Firefighters honor fallen comrades

By John Moiseed
The Daily Iowan

Cedar Rapids firefighter Don Lacy's friend and colleague Kevin Stenchuk died of a heart attack while on duty more than a year ago. Lacy said the experience allowed him to identify with those who lost colleagues in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

"It's got to affect every firefighter," he said of the attacks. "Every time you go to a call, you never know what you'll get into. Firefighters are family; it's like we lost blood relatives in New York."

Lacy, a 25-year veteran, was among the hundreds of firefighters from more than 100 Iowa fire departments in attendance Sunday at the Iowa State Firefighter Memorial in Coralville.

He wasn't hard to miss. Lacy parked his white 1966 American LaFrance fire truck near the memorial's entrance under a 20-by-30-foot American flag strung between two Coralville fire truck ladders. A red, white, and blue wreath of flowers, banners, and a New York City Fire Department helmet and coat adorned the truck to show Lacy's support for the city that lost approximately 300 firefighters in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

More than 1,000 people, many of them firefighters, joined Lacy at Sunday's service. Two hundred chairs were set up; the rest of the crowd watched the ceremony standing.

"This is a small step in the healing process," said Dick Frank, the president of the Iowa Firefighters Association. "Our fire officials can and must persevere."

Escorted by an honor guard totting axes and American flags, Coralville and Iowa City fire officials laid a wreath at the base of a monument listing the names of more than 120 Iowa firefighters lost in the line of duty. The crowd was silent as "Amazing Grace" wailed from bagpipes, and both firefighters and civilians shed tears.

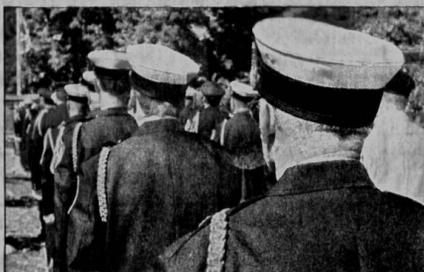

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, offered words of encouragement to the solemn crowd.

"Part of what sustains us through this are stories connected with tragedies — stories of courage, bravery, and self-sacrifice," he said. "[The New York firefighters] had the courage and training to rush up the skyscrapers while everyone else rushed down. It is our turn to stay the course without hesitation."

U.S. to Taliban: No negotiating on bin Laden

By Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Taliban government confirmed Sunday that Osama bin Laden still is in Afghanistan, but the White House flatly rejected an overture to negotiate his fate.

Meantime, Attorney General John Ashcroft warned of a "very serious threat" of new terrorism against Americans that may increase if the United States retaliates for the Sept. 11 attacks.

"We believe that there is the likelihood of additional terrorist activity. And it is our job to do whatever we can to interrupt it, to disrupt it," Ashcroft said on CBS's "Face The Nation."

"We believe there are others who may be in the country who would have plans," Ashcroft said when asked about the ongoing hunt for those behind the strikes against the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

Earlier, a Taliban envoy acknowledged for the first time that bin Laden is in Afghanistan and under the control of the Taliban. He said negotiations might be possible if the United States offered evidence linking bin Laden to the attacks.

Refugees might be hardest hit

By Matt Kelley
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — If the United States attacks terrorist targets in Afghanistan, soldiers will have to deal with not only armed resistance but also with cascades of starving, desperate, and fearful refugees. Military officials must plan how the armed forces will help ease the humanitarian crisis and avoid killing civilians. Failure on either point could turn public opinion against the war on terrorism, not only in the United States but throughout the region and around the world.

That's a tall order for a country ravaged by 22 years of war, five years of the harsh Taliban regime, and two years of drought.

Afghanistan has been the world's No. 1 source of refugees for the past 20 years, with approximately 3.6 million currently in Pakistan, Iran, and other countries. Thousands more Afghans have fled their homes since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks in the United States, fearing retaliatory strikes against suspect Osama bin Laden and the Taliban militia that shelters him.

In Iowa speech, Gore calls for solidarity

By Nick Narigon
The Daily Iowan

DES MOINES — Al Gore praised America for unifying behind President Bush in wake of the Sept. 11 tragedy in his first major public speech since conceding the presidential election.

