From Playboy to brews

By George Pappas
The Daily Iowan

As legend goes, John Alberhasky was the first in Iowa City to sell Playboy magazine. The locals dubbed his family grocery store "Dirty John's," and the famous moniker stuck. The move to sell Playboy at the grocery may have gone mostly unnoticed in 1956 if it hadn't been for two junior-high school males who successfully made off with a stack of the magazines from John's Grocery Inc. and distributed them to their classmates.

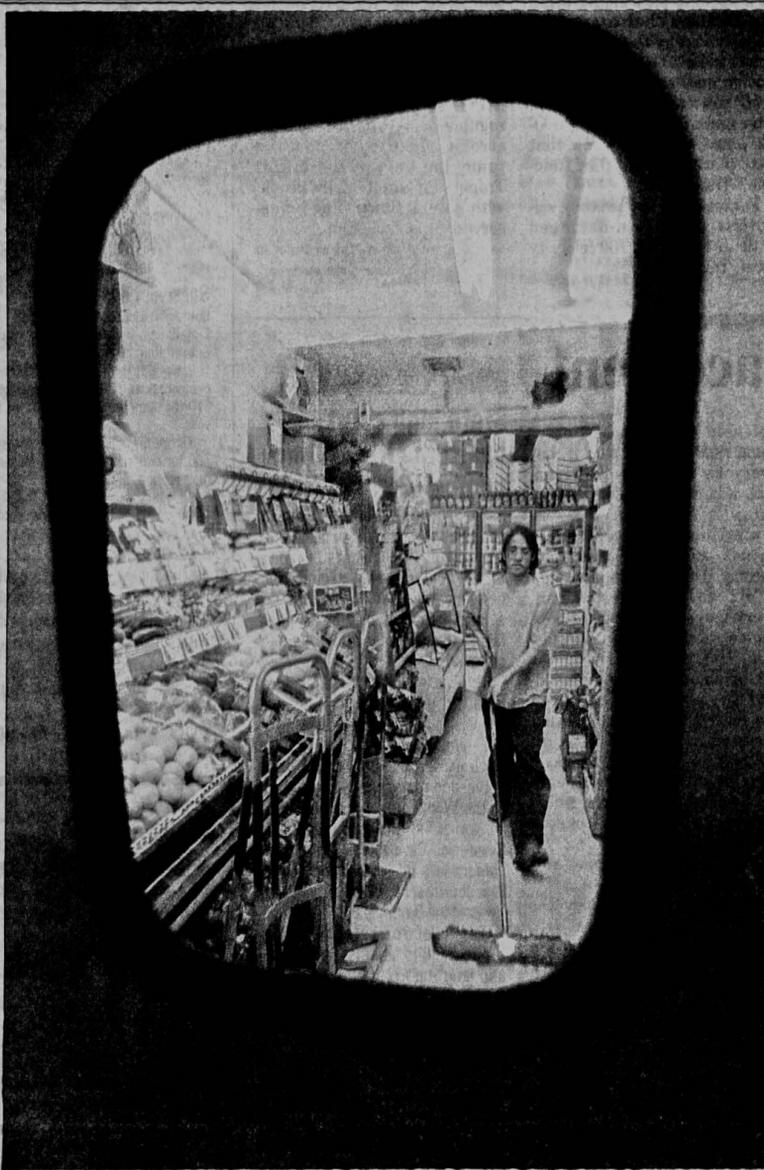

Doug Alberhasky, 32, the grandson of the store's founder, doesn't deny the legend. "Truth is stranger than fiction," he said.

Once the rogues were caught, the principal of the school called John Alberhasky and reprimanded him for selling such material, calling him "Dirty John," Doug Alberhasky said.

Most customers who enter John's Grocery, located on the corner of Market and Gilbert streets, have no idea they are stepping into a significant piece of Iowa City's history.

John's is one of the oldest continuously run businesses in Iowa City, second only to the Iowa City Press-Citizen. And the building that is now home to John's has changed hands numerous times since its construction in 1848.

Among the many establishments that have occupied the site include a fire house in the days when fire wagons were horse-drawn, a dance hall, a perfume factory, a "toilette cream" producer, a cigar factory, a bar, a religious bookstore, a barber shop, and of course, a grocery store/deli.

Zach Boyden-Holmes/The Daily Iowan

Doug Alberhasky said the building's first function was as home to a blue-collar bar, as can be seen by the cheap porcelain spittoons shown in an old picture.

In the late 19th century, a bartender installed a barber's chair, creating a temporary barber shop, he said. Locals recommended that people seeking a shave and haircut make an appointment early in the day, before the bartender/barber had a chance to sample too much of his own product — the liquor — behind the bar.

When Prohibition came, in 1919, the location was converted to a grocery store. The beer room was replaced by a religious book store, Doug Alberhasky said.

John Alberhasky purchased the property in 1948 and began to compete with 28 other family owned grocery stores in the area, Doug Alber-hasky said. Now the store is the sole remaining family owned grocery.

"My grandparents had seven kids," he said. "Everyone of them worked here from the time they could see over the counter."

That family atmosphere is what some say makes John's so appealing to local residents.

Economy down; LSAT figures go up

UI law schools sees 16 percent increase in number of applicants this year.

By Peter Boylan
The Daily Iowan

A national increase in the number of people taking law-school admissions tests and a jump in applications were spurred by a slowing economy and dot-com failures, say some law professionals.

Nearly 24,000 people took the LSAT in June, an increase of 18.6 percent over the previous year, according to the Law School Admission Council. The number of students applying to law schools this year rose as well, to nearly 79,000, up 5.6 percent.

The nation's largest provider of test-preparation services for graduate- and professional-school exams, the Kaplan Group, attributes the trend to the post-dot-com economy.

"Law school had become the stepchild to business school, but it is now emerging as the hot graduate degree of the post-dot-com era," said Albert

Chen, the Kaplan graduate programs executive director, in a statement released to the press. "A law degree has become particularly appealing because of its perceived security and adaptability."

"There is a lot of evidence that college enrollment goes up when the economy takes a downturn," said Beth Ingram, the director of the UI Economic Research Institute. "When the economy is booming, it's much more enticing to stay out in the job market."

The UI College of Law saw a 16 percent increase in the number of applicants this year, said N. William Hines, the dean of the school.

However, he said, the numbers can be misleading.

"I have a suspicion that the LSAT figure is a timing thing," he said.

Many people like to take the LSAT early so that if they per-

Gov't reverses Microsoft stance

By D. Ian Hopper

WASHINGTON — In a dramatic shift, the Bush administration on Thursday abandoned the Clinton-era effort to break up Microsoft. Instead, it suggested a lesser antitrust penalty that could still force changes to the company's new Windows operating system.

The Justice Department also dropped charges that the software giant illegally hurt competitors by tying or bundling separate features, such as a Web browser, to its flagship computer-operating system.

Microsoft had hotly contested those charges because the company's strategy calls for integrating more new features into such products as the new Windows XP operating system, due in stores next month.

Officials said the legal shift was not an overture to Microsoft to settle. They suggested that the government will ask the new judge handling the antitrust case to review the Windows XP software and seek a penalty that ensures that the company doesn't operate as an illegal monopoly in the future.

But the news that reverberated from Wall Street to Silicon Valley was the government's decision to stop trying

Budget cuts blamed for ratings drop

By John Molseed
The Daily Iowan

UI President Mary Sue Coleman blamed state funding cuts Thursday for the school's four-slot drop in a magazine's rankings of the nation's universities.

The school slipped from 20th to 24th among public schools in the U.S. News & World Report's latest "America's Best Colleges Guide."

"Our class sizes went up, and our percentage of full-time faculty went down, most notably," Coleman said in a statement. "These negative changes are a direct result of funding problems. In order to maintain and enhance our high quality, we must stabilize and improve our funding base."

Coleman was forced to cut $14.4 million from the university's general fund this fiscal year after a slowing economy punched a $300 million hole in the state's budget. As a result, 70 fewer faculty members work for the university this year.

The annual publication ranks 161 public colleges and universities in the country, putting UI in the top 15 percent. Rutgers University in New Brunswick, the University of Delaware, and Virginia Tech shared the 24th slot. The magazine will hit the

From the sound of it, this band practice is no different than any other high-school rehearsal. But instead of crew cuts and dye jobs, the musicians' hair is mostly gray and white. Instead of sweat pants and shorts, they wear khakis and dress pants.

It's not pep-rally rehearsal. Instead, approximately 75 senior citizens are practicing for the 20th anniversary of the Iowa City/Johnson County Senior Center.

"We've done everything from Handel to Bach to just some pretty crazy stuff," said French horn player Glenn Jablonsky. "The best thing about it is that it gives the aging population a lot of things to do to make their lives worthwhile."

Jablonsky joined the center 19 years ago, after he retired from directing the City High choir. Now, he directs the Senior Center choir group "Voices of Experience," which performs regularly in the community.

The anniversary celebration will kick off this afternoon with an anniversary pageant at 2:30 p.m. in the Senior Center, 28 S. Linn St. The celebration will feature musical performances, speeches, theater, and a program by Iowa City historian Loren Horton. On Sept. 11, there will be a Senior Center Skywalk dedication from 2-4 p.m., and on Sept. 13, a 20th Anniversary Picnic is scheduled to be held from 4:30-6 p.m. at City Park.

In addition to musical activities, some Senior Center patrons volunteer — sometimes as youth mentors, or in such programs as "Partners in Reading" or "Rock & Readers."

Patti Mott seems suited for the job of a volunteer reader. Her strong voice captures the attention of many, along with her dramatic hand gestures. She has been with the center for five years and has built up several theater groups in the area.

Volunteering is key to recapturing her youth, Mott said.

"It keeps us all educated, young, and on the go," she said.

Program Specialist Julia Seal thinks the center is one of the best in the nation when it comes to offering a variety of programs to senior citizens.

UI researchers nab $7 million grant

By Lauren Smiley
The Daily Iowan

A $7.1 million grant renewal will enable UI researchers to continue learning how the brain functions and making progress in diagnosing and treating neurological diseases, the university announced Thursday.

The five-year grant renewal, awarded by the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke, was the largest of the five such grants the research team has received during the past 19 years.

"Similar research is being conducted in a variety of leading institutions, but the UI is a leading center in research of neurology of higher mental functions," said neurology Professor Antonio Damasio.

"We are answering the fundamental questions of science — knowing how the mind works," he said.

With the increased money, researchers hope to discover where particular emotions are controlled in the brain and to study the brain's development through childhood, adolescence, and adulthood, Damasio said.

In the early 1980s, the research team began unlocking previously unknown locations of control centers in the brain for higher mental processes. The team consisted of Damasio, his wife, neurology Professor Hanna Damasio, and neurology Professor Daniel Tranel.

Researchers will continue their study of relating damage in a specific part of the brain to functions that are consequently lost by those patients, otherwise known as the "lesion method."

"If you can't do something after brain damage in a particular place, then you know that that place controls that function," Tranel said.

For instance, in one study, scientists ask brain-damaged patients to identify 100 celebrity faces, Tranel said.

"We know that most people from Iowa can name 75 out of 100 of the celebrities, but if someone can only name 25, there's a problem," he said.

Such patients have brain damage in the left interior temporal lobe, the part of the brain that processes proper nouns, researchers have concluded.

UI researchers see 1,000 subjects from across the state on a regular basis who have had a stroke, seizure, or surgery removing part of the brain, Tranel said. Additionally, people with normal functioning brains serve as a control group.

Charges filed in fatal accident

By Jennifer Sturm
The Daily Iowan

A Tennessee man was charged with a simple misdemeanor in connection with a collision among four vehicles on Interstate 80 that killed 22-year-old Matthew Estensen of Coralville.

Edward E. Becker of Dyersburg, Tenn., could face up to 30 days in jail or a $300 fine if convicted of failure to stop in the assured clear distance in connection with the collision, Iowa City police said. Becker allegedly sped through a construction zone west of the Highway 1 overpass and rear-ended Estensen's pickup, which was then sandwiched between Becker's truck and a semi-truck ahead of him. More charges are possible, police said.

Estensen's family members say the recent ISU graduate was driving home from a meeting with friends to build a team for an Internet fantasy football league Wednesday evening when the accident occurred. His truck burst into flames upon collision, police said.

Estensen was on the right track toward a career in agriculture, said his father, Glenn Estensen. The Illinois native had a love for the outdoors and the support of ISU advisers, who encouraged his career aspirations, he said.

Matthew Estensen was adjusting to his life in Coralville and had a strong faith in God and close relationship with family members, his father said.

He moved to Coralville on June 1, Glenn Estensen said, recalling that his son was about to begin work as a manager at Cargill, a West Branch-based agricultural consulting company.

"Matthew felt comfortable with his job and enjoyed the area," his father said. "He felt good about everything."

Growing up in Illinois, Estensen attended grade and high school in Newark, then spent two years at the Joliet Junior College. While there, Estensen developed an interest in agriculture, leading him to ISU, his father said.

After graduating, Matthew Estensen began working Cargill in Big Lake, Minn., Glenn Estensen said.

Matthew Estensen enjoyed his job but missed his girlfriend in Ames, his father said.

"We talked a lot," Glenn

Estensen said. "Matthew never came right out and said it, but everyone knew his girlfriend, Jen, was the one he wanted [to marry]."

Matthew Estensen made friends quickly at Cargill, said Jeremy Tipton, his supervisor.

"He was an All-American, every parent's dream of a boy," Tipton said. "If I had a kid like him, I'd be proud."

Glenn Estensen said he couldn't believe the events of the last few days but that he knows that his son is at peace.

"[Matthew's death] was God's will," he said. "Matthew's mother, brother, sister, Jen, and I believe that. Matthew believed in Jesus Christ as his savior, and we feel he is at home with Jesus now."

Matthew Estensen's body was transported to Newark, Ill., where the family will hold a wake today at the Newark Funeral home. Funeral services are scheduled for Saturday at Newark Lutheran Church. Matthew will be buried with his grandparents in the Saratoga Cemetery in Newark, his father said.

CITY BRIEF

State high court overturns libel ruling against Press-Citizen

The Iowa Supreme Court on Thursday threw out a $240,000 libel judgment against the Iowa City Press-Citizen, saying the newspaper did not knowingly harm a local business by publishing a false advertisement attacking a competitor.

The Electronics Cave, formerly an Iowa City electronics store, brought the libel suit after the Press-Citizen ran the ad from Woodburn Electronics, 1022 Gilber Court, and declined to run a retraction.

The Woodburn ad contended that an earlier advertisement from the Electronics Cave touting 8mm camcorders was misleading and untrue. Woodburn sells VHS camcorders, rivals of the 8mm version.

The Electronics Cave then brought suits against Woodburn and later the Press-Citizen, saying the newspaper helped in the publication of the libel. A jury awarded Electronics Cave $30,000 from Woodburn in actual damages. A separate jury said the newspaper would have to pay $240,000 to the company in punitive damages.

But the Supreme Court overturned the jury's ruling, saying the electronics store could not prove that the newspaper acted with "actual malice." Proving actual malice, or knowing falsehood, is a requirement to seek punitive damages from libel.

"None of the evidence ... was sufficient to establish that the Press-Citizen acted with knowledge that the claims made in Woodburn's advertisement were false or that the Press-Citizen acted with a reckless disregard for the truth," the high court ruled.

Officials say the county will consider building a new jail within the next five years.

The Daily Iowan

Some county supervisors said the need for a new, large jail is unavoidable even while it ponders various plans to alleviate overcrowding in the current facility.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors will consider pursuing a new jail again within the next five years, said supervisors' Chairman Mike Lehman.

The supervisors reviewed alternatives to overcrowding — including electronic monitoring and imprisonment practices, such as letting drunk-driving offenders serve time in other county jails and rehabilitation programs — during their meeting Thursday.

"We can keep picking away at this," Supervisor Terrence Neuzil said. "But we can't ignore we have an inadequate facility. This is just a little healing from the last election."

A proposed new jail was defeated by 66 percent of area voters in November 2000 in referendum. The jail proposal was up before the voters because the state had warned county officials last year to reduce overcrowding in the 9-bed facility.

Fareway eyes new site

By Mike McWilliams
The Daily Iowan

A new chain supermarket might come to Iowa City's East Side if city officials approve a rezoning to accommodate the store. However, one city official spoke out against the rezoning.

Al Streb of Streb Investment Partnership wants to develop a 24,000-square-foot Fareway Store on a parcel of land in the Scott-Six Industrial Park. Streb said Fareway, a Boone grocery store chain, approached him about development two weeks ago.

The Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission heard discussion Thursday on whether it should re-zone the land.

Associate City Planner Shelly McCafferty recommended that the commission deny the rezoning because a new store would cause an influx of traffic in the area.

However, Streb's attorney, Bob Downer, said a new supermarket would serve a need in the area, predicting that residential growth would continue.

McCafferty failed to accurately depict the conditions of the rezoning, he said.

The commission moved to defer voting on the matter until its next formal meeting, Sept. 20.

The re-zoning application, submitted by Streb Investment Partnership, calls for the rezoning of approximately 6.15 acres from an Intensive to a Commercial classification. Under the current zoning rules, grocery stores and other retail stores are not allowed on the land.

She also said that if the new rezoning were to go through, city officials would need to amend the comprehensive plan.

"We feel there are areas, much more appropriate, that are already zoned [Commercial]," McCafferty said.

The comprehensive plan, which the city drafted in 1997, encourages the development of existing Intensive zoning designed for repair shops and warehouses rather than creating additional commercial areas designed for larger business such as supermarkets.

Don Petersen of Cedar Rapids, who owns a Hawkeye Convenience Store next to the proposed grocery store site, foresees a lot of growth in the area. Despite the possibility of losing customers, he is in favor of the new grocery store.

"I hope you as a board would see to re-zoning that area," he said.

