, or if they were killed by the rebels instead of Macedonian forces.

Concorde gets its wings back

By Elaine Ganley
Associated Press

PARIS — Just over a year after a deadly crash, French and British officials clear the Concorde fleet of 12 aircraft for flight once safety modifications are made. The announcement came 13 months and 11 days after an Air France Concorde crashed minutes after takeoff from Paris, killing all 109 passengers and crew and four people on the ground. "Air France is very pleased with the decision ... to reinstate Concorde's airworthiness certificate," the carrier said in a statement, adding that it would resume commercial service between Paris and New York in November. British Airways, which owns the other seven Concorde, said it intended to resume London-New York supersonic service soon, but did not set a date. The "mandatory airworthiness directive" from civil aviation authorities lays out changes to be made to the aircraft before it can resume its trans-Atlantic flights. The major changes address the chain of events that sent the sleek needle-nosed plane, carrying mainly German vacationers, into a fiery dive into a hotel in the town of Gonesse on July 25, 2000. Air France grounded its Concorde fleet immediately after the crash. British Airways doggedly kept flying Concorde between New York and London until mid-August of last year. Investigators believe a stray strip of metal on the runway punctured one of the doomed Air France plane's high-pressure tires, which blew a hole in a wing fuel tank and started a fire.

Key modifications to the aircraft include stronger tires, fuel tank linings made of bulletproof Kevlar, and extra protection for critical electrical and hydraulic systems on the underside of the wings. Maxime Coffin, deputy head of the flight standards department for France's civil aviation authority, said that one Air France Concorde should have its certificate within days, with two more planes ready within weeks. British Airways has said one of its modified Concorde was to be certified to fly on Wednesday. Modifications were under way on two other planes.

Klenske/Rossi recycling plan a must

A difficult academic year undoubtedly awaits Nick Klenske and Dan Rossi, the president and vice president of UI Student Government.

The two have an agenda that spans a variety of important campus issues. They are planning to implement a safety initiative that will put a campus phone in every university building. The initiative also includes the addition of one or two more blue-light safety phones on campus as well as a safety Web site and CD-ROM that will contain all university safety information. They plan to sponsor a City Council debate before the election and form a government-relations committee, all in an effort to make city and state officials more accountable to students.

And, of course, they have the daunting task of facing off with legislators and the state of Iowa Board of Regents to fight further tuition increases.

At the top of their agenda, however, is a feasible, practical, and valuable recycling program. The UISG leaders want to expand the university's current paper recycling program to include aluminum and plastic. In keeping with their campaign promise, Klenske and Rossi have already persuaded UI President Mary Sue Coleman to donate $8,000 of Coca-Cola's on-campus revenue to start up the recycling program. The pilot plan would place recycling bins outside Macbride Hall and the Lindquist Center, alongside trash cans. If the pilot plan is deemed successful by the university — that is, if the costs don't prove to be too great — recycling could be implemented at other locations around campus, including the dorms.

A pilot recycling program by UI Student Government leaders could be thwarted by administrative roadblocks.

This initiative by Klenske and Rossi, while not the most pressing issue facing students, is nonetheless an important one. The campus population is one of the soft-drink industry's largest consumer groups; thousands of cans and bottles are thrown away daily at the university. The proposed recycling program would eliminate a large portion of the waste. It is significant for the campus, and it should be an easily attainable goal.

But UISG leaders have run into numerous roadblocks while attempting to implement the program. One reason the administration gave the UISG leaders was that the paper-recycling containers already occupying the halls of many campus buildings would pose a fire hazard if compounded with more receptacles in those buildings. Basically, fire codes prevent more containers — namely the proposed aluminum and glass containers — from being placed inside.

When confronted with the problem, Klenske and Rossi planned to place the containers outside the buildings. But the Campus Planning Committee deemed this "aesthetically" unacceptable. Signs around campus that the university is participating in recycling would apparently constitute an eyesore.

Klenske and Rossi have made great strides toward fulfilling their campaign promises. They seek short-term goals such as safety initiatives, as well as long-term goals such as finding a balance of power between the administration and the UISG. The recycling pilot program is one small example of their commitment to changing what they can while in office. Something as trivial as the placement of recycling containers should not prevent the program from being implemented on campus.

Guest Opinion

The erasure of regard

This summer, there were several news stories, letters, and a guest editorial in the DI regarding the Latino Native American Cultural Center, its 30th anniversary, and some of the artwork in the building. As a graduate student who identifies as both Latina and American Indian, I have been appalled by the misinformation that I find myself reading about the center. I would like to clarify the present situation and to offer the perspective of a student who frequently utilizes the center and has done so for several years.

The conference held July 6-9 to commemorate the center's 30th anniversary resulted in many positive experiences and exchanges for most, if not all, of the participants. Despite this, the DI news story on July 10 chose to focus only on the mural and cast the "renovation" as a split between alumni and current students. Successful alumni came from all over the country and engaged in meaningful, often inspirational, interaction with students, but the only thing reported was a less-than-accurate account of the "controversy" over the mural.

To characterize the renovation of the Manuel Unzueta mural as the concern of alumni who are resisting change is a gross oversimplification. Recent letters in support of the renovation do not reflect the views of many who use the center on a daily basis and view it as a vital part of our lives.

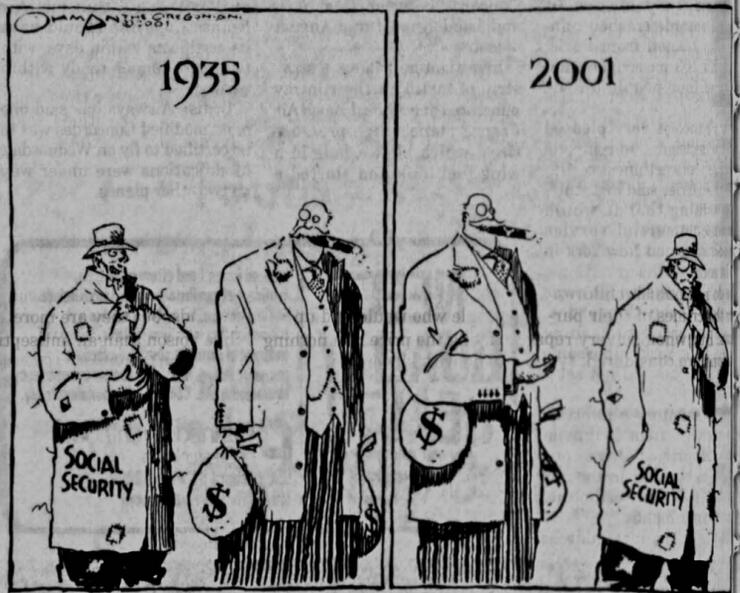

This controversy points to the ability of Latino and Native American students to determine what is meaningful in the context of our lives as minorities and as students. Some believe the changes that have been made to the mural make it more aesthetically pleasing; no one has ever said that the artist working on it isn't talented. What is problematic is that the work that has taken place on the mural is being called a renovation. The changes that have been made are not renovations. They are outright changes that have, in effect, negated an important part of our cultural history. Those speaking out against the changes are being cast as unreasonable. This is one way of silencing those who stand in opposition; after all, why would anyone want to keep a work of art that depicts militancy and anger?

I contend that art is a snapshot; it captures a specific moment in time to remind us of what we have struggled against, survived, and accomplished. That was one purpose the Unzueta mural served for many of us. Our snapshot is gone.

How did this happen? The Office of Student Life approved the "renovation" and failed to intervene after Latino and Native American students voiced their concerns and opposition to the change several times. It is important to note that the changes were approved because the artists made them free of charge, the context of the ongoing efforts of the administration to eliminate the cultural houses, the message that are not worth putting any money into comes through loud and clear.

Allowing our art, full of naturally rich symbolism, to be erased (be it through design or neglect) may seem like a little thing to many. For some of us, this erasure is experienced in the context of other events that prove there is little concern for what is important to us as members of the academic community.

Sandi Solis is a Ph.D. candidate in Women's Studies.

'The Latino/Native American Cultural Center saved my life'

That's what Joy Harjo said early in her performance on the Pedestrian Mall this summer. Harjo is a Writers' Workshop graduate, famed poet, and a good person to have on the planet. A great person even; she reminds us of history, tugs our minds in new directions toward old truths, keeps us awake.

Harjo contributes to the UI's fame. And the Latino/Native American Cultural Center on Melrose played a key part in Harjo's surviving white Iowa City.

The Latino/Native American Center and the Afro-American Cultural Center, two houses near the Boyd Law Building, stand as symbols of the university's commitment to students, staff, and faculty who identify as Latino, Native, and African American. Both centers provide a comfortable space, contained yet expansive, for students of color to study, discuss, entertain, and educate each other about cultural heritage, pride, and power.

Any Student Services leader worth the paper on which his degree is printed should be able to tell you that separate and identifiable space, in the midst of an overwhelmingly white university and community, means survival.

Webs of relationships at the centers — celebrated in wedding receptions, birthday parties, and more — build on the daily, intimate interactions made possible by the space of a house. Those relationships lead to academic and social events — like the annual UI Pow Wow — that affect white Iowa students just as much as students of color.

Anthropologist Mary Catherine Bateson argues that the metaphors and symbols we use to construct our world point to our deepest understandings of ourselves. The actions Iowa takes with the centers speak to the university's self-definition and further speak about the school's true commitment to people of color. Not what President Mary Sue Coleman and Vice President Phillip Jones state in official pronouncements about diversity, but what they really feel.

What visions flow from the minds of the administrators in Student Services? Should we keep up the centers, ensure that their presence on campus remains vital and vibrant? Staff the centers with professionals, create inventive programming, ensure that students of all ethnicities know the centers as resources?

Um. Not exactly. The university has repeatedly refused to fully fund the centers. Sure, the centers are casually (very casually, because people in other offices often do the work) run by the Office of Student Life. Sure, grad students handle them as well as possible. But the cultural centers should be stand-alone student services with professional staff. And the houses should be renovated, restored, and improved in their splendor and historical richness.

Indeed, as the Asian American Coalition points out, it's time for the university to add another center for Asian, Pacific Islander, and Asian-American students. Three houses, three gathering places, three homes.

Instead, the university, based on the idea that New Buildings Are Better, or perhaps that All People of Color Should be Placed Together on Display, plans to shove everyone together in one multicultural extravaganza of a residence hall pavilion.

Nice metaphor — offices in a dorm. Powerful symbol. Whitewashed hallways, tasteful beige carpet, perhaps a little Impressionist art on the walls. A place for everyone. And everyone, every last person of color, in her place. Not a life-saving space. Not warm. But perhaps true of the university's commitment to people of color. "Have an office, chill out. Don't ask us for more. After all, the cubicles are new."

Well, we can fight that. White allies, we can ask our friends of color and our white friends what the centers mean to them. We can think seriously about what our campus would look like without these houses. We can add our voices to the strong protest over the university's plan.

And everyone can go today, curious or outraged or hungry, between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m., to the Weeks of Welcome Neighborhood Picnic at the centers — the Afro House at 303 Melrose Ave., right by the law school, and the Latino/Native American Center, 308 Melrose Ave., just across the street.

Show your strength. Know your campus. See you there. 'Cause we won't be cooking out in any dang offices.

Thanks to my mentors, my collaborators. You know who you are. You made this column possible. May your dreams for the future of the centers come true.

The UN World Conference Against Racism is effectively over with the withdrawal of the United States and Israel. Toss in the major objections of the European Union on language condemning Israel, and it's a sure bet the conference will go nowhere.