"As Americans, all of us stand behind our president, and we will win this war against terrorism," Gore told a large crowd at a Democratic Party fund-raiser in Des Moines on Sept. 29. "George W. Bush is my commander in chief."

Meanwhile, some UI Democrats denounced a float displayed during the Sept. 28 Homecoming parade by the UI College Republicans.

Mayrose Wegmann, the president of the UI Democrats, said the float — which carried a boxer pummeling a donkey — was contrary to the message of unity Gore communicated in his Iowa speech.

"I thought it was a bad move," she said. "It made me feel that first of all, they want war, and they don't want unity." Laura Kamienski, the chairwoman of the Al Gore speaks at the Polk County Convention Complex in Des Moines on Sept. 29.

UI College Republicans, said even though they support unity, Homecoming is a time to have fun. "It wasn't a grand political statement," she said.

Gore spent two days touring Iowa by himself over the weekend in a rental car, delivering doughnuts to union members in the Amana Colonies, visiting a mosque in Cedar Rapids, and drinking coffee with Iowa House Minority Leader Dick Myers, D-Coralville, at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

"I think he came back just to see his friends," Myers said.

Almost 40 UI students volunteered at the Democratic fund-raising event in Des Moines, Wegmann said, adding that the students took the opportunity to speak with Iowa legislators.

District B candidates air it out on the issues

By Kellie Doyle
and Mike McWilliams
The Daily Iowan

Twelve Iowa City residents are in a race this fall to fill three City Council positions.

To the right are the four District B candidates competing for one of the seats and their stances on current city issues. Connie Champion is seeking reelection in the District B seat.

The DI asked each candidate about two proposed measures: the nuisance ordinance and the smoking ordinance. The nuisance ordinance would target landlords to crack down on neighborhood disturbances, especially alleged gang activity. A smoking ordinance would eliminate smoking in city restaurants.

Candidates also included their thoughts about economic development in Iowa City.

During the Oct. 9 primary election, voters will narrow the race to two District B candidates, whose names will be placed on the Nov. 6 ballot.

Borchardt
council candidate

Tim Borchardt

Age: 41
Occupation: Production supervisor at Lear Corp., 2500 Highway 6 E.

Nuisance Ordinance: Borchardt said fewer laws should regulate property management. "I do believe the owners of rental property need to be good citizens and need to be involved in their rental properties to ensure that their tenants are being good neighbors," he said. "If we enforce what we have and stand by it, then I don't think we need more laws."

Smoking Ordinance: He does not support a smoking ordinance. "People have to take responsibility for their own health," he said. "It's not like they're forced to go into a restaurant."

Economic Development: A large percentage of Iowa City is financed by the residential-property owner, Borchardt said. He said he hopes to attract Fortune 500 companies to town so Iowa City could take advantage of their tax revenues to decrease the burden on the property owner.

Major
council candidate

Charles Major

Age: 52
Occupation: V.A. Medical Center respiratory therapist

Nuisance Ordinance: "I know there are some problems, but I have some concerns that it may go too far," Major said. "As I learn more about it, I think it's something that we should strongly consider."

Smoking Ordinance: He supports the smoking ordinance for the benefit of business employees, who shouldn't be exposed to second-hand smoke, he said. He would want a full-time smoking ban, as opposed to one that would allow smoking during set hours. "I think we owe it to the people who work in the restaurant and the children," Major said.

Economic Development: He wants to improve economic development in Iowa City by focusing more on existing strengths, such as health care and research. He also wants to look into combining Johnson County city and county governments into a single entity to benefit the entire county. "That way if one industry went anywhere in the county, everyone would benefit," he said. "It seems like we have too much competition and not as much cooperation as would like. I would also like to expand on what we have here."

Champion
council candidate

Connie Champion

Age: 61
Occupation: Incumbent City Councilor; owner of Catherine's, 7 S. Dubuque St.

Nuisance Ordinance: "We need to explore what's not being covered by other ordinances," she said. "I'm sure there are problems; we just need to find out exactly what they are."

The city also should investigate what other sorts of complaints it needs to regulate, she said.

Smoking Ordinance: She supports some type of smoking ordinance, but she said councilors need to consider whether the ordinance should affect all businesses, not just restaurants. The council also needs to gather input from business owners who will be affected in crafting the ordinance, Champion said.