Larger jail unavoidable, county supervisors say

Officials say the county will consider building a new jail within the next five years.

By Mike Dhar
The Daily Iowan

Some county supervisors said the need for a new, larger jail is unavoidable even while it ponders various plans to alleviate overcrowding in the current facility.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors will consider pursuing a new jail again within the next five years, said supervisors' Chairman Mike Lehman.

The supervisors reviewed alternatives to overcrowding — including electronic monitoring and imprisonment practices, such as letting drunk-driving offenders serve time in other county jails and rehabilitation programs — during their meeting Thursday.

"We can keep picking away at this," Supervisor Terrence Neuzil said. "But we can't ignore we have an inadequate facility. This is just a little healing from the last election."

A proposed new jail was defeated by 66 percent of area voters in November 2000 in a referendum. The jail proposal was up before the voters because the state had warned county officials last year to reduce overcrowding in the 92-bed facility.

Excessive overcrowding often occurs on weekends in part because drunk-driving offenders frequently pay a fee to serve their sentences on those days so they do not miss work, said retired UI astronomy Professor John Neff, who presented the alternatives to the board.

"Most things [the board] can do will just stave off the inevitable," he said. "You're going to have to add capacity."

Lengthy continuances, in which court decisions are delayed, and alcohol-related arrests are major contributors to the overcrowding, Neff said.

Continuances often occur because judges don't receive information they need soon enough to make a ruling, Lehman said, adding that he blames delays on personnel shortages. The county may hire additional staff to help reduce continuances, he said.

Supervisor Carol Thompson suggested that the board encourage more offenders to opt for electronic monitoring by reducing the fee and triple-sentencing policy. With electronic monitoring, non-threatening offenders can serve their sentences outside of jail with a monitoring device. The option costs offenders $14 per month and triples sentences.

Lehman said the board is also considering more closely monitoring people who undergo alcohol-abuse rehabilitation.

However, Supervisor Pat Harney said none of the proposed alternatives address the major issues.

"The maximum-security people are still going to be a problem," he said.

"They are the real problem. We need more maximum-security space."

The supervisors will continue to study the overcrowding, and they may present a course of action in six months, Lehman said.

Court nixes Iowa grandparents' law

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Iowa Supreme Court struck down a state law giving grandparents the rights to spend time with their grandchildren Thursday, ruling it interfered with the rights of parents to raise children.

A unanimous court ruled that a state law guaranteeing grandparents visitation rights "substitutes sentimentality for constitutionality" and cannot stand.

"It exalts the socially desirable goal of grandparent-grandchild bonding over the constitutionally recognized right of parents to decide with whom their children will associate," the court said in striking the law.

The ruling came in the case of an extended Des Moines family that drew interest from around the country for groups ranging from parental-rights advocates to AARP, representing seniors.

The grandparents argued that allowing visitation "serves to strengthen extended family bonds in an era plagued by social ills such as divorce, drug use, and teen pregnancy."

The parents argued that forcing visitation over their objection was unlikely to promote family unity.

The case sketched the gradual breakdown of a Des Moines family over such seemingly trivial issues as how much fast food a child was allowed while visiting grandparents.

"So why are these nice folks embroiled in this litigation?" the court asked at one point. "The answer is both baffling and heartbreaking."

Court records said Joe and Lois Santi are the parents of Mike Santi. Mike Santi and his wife, Heather, are the parents of Taylor, who was 3 when the suit was launched.

The initial break came when the grandparents reneged on a promise to pay for a honeymoon cruise because Taylor, then an infant, wouldn't be left in their care. Other disputes came when the grandparents purchased the child's first pair of shoes and took her to see Santa Claus without permission.

"Over time communication broke down completely," the court noted. "Counseling proved to be of no avail."

The grandparents sought to assert an Iowa law guaranteeing grandparents visitation rights, but the child's parents argued that law intruded on their rights. By the time the case came to trial the grandparents hadn't visited the child in a year.

The court noted that courts in some states have allowed such visitation laws to stand, ruling they amount to "minimal intrusion" on parental rights.

"But the case before us is not about car seats or vaccinations," the court said. "We are convinced that the nature of the liberty interest affected here — the decision by fit, married parents to oppose visitation by third parties outside their nuclear family — is one that, in Iowa, has historically been protected by the highest level of scrutiny."

The court noted that a lower-court judge who initially struck the law observed that the parents of the youngster were probably off base and harming the youngster by blocking visits with her grandparents, but he declined to substitute his judgment.

"The court refused to substitute its judgment about the reasonableness of Mike and Heather's decision about visitation, even though — applying its own parental instincts — the court believed that withholding visitation with Joe and Lois was unreasonable and not in Taylor's best interest," the court said.

Miller urges Iowans to file claims

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — With a deadline looming this month, Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller urged consumers to check their eligibility for a $1 million settlement because of drug-industry overcharges.

"It's not automatic; they have to file a claim," he said. "People will not get a refund unless they file a claim."

Miller held a news conference to call attention to a Sept. 29 deadline to file claims in the settlement involving Pittsburgh-based Mylan Laboratories.

Iowa was among a series of states suing that company, alleging it overcharged for the drugs Lorazepam and Clorazepate in 1998 and 1999. The drugs are commonly used to treat anxiety, depression, and Alzheimer's disease.

The states sued because most consumers are elderly and programs such as Medicaid paid much of the cost. The states won a $100 million settlement, with $28 million going to repay government health programs and the rest to consumers who were overcharged.

Miller said 1,157 Iowans have filed claims, the most of any state, but he said there are probably more people eligible. "The good news is that more Iowans have filed individual claims on their own than in any other state," he said. "The bad news is that we believe there are many other Iowans who are eligible for substantial refunds if they will only file."

Miller
Iowa Attorney General

Miller urged consumers who think they may be eligible to contact their pharmacist. Because pharmacists keep records for an average of several years, they generally can determine if a consumer purchased the drugs in question. Pharmacists have been provided forms.

Jerry Karbeling of Polk County joined Miller at the news conference representing the Iowa Pharmacy Association. He said pharmacists were the first alert officials that prices for the drugs were soaring.

"We will be making one push to assure that patients who deserve to receive the compensation from this settlement are able to do so," Karbeling said.

Mezvinsky lands in more hot water

The former representative must inform the court before transactions of more than $5,000

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Former Rep. Edward M. Mezvinsky, awaiting trial on fraud charges, must clear any financial transactions of more than $5,000 with a federal judge, according to new bail conditions set Thursday.

The former Iowa 1st District congressman was back in court after prosecutors said he tried to deposit a phony check for more than $98,000 into his bank account.

U.S. District Judge Stuart Dazell ruled that Mezvinsky must inform the court three days before he intends to make any financial transactions of more than $5,000. If Dazell suspects anything is amiss, he will inform prosecutors, according to the agreement between Mezvinsky's attorney and prosecutors.

"It's a fair resolution," Mezvinsky's lawyer, Thomas Bergstrom, said after the hearing. "The government never took the position that this was a fraudulent transaction."

Mezvinsky declined to comment on the new bail conditions.

Mezvinsky, 64, who maintained an Iowa City residence when he represented the 1st District and now lives in Pennsylvania, was charged in March with swindling banks, clients, and relatives, including his elderly mother-in-law, out of $10.4 million. He plans to plead innocent by reason of insanity, according to court papers filed by his lawyers.

In the latest development, Mezvinsky allegedly told Allegiance Bank in Bala Cynwyd, where he had a small personal account, that he was expecting a large wire transfer.

The bank instead received a counterfeit check for $98,328.33 made out to Mezvinsky from France, prosecutors said. The bank put a hold on it, and no money was lost.

No one has been charged.

Mezvinsky, who served in Congress from 1973 to 1977, later moved to Pennsylvania, where he served as the chairman of the Democratic State Committee before running an unsuccessful campaign for state attorney general in 1988.

He is married to former Rep. Marjorie Margolies-Mezvinsky, D-Pa., who served from 1993 to 1995. She is not charged with any wrongdoing. Edward Mezvinsky was indicted on 66 counts of federal mail, wire and bank-fraud charges, tax violations, and making false statements. He is free on $50,000 unsecured bond.

He would face from seven to nine years in prison if convicted on all counts.

Harkin pushes free fruit for schools

By Philip Brasher
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Offering school kids a free apple or banana might get them to eat less junk food, says the chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, says a new farm bill that Congress is writing will subsidize the cost of giving away fruit and vegetables in some school cafeterias as an alternative to candy and snacks that are sold in vending machines.

"We want our kids to eat more fruits and vegetables," said Harkin, who outlined his idea Thursday to a gathering of produce growers. "If we start out young in life eating more fruits and vegetables, then we can do that during our lifetime."

Details of the program haven't been worked out, and Harkin conceded that there are problems inherent in storing perishable commodities. An aide said the giveaway probably would start out as a pilot project in a limited number of schools.

"We strongly support the idea and think it's a wonderful idea to give kids more fruits and vegetables," said Barry Sackin, the director of government affairs for the American School Food Service Association.

The Senate is starting work this fall on a rewrite of farm and nutrition programs that are set to expire in 2002.

The Agriculture Department buys more than $800 million worth of food annually for schools. Most of the fruits and vegetables the USDA buys are processed, although the department has been buying fresh apples recently to bolster crop prices.

Some schools in California, New York, and other states are buying fresh produce from local farmers.

In a report issued at the end of the Clinton administration, the USDA said the snacks and soft drinks children consume at school are contributing to obesity and other health problems.

School food directors want Congress to give the department the authority to regulate what is sold outside cafeterias so it can restrict junk food sales. Lawmakers are unlikely to do that, however, because such sales have become a lucrative source of revenue for schools.

Kids typically eat approximately four servings of fruits and vegetables a day — one fewer than the minimum recommended by the government. Moreover, potato chips and French fries account for one-quarter of the vegetables that children eat and almost one-third of those consumed by teenagers.

"You've got to get nutrition education into the classroom. You've got to get the cafeterias to serve more fruits and vegetables," said Lorelei DiSorga, the vice president of nutrition and health for the Dole Food Co.

According to Dole surveys, the most popular fruits with kids include bananas, grapes, watermelons, and peaches. Children also go for salad bars and raw miniature carrots, she said. "They don't like mushy stuff. With vegetables, they like crunch."

'Dos amigos' Bush, Fox hit Ohio

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Immigration reform may be too complex to complete by year's end, President Bush said Thursday in response to the plea of visiting Mexican President Vicente Fox. Undaunted, Fox told Americans "we need your trust" to swiftly legalize millions of undocumented immigrants.

Seeking to ease decades of cross-boarder suspicion, Fox addressed a joint session of Congress and then flew with Bush aboard Air Force One to address Latino voters in Toledo, Ohio.

"The time has come for Mexico and the United States to trust each other," Fox said.

Bush embraced the Mexican's wish to soften U.S. immigration laws but not his goal to complete the work by year's end.

"This is an incredibly complex issue," Bush said. One challenge will be to legalize undocumented immigrants without being unfair to people who have been following the rules and going through sluggish legal channels, he said.

"To make matters even more complicated, we've got to work with the Congress," Bush said, knowing conservatives in his own Republican Party have led the fight against amnesty. "We've got to come up with a solution that Congress can accept."

Administration officials said Bush was signaling to Fox — as he did in private meetings — that striking an immigration deal probably will take more than the four months remaining in 2001.

But Bush went out of his way to emphasize his friendship with the Mexican leader. To hear Bush tell it, he and Mexican President Vicente Fox were just "dos amigos" from Ohio — only with funny accents.

In the rush to showcase his administration's new and improved U.S.-Mexico relations, Bush took Fox to this Lake Erie city on Thursday and took their together to a new extreme.

"President Fox's grandfather was raised in Cincinnati, Ohio.

My grandfather was raised in Columbus, Ohio. I guess you could kind of say we're Ohioans," Bush told an enthusiastic audience in the University of Toledo gym.

"Except it's, kind of, hard to tell by our accents."

Bush made sure Fox did not go home empty handed from a 62-hour trip designed to silence critics who claim the Mexican president has not lived up to his promise. In a joint news conference before their trip Bush:

- Promised to veto a transportation spending bill unless Congress drops new safety standards for Mexican trucks using U.S. roads.

- Urged lawmakers to suspend a program requiring Mexico to get annual certification that it has cooperated in the war against drugs.

- Tried to shield Fox from blame over a sagging Mexican economy, noting that U.S. financial prospects affect other nations. Gesturing at Fox, the president said, "He's getting blamed for something that's taking place in America."

Fox also got a ride aboard Marine One, the helicopter that was parked on the South Lawn to sweep the leaders away to Air Force One and Ohio.

U.S. presidents rarely travel with their counterparts, but Bush clearly wanted to put on a good show for Fox, his countrymen, and Latino voters in America — the fastest-growing voting bloc.

Bush won Ohio during last year's presidential election, but Democrat Al Gore won Toledo, where Latinos make up 5.5 percent of the population. Nationwide, Latinos make up 12.5 percent of the population, a 60 percent increase in a decade.

In Toledo, framed by oversized U.S. and Mexican flags, Bush called Fox "mi amigo" and "special visitor." Fox told the large crowd that Americans need not be afraid of eased immigration.

Campaign reform closer to vote

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supporters of campaign-finance legislation inched closer to their goal of forcing the measure to a vote on the House floor on Thursday, and they pledged an intensive effort to round up the last few supporters needed.

"The writing's on the wall — and on the petition sitting in the well of the House," said Rep. Martin Meehan, D-Mass. "I believe there is enough support to get us to 218," he said, referring to the number of signatures needed on the legislative paperwork to set a date for a vote.

The number of supporters grew to 207 during the day as Rep. Maxine Waters, D-Calif., signed her name. Rep. Wayne Gilchrist, R-Md., became the latest member of the GOP to defy his leadership when he signed Wednesday, shortly after lawmakers returned to the Capitol from a month-long summer break.

The legislation would implement the most sweeping overhaul of campaign-finance laws since the Watergate reforms of a more than a quarter-century ago. The centerpiece of the bill is a near-total ban on soft money, the unlimited contributions that unions, corporations, and individuals make to political parties. The two parties raised roughly $500 million in such funds in the last campaign cycle, and they spent much of it on television commercials — often scathing but stopping just shy of advocating the election or defeat of a candidate.

In addition, the measure would ban certain types of political broadcast advertising in the 60 days before an election, a provision that would apply to many special interest groups.

President Bush has signaled he would sign the bill, despite frequent overtures from Republicans to veto it.

House GOP leaders scheduled the bill for debate earlier in the year, but the measure was abruptly pulled from the floor after lawmakers, on a vote of 228-203, rejected GOP ground rules for debate that the measure's supporters had attacked as unfair.

Several days later, supporters began their petition drive.

With Congress returning to work, supporters of the bill were resuming the search for supporters. Officials said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., the leading architect of the bill, had placed telephone calls to a handful of GOP House members during the day to urge them to add their names to the petition.

Meehan, Rep. Christopher Shays, D-Conn., and Sen. Russell Feingold, D-Wis., are to travel to Memphis today to attend a town hall-style meeting in the district of Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn. Ford has signed the legislative petition, and he has been active behind the scenes in attempting to persuade other members of the Congressional Black Caucus to do likewise.

Supporters said there were more than enough lawmakers sympathetic to the cause to allow them to accumulate 218 signatures.

Twenty Democrats have not yet signed, including 11 who signed a similar petition in 1999. In addition, seven Republicans who voted against the GOP-crafted ground rules last month have yet to sign.

form poorly, they can take it a second time for free in the fall, Hines said.

"People are getting more sophisticated with the cycle of applying," he said. "There is no doubt whether, over the last two years, the number of applicants has gone up, but it's the same pool of people applying. More of them are submitting multiple applications."

Almost every law school in the country offers online applications, Hines said. A single applicant can then apply to many different schools, thus raising the total number of applications, not applicants.

"If the total size of the pool isn't growing, how can we say the economy is driving people to law school?" he said. "It's easy to misinterpret the numbers."

"It's the hometown touch and the way we treat our customers," she said. "We treat everyone like family, not as a number. You know, we just try to make it personal."

John's has been a pioneer in many areas. For instance, it was the first store in Iowa to have an EFT (Electronic Funds Transfer), a modern-day ATM.

And John's continues to leave its mark on the local landscape. Doug Alberhasky said beer importers tell him that, with 539 different types of brew available, John's has the largest selections of domestic and imported beer in the Midwest and one of the largest in the nation.

One self-proclaimed regular, Bob Panther, 59, said what's been making him come back regularly since he was 10 or 11 is the simple fact: "You know what you're gonna get," he said.

"John's has done a good job of adapting to the changing times, which is hard to do in such a little place," he said. One thing, however, has stayed consistent for long-time customers.

"It's really hard to come here and not get involved," she said. "It's very seldom when there's Eighty percent of the center's operating funds come from city funds, while the county provides the other 20, said coordinator Linda Kopping.

COLLEGE RANKINGS

fall to 35th, and I don't know how I can seriously respond to that."

The "America's Best Colleges Guide" has been criticized as a "shallow" way to rank colleges. Critics say the survey sent to 1,400 schools used to determine the rankings is arbitrary. The survey has 16 categories in which data are collected.

One of the categories is selec-tivity, which hurts the UI, said school spokesman Steve Parrott. State law requires the university to admit any Iowa high-school senior who graduates in the top half of her or his class.

"U.S. News argues that that is a measure of quality," he said. "What it means for us is that we're much more accessible to give students a good education for less money."

Parrott added that being in the top tier still somewhat reflects the university's qualities.

"This isn't like NCAA rankings," he joked. "But we've been consistently ranked in the top 25 for the last 20 or so years."

Fethke says he isn't convinced of the ranking's importance.

"They're selling advertising as fast as they're coming out with rankings," he said. "It's getting hard not to get cynical about this whole thing."

to break up an American corporate icon that helped fuel the technology revolution of the 1990s.