This is a good thing for the United States and the world. The World Conference Against Racism has nothing to do with racism. If it did, Israel would not have been singled out as a racist nation in an otherwise enlightened world. Almost every nation in the world has serious problems with racism and ethnocentrism. In many of those states, problems of racism are perpetuated by government policies. In many states that do not have problems, it seems that is more of a result of homogeneity than racial harmony.

Consider just a few examples. Whites in Zimbabwe are being forcibly dislocated. The Balkans are still a huge ethnic mess. Tibetans are far from equal under Chinese law. The list goes on and on. But perhaps the biggest problem of the conference involves an attempt to force nations to pay reparations, either to individuals or African nations.

Whether on a domestic or foreign level, the act of paying reparations is more about dividing people than solving racism. Reparations are about forcing some — descendants of oppressors — to labor for the benefit of others — descendants of the oppressed — forcing some to become part-time slaves for the sins of their fathers.

In most civilized nations, we do not punish children for the crimes of their parents. But when slavery reparations are considered, typical civilized morality goes out the window.

Perhaps the saddest aspect of foreign reparations is that they force nations that have fought to end slavery to bear slavery's burdens. The United States fought its bloodiest war to end slavery. Britain policed international waters to ensure the end of the international slave trade. While these nations are not completely clean of the dirt of slavery, they have paid for their crimes with the blood of their citizens.

Furthermore, consider whom Britain often fought to end the slave trade: African tribes that captured free men and turned them into slaves. It is a bit ironic to propose that Britain, a country that violently opposed slavery, should pay modern nations that descended from the nations that supported slavery.

Domestic reparations are just as flawed. Many of the people who would end up paying the price had nothing to do with slavery.

Descendants of Union soldiers and Jewish Holocaust survivors would be among the many who have no connection whatsoever to slavery in the American South.

While slavery was horrible for those who endured it, the descendants of slaves may actually be better off as a result of the forced relocations that their ancestors suffered. Had slavery not occurred, many blacks in this country would be far worse off having been born in Africa.

The relative well being of blacks in America compared with blacks in Africa does not justify slavery. It does, however, show us about how much damage current potential recipients of reparations have suffered.

Reparations work when governments violate people's rights and reparations are paid to the victims of those rights violations. Private citizens, not government, perpetrated American slavery. Reparations for slavery would not be paid to the victims but rather to their distant descendants. Reparations paid to Holocaust survivors or Japanese-American internees are radically different from reparations paid for slavery.

Slavery was horrible. Unfortunately, nothing can be done to compensate those subjected to its ravages. No matter the form, granting reparations would be a token act. Calls of guilt for descendants of oppressors will not cease. If anything, reparations would merely fuel resentment and backlash.

The ostensible purpose of reparations is to heal racial wounds, but they are more like poison than an antiseptic.

WOMEN'S U.S. OPEN

Capriati, Venus Williams stay alive, head to semis

By Howard Fendrich
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — Venus Williams was erratic, Jennifer Capriati was ecstatic. Now the winners of the year's first three Grand Slam titles will meet for a spot in the final of the fourth major.

Not a whole lot went right for Williams at the U.S. Open on Wednesday — the 43 unforced errors, the 48 percent of first serves that missed the mark, the eight double-faults. Just enough did go the defending champion's way, though, to add up to a 6-3, 6-1 quarterfinal victory over Kim Clijsters.

Then the No. 2-seeded Capriati went out and pounded her way to a 6-3, 6-4 victory over No. 8 Amelie Mauresmo to reach the semifinals here for the first time since 1991, before her well-documented decline.

"Everything's kind of changed. Look at how the U.S. Open has changed. They've got a brand new huge stadium. The Open has really blown up a lot, and tennis, in general, is so popular. I'm glad that 10 years later I'm able to be part of it," Capriati said.

"I'm very happy, joyous, ecstatic. It's a great sense of satisfaction — and I'm very grateful, also."

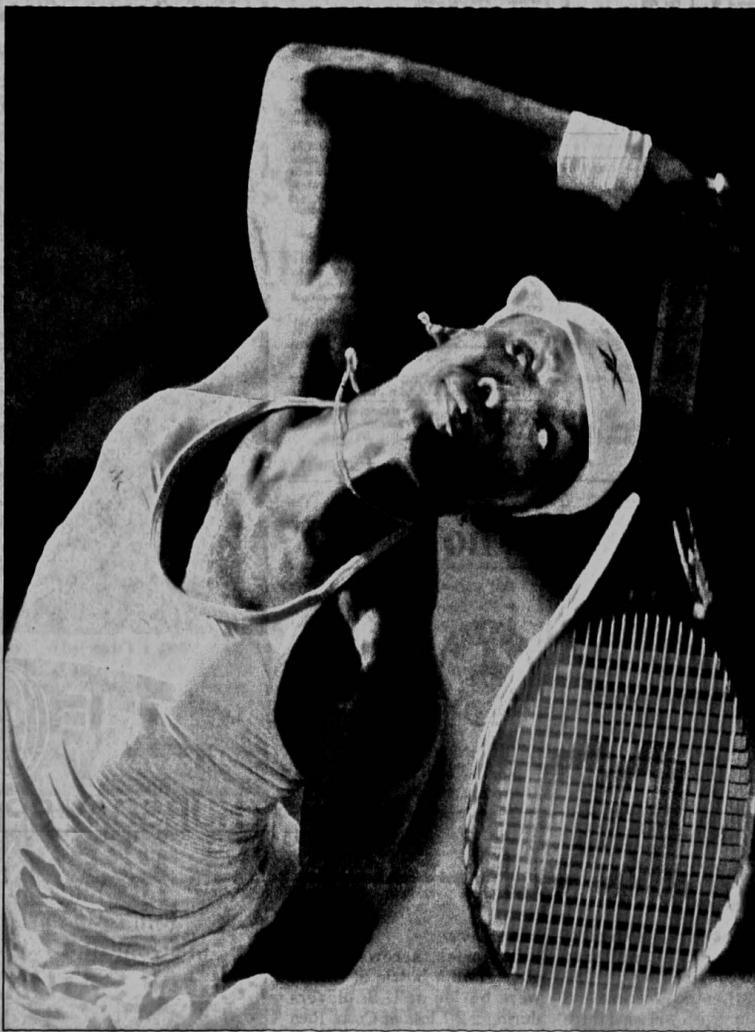

Williams and Capriati have been alternately dominant in 2001, and they're the only two women who have not dropped a set so far at the Open. That will change in Friday's semifinals.

"It's going to be pretty tough. She's been playing well, but I've been playing well," said Capriati, who this week has a chance to take over the No. 1 ranking for the first time in her career.

"Hopefully, I can come out and play my best tennis."

Venus' younger sister, 10th-seeded Serena, will play No. 1 Martina Hingis in the other semifinal. They advanced Tuesday.

Capriati's renaissance blossomed with championships at the Australian and French Opens this year; Williams took her second straight title at Wimbledon. "She's a very strong player. She does everything well. She hits the ball quite hard," Williams said, scouting her next opponent. "Nowadays, I don't really try to hit every ball hard anymore. Maybe I don't have as much pace on every shot as she does."

Williams has won all three of their previous meetings, including twice this year on hardcourts. That includes their most recent encounter, in the final of the Ericsson Open in March, when Capriati frittered away eight match points.

"Hopefully, I will have learned from that experience, from that match, and take advantage of my chances," Capriati said.

She and Mauresmo slugged it out from the baseline

Wednesday, trading powerful strokes and rarely resorting to trickery. Capriati managed to limit the number of errors better than Mauresmo.

Williams didn't limit hers, but wound up OK.

Case in point: Serving for the first set, Williams sent an 88 mph knuckler of a second serve that was kicked up by

Recker is feeling fine

Luke Recker is sick of the sidelines. After missing the final 15 games of Iowa's basketball season last year and the bulk of summer drills because of an injury, he is finally ready to go. Individual workouts for the 2001-02 season began Wednesday, and Recker headlines a talented Hawkeye team looking for a Big Ten title. The senior shooting guard talked with DI reporter Melinda Mawdsley about the knee injury, team building, and his singing abilities.

DI: So how's the knee?

Recker: The knee feels excellent. The only thing now is for me to get back in game shape. It's not a serious knee injury. It just takes a long time to heal, which has been frustrating. They don't anticipate any problems in the future.

DI: Now that you're back, what are you hoping to achieve?

Recker: I'm a very goal-oriented person, on and off the court, but I keep a lot of things to myself. As a team, we want to win, and I think that's possible with the guys we have returning and the camaraderie we have.

DI: Yeah, I heard you do some fun things as a team.

Recker: We just had the annual coaches'players softball game.

DI: Who won?

Recker: The coaches. We aren't very good.

DI: Did you do anything else?

Recker: Oh yeah. We had water-balloon fights, three-legged races, and tug-of-war.

DI: Did your team win tug-of-war?

Recker: Of course.

DI: Who was on it?

Recker: Duez [Henderson], myself, Rod Thompson, Chauncey [Leslie], Marcellus Sommerville, and Jason Smith.

DI: Do the coaches participate in tug-of-war?

Recker: No, they don't.

DI: Speaking of fun things, I was watching a Cubs game this summer and saw you, Coach Alford, Smith, and Ryan Hogan singing for the seventh-inning stretch. Were you really singing?

Recker: Yes, but I think they cut off our microphones because we were so bad. A lot of the nervousness is taken out beforehand because they show a video of other people that have sung, and there were some people worse than us.

DI: Being on WGN had to be good for Iowa.

Recker: It's a great

MIAMI OF OHIO Hawkeyes worry Miami's Hoepfner

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

It's been a long time since the Iowa football team gave anyone nightmares, but Miami of Ohio coach Terry Hoepfner has tossed and turned all week thinking about the RedHawks' Saturday showdown with Iowa. "I think the reason I didn't sleep last night has to do with Iowa," he said during his weekly press conference. "They're a much-improved team."

One week after losing, 31-13, to Michigan in Ann Arbor, Hoepfner and the RedHawks stay within the Big Ten conference and travel to Iowa City this Saturday to take on a resurgent Hawkeye team.

Hoepfner has turned his team's focus to a deep Hawkeye squad in hopes of preventing Miami's first 0-2 start since 1994, an impressive stint for a Mid-American Conference team that plays a heavy non-conference schedule.

"They've got good running backs, a good quarterback, and a good offensive line," he said. "I haven't found any weaknesses yet."

Miami of Ohio at a glance

Record: 0-1
 2000 record: 6-5
 Conference: Mid-American
 Head coach: Terry Hoepfner
 Enrollment: 15,000
 Returning lettermen: 37

While there may not be any failings with the Iowa program in Hoepfner's mind, he certainly spotted more than a few with his own team following their season-opening setback.

First and foremost was the performance of his defense, which allowed 403 total yards of offense to the Wolverines in the losing effort. While there were some promising moments, Hoepfner also saw a few dark spots, including the lack of depth a team needs when playing Big Ten competition.

"Defensively, we played well at times," he said. "We didn't play that well down the stretch,

A solid foundation

Hawkeye senior Sara Meyermann has been a catalyst for the Iowa volleyball team's turnaround

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

When Iowa volleyball coach Rita Buck-Crockett arrived in Iowa City in April 1998, she saw a team with no direction or desire. Along with despair, however, she also noticed the potential in a young freshman outside hitter.

Three years later, Buck-Crockett has gotten the Hawkeye program back on track, and Sara Meyermann has proved a catalyst in the resurgence.

"It's a night-and-day difference," Meyermann said, looking back on her first three seasons compared with the beginning of her senior season.