Economic Development: The council needs to erase the belief that it's difficult to do business in Iowa City — an assumption that might be responsible for apathy about starting new establishments, she said. Champion also supports the industrial park planned to be developed near the Iowa City Municipal Airport because it will create jobs. It will also take strain off taxpayers because money generated from the park will go directly to support the airport, she said.

Ross
council candidate

Brandon Ross

Age: 38
Occupation: Musician, businessman, father

Nuisance Ordinance: Ross said he has not yet read the proposed ordinance and cannot make an educated comment about it.

Smoking Ordinance: He said attempting to stop people from smoking is like "throwing spitballs at the Great Wall of China," but added that it's a start. "I would like to support a smoke-free restaurant ordinance that would protect workers, patrons, and children's health all the time," he said.

"However, I am concerned about establishments like the Sanctuary and the Mill — both of which are combination restaurant and club — their ability to continue doing business and the rights of citizens who choose to patronize them."

Economic Development: Strong neighborhoods are always the center of an economically healthy city, and if there's no sense of place, he said, any economic gains will be short-lived. He added that a strong downtown and a responsive city government are also integral to economic development.

Tight Kinnick security annoys some fans

By Lauren Smiley
The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeyes' defense began an hour and a half before the Sept. 29 kickoff against Penn State, as guards at Kinnick Stadium relentlessly enforced stricter security measures for the first time.

Nittany Lion and Hawkeye fans alike were forced to shake out blankets, chug opened water bottles, and reveal contents of their purses before entering the first football game on Hawkeye turf since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Some disgruntled fans retreated to their cars after discovering book bags and fanny packs were prohibited. Security guards were apologetic but firm. "They're upset with the inconveniences. They weren't expecting that we'd scrutinize so closely," said Craig Taylor, the event-staff supervisor at the student entrance. "It's mainly the bags that they've formerly been able to bring in that they're upset about."

Hawkeye fan Theresa Brown was among the spectators who decided to carry the essentials — a cell phone and wallet — after her fanny pack was turned away at the gate. "I think it's an overreaction," said her husband, Larry Brown. "I can't get much of a bomb in here."

At other parts of the stadium, some snapped their fanny packs onto fences by the entrances so they could reclaim them after the game. Taylor said it was tough to inconvenience innocent fans, but the guards had to treat everyone the same.

"If we let one do it, they'll all want to," he said as one angry Penn State fan slammed her leather fanny pack into the nearby yellow trash can. "It's too easy to conceal something in a large bag."

Despite warnings that fans should arrive one hour before kickoff, lines moved quickly. "It actually sped things up, because in the past, all the bags had to be checked," said Iowa Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby.

In addition to the pre-game restrictions, 10,000-15,000 fans who usually leave and re-enter the stadium at halftime were forced to watch the halftime show or hit the road.

Duane Papke, the associate director of UI Public Safety, said spectators' compliance made for a smooth-running game. Officers found nothing suspicious on searched persons, and calls to UI Public Safety were limited to one medical and three to four public-intoxication reports, he said.

Three cars were towed because they didn't display football-parking placards, but none of them seemed suspicious, Papke added.

UI sophomore Katie Miller said the precautions — which officials say will be policy for the rest of the season — are worth it.

"I think, unfortunately, they have to do it," she said. "If they can prevent something from happening, then I wouldn't worry about it."

Most fans said they had affably reconciled themselves to adjust to new safety procedures.

"I don't know — these Junior Mints could blow up," joked Hawkeye fan Mike Zabel as he and his wife finished off a box of candy before entering the gate. "No. It's all right to be safe."

There's nothing wrong with that." E-mail DI reporter Lauren Smiley at lauren-smiley@uiowa.edu

CORRECTIONS

The Sept. 27 article "National Guard ups security" incorrectly stated that Iowa National Guard Company A was ordered to federal active duty and deployed to southwest Asia. The company was not called to active duty. The DI regrets the error.

The Sept. 28 article "Mentally ill may pay more" should have stated that mentally ill patients will pay more under a previously proposed plan rejected by the Johnson County Board of Supervisors. The article should have also stated that current payment plans are calculated using a complex formula that takes each client's individual circumstances into account. The income numbers stated in the story were incorrect. The DI regrets the errors.