The 19 states that joined the government in suing Microsoft and seeking its breakup acquiesced, saying an appeals-court decision earlier this summer would make a breakup more difficult to pursue.

"This is an industry that moves incredibly fast," said Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller. "The case has gone on for quite some time now. It was time to move as quickly as we could to remedy."

Microsoft reacted with cautious optimism. "We remain committed to resolving the remaining issues in the case," spokesman Vivek Varma said.

Investors, however, showed some concern that the penalties the Bush administration will seek might still affect or delay next month's planned debut of Windows XP — which many on Wall Street hope will help invigorate the sluggish technology industry.

Microsoft shares finished the day down $1.72 at $56.02 per share.

The Justice Department said it made the about-face to streamline the case and bring it to an end as quickly as possible. The goal, it said, was to "obtain prompt, effective and certain relief for consumers."

The department said it would still seek a penalty that would open the operating-system market to competition.

The government proposed a penalty similar to some interim penalties imposed by the original trial judge, U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson. Those would, among other things, stop Microsoft from making certain exclusive deals with partners, force computer manufacturers to keep specific icons and programs on the Windows computer desktop, and give other companies more access to Windows blueprints.

Howard University law Professor Andy Gavil said such restrictions could affect Windows XP, which has been completed by programmers but won't reach stores until October.

"It's hard to square the interim remedy with Windows XP," Gavil said.

One of Microsoft's chief rivals said it was happy the government plans to focus on the new systems.

"What's clear today is that the Department of Justice is prepared to take a hard look at Windows XP and will pursue a quickly imposed remedy to open up competition on the desktop," John Buckley said.

For the second-straight year Princeton University is at the top of the annual campus rankings by U.S. News & World Report, coming in ahead of Harvard and Yale. The list, which was released Thursday, appears amid growing criticism that misses the point of college learning.

Even the No. 1 school played down its placement.

"While we appreciate the recognition in these rankings, we don't put much stock into the particular ranking or others like it," Princeton spokeswoman Marilyn Marks said. "There are issues of methodology and subjectivity, and we don't believe a ranking can capture whether any institution is appropriate for any individual student."

U.S. News counters that the editors' year-round effort to get the rankings right includes regular consultation with top college officials nationwide. It says complaints from schools are few.

More importantly, consumers understand the list is only a starting point, said Peter Carr, the U.S. News special-projects editor.

"The hundreds of thousands of people who buy our guidebooks are not buying it to find out who's No. 1," he said. "They're really buying these guidebooks to mine the data, to find out which college is right for them."

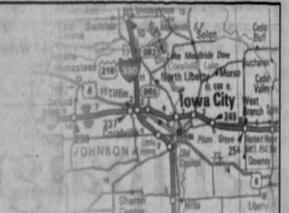

The rankings, first presented in 1983, were released on the magazine's Web site.

Once again, Princeton 1st in U.S. News campus rankings

By Arlene Levinson
Associated Press

For the second-straight year, Princeton University is at the top of the annual campus rankings by U.S. News & World Report, coming in ahead of Harvard and Yale. The list, which was released Thursday, appears amid growing criticism that it misses the point of college learning.

Even the No. 1 school played down its placement.

"While we appreciate the recognition in these rankings, we don't put much stock into this particular ranking or others like it," Princeton spokeswoman Marilyn Marks said. "There are issues of methodology and subjectivity, and we don't believe any ranking can capture whether any institution is appropriate for any individual student."

U.S. News counters that the editors' year-round effort to get the rankings right includes regular consultation with top college officials nationwide. It says complaints from schools are few.

More importantly, consumers understand the list is only a starting point, said Peter Cary, the U.S. News special-projects editor.

"The hundreds of thousands of people who buy our guidebook are not buying it to find out who's No. 1," he said. "They're really buying these guidebooks to mine the data, to find out which college is right for them."

The rankings, first presented in 1983, were released on the magazine's Web site.

They'll also be available in the magazine and a book, America's Best Colleges, beginning Sept. 10.

Harvard and Yale tied for second behind Princeton in the magazine's premier category of "national universities-doctoral." The 249 schools in that group offer an array of undergraduate majors, master's, and doctoral programs.

The California Institute of Technology was fourth; and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Stanford University, and the University of Pennsylvania tied for fifth.

Sorting schools into three other categories, the magazine also ranks liberal-arts colleges, universities that chiefly offer bachelor's and master's degrees, and schools that focus on undergraduates but have high enrollments in such professional programs as nursing and teaching. The last two categories are broken down by region.

Most of the information in the rankings comes from a survey the schools complete.

Schools are placed into categories, then graded by a numeric formula figuring in such factors as selectivity, class size, faculty salaries, graduation rates, and alumni giving.

The biggest part of the equation — 25 percent — is academic reputation. For that, campus executives are asked to rate rival institutions.

Amy Graham, who ran the U.S. News' rankings for 18 months in the late 1990s, co-wrote an article for the latest issue of The Washington Month- ly, criticizing the rankings as shallow.

"The basic problem is some of the criteria they use are just measuring the wrong thing," she said in an interview. The high-scoring schools tend to be those that produce a lot of research, with money and faculty salaries to match, she said.

The rankings need to factor in evidence of education, including student satisfaction, she said.

U.S. News has looked for ways to quantify how much students actually learn, their satisfaction and results, but it has yet to find a workable method, Cary said. Still, he said, "most of the people we talk to believe most of what we're doing is on the right track."

One exception is Bard College President Leon Botstein, who regularly assails the rankings.

"They don't really analyze the quality of teaching. They don't analyze the curriculum," said Botstein, whose Annandale-on-Hudson, N.Y., school ranks 38th among liberal-arts colleges. "It's a club ranking. This is the equivalent of the restaurants you want to be seen in."

Yet Botstein readily furnishes U.S. News with data used to rank Bard. And Graham, who is now helping Arlington County, Va., develop a community "report card," said that when her 13-year-old son starts looking for a college, she'll buy the U.S. News guidebook. "The graduation-rate data are worth the price of the book alone," she said.

Now entering its 29th year, the 2002 Pulliam Journalism Fellowship helps build a bridge from the classroom to the newsroom. Fellows are assigned to The Indianapolis Star or The Arizona Republic in Phoenix for 10 weeks each summer as staff reporters. We award 20 Fellowships annually. The stipend is $6,000.

Traditionally, our Fellowships have been open only to graduating college seniors. In 2001, we expanded eligibility to include college sophomores and juniors as well as seniors pursuing a career in newspaper journalism. ## Microsoft backs UI into corner

The glory days are over for Microsoft, so the gloves have come off. With its stock at less than half its value of two years ago, the software giant is feeling the money crunch. In order to pull together every penny it can get, it is now targeting universities across the nation, including the UI, with claims of piracy.

In order to show their generous nature, Microsoft executives have "graciously" offered a solution. The UI agrees to pay a licensing fee in exchange for the ability to distribute legal copies of Microsoft software. Already, the UI and Microsoft have struck a deal for around $300,000 that would allow faculty members to upgrade their software. Microsoft also wants to make a deal for an unspecified amount that would include students. The final cost of any such deal will be passed on to students through computer fees.

Faced with the threat of a very costly lawsuit, university officials have no choice but to accede to Microsoft's wishes. However, Microsoft's behavior in this situation is highly questionable.

First of all, one must question Microsoft's aim. For a company that claims to recognize its responsibility to the community, its decision to target public universities seems odd. The UI is already facing severe budget difficulties because of state cuts. In order to maintain quality, these shortfalls are passed on to the students through raises in tuition and fees.

Now, Microsoft has decided to toss in a costly licensing agreement that will further increase student computer fees. This seems very insensitive and shortsighted on Microsoft's part. Apparently, it does not realize that much of its highly skilled workforce is trained at public universities across the nation. By increasing the cost of a higher education, it is pre-emptively cutting people out of the workforce and shooting itself in the foot.

Second, Microsoft asserts it is offering us a great deal on its software. For a relatively low fee, the university gets to distribute software to the students and faculty. However, on closer inspection, it may not be such a low fee. For example, the deal to allow faculty to upgrade their computers costs $300,000. A full copy of Microsoft's flagship operating system, Windows 2000, can be purchased for approximately $150 when bought with hardware. This means that in order for the university to break even, at least 2,000 faculty members must take advantage of this plan. Whether this actually takes place remains to be seen, but with the high percentage of Macintosh users among the UI faculty this seems dubious.

With students, the situation is even murkier. Should students who do not have computers be exempt from the fee? Why should Microsoft be getting money for software never used? Basically, students would be paying them in advance for a product that they might never claim.

Microsoft is blackmailing the university. Unless the school agrees to pay, the software giant will take us to court for the actions of a few people who are probably somewhat ignorant of the fact that they are stealing. As always in these situations, the bribe is less than the court costs, so the university has no choice but to pay. There is a lesson to be learned, though. The UI should begin seriously considering alternative sources for software. As long as we are dependent on Microsoft's software, it will continue to wring every penny it can out of us.

Shadow of racism looms over U.S.

Systematic falsification of history; so that it may provide the proof of moral valuation.

— Nietzsche

The United Nations World Conference Against Racism achieved more than it will be given credit for by the Bush State Department if only to open up a global discussion on racism and the West's "other" holocaust.

The conference has been particularly unnerving for the United States, which exercised an unmistakably salient role in the slave trade. Despite its flag waving "freedom" and "equality" rhetoric, the United States was the last nation in the West to formally ban slavery (1865) and guarantee full civil rights to all of its citizens (1965). Ever the reckless, arrogant, and laughable cad of the global block, Uncle Sam insulted the international community by leaving the baby out with the bathwater over arguably negligible concerns about language in the venue's charter.

But if we are to understand racism in its present manifestations, it is also necessary to first come to terms with racism's cause — imperialism — and the legacy of brutality of the U.S. and European trade in human cargo and blood.

Indeed, this is what many proponents of nations of the conference see as a central cause of racism in the world. "Imperialism" is a most difficult word for Americans to get their mouths around. It is usually uttered with the palliative "Nazi Germany" or "Imperial Japan," two countries that throughout the 1930s embarked on Keynesian military buildups akin to that of the United States since 1945. A simple dictionary definition of imperialism is "the policy, practice, or advocacy of extending the power and dominion of a nation especially by direct territorial acquisitions or by gaining indirect control over the political or economic life of other areas." This definition is consistent with the role of the United States in the world over the past 50 years. But racism runs even deeper; for racism and sexism are the psychic collateral damage of imperialism and, coupled with illusory notions of history, together constitute the unconscious fodder with which to explain away the moral and physical abominations of the past.

J. Frederick Tracy

Frantz Fanon observed that any effective system of imperialism first involves a colonization of consciousness. This is inversely the case for the colonizer. Denying past injustices (and forums that address such) involves an intentional habit of self-affirmation to rationalize one's place in the world; "beating the Nazis," "ending slavery," or even "fighting racism." It also involves the unmistakable conditioning by media and popular culture to react in subtle or overt ways to discernible difference that in turn privileges one's sense of "whiteness" and "moral rectitude." An extreme example of this took place with the murder of Amadou Diallo in New York. Indeed, there is no question that if Diallo's skin pigmentation were lighter, the wallet in his hand would not have been a gun.

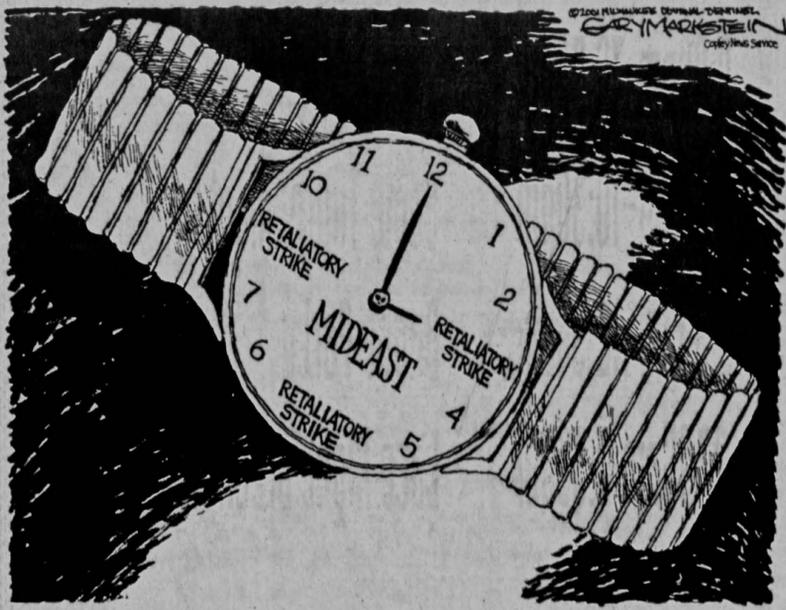

The United States relates to its past like a sentimental brute, playing up (or falsifying) righteous moments while playing down the bad. Recent popular World War II revisionism is illustrative. As of late, there has been a slew of vainglorious book and film accounts of World War II. Sub-mediocre documentaries on the era abound on the "Hitler" (History) Channel. For six years, Germany and Japan unleashed a relentless campaign of death and destruction across Europe that, cumulatively, still cannot match what England, Holland, France, and the United States had been visiting upon indigenous peoples in the Southern Hemisphere for over 400 years. In this case, however, the victims were white Europeans, and the action to curtail the violence was swift. Nazism, a program of imperialism rationalized through alleged racial superiority, is by now as glaringly apparent to Palestinians in the West Bank as it is to Rwanda's Tutsi minority, the Kurds of Northern Iraq, Amadou Diallo, or the close to 1 million black men in state and federal prisons throughout the United States.

The Civil War is another romanticized era of history. Many Americans have convinced themselves that the Civil War was fought to "free the slaves" when in fact the reasons were not moral but economic. Had the United States wanted to make true amends for slavery and provide a course of meaningful self-determination for blacks, it would have embarked on a program of post-bellum land and wealth redistribution throughout former Confederate states and the imprisonment or exile of Southern landed elites for crimes against humanity. The recognition of humanity for blacks, however, would be put on hold another 90 years.

Quite simply, given the blood on its hands and the larceny in its historical heart, the U.S. pullout from the conference under the subterfuge of "anti-Zionist" language is unremarkable. At the same time it is comparable to the wife-beater creeping out the rear window when the cops arrive. The silence of much of the U.S. citizenry, however, lies underneath the rubric of imperialism; somewhere between Gone with the Wind and that river that empties into the Mediterranean.

play is the on-stage shifts in character, Hovland said.

"Part of the fun is that the audience gets to view the transformations," she said. "It's really important that we be able to see ourselves in the characters and not separate ourselves from them."

I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change, written by Joe DiPietro and Jimmy Roberts, became Off-Broadway's longest-running musical revue in January, and it has played in more than 50 cities in 10 countries since 1996. One critic described it as "Seinfeld" set to music.

Many people who had seen the revue in other cities recommended that the show be performed at Riverside Theatre, Hovland said. After so many recommendations, she sent away for the script and was thrilled with the show's contemporary and humorous look at relationships.

I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change opens the third decade for Riverside Theatre, the only professional, non-profit theater company within 30 miles of Iowa City. Hovland said she believes Riverside's space is perfect for the intimacy of the revue and that I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change is also a great season-opener for the theater because of its broad appeal.

I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change will run from Friday through Sept. 30 at Riverside Theatre, 213 N. Gilbert St.

Macedonian peace passes Parliament test

By Brian Murphy
Associated Press

SKOPJE, Macedonia — Macedonia's peace process passed a vital test in Parliament Thursday to set the peace plan's next steps in motion: NATO's gathering more weapons from ethnic Albanian rebels and legislative debate on new minority rights.

The NATO side appears easy. The insurgents offered no objections to surrendering more weapons, and the arms collection could resume today after a week-long break during the marathon Parliament proceedings.

But the struggle isn't over in the wood-paneled Parliament chamber. Lawmakers must now deal with 36 specific constitutional amendments for greater political and language rights for ethnic Albanians, who constitute about a third of Macedonia's 2 million people.

"This is only the first step," said legislator Radmila Secerinksa after Parliament backed the general framework of the peace accord. "The hardest part lies ahead."

It took six days of sharp-tongued bickering, patriotic grandstanding, and stop-and-go political maneuvers to arrive at the peace-plan vote: 91-19 with two abstentions. It needed 80 votes in the 120-seat assembly.

Rejection would have toppled the entire Western-brokered accord seeking to end the six-month-old conflict.

"This vote was by those who believe in the future of Macedonia," ethnic Albanian leader Arben Xhaferi told the Associated Press.

The West reacted positively. State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said the United States was encouraging "all of Macedonia's political leaders and its people to help build on this momentum for peace and to move forward with the next step." German Foreign Minister Joschka Fischer called it important for "the stabilization of Macedonia." NATO Secretary-General Lord Robertson said it brought Macedonia "back from the brink of war."

The Western alliance immediately began talks with the rebels for a site to restart the weapons collection, said NATO spokesman Maj. Barry Johnson.

NATO has already taken more than a third of the 3,300-piece arsenal to be surrendered by the National Liberation Army by late this month. NATO plans to collect another third — approximately 1,100 — in the next phase.

Macedonian Defense Minister Vlado Buckovski told AP that there is "evidence the process of disbanding the liberation army is under way."

The final cache of rebel weapons will not be taken until after Parliament backs the constitutional changes. The debate, sched-

Israeli missiles miss militia leader

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israeli helicopters fired missiles at a sport utility vehicle carrying Palestinian militants Thursday, killing two but inflicting only minor wounds on a defiant militia leader, who boasted afterward of his deadly attacks against Israelis.

Meanwhile, Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres announced Thursday night that he will meet next week with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat in a bid to end nearly a year of violence. A Palestinian official said no date had been set.