The Camanche, Iowa, native is a preseason All-Big Ten pick primed for a great senior season. As a junior, Meyermann led the team in kills per game with a 3.9 average and turned in one of the best performances in recent history by hitting at a .625 clip against Oakland during the Hawkeye Invitational last year. In addition to packing a lot of punch, she also will serve as the team's veteran leader on and off the court.

"She makes these guys proud," Buck-Crockett said of Meyermann's influence on her teammates. "She carries herself very well, and the younger players look up to her."

Meyermann has always conveyed a confidence in her athletic endeavors, not just on the volleyball court. She was a three-year letter-winner in basketball and a four-year letter-winner in tennis at Camanche High School. She was a member of the Indians' 1997 state champion tennis team and was state runner-up in 1996 and 1998. Her high-school accolades are too numerous to mention.

Though she still teaches tennis lessons during the summer, and often thinks of shooting hoops when she watches the Iowa women's basketball team, she has no regrets about the path she chose to take in life.

"I think I picked the right sport for me," she said. "I enjoy it a lot."

Meyermann thought, when she decided to play volleyball at Iowa after her junior year of high school, that would be the end of the story, that the recruiting would stop, and she could finish out her days as a prep. Little did she know things were just getting interesting.

When Meyermann committed to Iowa, Linda Schoenstedt and Matt Sonnichsen served as co-head coaches for the Hawkeyes. Schoenstedt resigned in August 1997, and Sonnichsen was shown the door in December following a

The U.S. soccer team heads to Costa Rica in a World Cup qualifier

By John Rice
Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — Exuberant local fans shouted insults at the U.S. soccer team Wednesday as the Americans got a glimpse of Saprissa Stadium. "You guys are gonna lose!" bellowed a man in a San Francisco Giants cap as coach Bruce Arena and the American team filed into the stadium through a protective corridor of police in riot helmets. Others shouted crude epithets at the Americans, who entered the game with their first two-game losing streak in World Cup qualifying since 1980. Costa Rica (5-1-1), seeking its first World Cup appearance since 1990, would qualify for Costa Rica, two points ahead of Honduras, (3-2-2) and three ahead of Mexico (3-3-1). The North and Central American and Caribbean region will send three nations to next year's 32-nation tournament in Japan and South Korea. In other games Wednesday night, Honduras was home against Jamaica and Mexico was home against Trinidad and Tobago. The jeers at the gate were a small taste of what the U.S. team expected for the game at Saprissa, a 17,000-seat stadium that puts fans a few feet from the playing field. The game was a sellout, despite predictions of possible thunderstorms. At least 1,000 police were detailed for security, and local television ran warnings for fans to leave glass bottles, metal pipes, knives, and pistols at home. Batteries, screws, nails, glass, and a bottle of spittle were hurled at U.S. players during a 2-1 loss at Costa Rica in December 1996. A last-minute penalty kick led to another 2-1 defeat at Saprissa in last year's semifinals. Arena promised to make "a couple of changes" from the Sept. 1 lineup, when the United States lost to Honduras 3-2 at Washington. But he didn't give specifics. "They are not going to risk much because they know they have two games with the Caribbean teams," Costa Rica midfielder Mauricio Solis told the newspaper La Republica. Venders selling Costa Rican flags, jerseys and hats lined up along highways and street sides early in the day and many drivers fixed national flags to their antennas.

Konowalchuk hopes for Olympic homecoming
COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — As teen agers growing up in Salt Lake City, Steve and Brian Konowalchuk would often drive for an hour to an ice rink where they could practice until midnight. Fourteen years later, Steve Konowalchuk has a chance to earn the ultimate homecoming when the 2002 Winter Olympics are played in Salt Lake. Konowalchuk, a forward for the Washington Capitals, was among 37 NHL players who practiced Wednesday as part of a four-day orientation camp for the U.S. hockey team. "Who would have ever thought that Salt Lake would actually have the Winter Olympics and then at a time when I could be in them and play for the team?" Konowalchuk asked. "That's pretty slim odds. For me to pull that off with all the family and friends I have out there would be exciting." Team USA has selected 15 players to its 23-man roster, and Konowalchuk is hoping to grab one of the remaining eight spots that will be filled by Dec. 22.

Dragila, Johnson win gold, U.S. basketball team in semis
BRISBANE, Australia — Stacy Dragila didn't have a logical explanation for her performance. Then again, she didn't need one. Allen Johnson couldn't understand why his legs felt so rubbery. He didn't need an explanation, either. Dwain Chambers was dumbfounded to explain his stunning effort. It wasn't necessary. And Kenyon Martin couldn't figure out how he missed a shot. It didn't matter. That's because they all came away winners at the Goodwill Games Wednesday. Dragila, the world record-holder in the women's pole vault at 15 feet, 9 1/2 inches, cleared only 14-11. Despite his wobbly legs, Johnson had enough energy to win the 110-meter hurdles, beating archrival Anier Garcia of Cuba by .04 seconds in 13.16 seconds. Chambers, the unheralded Briton, charged from the blocks and won the 100 meters, beating a field that included world silver-medalist Tim Montgomery in 10.11.

recruiting tool. Anytime you can get on national television, kids are watching that. Publicity helps. Players see that. With all that publicity, though, comes the pressure to win.

DI: A high-school sophomore orally committed to Iowa recently. Were kids picking schools this early in your day?

Recker: I was the youngest in Indiana's history when I committed as a sophomore. I think if these kids today know what they want to do, I don't see anything wrong with it, but there are also kids that should maybe re-evaluate their options more. I know Dean Oliver has no regrets about committing early. He had a great career here.

DI: ESPN was in town recently filming something on you. What was it up to?

Recker: It was shooting a "SportsCentury" documentary on my life.

DI: Are you getting tired of talking about all you've been through?

Recker: No, because it was more of a focus on my childhood, my family, and my high-school career. I think it's going to be a great piece, but I don't understand why people think my life is so interesting. Obviously, I've had a lot of adversity, but in the grand scheme of things, I've been lucky because I'm playing basketball. I have a great family, great friends, and a great girlfriend. Everything seems to be going well in my life right now.

DI: ESPN is also making a movie on the book Season on the Brink, which profiles Indiana University's 1987 NCAA championship season. Have you read it?

Recker: Yes, I have.

DI: Is it good?

Recker: It's a great book. DI: Whom should they cast as Coach Knight and a young Steve Alford?

Recker: It'd be tough. I hope they can find an actor who can shoot as well as Coach Alford can. There aren't even basketball players that can shoot as well as him.

Williams' could face off in first Grand Slam final

US OPEN

the swirling air at Arthur Ashe Stadium. The suddenly wind-wrapped ball could have wandered out or it could have led to a gimme return.

Instead, it dropped in, Clijsters, a French Open finalist, swung mightily — and she missed mightily, turning her head to watch the ball settle by the wall at the back of the court.

She sighed, Williams smiled. And so the match — keeping alive the possibility that No. 4 Williams could meet her sister in a Grand Slam tournament final for the first time.

More often than not, Williams-Clijsters came down to who would be quickest to err, rather than being a contest filled with glittering groundstrokes. The players combined for 81 unforced errors and 14 double-faults in just 65 minutes.

It was downright sloppy at times.

They traded breaks of serve in the first two games of the match, and each wasted break opportunities in the next two games.

In the fourth game, on one of the 11 break-point chances Williams tossed away overall, she sent a forehand about 5 feet out, then leaned over, slapped her left hand on her knee, and looked up as if to say, "Why can't I get going today?"

"When she's on top of her game, she doesn't make that many unforced errors. But she's always a player that makes a lot of good points and also unforced errors," said Clijsters, cheered on from court-side by boyfriend Lleyton Hewitt, who beat Tommy Haas in four sets earlier Wednesday to reach the quarterfinals.

"So that's why it's hard to get in your rhythm and make the chances that you get."

The difference-makers? Williams produced 21 winners, compared to just five for the fifth-seeded Belgian. And Williams conjured up seven aces to Clijsters' one.

Williams took control in the seventh game, winning one of the match's longer rallies with a crackling forehand down the line to open a flood that saw her take nine of the last 10 games.

In a finish as fitting as it was anticlimactic, Clijsters double-faulted to end her career-best U.S. Open showing.

Anticipating a possible encounter for the title Saturday night against her sister, Williams said: "Just one more match to go for each of us, though we're up against some pretty good players."

miserable 9-22 campaign. The program had no coach until Buck-Crockett was hired. It was a daunting situation for a high-school player making the biggest decision of her life, but Meyermann was never swayed.

"I didn't come here for the coaching staff," she said. "It never even occurred to me to think about going somewhere else."

Her experience in choosing schools came in handy for her younger sister, Drew, who is beginning her freshman year at Drake. Like her older sister, Drew Meyermann was a multi-sport star at Camanche and faced the same tough decisions

Sara did. "I felt the same way she did," Meyermann said. "Sometimes I think she blamed me for not being a very good big sister when she thought she needed help."

While Meyermann has been pleased with her time in Iowa City, Buck-Crockett may have been the happiest of all. In Meyermann, she has a talent not unlike herself when she was younger, and one who proved to be the perfect player for the rookie coach to work with.

"What I saw in her was athletic ability and the type of player we needed to bring here," Buck-Crockett said. "She's very coachable, and she's starting to trust she has the moves to be a big-time player." Right now, Meyermann is focused on helping the Hawkeyes achieve a team goal of making the NCAA Tournament and doing well in the Big Ten. After that, but she would like to continue playing volleyball somewhere. She tried out for the U.S. National team last year but did not make the cut. Buck-Crockett says the experience showed Meyermann what to expect in the future and believes she will have a much better opportunity the second time around.

"Sara is very special," Buck-Crockett said. "She's just getting into her own now."

though." The RedHawks also were a favorite target of officials on Sept. 1, getting flagged six times for 55 yards and having two touchdowns nullified by infractions.

"We must be a dirty team, because we got called for some inopportune penalties," he said. "If we get six touchdowns called back this weekend, we need to score eight or ten touchdowns. Whatever it takes, we need to score more."

While penalty flags and defensive doubts drew the ire of Hoepfner, he had nothing but praise for redshirt freshman quarterback Ben Roethlisberger. Roethlisberger tossed for 193 yards passing, completing 18 of 35 attempts.

"He's his own worst critic," Hoepfner said. "I told him after the game he can't take all the blame himself."

Roethlisberger feels otherwise.

"I took that loss to heart because I take a lot of the offense on my shoulder, he said."

As far as injuries go, Hoepfner believes all his key players should be ready to take the Kinnick Stadium turf come Saturday, though there are still some doubts about running back Steve Little. Little missed the Sept. 1 game with an ankle injury but should be fine for Saturday. Hoepfner said even if Little wasn't healthy, he would make the trip to Iowa City because of his leadership.

Turning his attention back to the Hawkeyes, Hoepfner believes the key to avoiding that 0-2 start is in the team's lack of memory. They took what they needed from the Michigan game

They were ready to play football at practice. That's good when you have a team with a relatively short memory. That's the nature of this team and left everything else behind, he said.

Johnson leads White Sox over Detroit, 5-3

CHICAGO (AP) — Catcher Mark Johnson threw out two baserunners and hit an RBI double to lead the Chicago White Sox over the Detroit Tigers, 5-3, Wednesday night.

Chicago's 13th win in its last 14 meetings with Detroit pulled the third-place White Sox within seven games of division-leading Cleveland in the AL Central.

The White Sox (72-67) have won 12 of 16 overall to move a season-high five games over .500.

Rookie Dan Wright (3-2) won for the first time in six starts since Aug. 6, and four relievers held the Tigers to one hit the last 3 1/2 innings.

