Taliban threatens 'holy war'

Arafat orders cease-fire

By Yoav Appel
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — In steps toward a truce, Israel promised Tuesday not to launch strikes on the Palestinians after Yasser Arafat said he ordered his forces to prevent attacks on Israelis and to hold back even from responding to fire.

Israel also withdrew dozens of tanks from Palestinian areas it has recently seized. U.S. Secretary of State Colin Powell, who has been prodding both sides to work out a cease-fire, said he was encouraged by the mutual gestures. "We see some promise," he said.

Continued Mideast fighting would disrupt Washington's efforts to bring Arab and Muslim countries into an international anti-terror coalition being formed in response to the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

Previous truce deals have collapsed quickly, and there were no assurances that the latest effort would succeed. Hours after the two sides' announcements, there were exchanges of fire Tuesday evening in two locations in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

However, the terror attacks on the United States and U.S. preparations to respond may have forced Israel and the Palestinians to review their positions.

A senior Palestinian official, speaking privately, said the Palestinian leadership hoped to start a new chapter with Israel.

The U.N. envoy to the Middle East, Terje Roed-Larsen, also said he sensed a shift. "I think there's a strong belief on the Palestinian side that power is no longer in the barrel of a gun, that power now is based on diplomatic instruments to be used at the negotiating table," said Roed-Larsen, who keeps in close contact with Arafat.

Arafat told foreign diplomats in a meeting at his Gaza office Tuesday that he was committed to a truce and had ordered his security forces "to act intensively in securing a cease-fire on all our fronts."

KABUL, Afghanistan — The hard-line Taliban said God would protect it if the world tried to "set fire" to Afghanistan for sheltering terrorist suspect Osama bin Laden; in comments broadcast Tuesday, it also called on all Muslims to wage holy war on America in case of attack.

Hundreds of Islamic clerics gathered in the Afghan capital to discuss possible conditions for extraditing bin Laden to a country other than the United States, a Pakistan government official said. The clerics are expected to meet today, said Hamdullah Nomani, the mayor of Kabul and host of the gathering.

The conditions, including international recognition of the Taliban government and the lifting of U.N. sanctions, were discussed Monday in Kandahar, the headquarters of the Islamic militia that rules most of Afghanistan, the Pakistani official said on the condition of anonymity.

It seemed unlikely the United States would agree to have bin Laden extradited to another country. A delegation sent by Pakistan to try to persuade the Taliban to hand over bin Laden went home Tuesday without reaching an agreement, and Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf scheduled a televised address to his people for this evening.

Before leaving Kabul, the Pakistani delegation met with eight detained aid workers being tried on charges of illegally preaching Christianity, the official said. Pakistan asked the Taliban to release the aid workers — two Americans, four Germans, and two Australians — and the rulers promised to consider the request, he said.

The Taliban, which says bin Laden was wrongly implicated in the Sept. 11 terror attacks on the United States, urged the people of Afghanistan to prepare for a jihad, or holy war, against America, the official Bakhtar News Agency reported Tuesday.

"If America attacks our homes, it is necessary for all Muslims, especially for Afghans, to wage a holy war," Mullah Mohammed Hasan Akhund, the deputy Taliban leader, said Monday, according to state-run Radio Shariat. "God is on our side, and if the world's people try to set fire to Afghanistan, God will protect us and help us."

In first UI layoffs, 2 jobs cut at lab

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

Two staffers at the UI Hydraulics Laboratory were let go this month after officials concluded that their jobs should be eliminated, marking the first — and possibly only — layoffs of university employees in a year of tight budgets.

Bill King and Terry Lehman had worked as machinists building hydraulics models principally for private corporations for about five years each, their former boss said. The two have since been rehired by the university, taking a pay cut to work at UI Hospitals and Clinics.

A slowing economy — and the subsequent fewer contracts the laboratory will sign with private industry — made the layoffs necessary, said the laboratory's director, Virendra Patel.

'They were shocked'

"It was very difficult," he said, acknowledging that the two were "quite friendly" men who worked to the best of their abilities. "Any decision like that is difficult."

"Like anyone else would be, they were shocked. I would be, too, if I were laid off from a job."

Patel said he sees no reason

UISG supports Tasers for Public Safety

By Jennifer Sturm
The Daily Iowan

UI Public Safety officers received a crucial show of support in their quest to become a more powerful police force on Tuesday, as members of UI Student Government backed a proposal to arm them with Tasers.

A majority of the three Senates voted in favor, saying officers need the arms in order to protect themselves. UISG represents the largest of three campus constituencies Public Safety Director Chuck Green was asked to contact about the proposal before the university will ask the state of Iowa Board of Regents for the change.

"The Tasers are an energy weapon that utilizes compressed nitrogen to shoot two small probes up to 21 feet at a speed of 135 feet per second," Green said of the weapons, which cost $500 apiece.

When the probes make contact with a target, the Taser transmits electrical pulses along the wires and into the body of the target through up to two inches of clothing, Green said. The result is an instant loss of the person's neuromuscular control and any ability to perform coordinated action, he said.

The Taser resolution passed despite a litany of concerns voiced by UISG President Nick Klenske, who said the arms could lead to a more hostile atmosphere. He also wondered if the arms were 100 percent nonlethal.

Chuck Green, the director of UI Public Safety, describes situations in which his officers were ill-equipped. Public Safety is asking to be supplied with Tasers in order to better protect the university community. It also wants to change its name to University Police.

Giuliani: Little hope for missing

By Larry McShane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — One week after terrorists brought down the World Trade Center, the mayor said there was virtually no hope left Tuesday of finding any of the 5,400 missing people alive. Meanwhile, a federal grand jury in White Plains, N.Y., has begun investigating the attack.

The somber news from Mayor Rudolph Giuliani came just a few hours after the nation, led by President Bush on the White House lawn, paused for two minutes to honor the victims. The remembrance came at 8:48 a.m., exactly one week after the first of two hijacked airliners struck the twin towers, followed soon after by hijacked planes crashing at the Pentagon and in Pennsylvania.

Nancy Pelaez, an administrative assistant on her way to work in New York, paused and wiped away tears. "When you keep silent these two minutes, it seems like a really long time," she said. "I'm thinking of people who were looking for their loved ones."

By Tuesday, 218 people had been confirmed dead at the Trade Center, and 5,422 were still listed as missing. Five survivors have been found, but none since Sept. 12. Just 135 bodies have been identified — little more than 2 percent of the dead and missing.

After a week of round-the-clock digging by thousands of rescue workers, the mayor said the chance of finding any survivors in the smoking ruins of the 110-story towers is now "very, very small."

"We don't have any substantial amount of hope we can offer anyone that we will find anyone alive," Giuliani said. "We have to prepare people for that overwhelming reality."

Authorities said a grand jury was convened last week to investigate the attacks, the first step toward possible charges. White Plains is part of the federal court system's Southern District of New York, which has historically led investigations related to Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the attacks.

Meanwhile, Attorney General John Ashcroft expanded the terrorism investigation Tuesday to include U.S. attorneys in every city, as authorities filed the first criminal charges after finding three men in a house with false immigration papers and airport diagrams.

The arrests in Michigan occurred when FBI agents raided a residence in Detroit looking for one of the nearly 200 witnesses being sought in the investigation. Instead, they found the three men and a cache of documents. The three were charged with possessing false immigration papers.

The government also announced a new policy that gives immigration authorities

Mark Lennihan/Associated Press

48 hours, or longer in emergencies, to decide whether to charge an alien with status violations, up from 24 hours. Many of those questioned in Tuesday's attack were being detained on immigration violations.

The attorney general vowed to use "every legal means at our disposal to prevent further terrorist activity by taking people into custody who have violated the law and who may pose a threat to America."

Ashcroft said publicly for the first time that authorities are probing whether more flights beyond the four that crashed last Tuesday were targeted for hijackings, but he noted that the possibility had not yet been corroborated.

The three Detroit men were arrested on charges of identity fraud and misuse of visas.

During a search of the men's residence, FBI agents observed a day planner containing notations on the "American base in Turkey," the "American foreign minister," and "Alia Airport," Jordan, according to an FBI affidavit filed in the case.

"The day planner also contained handwritten sketches of what appeared to be a diagram of an airport flight line, to include aircraft and runways," the affidavit said.

Court records said the FBI seized documents suggesting the men worked in food preparation for airlines at Detroit Metropolitan Airport and collected information about an American military base in Turkey, a U.S. foreign minister, an airport in Jordan, and diagrams of aircraft location and runways. The affidavit did not explain the reference to "U.S. foreign minister."

Federal documents identified the men as Karim Koubriti, 23; Ahmed Hannan, 33; and Farouk Ali-Haimoud, 21.

FBI finds meticulous plot behind attacks

By John Solomon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The FBI has meticulously pieced together a broad terrorist plot, securing evidence the hijackers trained for months or years without raising suspicions in the United States, received financial and logistical support from others, and identified additional targets for destruction.

Law-enforcement and other officials familiar with the evidence said the FBI is investigating whether the terrorist network behind the Sept. 11 attacks targeted more flights for hijacking beyond the four that crashed.

Authorities have grown increasingly certain — from intelligence intercepts, witness interviews, and evidence gathered in hijackers' cars and homes — that a second wave of violence was planned by collaborators. They said Sept. 22 has emerged as an important date in the evidence, but they declined to be more specific.

The Sept. 11 attacks were "part of a larger plan with other terrorism acts, not necessarily hijacking of airplanes. Those acts were going to occur in the United States and elsewhere in the world," said Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., the chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

The investigation, the largest in American history, has engulfed the full resources of the FBI, Justice Department, Customs Service, Treasury Department, agencies that track assets, and the CIA, National Security Agency, and other spy agencies.

Officials from several of those agencies described developments in the investigation to the Associated Press on the condition of anonymity. Most of the evidence remains sealed by court orders. A federal grand jury in White Plains, N.Y., was convened last week to weigh evidence and issue subpoenas.

U.S. officials have made no secret they believe that exiled Saudi millionaire Osama bin Laden masterminded the plot from Afghanistan and organized his and other terrorist groups to carry it out. In President Bush's words, bin Laden is wanted "dead or alive."

The FBI has hinted at the magnitude of the collaboration, sending airlines, local police, and border-patrol agencies a list of approximately 200 people it believes may either have information or assisted the attacks. The government has detained 75 people for questioning and on immigration charges, from California to Germany.

At least four people on the list have been arrested as material witnesses, law-enforcement officials said Tuesday. That means they are believed to have critical information about the plot and are at risk to flee.

Several detainees have been flown to New York, where the grand jury is working and prosecutors have significant anti-terrorism experience from earlier cases involving bin Laden.

These detainees include Ayub Ali Khan, 51, and Mohammed Jaweed Azmath, 47, two men who left the Newark, N.J., airport aboard a flight headed for Texas roughly the same time as the hijackings. The men were grounded in St. Louis and then took a train toward Texas, where they were taken into custody. They had $5,000 cash and box cutters like those used by the hijackers, immediately drawing the attention of law-enforcement officials.

Authorities also have flown to New York a French-Algerian man who was detained last month after he sought flight training in Minnesota. The school where he offered to pay for the training was suspicious and called authorities. The government has held Zacarias Moussaoui on immigration charges since Aug. 17.

Two weeks before the attacks, agents had already gathered evidence tracing Moussaoui to an effort to get flight training as early as fall 2000 in Norman, Okla., officials said.

French oui to anti-terrorism alliance

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush, reaching out to build a global alliance against terrorism, won a strong commitment Tuesday from French President Jacques Chirac, who called the hijacking attacks on the United States a "tragedy that does not have a parallel."

"We bring you the total solidarity of France and the French people," Chirac told Bush in an Oval Office meeting.

The meeting came as the Bush administration stepped up its efforts to reach out to leaders around the world, even making overtures to Cuba and Sudan, with which the United States has had tense relations. The administration also began preparing a multibillion-dollar financial-aid-package for battered U.S. airlines.

Bush, speaking before he and Chirac had a working dinner, said his goal was "to rally the world toward a campaign to find terrorists." He cited an "outpouring of support" from world leaders, including those in the Arab world.

"We will take the governments for their word and will work with them to disrupt the finances, the travel, the communications" of terrorists, he said. For his part, Chirac stopped short of using Bush's "war terminology."

"I don't know whether we should use the word 'war,' but what I can say is now we are faced with a conflict of a completely new nature," Chirac said.

Chirac was the first world leader Bush has met with since the Sept. 11 attacks. British Prime Minister Tony Blair is scheduled to arrive in Washington Thursday.

France has sometimes had strained relations with the United States on military issues, including how to deal with Iraq. But Chirac told Bush: "We are completely determined to fight by your side this new type of evil, of absolute evil, which is terrorism."

Bush marked the grim one-week milestone by leading White House employees — and the nation — in a moment of silence. He also thanked leaders of charitable organizations at a later Rose Garden ceremony and praised Americans for rushing to give aid and comfort.

"Out of our tears and sadness, we saw the best of America," Bush said. "We saw a great country rise up to help."

Bush also called U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan, Brazilian President Fernando Henrique Cardoso, and Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien.

Attacks ensure recession, some say

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Car sales, home sales, tourism, business travel, and other major parts of the economy suddenly look very vulnerable, and many economists no longer doubt whether the country will suffer a recession this year.