Peres and Arafat have met twice in recent months, but they failed to halt, or even slow, the fighting.

Hours after the helicopter raid and just a few miles from the scene, Palestinian gunmen shot and killed one Israeli soldier and seriously wounded a second, Israel's army said. The militant Palestinian group targeted in the helicopter strike claimed responsibility for the shooting.

Thursday's violence began when Israeli helicopters shot three missiles at Raed Karmi, 27, the militia leader who was in the front passenger seat of a four-wheel-drive Nissan as it traveled near the Nur Shams refugee camp, on the outskirts of Tulkarem in the West Bank.

The first missile just missed the vehicle, prompting Karmi and his driver to leap out. The second missile scored a direct hit, killing the two 20-year-old militants in the back. The smoking vehicle was reduced to charred and twisted metal.

"While I was running away, they shot the third missile at me, but it hit beside me, and fragments hit my eye," said Karmi, adding that he hid in a nearby car-parts store until the helicopters left.

"This will not scare me; they will push me to take revenge," Karmi told the Associated Press in a telephone interview. "I'll keep killing and keep resisting until the liberation of Palestine."

Karmi said Israeli forces lured him to the area by opening fire in the direction of the refugee camp, anticipating the Karmi and his gunmen would race to the scene.

"Usually I move by secret ways, but when I heard there was a kind of an invasion, I used my car ... and it was a trap," said Karmi.

Israel acknowledged it was after Karmi and accused him of participating in the shooting deaths of six Israelis in recent months. "Unfortunately, we did not achieve our main goal," said Gideon Meir, an Israeli Foreign Ministry official.

Hours later the two Israeli soldiers were shot inside Israel, near the border with the West Bank. The Al Aqsa Martyrs Brigades, the militia group Karmi leads in Tulkarem, claimed responsibility.

BOGOTA, Colombia — President Andres Pastrana, one of Washington's closest allies in the global war on drugs, called Thursday for a review of the struggle, saying it has produced few victories.

"The conclusions are not good," he said in a rare talk with foreign journalists ahead of next week's visit by Secretary of State Colin Powell. "The conclusions are that drugs are still the first- or second-biggest business of mankind."

In the wide-ranging discussion in the presidential palace, Pastrana said he still hopes for a negotiated end to Colombia's civil war. He also said the United States should re-establish intelligence-sharing with Colombia's air force about suspected drug flights, and he urged President Bush to help organize an international narcotics conference.

"Clearly, we must also make an evaluation — and not only of the policies of fumigation and interdiction," Pastrana said.

He described a global narcotics industry worth $500 billion and said drug lords are seeking out new markets in Europe and the former Soviet Union.

Drug use is on the rise in the United States, Pastrana said. However, the White House says the overall number of drug users has dropped, but heroin use is rising, and more Americans aged 18-25 are using drugs.

Washington suspended helping Colombia and Peru track down drug-smuggling flights — using U.S. radar and surveillance planes — after the accidental shootdown of a U.S. missionary plane over the Peruvian Amazon in April.

Pastrana said the suspension "has allowed a lot of drugs to pass over our territory because there is no control of our air space."

He urged a resumption, saying, "I think we can truly hit the heart of the business through interdiction and not simply through fumigation."

The fumigation of drug plants by U.S.-provided crop-dusters is the linchpin of Washington's $1.3 billion counternarcotics policy in Colombia. The spraying has been severely criticized, with allegations that it endangers health and the environment and that it hurts peasant farmers who grow coca to eke out a living.

Ferentz: They're a tough opponent

By Todd Brommelkamp

Miami head coach Terry Hooppner knows what advice he would give the Iowa Hawkeyes in preparing for his RedHawk squad this weekend. "I'd tell them they need to concentrate on the Iowa State game," he joked. "That's the most important game on their schedule, isn't it?" Hooppner knows the Hawkeyes won't be looking past Miami when the two teams take the field Saturday at Kinnick Stadium. In fact, few teams look forward to playing the team many call the "Giant Killers."

Michigan was nearly the latest victim in a long line of Miami upsets in recent memory, barely escaping with a 31-13 season-opening victory. That game, in Ann Arbor, featured Miami having two touchdowns called back on penalties, a missed extra point, and a failed field-goal attempt. Hooppner doesn't expect much of a drop off in competition this Saturday. "I've told our guys this is going from the frying pan straight into the fire," he said. Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz knows the RedHawks will prove to be a formidable opponent on the field and a much better barometer of where his team stands heading toward the Big Ten season. "They'll be a tough opponent in all three phases, and they won't be intimidated coming into Kinnick," he said. "They played well at Michigan, and we have a great respect for them."

In many ways, the RedHawks will provide a dry run of the Big Ten for Iowa because Miami runs similar offensive and defensive schemes to some of the Hawks' conference opponents. Northwestern coach Randy Walker spent nine years in Oxford as head coach with Hooppner at his side and left his protégé with several pearls of wisdom, especially when it comes to the spread offense.

The RedHawks feature a two-pronged attack at quarterback, and they run a no-huddle offense. Leading signal caller Ben Roethlisberger, a redshirt freshman, is very much a Big Ten-style passer, and backup quarterback Ryan Hawk enters when mobility becomes a plus. Hawk also doubles as a receiver in the Miami offense. Add a physical offensive line and a veteran running back in Steve Little, and the offensive is impressive. Hooppner believes that the key to winning for Miami Saturday will be keeping the ball on the ground, noting that several teams ran the ball well against the Hawkeyes last season. "Nebraska had a big game on them, so I think if we just do what Nebraska does, we'll be OK," Hooppner quipped. Defensively, Ferentz said, the RedHawks are very sound as well and resemble the Wildcats, having big, athletic linebackers who run well. The Red-

Keys to an Iowa victory

The Hawks need to establish a running game early and let their offensive line wear down a tough Miami of Ohio defense. The Hawks need to get the crowd in the game early and keep Miami of Ohio's offense in check from the start.

Keys to a Miami of Ohio victory

Conversely, the RedHawks need to work on taking the crowd out of the game early. A big turnover or special teams play early in the contest could really help their cause. With a freshman at the quarterback spot, they cannot afford a turnover.

Beutjer joins Fighting Illini

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Former Iowa quarterback Jon Beutjer has decided to continue his football and academic career at the University of Illinois. Ten days after Beutjer informed Hawkeye coach Kirk Ferentz that he was transferring, Fighting Illini coach Ron Turner announced the addition of Beutjer to his roster. Beutjer started classes on Thursday, and he will begin practicing with the Illinois football team next week. "I'm glad to have finally made my decision," Beutjer said in a statement on the Fighting Illini's Web site. "Coach Turner has a great reputation for developing quarterbacks, and his system is a perfect fit for me. Right now, I look forward to meeting my new teammates and learning the offense." On Aug. 29, Beutjer said his decision to leave Iowa was based on Ferentz's and offensive coordinator Ken O'Keefe's handling of a July 25 altercation between sophomore offensive lineman Sam Aiello and himself. Beutjer said he was assaulted and suffered a concussion. Following the Hawkeyes' season opener on Sept. 1, Aiello said Beutjer's account of that day was true but that was not the entire story. Aiello, teammates, and coaches wouldn't elaborate further. Under NCAA rules, Beutjer will be forced to sit out the 2001 season, but he will also have this year to learn Illinois' system as he prepares to fight with three others for the starting spot that will be vacant next season. "We're happy to have Jon," Turner said. "He is a great addition to the team, and we look for great competition from the quarterback position this

Replacements to work Week One

NEW YORK — For the first time in 14 years, replacements will be on the field for NFL games. Replacement officials. The NFL referees' union rejected the league's latest contract offer on Thursday, and replacement officials will work at least the opening weekend of the regular season. "We have tried very hard to get a deal with an unprecedented offer to double the compensation by 2003," league spokesman Greg Aiello said. "At this point, there is no solution other than continuing to use our alternate officiating crews." The NFL Referees' Association executive board unanimously rejected the offer presented Wednesday. Tom Condon, who represents the officials, informed Jeff Pash, the league's lead negotiator, of the vote in a letter. The league is proceeding on a week-by-week basis, but with no new talks scheduled, the 112 replacement officials and six league supervisors likely will work games beyond this weekend. ### IOWA WOMEN'S SOCCER

Hawkeyes' home opener on Sunday

By Jeremy Shapiro
 The Daily Iowan

After an excellent week of practice, the Iowa soccer team hopes that excellence will extend to game conditions in key nonconference contests this weekend. The Hawkeyes will travel to Missouri tonight before kicking off their home season Sept. 9 against Illinois State at 1 p.m. After a 1-1 start in Milwaukee last weekend, the players and coaches have been trying to maximize their strengths in effort to put together an undefeated weekend. "I was very pleased with the level of intensity and the mental attitude this week," said coach Wendy Logan. "We are starting to get a better rhythm of our style of play." The Hawkeyes will need that rhythm against Missouri. The 2-0 Tigers defeated Memphis and North Texas last week and are currently ranked ninth in the Central Region. Although the two neighbor states often clash in other sports, this is the first-ever soccer meeting between the two schools. Iowa does have the advantage of having scrimmaged against Notre Dame, a team with a similar style to Missouri, Logan said. On Sept. 9, soccer fans will get their first chance to check out this Iowa squad at the Hawkeye Recreation Fields. Admission is free. The players are pumped to finally get a chance to play on their own field in front of a supportive audience. Last year, the team had very few home games, so this year's better balance of road and home could lead to a few more victories. "The field is in excellent condition, so we are hoping for a nice day, and we are ready to play," Logan said about the match-up with the 1-0 Redbirds. Unfortunately, the team will be without captain and star midfielder Julie Atkocaitis, who suffered a severe ankle sprain in the season opener. She is expected to miss three weeks. "That hurts to lose a veteran and a captain's leadership," Logan said. "However, we have players who will step it up and fill in for her." # Course more to Woods' liking

By Doug Ferguson
 Associated Press

MONTREAL — Tiger Woods wasn't interested in revenge at Royal Montreal Golf Club, only a chance to win another Canadian Open. He took care of both matters Thursday with a 5-under-par 65 that gave him a share of the lead.

Returning to the course where four years ago he missed his only cut as a professional, Woods was rarely in trouble and capped off a nearly flawless round by hitting a 5-iron into 6 feet on the final hole.

He was joined at 65 by Jim McGovern, Matt Gogel, and rookie Michael Muehr, three guys who have not finished better than fifth on the PGA Tour this year. They tied the course record at Royal Montreal, set in 1997 by Robert Damron and Davis Love III.

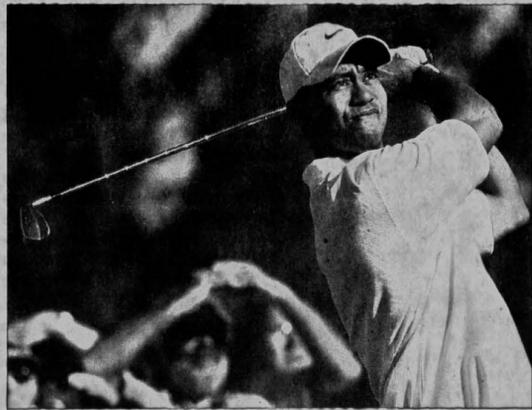

"It wasn't on my mind what happened in '97 because I knew if I started thinking that way, then I don't think I could put the attention I needed on each and every shot," Woods said. "And the way this golf course is playing, you need to be focused on what you're doing."

Another stroke back was John Daly, riding the confidence of winning the BMW International Open in Germany last week to end a six-year drought. Daly had a 375-yard drive on No. 13 to set up a two-putt birdie, but the biggest surprise was a bogey-free card.

"I only had three bogeys last week," Daly said. "When they told me that, I about fainted. I didn't realize I didn't have any bogeys today. Wow."

Also at 66 was Mark O'Meara, who had the best score among late starters who had to deal with increasing wind and firmer conditions. Only 43 of the 155 players in the field broke par, most of them in the morning.

Woods' streak of 75 tour events making the cut — the fourth longest in PGA Tour history — actually dates to Pebble Beach in 1998 when he withdrew by not returning in August for a tournament that began in February.

But the only time he missed the cut was at Royal Montreal in 1997, when the rough was thick, the fairways were narrow, the weather was frigid, and Woods was nothing like the player he is now.

So much has changed, and not just the setup of the course or the fact the sun produced a gorgeous day on Ile Bizard, the suburban island west of Montreal.

Woods, coming off his first victory of the summer two weeks ago at the NEC Invitational, played away from dangerously tucked punts and gave himself 11 birdie puts inside 20 feet. He converted three, and picked up an eagle with a 7-iron from 195 yards into 10 feet on No. 13.

"I'm pleased with the way I just kind of plodded my way along," he said.

He faced real trouble only once, a driver that sailed into right rough and trees on No. 11. A clump of grass kept him from playing a punch fade around the trees, so he hit a 3-iron through a 4-foot gap in the trees. He came up short of the green, flopped his pitch to 12 feet, and saved par.

"I enjoy the challenge of it," Woods said. "I don't enjoy being in there."

The other co-leaders love being near the top, because it hasn't happened much this year. McGovern, who has only conditional status, missed his last three cuts and will have to play well to avoid going back to Q-school. He finished 146th on the money list last year and can play only tournaments that have room for him.

Gogel, who lost a seven-stroke lead to Woods in the final round of the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am last year, has not played since missing the cut in the Buick Open. Part of that was planned because his wife gave birth to their first child, Kimball Ann.

Gogel had five straight birdies starting on No. 3 and was at 6 under until missing a 3-foot par putt on No. 17.

"Five under, when I've taken three weeks off, is a pretty good start," Gogel said.

Canadiens' Koivu prepares to fight abdominal cancer

MONTREAL (AP) — After getting over the shock of learning he had abdominal cancer, Montreal Canadiens captain Saku Koivu sought some inspiration.

"He asked us to bring him a copy of Lance Armstrong's book when we go back to visit him later today," defenseman Craig Rivet said Thursday after he and teammate Brian Savage visited Koivu.

With surgery ruled out as an option, the 26-year-old center will begin chemotherapy as soon as the type of cancer is determined, a process that could take up to two weeks.

Rivet and Savage said Koivu was in better spirits a day after he received the grim diagnosis.

"He seemed to be a lot more cheerful, but he's obviously scared," Savage said. "Just the unknown of what kind of cancer it is is pretty difficult for him right now."

SuperSonics sign first-round draft pick Radmanovic

SEATTLE — The Seattle SuperSonics signed first-round draft pick Vladimir Radmanovic on Thursday.

The Sonics took the 6-foot-10 forward with the 12th overall pick in June's NBA Draft.

Under the NBA's rookie salary scale, he will receive within 20 percent of $3.9 million over three seasons. The Sonics have an option for a fourth year at a 37.8 percent increase of his third-year salary.

The 20-year-old Radmanovic finished last season with Yugoslavia's FMP Zeleznik after playing 31/2 seasons for Crvena Zvezda of Belgrade.

Purdue to be low-key meet for women's cross country

By Ali Noller
The Daily Iowan

Iowa women's cross-country coach Joan Hansen says this Saturday's season-opener at Purdue is a dress rehearsal for serious competition.

"We have not been training for this meet, and I have no expectations other than for the women to experience the course as a team and build on their weaknesses," Hansen said. "This Saturday's meet at Purdue is a low-key meet for our team."

Hansen, who was hired over the summer and joined the coaching staff only two weeks ago, has depended on returning letter-winners to learn the ropes of the Iowa program.

"I feel like I landed on a treadmill going at full speed," she said of joining the staff midway into the training season.

Fortunately for Hansen, seven of the nine runners of the 2000 squad return for the Hawkeyes.

The Hawkeyes return juniors Sarah Arens, Michelle Lahann, Ericka Roberts, and Becca Thompson. Arens led the team in all races throughout the 2000 season and earned 27th at the Big Ten championships in 18:10 and 35th place at the NCAA Regional with a time of 21:58.

Lahann placed 51st at the Big Ten championships and was the second Hawkeye finisher in four of the six races of the 2000 season. Roberts finished 66th at the Big Ten championships and placed 62nd at the NCAA Regional.

Sophomores Atalie Barber and Georgia Millward also return for the Hawkeyes.

All of the runners have impressed Hansen in her two weeks at Iowa.

"The newcomers are up for the task, and all of the runners bring talent to the table," she said.

Hansen, an eighth-place finisher in the 3,000 meters at the 1984 Olympics, coached the men's and women's track-and-field and cross-country teams at Concordia University before coming to Iowa. While at Concordia, the seven-time cross country and track All-American helped build the women's team into a national champion.

Hansen's other goals for her Iowa team are for each individual to become performance-oriented. "We have no leaders or followers on this team. All of the women are 100 percent committed to developing the Olympian within themselves," she said.

The Hawkeyes will travel to Illinois on Sept. 22 and to Palo Alto, Calif., for the Stanford Invitational on Sept. 29.

Men's cross-country team's success depends on depth

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

Iowa men's cross-country coach Larry Wiczorek thinks he has found the recipe for success this season, and its main ingredient is depth.

Fifth-year seniors Trent Corey and Nick Nordheim will team up with last year's best runner, Shaun Allen, to headline a deep and talented Hawkeye lineup that includes an outstanding recruiting class.

Having a large stockpile of runners spurs plenty of excitement and optimism, but, Wiczorek said, the key will be finding a couple of silver bullets to score in the single digits, week in and week out.

"We still have a lot to prove," he said. "We're going to need two or three guys to be real low numbers. You need two or three guys to compete with the big teams."

Wiczorek will look to Corey, Nordheim, and Allen to step into that role this season. Corey and Nordheim both tote two NCAA all-region performances, and Allen was the team's fastest 8K runner last season.

One of the strongest recruiting classes in memory will supplement the solid core.