Keith Foulke worked the ninth for his 37th save in 40 chances. He got Damion Easley to ground into a game-ending double play with the bases loaded.

Expos 10, Braves 4

MONTREAL — Vladimir Guerrero hit a run-scoring single for his 500th career RBI and added his 33rd homer as the Montreal Expos beat the Atlanta Braves, 10-4, Wednesday night.

The Braves remained three games ahead of second-place Philadelphia in the NL East. The Phillies lost, 7-4, to the New York Mets.

The game drew just 3,806 fans. A day earlier, the Expos and Braves attracted only 3,613 — the second-lowest crowd in Olympic Stadium history.

Yankees 4, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — Roger Clemens set a Yankees record with his 15th-straight victory, leading New York over the Toronto Blue Jays, 4-3, Wednesday night.

Clemens (19-1) also became just the second player in major league history to win 19 of his first 20 decisions. Rube Marquard of the New York Giants did it in 1912.

Clemens, the AL's first 19-game winner, passed Jack Chesbro and Whitey Ford for the longest winning streak in Yankee history. Chesbro won 14 straight in 1904, and Ford won 14 in 1961.

Athletics 12, Orioles 6

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jason Giambi extended his hitting streak to a season-high 11 games with his 33rd home run as the Oakland Athletics routed the Baltimore Orioles, 12-6, for their fourth-straight win.

Terrence Long added a solo home run and an RBI single, and Cory Lidle (10-6) allowed two runs and six hits in seven innings.

Oakland, which began the day with a 9 1/2-game lead in the AL wild card race, has won 10 of 11.

Astros 10, Reds 3

CINCINNATI — Vinny Castilla homered, doubled twice, and drove in six runs as the Houston Astros shook up their struggling lineup and beat the Cincinnati Reds, 10-3, Wednesday night.

With Jeff Bagwell and Moises Alou watching from the bench, Castilla led the Astros to their best offensive showing in more than two weeks. His six RBIs matched his career high.

Nearly every Astro hit the ball hard — starter Dave Mlicki even got his second hit of the season — as Houston won for the 15th time in 19 games and moved a season-high 25 games over .500.

Pirates 5, Brewers 1

PITTSBURGH — Todd Ritchie pitched a three-hitter and Pittsburgh beat the Milwaukee Brewers, 5-1, Wednesday night, giving the Pirates their first three-game winning streak in more than two months.

The Pirates, with the worst record in the NL, hadn't won three consecutive games since beating the Reds in Cincinnati July 2-4. The team's longest winning streak is four games, accomplished twice.

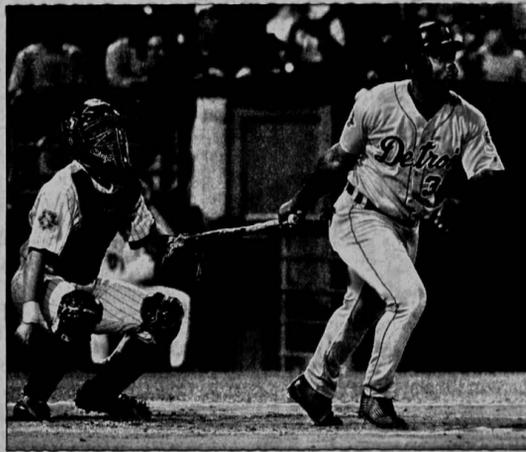

Ritchie (11-12) is trying to become the first pitcher since 1900 to begin a season with eight losses and finish with at least a .500 record.

Red Sox 10, Indians 7

BOSTON — Trot Nixon went 4-for-4 with a two-run homer, four RBIs, and four runs scored as the Boston Red Sox ended their nine-game losing streak with a 10-7 win over the Cleveland Indians Wednesday night.

The skid was the longest for Boston since dropping 11 straight in June 1994 under manager Butch Hobson.

The Red Sox, who have fallen 9 1/2 games behind the Yankees in the AL East and Oakland in the wild card race, are 7-12 under Joe Kerrigan, who replaced fired manager Jimmy Williams on Aug. 16.

Fred Jewell/Associated Press

Detroit Tigers' Randall Simon and Chicago White Sox catcher Mark Johnson watch Simon's solo home run in the second inning Wednesday at Comiskey Park in Chicago.

Marlins 7, Cubs 6

MIAMI — Preston Wilson hit a three-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning Wednesday night, rallying the Florida Marlins over the Chicago Cubs, 7-6.

The Cubs dropped five games behind Houston in the NL Central race. They began the day with a half-game lead over San Francisco for the wild card.

Wilson connected off Tom Gordon (1-2) for his 19th home run of the season.

Mets 7, Phillies 4

PHILADELPHIA — Larry Bowa wanted an easy game. He was on the wrong end of it.

Robin Ventura had three RBIs and missed a cycle by a triple as the New York Mets beat the Philadelphia Phillies, 7-4, Wednesday night to complete a three-game sweep.

The free-falling Phillies have lost four-straight and 15 of 20. They remained three games behind first-place Atlanta in the NL East. The Braves lost to Montreal 10-4.

Boston's playoff chances fade, team stuck in turmoil

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox are failing on the field and feuding with management.

In the past month, they lost manager Jimmy Williams, nine-straight games and any realistic hope of reaching the playoffs. Their best two players are upset and the team could be sold in the offseason.

And Manny Ramirez hit .238 between Aug. 1 and Labor Day.

"It hasn't been easy for anybody," Nomar Garciaparra said. "The only way you get through difficulty is turning to each other."

And, it seems, away from general manager Dan Duquette.

Aloof and, some say, arrogant, Duquette has irked Pedro Martinez by saying he's healthy enough to pitch and irritated Garciaparra by firing coach John Cumberland, who handled the pitchers.

Martinez has three Cy Young awards and, he said, a minor tear in his rotator cuff.

Duquette "is not going to force me to pitch," Martinez said. "I'm only going to pitch if I feel fine enough to pitch."

Garciaparra missed the first half of the season following wrist surgery and went back on the disabled list last weekend. But the two-time defending AL batting champion has a calculated knack for bland comments, so when he spoke out about the chaotic season, his words carried weight.

"Baseball is built a lot around respect," he said, carefully crafting his remarks after Boston's ninth-straight loss Tuesday night. "The way I've been brought up is respect is a two-way street. Respect is asked of us as players and a staff, and it's not always given in return."

It was a comment directed at Duquette, a buttoned-down executive who rarely mingles with players and who avoids reporters, choosing to convey his thoughts through his pregame radio shows and team spokesman Kevin Shea.

In fact, after Martinez's criticism, Shea, saying he conveyed Duquette's feelings, backed off: "Pedro's the best judge of whether or not he's hurt, and we wouldn't ask him to pitch if he's hurt."

"Things change here like the tide," catcher Scott Hatteberg said.

Three weeks ago, Williams was still manager. Sure, the Red Sox had dropped five games behind the New York Yankees in the AL East and two behind Oakland in the wild-card race.

And they had lost six of seven games, but five of the losses were against two of baseball's best pitching staffs, Oakland and Seattle.

Then, before the final game of the Mariners series at Fenway Park, Duquette fired Williams on Aug. 16, the same week potential buyers submitting initial bids. The next owner could overhaul the front office and the roster.

The club hoped to win its first World Series since 1918 while still owned by Yawkey family interests. Tom Yawkey became owner in 1933 and the current majority owner is the Jean R. Yawkey Trust.

Through 96 games, Boston was tied for first with the Yankees despite injuries to Garcia-parra, Martinez, and catcher Jason Varitek.

Less than a month later, pitching coach Joe Kerrigan, who had never managed in pro baseball, took over.

The Red Sox beat Seattle in his first game but were 6-12 under Kerrigan through Tuesday after going 65-53 for Williams.

The former manager and Duquette had a frosty relationship. Hitters, notably Dante Bichette, complained of Williams' constantly changing lineups that they said prevented them from getting into a rhythm.

Bichette was hitting .295 when Williams was fired. In Kerrigan's first 18 games, Bichette batted fifth 17 times and sixth once. His average dipped to .292.

Ramirez, signed for eight years for $160 million in the offseason, was hitting .388 with 20 homers through 56 games. After Boston's 135th game last Monday, he was hitting .305 with 39 homers.

The heart of the order slumped in August as Ramirez drove in 15 runs, Carl Everett 13, and Bichette 6. That was worse than two much lighter hitters — Doug Mirabelli with 17 RBIs and Mike Lansing with 15.

BASEBALL BRIEFS

Bowa stunned at players' reaction to pennant race

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Larry Bowa isn't surprised the Philadelphia Phillies are in contention for a playoff spot. He's stunned by the way they're responding to it.

"As a manager, it's hard for me to fathom no excitement in a pennant race," Bowa said Wednesday. "But it's their personality. There are some out there who have won before and you can hear them chirping. But most of them have never won."

"When you never had to do it, this is just another game. We have to get across this is not just another game. If you don't approach it that way, there's trouble."

After beating Montreal 4-1 Sept. 1 to move into a tie for first place in the NL East with Atlanta, the Phillies have lost four-straight to fall three games behind the Braves. They've played sloppily, made mental miscues, committed baserunning blunders and have nine errors in the four losses.

Ivan Rodriguez out with knee injury

ARLINGTON, Texas — For the second-straight year, the Texas Rangers will be forced to finish the season without catcher Ivan Rodriguez.

The 10-time All-Star decided Wednesday to have surgery on his aching left knee after traveling to Los Angeles for an examination by orthopedist Dr. Lewis Yocum, the Anaheim Angels' doctor.

Rodriguez's other option was rest and medication with hope that the patella-tendon inflammation would subside.

"I feel that having the surgery now is the best way for me to prepare for the next six or seven years of my major league career," Rodriguez said. "I look forward to coming back strong next season."

Beckett gives Marlins glimpse of future

MIAMI — Hours before his major league debut, Florida's Josh Beckett wandered through a shopping mall trying to pass the time.

No one stared at Beckett, no one asked for his autograph or for a picture with the 6-foot-4 right-hander. No one even recognized him.

It won't be like that for very long. Beckett allowed one hit in six shutout innings Tuesday against the Chicago Cubs, giving the Marlins exactly what they have been waiting for from their top pitching prospect.

"I definitely want to stay forever," Beckett said Wednesday.

He probably will. The Marlins plan to give the brush, 21-year-old Texan at least three more starts this year — limiting him to 90 pitches an outing — and then pencil him into next season's rotation.

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic — Sitting on a trash-strewn sandlot in a Santo Domingo slum, Guillermo Matos Jr.'s eyes shine when he talks about the major leagues — and what he would do to get there.

"It is the fastest way out of poverty, for me and my family," the young catcher said.

Like thousands of boys in the Dominican Republic, Matos sees baseball as his ticket from a rough existence in this impoverished Caribbean nation to success in the United States. He has considered dropping out of school and tinkering with birth records to alter his real age.

Matos is 14 — the same age as Danny Almonte turned out to be after investigators looked into his past and found he had been misrepresented as a 12-year-old while playing for a Bronx, N.Y., Little League team this summer.

Almonte was stripped of his perfect game in the Little League World Series, and his team was made to forfeit all its wins — including its third-place finish in the World Series.

The Dominican government charged Almonte's father with falsifying his birth record, and the founder of the Bronx team, Rolando Paulino, was banned from Little League for life — all measures that did little to dim Matos' determination.

"I don't care whether Danny changed his age," Matos said. "He's still my hero. I would do it too if it gets me into the major leagues."

Both boys are part of a culture in which baseball looms so large that countless families plan their lives around the sport.