Week of education begins

By Tyler Baldwin
The Daily Iowan

Middle East Education Week will start today with a critical look at how sanctions imposed by the United Nations have harmed Iraq.

Marcella David, a UI professor of international law and a featured speaker at tonight's lecture, cites the U.N.-administered Oil for Food Program as a failure in policy. The program allows the Iraqi government to sell oil in order to purchase food and other necessities for its population. The same funds are also allocated toward the payment of war reparations to Kuwait. The reparations reduce funding for food and vaccinations, resulting in mass starvation and disease in Iraq, David said.

The week's events will begin with a lecture panel at 7:30 p.m. focusing on international laws that guide human-rights principles applied in the Middle East. The goal of the events, planned last spring, is to educate people and increase awareness about the region's complex realities, organizers said.

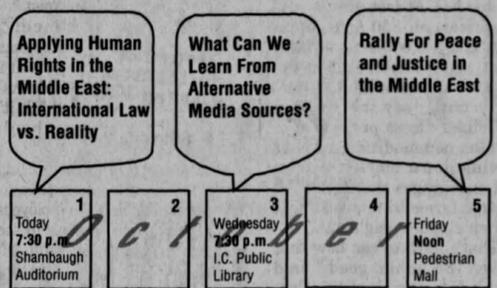

"We want to communicate that 5,000 people in Iraq, as many as those killed in the World Trade Center attack, die each month as a result of U.N. sanctions," said Franklin Seiberling, a member of Iowans for Peace with Iraq, which is co-sponsoring the week's events.

The ban on importing chlorine, a crucial element for purifying water, is an example of how U.N. policies harm Iraq, he said. The ban results in an epidemic of diseases that are normally treatable, he said.

A reading and discussion,

"What Can We Learn From Alternative Media Sources? How Robert Fisk's Reporting Has Changed Our Perception of the Middle East," is scheduled for Wednesday.

The discussion will focus on the role of major media companies in determining what is newsworthy.

Media conglomerations are exercising too much power in their control of the news agenda, and they are not focusing on issues that deserve the public's attention, said Darrell Yeane, a member of the Iowans for Peace with Iraq planning committee.

A lecture by Robert Fisk, a journalist for The Independent, was scheduled for Oct. 2 but was later canceled because of Fisk's work conflicts. The lecture was a highly touted event, and its cancellation has left event organizers wondering how it will affect attendance at other events.

"If Fisk were to speak, we would have had a tremendous turnout," Seiberling said. "Now, it's hard to tell what will happen."

Others were more optimistic about turnout.

"[Fisk's] not speaking could hurt our attendance," David said, "but with recent events, there might be more interest."

The week will conclude Friday with a Rally for Peace and Justice with the Middle East, commencing at noon on the Pedestrian Mall.

At 12:30 p.m., participants will proceed to the office of Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, to deliver a petition calling for justice in U.S. policies in the Middle East and a peaceful response to the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

"We would emphasize justice through peace as opposed to war," Seiberling said.

Local largesse aids Red Cross

By Pam Dewey
The Daily Iowan

American flags adorn many homes and downtown store fronts, but businesses and Iowa City residents are donating more than their windows to assist the victims of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Monetary donations to the Grant Wood Chapter of the American Red Cross, which includes Iowa City, have more than doubled in the last few weeks, said Betty Hargraves, the chapter's executive director. She did not have an estimate of the total.

"That is what you usually expect to happen in the Midwest," she said of the increased donations in Iowa.

Many Iowa City businesses have donated money to the Red Cross this month to aid families affected by the Sept. 11 terrorists attacks in New York City and Washington, D.C.

"The Iowa City City Council passed an act Sept. 25 to donate approximately $62,000, $1 per Iowa City resident, to the Red Cross for attack victims."

Many other city governments nationwide are doing the same, said Mayor Ernie Lehman.

—Mike O'Donnell,
City councillor

"I can't imagine a city that didn't support this," said Councillor Mike O'Donnell. "It's an amazing thing how a tragedy like this unites the country."

Bartenders at Givannis, 109 E. College St., are donating all their tip money to the American Red Cross, said Mary Broderick, the general manager.