Dan Haut, a 2000 Illinois state champion, and 1999 Wisconsin state champion Matt Esche highlight a class of six freshmen with loads of credentials.

Add to them two top-notch redshirts, Dan Trainor and Chris Jensen, and the Hawkeyes have plenty of options to fill the lineup.

"It's probably the best recruiting class I've had," Wiczorek said.

Taking the freshmen under their wing will be Wiczorek's choices for team captains — Corey and Nordheim.

"Those guys are respected by their teammates, and they are leaders," he said. "They're doing it on and off the field."

Wiczorek wants Corey, Nordheim, and the rest of the experienced runners take on the brunt of the workload early on, to allow the freshmen to find their niche.

"We're hoping that the older guys can really carry the load in terms of competing and let the younger guys work in gradually," he said.

This weekend, the Hawkeyes will travel to the new Purdue University Cross-Country Course take part in the Purdue Invitational. Wiczorek thinks his team can put on a good show in West Lafayette, Ind.

"We should be good right from the start," he said. "We're a veteran accomplished team that should start out contending to win the meet from the get-go."

SPORTS BRIEF

McCarney, Farley have similar résumés

AMES (AP) — A couple of Iowa boys are getting their teams together this week to play a little football.

Iowa State's Dan McCarney and Northern Iowa's Mark Farley will meet as head coaches for the first time on Saturday night. The resumes they bring to Iowa State's Jack Trice Stadium are strikingly similar.

McCarney was born in Iowa City, played at Iowa, coached there, then spent five years on the Wisconsin staff before taking the Iowa State job.

Farley also is an Iowan. He's from Waukon, played at Northern Iowa, coached there, then left the state to work at Kansas before returning to his alma mater this spring.

"You've got two homestate head coaches that get to coach against each other. That's real unusual in any state in the country," McCarney said. "Their team is full of Iowa kids, our team is full of Iowa kids. I think it's great."

McCarney and Farley were on opposite sidelines each of the four years Farley was at Kansas working for Terry Allen, a former Northern Iowa head coach. Iowa State and Kansas split those games, each winning at home.

"I'm really proud of him," McCarney said. "I'm excited to coach against him.

I've always had great respect for him. He's a winner all the way. They're lucky to have him."

Farley became the first Northern Iowa coach to win his debut since Darrell Mudra in 1983 when the Panthers beat Wayne State, 34-14, in their opener. But he knows his team is taking a big step up this week.

Wayne State is a Division II program. Iowa State is coming off a 9-3 season that included a victory in the Insight.com Bowl.

"This is a great opportunity for our players," Farley said. "They deserve the right to go down and play those guys that were chosen to go play at Iowa State over our players."

Look for local men to lead golf team

By Jesse Steinfeldt
The Daily Iowan

The success of the Iowa men's golf team this season will depend largely on a group of hometown heroes.

Except for one player, the entire Hawkeye roster is composed of golfers from either Iowa or Iowa's PGA section. The sole exception, sophomore Chris Larson of Minnesota, has close ties to Iowa through his father and his golf pro.

"Other teams we go against recruit internationally and try to get foreign players," Hawkeye coach Terry Anderson said. "We can do that, too, but there are too many good kids here. Keep it home and take care of those at home — that's my philosophy. It's fun to do it that way."

This team of local talent will travel to Wisconsin this weekend to open the season at the Badger Invitational. It placed fourth last year but plans on improving.

"Everybody competing this weekend are experienced Hawkeyes," Anderson said. "We have an excellent team. Even though we are young and have only one senior, we have lots of experience in our players."

Senior Tyler Stith and juniors Bo Anderson and Mike Tapper bring valuable varsity experience to the tee. Bo Anderson finished best for the Hawkeyes at last season's Big Ten championships, placing third.

The three will be joined in Madison by junior Aaron Krueger and sophomore Erik Feldick, both of whom improved their games immensely over the summer. Five golfers compete with the best four scores counting for the team total.

The emergence of unproven Hawkeyes, combined with such talented newcomers as freshmen Brian deBuhr and Luke Miller, gives Terry Anderson an optimistic outlook on the upcoming season.

"Every tournament we go to, we have expectations of winning the team title and having an individual win the individual's medalist title," he said. "We have the individuals who can do it, but if we don't, we will try to finish as high as we can."

Seven of the 15 teams competing this weekend are from the Big Ten. The early exposure to conference foes will help the Hawkeyes evaluate their conference competition. Iowa has high hopes for when the title is on the line in May 2002.

"We would like to win [the Big Ten championship]," Terry Anderson said. "We host it this year."

Beyond high expectations for the Big Ten Tournament, defending their Big Four title in mid-October is an important priority for Terry Anderson's home-grown golfers.

"Even though it isn't a major tournament, it's very important to us," he said. "It's for state bragging rights."

ROAD BRIEFS

This weekend: The Iowa field hockey team will travel East for the second-consecutive weekend. The Hawkeyes open up against Ball State on Saturday at 7 p.m. On Sept. 9, Iowa will stay in Muncie, Ind., to play Pac-10 rival Stanford at 1 p.m.

On Iowa: The Hawkeyes hold a perfect 4-0 record after last weekend's three-game road series. Led by Big Ten Offensive Player of the Week Lindsay Miller, Iowa swept Maine, 2-0, Colgate, 5-0, and New Hampshire, 3-1.

On Ball State: Led by first-year coach Jen Halliday, the Cardinals started their 2001 season with a pair of victories last weekend, defeating Hofstra, 3-1, and Northwestern in overtime, 1-0.

On Stanford: In an 3-2 overtime victory, Ohio toppled the Cardinal (2-3) Wednesday to end a two-game Stanford winning streak.

Iowa's key: The Hawkeyes have eight to 10 legitimate scoring threats. Freshman Sarah Dawson has racked up the team's most goals with four, but seven different scorers have connected with the cage so far this season.

Coach's comments: "Ball State always gives us a good game, but both teams will be after us this weekend," Tracey Griesbaum said. "We'll also be facing some Hawks, which will make for some friendly competition."

Women's golf heads off to South Carolina

By Jesse Steinfeldt
The Daily Iowan

Sun. Beaches. Golf. It must be great to be a Hawkeye women's golfer.

Iowa leaves today to compete in the Baytree Classic in Myrtle Beach, S.C. With the exception of potential shark attacks, this trip South is a perfect way to begin the fall golf season.

Coach Diane Thomason is guardedly optimistic about her team's chances in this season opening tournament.

"We had very good qualifying and have had really good practices," she said. "I'm really excited, but you won't know until you see what everyone else has got. It's baptism by fire, basically."

This baptismal experience will involve the paradox of a young yet relatively experienced team of Iowa golfers hitting the links.

"We have more depth this year than we have had in the past, so that will really help us," Thomason said. "I still consider us a young team because we are relying a lot on freshmen and sophomores, and we have one junior traveling with us. It is a pretty solid group of kids with two new freshmen in the mix."

Junior Heather Suhr combines with sophomores Maggie Gabelman and Laura Holmes as the experienced upperclassmen vying to be the core performers on Thomason's crew.

"I am working to be a team leader," Suhr said. "I want my team to learn from me to stay focused on and off the golf course."

The Hawks hope Suhr's influence will be strongest on incoming freshmen Liz Bennett and Shannon Fleming. Both have made an impression on Thomason. Tournament rules allow five golfers to compete; the best four scores will count toward the team total.

"It is a good place to open," Thomason said. "We've played well there in the past, and there's a different mix of teams. No Big Ten teams, so it is nice to see different competition."

She hopes that this weekend's play will propel the Hawkeyes into a successful Big Ten campaign despite the fact that the conference competition will prove to be quite formidable.

"The Big Ten is strong again," Thomason said. "We finished 10th last year, and I thought there was a good chance we'd finish 11th. So I was elated; I thought we won the championship. We've got a lot of work to do to just bump ourselves to the top five [this season]."

Beyond the core performers who have emerged early in the season, junior Leslie Gumm and sophomores Jennifer Reints and Marni Lundbohm also bring experience from last year. Freshmen Megan George and Lauren Cole also hope for the chance to tee up at some point.

Regardless of who is on the tee, the youthful Hawkeyes have the potential to step up and challenge some Big Ten teams this season.

"Our team has a great work ethic," Suhr said. "We hope this will help us get a top five [Big Ten] ranking this season."

Even on the third week of the season, there are still a few more firsts to go around. There's Notre Dame's first visit to Nebraska in 53 years. Jim Tressel's debut as Ohio State's coach, and Miami's first game as the No. 1 team in nearly a decade.
In addition to the 17 ranked Fighting Irish visiting the fifth-ranked Cornhuskers on Saturday night, there are three other games matching Top 25 teams: No. 11 Michigan at No. 15 Washington, No. 10 Fresno State at No. 23 Wisconsin and No. 21 South Carolina at No. 25 Georgia.
"Everybody's excited; everybody's ready to play," Husker tight end Tracey Wistrup said. "You'd be crazy if you weren't." Last season, Notre Dame nearly upset then-No. 1 Nebraska before losing, 27-19, in overtime on Eric Crouch's yard touchdown run.
"Last year there was a lot of anticipation building up to this game," Crouch said. "It seems to be the same way this year." The Huskers are 2-0; the Irish are playing their first game since the season. Crouch, a Heisman Trophy contender, is off to a slow start with 260 yards passing and 117 yards and two touchdowns rushing. Matt LovVecchio opened at quarterback for Notre Dame.
When the Buckeyes face off against Akron — their first game since 1987 without Joe Cooper as coach — the former marching band will play "Fare to a New Era."
Some players aren't so sure about the season will unfold under Tressel, who coached Youngstown State to four I-AA titles in 15 years. In Cooper's last two seasons, Ohio State lost 10 of 24 games.
"Right now, I feel the team is real tight," linebacker Cooper said. "The coach and staff is doing some things different. We'll see what happens once we start getting into the battles."
Akron won its opener, 31-14, against Ohio, on Zac Derr's 37-yard field goal as time expired.

Lots of firsts in store for this Saturday's games

Even on the third weekend of the season, there are still a few more firsts to go around.

There's Notre Dame's first visit to Nebraska in 53 years, Jim Tressel's debut as Ohio State's coach, and Miami's first game as the No. 1 team in nine years.

In addition to the 17th-ranked Fighting Irish visiting the fifth-ranked Cornhuskers on Saturday night, there are three other games matching Top 25 teams: No. 11 Michigan at No. 15 Washington, No. 19 Fresno State at No. 23 Wisconsin and No. 21 South Carolina at No. 25 Georgia.

"Everybody's excited; everybody's ready to play," Huskers tight end Tracey Wistrom. "You'd be crazy if you weren't."

Last season, Notre Dame nearly upset then-No. 1 Nebraska before losing, 27-24, in overtime on Eric Crouch's 7-yard touchdown run.

"Last year there was a lot of anticipation building up to the game," Crouch said. "It seems to be the same way this year."

The Huskers are 2-0; the Irish are playing their first game of the season. Crouch, a Heisman Trophy contender, is off to a slow start with 260 yards passing and 117 yards and two TDs rushing. Matt LoVecchio opens at quarterback for Notre Dame.

When the Buckeyes open against Akron — their first game since 1987 without John Cooper as coach — the famed marching band will play "Fanfare to a New Era."

Some players aren't so sure how the season will unfold under Tressel, who led Youngstown State to four I-AA titles in 15 years. In Cooper's last two seasons, Ohio State lost 10 of 24 games.

"Right now, I feel the team is real tight," linebacker Joe Cooper said. "The coaching staff is doing some things different. We'll see what happens once we start getting into these battles."

Akron won its opener, 31-29, against Ohio, on Zac Derr's 38-yard field goal as time expired.

Miami should have an easy time against Rutgers, coached by former Hurricanes defensive coordinator Greg Schiano.

"Nobody knows better than I do how good Miami is," Schiano said. "But we'll go down there and play the best we can."

The Hurricanes are favored by 44 points. Although the talent pool favors Miami, the coaches do have something in common — both Schiano and Miami's Larry Coker won in their coaching debuts. Miami beat Penn State, 33-7; Rutgers defeated Buffalo, 31-15.

In other Top 25 games Saturday, it's Louisiana-Monroe at No. 2 Florida, North Texas at No. 3 Oklahoma, North Carolina at No. 4 Texas, UAB at No. 6 Florida State, Utah at No. 7 Oregon, No. 8 Tennessee at Arkansas, Western Michigan at No. 9 Virginia Tech, and No. 10 Georgia Tech at Navy.

Also, it's No. 12 Kansas State at USC, Utah State at No. 13 LSU, No. 14 UCLA at Kansas, Wofford at No. 20 Clemson, and No. 22 Oregon State at New Mexico State.

Today, No. 16 Northwestern visits UNLV.

In Seattle, Washington unleashes quarterback Cody Pickett, who opted for football over following his father as a roper on the rodeo circuit. The 6-4, 205-pound Pickett spent the last two seasons behind Marques Tuiasosopo.

"This is why we all come to Washington, for big-time games," said Pickett, who took three snaps in the Huskies' Rose Bowl win over Purdue. "It can't get bigger than this."

Michigan, which opened with a 31-13 win over Miami (Ohio), will have its hands full at noisy Husky Stadium. The Wolverines last hooked up with Washington in the '93 Rose Bowl, winning, 38-31.

"There are some stadiums in our conference that are very loud, but the loudest stadium I've ever been in is in Washington," Michigan coach Lloyd Carr said. "The only way to really control a crowd is to get ahead, and that's easier said than done."

Hawks also offer plenty of pressure up front.

"You can tell their staff worked with Northwestern over the summer," Ferentz said.

If Miami has any question marks heading into Saturday, it would be the kicking game, an area in which it was expected to be solid. While Iowa's Nate Kaeding has proven to be consistent, the RedHawks' Andy Brumbergs struggled against the Wolverines. Hoepfner still has a great deal of confidence in the anchor of his special teams, but he doesn't understand the breakdown his kicker suffered.

"I wish people could have seen him kick on Sunday and Monday, into the breeze, 51 yards, same spot," he said. "We just need to be able to get him from the driving range to the golf course."

Both teams feel cutting down on penalties could lead to increased success this weekend. The RedHawks were flagged six times for 55 yards against Michigan, and the Hawkeyes drew seven yellow flags for 70 yards. Ferentz said cutting down on infractions will boil down to clearing up the lines of communication on the field.

The RedHawks have not started a season 0-2 since 1994, and Hoepfner said his team wants to make sure 2001 isn't the year that changes.

"There's a determination there with our guys," he said. "They didn't get what they wanted last Saturday."

spring.

Casse Arner, the Illinois associate sports information director, said Beutjer will not suit up until next week. Beutjer arrived in Champaign Wednesday night to take care of getting enrolled in classes.

He will hold a press conference for local media in Champaign on Sept. 11.

"At this time, he just wants to get enrolled and get classes going," Arner said.

Beutjer, who completed 77 of 125 passes for 841 yards and six touchdowns in his first and last season with the Hawkeyes, was also recruited by the Fighting Illini coming out of Wheaton South High School, where he led his team to the Illinois Class 6A state title.

Beutjer's mother, Nancy Beutjer, said she spoke with her son on Thursday afternoon and after speaking with him, said she wasn't going to comment on his decision.

League offers 60 percent raise, refs reject

OFFICIALS

Week 2 early next week, but it seems likely the new crews will be out there for Week 2," Aiello said. "The union already has our best offer."

On Sept. 3, Pash sent a letter to Condon when the league formally rejected the union's counterproposal.

"The commissioner and club owners cannot consider the officials' compensation in a vacuum," Pash wrote. "They have the responsibility to evaluate the fairness and reasonableness of your proposals in relation to the compensation and benefits — and the expectations — of the approximately 4,500 non-player employees of the league and the 32 clubs."

The league upped its offer to the locked-out officials on Wednesday from a 40 percent raise in the first year to a 60 percent raise, and gave them 24 hours to respond. Aside from the 60 percent increase, the rest of the package remained the same, with officials' salaries doubled by 2003.

Condon conducted a conference call with board members Ed Hochuli, Bill Carollo, Jeff Bergman, and Ben Montgomery, and they rejected the offer.

During the first on-field labor dispute in the 12-year tenure of commissioner Paul Tagliabue, the NFL has guaranteed four games at $2,000 per week to the replacements, including last week's exhibi-

N.C. State pounds Indiana

By David Droschak
Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — Coming off a season of nail-biters, North Carolina State got a breather Thursday night in its 2001 opener.

Philip Rivers threw for 243 yards and three touchdowns, and the Wolfpack blocked two punts in a 35-14 victory over Indiana, whose offense bogged down without Antwaan Randle El at quarterback.

N.C. State needed to rally in six of its eight wins a season ago, including in the final minute of a 41-38 victory at Indiana. But the Wolfpack would need no miracle finish Thursday night, bolting to a 21-0 halftime lead against the Hoosiers (0-1).

Rivers didn't appear to miss favorite target Koren Robinson, who was the ninth overall pick in the NFL draft, or offensive coordinator Norm Chow, who departed for Southern California.

Rivers picked up right where he left off after throwing for more than 3,000 yards as a freshman, going 22-of-33 and driving the Wolfpack 76 and 75 yards for scores. Two of his TD passes were to tight end Willie Wright.

Indiana's offensive experiment to move Randle El from quarterback to wide receiver was a disaster for coach Cam Cameron.

A player who had passed for 5,805 yards, rushed for 2,931 more and scored 69 TDs in his three previous seasons at quarterback was rendered virtually useless as new quarterback Tommy Jones couldn't get Randle El the ball.

Randle El did get under center for a handful of plays in the first half, but the Wolfpack defense hemmed him in on the option.

Rivers, who threw 25 TDs as the Atlantic Coast Conference rookie of the year, put his team up late in the first quarter when he sidestepped the rush and found Wright in the left corner of the end zone from 19 yards out.