"The horror of the events of last week literally stopped the economy in its tracks," said David Jones, the chief economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York. "There is no question that this terrorist event will kick us over into a recession."

But Jones and other analysts who believe the terror attacks will trigger a full-blown recession also predict the economy will come roaring back next year, helped by the extra billions of dollars that will be spent on reconstruction and security.

Already, after only a week, losses to the nation's airlines have been put at $1 billion. The industry is seeking $24 billion from Congress to help it cope.

The disruption in travel has been felt at many tourist destinations, and the tourism industry is bracing for even bigger losses, especially at such far-away destinations as Hawaii.

Joel Prakken, the chief economist at Macroeconomic Forecasters in St. Louis, said the hit to the economy in property damage and lost lives from last week's suicide hijackings will dwarf such recent natural disasters as Hurricane Andrew in 1992, which killed 61 people and resulted in $27 billion in property damage.

Analysts said losses among airlines and the insurance industry will be magnified throughout the economy, as people cut back on spending, especially for such big-ticket items as homes and autos.

Consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of the activity in the $10 trillion U.S. economy, has been all that kept the country out of a downturn for the past year.

Paul Taylor, the chief economist for the National Automobile Dealers Association, said he was cutting his sales estimates for the rest of this year by 100,000 vehicles.

Even before the destruction at the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, consumers had grown more wary, reflecting a sharp jump in unemployment.

The jobless rate surged in August to 4.9 percent.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan has warned since January that the biggest threat of an outright recession would come if consumers became so spooked about rising unemployment that they cut back on spending.

Now worries about job losses are being intensified by the terrorist attack and the resulting plunge in stock values, which translates into lower spending by people worried about shrinking investment portfolios.

Because of all these factors, many economists believe the current July-September quarter will see the gross domestic product drop as much as 1 percent. That would follow a tiny 0.2 percent rise in GDP in the April-June quarter.

NATION BRIEFS

Still-wobbly Dow has easier day

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street found some stability Tuesday, a day after the biggest one-day point drop in history.

The Dow closed down 17.30 points at 8,903.40, according to preliminary calculations. The NASDAQ fell 24.47 to 1,555.08, and the Standard & Poor's 500 index declined 6.03 to 1,032.74.

The market climbed back over the 9,000 level during the day, but gave up those gains late in the session.

"Uncertainty is a primary enemy for the market, and the events of the last week have created a high level of uncertainty," said Ricky Harrington, a technical analyst for Wachovia Securities.

On Monday — the first day of trading since the terrorist attacks last week — the Dow lost a record 684.81 points and fell below 9,000 for the first time since December 1998. The reopening ended the market's longest shutdown since the Depression.

A sign of the market's attempt to stabilize was apparent in New York Stock Exchange trading volume, which returned to a more moderate level of 1.65 billion shares. It had a record-breaking 2.33 billion on Monday.

Still, analysts expect the market to be vulnerable throughout this week because of fears of war and the damage done by the terrorist attacks to the economy — particularly the airline industry.

Tuesday's losers included travel services, financial services, and insurance, which got pummeled on Monday, too. Online travel agent Expedia dropped $4.36 to $19.64. American International Group, an insurance company, fell 95 cents to $70.05. American Express fell $2.87 to $27.38.

The winners included airlines, which were punished on Monday. AMR, the parent of American Airlines, gained $2 to $20, and United Airlines rose $1.49 to $18.99.

Bush administration braces the nation for casualties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Early in the buildup to the Persian Gulf War, the first President Bush speculated to military aides that with brute air power, "We can knock 'em out in 24 hours."

The new Bush administration is trying to brace Americans for war with a different type of foe and greater loss of life.

"Antiseptic warfare will not work with this enemy," said Defense chief Donald Rumsfeld. That was on Sunday.

"There will be costs," said Bush. That was on Monday.

"This is not a risk-free operation," said Gen. Joseph Ralston, the commander of NATO forces. That was on Tuesday.

For a quarter-century, Americans have largely been spared such costs.

The Gulf War wasn't nearly as tidy as the first Bush initially hoped — 500,000 American troops were deployed, and 148 lost their lives — but there was no massive loss of life.

Likewise, other recent U.S. military actions cost relatively few lives. There were no U.S. combat losses during the military intervention in Kosovo in 1999 nor in the Bosnian air strikes in 1995. There were 29 combat deaths in Somalia during the U.S. operation to restore political stability and combat famine nearly a decade ago.

But the tools of warfare used so effectively in many recent military operations — cruise missiles flying off in the night, planes delivering "smart" bombs from 20,000 feet — won't provide an easy answer this time, Rumsfeld warned.

"What this war is about is our way of life," he said. "And our way of life is worth losing lives for."

Secretary of State Colin Powell warns that the fight against the terrorists won't be solved "in one day or one week; it'll be a long-term campaign."

Historically, Afghanistan a quagmire

By Kathy Gannon
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev called Afghanistan a "bleeding wound." For a British viceroy more than a 100 years earlier, it was a "poisoned chalice."

The reason? The Soviets and the British were both dealt bloody and humiliating defeats by the warrior clans of the poor country, where the brutal, mountainous terrain poses a challenge for any would-be invader.

As U.S. forces consider an assault against Osama bin Laden — the top suspect in the Sept. 11 terror attacks — and Afghanistan's ruling Taliban militia, history is not encouraging.

The British Empire fought three major wars in Afghanistan between 1830 and 1920, trying to impose its control over the country but repeatedly suffering heavy losses and brutal massacres at the hands of the highly independent tribesmen.

The worst came in 1842, when several thousand British and Indian soldiers, women, and children and thousands of camp followers were slaughtered by Afghan fighters as they tried to retreat through the deep mountain passes out of Afghanistan.

In the 20th century, the Soviet Union's attempt to hold Afghanistan met similar humiliation. Its 10-year occupation ended in 1989 in disgrace, with more than 15,000 Soviet soldiers dead. When the withdrawal finally came, the last soldiers scurried out of the country across the northern Oxus River, guarding their backs against guerrillas.

It turned out to be the last great Cold War battle. Less than 10 months after its pullout from Afghanistan, the Soviet Union collapsed and shattered into a dozen independent states.

Now, it may be the United States' turn to try a foray into the Afghan quagmire, if it seeks to ferret out bin Laden and to punish the hard-line Taliban movement, which has given him refuge since 1996.

First, the United States must find bin Laden. His global terrorist network, called al-Qaida, is thought to operate out of hidden bases and caves honeycombing the mountain ranges that crisscross Afghanistan.

According to Pakistani intelligence sources, bin Laden went into hiding within minutes of hearing of last week's attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon; he now could be taking refuge in one of a dozen hideouts.

Any U.S. military operation must deal with the same daunting geography that foiled the British and Soviet empires. Tanks and armor have difficulty moving in large forces; mountain passes make ambushes easy; deep ravines and caves blunt the effectiveness of aerial bombing. The bitter cold saps troops' morale as they battle tough guerrilla fighters with intimate knowledge of the landscape.

Bin Laden's al-Qaida group and affiliated groups operating in Afghanistan are believed to number up to 10,000 members.

One veteran of the Soviet war, Lt. Gen. Ruslan Aushev, warned the United States would find bin Laden only if it was ready to comb 200,000 square miles "rock by rock."

"You can occupy it, you can put troops there and keep bombing, but you cannot win," he said Tuesday.

The United States would not be able to repeat the 1991 Gulf War scenario of collecting a large ground force in a neighboring nation and invading. None of the countries around Afghanistan provide a likely staging ground, and any invading force would have to work its way through mountain ranges along the borders.

Large freshman class boosts enrollment

By Sara Faiwell
The Daily Iowan

Overall enrollment at the UI has increased this fall, including a nearly 300-person jump in the size of the freshman class, according to figures released Tuesday.

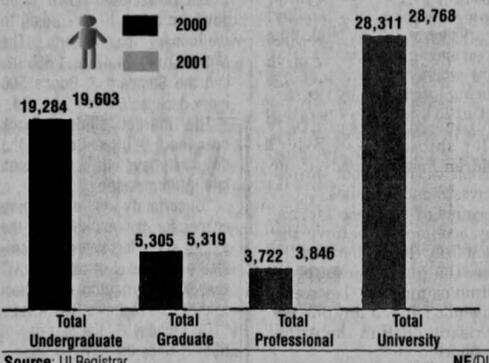

Enrollment for the 2001 fall semester totals 28,768, a jump of 457 students from last fall, according to the Office of the Registrar.

University officials say they are not surprised by the large freshman class — 4,005 students — and they are glad to see the numbers increase. The freshman class includes record numbers of students eligible for honors classes, more minority students, and more high-school valedictorians, officials said.

One reason for an increase in high-achieving students is because more staff members have been hired to focus on recruiting those students, said Michael Barron, the university's director of Admissions. "There also have been a lot of new scholarships added," he said.

"And we are recognizing high-school achievement more," University spokesman Steve Parrott said there could be a number of factors behind the freshman-class increase from 3,736 students in 2000 to 4,005 in 2001. The slowing economy might have played a part in the increase if the need for a college degree to get a good job became more important, he said.

But, he said, students could also have realized that the UI is a good value, which state officials plan to highlight during an upcoming discussion on a proposed 15-18 percent tuition increase.

The increase in both in-state and out-of-state students reflects the university's efforts to improve undergraduate education as well as to "maintain a welcoming, nurturing environment for students," said Lola Lopes, the associate provost for undergraduate education.

The College of Nursing saw the largest jump in enrollment, 34 percent, which comes in the middle of a nationwide nursing shortage. "Word is getting out that there is this shortage," Parrott said. "And the College of Nursing has done a good job reaching out around the state and providing opportunities."

Currently, the university offers a program in which Iowans may receive a B.S. in nursing without actually traveling to Iowa City.

Parrott said the university tried hard this year to keep track of the number of incoming students, holding strict enrollment deadlines last spring. The university decided against putting a cap on the number of incoming students this summer as a way to deal with state budget cuts but considered the possibility.

"We are getting close to the limit of people we can take in," he said. "It's great to be in demand, but we don't want more than we can serve."

UI M.D. lends hand in NY

By Mike Dhar
The Daily Iowan

Immediately following the terrorist attack on the World Trade Center, UI Hospitals and Clinics doctor Mario Martinasevic thought he was in the right place at the right time to help the victims. But then the towers collapsed, leaving few survivors in need of his assistance.

Martinasevic, a vascular surgeon, attended a general-surgery review conference last week at the Crowne Plaza hotel on Liberty Island in New York City's Upper Bay. He and 120 other surgeons set up a field hospital in Liberty Park after the attacks.

"When I saw that first impact, I thought, 'Am I dreaming? Is this a movie?'" he said. "Then I thought, 'This is a building full of people. Imagine how many are injured.'"

"We were expecting more burn victims," he said. "But we realized after the towers collapsed, we wouldn't be much help because most died at the scene."

Most of the patients at Liberty Park suffered only minor cuts and bruises, Martinasevic said at a press conference Tuesday. Nearby Bellevue hospital admitted 800 patients to its emergency room after the two airliners crashed into the trade center, he said, adding that rescue workers couldn't find injured survivors after the towers collapsed.

The surgeons, assisted by New Jersey police and Emergency Medical personnel, set up the field hospital in under three hours and kept it open from 11:30 a.m. to midnight that day, Martinasevic said.

Surgeons at the conference called New Jersey police after hearing of the attack. The Manhattan disaster command center advised the surgeons and police to set up a triage hospital in Liberty Park because their services were not needed in Manhattan.

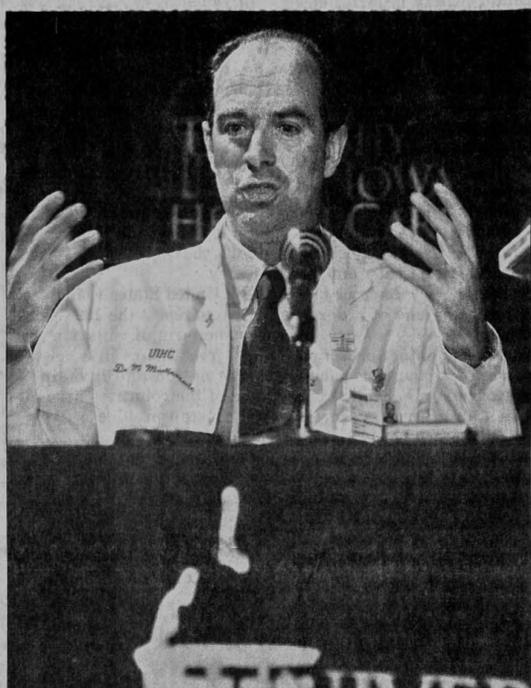

New Jersey emergency personnel sent 150 ambulances along with police, Martinasevic said.

The medical community will feel the effects of last week's attacks well into the future, said the head of UIHC surgery, Carol Scott-Conner, who appeared with Martinasevic at the press conference. "I think it will change the way we train doctors," she said.

Surgeons may learn more about chemical and biological weapons, as well as post-traumatic stress syndrome, she said.

"It's going to strengthen my desire to work hard and learn as many things as I can," Martinasevic said. "Any time we need to help, we will act."

Iowa City keeps blood flowing

By Vess Mitev
The Daily Iowan

The blood bank at the UI Hospitals and Clinics has started to space out the recent influx of blood donors to avoid a surplus of stored blood and overcrowding freezer space.