The Windows of Hope Family Relief Fund is spearheading a nationwide effort to raise money for families of the Windows of Hope restaurant workers who perished in the World Trade Center collapse and for surviving restaurant employees. Many Iowa City restaurants are participating in the Oct. 11 event that will encourage a 10 percent donation from restaurants to the relief fund. One Twenty Six, 126 E. Washington St., is overseeing approximately 10 local restaurants that will take part in the event. Some of their employees said they plan to also donate their tips that day.

For the last two weeks, Iowa State Bank & Trust, 102 S. Clinton St., has collected $5,166 in donations to be sent to the Red Cross to aid attack victims, said Carol Besler Gray, the bank's vice president of marketing and community relations. Contributions are being accepted through Nov. 1.

The Vine Tavern and Eatery in Coralville, in conjunction with Fox Radio, 100.7 FM, raised $1,555 by contributing 25 percent of its weekly lunch sales to the American Red Cross, said assistant manager Jacob Chloner.

Minn. workers gird for strike

By Brian Bakst
Associated Press

ST. PAUL, Minn. — State employees planned to strike this morning after failed contract talks prompted leaders of the two biggest employee unions to authorize walkouts.

Nearly 28,000 workers — more than half of the state's work force — could strike at 6 a.m. Only 1,700 prison guards are barred from walking off the job. It would be the first government work stoppage in Minnesota since it suffered a 22-day strike two decades ago.

Leaders of the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees Council 6 unanimously agreed Sunday to recommend that its 19,000 workers strike, said Peter Benner, the executive director.

"We've done this with great reluctance," he said. "This is not how we hoped this round of bargaining would end."

Benner said the union was prepared to go back to the table at any time but there would not be any more talks Sunday. "The strike is on," he said.

The 10,500-member Minnesota Association of Professional Employees also gave the go-ahead Sunday. Mediation between the two unions and state negotiators broke off late on Sept. 29.

"The reason it has come to this is a resignation on the part of state workers that enough is enough," said Jim Monroe, the executive director of the professional workers' union. He said there was an "extremely slim" chance they would resume negotiations.

Gov. Jesse Ventura hasn't been closely involved in the contract talks, but he did order some 1,000 National Guard members to train for work in state-run veterans homes, treatment centers, and other care facilities. Non-striking managers also will be redeployed to help with food service, housekeeping, and other basic needs.

Lt. Col. Denny Shields said strike duty shouldn't interfere with other obligations, including the Guard's new airport-security assignment. Minnesota has approximately 12,000 Guard members.

If all eligible state employees strike, Minnesota's government would be deprived of more than 50 percent of its workers.

The office that issues driver's licenses and auto registrations warns of probable delays. The state crime lab expects to limit entry of fingerprints and convictions into databases used for criminal background checks. The Minnesota Zoo likely will close to the public, but managers will care for the animals.

Julien Carter, the commissioner of the Department of Employee Relations, said thousands of airline industry-related layoffs and possible military action make a strike even less desirable. But he said negotiators did all they could.

CITY BRIEFS

Local business sustains fire damage

A downtown Iowa City business is under investigation for a suspicious fire that caused $7,500 in damage on the morning of Sept. 29.

Iowa City firefighters responded to a report at 1:12 a.m. of a fire at the Tobacco Bowl, 111 S. Dubuque St. Investigators said the fire is suspicious because nothing electrical was in the area where it started, said Iowa City Fire Department Battalion Chief Jerry Blank.

The fire originated in a bathroom located in an addition at the back of the store, he said. A built-in cabinet sustained fire damage, but nothing else was affected, he said.

Upon arrival, firefighters encountered smoke from the rear of the Tobacco Bowl. They extinguished the fire in 20 minutes, officials said.

Local man arrested for buying meth ingredients

Iowa City police arrested a man on Sept. 28 for purchasing items allegedly for use in the production of methamphetamines.

Officers arrested Iowa City resident John White, 34, at 7:37 p.m. at Wal-Mart, 1001 Highway 1 W., on charges of possession of precursors to methamphetamine, according to police records.

A Wal-Mart employee told police that three individuals purchased a large amount of the cough syrup Sudafed, said Sgt. Bob Krei.

White was charged because of actions beyond the purchase of the cough medicine, which police would not specify. The other two individuals identified in Wal-Mart have not been charged, and police are still investigating the incident.