"As soon as our wives are pregnant, we hope for a boy that will be the next Sammy Sosa," said Hector Pereira, president of the Dominican Baseball Federation.

Parents start teaching their children about baseball when they are barely out of diapers and later put them on local teams such as the one Matos plays for.

For kids his age, the next step is to be selected to play in a system of baseball camps that are run by major league teams — camps that eclipse school and family in importance for some Dominican teen-agers.

"I want to be on TV, to be internationally renowned," said one of Matos' teammates, Jan Carlos Ismael de Leon Cruz, a 12-year-old slugger who is also trying to get picked up by a camp.

Players must be 16 to enroll in the camps, where about 1,000 teen-agers train and live every season. They are paid an average of $1,500 during the three months they play in the inter-camp league, slightly less than what the average Dominican farmer earns in a year.

After the season is over, the players stay in the camps until the next season, with paid room and board. They leave after a maximum of three years — or earlier if they are selected to play in the minor leagues in the United States.

Point Given bids farewell to racing

DEL MAR, Calif. (AP) — Point Given paused at the tunnel leading to the track, looking for all the world like he wanted to join the other horses for Wednesday's third race at Del Mar.

Instead, the big chestnut colt bowed his head and continued walking circles in the paddock while fans snapped pictures of the newly retired Preakness and Belmont winner.

"He loves it," trainer Bob Baffert said, watching Point Given regally pose for photographers and a quiet crowd.

Under overcast skies at the seaside track where he won his first race, Point Given bid farewell to racing, his career cut short by a tendon strain in his left front leg. The injury, discovered last on Aug. 30, would have sidelined the 3-year-old colt for six months.

San Diego, Phillies protests denied

NEW YORK — Protests filed by San Diego and Philadelphia over separate losses last week were denied Wednesday by the commissioner's office.

The Padres protested their 16-14 loss to St. Louis on Aug. 29, claiming umpires should have called interference when Bobby Bonilla's bat sailed down the third-base line on a strikeout with two runners trying to steal.

Third baseman Phil Nevin ran into foul territory to duck the bat, catcher Ben Davis' throw sailed into left field, and Rickey Henderson bobbled the ball for a second error. Two runs scored on the play.

The Phillies protested their 5-1 loss to Montreal Aug. 30, claiming Vladimir Guerrero should have been ejected for taking a few steps toward the mound after he was hit by a pitch in the first inning.

Woods attempts to settle the score at the Canadian Open

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

MONTREAL — Tiger Woods has a score to settle.

Four years ago in the Canadian Open, the golf's youngest superstar was no match for North America's oldest golf club. Even though it was founded in 1873, Royal Montreal now is best known as the place where Woods missed his only cut on the PGA Tour.

"Is there any thought of revenge? No," Woods said Wednesday after a pro-am round with Prime Minister Jean Chretien. "Just go out there and play."

That shouldn't be a problem this year.

When he missed the cut in 1997, Woods had just embarked on an overhaul of his swing, a project that lasted through the '98 season (one victory) and into May 1999 before he finally figured it out.

This time, he is coming off a seven-hole playoff victory over Jim Furyk at the NEC Invitational, his fifth victory this season and the 29th of his five-year career.

"When I came here in '97, I wasn't playing very good and I was trying to turn it around," Woods said. "And I continued to play poorly. I missed plenty of cuts when I was an amateur. But coming here and not playing well and then going home was a feeling I didn't like very much."

That's about all Woods cares to remember about his last visit to Royal Montreal.

He opened with a 70, then took a turn for the worse with a triple bogey on the opening hole of the second round. After bogeys on the 15th and 16th holes, Woods seemed certain to miss the cut until a 25-foot birdie putt on the 17th kept his hopes alive.

But he drove into the left rough on the closing hole, missed the green to the right, and failed to make a 20-foot par putt. A 76 sent him packing by one stroke.

"I can't play my entire career without missing a cut," he said that afternoon.

It only seems that way now. Woods hasn't missed a cut since. His streak is at 75, dating to the 1998 Pebble Beach National Pro-Am because of a bizarre set of circumstances.

The tournament started in February and finished in August because of bad weather. Woods failed to return on the Monday after the PGA Championship because he had a junior clinic in Oregon. Withdrawing from the tournament counts the same as a cut, although Woods needed a 65 to finish in the money.

Still, his cut streak is the fourth-longest in PGA Tour history, 38 tournaments short of the record set by Byron Nelson in the 1940s.

The next test is the Canadian Open, which dates to 1904 and is the third-oldest national championship in golf behind the British Open and U.S. Open.

Royal Montreal is much different this time, with wider fairways and rough that is not nearly as deep and punishing. The greens are softer and smoother, which should lead to low scoring unless the wind picks up.

Woods won the Canadian Open last year at Glen Abbey outside Toronto with one of the most memorable shots in tournament history.

Vick humble about his playing time

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. — Michael Vick wants to put a couple of issues to rest.

He doesn't care whether he's called Mike or Michael — and Chris Chandler is THE quarterback for the Atlanta Falcons.

"I don't think I'm going to play this week," the NFL's No. 1 draft pick said Wednesday. "Chris is the starter. It's his team. My time is up now that the preseason is over."

Well, that's not how coach Dan Reeves looks at the situation. He made it clear that Vick will play in the Sept. 9 opener against San Francisco — the only question is how much.

"We will definitely use him in the game," Reeves said. "I have an idea, but we won't talk about it."

When told of Reeves' comment, Vick smiled. "Oh, well, never mind. The only thing I can do is prepare myself for whenever I go in the game, do the things I'm capable of doing."

Reeves, one of the league's most open coaches, doesn't want the 49ers to know what the rookie might do, so he took the unusual step of reminding the media of the rules for covering practice.

"You guys can watch practice, but what you see in practice, don't write it," Reeves said. "Whatever you see in practice, just keep it that way."

Certainly, the coach is floating the idea that while Chandler is the starter, Vick is going to play a major role before this season is done — with a few trick plays thrown into the mix.

"What we want to do is hopefully increase that learning curve of him being able to get on the field where he is more comfortable and yet not disrupt the flow of the game, and being fair to Chris so that Chris doesn't lose the flow of the game," Reeves said. "That is a difficult thing to do, but we are going to try it."

The Falcons have too much invested in Vick — a $62 million contract and hope for improving the franchise's sorry image — to let him languish on the bench all year.

"We're going to see how it works, because I do think that he can develop faster that way," Reeves said.

"Also, his skills present different problems for a defense."

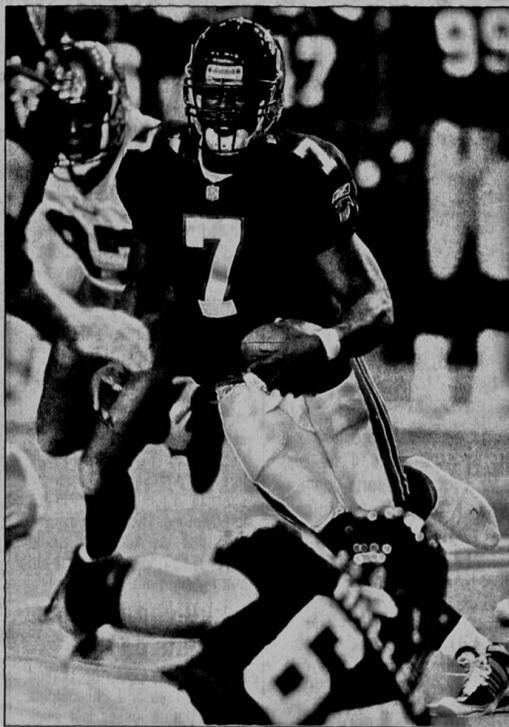

Chandler rarely scrambles, usually hanging in the pocket until the last possible second. That style of play has made him one of the more injury-plagued quarterbacks in the NFL.

Vick, on the other hand, has been timed at 4.24 seconds in the 40-yard dash — faster than most receivers and backs. During the preseason, he averaged 12.4 yards on seven carries, a tantalizing change of pace to the slow-footed Chandler.

"Michael is learning the system and I'm sure there's a possibility he's been taught a few special plays," San Francisco coach Steve Mariucci said. "We've got to prepare for both."

Reeves scoffed at the idea that Vick will be given a bunch of new plays for his pro debut.

"If you're a rookie and the biggest thing you have to do is know what to do, then I'd say

Atlanta Falcons quarterback Michael Vick (7) scrambles against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in the Georgia Dome on Aug. 31. Vick will play for the Falcons in Sunday's season opener.

the chances of us doing something he didn't do in the preseason are slim," the coach said. "He has enough things going through his mind without all of a sudden putting in something he is totally unfamiliar with."

Chandler, who was in the same situation at Houston in 1995-96 when the Oilers drafted Steve McNair, is a bit uncomfortable about the idea of having to sacrifice playing time.

"I never want to come off the field, but Dan will do what he thinks is best for the team," Chandler said. "I've been in this game long enough that it takes an awful lot to disrupt me." The rest of the Falcons are eager to see how it all plays out.

NFL gives its offer, officials consider it

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The NFL Referees Union has a day to consider a new offer by the league before replacements are assigned to work the opening week of the regular season.

The NFL increased its offer to the locked-out officials Wednesday but rejected a call by the union for arbitration in a meeting that lasted just a half-hour.

Then union negotiator Tom Condon flew home to Kansas City. He was due to discuss the offer in a conference call late Wednesday night with the union's four-member executive committee — Ed Hochuli, Bill Carollo, Jeff Bergman, and Ben Montgomery.

The NFL offer includes a 60 percent increase in salaries this year, compared with the 40-percent jump in the NFL's last offer. But the rest of the package remains the same, with officials' salaries doubled by 2003.

Even the new offer is far below what the union has demanded.

League spokesman Greg Aiello said the league had to know the union's response by today in order to make plans for the weekend.

"We hope the membership will consider it and respond favorably," Aiello said.

Hochuli, the association's president, told Fox Sports that he believed the board would reject the offer and the replacement officials would work this weekend.

Messages left for Hochuli by the Associated Press had not been returned late Wednesday.

Last week, the league locked out its officials, who have been without a contract since March. Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said the NFL didn't want to start the season without a contract, which would allow officials to walk off the field at any time.

Last week's final exhibitions were worked with replacements, most from college or the Arena League, and there were no major gaffes. But the league clearly was concerned that once the games counted, small mistakes would be magnified.

Talks resumed Tuesday and reconvened Wednesday morning, when the league put its new offer on the table. Over the long term, however, the two sides remain 50-75 percent apart.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Notre Dame at Nebraska for first time since 1948

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Last time Notre Dame saw Eric Crouch, the Nebraska quarterback was rolling left and running seven yards for the game-winning touchdown in overtime.

On Saturday night, the 17th-ranked Fighting Irish roll into Memorial Stadium for the first time since 1948 with even higher hopes of upsetting the fifth-ranked Cornhuskers.

A rare Nebraska home loss — the Huskers are 5-1 since 1992 — would do wonders for Notre Dame, which used to win big road games like these in piling up eight national championships but hasn't since 1988.

"There's some of that aura still alive," Irish coach Bob Davie said. "This is a huge game in Lincoln, Neb., as well. ... What that aura has been built on has been going and winning big games. For whatever reason, your team was an underdog; you're going in there as a coach and a player as an underdog ...

"That's what I think we have to do. At some point, we have to win."

A year ago, the Irish had a great chance against the then-No. 1 Huskers in South Bend. A 100-yard kickoff return and 83-yard punt return for touchdowns sent the game into OT at 21-all. Notre Dame kicked a field goal on its first possession, but Crouch hit tight end Tracey Wistrom for 9 yards on a third-and-9 from the Irish 24. Two plays later, Crouch scored and the Huskers won, 27-24.