N.C. State's special teams then turned the game around.

Brian Jamison, who was questionable coming in with a foot sprain, blocked the first of two punts as kicker Ryan Hamre was pinned deep in his end zone. The ball bounced high in the air and right into the arms of Troy Graham as the Wolfpack went up 12-0 less than a minute into the second period.

Brian Williams blocked

Hamre's next punt at the Indiana 42, leading to a 27-yard field goal by Austin Herbert. Late in the quarter, Rivers completed passes of 16 and 28 yards before Ray Robinson bolted over from the 5 for a 28-point halftime lead.

Macia

CHICAGO (AP) — Macias hit a leadoff home run and drove in another run a double, and Jeff Weaver allowed four hits over six innings for his first win weeks as the Detroit Tigers beat the Chicago White Sox, 6-2, Thursday.

Wendell Magee and Chris Wakeland also drove runs for the Tigers, who scored only five runs in last five games, batting .25-for-152 in that span.

The Tigers had dropped three of their last 14 games against the White Sox, and avenged their first four-game sweep in Chicago in five years.

Detroit also broke a game losing streak over the White Sox, who had won 16. Weaver then retired straight after the homers.

In matching his career in wins, Weaver (11) allowed two runs and walk. He struck out Weaver hadn't won in starts, dropping his last decisions.

Paul Konerko and Jeff I hit consecutive homers for White Sox, who had won 16. Weaver then retired straight after the homers.

Giants 9, Arizona 5

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds hit his 60th home run, becoming the fifth player to reach the milestone and the San Francisco Giants closed the gap in the NL West 9-5 victory over the Arizona Diamondbacks on Thursday.

Bonds homered off Albie (3-5) in the second inning, while sellout Pacific Bell Park crowd watching as the solo shot cleared right-field wall.

Arizona's lead in the NL was squeezed to 1 1/2 games as Giants took two of three games in the final series of the season between the teams.

But the attention was on Bonds who joined Babe Ruth (60 in 1919), Roger Maris (61 in 1961), McGwire (70 in 1998; 65 in 1999) and Sammy Sosa (66 in 1998; 1999) in the 60-homer club.

Kafelnikov

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In Russia they call it "Super Subbotnik." Yevgeny Kafelnikov advanced to Super Saturday at the Open, joining countryman Marat Safin to give Russia a Grand Slam semifinalist for the first time.

"Would be even better both are in the final," Kafelnikov said Thursday after defeating top-seeded Guenther, 6-4, 6-0, 6-3.

The No. 7-seeded Kafelnikov will next play the winner Thursday night's match between American Andy Roddick and Australian Lleyton Hewitt.

Defending champion Safin seeded third, advanced Wednesday and will play Pete Sampras in the other semifinal.

The matches will be broadcast back in Moscow, Kafelnikov said. "It's unfortunately pay per view," he said. "You got to watch it ... I'm sure it's worth it."

Kafelnikov, who also reached the semifinals two years ago, struggled to five-set wins in first two rounds but seems finding his form on his favorite surface. He gradually worked down Kuerten, and from the first set Kafelnikov won consecutive games.

"From the first point start smoking backhands, hands, like he always does," Kafelnikov said. "But credit, I was able to keep it in."

Macias and Weaver lead Tigers

CHICAGO (AP) — Jose Macias hit a leadoff homer and drove in another run with a double, and Jeff Weaver allowed four hits over seven innings for his first win in 5½ weeks as the Detroit Tigers beat the Chicago White Sox, 6-2, Thursday.

Wendell Magee and rookie Chris Wakeland also drove in runs for the Tigers, who had scored only five runs in their last five games, batting .165 (25-for-152) in that span.

The Tigers had dropped 13 of their last 14 games against the White Sox, and avoided their first four-game sweep by Chicago in five years.

Detroit also broke a five-game losing streak overall, and reached double figures in hits — with 12 — for the first time in nine games.

Paul Konerko and Jeff Liefer hit consecutive homers for the White Sox, who had won 12 of 16. Weaver then retired 12 straight after the homers.

In matching his career high in wins, Weaver (11-14) allowed two runs and one walk. He struck out five. Weaver hadn't won in seven starts, dropping his last five decisions.

Giants 9, Arizona 5

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds hit his 60th home run, becoming just the fifth player to reach the milestone, and the San Francisco Giants narrowed the gap in the NL West with a 9-5 victory over the Arizona Diamondbacks on Thursday.

Bonds homered off Albie Lopez (3-5) in the second inning, with the sellout Pacific Bell Park crowd roaring as the solo shot cleared the right-field wall.

Arizona's lead in the NL West was squeezed to 1½ games as the Giants took two of three games in the final series of the season between the teams.

But the attention was on Bonds, who joined Babe Ruth (60 in 1927), Roger Maris (61 in 1961), Mark McGwire (70 in 1998; 65 in 1999), and Sammy Sosa (66 in 1998; 63 in 1999) in the 60-homer club.

Charles Bennett/Associated Press

Detroit Tigers' pitcher Jeff Weaver throws in the first inning against the Chicago White Sox at Comiskey Park in Chicago Thursday.

Reds 8, Pirates 6

PITTSBURGH — Ken Griffey Jr. hit a tiebreaking, two-run double in the seventh-inning and the Cincinnati Reds overcame a five-run deficit to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 8-6, Thursday night.

Cincinnati kept the Pirates from winning their fourth-consecutive game, which would have matched their season-best streak.

Rich Loiselle (0-1), making his first major league appearance since July 21, gave up an infield single to Todd Walker to open the seventh.

Adam Dunn walked and Griffey scored both runners with a double down the left-field line. Pokey Reese added a sacrifice fly.

Jim Brower (7-9) earned the win with three innings of one-hit relief. Danny Graves pitched the ninth for his 25th save.

Phillies 3, Expos 0

MONTREAL — Robert Person and a pair of relievers combined on a four-hitter as the Philadelphia Phillies stopped their four-game losing streak, beating the Montreal Expos, 3-0, Thursday night.

Bobby Abreu hit a two-run homer as the Phillies pulled within 2½ games of idle Atlanta in the NL East. Person (14-7) gave up three hits in 7½ innings to win his fifth-straight decision. He struck out five and walked three.

Ricky Bottalico relieved Person after a one-out walk to Brad Wilkerson in the eighth.

Indians 6, Red Sox 4

BOSTON — Chuck Finley gave up four hits in 6½ innings, and Juan Gonzalez drove in three runs Thursday night in the Cleveland Indians' 6-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Finley's re-emergence came at a critical time for the Indians, who began the day six games ahead of the Minnesota Twins in the AL Central.

The Red Sox, who have lost 10 of 11, dropped 10 games behind the New York Yankees in the AL East and 10 behind the Oakland Athletics in the wild-card race.

Hampered by injuries all season, Finley (6-6) was coming off a two-inning outing Aug. 25 against Seattle in which he strained his right oblique muscle.

Finley had off-season arthroscopic knee surgery Jan. 9. He was put on the 15-day disabled list for the second time this season on June 29 with spasms in his neck and left shoulder.

Finley faced the minimum number of batters through five innings. He was lifted after giving up an RBI double to Izzy Alcantara in the seventh.

Mets 5, Marlins 2

MIAMI — Kevin Appier scattered nine hits and had an RBI single Thursday night as the surging New York Mets beat the Florida Marlins 5-2 for their fourth straight victory.

Appier (8-10) allowed two runs in 6½ innings to pull the Mets within seven games of the NL East-leading Atlanta Braves. He struck out four and walked one.

Armando Benitez got four outs for his 37th save in 39 opportunities as New York won for the 15th time in 19 games.

Jay Payton's RBI double in the sixth inning put the Mets ahead, 3-2. Timo Perez hit his third home run of the season off Antonio Alfonseca in the ninth, and Mike Piazza, who was 3-for-5, added an RBI single to make it 5-2.

Brad Penny (7-9), who last won June 26 at Montreal, has lost eight straight decisions. He allowed three runs — one earned — and six hits in seven innings.

Florida took a 2-0 lead in the fourth on Derrek Lee's 20th home run, a two-run shot to left. Kevin Millar had doubled with two outs.

Kafelnikov advances to Open semis

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In Russia they call it "Super Subbota." Yevgeny Kafelnikov advanced to Super Saturday at the U.S. Open, joining countryman Marat Safin to give Russia two Grand Slam semifinalists for the first time.

"Would be even better if we both are in the final," Kafelnikov said Thursday after eliminating top-seeded Gustavo Kuerten, 6-4, 6-0, 6-3.

The No. 7-seeded Kafelnikov will next play the winner of Thursday night's match between American Andy Roddick and Australian Lleyton Hewitt.

Defending champion Safin, seeded third, advanced Wednesday and will play Pete Sampras in the other semifinal.

The matches will be on TV back in Moscow, Kafelnikov said. "It's unfortunately pay channel," he said. "You got to pay to watch it... I'm sure it's worth it."

Kafelnikov, who also reached the semifinals two years ago, struggled to five-set wins in the first two rounds but seems to be finding his form on his favorite surface. He gradually broke down Kuerten, and from 4-4 in the first set Kafelnikov won 11 consecutive games.

"From the first point on he start smoking backhands, forehands, like he always does," Kafelnikov said. "But to my credit, I was able to keep up with him on the baseline. Once I did that, I started to believe in myself a lot more."

On set point in the opening set, Kafelnikov dropped a backhand just inside the corner, then happily sprinted to his chair. In the second set the normally dour Russian strayed from his normal tactics to play serve-and-volley, knocked off a winner at the net and walked back to the baseline beaming.

The victory was especially sweet for Kafelnikov because he has lost three times in the French Open quarterfinals to Kuerten, who went on to win the tournament each time, including this year.

"For every question he made to me, I had an answer," Kafelnikov said. "That's something that I'm proud of."

Kuerten again came up short in his bid to win a major title on a surface other than clay. He looked increasingly listless as the match progressed and received treatment from a trainer, but said his problem was simply lethargy.

"I didn't have any energy to step up and play my best," the Brazilian said. "I didn't find myself comfortable running and playing one or two points well back-to-back..."

"I feel disappointed and frustrated," he added before cracking a smile. "But also maybe tonight I can have a good dinner, drink one beer, go out. If I win, I didn't have this chance."

Elise Amendola/Associated Press

Gustavo Kuerten of Brazil returns to Yevgeny Kafelnikov of Russia at the U.S. Open tennis tournament in New York Thursday. Kafelnikov defeated Kuerten, 6-4, 6-0, 6-3.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Titans claim Hicks off waivers, cut Alexander

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Titans, still worried about who will back up All-Pro running back Eddie George, claimed Skip Hicks off waivers Thursday and released rookie Dan Alexander.

Hicks was released by the Chicago Bears, and the Titans had to wait to see if he would clear waivers so they could claim him. Coach Jeff Fisher broke the news to Alexander, their sixth-round pick out of Nebraska, during practice.

"We were trying to find an experienced backup guy, and I think he brings us more of that," general manager Floyd Reese said.

Besides George, the Titans currently have Mike Green, who set a season rushing record in NFL Europe earlier this year. He is going into his second season but has played in only one game with the Titans.

Hicks was released by the Bears on Wednesday, and he had signed this year as a free agent after three seasons in Washington. A third-round draft pick in 1998, he has rushed for 768 yards and 12 TDs, and caught 17 passes for 138 yards in his career.

"He's been in the league long enough to understand," Reese said.

"I think he's in the position where he wants to push and make a mark for himself."

Reese said the Titans will try to sign Alexander to their practice squad if he clears waivers.

Three running backs split time at Purdue

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Joey Harris had already impressed his Purdue coaches and teammates with his speed and play-making ability in practice.

He couldn't wait to show what he could do in a game.

"I wanted to get the ball and run with it," he said.

Instead, he fumbled on the opening kickoff of Sunday's game against Cincinnati.

"That fumble I had was more because of nerves," Harris said. "I'm not going to say after my first college football game I'm not going to be nervous or have it all down. But now I have a feel for what kind of tempo and what kind of speed it's going to be."

The Boiler-makers also have better feel of what kind of player they have in Harris, a sophomore. He bounced back from the fumble — which Purdue recovered — to rush for 79 yards and a touchdown on seven carries, catch a pass and return two punts for a 21-yard average.

Agassi defeated in memorable match

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

NEW YORK — If the late Jimmy Van Alen hadn't invented the tiebreaker in the 1960s, Pete Sampras and Andre Agassi might still be playing.

Without the revolutionary scoring system, the longtime rivals would have been tied 24-all in the opening set 3 1/2 hours into their U.S. Open showdown early Thursday morning.

Instead, by taking three of four tiebreakers, Sampras won the quarterfinal epic, 6-7 (7), 7-6 (2), 7-6 (2), 7-6 (5).

The match between the aged was a match for the ages, with all the necessary ingredients to make it memorable: a sellout crowd, the New York stage in prime time and the sport's most beloved elder statesmen rising to the occasion through four sets that couldn't have been closer. Neither player broke serve, meaning the set score was tied 24 times.

A spellbound crowd of 23,033 filled Arthur Ashe Stadium, and USA Network's telecast drew the largest audience in cable history for a tennis event — 3.4 million homes. Agassi, 31, and Sampras, 30, agreed their 32nd meeting ranked among the most memorable.

"It all kind of lived up to the hype," Sampras said. "When we clash and we're both playing well, I think it's some of the best tennis in the game."

Agassi, a notoriously poor loser, this time was exceedingly gracious — perhaps a reflection of his respect for Sampras.

"It was quite a powerful evening in many respects," Agassi said. "You're talking about a few points that separate a match like that, possibly one point."

By that slim margin, the 10th-seeded Sampras advanced for the eighth time to the Open semifinals for a rematch against No. 3 Marat Safin. When they met in last year's final, Safin won in a rout that sent Sampras spiraling into a slump from which he's just now emerging.

"I was pretty humbled out there the last time I played him," Sampras said. "I just hope he comes down to earth."

With victories over Pat Rafter and Agassi already behind him, Sampras will try to become the first man to beat three former champions in one Open. That would be quite an achievement for a player who just last week was supposedly on the verge of retirement.

Such speculation fueled his resurgence.

"The press is on me about whatever, and it's fine," Sampras said. "It has been a disappointing year. To be honest about it, it's well deserved in a way. But what I don't appreciate is the retirement talk. I don't know how it all started and why it started."

Sampras has said he plans to play another five years at least, and based on his performance Wednesday night — and Thursday morning — he may be up to the task.

His serve, the best of his generation, was never more dominant. He smacked 25 aces, faced only three break points, and saved them all. In one game, he double-faulted three times, lost another point on an unlucky net-cord bounce, and still held. Sampras extended his streak of holding serve to 71 games, dating back to the second round.

"I certainly didn't underestimate him," Agassi said. "The guy still has a huge serve and still knows when to put pressure on you and how to play."

FOR REALLY?

Does a 51-point win over Kent State make the Hawks better than everyone thought?

FROM THE EDITOR

Hawks will answer questions this weekend

Jeremy Schnitker

The two most spoken phrases in Iowa City after the Sept. 1 basting of Kent State were, "I can't believe we scored 51 frickin' points — we're going to be great this year!" And, "But Kent State really sucked, dude."

Both points have their own validity. This Saturday, however, I think we'll have a much clearer picture of just how good this Hawkeye team is.

I'm sure I wasn't the only one sitting around in awe over what the Hawks did. I figured they would win the game, but certainly not in the fashion in which they did. Sophomore running backs scoring three touchdowns in a row, big plays by guys I'd only read about in media guides — a combined 331 yards of rushing. That's domination that Iowa fans aren't used to seeing.

I've always thought this Iowa team was going to be better than expected, but I never expected them to shut anybody out, 51-0.

Hey, the Hawks had one of the biggest wins in college football on Sept. 1. Iowa beat Kent State by more than Nebraska beat Troy State, and Troy State was playing its first Div. I-A game in school history.

The Hawks beat Kent State by more than Purdue did last year. By that rationale, we're going to the Rose Bowl! Well, they'd have to be undefeated to get to the Rose Bowl — maybe just a Big Ten title will do.

There I go again, getting ahead of myself. That's the Hawkeye in me.

That's what happens when we get big wins around these parts.

I've been mulling over what a 51-point win over one of the 15 worst football teams in I-A really means, and I've come to the conclusion that it certainly isn't a bad thing. The fact that Iowa only opened up one-third of its playbook against the Golden Flashes, didn't throw the ball in the second half, and was down to its fourth-string running back by the third quarter was only more encouraging.

Iowa has a lot more to show and they will have to show a lot more against Miami of Ohio. is a tough team that really isn't intimidated of anybody. It went up to Ann Arbor and hung with the Wolverines in front of 109,000 fans. Kinnick Stadium and that Hawkeyes are like Saturday morning cartoons compared with opening your season in the Big House.

Miami coach Terry Hoepfner is feeding the Hawkeyes all they want to hear about how much he can't sleep at night because of how good Iowa is. But he's lying. The RedHawks aren't scared of anybody, especially a team that won three games last year.

I've come to learn that big victories aren't necessarily the best litmus test for how great a football team is. I've watched many of Hayden Fry's team beat up on Indiana and Northwestern and finish the season without a bowl bid. Kent State was just as bad as any of those teams, maybe even worse.

But this Iowa team is good. On Sept. 1, it showed that. Now, we just need to find out if it's for real. Whether Iowa is really the bowl-caliber team they say they are, we'll have a much more clear picture after the Miami of Ohio game.

A shutout victory over a team that could hang with UM in the Big House could mean that we've really got something special going on here in Iowa City.

Are these Hawks for real?

Iowa senior Derrick Pickens sacks Kent State quarterback Ben McDaniels during the Sept. 1 game in Kinnick Stadium.

With a huge win over Kent State, Iowa players think the Hawkeyes have arrived

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

No Vegas-style buffet line will satisfy the hunger pangs of the Iowa football team — only wins and post season play can get that job done.