Giant farms find true cash crop

By Philip Brasher
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Florida real-estate developer, Texas' massive King Ranch, and dozens of other giant farms are cashing in on a program created last year to bypass payment limits on federal subsidies for grain, cotton, and other crops.

Maurice Wilder, a Clearwater, Fla., developer who controls 130,000 acres of farm and ranch land in eight states, has collected $1.2 million in benefits to himself and his company, the Wilder Corp., according to records obtained by the Associated Press under the Freedom of Information Act.

The normal limit on subsidies that any individual or company can receive is $150,000.

King Ranch Inc., a Houston-based company that owns 825,000 acres, received more than $638,000 under the program, according to the Agriculture Department records. In South Dakota, a beekeeper collected $280,000 in subsidies in a honey of a deal.

"It's almost a must in the agriculture business today to get some government support. I think it's a good deal," said Wilder, who owns a series of office buildings and mobile-home parks in addition to farm holdings spread from Indiana to Colorado and Texas.

King Ranch, which is owned by descendants of 19th-century founder Richard King, raises 60,000 cattle, grows cotton and grain, and controls citrus and sugar interests in Florida.

The company, which also has income from tourism, leather goods, and oil and gas royalties, has until now avoided taking federal subsidies.

"Frankly, the payments are limited in size. They require a lot of financial disclosure that we don't want to go through," said Jack Hunt, the company's president.

The House is expected to consider imposing a strict $150,000 cap on all crop-based subsidies when it takes up a major farm bill this week.

The program works this way: A farmer takes out a loan on a crop at the government's price-support rate and then pays back the loan at the local market price. So a farmer could borrow $500,000 on a crop worth $300,000 and pocket the $200,000 difference. It's known as a "certificate" program, although no such paper changes hand; the transactions are done by computer.

A wide variety of commodities are eligible, including corn, cotton, rice, sorghum, barley, and soybeans. The bulk of the money paid out on the 2000 harvest — $280.5 million — went to rice and cotton interests. Two large rice-grower cooperatives in Arkansas collected nearly $150 million between them.

Supporters of the program say the normal payment limits are too low. At last year's market prices, an 850-acre cotton farm and a 6,000-acre soybean farm would have reached the $150,000 payment limit.

But critics say the program subsidizes excess production of surplus commodities, further driving down market prices, and encourages the expansion of large farms to the detriment of their smaller neighbors.

"That's hard to see how that serves the public good," said Chuck Hassebrook of the Center for Rural Affairs, a Nebraska-based activist group that opposed the program. "The single most effective thing Congress could do to strengthen family farming is to stop subsidizing mega-farms."

Officials use GPS to monitor offenders

By Martha Raffaele
Associated Press

SCRANTON, Pa. — The green dot on the city map that fills Christine Tocki's computer screen doesn't move for several minutes, and that is exactly what she wants to see.

The dot represents a sex offender sentenced to home confinement. Its position tells Tocki, an assistant Lackawanna County district attorney, that the man is inside his house.

At any time of day, Tocki can find out where the offender is, thanks to the Global Positioning System, a network of 24 satellites orbiting 12,000 miles above the Earth.

Originally developed for the military, GPS is used for land surveying and by hikers, and it is available as an option in cars to help motorists navigate unfamiliar areas.

Now, it also is being used in at least 20 states to keep constant track of more than 1,000 offenders, many of whom have committed crimes involving sex or domestic violence.

"It's one less thing for victims to worry about. They can move around more freely without fear of crossing paths with their attackers," Tocki said.

In ordinary electronic-monitoring systems, offenders wear ankle bracelet transmitters that broadcast a signal to a receiver or tracking device in their home; if the offender strays too far, the receiver sends a message to authorities. For offenders allowed to leave home at certain times, such as going to work, authorities have to assume they're behaving themselves when they're out of range of the receiver.

"The shortfall of electronic monitoring is that you know only if the offender is home. You don't know what happens when he leaves the home," said Steve Chapin, the chief executive officer of ProTech Monitoring Inc., which markets one of the GPS units.

The GPS system also uses an ankle bracelet, but the receiver is a portable device that the offender carries with him anywhere. In addition to signals from the bracelet, the receiver gets location information from the GPS satellites and communicates with authorities via a cellular-phone connection.