Notre Dame blew another big-game opportunity in the Fiesta Bowl, losing 41-9 to Oregon State in one of the more embarrassing losses in Irish history.

Crouch, among the top Heisman Trophy contenders, is at the controls again for Nebraska; Notre Dame sends out Matt LoVecchio, 7-1 as a starter in '00. Arnaz Battle quarterbacked the Irish against the Huskers last season but missed the rest of the season with a broken wrist. Battle is now at wide receiver.

Nebraska has played two games, unimpressive wins over TCU (21-7) and Troy State (42-14).

Four times against Troy State, the Huskers failed to score inside the 20. Twice, they came away with no points after goal-lines stands inside the Trojans' 3.

Nonetheless, Nebraska averages 244.5 yards rushing per game — 16th in the nation. In the opener, Thunder Collins subbed for the suspended Dahrnan Diedrick and ran for 71 yards and two TDs; Diedrick returned last week with 177 yards and three TDs.

"Troy State was a very good football team," Crouch said. "And they played like winners. ... But we're Nebraska football, and we need to power people over the goal line. Really, there are no excuses."

Notre Dame's running game may be as strong as Nebraska's. The Irish have a trio of solid tailbacks in Tony Fisher, Terrance Howard, and Julius Jones.

Does Nebraska have the edge because it has played twice?

"It's an advantage in a small way," Nebraska coach Frank Solich said. "But the other team has a small advantage in they've been able to zero in on us."

The picks: Rutgers (plus 44) at No. 1 Miami. Staying on top will be a breeze this week ... MIAMI, 56-0.

Louisiana-Monroe (plus 57) at No. 2 Florida.

Demoted Gators have hard time winning by nine TDs ... FLORIDA, 70-7.

North Texas (plus 40) at No. 3 Oklahoma.

Sooners still prepping for first big game in two weeks vs. K-State ... OKLAHOMA, 45-0.

Young quarterbacks shine in SEC

By John Zenor
Associated Press

Mississippi's Eli Manning, Georgia's David Greene, and Auburn's Jason Campbell combined to throw for 770 yards, eight touchdowns, and no interceptions in their debuts.

Florida sophomore Rex Grossman opened the season by passing for 375 yards and three touchdowns.

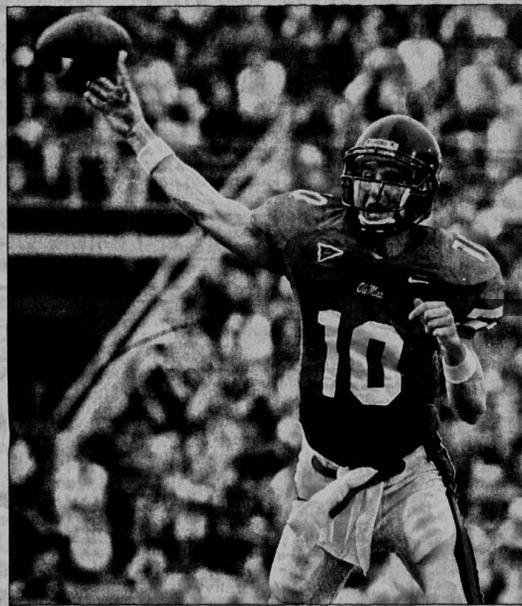

It's shaping up as the year of the young quarterback in the Southeastern Conference, with seven freshmen or sophomores starting for the 12 SEC teams as the season moves into its third weekend.

"There's a lot of good young ones," Auburn coach Tommy Tuberville said. "It's just amazing. There have been years when there have been very few."

"It'll be interesting to see what these guys can do when they grow up."

They are growing up fast. No. 2 Florida and No. 8 Tennessee both start sophomores. As freshmen, Grossman and the Vols' Casey Clausen were the league's top-rated quarterbacks.

"There's some exceptional talent in this league," Tennessee coach Phillip Fulmer said. "Putting those kids in the right position to make plays typically allows them to take off."

Bruce Newman, Oxford Eagle/Associated Press

Mississippi quarterback Eli Manning passes in the first half against Murray State in Oxford, Miss., Sept. 1.

Manning, son of Archie and younger brother of Peyton, set school records with 18-straight completions and five TD passes in his first start against Murray State.

"I don't know if I have ever completed 18 in a row in practice," Manning, who entered the game with 16 career completions, said. "I just went out and competed and did not really worry about it."

Manning didn't look like a youngster, hitting nine receivers.

"I think he threw the ball where he should 100 percent of the time, and we really like that," Rebels coach David Cutcliffe, who also coached Peyton Manning at Tennessee, said. "Being able to handle bad times as well as good times is extremely important."

Manning's team faces another prep All-American in Auburn's Campbell, a 6-foot-5, 213-pound redshirt freshman. Both are trying to downplay the matchup.

"There's no Jason vs. Eli," Campbell, a native of Taylorville, Miss., said. "It's Auburn vs. Ole Miss."

Tuberville is enjoying projecting, though. "It's a glimpse of quarterbacks of the future in this league," he said. "Two of the younger, better players in this league, possibly across the country. Who knows what's in store for either one of them?"

The early results have changed new Georgia coach Mark Richt's mind about the importance of taking a couple of years to groom a quarterback. Greene threw for 285 yards and a pair of TDs in a 45-17 win over Arkansas State.

"When I have had to play one and give him all the repetitions, and he's the No. 1 guy, I've found you can do a lot more than I used to do with a kid," Richt said.

Buckeyes enter season on same page

By Rusty Miller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — With a new coach, a new system, and a new season on the brink, Ohio State's players say they also have a new attitude.

No more of the finger-pointing, cliques, disciplinary and academic problems — and even teammate-vs.-teammate lawsuits — that have marked the past two Buckeyes squads, they say. The team that opens its season on Saturday against Akron is close-knit and driven only by thoughts of all-for-one-and-one-for-all, not agents, the NFL draft, or individual glory, they say.

"The Ohio State Buckeyes are a different team now," linebacker Matt Wilhelm said. A cynic would point out that kind of talk is common from teams coming off a bad finish that resulted in the firing of the head coach.

Regardless, the Buckeyes say they plan to back up their preseason talk by truly supporting one another.

Ohio State's summer workouts have been a virtual love-fest. New coach Jim Tressel, who replaced John Cooper after the Buckeyes were beaten by Michigan and in the Outback Bowl, has tried to instill team-building rituals to make the players less selfish.

Linebacker Joe Cooper, a co-captain the past two seasons, believes this year's team is indeed different but is not ready to say the Buckeyes are over the hump.

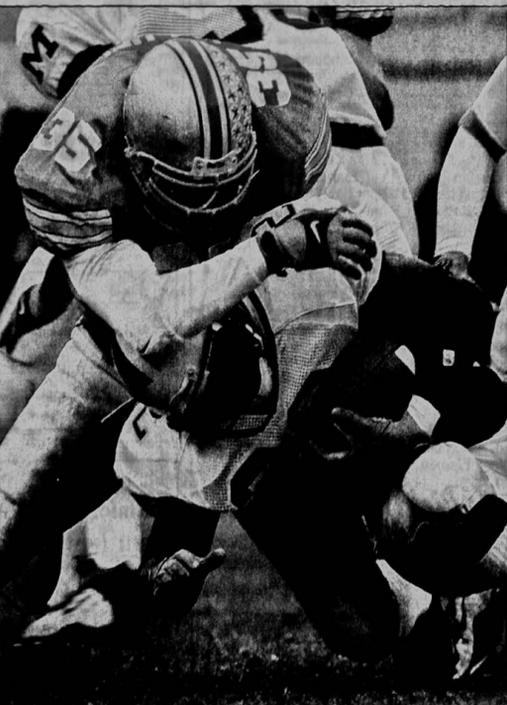

"Before a season, team unity is always good," he said. "It's what happens when the season starts and when adversity faces you. Then you see how good your team unity is."

Tressel and his staff have tried several tactics to engender a sense of "we" on a squad of 100 individuals. Just this week, players were given a quiz, but not on Akron's defensive sets or on Ohio State's offense against zone coverage.

The Buckeyes were asked to list their teammates' hometowns.

For the record, safety Donnie Nickey was able to write down 50 correct answers.

Tressel recognizes that he has more talent than he had total in his 15 years as the head coach at Youngstown State. But he also believes that the Buckeyes will be better if they play for the group rather than themselves.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't become involved in other people's secret affairs. Problems with in-laws or relatives will cause friction with your mate. You will have to be extremely open about your feelings.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your moneymaking ideas will be lucrative. Talk to relatives and friends about your intentions. Travel will be beneficial but costly. Protect ideas legally before presenting them.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Involvement in joint ventures or financial or contractual matters will end in disaster. Read the fine print and check into the background of those urging you to invest.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Travel for business or pleasure will be to your advantage. Get involved in mentally stimulating events. Your talents will surface, and hobbies can be taken to higher levels.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Organize your day well. An ability to delegate jobs will help you complete everything on time. Here is your chance to shine. You belong in the limelight, so be prepared to make your debut.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You'll want to spend some time alone. Stress and worry will cause fatigue. It's time to kick off those shoes and relax. Don't let anyone make you feel guilty.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Disharmony will be upsetting. Don't let someone you live with ruin your plans. Visit friends; you need someone to talk to. Don't let your mate put the onus on you; it takes two to tango.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Deception and underhandedness at work are likely. Stay alert for disconcerting news. Those you least expect may be behind the rumors spreading like wildfire.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You're full of energy, so you'd better find something to do. Outdoor activities will be favored. If you can spend a little time in the country, you'll be ready to conquer the world.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't let someone you live with ruin your day or twist things around. Be honest. You can only do so much, and after that, you'll have to see what happens.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Look into a way to implement some of your innovative ideas. Talk to those who may be interested in backing your plans or becoming a partner.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Moneymaking inventions will be good, but untrustworthy acquaintances may be quick to steal your ideas if you are too open about them. Mum's the word.

Bijou faces another season of hurdles

By Adam Kempenaar
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City might be as cultural-hip as this state gets, but if you're a film geek like me, this place can seem about as sophisticated as that backwards little bog where Sean Penn's car breaks down in the movie U-Turn. Sure, people in New York and L.A. have to contend with higher crime rates, traffic jams, and smog, but at least they can see Apocalypse Now Redux, or a smart, edgy film such as Ghost World before it comes out on video.

While they sit in their trendy theaters, sipping decaf mocha lattes and surveying the latest art-house fare, we're stuck wondering if we'll ever get to see a movie that doesn't star Freddie Prinze Jr. or that annoying guy from Scream — or even worse, the two of them together (Summer Catch, anyone?).

Thankfully, the Campus III has teased us recently with some quality, non-mainstream movies. Amores Perros, Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu's kinetic, episodic tale of love and loss, and Sexy Beast, featuring a terrifically evil performance from Ben Kingsley, both played there this summer.

For the true cinephile, however, Iowa City's only reliable venue for independent and foreign films is still the Bijou, which kicks off its fall schedule tonight.

So if you have a burning desire to impress your friends with your impeccable taste in high-cinema, here are three films to mark on your calendar. (Note that I have not seen any of the following films. These recommendations are based solely on subject matter and positive word-of-mouth.)

Startup.com
(starts tonight)

Produced by legendary filmmaker D.A. Pennebaker (Don't Look Back, The War Room), this documentary chronicles the rise and fall of the new American dream in the form of two lifelong friends who achieve unimagined success with their media company. GovWorks.com, only to watch it all crumble at their feet. Even if you aren't interested in the Internet, Startup.com is worth a look simply because it captures a time and mood in American culture that we will probably never see the likes of again.