The DeGowin Blood Center collected 162 pints of blood and approximately 300 pledge cards from future donors on Sept. 11, the day of the terrorist attacks, said Mitch Overton, the center's donor-recruitment coordinator. Pledge donors have all made appointments for the next several weeks, he added.

"The response has been fantastic, but we are trying to avoid a glut of blood collection," Overton said. "The biggest problem is managing our freezer space. We've been trying to space donations out, and the slots are full through the first part of October."

Donors at the center are told their blood will stay at the hospital, helping victims on the East Coast by allowing suppliers, such as the American Red Cross, to ship blood directly to New York instead of to local hospitals.

During the most recent Iowa City blood drive, on Sept. 14, the American Red Cross collected blood from 160 donors and turned away dozens more, said Renee Uecker, the communications director for the Grant Wood chapter of the American Red Cross in Cedar Rapids. The drive would have typically brought in 50 to 60 donations, she said.

The Red Cross can never have too much blood in storage, Uecker said. Because only 5 percent of the population eligible to give blood actually donates, more donors ensure that blood is always available, she said.

"We have no plans to deter people from donating blood," she said. "It's actually better for us if we have extra donors on hand, in case people are turned away for health reasons."

The Red Cross is the only national blood-procurement organization, sending blood around the country to the areas most in need, she said.

"Anytime there are mass casualties or disaster, we send out units and supplies immediately," Uecker said.

When blood is donated, it is separated into two parts: plasma, the liquid component that can be frozen for up to a year, and red cells, which have a shelf life of 42 days.

The UIHC uses 18,000 units of blood per year and collects an average 5,000-6,000 units, Overton said.

UI freshman Ben Gilbert, who donated blood last week, said he would do it again "in a second" to help victims of the attacks. "If it helps anybody, I mean, why wouldn't you do it?" he asked.

UI freshman Beth Horstman donated blood in high school but had a bad experience with the process.

"It hurt and was very uncomfortable," she said. "But I'd do it again to help out the people in New York City."

The next Red Cross blood drive is scheduled for Oct. 12 at the Old Capitol Town Center from 12:30-5:30 p.m.

Progressives to stage fair, rally

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

The first fair and rally sponsored by a coalition of liberal student and community groups will be held today, coming at what organizers say is a favorable time for local activism.

With the threat of war hovering over the country, group leaders said, they hope many students and local residents will make a stop at their tables on the Pentacrest to learn about the activities each organization has to offer the community and the nation.

"I think the Progressive Coalition is more important now," said coalition member Stephanie Shore. "The more people pulling for peace, the better."

Iowa Mobilization for Global Justice, Students Against Sweatshops, and the UI Civil Liberties Union are among the organizations that will have informational tables set up on the east lawn of the Pentacrest from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Local musician Kathryn Musilek will open a rally that is scheduled to follow the fair.

"The way it's been organized is generally to let new students know what sort of groups are out there on campus, and ideally to get more people involved," said UI graduate student Matt Killmeier, a member of SAS.

The event was not intentionally scheduled to follow the Sept. 11 terrorist attack on the United States, Shore said. But UISG President Nick Klenske said it would be interesting to see if the incident induces more students than organizers might have expected to attend the rally, seeking ways to offer some type of contribution.

Groups with current issues, such as SAS, were reserved three- to five-minute speaking slots during the rally. An open microphone will begin at 6:30 p.m., allowing progressive groups that did not receive invitations to speak an opportunity to promote their organizations.

Also, Klenske is scheduled to speak about a proposed 15 to 18 percent tuition hike.

Some of the organizations, including Iowans for Peace in Iraq, are expected to speak about the terrorist act on the United States. "Progressives want a peaceful solution to terrorism," Shore said.

She said she is concerned that the rally might become controversial, similar to the politically charged prayer vigil held on the Pentacrest on the evening of Sept. 11.

"We want it to be a peaceful rally," Shore said. "It's fine if you have other views, but we don't want them expressed in a destructive manner."

First introduced at the university last spring by Klenske and UISG Vice President Dan Rossi, the Progressive Coalition is dedicated to positive political and social change at the university, in the community, nationally, and internationally.

Though he hasn't been that involved with the coalition this year, Klenske said, he is impressed with its progress in organizing the rally.

"That's why the coalition was formed — for these similar groups to coordinate their efforts and help each other on different issues," he said.

Shore said the coalition hopes to start a newsletter via the Internet. It would include a brief from each group, informing the public on its current events.

Amish man admits raping girls

Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE, Ohio — An Amish man charged with raping two girls pleaded guilty to sexual battery in a plea bargain that would require him to receive five years of treatment at a center for sex offenders.

Norman Byler, 69, of Birmingham initially was charged with 11 counts of rape and gross sexual imposition involving two girls in his extended family. They were 3 and 5 at the time.

He had been scheduled to go on trial this week, but instead, he pleaded guilty Monday to lesser charges, five counts of sexual battery.

The case marked a rare example of Amish crimes being prosecuted in secular courts, county prosecutor Keith Plummer said.

"Part of the difficulty of the case was that the Amish community felt like it should be able to deal with that within the church," Plummer said.

Defense attorney Dianne Menashe said her client would be able to continue practicing his religion at the treatment center, where he will not be required to stay.

"If he were to go to prison and have to shave his hair and wear prison garb, that would pretty much kill Norman," she said. A judge who helped craft the deal still needs to formally approve it.

The assaults happened between June and October 1999, according to court records. Sheriff's detectives had been alerted by non-Amish neighbors who said they saw one of the children bleeding.

An Amish bishop had ordered Byler shunned, and Byler's children had argued that further prosecution by secular authorities would do no good.

"Typically, within their faith, if someone commits something that [the community] deems morally wrong, it issues a punishment, then forgives the person after the punishment is served," Plummer said.

Byler wrote in a note to a judge last year that he had repented for his actions. He said he needed to be treated for a "nervous condition."

He was ruled incompetent to stand trial last year and confined to a psychiatric hospital, but a Guernsey County judge in July ruled him competent and ordered the trial to go forward.

Byler faces sentencing Oct. 30. The prosecutor has recommended that Byler be enrolled for five years in the sex-offender program.

Byler's daughter, Katie Yoder, and son-in-law, Tobie Yoder, told the Columbus Dispatch after he was charged last year that they confronted Byler when the girls began to talk about having sexual contact with him.

The family had sought mental-health treatment for him, and Tobie Yoder said he was responding to medication.

"We don't want him to be in jail," he said. "It won't do him any good."

Yoder said that the Amish community was handling the situation in its way and that he regretted that neighbors called authorities.

UI human-research probe closes

The UI has been cleared of all violations concerning research on human subjects after a two-year government investigation.

The U.S. Office of Human Research Protection began the investigation after receiving a letter from the Food and Drug Administration stating that the university had mishandled certain administrative procedures while performing research on human subjects, said David Wynes, the assistant vice president for Research.

The federal office stated that the university has "adequately" addressed questions and concerns.

The FDA cited UI researchers for minor violations in 1992, 1995, and 1998. The infractions were mainly due to changes in the procedure of documentation, Wynes said.

"Obviously, this wasn't a priority," he said of the investigation. "This was based on things that were being done four years ago. There wasn't a concern about risk subjects. These were administrative details."

One violation stated that the university had not developed a standardized system to modify language used in its research documentation. The university has since developed a plan to consider minor changes, such as clarified wording in documenting research, the human-research office said.

The FDA contacted the human-research office in 1999 regarding the university's infractions. The school corrected its violations soon after, but the investigation was left open.

Woman charged in alleged Hy-Vee heist

A Cedar Rapids woman who allegedly stole more than $500 worth of groceries from a local store and eluded authorities for a day was arrested earlier this week.

Laura Hulbert, 37, was arrested and charged with third-degree theft and reckless driving Monday after she allegedly loaded her car with groceries from a cart at Hy-Vee, 812 S. First Ave., Sunday afternoon, Johnson County District Court records show.

A store manager reported that a white female was leaving the store without paying for her groceries, the court records said. The manager approached Hulbert as she was loading the items into her 1988 Toyota Camry and warned her that she needed to return to the store if she did not have a receipt, the records said.

Hulbert allegedly climbed into her vehicle and pulled away with the manager holding onto her door, "crashing through" a shopping cart behind the vehicle, the records said. The manager escaped unharmed.

Cedar Rapids police located and arrested Hulbert Monday and found approximately half of the groceries in the trunk of her vehicle, the records said. Hulbert confessed to taking the groceries out of the store but not to putting them in the cart, according to the court records.

Cedar Rapids officials charged Hulbert with driving under suspension because of an unrelated incident, said Cedar Rapids police Lt. Jerry Potter. Cedar Rapids police obtained 46 items, which included several "meat and liquor" products, Potter said. Police are holding the items as evidence, he said.

The Hy-Vee manager identified Hulbert in a police line-up, according to court records. She is being held in the Johnson County Jail on a $5,000 cash-only bond for the theft charge. Her preliminary hearing is scheduled for Sept. 28 at 2 p.m.

Third-degree theft is an aggravated misdemeanor punishable by a maximum of no more than two years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Boeing expected to lay off more than 30,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Boeing is planning to lay off 20 to 30 percent of its commercial-airline work force — roughly 31,000 people — as a result of the terrorists attacks, a congressional source said Tuesday.

The aircraft maker will make an announcement today, said the source, who spoke on the condition of anonymity. The company would not announce specific locations for the layoffs, but it was telling lawmakers they are expected to be implemented by early 2002.

A Boeing spokesman would not comment Tuesday night.

Roughly 93,000 people work for Boeing's commercial-airline sector, much of which is centered on the company's former headquarters in Seattle. Boeing's stock has plunged since markets reopened this week. On Monday, the first regular day of trading the price fell $7.60. The price was down $2.66, to $33.14, when trading closed Tuesday.

China braces for WTO jolt; millions may lose jobs

By Joe McDonald
Associated Press

BEIJING — They've had years to prepare, but China's companies, farmers, and industrial workers face wrenching changes once they enter the free-market World Trade Organization, letting loose a flood of imports and foreign competition. Foreign companies were exultant Tuesday after a WTO panel cleared the way for China to join after 15 years of negotiations. Its membership terms require Beijing to ease barriers to imports and foreign investment in Chinese firms.

China's manufacturers fill store shelves worldwide with appliances, sporting goods, and other low-cost products. But two-thirds of its 1.26 billion people live in the countryside, where the impact of cheaper farm goods from abroad could be devastating. Millions of people working on inefficient, labor-intensive farms are expected to be thrown out of work. Beijing has kept prices paid for their crops artificially high to shift money to the countryside and reduce unrest over rural poverty. "Even at present prices, farmers in China can hardly survive. I can't imagine how far the prices will fall" after WTO entry, said Zhou Jianming, the president of the Henan Jinxiang Wheat Group, a flour processor in the central city of Zhengzhou with 400 employees. After recent subsidy cuts, Zhou said, Chinese wheat prices have plunged to $135 per ton — equal to the current price of Canadian wheat but an all-time low for China. Food-processing companies in the farming heartland may have to close and move to the coast, closer to supplies of cheaper foreign ingredients, Zhou said. Other big losers are expected to be state industries that are saddled with debt, pensions, and old technology. They have laid off millions of employees in a struggle to become profitable. Winners should include foreign importers, Chinese entrepreneurs, and high-tech companies. The outcome could be a radically different China in coming decades, with a bigger private economy and leaner, profitable state companies. "Winners will be those industries that open themselves up to the marketplace earlier rather than later. It's already proven here in China that the industries that were opened earliest, such as hotels and consumer goods, have been most successful," said Patrick Powers, the director of China operations for the U.S.-China Business Council, which represents 225 American companies. WTO membership also could increase pressure on the communist government to allow political reform, said Cao Siyuan, a Chinese business consultant and prominent advocate of freer markets. "By joining WTO and pushing ahead with reform and opening up, the urgency of political reform will become increasingly evident," Cao said. "In the end, political reform will have to suit economic reform and catch up." The decision by the panel in Geneva on Monday opens the way for both China and Taiwan to be formally approved for membership at a meeting of trade ministers planned for Doha, Qatar, in November. The two would likely become full WTO members early next year, following ratification by their own legislatures. Membership in WTO will give Beijing more reliable access to markets for its $200 billion a year in exports. Other WTO members would be required to submit trade disputes to a referee panel instead of imposing unilateral measures.

Taliban reacts harshly to hints of attack

Associated Press

Border guards on Tuesday observe Afghan territory controlled by the Taliban on the Tajikistan-Afghanistan border near the Tajik town of Pyandzh.

AFGHANISTAN

Since taking control of most of Afghanistan in 1996, the Taliban have declared holy wars against the northern-based anti-Taliban alliance, Russia, and Iran, but never the United States.

The Taliban government is only officially recognized by three countries: Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, and the United Arab Emirates.

The Taliban's foreign minister, Wakil Ahmed Muttawakil, condemned the violence within hours of the attacks in New York and Washington but said it would have been impossible for bin Laden to carry out the assaults. Bin Laden lacks the facilities for such an elaborate operation, he said.

Since then, the Taliban leader, Mullah Mohammed Omar, who has declared himself head of all Muslims, has defended bin Laden and accused the United States of pointing the finger in his direction because its investigators have been unable to come up with a real suspect.

Many Pakistanis living along the 1,500-mile border with Afghanistan promised to join the jihad against America, and possibly their own government, if there are retaliatory strikes.