The portable GPS receiver is cumbersome, slightly smaller than a child's lunch box and weighing 3.8 pounds. It's also more expensive; ProTech rents the units for $10 to $12 a day, compared with $3 to $6 for traditional electronic monitoring.

The GPS units are being used most widely in Florida, which has nearly 580 offenders on the system.

"We've found instances where one or two of them would rather go back to prison or jail because they feel it's too confining," said Joe Papy, the director of a Florida corrections department regional office in Tampa, which monitors approximately 70 offenders by GPS.

The Homecoming parade brought smiles and free candy to children.

UI junior Shannonn Spellman and sophomores Barbara Burchfield and Anne Wilberg of the Delta Delta Delta house blow bubbles on the Homecoming float they made with the Fiji house.

Hawkeye fans flocked to Kinnick Stadium by the thousands for the Iowa-Penn State game on Sept 29, in which the Hawkeyes beat the Nittany Lions, 24-18, improving their record to 3-0. In keeping with this year's Homecoming theme of "A Story Told in Black and Gold," Iowa fans, among the more than 69,400 attendees, proudly peppered the bleachers with their black and gold Hawkeye gear.

In reaction to the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, fans attending the game were asked to come an hour early because of heightened security. They were prohibited from bringing bags and other items such as opened water bottles into Kinnick; fans were not permitted re-entry after leaving during half-time. Game officials and fans honored the victims of the terrorist attacks with one minute of silence before kick-off.

Other Homecoming activities over the weekend included a parade in downtown Iowa City on Sept. 28. Steve Alford, Iowa men's basketball coach, acted as grand marshal. A 25-foot inflatable Herky the Hawkeye was purchased for the parade through the sale of Homecoming buttons; Herky was one of approximately 75 entries. Members of the Iowa City Fire Department headed the parade with a silent tribute to New York City firefighters.

Former S. Vietnam president dies

By Theo Emery
Associated Press

BOSTON — Former South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, who led South Vietnam in the war that tore apart his homeland and bitterly divided the United States then was forced to step down as North Vietnamese troops closed in, has died. He was 78.

Thieu collapsed on Sept. 27 at his home in suburban Foxboro and died late on Sept. 29 at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston, hospital spokesman Jerry Berger and cousin Hoang Duc Nha said Sunday.

Thieu had been in a coma; he was kept on a respirator until relatives could gather in Boston, Nha said.

Nha said the family had contacted many members of the Vietnamese expatriate community.

"Most of the expatriates now, with the more than 35 years of history, can see his role in a much clearer way, how he contributed to Vietnam," he said.

Thieu assumed power as chief of state in 1965, the same year President Lyndon Johnson ordered the first major escalation of the war, sending more than 100,000 U.S. troops to Vietnam. He presided over the U.S.-backed South Vietnam until the fall of its capital city, Saigon, in 1975, to Communist-led troops from North Vietnam.

He then largely disappeared from public view and lived quietly in exile, first in London, then in the Boston area, a symbol of the war in which nearly 60,000 American troops died.

After the ceremonial post of chief of state, Thieu was elected president in September 1967 after pulling off a stunning switch with his rival, Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky, who had previously wielded the most influence in the South Vietnamese military regime.

"I gave him that position and responsibility," Ky said Sunday in Los Angeles. He said he spoke with Thieu's wife and family by telephone on Sept. 29 after receiving news of Thieu's death.

The two had not seen each other since they fled South Vietnam in 1975, and Ky declined to comment further. "I don't think it is the right time to make a comment about someone who has just passed away," he said.

In Washington, a White House spokesman said Sunday there was no immediate comment on Thieu's death.

Thieu's legacy as the man who presided over the fall of South Vietnam cannot be separated from decisions of the American government, said Chau Tran, the former secretary general of South Vietnam's House of Deputies.

"He was a very intelligent and nice person, but as a leader, his successes and failures were associated with the American leaders at the time," Tran said Sunday. "He must be remembered as kind person, a good family person, a good husband, a good father."

Even with the assistance of 500,000 U.S. troops and massive amounts of military aid, Thieu was never able to turn the tide against the North.

When North Vietnamese troops were closing in on the South Vietnamese capital of Saigon, and the war was all but officially lost, Thieu still declared: "We will fight to the last bullet, the last grain of rice."