At its core is a story of two friends whose relationship is altered forever.

Brother (Sept. 13)

From the famed Japanese actor/writer/director Takeshi Kitano, Brother is the story of a yakuza gangster (Kitano) who flees Japan after a nasty gang war to find his brother in Los Angeles. There, he meets a young hustler, played by Omar Epps, and begins a new life of crime. Sounds almost like a thinking man's Rush Hour, minus Jackie Chan's foolish grins and Chris Tucker's shrill voice — and with a lot more bullets.

Bully (Sept. 20)

"It's 4 a.m. Do you know where your kids are?" Even the tag line is disturbing. Based on the true story of Bobby Kent (Brad Renfro), a South Florida teen who was murdered in 1993 by his own "friends," Bully is director Larry Clark's (Kids) latest venture into the moral decay of the modern-day adolescent. Guaranteed to unnerve you, with an ensemble cast that reads like a millennium edition of the '80s "Brat Pack" — Renfro, Rachel Miner, Nick Stahl, and Bijou Phillips. How about the "Slack Pack"?

E-mail DI movie reviewer Adam Kempenaar at: burnhollywoodburn897@hotmail.com

A very funny look at the over the counter culture.

ABOVE: Edward Norton from American History X, Clerks, and Genghis Blues all ran at the Bijou between spring of '99 and fall of '00. The Bijou is slated to bring such films as Chasing Amy, Startup.com, Divided We Fall, Memento, and Calle 54 this year.

LEFT: Nico and Dani, and Gone with the Wind, two movies that have run several times since the Bijou opened in the 1970s.

A little art house on the prairie blooms amid corn

By Adam Kempenaar
The Daily Iowan

A Washington Post writer in the 1970s cited the Bijou as one of the three best places to catch a movie in the country, or so the story goes. Now in its 26th year, the student-run theater hopes to regain some of its past glory.

Bijou director Andy Stoll said the biggest challenge will be just getting the movies it wants to show. Because the Bijou is categorized as a non-theatrical institution — in contrast to the Coral Ridge 10, for example — film distributors tend to favor the larger movie chains that can promise a wider potential audience.

"[Distributors] know us, and we still have some clout," Stoll said. "But even if we have a movie scheduled for months in advance, we can't be sure it will play until the can actually shows up."

Stoll said that if a chain such as Central States Theatres, which owns the Coral Ridge 10, Campus III, and Cinemas I and II, wants to book a movie, the distributors will almost always give the film to it first. This problem has been intensified by the recent proliferation of huge multiplexes. The more screens the chains have to offer, the more films they need to fill them. As a result, many large theaters are screening films that would have normally only played at smaller venues such as the Bijou.

"It's great for the independent writers, directors, and producers that their work can be seen by a larger audience," Stoll said. "But little theaters like us suffer."

When the Bijou first opened in the '70s, he said, the theater showed around 300 films and sold anywhere from 50,000 to 75,000 tickets per year. Today, thanks mainly to the rise of video and DVD over the past 20 years, the Bijou now screens only about 80 films per year and sells fewer than 20,000 tickets.

"We're an important institution [in this community]," Stoll said. "We're screening the movies that can't be seen anywhere else, but we're also a small business that has to stay on budget, so we're constantly trying to find the right balance. We have to put a program together that will appeal to people."

One of Stoll's projects this year is to have more midnight movies on campus. The Rocky Horror Picture Show will play at midnight over the Halloween weekend, but, as of now, there are no other late-night movies planned, mainly because of money, Stoll said. Because the IMU closes at midnight, the Bijou would have to pay for the extra security and janitorial services.

"It's something I plan to approach Dean [Phillip] Jones and President [Mary Sue] Coleman about," Stoll said. "I think the Bijou could definitely fill a niche for people looking for things to do late at night."

Despite the numerous challenges, including a board that has only three of members returning from last year, Stoll has reason to be optimistic about this season. At the Student Activities Fair last weekend, approximately 150 people inquired about the movie Memento, Christopher Nolan's backwards revenge thriller about a man who is unable to form new memories. The Bijou screened Memento for a week over the summer, and Stoll said it is scheduled to return for a four-day run in October because of the high demand.

The Bijou opens its fall season tonight with Startup.com, one of the most-acclaimed documentaries of the year, and Chasing Amy, Kevin's Smith 1997 film about a 20-something cartoonist who falls in love with his best friend, who also happens to be a lesbian.

WEEK IN MOVIES

American Pie 2
(Coral Ridge 10)
The whole gang is back for more sexual perversity and post-adolescent fumbling, as they return home from college for summer vacation. This helping of Pie somehow manages to be both lewder and more sentimental than the original, but also a little bit funnier. (Adam Kempenaar)

Captain Correlli's Mandolin
(Coral Ridge 10)
The idyllic beauty of Greece's Mediterranean coast has been invaded by Italy, bringing legions of soldiers to the once tranquil island of Cephallonia. An educated and strong-willed woman slowly warms to a soldier's certain charms as they are forced to share her father's home.

Curse of the Jade Scorpion
(Coral Ridge 10)
Woody Allen stars as C.W. Briggs, the top insurance investigator in New York in 1940 — or so he keeps telling the firm's new efficiency expert, Betty Ann "Fitz" Fitzgerald. Briggs prides himself on being able to crack any insurance caper by getting into the mind of the thief, but now, thanks to the hypnotic powers of the Jade Scorpion, the mind of a thief is getting into Briggs.

Jay & Silent Bob Strike Back
(Coral Ridge 10)
Kevin Smith (Chasing Amy, Clerks) takes shots at Hollywood, Internet geeks, and even his own movies in this hilarious pop-culture satire that follows Jay and Silent Bob (Jason Mewes and Smith) as they try to stop Miramax from making a film about them. All the vulgarity and crass humor you'd expect from Smith's dimwitted duo, with a full load of eminently quotable lines. (AK)

Jeepers Creepers
(Cinema I & II)
This suspense film centers on two teenagers driving home from college who encounter something horrific in a church basement.

O (Campus Theaters)
This reworking of William Shakespeare's Othello takes place in a private high school in the deep South, where Odin (Mekhi Phifer) is the star basketball player and the only black student at the school. His girlfriend, Desi (Julia Stiles), is the white daughter of the school's dean and his best friend, Hugo (Josh Hartnett), is also a baller. Hugo's envy of Odin and the attention Odin receives from the coach and everyone else at school, drive Hugo to manipulate and destroy the young man.

The Others
(Campus Theaters)
Grace (Nicole Kidman) is raising two children by herself in a creepy mansion. Her children must always remain in the dark because they are deathly allergic to light. An aging nanny, an elderly gardener, and a young mute girl come to work for the family, but they seem to have a slightly different agenda from that of Grace and the children. When Grace's daughter starts communicating with unseen people, the scares start to build, finishing with a suspenseful ending.

Planet of the Apes
(Coral Ridge 10)
Tim Burton reinvents Pierre Boulle's classic novel, beginning with the famed original film's premise — a pilot finds himself in a world turned upside down after landing on a strange planet — with Burton's unique vision and style breaking new ground in story, design, makeup, and visual effects.

Princess Diaries
(Coral Ridge 10)
Fifteen-year-old Mia discovers that her father is the prince of Genovia and she is the sole heir to the throne. She must suffer through the indignity of princess lessons at the hands of her stern grandmother and decide whether she will live as a princess and move to Genovia or remain in Manhattan, where she lives with her artist mom.

Rat Race
(Coral Ridge 10)
An all-star cast proves just how far people will go for the chance to win $2 million in Jerry Zucker's film. It features wild chase scenes, slapstick comedy, sight gags, impossible situations, and zany characters who are invited to participate in a race in which the winner will receive a $2 million cash prize. There are no rules, and high rollers are betting on which of them will win the cash.

Mark Wahlberg is a nobody who becomes a somebody in Rockstar.

Rush Hour 2
(Coral Ridge 10)
Action star Jackie Chan reteams with L.A. motormouth Chris Tucker in this fish-out-of-water comedy as the duo investigates several bombings in Hong Kong attributed to Chinese gang leader Ricky Tan (John Lone) and assassin (Zhang Ziyi), whose beautiful, balletic kick packs a head-ringing wallop. Criminals eventually lead the detectives back to the United States and into the middle of an international counterfeiting racket that only Chan and Tucker can expose.

Summer Catch
(Campus Theaters)
The blue-collar Ryan Dunne, along with the hottest college ball players, is in Cape Cod trying to pursue his dream of becoming a major-league ball player. Ryan is soon tempted by a beautiful woman vacationing nearby and distracted by friction between friends and teammates. When a pro scout comes to town, Ryan has to push everything away to chase his dream and one chance at success.

Opening this Friday

The Musketeer
(Coral Ridge 10)
In Peter Hyams's adaptation of the famous Alexander Dumas story, the fearless sword fighter D'Artagnan (Justin Chambers) stands alone, fending off scores of evil adversaries in 1800s Paris. Fight sequences are choreographed by Chinese action expert Xin Xin Xiong, with a strong supporting cast of Catherine Deneuve, Tim Roth, Mena Suvari, and more.

Rockstar
In this rock-icon parody film, Chris Cole (Mark Wahlberg) is a nobody who becomes an overnight sensation. He is obsessed with the heavy metal band Steel Dragon, after which he has modeled his own band, Blood Pollution. Then one day, Cole is asked to take the place of the lead singer of Steel Dragon, and he is catapulted into the limelight.

Two Can Play That Game
(Cinema II)
This romantic comedy is about a sexy woman who schemes to tame her man after he messes around. In the end, she finds that it's not so easy to get her man back as she expected, and realizes that game-playing isn't the best way to find true love.

Monty Python and The Holy Grail
(Coral Ridge 10)
A hilarious send up of the Middle Ages and King Arthur. When the mythical king of the Britons leads his knights on a quest for the Holy Grail, they face a wide array of horrors, including a persistent Black Knight, a three-headed giant, a cadre of shrubby-challenged knights, the perilous Castle Anthrax, a killer rabbit, a house of virgins, and a handful of rude Frenchmen.

Also, Saturday at 7 p.m., catch a sneak preview of Hardball at Coral Ridge 10.

Floating on a cloud of music dreams

By Aaron Brim
The Daily Iowan

It's in the form of a Web site called Fightcloud.com, an online promotion company that offers free CDs of independent artists' music for a shipping and handling price of $4.95. Jack Scalfani, with his brother, Charles, started the company with the conviction of changing the way that music is perceived on the Internet.

"Let's face it, most of the music on the Web is crap," Scalfani told the DI. "All the music on Fightcloud is music that I would play on the radio."

Scalfani has been involved in music and radio for 14 years, including a five-year involvement in artist management. His brother has more than 25 years of computer-programming experience under his belt. Four weeks ago, the brothers were plotting out a way to showcase the music of Marc Corey Lee, a Country/Western artist who couldn't land radio airplay.

"We designed the site exclusively for Marc to get his name out there," Scalfani said. "I wanted to charge $5 per CD. My brother was like, 'Come on bro, let's give them away for free.' I thought he was crazy."

Initially, the site was designed for promotion purposes only; the artists simply broke even. But after looking into distribution costs, the Scalfani brothers learned that they could earn distribution discounts by purchasing mass copies of an album.

"We discovered that we could give the music away for free and still possibly produce a profit," Scalfani said. "We split the distribution profits 50-50 with artists, and they have all rights to their music. Some times they can even make more money than they would through an actual recording contract."