"America is putting a gun on Pakistan's shoulder to fire at Afghanistan. The Pakistani people cannot accept this," said Haji Abdul Razzaq, a mechanic in the western city of Peshawar, near the Afghan border.

On Tuesday, some 3,000 people in the Pakistani city of Karachi demonstrated near a mosque that runs a religious school that many Taliban leaders have attended, warning of more attacks. Many carried posters of bin Laden portrayed as a hero.

"Until now, only one World Trade Center has been destroyed," demonstrators shouted in unison in English. "But we will destroy all of America. We will die for Taliban. We will die for Islam. We will die for Osama."

Bin Laden and his alleged network of Islamic militants are the prime suspects in last week's airborne assaults on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

The United States believes bin Laden has played a role in a number of devastating attacks, including the 1998 bombings of two U.S. embassies in East Africa in which 231 people were killed.

Bin Laden, who was stripped of Saudi citizenship and has been living in Afghanistan since 1996, is accused by Washington of running a global terrorist network from his bases inside the war-ravaged Central Asian nation.

Israel, Palestinians inch toward truce

ISRAEL

Even if his men came under fire, the Palestinian leader said, they were to show "maximum restraint."

Later Tuesday, Arafat met with Palestinian security commanders in Gaza to discuss the truce. He briefed West Bank commanders by phone, aides said.

Israeli Defense Minister Binyamin Ben-Eliezer ordered a halt to all military strikes against the Palestinians. Such strikes in the past have included incursions into Palestinian territory and targeted killings of suspected Palestinian militants.

"If Arafat really wants to calm the area, we want to help, to give Arafat a chance," said Defense Ministry spokesman Yarden Vatikay, adding that Israel remained skeptical about Arafat's intentions.

Israeli Foreign Ministry official Gideon Meir said that under the new rules, soldiers would not respond to Palestinian fire unless lives were in danger.

Hydraulics lab lays off two workers

LAYOFFS

The layoffs should be seen as controversial, explaining that they were the result of a careful two-year study of the direction in which the laboratory is moving. And because the facility — one of the nation's premier and oldest laboratories in fluids research and engineering — is financed strictly through grants and contracts, permanent employment is not guaranteed, he said.

"When we see that the economic climate is such that we don't foresee a need in certain areas, we have to adjust our manpower accordingly," he said.

Union upset

But the layoffs were controversial, said members of a UI employees' union, who protested them at the IMU last week as the state of Iowa Board of Regents met inside the building. AFSCME Local 12 has filed a grievance in King's case, asserting that proper guidelines were not followed.

If university officials and union representatives cannot agree on whether proper procedure was followed, an arbitrator will have to decide.

The union is also upset that one machinist will be left doing the remaining work, and neither of the two management personnel of approximately 15 full-time staff members at the laboratory lost their jobs, said Union President Ed Alcock.

"If you are going to cut staff, it should be on all sides," he said. "And the administration won't even explain to people why these two management positions remain."

Temporary employees also let go

According to the union's contract with the state, in the event of layoffs, the newest employees should be the ones to go, said Kevin Ward, the university's director of employee and labor relations. "The process worked as it was supposed to," he said.

Temporary employees in the same classification must also be laid off in order to let a full-time worker go, according to the contract, officials said.

In this case, that forced seven temporary employees — including five that worked at Hancher Auditorium — to be laid off, Alcock said.

Despite an $18.7 million budget cut from the state, Ward said, this case marks the only in which he has had to develop a layoff plan this year.

What's more common is that employees are reassigned to different jobs in their same classification category, he said. A "relatively small number of people" have been reassigned this year, causing minimal disruption, he said.

"Obviously, our goal is to find placement and be able to retain staff," Ward said, explaining that the university presented employment options to the men when notifying them they would lose their jobs.

Departments have worked hard to minimize the effect of the $18.7 million budget cut on personnel, he said. The cuts have forced 107 jobs to be eliminated through attrition. Officials have not ruled out more layoffs, but they say such cuts will be used only as a last resort.

"You should be able to explain [layoff] decisions should there be a claim of improper intent or treatment," warned then-director of Human Resources Robert Foldesi in an April 26 memo to deans, directors, and department heads.

Arm Public Safety with Tasers, UISG says

UISG

Currently, Public Safety officers are armed with pepper spray, a bullet-proof vest, and a night stick for their protection. UI is the only Big Ten school without lethal weapons on campus, Green said.

Because of the potentially dangerous calls the officers answer, some have left the force in the past because they have not felt safe, Green said during a presentation to the student assembly Tuesday night.

Green cited the case of when his officers found Jonathon Memmer — who has been charged with two murders in Iowa City — in the UI Field House.

"When officers found him, he turned around and said 'I'm the one you're looking for. I'm not armed.' And the officers thought, 'We aren't armed, either.' I find that chilling."

After examining alternatives to lethal weapons, Tasers seemed to be the best bet, Green said.

"Air Tasers would provide Public Safety officers with another option than those currently available to them," Green said. "An armed assailant could be stopped from harming others or himself."

The difference between the Iowa City police and Public Safety is the police officers carry lethal weapons. "Our officers are trained the same as law officers," Green said.

UISG also decided to support

Public Safety request to change its name to University Police in an attempt to make people realize the department also has the authority to stop people and arrest them.

In other action, student leaders voted to oppose a proposed tuition hike of between 15.5 and 18 percent. They also voted to support the creation of a set tuition rate, under which students would pay the same rate their entire academic career.

Consider the consequences

In the wake of the attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, President Bush has declared war on terrorism. He has singled out Osama bin Laden as the principle offender and has stated his intention to use whatever force is necessary to punish both bin Laden and the Taliban government of Afghanistan for aiding him. While Bush's resolve is admirable, he must seriously consider the consequences before going on the offensive against Afghanistan and terrorist organizations worldwide. Rash military action against Afghanistan and the Taliban would be a disaster and would only result in more casualties.

First of all, Bush has only declared that he will fight a war against terrorism; he has not said how he plans to win. Right now, everyone is blinded by rage, and we want to lash out at someone. We want to punish those responsible. However, a war of punishment is unwinnable. How do we know when it is over? How many terrorist leaders must we assassinate? How many terrorist-friendly governments must we topple? If this is what Bush wants, then he needs to be precise about whom he intends to punish and how. Otherwise, we are fighting a war with no goal. Without a goal, we can only fight until we exhaust our rage and are unable to stomach further casualties and atrocities.

Second, right now, forgotten by a world focused on terrorism, eight Christian aid workers sit in an Afghan prison. Two Americans, two Australians, and four Germans are awaiting their trial on charges of spreading Christianity. If the United States goes ahead with its plans to attack Afghanistan, we will be signing the death warrants of these people, whose only crime was compassion for the suffering people of Afghanistan. Thousands of people have already died as a result of the terrorist attacks, but we could not stop those. If these eight people die, their blood will be on our hands because we could not swallow our rage.

Most important, the main casualty of this war will be our freedom. Already, government officials are looking into lifting the ban on CIA assassinations along with allowing unprecedented domestic spying. Where is the vaunted freedom and justice that America stands for? Where is "innocent until proven guilty"? These terrorists need to stand trial for their crimes, not die from a bullet in the back while getting the morning paper. The government is using a horrific crime as justification for an infinitely more horrific solution. Are we truly willing to sacrifice everything the United States stands for in order to punish those who wish to destroy it?

Rather than uniting behind our president in his calls for war, we need to step back and think rationally. Does Bush have America's best interests in mind, or is he simply acting on the fear that we all feel? Are we truly willing to shoulder the consequences of this war of revenge? We would surely be sending U.S. soldiers to their deaths, along with any innocent civilians who get caught in the crossfire. And our ultimate reward for this carnage? The death of the principles that make America the greatest nation on Earth.

Dissent

Bring the enemy to its knees

We dare not tempt them with our weakness.

— John F. Kennedy

The attacks made against the United States on Sept. 11 were acts of war perpetrated by an enemy that has already publicly declared war upon us. The individuals that made this attack have been called cowards by various people in the media and Bush administration — but this is not true. It is more proper to think of these people as disciplined, fanatical warriors who are willing to give their lives for the destruction of the evil Satan, America. We must not underestimate this enemy.

Parallels have been drawn between the attacks of Sept. 11 and the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor by the Japanese. The response that America had to the bombing of Pearl Harbor should be a model for our actions now. In 1941, there was no talk about bringing Japan to justice for its attack, as there is now about the terrorist attack; rather, our country vowed to bring the Japanese Empire to its knees. Our country needs to take a similar vow today. Our efforts should not be aimed at justice or revenge. They should be aimed at bringing the enemy to his knees.

And so the questions now arise — Who is the enemy? And how do we bring him to his knees?

The enemy is radical Islam. Radical Islam is different from the Islam worshiped around the world by millions of peaceful followers. Radical Islam is a fringe political movement that is based purely on hatred for the West. It substitutes political rage for holy reverence and endorses efforts to destroy societies, such as Israel and America, that it sees as corrupting. There is no diplomatic course of action that can win peace from these people.

Our war against terrorism should target the organizations in Lebanon, Afghanistan, and Damascus that provide sanctuary and support for terrorists. It should also focus upon deterring the governments of Iran, Iraq, Syria, and Libya from sponsoring terrorist activities. The message our country sends should be clear: Any country that harbors, supports, or provides sanctuary for terrorists will be treated as the enemy.

Letter to the Editor

Action and reaction

As a people, we are agreed that these awful and tragic events have necessitated some kind of war against terrorism. But how do we wage such a war, and what will victory look like? Terror is an emotion, not a country, so a war against terrorism must be a battle waged within the hearts and minds of humanity. As we seek military solutions in the coming days, let us not lose sight of the fact that if we are fighting for the ideal that humans can live in civilized harmony as a single race, we cannot obtain our objective purely by force. We must distinguish the appropriate directions to strike out with a fist from the ones where we are better served by extending an open hand, or else each evil will spawn greater ones until all the goodness in humanity becomes a casualty to "us versus them" mentality. Right now, there is so much hype and hyperbole about Pearl Harbor and war that few seem to recognize the stakes involved: A global conflict could leave not thousands, but millions, dead. I realize we absolutely have to do whatever it takes to neutralize Osama bin Laden and those who work closely with him, but this means we must seek intelligent and fundamental solutions, which may be more challenging to our resources than bombs and bullets. Military might and diplomatic savvy must be meted out in exquisite balance, and we must not make enemies where we could have found valuable allies; otherwise, we may find ourselves in either of two horrendous scenarios. One is an extended war fought along religious lines that could dwarf the disaster of Vietnam, and the other a more limited campaign that would foment even greater hatred and future acts of terror. I think these can be avoided, but only if we, as a democracy, keep firmly in our minds the political, and the human, dimension in the Arab world. If we focus only on our own desire for retribution, we may find ourselves in a very different war from the one we intended.

Ken Gayley
 Iowa City resident

In the past week, the nation has been rocked. Yet, it seems the university administration couldn't care less. I have received the e-mails that President Mary Sue Coleman has sent out. The gesture is appreciated; however, the words that they contained I found cold. How can you ask anyone to continue in a normal way when the essence of what it means to be an American has come under attack? While watching the latest events unfold on television, the announcement that the University of Northern Iowa canceled classes on Sept. 14 from 1-2 p.m. in honor of the National Day of Mourning came across. The UI only asked people to gather at noon, if possible. Why couldn't this be made possible? Is it not evident that this event has affected the people of the university. It is not something that will just go away. It will be with all of us for the rest of our lives.

In the middle of celebrating the unity and resolve of America in crisis, the public seems to have forgotten its morals. This weekend in a NY Times poll, more than 50 percent of Americans supported "retaliation even at the cost of thousands of civilian lives." In other words, half of Americans support murdering innocent people in another country to strike back at an enemy. Osama bin Laden would probably be very pleased if Muslim support for his methods were as high. Miguel Sorias' letter on Monday said it all; this is not a mythic battle between good and evil. While his actions are despicable, bin Laden is not the first to be troubled by U.S. foreign policy with good reason.

The immorality of it all

"What's up, my Christian Coalition sister?" chirps my Gore-worshipping friend Kristina when I slide into my seat at our Monday lecture. I am becoming fond of it, but I still cringe at her nickname for me.

On Sept. 13 at the Nadas concert (a seminal night in my life, I assure you) the doorman recognized me (great — here we go). "You're that woman who wrote about virginity — we talk about your column in class." (I wrote about virginity?)

Friday, I defended my non-status as a member of the media in my discussion section. Believe me — I like the kitchen, and I love the heat. However, I pine for anonymity lost and a time when people didn't look at me incredulously because I am nothing like whatever image they'd conjured.

My social life and political activism are incalculably separate, my faith and political conservatism are inexorably intertwined.

While I frequently socialize through politics, I don't limit myself to one side of the spectrum when it comes to relationships, to human interaction. Sophisticated liberal friends of mine, who shall remain nameless for their own good, recognize this and respect my hard work, as I respect theirs. Not everyone in Iowa City is respectful and takes the time to understand that what I believe does not reflect or restrict my social life. I'm only a columnist for one day a week.