So the Hawkeyes 51-point rout over Kent State to open the 2001 season on Sept. 1 definitely whet the appetites of the victory-starved black and gold.

But does this win indicate anything?

Is Iowa deserving of this hype?
Is this Hawkeye team for real?

It's an honest question, and one met with smiles and little hesitation from most of the players. The resounding feeling is "absolutely," "certainly," "of course."

"We're for real. We're legit. No question about it," junior Siaka Massaquoi said. "You can say we didn't have a tough opponent, but the fact of the matter is, we believe in ourselves."

Yeah, the Golden Flashes weren't tough, but the ease with which Iowa breezed about the field on offense and its aggressive defensive display has to be considered promising, especially in a season opener.

The Hawkeyes' 51-point margin of victory was the largest in Division I last week, matched only by Tulsa.

Some say the swagger is back, and Iowa has realistic hopes of finishing with a winning record, which is unfamiliar turf for the program under Kirk Ferentz. He has made it clear that his goal is to bring the Hawkeyes back to where they were during his previous stint as offensive line coach from 1981-89, when they made eight-straight bowl appearances.

But if people aren't quick to buy into what Iowa's selling, perhaps a brief step back in time (read: the past three seasons) might help push the sale.

Iowa is 7-27 in the span covering Ferentz's first two seasons and Hayden Fry's last, but the Hawkeyes started turning a corner toward the end of 2000, as evidenced by hard-fought November wins over Penn State and Northwestern.

"The difference is the understanding that last season we were either in games or could have won even earlier in the season, and we didn't," Massaquoi said. "It's believing that we can't wait around for the other team to die off. We have to make it happen."

Witness the Sept. 1 blanking of Kent State. What was equally impressive about the 51 points scored was the defense's ability to make big plays and shut down the Golden Flashes. No matter who the opponent is, a shutout is tough to notch. It requires focus and discipline from an entire unit on every snap, and the Hawkeyes got that last Sept. 1.

Golden Flashes coach Dean Pees was asked to compare the 2001 Iowa team with other high-profile competition — Pittsburgh and Purdue — that his squad faced last season.

Pittsburgh went 7-5 last year and ended up in the Insight.com Bowl. Purdue finished 8-4 and represented the Big Ten at the Rose Bowl.

"I thought Iowa was better than Pittsburgh when we played there early last year" he said. "Defense-wise, Iowa's was as good as Purdue's a

McCann: Time will tell if Iowa is for real

That isn't shabby company to share, especially at this early point.

But to say Iowa is for real already may be premature, right?

A strong argument can be made that, in addition to adapting and learning their roles, some of the senior talent has grown up. Ten of the 22 starters, not including the kicker or punter, are four-year players that have endured a three-year losing drought, which has left an arid taste in their mouths.

"We've talked amongst ourselves, about how we have what it takes to win," senior fullback Jeremy Allen said. "It's time."

And the designated leader of this group is level-headed quarterback Kyle McCann, who happened to be the only player that wouldn't definitively say Iowa was for real, yet.

"Time will tell," he said. "I'm not willing to say we're going to do this and that and make bold predictions, but I think we have some real good things happening. We'll see."

In addition to the senior class, those "good things" McCann speaks of may be the 14 starters, including kicker Nate Kaeding and punter David Bradley, and the majority of the two-deep roster who are young but quickly becoming battle-tested. And gradually becoming good.

Sophomores such as Kaeding, Benny Sapp, and Bob Sanders have earned their playing time and accolades, while emerging players like juniors Aaron Greving, Dallas Clark, and Brad Banks appear to be valuable commodities.

These younger, exuberant guys believe the Hawkeyes are definitely for real, but they are also the ones that haven't endured all of Iowa's pummelings. Defensive lineman Jerry Montgomery has. He has played for three full seasons and watched his team lose — a lot. Still, he sees something special.

"We're really excited about things," he said with a smile.

The Hawkeyes will admit their on-field record, past or present, doesn't indicate legitimate hype, but their confidence in each other and belief that they can eat at the big boys' table every Saturday is very real.

"You can tell we're really hungry," Greving said. "It's been a long time coming."

Junior Clark finding a new home as tight end

By Melinda Mawdsley

The Daily Iowan

Dallas Clark remembers where he came from, and Hawkeye coaches are having a heck of a time getting him to move on.

At Iowa, special teams are where young players accumulate minutes and build experience as they patiently await their turn to shine on either offense or defense.

In other words, it's not the cool unit to land on. But Clark just won't let go, even at the urging of his coaches.

"I want to be a big part of it because I think it's an important part of the game," Clark said of special teams. "I just want to help them out as much as possible because I was fortunate to get a good chance at it last year."

Yeah, but last season Clark wasn't the starting tight end. Actually, he wasn't a tight end at all. He was a walk-on linebacker from Livermore, Iowa, trying to get recognized in Division I football.

Clark's performance on special teams last year eventually landed him playing time as a linebacker and helped him earn the 2000 Coaches Appreciation Award for special teams.

"It's just one of those funny things," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "It's just how players develop, mature, and come along."

And Clark's development was rewarded by a position change. Ferentz said he felt the depth at linebacker was sufficient and wanted Clark's athleticism used at tight end.

Clark said he is comfortable with the switch, as evidenced by his debut in the Hawkeyes' season-opening, 51-0 defeat of Kent State. Clark caught a team-high five passes for 84 yards.

But some lingering loves remain that indicate Clark is still a defensive player shifting into an offensive mode.

"Running down field 100 percent and 100 miles per hour and hitting someone is a lot of fun," Clark said. "Offense has its highlights already and I enjoy that, but the defense is the hard-working guys that don't get much limelight. I miss hitting people and tackling."

That's why Ferentz is having a hard time getting Clark off the field.

"He doesn't want to come off any of the special teams this year," Ferentz said. "We're going to have to pull him off some because we're all concerned about him running out of gas."

With Clark that seems unlikely, but the junior suffered a fractured finger on Sept. 1. He'll wear a splint this weekend, which may be the first sign that his days on special teams are drawing to a close.

Fun factor aside, Clark may have to take his own hit and let go.

THE GALLERY FAMILY

A gallery of Gallerys

From the small Iowa town of Masonville, the Gallery family has had a handfull of Iowa athletes.

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

Rural Eastern Iowa may be known more for its corn and pigs than a herd of Division I football players, but the Gallery family has been bucking that trend for almost a decade.

From Masonville, just 70 miles north of Iowa City, the Gallerys have had a pipeline of offspring turn into Hawkeye athletes.

John Gallery, a 6-2, 210-pound punter, will join his brother Robert on the Iowa football sidelines this fall as he fights for a roster spot as a walk-on freshman. Robert, a sophomore, starts at left tackle.

"I've always looked up to all my brothers and sisters. We enjoy each other, so it'll be a lot of fun," John said.

He steps onto Kinnick field as the third Gallery to play for the Hawkeyes. Nick Gallery was an All-Big Ten punter while playing at Iowa from 1993-96. And a sister, Julie, competed for the women's track-and-field team as a high jumper during the past four years.

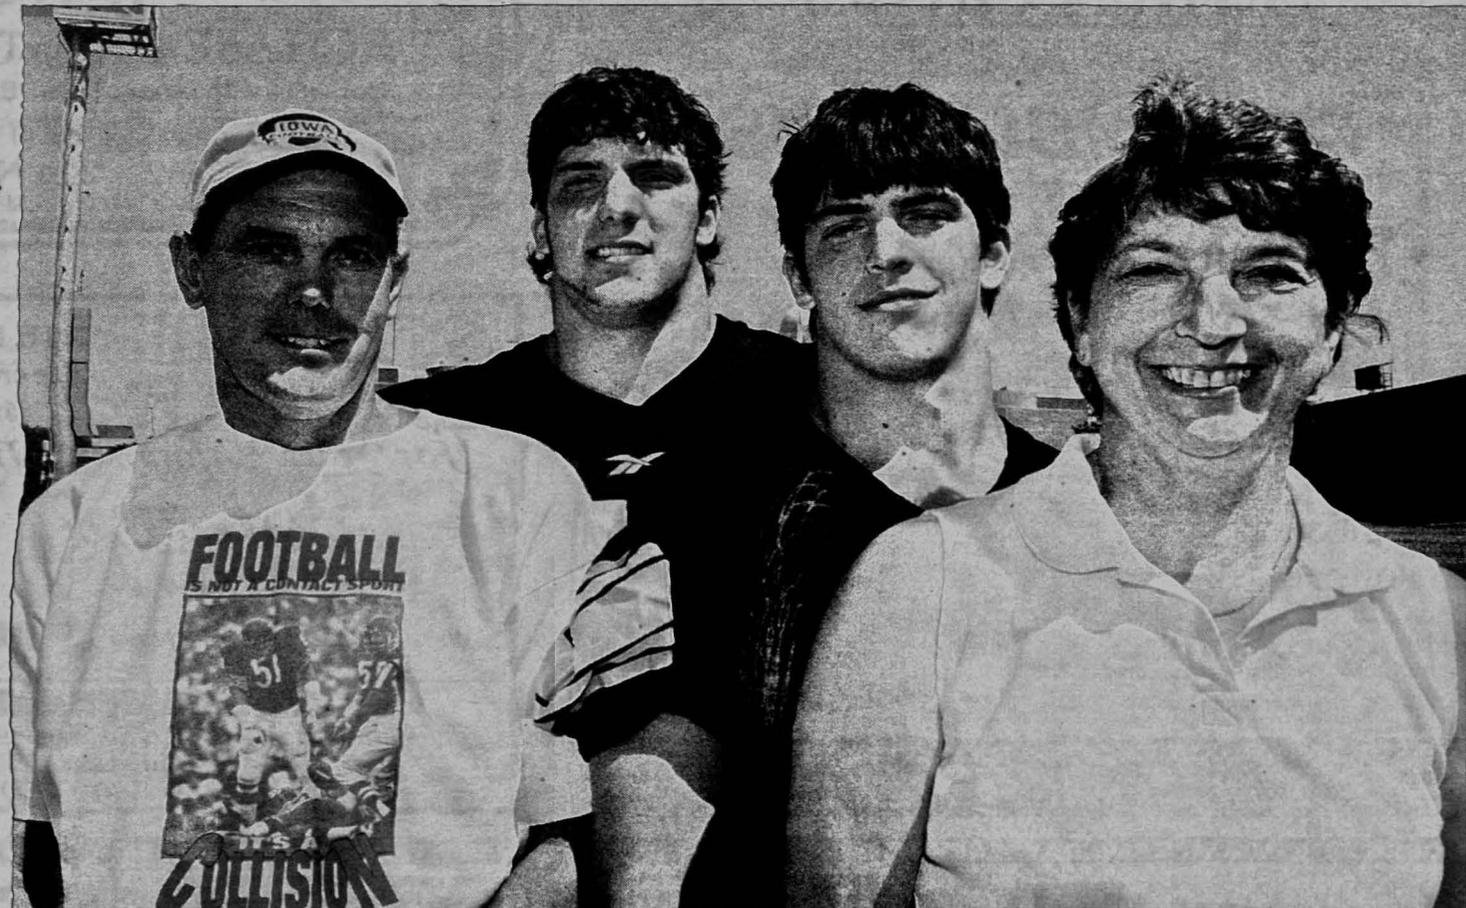

With so many Hawkeyes in the family, one might think that there is some extreme pressure coming from mom and dad to head to Iowa City.

That couldn't be further from the truth. The Gallerys didn't put pressure on their children to be Hawkeyes, said Mary Gallery.

"It was totally individual," she said. "They could pick whatever college they wanted to go to, and it was totally up to them for each one."

But because they decided to go to Iowa, having the two sons play on the same team cleared up a potential headache for the parents, Mary Gallery said.

"It's going to be nice to have them both here so we aren't

Harmony Hauser/The Daily Iowan

Mike and Mary Gallery have had four children play sports at Iowa including Iowa football players Robert (back left) and John (back right). Other Gallery athletes include Nick, a former Iowa punter, and Julie, a former Iowa high jumper.

It was totally individual. They could pick whatever college they wanted to go to, and it was totally up to them for each one.

— Mary Gallery, on her children's decision to attend the University of Iowa trying to compete, watching two different colleges at once," she said.

Both Robert and John are excited about playing together. Robert said he plans to help out his younger brother just as he would any freshman.

"He's my brother, but he's going to learn the ropes," Robert said. "He's his own guy; he'll probably check me if I try to make him do something."

The Gallerys hail from East Buchanan High School — a school with fewer than 200 students. The jump to a university with more than 28,000 students was significant for both Gallerys, especially in the level of play.

"It's a big step going from East Buchanan — it's small, and the players here are just that much better," John said. "It's a lot different."

Robert said he had to acclimate himself to the large number of people, but everything was basically the same.

"Coming from a small school, you're not used to dealing with all these people," he said. "But it's pretty much the same thing. You still deal with people the same way."

Whether they come from a small town or a bustling metropolis, the Hawkeyes will always be happy to find a family such as this one.

More than just 'Giant Killers'

RedHawks trying to shed image of mid-major school

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Someday, coach Terry Hooppner and his Miami RedHawks will be known as just another football team.

When that day will come, Hooppner has no idea. Until then, they will continue to be referred to as a mid-major team looking to play the spoiler against much larger schools.

"It's going to take some time, but I don't know if it will ever happen," Hooppner said of ridding the team of the label given to members of the Mid-American conference. "As long as we play in this conference, that will be the tag on us."

But Miami of Ohio isn't like most mid-major teams when it comes to facing off with bigger opponents. It has a proven record of winning games they aren't supposed to.

Ask No. 25 Northwestern about its 30-28 loss to the RedHawks in 1995. Or No. 13 Virginia Tech about its 24-17 debacle of 1997. And don't forget No. 12 North Carolina's 13-10 let down of 1998. If skeptics still aren't convinced, it should be noted all these wins came in the losing team's stadium with its fans in the stands.

All this has led people to refer to the RedHawks as "Giant Killers" for their prowess in big games. Hooppner doesn't understand the label; to him, the RedHawks are a Division I football team out to win games, no matter who the opponent is.

"We don't walk around calling ourselves that," he said. "That's what other people call us."

"We expected to beat Michigan last week, just like we expected to beat Ohio State last year and all the teams we play."

Last week's 31-13 loss in Ann Arbor was the latest in eye-opening performances for a team most people see on their team's schedule and write off as an easy victory. The RedHawks played that game competitively with a redshirt freshman quarterback on the field. It had two touchdowns called back for penalties.

Like most MAC programs, Miami has a hard time scheduling games, Hooppner said — not because of its history as tough competition, but because of its mid-major label. The Big Ten conference serves teams like Miami and Kent State well in both scheduling and recruiting.

"It's a natural for us," Hooppner said. "We usually play the best teams we can play and the Big Ten is a tough conference."

Miami has made great strides on the recruiting front, thanks to its past performances and ever-increasing fame. The team's ability to lure top players is even more impressive given that it must compete in recruiting with Ohio State, fellow MAC mates Ohio and Kent State and even Division I-AA Youngstown State, in the fertile football grounds of Ohio.

Miami's biggest catch came when it signed redshirt freshman quarterback Ben Roethlisberger two years ago. He turned down numerous Big Ten offers to sign on with Hooppner in Oxford.

"He heard from Ohio State, and that's usually the end of the story in this state," Hooppner said of his top signal caller.

Luckily for Hooppner and Red-Hawk fans the story did not end in Columbus but in Oxford. Roethlisberger had bigger priorities in life than television coverage and fancy uniforms.

"Miami was on me from the get-go, and there is a prestige about a Miami diploma," he said. "I like the style of offense here and the opportunity to play for more than just two years."

Roethlisberger joins sophomore Ryan Hawk to make a formidable duo at quarterback in Miami's wide-open spread offense. Roethlisberger has the arm of a classic Big Ten-style drop-back passer, while Hawk is an option quarterback. The tandem is even more dangerous when Hawk switches to wide out.

The spread offense, a leftover from the days when Hooppner was an assistant under current Northwestern head coach Randy Walker at Miami, will look very similar to what fans will see from the Wildcats and other Big Ten teams this season.

"Coach refers to it as the 'Midwest Coast' offense," Roethlisberger said. "It really gives us a chance to utilize a lot of our athletes."

Hooppner's team is still feeling out the stupefying offense, something clear in last week's loss to the Wolverines. But he is confident things will fall in place given some time.

"We're just in the early stages," he said. "This will be our second game with it, so we'll have to see."

Despite the RedHawks' talented players and proven track record against major competition, respect has been fleeting. They may knock off a Vanderbilt (as they did, 33-30, in 2000), then return to obscurity until their next big victory.

Hooppner knows there are differences between his Miami and schools like the No. 1-ranked Miami Hurricanes, but he's also aware that the results are all that matter.

"We're not concerned with our image that much," he said. "We may not have 56, 75, or 109,000 at our games, but this is quality football."

KAHLIL HILL

Poised for a breakout

Nicholas Tremmel/The Daily Iowan

Iowa senior Kahlil Hill braces for a hit by a Kent State defender during Iowa's game against the Golden Flashes on Sept. 1 in Kinnick Stadium.

Senior wants to forget about his past and have a great 2001 season

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

Kahlil Hill's career at Iowa has taken some odd twists and turns, but this year's No. 1 receiver has put the past behind him and plans to break out in 2001.

Hill, the son of former NFL receiver J.D. Hill, came to the UI from City High as a can't-miss prospect and, after redshirting, had a very promising first season. With 35 catches, he became the first freshman to lead the Hawkeyes in receiving for a season.

But Hill could not build on that momentum. After that freshman season, he had to sit out his next for undisclosed reasons while losing a year of eligibility in the process.