Fightcloud has a range of musical genres from jazz to hip to easy listening to country. Moves to include rock and electronic categories are still in the works. In the meantime, Scalfani brothers are receiving hundreds of promos per week.

"People ask me, 'Why don't you have more artists on your site?'" Scalfani said. "It's because most artists suck."

Over the four-week life span of Fightcloud, each artist featured on the site has received calls from radio and other media from all over the United States, he said.

"College radio is all over it," Scalfani said. "We carry the hottest unsigned musicians out there. It's the real deal. It's not of this 'CD-R' business. The CD you get from Fightcloud are the same quality you can get from the record store."

UI sophomore Candice Sherman said she will use Fightcloud. "I live in Iowa. Not everybody has an opportunity to talk to record producers in L.A. or New York. It sounds like an opportunity to get some real exposure," she said.

When Napster went down, the music on the Web was thought to have died along with it. And there was Fightcloud.

"We want to be up there with the rest of them. We want to be the minor league of the record companies," Scalfani said.

ARTS BRIEF

A brooding, Carolina Othello

The essence of O is a story subjected not only to a change in medium but in time as well.

From first-time director Tim Blake Nelson, O is an adaptation and update of William Shakespeare's tragic play Othello, transferred from the theater stage to the cinema screen and set within the social strata of a South Carolina prep school.

Despite the youth-infused shape-changing that befalls Shakespeare's poetry, O is a teen film in cast alone. O is dark and menacing from beginning to end, letting the tragic quality of Shakespeare's original work lurk behind the reworked narrative elements of an interracial romance and the stormy relations on a basketball team in pursuit of a championship.

The Bard's Othello becomes Odin "O" James (Mekhi Phifer), MVP of the Palmetto Grove Academy basketball team. Odin's success haunts teammate Hugo Goulding (Josh Hartnett in Shakespeare's Iago role), who sees Odin stealing the attention of his father and coach, Duke Goulding (Martin Sheen). Hugo attempts to correct the perceived injustice by hatching a scheme to break up Odin and his girlfriend Desi (Julia Stiles as Othello's Desdemona) and drive Odin from the team.

To its credit, the film lets its baby-faced cast tackle Shakespeare's timeless story without the intrusion of embellished editing or direction. O reverently retains its source material's potent mix of jealousy, pride, and paranoia and puts the burden of conveying a sense of frantic emotional deterioration squarely on the shoulders of its actors.

For the most part, the cast delivers. Phifer and Hartnett are particularly effective as the jealous, possessive boyfriend and the unhinged schemer. Phifer has a commanding physical presence on screen, using everything from the detail of his eyes and mouth to the larger scope of his extremities to convey his character's outward confidence and inner self-doubt.

While Phifer succeeds by being highly visible, Hartnett is eerily effective by making himself as small and unnoticeable as possible. Hiding under a shaggy, permanent-bed-head, his movements are tiny, allowing his Hugo to slink behind the scenes and harm the extroverted Odin.

The only weak link is Stiles, who is as blank as ever. When her face does work itself into some discernible expression, the moment is jarring, having upset the placid mask she has worn in each of her films to date.

When director Nelson does choose to take the reins from his actors, his interruptions are well-chosen. The one noticeable "special effect" is a frightening freeze-frame near the end of the film that halts not only the action on screen, but the audience's breathing as it waits anxiously for the next shot to reveal itself.

Also, the way the film handles the interracial relationship between Odin and Desi is unexpected and admirable. O approaches this strand of narrative from an aesthetic, rather than a thematic, angle. The love scenes between Odin and Desi de-emphasize the sexual content and focus instead on striking close-ups of the characters' ears with cheap, meaningless songs that have catchy choruses and sexually attractive singers.

Certain songs on certain days can make my eyes well up, even if I'm listening to my Discman in the middle of the Pentacrest. Single lines from songs can give me that tingly feeling or make me shiver. I think that's an amazing thing. I really do.

The bottom line is that I wish people would start thinking outside of the box. Whether that box is MTV, pop-culture, the radio, or whatever, everyone needs to know that buried in the back of independent music stores lies music that gets way less attention than it deserves.

Anyone interested can e-mail me, and I'll happily offer some suggestions for bands that they've been missing.

Bizarre accident kills Wyclef Jean's father

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — The father of hip-hop star Wyclef Jean died after becoming pinned between his garage door and one of his son's cars in what investigators believe was a bizarre accident, police said.

The Rev. Gesner Jean, 60, a Newark minister, suffered severe chest injuries and died at a hospital Monday night.

Police believe Jean, 60, may have been sitting in the driver's seat of the 1991 Bentley and that the car moved forward somehow after he got up and stepped in front of it.

Police were still investigating the cause of the accident but said Tuesday that the car was not malfunctioning and that they have found no evidence of foul play.

Bad as I wanna be, spearing Britney

I weep for joy at this very moment in anticipation of Britney Spears' new album, set to be released in November.

Just when I thought life couldn't get any better after 'N Sync's latest in July, I find out my favorite Catholic school girl/pop goddess is preparing to shock the world again, this time wearing less clothing and no doubt more makeup.

Promising to take a different and mature direction on the new album, the suspiciously celibate 19-year-old will no doubt dominate MTV and radio airwaves with her chair-fornicating sweetness.

I can barely contain myself. No, seriously.

When did music become all about outfits, choreography, and image? When did the heartfelt songs that described your life disappear and get replaced by teenie-bopping anthems about cybersex ('N Sync) and sexually provocative (Spears)?

They didn't. The heartfelt

Drew Bixby

AFTER FURTHER REFLECTION

songs are just losing a tug-of-war contest with pop garbage for the ears of those who need to hear them most.

I'm not discrediting what groups such as 'N Sync have done. I can respect the talent required to pull off a five-part harmony, even if they do sell records with their pretty faces.

I'm not even trying to say that pop music is bad. I have nothing against listening to pop music, rap music, or any type of music for that matter. I'm definitely guilty of that.

But I see no reason to get in a fuss over Britney Spears. Has one of her songs ever honestly changed someone's life? I have a hard time believing that. Unless we're talking about the thousands of already anorexic teenage girls who have begun puking up their food in an attempt to look like the Princess of Pop. I guess that's a life-change.

My life is no stroll through Candyland. But when I feel like my emotions are starting to get the best of me, I escape into music. Music that describes my life, that I can relate to. I don't want to pop in my Britney Spears CD and hear, "Open the soda pop bop shu bop shu bop," ("Soda Pop").

Honest music, with smart and heartfelt lyrics, is going unlistened to by hundreds of thousands of kids simply because they can't hear it on MTV. Instead, kids are polluting their ears with cheap, meaningless songs that have catchy choruses and sexually attractive singers.

Certain songs on certain days can make my eyes well up, even if I'm listening to my Discman in the middle of the Pentacrest. Single lines from songs can give me that tingly feeling or make me shiver. I think that's an amazing thing. I really do.

Michael Jackson back in spotlight

By Nekesa Mumbi Moody
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Michael Jackson's been enjoying a resurgence. Britney Spears gushes about him as a major influence. Destiny's Child mimics his moves in its most recent video. Rock group Alien Ant Farm has a breakthrough hit with its cover of Jackson's '80s hit "Smooth Criminal," with a hilarious video that pays tribute to him. Even N Sync borrows from Jackson's style on its latest album.

But are music buyers truly hungry for the Michael Jackson of 2001 (who, some say, is a 43-year-old, scandal-plagued, fading megastar past his commercial peak)? Or are they more enamored with Jackson nostalgia?

The ultimate test of Jackson's comeback will come Oct. 30 when Invincible, his first album of all-new material in six years, is released.

Jackson has reasons to feel encouraged. The first release from his upcoming album, "You Rock My World," has debuted at No. 34 on Billboard's Hot 100 singles chart. And his much-hyped solo concerts Friday and Sept. 10 at Madison Square Garden — celebrating his 30 years as a solo artist — sold out within hours.

Producer Jimmy Jam, who worked with Jackson on HISTORY, said part of the reason that disc may not have been a huge success was because it was too angry — and it focused too much on the 1993 child-molestation allegations against Jackson.

But no matter how carefree Jackson's new album sounds, it will be difficult for him to distance himself from the negative publicity that has dogged him in recent years. The twice-divorced father of two has remained a mainstay in the tabloids with his eccentric lifestyle, and his ghostly, surgically enhanced face remains a topic of public fascination.

Album Reviews

White light, white heat, White Stripes

If there is anything louder than the minimalist garage rock on the new White Stripes album, it has to be the buzz surrounding it. White Blood Cells is the third full-length offering from the South Detroit brother and sister duo Jack and Meg White, and it is already one of the more critically acclaimed albums of the year.

Part of the appeal of the album is the curious dichotomy of candy-striped and delicate songs that sound as though they are from a lost Kinks album, juxtaposed with sneering and energetic rock 'n' roll. Compare the picnic and tea-time innocence of "We're Going to be Friends" with the spark and vitriol of "Fell in Love with a Girl."

This is definitely a diverse album, ranging from melodic and minty songs to songs filled with feedback-tinged guitar hooks. White Blood Cells is not only catchy, it is infectious. It's the type of album that can be listened to all the way through, and should it find itself in your possession, it will no doubt reside in your CD player.

E-mail DJ reporter Richard Shirk at: rshirk@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu

Bjork has arrived

Icelandic pop star Bjork returns with her new album, Vespertine, after last year's Selma Songs, the soundtrack to the movie Dancer in the Dark.

Vespertine, which was released Aug. 28, is quite possibly Bjork's best record yet. It is a very quiet and introverted record for Bjork, who has been known on prior albums to shrill out songs at octaves most could never dream of attempting.

Bjork's vocals on this album range from faint whispers ("Cocoon") to slightly high-pitched chirps accompanied by choral choirs ("It's not up to You"). The songs flow into each other beautifully and are well-produced by Bjork and her electronic collaborators.

Ambient keyboards and lightly plucked harps join the album's beats, which perfectly accompany Bjork's shy, solemn voice. In the end,

Top: Bjork Bottom: White Stripes
Vespertine is a breath of fresh air compared with all the stale pop that has been circulating this year. Watch for Bjork to give Madonna a run for her money as a superstar and excellent actress.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE?

All students, faculty and staff of the University of Iowa are eligible for the program. In order to compete in the residence hall division, you must live in a residence hall. In order to compete for a fraternity or sorority, you must be a member or pledge to that organization. You may only compete for one team in a sport, but may switch to other teams in other sports if you are eligible for more than one team.

HOW TO ENTER A TEAM

If you are interested in entering a team in an intramural activity, stop by the Division of Recreational Services Office and pick up an entry blank prior to the event. You may use the approximate deadlines to determine the date of the event. Entries are usually out at least one week prior to the event. You simply need to fill out the entry and turn it in at E216 Field House. If the event is instant scheduled, there will be a specific time listed when you may begin to sign-up for the event.

INSTANT SCHEDULING vs TRADITIONAL SCHEDULING

If a sport is instant scheduled, teams are given their playing times at the time they sign-up for the sport. They then play at the same time each week. It is to their advantage to sign-up at the earliest opportunity if they have a certain time that is best for them. In traditional scheduling entries are accepted until a deadline. Teams may or may not be given an option of a preferred time. In any case, it is of no advantage to come in early as all teams will have the same chance of obtaining their preferred times. Instant scheduled activities include: Flag Football for men, Golf, Frisbee Golf, Volleyball & Basketball.

FIGHTING POLICY

There is a policy in place to discourage fighting and encourage sportsmanship. Participants are urged to become familiar with these rules and policies before participating in the program. All eligibility rules and policies governing participation in the program may be picked up in E216 Field House.