I am rather political in my budding professional life, if you look at my résumé. I've managed two Iowa Statehouse campaigns, spearheaded several student groups, and joined many Republican coalitions. To satisfy an interest in journalism (and to win a bet), I applied at the DI. (I'll never drink that much tequila again.) Contrary to popular belief, the DI is not obligated to have one conservative writer. I see my column as a conservative life raft in a sea of liberals. Mr. Jangles and I are just floating among the flotsam of exponentially emotional, irrationally contemptible crusades to preserve the immoral status quo. (As a functional illiterate, I dictate this column to my typist, a chimp named Mr. Jangles. Mr. Jangles is a nonunion primate. He does not work under sweatshop conditions. Do not form a student club to obtain him a living wage.)

Holly Eggleston

This past weekend, I attended a Christian Coalition dinner in Des Moines with my fellow College Republican Central Committee members. Hearing people freely expressing ideas about faith, capitalism, and democracy was so refreshing I almost wept as I drove back to the People's Republic of Iowa City. I became a Christian in the born-again sense when I was younger, at church camp. It wasn't a blinding baptismal; it was a quiet acceptance of Jesus as my savior. By no means am I living an exemplary life. I am not comfortable witnessing the intricacies of my faith, but it is a source of great comfort in my life and influences the way I view policy. Faith carried me through the tragedies of last week.

My faith has something, but not everything, to do with a stance I've added to previously: Abortion is immoral. I'm not really sold on the scientific or statistical facts. Just because something is protected by law doesn't mean it is correct and excusable by moral standards. I have yet to see evidence of why women should abort comparable to the evidence of adoption. (Spare me your "evidential" communiqués — remember, I can't read. I don't listen well, either.) My ex-boyfriend, a conservative friend, and a former co-worker of mine are adopted. I had a drink with my ex last week. I sit next to my friend at College Republicans every Tuesday. My former coworker was married a month ago with her adoptive and natural parents in attendance.

Abortion is immoral — but so are so many of the other contemptible crusades that I will tackle this year. Allowing poor people to remain dependent on the government, rather than themselves, is immoral. Making hard-working Americans pay high taxes is immoral as well. Ignoring the hungry in your town while gallivanting off to tromp on the American values of capitalism and democracy at insipid protests is arguably immoral. A catch-and-release policy for hippies is not immoral, merely trivial.

I'll end this week's installment with an anecdote, so you can get back to class. I once clipped a cartoon featuring a man asking God why he hasn't sent people with cures for AIDS, cancer, world hunger. God shot back, "I did — and you aborted them." Ever wonder how many adopted people you would know if their mothers hadn't aborted them?

Holly Eggleston is a DI columnist.

Don Juan and Automatik have played this game for a while.

Five years ago, a stumpy black kid from St. Louis met up with a towering, skinny, poindexter glasses-wearing white kid from Sheridan, Ill. Since then, it's been all hip-hop. In 2000, Iowa City was exposed to the duo's first joint work, Two Many Sheets. Their latest release, Throwing Chicken Bones At The Crackhouse, revamps the Committee's crusade to bring innovative hip-hop to the Iowa City collective.

DI: When did you start taking this whole hip-hop thing seriously?

Auto: I was 16 when I started this sh*t. I had no clue how much stuff went into it. I quickly learned that the limo wasn't just gonna show up. We'd have to be on a whole other level.

DI: You guys have a song called "Englert Theatre" on this release. What's the significance of this track?

Auto: We got to give some props to the Englert and everything it's done for the community.

DI: How does the new album differ from Two Many Sheets?

Auto: There's an ass-load more material on our latest. Our sound quality is a hell of a lot better. We've grown a lot since our last album.

DI: Have you been in contact with any record labels in the music industry?

Auto: We have. But you gotta sell units to get the play. The music business is the shadiest on the planet. They will eat you up if you're not careful.

DI: Isn't going big-time every rapper's dream?

Auto: It's a trade-off, though. You can take the slow route and develop your sound, or you can toss yourself out into the wild, make money right away, and risk getting eaten alive.

DI: What is your favorite track off this album?

Juan: "Compelled to Stare" was a trip to make. Auto was screaming all these nasty things from the apartment. The kids downstairs thought somebody was getting it ...

DI: Your sound is about as far as you can get from gangster rap. Why haven't you jumped on the hard-core sound, as many others have?

Don Juan and Automatik from The Committee pose in this provocative picture that eventually became the artwork for their new album.

Juan: Thugs are super; I'm just not a thug.

Auto: I've never had to bust-a-cap in somebody's ass. I've lived through some bad situations. But I prefer not to dwell on negatives.

DI: So how would you label your sound?

Juan: If you want to get into the crevices of what The Committee is all about, listen to the album. It's what we know, see, experience, from dealing with girlfriends to assholes. A lot of what engulfs hip-hop dialogue today is what has happened to these rappers in the past. Most of these rappers are not rapping about sh*t that's happening to them now. There may be stuff that we are dealing with right now that we're not talking about.

DI: I've got to ask this question. Automatik, what is it like being a white rapper?

Juan: I thought he was Korean.

Auto: It's weird. There's a ton of white rappers, and most of them suck. Coming from a standpoint of someone who does it, I can recognize when a lyricist is off-beat, off-key, or choppy.

DI: Have you ever been confronted, being a minority in the hip-hop world?

Auto: I've seen my share of Suge Knights. I prefer not to be around some situations.

CD Review: Throwing Chicken Bones At The Crackhouse.

Local producer Jethro supplies impressive beat production for The Committee's sophomore release, Throwing Chicken Bones At The Crackhouse, an album that will leave heads peeking in the direction of Iowa City. The majority of cuts feature a fresh sound somewhere between Chicago house harmonies and the ballistic flowing of Atlanta-bred Outkast.

The track "Englert Theatre" features a vibrant array of funk under Automatik's machine-gun spitting. A sensuous female vocal guides the melodic chorus. "Don't Lock the Bottom Lock" entangles the listener in a soul-tlingling guitar-plucking and trumpet-wheezing lullaby. The message is clear, "Let me in girl so we can get our groove on." It's a delicious soundtrack for a candle-lit rendezvous.

The onslaught of impressive hip-hop tracks continues. "What's a Mic in the Source?" implements intellectual dialogue by The Committee guys. Outkast-esque flows again from the speakers over a building techno beat.

Further noteworthy tracks include the title track, "Throwing Chicken Bones at the Crackhouse," "Make Up Your Mind," "Raw," and "Compelled to Stare."

Three of the 12 tracks are a bit flaky; either the beat is too cluttered, the flows run off and on, or the flows run on in a monotone voice.

It's apparent The Committee was granted supreme beat production by Jethro and Tack-Fu, a characteristically impossible to overlook. Even so, from a local standpoint, these meeces blow any other local hip-hop phenom act out of the water. Keep an eye out for these guys, they are going places.

Superchunk shuts up

Superchunk has been the next big thing for 10 years. Not only does that lend credibility to the perpetual underdog, but also an identifiable point of view.

Here's to Shutting Up is Superchunk's eighth studio album, and it means what it says. The buzzing and busy signature guitar sound is still there on songs such as "Rainy Day" and "Art Class," but it is no longer necessarily always cranked to 11.

This album is about saying more by saying less: "Here's to shutting up/at least until the wheels are off the ground." The melodies of the songs are left to stand on their own with a minimum of musical adornment.

Sure, the car-crash guitars are still there when you need them, but so is the string section. Some of the arrangements of these songs are outright orchestral, and by all means brave. For instance, even a lap steel guitar makes an appearance on "Phone Sex." And it works.

Mac Macaughan is still singing vulnerable songs about being at odds in general. While generally singing about dissatisfaction, it's with more of a tone of ironic commentary or even narrative rather than anger or sadness. The results are bitter-sweet songs such as "Florida's on Fire" and "Out on the Wing."

Superchunk remain one of the better unrecognized bands with a characteristic sound and a fiercely independent stance — this album, for instance, is released on its self-run label, Merge. More importantly, after 11 years of rock 'n' roll, the band continues to grow musically, putting out one of its better albums to date.

Flemister addresses issues facing DC

Zeron Flemister lives and practices 30 minutes from the Pentagon, and the former Iowa football player and current Washington Redskin says the Sept. 11 attack on the nation's military hub is very real. DI reporter Melinda Mawdsley talked with the tight end about coming to terms with the tragedy, how the Redskins have helped those in need, and adjusting to East Coast habits.

DI: It's been a week since terrorists attacked the United States. Where were you when you found out and what was your reaction?

Flemister: Even though I play for the Washington Redskins, we practice in Virginia and play in Maryland, but it's still close enough to affect our area. I was at home, and one of my friends from Iowa called to tell me. I didn't believe him, so I went and turned on the TV. It was true.

DI: How did it affect the way your team went about things?

Flemister: Tuesday's an off-day in the NFL, so we practiced on [Sept. 12] but the team canceled [Sept. 13]'s practice. [Sept. 14], as a team, we went to the Arlington Cemetery by the Pentagon and had a memorial service. It was totally different seeing it up close from seeing it on TV. Seeing it earlier in the week, a lot of the players were talking about it, and a lot of people were in disbelief.

DI: Was it a wise idea to postpone all NFL games Sunday and Monday?

Flemister: I've got mixed feelings. A lot of guys around here do, too. On one side, it would have been a nice release. On the other hand, football is not high on the priority list compared to the tragedy that has happened.

DI: Did the team do anything to help out first-hand?

Flemister: On [Sept. 14], we went to the Pentagon and helped with handing out water to the workers that were sifting through rubble. Darrell Green and some other players with foundations are trying to get together and raise money for the victims. The NFL is doing something similar.

DI: The Redskins are icons in the area. What do you think your helping out meant to the people there?

Flemister: Most people believe professional athletes are selfish. When you see some of us helping out in the community, I think it inspires

Hawks enjoy a rest

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

When the Iowa football team faces off with Penn State Sept. 29, it will be the first competition it will have had in three weeks.

That's a long time in college-football terms, especially if your team was riding a two-game winning streak, outscoring opponents 95-19, before the break.

After having Iowa's tilt with Iowa State postponed last week, Hawkeyes coach Kirk Ferentz said in Tuesday's Big Ten teleconference that no coach would want three consecutive weeks off but that his team could use this time to heal.

"It's altered our schedules; we kind of had a rhythm going," he said of the time off. "But this will be an opportunity for us to get healed and polish our football team."

Iowa hasn't had any major injuries yet this season, but some Hawks have had a few bumps and bruises. Offensive lineman Alonzo Cunningham missed Iowa's first two games with an ankle injury, and Ferentz did not say whether he would be back for the Penn State game. Fellow lineman Eric Steinbach and safety Bob Sanders sat out Iowa's last game against Miami of Ohio, but Ferentz said they likely would have been in action against the Cyclones had the Iowa State game been played.

The time off could help heal many of those injuries and will also give Iowa's backups time to improve on a performance against Miami of Ohio that did not impress Ferentz.

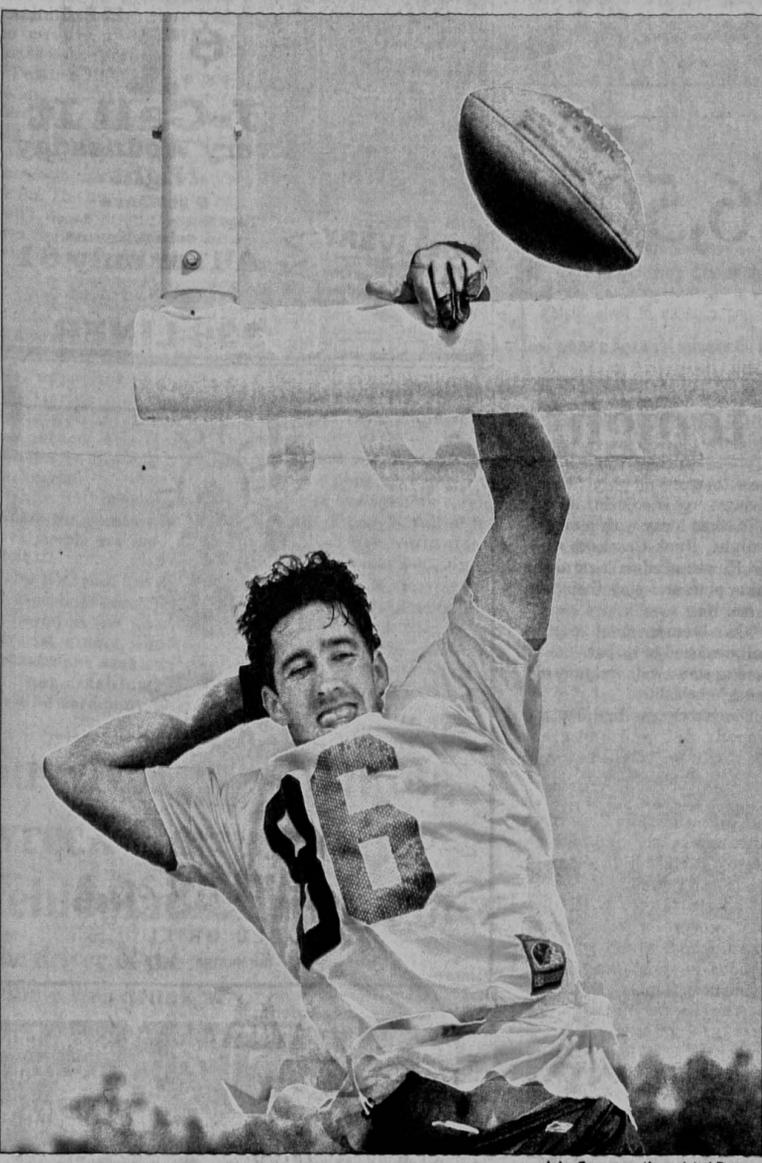

"We're going to rest up the starting players and work the younger guys a little bit," he said. "Our reserves didn't perform very well in the last game, so the timing of this couldn't be better."