He came back last season but took a back seat in the Iowa offense to Iowa career reception-leader Kevin Kasper. Hill still caught 58 passes for 619 yards, but now after Kasper's graduation, he can shine in the role of main receiver.

Coach Kirk Ferentz said he and the rest of the coaching staff have a feeling Hill will come into his own this season.

"We look for Kahlil to have a breakout season; he appears to be totally healthy," Ferentz said. "I think he's ready to go."

Hill thinks so, too.

After battling injuries last season and during the spring, he was running at full speed this summer. This season may be the real deal for Hill.

"You're always ready to have a breakout season any year; freshman year, I was ready to have a breakout season," he said. "Now, I think it's real this season."

One thing that will help Hill's breakout is his confidence in Ferentz's system.

"I trust Coach," he said. "I really trust that he's going to put me in the positions to do the things I need to do to help this team and to further my career. So, as long as I'm doing what I need to do for this team, I think everything else will work out."

The elder Hill, who was just nominated as one of the top-10 receivers in Buffalo Bills history, also said the coaching staff will key Kahlil's progression this season.

"I'd like to believe that this will be a very good season for Kahlil," J.D. Hill said. "He's worked hard and listened to the things that coach Ferentz told him to do. It's very key when coaches have confidence in their players."

J.D. said Kahlil's presence on the field makes a bigger difference than his numbers may show.

"When you have a receiver like Kahlil, he's going to draw double coverage, and by him being double teamed, it allows other receivers to get catches," J.D. Hill said. "Any time you can make a difference, it's a good thing."

But is the former NFL star content with his son's statistics as a Hawkeye?

"Yes I am ... One win and no losses," he said with a laugh.

Kahlil Hill ranks 13th on Iowa's career receiving list with 97 receptions for 1,107 yards and seven touchdowns during his career.

Hill also made his mark as a return man, ranking seventh in the nation last season with a 27.2 yard average on 25 kick-off returns and one touchdown — a game-breaker against Michigan State. He was named first-team All-Big Ten as a kick returner by The Sporting News and Rivals.com last year.

With one season left to wear the black and gold, Hill said there are two things he wants Hawkeye fans to remember him for.

"[He] works hard and loves the game," Hill said. "If you can get somebody to say that about you, then all the stats and stuff don't matter. And if you do those two things, you can go wherever you want in this game."

With a little luck, those two things will take Hill and his Hawkeye teammates back to the top.

BIG TEN AND THE BCS

No roses for Big Ten this year

Coaches are angry the Big Ten champion isn't an automatic pick in this year's Rose Bowl

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

Big Ten champion = Rose Bowl berth.

Better check that math, cowboy; there's change a-brewin' in the world of college football.

The Rose Bowl is one of four Bowl Championship Series games that rotate the national championship game, and you guessed it — this year's national champions will chomp on rose stems as they hoist the Sears trophy above their heads.

With no bonafide national title contender thus far, the Big Ten champion faces the possibility of spending a Pasadena-less New Year's for the first time since 1947, something that has caused division among league coaches.

Minnesota coach Glen Mason is among the hoard of Big Ten coaches who have criticized the move.

"Let's face it, what is it being driven by? It's being driven by more money," Mason said. "I kind of find that half-funny and half-hypocritical when you think of the Knight Commission being critical about so many things that are happening on college campuses, especially about football. Then in the next breath, you look at what we're doing on the bowl scene with the BCS generating lots and lots of money."

Michigan coach Lloyd Carr also said the almighty dollar controls this situation, rather than tradition.

"You need to ask yourself this: What would have happened if we hadn't given up the Rose Bowl? I think we would have lost significant revenue," Carr said with a shrug. "The tradition of that game is very special. We gave up a lot."

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz also sides with convention, but, like many of his peers, still believes a Big Ten team can show up in Pasadena.

"I am a traditionalist, so there is some sadness there," he said. "I don't think anyone in the conference is conceding that a Big Ten representative won't be in the Rose Bowl. But that remains to be decided on the field."

Penn State's 74-year-old coach,

Joe Paterno, had the most critical comments about the Big Ten potentially missing out on the "Granddaddy" of the bowls.

"I don't think this business about the BCS is a good thing for Big Ten football," Paterno said. "Somebody puts this data into a computer, and they can't even decide if that's the proper data to put in."

This year, the BCS has tinkered with the formula to emphasize games against highly ranked opponents.

"Last year, if they had the type of system they have this year, then Miami would have been [in the championship game]," Paterno said. "Next year, maybe something will happen so they change again ... I don't like it."

Even with the drawbacks, Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez remains a proponent of the Big Ten's involvement in the BCS. He said it will help with recruiting and national image.

"I think we're giving up very little to be a part of the national championship game, which we have to be a part of," Alvarez said. "If you win it, you're going to go to a BCS game, and that's not too tough of a pill to swallow."

Ten things I hate about college football

I've decided to be a little different — a little cynical. While everybody comes out with early season lists on things they look forward to during a college-football season, I've decided to make a list of things I'm not looking forward to.

By Jeremy Schnitker

1 Seeing the demise of Joe Paterno

After being one of the best coaches in the country for four decades, the game has passed Joe Pa. Unfortunately, we have to watch it. His Nittany Lions were drubbed by Miami, 33-7, and although Miami is a great football team, I see Penn State getting the tough end of some major butt-kickings this year.

2 Friends waking me up at 6 a.m. to go tailgating

It's tough to resist peer pressure, and tailgating is one of the delicacies of Midwestern life, but I end up paying dearly for it by about 5 p.m.

3 Success at Iowa State and Nebraska

Seeing the Cyclones and Cornhuskers win just makes me flat-out depressed. Mom told me it's not right to hate people, but she never said anything about hating Iowa State and Nebraska.

4 Hearing people complain about the Bowl Championship Series

So what if computer geeks decide who plays for the national title? They're smarter than most coaches and media are. Bottom line: The BCS has worked in all its years of existence. There has been a fair national champion, despite people's mid-season condemnation of the formula.

5 Regional coverage of games

It never fails — there's a great national matchup such as Florida-Florida State, but because of regional coverage by the networks,

I'm forced to watch Nebraska play Baylor. Why can't they just air the best game of the day?

6 Patsy scheduling

This is getting better for most powerhouses, but too many teams still play weak nonconference schedules. There's absolutely nothing exciting about watching Florida hang up 60 points on some team that was playing Division I-AA ball two years ago.

7 Heisman Trophy hype

It's the second week of college football, and people are already talking about who's going to win the Heisman. And everybody is a candidate. Listen: The Heisman Trophy is the most overrated award of all-time. (See Gino Torretta, Rashaan Salaam, and Andre Ware.) Folks, we don't have even the foggiest idea of who will win it until November, so let's not talk about it until then.

8 Ex-coaches announcing games

I listened to John Cooper

call a game last week; Lee Corso does ESPN Gameday; and Terry Bowden is at ABC. These guys are all failed coaches, and they aren't a whole lot better in the booth. Note to networks: Hire trained professionals.

9 Stupid fans

One of my pet peeves at this university is the uneducated, bandwagon-jumping Iowa football fans. You've all sat by one of them, the guy who yells "Bench McCann!" in a game in which he's completed 12 of 18 passes or gets up in the morning to tailgate but doesn't go to the game. Folks, tailgating isn't tailgating unless you actually attend the game. When you don't go to the game, it's called alcoholism.

The Hawks losing

I can't put up with another losing season! Since I've been here, Iowa has won only eight games. The Hawks have been beaten by Iowa State three times and Nebraska twice. This trend must end!

Tickets sales increase after Iowa's big victory

A crowd of around 60,000 is expected Saturday

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye football fever is spreading.

Ticket sales are expected to hit 60,000 for Saturday's Miami of Ohio game, and tickets are going fast for all the Big Ten games later this season.

Dave Sandstrum, the Iowa athletics ticket manager, said the phones have been ringing nonstop this week in the ticket office following Iowa's crushing 51-0 victory over Kent State Sept. 1.

"The phones have been very busy with no breaks," he said. "The victory definitely has had an effect."

Sales for the Miami game have been brisk all week, and Sandstrum expects a large walk-up crowd of people excited about the improved Hawks. Fans wanting tickets should head to the southeast or southwest area of Kinnick Stadium.

A walk-up crowd of more than 6,000 for the Kent State game left ticket employees unprepared to handle the volume. This week, that won't be a problem as additional workers will be on hand.

"Last week exceeded expectations, so we've added additional sellers and prepared for the high turn out," Sandstrum said.

After averaging 61,123 fans per game last year, attendance was announced at 56,091 last week in the 70,347 seat stadium. The number of fans could get really close to that magical 70,000 number for games against Penn State, Michigan, and Indiana.

"I expect the Penn State and Michigan games will be sellouts, and the Indiana game will be close," Sandstrum said.

BIG TEN PICKS

Fresno State will top Badgers at home

Todd Brommelkamp

Last week's Illinois prediction and Hank Williams Jr. jokes aside, here's what to look for in the Big Ten this week. All in all, week No. 2 looks much more promising for football fans because there are actually some entertaining games scheduled.

No. 19 Fresno State at No. 23 Wisconsin

I'll admit it; I'm on the Fresno State bandwagon. Even though I was dead tired last weekend, I stayed up just to see how much of a pounding the Bulldogs would lay on Dennis Erickson's Oregon State Beavers. It was well worth it. David Carr may just play himself into the Heisman race if he isn't careful.

Wisconsin put up quite a fight against Oregon, and it has the luxury of playing this one at Camp Randall Stadium.

Punter R.J. Morse had the best game of any Badger last weekend, and Barry Alvarez may need his punter to pin Carr's squad deep.

Pick 'em.

Fresno State 27, Wisconsin 21

No. 11 Michigan at No. 15 Washington

After nearly losing one in the Big House to Miami of Ohio last week, the Wolverines hit the road for a nationally televised game against the Huskies.

Washington still needs to figure out who will replace Marques Tuiasosopo as a team leader and offensive catalyst on the field. Michigan needs to replace Drew Henson, Anthony Thomas, David Terrell, and a host of offensive linemen.

Lloyd Carr should be sleepless in Seattle after this mild upset.

Washington 27, Michigan 24

Akron at No. 24 Ohio State

Let the Jim Tressel era begin in Columbus.

Tressel used an offense that relied heavily on ball control and running in his years at Division I-AA powerhouse Youngstown State. His style should be a perfect fit for a Buckeyes offense run by the less-than-stellar Steve Bellasari.

The Zips bring a power game that also relies on running to Columbus, but power football in the MAC and power football in the Big Ten are like apples and oranges.

Tressel gets his first win as a Buckeye and shouldn't have to worry about job security like his predecessor ... yet.

Ohio State 38, Akron 6

Central Michigan at Michigan State

Iowa fans will remember the Chipewas as a team that lacked both talent and depth when the Hawkeyes trounced them, 38-0, during the 1998 season opener. Not much has changed.

Expect a big day from T.J. Duckett, as Michigan State will most likely try to pound the ball down Central Michigan's throat early and often. When the ball isn't on the ground, look for equally impressive performances from QBs Jeff Smoker and Ryan Van Dyke.

Michigan State 35, Central Michigan 0

Northern Illinois at Illinois

I suppose we could call this one the Jon Beutjer Bowl, because both teams have been rumored to be taking a look at the wayward quarterback. Joe Novak's Huskies could certainly use a passing attack, especially against the Illini.

While Kurt Kittner looked impressive against Cal last week, it was Big Ten Offensive Player of the Week Brandon Lloyd at wide receiver who made him look even better. Lloyd, who missed last season with a broken leg, hauled in eight passes for 178 yards and two scores.

Illinois 45, Northern Illinois 10

Louisiana-Lafayette at Minnesota

I'm sure everyone in college football shares my excitement over this dandy of a matchup featuring the Ragin' Cajuns, hot off a 20-0 shutout of powerhouse Nicholls State, and the affable Golden Gophers.

On any other schedule this wouldn't warrant a second glance, but given Minnesota's performance against Toledo, it's worth a watch.

Minnesota 27, U.L.-Lafayette 10

PREGAME PICK

Miami presents true test for Iowa

Melinda Mawdsley

Truth be told, Iowa's defeat of Kent State last weekend brought a smile to my face, but it didn't send me to the phone to begin my two-week-long verbal assault on my friends from Iowa State.

I remained slightly skeptical. Hey, I'm a Cubs fan, too.

Then I spoke with Kyle McCann on Tuesday. I asked him the same question I asked every other player gathered outside the Bubble.

"Is Iowa for real?"

I didn't expect him to say yes, and he didn't, (in my time covering this team, he is one of the few that doesn't seem to get caught up in thrilling wins or devastating defeats), but it was the sly smile on his face when he said his last sentence that caught my attention.

"I think we have some real good things happening, and we'll see," he said.

McCann knows something, and Saturday's game against Miami of Ohio could be the perfect time to let things fly.

The RedHawks are arguably better than Minnesota or even Penn State, so the Hawkeyes enter Week Two with a true test against a worthy opponent, which is welcome because Iowa didn't have to fine-tune much against Kent State.

McCann and his sideline sub Brad Banks combined for 236 yards on just 22 attempts. Miami's secondary is probably the most inexperienced unit on the team.

With regard to the running game, the worst-case scenario was that Ferentz revealed that the Hawkeyes can use six or seven guys out of the backfield and that number doesn't include Banks, whose athleticism has been widely heralded.

Senior fullback Jeremy Allen expects the RedHawks to target him and Ladell Betts, but that was the Golden Flashes' game plan last weekend. However, the dangerous duo will have to work a little harder for their yardage this time around, even though Miami gave up 189 rushing yards to Michigan.

RedHawks coach Terry Hooppner gracefully said Iowa's offense appeared to be in sync. I agree and expect the one-game trend to carry over Saturday.

Now, to the other side of the ball. Miami has a potent scoring attack, fathered by former coach Randy Walker, who is now blowing scoreboards up with the offense as coach at Northwestern.

Wait, Iowa beat Northwestern last year. Don't think the memories haven't carried over.

Obviously, the Hawkeyes' defense played well against Kent State, but it wasn't razor sharp, and the attitude of the guys on this unit, particularly those upfront, will take it as a personal challenge to step up to the level of the competition.

Then there is an outside factor — the RedHawks haven't started a season 0-2 since 1994. Hooppner jokingly said he was counting on Iowa looking ahead to the Sept. 15 contest with Iowa State to keep that streak alive.

Fat chance. The Hawkeyes want to savor every victory they can get. In unusual fashion, even we in the media haven't brought up the Cyclones.

Hawkeyes off to perfect start

A 4-0 start has the field hockey team glowing

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

There are few ways to get to know someone faster than by competing, eating, studying, and sleeping alongside them.

Add living out of a suitcase for four weekends in a row, and the stress increases astronomically.

Luckily, according to coach Tracey Griesbaum, the 18 members of the Iowa field hockey team are something like sisters.

"A real strength of our team is that they like each other a lot," she said. "Unity is a big thing and something we take a lot of pride in. They enjoy each other's company and have gotten to know each other on a whole other level."

Last weekend, the team embarked on its first road trip to the East Coast for the opening three games of a 10-game road set. The Hawkeyes will not return to play at Grant Field in Iowa City until Oct. 5.

Essential to their success on unfamiliar turf is an ability to cope and coexist on and off the field, and so far,

Griesbaum said the team has demonstrated that ability.

On the field, Iowa has proved unstoppable, dominating almost every aspect of the game at all times. The Hawkeyes stand at 4-0 with three shutouts. They also have developed a system to incorporate all field players. When it comes to scoring, the Hawkeyes don't discriminate.

"As much as I'd love to say we have this amazing, unstoppable scorer, as a team then you tend to rely on one person when everyone is capable of scoring," Griesbaum said. "Right now, we have at least eight legitimate scorers on our team, I'd say even ten. After four games, having ten legitimate threats out of 15 players really shows your style."

From the backfield, Gina Palma and Lauren Stiver have one and four shots on goal, respectively. Seven different players have scored, and an additional two have provided assists on Iowa's 14 goals and 15 assists so far this year. Freshman Natalie Dawson leads the statistics with 4 goals and one assist.

In the midfield, Lauren Edwards scored one goal in her return to duty last weekend. Edwards broke her nose and orbital bone in the preseason and was cleared last week to play with a facemask.

"She was on cloud nine to be playing again," Griesbaum said. "And we're happy to have her back. It was fortunate she had to miss only one game."

Another player to make Griesbaum's A-list also caught the eye of the conference over the weekend. Midfielder Lindsay Miller was named Big Ten Offensive Player of the Week for her game-winning goals against Colgate and New Hampshire.

"Over the weekend, she played center midfield, which is the cornerstone of the team," Griesbaum said. "She's constantly around the ball and the play."

The equal opportunity on the field extends to the cage as well, with Saleema Rogers, Emily Rinde-Thorsen, and Barb Weinberg in competition for a permanent starting position. This season, Rogers has recorded three starts, but all three have been in the goal for the Hawkeyes.

"We've loved what we've seen from all of the goalkeepers," Griesbaum said. "They are all one step further than they were last season, but unfortunately there's only one spot on the field. I've been pleased to give them all some playing time, because they all deserve it."

Griesbaum said the decision of which goalkeeper to play and when will largely rest on the techniques of future opponents and how to best defend against them.

"All three of them have different styles and strengths, but they're all doing really well. This is a good problem to have."

Playing back-to-back games against aggressive and varied opponents early in the season should prepare the Hawkeyes for another weekend of the same. Iowa is scheduled to play Ball State on Saturday followed by a game against Stanford on Sept. 9.

Former Iowa players Annette Payne (1998) and Lesley Irvine (1999) will be in attendance, but rooting for the opposite team. Both women are assistant coaches — Payne for Ball State and Irvine for Stanford.

"Ball State always gives us a good game, but both teams will be after us this weekend," Griesbaum said.