"Maybe we'll have a little

In deciding to make up last week's games, the league will have to debate reducing playoff teams to eight

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The NFL will play a full 16-game schedule this season, making up last week's missed games in the first week of January.

And while it may still reduce the number of playoff teams from 12 to eight, Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said Tuesday that full playoffs are still a possibility.

Tagliabue said the league's competition committee had voted unanimously to keep the 16-game format, switching the games called off last weekend to the weekend of Jan. 5-7, when wild-card games had been scheduled.

But he said the committee is still looking at ways to keep the normal complement of 12 playoff teams rather than eight. That would mean three division winners and three wild-card teams in each conference would make the playoffs, rather than the three winners and just one wild card.

"This would be the best of both worlds. If they can keep the 16-game schedule and the six wild cards, then everybody's happy. It's just back to business," said coach Mike Sherman of Green Bay, one of many teams whose playoff chances would be hurt badly if the NFL cut back on wild cards.

"I'll be curious to see what follows after this," added Andy Reid of Philadelphia, another team that might be affected. "I'd hate to disrupt the playoffs in that situation.... I'm sure they'll come up with an answer for it. They understand the importance of the playoffs."

When the teams return, they are likely to have the regular officials back.

NFL sources, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the executive committee of the NFL Referees Association was voting by e-mail on a proposal by the league that would end the lockout that lasted through the final game of preseason and the first game of the regular season. If it is approved by 11 a.m. CDT today, the regular officials will be back for Sept. 23's games.

As for the playoffs, Tagliabue said:

"We continue to work on keeping six division winners, six wild cards, and our entire postseason format intact. Several options have been presented to us in recent days that would help us accomplish that. If we cannot resolve our entire postseason lineup in a satisfactory fashion, we then will go to a system of six division winners and two wild-card teams for this one season only."

One option would be to move the Super Bowl, to be played in New Orleans, from Jan. 27 to Feb. 3. There is only a one-week break this year after the championship games.

One way to do that would be to switch the Super Bowl and the National Auto Dealers Convention, scheduled for the next week. The Pro Bowl, scheduled for Feb. 4, would either be moved back a week or played as scheduled without players from Super Bowl teams.

Another option would be to schedule most of the potential playoff teams for Saturday, Jan. 5, then play the wild-card

'They threatened if we would win, they would kill us.'

— Rita Buck-Crockett, Iowa volleyball coach

Traveling on eggshells

Melinda Mawdsley • The Daily Iowan

The screaming fans come in droves. Smiles and cameras adorn the majority, but some hidden within the masses are displeased about the presence of those dressed up in red, white, and blue.

For the thousands of American athletes who travel or live overseas, their reception is either open arms or angry eyes — a lesson they learn quickly.

Ask Iowa volleyball coach Rita Buck-Crockett. She was a member of the USA National and Olympic Team from 1978-84, a period when tensions ran high among America and the world's communist and autocratic governments.

During her six-year stint with the national team, it was not uncommon for Team USA to have armed guards as escorts. Prior to the 1980 Olympics, which America boycotted, the USA Volleyball team went to Russia only to have one of its members detained in prison while her forgotten visa was wired over.

But Buck-Crockett said the heightened security was a relief, not a distraction. She grew to appreciate many countries' efforts to protect the American team as it traveled and played.

"We wore red, white, and blue with USA all over our backs," Buck-Crockett said. "You know there are countries that don't like you."

In Lima, Peru, during the 1982 World Championships, Buck-Crockett recalls the menacing phone calls with a horrifying message.

"They threatened if we would win, they would kill us," she said.

While she believed it was more of a scare tactic than a realistic plot, it's hard to erase "what-if" scenarios, especially when hundreds of fans threw things at her windows and shook Team USA's bus while they were onboard.

As unsettling as it would be to awaken to a death threat, Buck-Crockett seems more uneasy about America's new war.

Gone are the faces and rhetoric of communism. Today, the enemies are only names, hidden in shadows with unknown plans.

"American athletes are the most popular in the world," she

Volleyball opens Big Ten play tonight

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

The No. 17 Minnesota Golden Gopher volleyball team will come to Carver-Hawkeye Arena to take on the Hawkeyes today at 7 p.m. The game will kick off Iowa's Big Ten slate, and it will mark the first home athletic event since last week's terrorist attack paralyzed the sporting world.

"We're really excited to play," Hawkeye coach Rita Buck-Crockett said. "We really need the support of Iowa — it's going to be a good match to come watch."

The Hawkeyes hope to open conference play with a win tonight, proving to skeptics the strength of this year's team. Iowa was ranked 10th in the Big Ten preseason rankings, a disappointment to coaches and players alike.

"I would hope that we're in the top half of the Big Ten," Buck-Crockett said. "We should be. We've got players who know the game very well, even though they're young."

Buck-Crockett's goal will be a tough one, because the Big Ten has four teams ranked in the USA Today/American Volleyball Coaches Association poll. Penn State (No. 6), Wisconsin (No. 9), Ohio State (No. 15), and Minnesota compose the top tier of conference schools.

The Hawks haven't taken to the floor since their 3-0 white-washing of Auburn on Sept. 4. Iowa canceled last weekend's Hawkeye-Hampton Inn Classic and postponed the Northern Illinois match in the wake of the attacks.

Iowa has played only five games, posting a 2-3 record, but the lack of nonconference action does not worry Buck-Crockett.

"I don't think it's going to be that different, because [Minnesota is] in the same situation as we are," she said.

The Gophers (6-2) also missed out on plenty of action last week, but they still have a bit more court time under their belts.

Minnesota finished second in the Big Ten in each of the past two seasons, and it figures to have another strong, but young, team on the court tonight.

The Gophers feature a top-notch setter in senior Lindsey Berg, and senior Kathy Tilson leads the Gophers in kills with 3.26 per game. But behind these two seniors, Minnesota lacks experience.

The lone Hawkeye senior starter, Sara Meyermann, leads the Big Ten in kills with 5.71 per game, nearly one kill per game more than second-place Sherisa Livingston of Wisconsin.

To come away with a victory tonight, Buck-Crockett said, the Hawks need to stick to the game plan and play their own game.

"Our women need to pass well; we need to be patient; we need to serve well and play our game," she said.

The Hawkeyes handled the tragedy well and had great focus in practice Tuesday morning, Buck-Crockett said.

"[The Hawks] have gotten themselves back on their regular schedule," she said. "I think they've been able to separate things pretty well."

The Hawkeyes will show their support for the nation by wearing red, white, and blue ribbons in their hair tonight against the Gophers.

Soccer drops to 1-4 on season with loss

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Suddenly, the normally high-powered Iowa soccer offense is having troubling putting the ball in the net, especially in the state of Missouri.

On Monday, Iowa was shut out for the second time in 11 days in the Show-Me State, as St. Louis posted a 2-0 victory. The loss left the Hawkeyes 1-4 and searching for ways to jump-start an anemic offense.

St. Louis goalkeeper Meghann Burke stopped seven shots, and the Billikens netted goals from Jamie Perry and Mandy Trokey in the victory.

"St. Louis scored on two break-aways and then finished their scoring chances," said Iowa coach Wendy Logan. "We just need to keep finding a way to get the ball in the net."

That has been more of a challenge than expected. Iowa has managed just four goals in its first five games. Last year, Iowa totaled 13 goals in its first five games and even put in seven shots in an October blowout victory over Purdue.

Monday's game marked the first Hawkeye sporting event since the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11. It wasn't clear how much the team had been focusing on soccer, given the circumstances. That could be partially why the team did not put together an overall focused effort for all 90 minutes.

"We played 60 minutes of very inspirational, smart, and attractive soccer. Our challenge is to increase that to a 90-minute effort," Logan said.

One highlight was the play of Iowa freshman goaltender Britta Voegel. The freshman got her first start in front of the net and knocked down seven Billikens shots.

Iowa opens its conference schedule Friday, when it hosts Michigan State at 4 p.m. Iowa then will look for revenge against Michigan on Sept. 23 at 1 p.m. The Wolverines knocked Iowa out of the Big Ten Tournament in November 2000. Both games will be held at the Hawkeye Recreation Fields; admission is free.

Sources: Officials voting on proposal

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — NFL referees began voting by e-mail Tuesday on a plan that could end a lockout and have them back on the field when play resumes Sept. 23, two league sources said.

A source familiar with the labor dispute, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the 10-member executive board of the NFL Referees Association had agreed on the vote during a conference call Tuesday morning. The league set a deadline of noon EDT today for the result.

Tom Condon, the lead negotiator for the officials, said he believed a deal was close. But he said he had made no final deal. Asked about the e-mail vote he replied: "I don't have any plan to send them to vote on."

"They might have jumped the gun," he said of the NFL.

But the sources said the vote was already under way.

If approved, the deal would end a lockout that covered the last week of the preseason and the first week of regular games. Those games were worked by replacements.

Both sides acknowledged the move toward an agreement was precipitated by the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington that caused commissioner Paul Tagliabue to call off last week's games. A union source, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said the referees took that into consideration when they went back to bargaining.

A basic package was put in place Sunday night in Pittsburgh, the sources said.

Bill Carollo and Jeff Bergman represented the union and Steelers owner Dan Rooney and lead negotiator Jeff Pash represented the NFL.

Two union sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Carollo and Bergman were chosen because they were considered less confrontational than Ed Hochuli, who had done the bulk of the negotiating. But the sources emphasized that Carollo and Bergman had been in touch with Hochuli throughout the negotiations.

According to the NFL sources, the agreement is the same in total monetary value as the package proposed by the league on Sept. 4. It would double salaries in the first year and increase them by 100 percent in the fourth year of a six-year deal.

The league had no comment. "We will only comment when a deal is ratified and in place," NFL spokesman Joe Browne said.

Salt Lake City residents fear terrorist attacks during 2001 Winter Olympics

By Patty Henetz
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Stephen Pace never liked the idea of bringing the Olympics here. Now, with his home a scant mile from where the medals plaza will be, he fears for his life.

If terrorists are looking to make another global statement, what better place than the middle of the Winter Games next February?

"Putting 100,000-plus people and 10,000-plus reporters there every night is lunacy," said Pace, a health-industry consultant. "They are saying it's worth risking everybody's life for. The motto ought to be: 'Don't do anything in downtown Salt Lake they wouldn't do in downtown Tel Aviv.'"

Pace said the International Olympic Committee should consider putting off the games for a year.

Pace, perhaps the loudest local opponent of the Salt Lake Games, may find more people who think the same way since the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington.

While IOC officials stoutly declare the games will go on, more people are now asking: What if?

The IOC said Tuesday that all aspects of security will be reviewed in the wake of the terrorist attacks. But it said a "catastrophe scenario" of an airliner crashing into the opening ceremony has been part of security planning since the 1972 Munich massacre.

"In fact our scenario was, and is, a plane crashing in the midst of the opening ceremony, full of people, full of fuel, broadcast live worldwide on television," said IOC director general Francois Carrard.

Salt Lake Organizing Committee chief Mitt Romney will report to the IOC on Thursday on the latest plans for keeping the Feb. 8-24 Olympics safe.

In the meantime, Congress has bolstered the $200 million security plan with an additional $12.7 million. Lawmakers also are moving to repeal legislation limiting the use of military personnel in Olympic operations.

At the Triad Center, a complex of shops, restaurants, small businesses and offices flanking the medals plaza, Robert O'Keefe said he is worried about the concentration of international visitors during the games, and how that might be attractive to terrorists.

"What better place to have a huge effect?" said O'Keefe, an Australian and owner of Cardio Express, a fitness center. "The terrorists will be looking to strike back. The more countries they can involve, the more innocent people they can kill, the more attractive the target. Any person who supports this war on terrorism is a new target."

Allan Liu thinks otherwise. A supervisor at the Wyndham Hotel, at the medals plaza's edge, Liu said: "I definitely want to see the games go on. It would be a shame if the terrorists spoiled the athletes' time."

Across the plaza, Adam Vester, night manager of the City Creek Inn, looked out the window at the empty parking lot that will become the plaza and shrugged: "Security will be so stepped up. Being closer to the medals plaza will make it more secure than being far away."

In the next breath, he seemed to change his mind. "I can see them leaving a car bomb here big enough to blow up the plaza," he said.

Inn owner Lorin Ronnow brushed aside such fears. Before the attacks, he had pushed for more open access during the games and was disappointed when early security plans were announced. After last week's attacks, he said: "I'm sure they'll do the prudent thing and have the security beefed up."

Survivor of Wyoming wreck charged with vehicular manslaughter

The driver of the vehicle was drunk at time of crash

By Elisabeth A. Wright
Associated Press

LARAMIE, Wyo. — The lone survivor of a wreck that killed eight Wyoming runners was charged Tuesday with vehicular homicide and being drunk at the time of the crash.

Clinton Haskins, a member of the university's rodeo team, was charged with eight counts of aggravated vehicular homicide. The complaint also charged Haskins was drunk but provided no specifics.

The Albany County Attorney's Office and police refused to comment.

Haskins faces up to 20 years in prison on each count if convicted. Bond was set at $100,000. The aggravated nature of the charges is based on Haskins' alleged intoxication.

A court appearance was pending. Haskins, 21, of Maybell, Colo., was listed in fair condition at Invinson Memorial Hospital. He suffered severe cuts, some internal damage, and a concussion, but no broken bones, his grandmother said in a telephone interview from her home in Maybell.

"He's very emotional. We're all very emotional," Sally Haskins said. Haskins' parents and teenage sister are with him at the hospital, she said.

She also said her grandson was a careful driver with much experience traveling the rodeo circuit.

"He has driven miles and miles without an incident," she said. "I've ridden with him."

The crash occurred about 1:30 a.m. Sunday, when Haskins' pickup collided head-on with a sport-utility vehicle carrying eight members of the cross-country team returning from a non-school trip to Fort Collins, Colo.

Police say Haskins' southbound pickup appeared to have drifted into the oncoming lane on the two-lane highway.

Killed were Kyle Johnson, 20, of Riverton; Nicholas Schabron, 20, of Laramie; Justin Lambert-Belanger, 20, of Timmins, Ontario; Kevin Salverson, 19, of Cheyenne; Joshua Jones, 22, of Salem, Ore.; Morgan McLeland, 21, of Gillette; Shane Shatto, 19, of Douglas; and Cody Brown, 21, of Hudson, Colo.

Haskins was on his way to see his girlfriend, who lives in Fort Collins, when the crash occurred, Sally Haskins said. The highway can be windswept and foggy, she said.

"I have been across that part of the highway when the wind has buffeted me into the other lane, and if someone had been coming, I probably could not have avoided it," she said.

said. "We just need to be aware of what's going on, because there is something going on. There are people that really hate us. I don't know why, but they do. I've seen it all over the world."

Buck-Crockett said the early 1990s was spent worrying about kidnapping and drive-by shootings in her Los Angeles home. Now, she said, her grandchildren will have to fear on a different level, in which a 15,000-seat arena may be a target.

"We do have to move on, but we do have to be careful," she said.

Branded with kisses

Half a dozen strangers kissed Tom Brands. He's a wrestling icon, and Iranians love wrestling.

Brands, an assistant coach at Iowa and a former NCAA, World, and Olympic champion, has circled the globe but seems to hold a special place in his heart for Iran and the warm way he was received at the 1998 World Championships.

It reminded him of home. "There, fans were rabid. There wasn't an empty seat in the arena," he said. "They were like Iowa fans. They smell the pin. They knew wrestling and were patriotic and loyal."

Brands said security was prevalent at the matches, but he never felt endangered. In fact, he thought Iranian authorities appeared apologetic for inconveniences they felt they had caused. They wanted to make the American wrestling contingent feel at ease.

Iran borders Afghanistan — the supposed home of terrorist Osama bin Laden — so it seems strange that Brands would feel comfortable that close to so much hate. Iran has a history of anti-American behavior, but he never felt it.

"Iran is the best place I've been overseas," he said. "They took care of you, sometimes at the expense of their own people."

The United States is scheduled to return the favor at this year's World Championships on Sept. 26-29 in New York City. It's slated to be the largest World Championships ever. Brands says it will happen. While it will likely remain in the United States, moving the freestyle portion to Iran is not totally out of the question.

And if that's the case, he said he will go without hesitation.

And the winner is ...

When assistant coach Lisa Bluder and the women's World University Games team won the Gold medal, it ended a spectacular summer for sports in China.

Beijing was awarded the 2008 Olympics earlier this year, marking the first time in history the world's most populous country will have that honor. Some worried about China's human-rights record. Bluder, Iowa's women's basketball coach, said the team was received well overall.

"I think athletes are held to maybe a little different standard when traveling overseas," she said. "Athletes, especially in China, are almost seen as celebrities."

The security was tight at the athletes' village; identification tags had to be worn at all times, and an X-ray machine greeted everyone at the gate.

Bluder believes China wanted the World University Games to run smoothly and safely to show the world it is ready for the Olympics.

But that doesn't mean everyone was accepting of Team USA.

"There were definitely both sides," she said. "Some of the Chinese were anxious to see the players and touch them. Some tried very hard to avoid us."

In light of the Sept. 11 attacks, it could be argued that athletes may avoid international competitions, including the prestigious World Championships or Olympics.

Bluder said she could see USA Basketball thinking twice before sending teams overseas, at least while a definite safety threat exists.

But she has little hesitation about flying and has upcoming flights booked.

Through different decades, Buck-Crockett, Brands, and Bluder have all experienced the adoration or abomination of the American athlete.

Now, the USA flag on a warm-up jacket may be a target instead of a trophy. Could that threaten the allure of athletics? "Athletics is athletics," Buck-Crockett said. "It's in your blood."

more zip in our legs." The Hawkeyes' first-team defense didn't give up a point to the RedHawks, but Iowa's reserves gave up three touchdowns in the second half.

Even though they had such a break in the schedule, the Hawkeyes never seriously looked into scheduling another opponent for a matchup this weekend, Ferentz said. Other teams around the country have done so, including Northern Iowa, who slated in Ball State for this weekend.

"If Iowa State had an open date, maybe that would have been a possibility," Ferentz said. "Iowa State was locked in with Ohio."

The Hawkeyes' game with Iowa State has been rescheduled for Nov. 24, the Saturday after Thanksgiving. Ferentz said, according to his knowledge, UNI did not approach the Hawkeyes to fill next week's void in the schedule.

Iowa's Sept. 29 game with the Nittany Lions will start at 11:10 a.m. and will be shown on ESPN.

DI: You'd probably like to talk about something else. How about this year's Hawkeyes? What do you think?

Flemister: With my schedule, I haven't seen them play. But from what I've heard, they are better. Even if the teams they are playing aren't powerhouses, the fact they are winning games helps their confidence, and that carries over.

DI: Is the college feel gone after a two-year absence?

Flemister: I still have friends in Iowa City. It's different. This summer, when I came back for the Hayden Fry Golf Classic, it was weird seeing Coach Fry and some of the older players who were leaving when I was a freshman.

DI: Are you a good golfer?

Flemister: No, I suck, but I try. I wasn't the worst.

DI: Really. Who was?

Flemister: (Laughing) I went a couple rounds with Randy Reiners and Parker Wildeman, but Matt Bowen was bad. Yeah, he was probably the worst.

DI: Being from Iowa, are you finally adjusting to East Coast life?

Flemister: Myths of the East Coast are true. People are just different here, but if they would get rid of the traffic, that would make everything better.

DI: Bad, huh? What are you driving around?

Flemister: I have a Mercedes. I had to upgrade from college. In college, I had no car.

DI: Nice upgrade. Does anyone drive a beater or some ridiculously huge vehicle?

Flemister: Darrell Green drives an old-style Beetle. You know, those Volkswagen bug things.

games on Jan. 9. The next round would be played Jan. 13-14, with the championship games as scheduled on Jan. 20 — most likely with four exhausted teams.

A third would be to play the title games on Super Bowl Sunday, Jan. 27, as a double-header at the Superdome. The Super Bowl would be played the next week at another site with New Orleans promised another game in the future.

The 16-game season appeared to be a certainty soon after Tagliabue announced Sept. 13 that last week's games were off because of the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington.

One reason is financial. If the league had played 15 games, 15 teams would have played seven home games instead of eight, missing out on one lucrative game. And the league would owe the networks $40 million- $60 million for the wild-card games that would not be played if the alternate scenarios don't work out.

Another was practical. San Diego was scheduled off last week. So the Chargers would have ended the season while the others would have played 15.

And a third seemed to be that most players and coaches wanted a full schedule.

But the players and coaches also wanted a full playoff schedule. If options can't be worked out, however, they won't get that.

"Fewer playoff teams is basically going to take the playoffs out of a lot of teams' reach," said Wayne Gandy of Pittsburgh, which must play in the AFC Central with Baltimore, Tennessee, and Jacksonville.

Martinez finished for the season

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — Boston Red Sox ace Pedro Martinez said Tuesday he will miss the rest of the season with inflammation in his right shoulder, confirming what had been expected since the team fell out of contention.

"I would like to pitch, but there's nothing I can do," he said while standing in the Fenway Park stands in street clothes. "I have to be smart. There's nothing I can do to bring the team back."

Martinez was placed on the 15-day disabled list so he could rest his shoulder and let the inflammation recede. He will begin rehabilitation as soon as the season is over, general manager Dan Duquette said before Boston's game against Tampa Bay — the team's first since the terrorist attacks at the Pentagon and World Trade Center. "The reason we're playing right now is probably to try to make people forget," said Martinez, who is expected to be ready well before spring training.

Asked whether he was concerned about his safety in Fenway Park, he said: "I don't have any fear. I always felt safe on a baseball field."

The Red Sox were in first place in the AL East on June 27, when Martinez first went on the disabled list. They were still in contention when he returned Aug. 26, but he was clearly not the same pitcher who won three Cy Young Awards and was 7-1 with a 1.44 ERA on Memorial Day.

His return couldn't keep the Red Sox from losing 13 of 14 games since Aug. 25 to fall 13 games behind the New York Yankees in the AL East and 13½ games behind Oakland in the AL wild-card race. After his last start, on Sept. 7, the team said he would not pitch again unless the Red Sox returned to the pennant race.

"Like everybody else, we were expecting a little bit more," he said. "I was very sad to let it go. We lost Nomar (Garciparra), which was a big part of it, and also (Jason) Varitek. But we tried. We don't have anything to be ashamed of."

Martinez's spot in the Red Sox rotation will be taken by former reliever Derek Lowe. He will be limited to three innings or 45 pitches against Detroit on Saturday and probably will get at most four starts.

Lowe, who has blown six of 30 save chances this year and allowed eight of 27 inherited runners to score, has made just 19 starts in 295 major league appearances.

AL resumes play, Yankees win

CHICAGO (AP) — Their hearts still heavy and their emotions churning, the New York Yankees and Chicago White Sox got back to baseball Tuesday night.

The Yankees, their city reeling from terrorist attacks, played like the champions they are, routing the White Sox, 11-3, behind the strong pitching of Orlando Hernandez and three seventh-inning homers, including a grand slam from Jorge Posada.

And all through the night, the United States and New York were saluted, from the small flags handed out to fans, to signs like "Chicago Luvs N.Y.," "God bless America," and "Baseball Has Players, America Has Heroes," to a continuous flow of music over the public address system.

As firefighters and policemen ringed the infield and the teams lined up along the foul lines applauding them, managers Joe Torre and Jerry Manuel were presented candles by officers during a pregame ceremony.

While the national anthem was being sung, New York native and Yankees first base coach Lee Mazzilli saluted the flag.

Then it was time for baseball, for the Yankees their first game since Sept. 9 and first since the attacks two days later changed the world.

Their three-game series at Yankee Stadium with the White Sox — who were staying in midtown Manhattan during the attacks — was postponed.

"This is the best medicine for us now," Torre said.

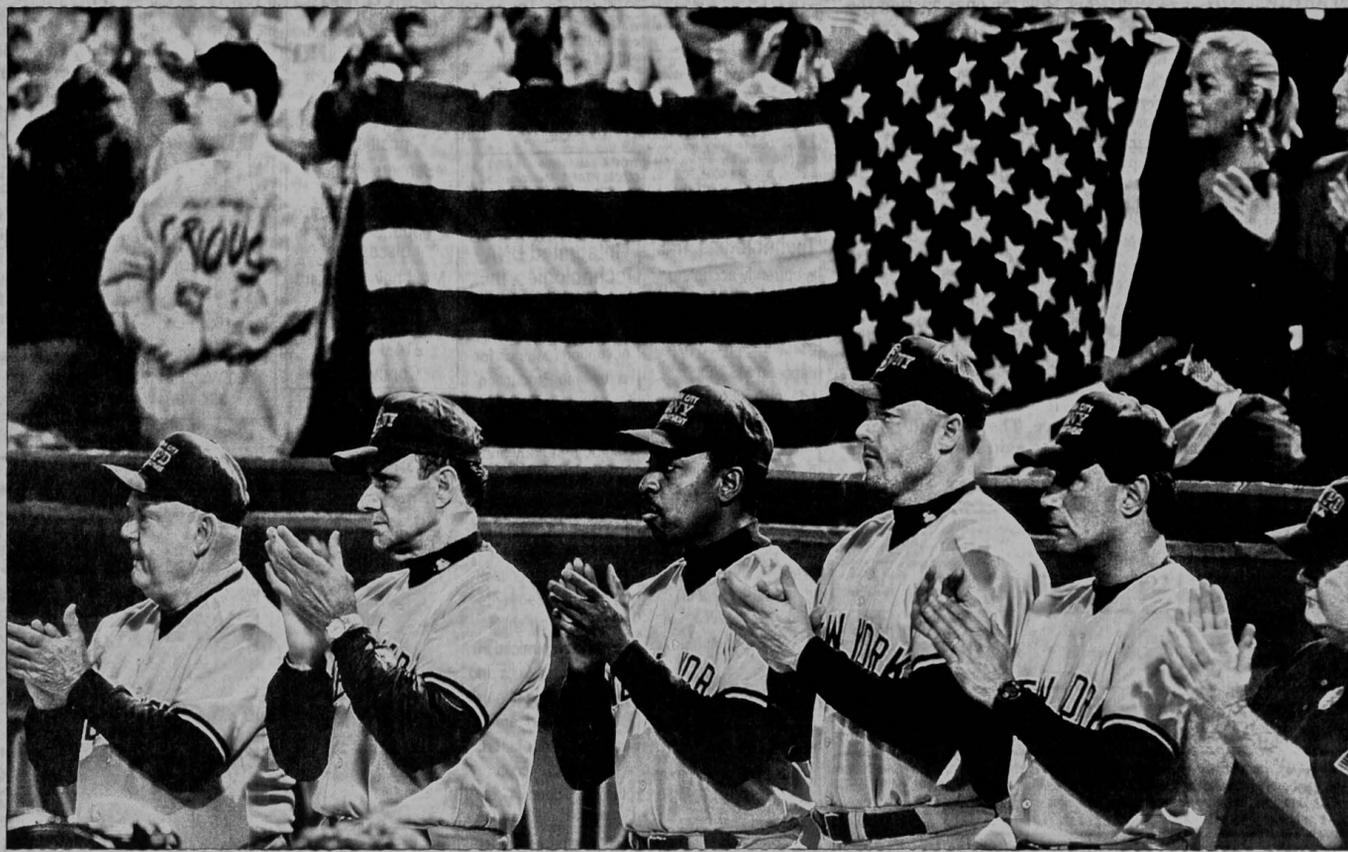

The Yankees — who'd visited an armory where grief-stricken family members were trying to locate missing loved ones — were cheered by the Comiskey Park crowd when introduced.

And when they took the field, they didn't show any rust.

Three of their first four batters, Chuck Knoblauch, Derek Jeter and Tino Martinez, singled for a 1-0 lead. A second run off Mark Buehrle (13-8) crossed on Posada's grounder.

Knoblauch's RBI grounder following a single by Scott Brosius and double by Alfonso Soriano made it 3-0 in the fifth.

Soriano hit his 17th homer to lead off the seventh.

When Jeter singled and Bernie Williams doubled, Alan Embree relieved and walked Martinez to load the bases before Posada hit his third grand slam of the season.

Shane Spencer followed on the next pitch with a solo homer, and it was 9-0. New York made it 11-0 when Enrique Wilson had a two-run double in the eighth.

Hernandez (3-6), who escaped his native Cuba to pursue his baseball dream in America, allowed singles to Jose Canseco and Mark Johnson in seven strong innings and has won three straight starts.

In the sixth inning, anger—baseball anger—surfaced.

When Ray Durham's line drive down the first-base line was ruled foul instead of fair, it set off a heated argument from White Sox coach Gary Pettis, who was ejected by first-base umpire Mike Winters.

Blue Jays 8, Orioles 5

TORONTO — Alex Gonzalez hit two homers, including a tiebreaking three-run shot in the eighth inning, as the Toronto Blue Jays restarted their season with an 8-5 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Tuesday night.

Homer Bush singled, and third baseman Cal Ripken's fielding error allowed Josh Phelps to reach base before Gonzalez hit a 3-2 pitch off Jorge Julio (1-1) to give Toronto an 8-5 lead and send the Orioles to their ninth-straight loss and 15th in 16 games.

Red Sox 7, Devil Rays 2

BOSTON — The pitcher was from Japan. The hitter was from the Dominican Republic. Together, they gave the Boston Red Sox a rare victory and their fans an opportunity to escape a week of terror.

Hideo Nomo struck out 11, and Manny Ramirez hit his 40th homer Tuesday night as Boston beat the Tampa Bay Devil Rays, 7-2.

It was just the second Red Sox win in 15 games over three weeks that saw them fall out of contention and then reminded them just how little that mattered.

Twins 8, Tigers 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Brad Radke took a no-hitter into the eighth inning and got 18 hits of support as the Minnesota Twins returned from an eight-day layoff Tuesday night with an 8-3 win over the Detroit Tigers.

Shane Halter's solo homer leading off the eighth broke up Radke's bid for his first no-hitter. Chris Wakeland hit his first major-league homer with two outs to chase Radke, who was replaced by Bob Wells.

Radke (13-9) tipped his cap to a standing ovation from a sparse crowd of 10,878.

In his first start since Sept. 6, Radke threw 104 pitches, 75 for strikes. He gave up two runs and two hits in 7½ innings, striking out eight and walking none.

Reds 6, Cubs 5

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds were subdued at the start of the game. They finished it by celebrating at first base, arms raised around Brady Clark.

Clark's two-out, two-run single in the bottom of the ninth rallied the Reds to a 6-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Tuesday night, following a restrained tribute to victims of the terrorist attacks.

Phillies 4, Braves 3

PHILADELPHIA — Scott Rolen singled home the winning run off John Smoltz in the ninth inning, and the Philadelphia Phillies rallied past the Atlanta Braves, 4-3, Tuesday night, further tightening the NL East race.

Rolen, who homered twice off Greg Maddux in the Phillies' 5-2 win Monday night, helped the Phillies pull within 1½ games of the first-place Braves.

Mets 7, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH — Mike Piazza hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning, and the Mets, wearing caps in tribute to New York's firefighters, police and emergency rescue workers, beat Pittsburgh 7-5 Tuesday night.

The Mets came back for their 10th victory in 11 road games. At 73-73, the defending NL champions reached the .500 mark for the first time since the opening week of the season.

The Mets wore the special hats Monday night for pregame ceremonies, then got permission from Major League Baseball to wear them for a game.

Mason tops list of unsigned free agents

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

With the opening of NBA training camps less than two weeks away, a few prominent free agents — most notably Anthony Mason — remain on the open market, trying to get the best deal they can.

The Philadelphia 76ers and Milwaukee Bucks have spoken to the Miami Heat about a sign-and-trade deal for the All-Star forward, agent Don Cronson said Tuesday.

"It's arguable that he tips the balance of power in the East if he goes to Philly or Milwaukee, both of whom need help at that position. Miami has just been sitting back and waiting, but I believe something is going to get done," Cronson said. "I've got to believe Miami would want to get something for him as opposed to nothing."

The Heat have also held discussions with the Cleveland Cavaliers about a sign-and-trade deal that would send Chris Gatling to Miami for a draft pick and the Heat's $3.2 million trade exception acquired in the deal that sent Tim Hardaway to Dallas.

Gatling would have to agree to a contract starting at about $2 million, which would allow the Heat to remain below the estimated luxury-tax threshold of $54 million. Teams whose payrolls exceed that amount will have to pay a dollar-for-dollar tax on the overage.

Of the 29 NBA teams, all but six will open training camp on Oct. 2. Six teams that have overseas exhibition games scheduled — the Raptors, Lakers, Timberwolves, Warriors, Magic, and Clippers — can open their camps on Sept. 29.

Among free agents who have yet to sign, the most prominent players are Mason, Gatling, John Stockton, Rod Strickland, and A.C. Green.

Mason averaged 16.1 points and 9.6 rebounds for the Heat, who are already committed to spending $50.6 million on salaries for the upcoming season. If the Heat gave Mason the contract he is seeking — five years for $26 million — they would exceed the luxury-tax threshold.

"The Miami Heat don't want Anthony Mason. They've decided to go in another direction regardless of how he played," Cronson said.

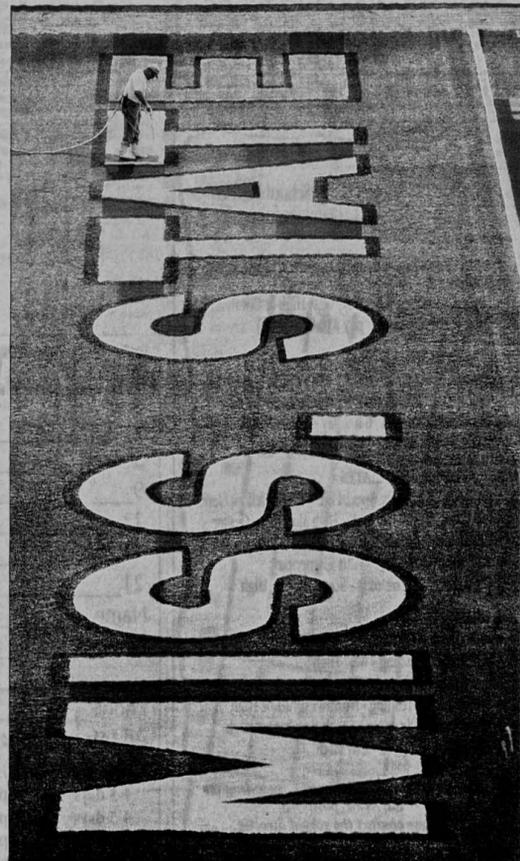

The Bucks have offered to send Scott Williams to Miami for Mason, while the 76ers have rebuffed the Heat's request for point guard Eric Snow.

Another player whose name continues to pop up in trade rumors is Knicks point guard Charlie Ward, who was booed at Madison Square Garden during last season's playoffs for comments he made about the Jewish religion.

"The Knicks told me they didn't intend to trade Charlie before the start of training camp, but other teams have confirmed that Charlie is on the trading block," said Ward's agent, Craig McKenzie.

Big crowds can expect to see big changes at college football stadiums

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

Russ Houston/Associated Press

Bart Prather of Campus Landscape prepares the end zone Tuesday of Mississippi State University's Scott Field for Thursday's game against the South Carolina Gamecocks. The contest will be the first Division I-A game since last week's terrorist attacks.

The rah-rah partyers who fill college football's enormous stadiums are in for big changes.

Coolers and picnic baskets, even coats and blankets, will be searched or banned altogether, turning quick trips through turnstiles into long waits at security checkpoints for crowds as large as the more than 100,000 expected at Michigan.

"We're trying to make people understand that things are going to be a little different," Mississippi State associate Athletics Director Duncan McKenzie said.

Fans attending the Bulldogs' game when major college football resumes Thursday will be the first to notice the difference. Everyone else will find out later in the week.

Items such as video cameras, cans or glass bottles, coolers, umbrellas, noisemakers and purses will hold fans up at some games.

In Ann Arbor, Mich., planes won't be allowed to fly over the Wolverines' stadium Saturday.

There will be differences on the field, too, including teams wearing U.S. flags on helmets.

All of last week's Division I-A football games were postponed or canceled because of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Major League Baseball resumed Monday night and the NFL will return Sept. 23, both under much tighter security.

"You watched the emotion that Major League Baseball brought back to the country a little bit," said Ohio State coach Jim Tressel, whose Buckeyes play UCLA at the Rose Bowl on Saturday. "We have the good fortune at Ohio State to bring some more emotion and to serve as an energy source for our country."

"What venue would you rather have it be in than before 90,000 or 100,000 and on national TV? I think it's going to be an exciting thing and a way we can do some good by the way we play."

Football stadiums dwarf arenas used in the NHL (where the biggest in the United States is Chicago's 20,500-seat United Center) and the NBA (the Spurs play before up to a league-high 34,215 at the Alamodome).

Unlike in the NFL, there won't be a standard set of security measures at college games.

"With 976 different institutions," NCAA spokesman Wally Renfro said, "it is difficult to make policies that are applicable to the broad membership."

At Michigan Stadium — with a capacity of 107,501, the largest site of a game Saturday — the Wolverines will have U.S. flags stitched on their uniforms when they face Western Michigan. American flags will replace Big Ten banners along the stadium's rim.

"Our fans should expect some possible delays, especially if they continue to come in at the last minute," said Bill Bess, Michigan's director of public safety. "We would like fans to get in the stadium sooner than they have in the past."

Security tight in first D.C. game since attacks

By Joseph White
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nine blocks east of the White House, 13 rows above the ice, a fan held up a banner that read: "I will not fear!"

Flags were welcome, bags were not, and security concerns overshadowed Jaromir Jagr's debut as the Washington Capitals played the Philadelphia Flyers in an exhibition game Tuesday night.

It was the first professional sports event in the nation's capital since last week's terrorist attacks in New York and just a few miles away at the Pentagon.

"It's a different feel," said Chris Ward, of Millersville, Md., just before he entered the MCI Center. "Coming up out of the Metro station, you see K-9 units and bomb-sniffing dogs.

You're not used to seeing that around here.

"You're used to seeing police, but only the ones busting the guys scalping tickets."

The 20,000-seat arena was only one-third full during the first period, despite the first appearance by Jagr and the team's offer of free admission to police, firefighters, and military personnel and their families.

"I feel safer here than anywhere else," said Kim Lanham of Leesburg, Va., after her pocketbook was searched at the turnstile.

Placards on the entrance doors noted the "unusual circumstances" of the evening. Anyone who brought a backpack, suitcase, and other large bag had to use the claim-check service. The FBI and Secret Service said metal detectors weren't necessary.

The Ledge

by Scott Adams

Stuff isn't very funny

The ledge this past week.

- The ledge most of the time.
- Bush.
- Waffles.
- A three-legged koala bear.
- Watching a big roach crawl out of your kitchen sink.
- Shooting bunny rabbits from the car window of your pick-up truck, you heartless redneck.
- People who aspire to be on the Jerry Springer Show.
- Fox News claiming it is fair and unbiased.
- Slipping on vomit.
- Being smarter than your boss.
- People who are way too good at Trivial Pursuit.
- Being so hungover the Red Cross starts a relief effort for you.
- Paying $11,544 for tuition this year.
- Paying $1,732 more next year, if Mary Sue gets her way.