But he left power defeated, despised, and bitterly denouncing the superpower nation that had befriended him for more than a decade. He asserted that the United States broke a promise to continue providing military support after pulling out its combat troops in 1973, and that, he said, "led the South Vietnamese people to death."

When the end did come, his resignation was demanded by all sides to make way for peace talks with the North Vietnamese.

Thieu reluctantly stepped down on April 21, 1975, and left the country. South Vietnam was overrun shortly after his departure.

"The main thing that propped him up was the presence of American forces. He was not terribly effective. He was very difficult [for the U.S.] to deal with," historian Stanley Karnow, author of Vietnam: A History and a 13-part television history of Vietnam, said Sunday.

"People called him a puppet, but if he was a puppet, he pulled his own strings," Karnow said from his home near Washington.

Mideast truce wobbles as officials continue to bicker

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — A Mideast truce remained shaky Sunday, with Israeli troops fatally shooting three Palestinians in the West Bank. The killings bring the Palestinian death toll to 18 since the two sides pledged last week to formalize a cease-fire.

No Israelis have been killed since the cease-fire promises were made on Sept. 26, but Israel said its troops have faced dozens of attacks in recent days, as the Palestinians have marked the one-year anniversary of the current uprising with large street protests.

"Unfortunately, the Palestinian Authority has never stopped violence," said Israeli Cabinet minister Tzipi Livni.

Israel said the Palestinians had two days to enforce their part of the cease-fire or the latest truce was likely to fail, as had earlier ones during the past year of fighting.

The Palestinians, meanwhile, said the mounting death toll on the Palestinian side was the result of excessive force by Israeli troops. "We do not think that a cease-fire can be sustained under such circumstances, where Israeli soldiers are obviously given orders to shoot and kill at will," said Palestinian Information Minister Yasser Abed Rabbo.

Amid the ongoing friction, Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres met with senior Palestinian officials Ahmed Qureia and Saeb Erekat on Sunday for talks on the cease-fire. Later, regional commanders met in several parts of the Palestinian territories to discuss security matters, the Israelis said.

Erekat said he told Peres that Israel is not implementing the truce plan, firing at Palestinians and tightening restrictions instead of easing them. He said Peres complained about Palestinian violence. Erekat responded that Israel "must help in calming down the situation. Continuing killing the Palestinians will not help restore calm."

Also, Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat met Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak in Cairo and later flew to Jordan to confer with King Abdullah II.

Under the Israeli-Palestinian agreement reached on Sept. 26, both sides were to take several steps by Tuesday to ease tensions — and there were some signs of action by both sides Sunday.

The Israelis partially lifted a military blockade around the West Bank town of Jericho, an area that has been mostly quiet. Israel also reopened the border crossing it controls between Egypt and the southern end of the Gaza Strip.

In an unusual episode Sunday, Palestinian police in Gaza fired tear gas at Palestinian teenagers to prevent them from confronting Israeli troops at a border crossing. In the past year of fighting, Palestinian security forces have rarely intervened to keep youths from moving toward Israeli troops.

Still, the Palestinians were particularly upset about the shooting deaths of two Palestinian workers near the West Bank town of Tulkarem.

Palestinian taxi driver Asmi Asm said that in the pre-dawn hours of Sunday, he and other drivers were ferrying laborers to and from Tulkarem, near the border with Israel. The workers then intended to join the thousands of Palestinians who evade roadblocks and illegally slip into Israel each day to reach their jobs.

WORLD BRIEF

Shots fired in tense part of Macedonia

SKOPJE, Macedonia (AP) — Scattered gunfire rattled early Sunday through a volatile part of Macedonia that the government has said it intends to eventually retake from ethnic Albanian rebels who seized control during a six-month insurgency, police and witnesses said.

A total of approximately 50 rounds were fired into the air in what a police official said appeared to be a rebel warning to government authorities to back off from rebel strongholds in suburbs and villages near Tetovo, Macedonia's second-largest city. The official spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The gunfire came at a delicate time for the Balkan country, where majority Macedonians and minority ethnic Albanians are gradually implementing a Western-brokered peace plan signed last month.

Last week, NATO troops collected more than 3,300 weapons handed in by rebels as part of the peace deal, mostly in the area where the shots were fired Sunday. The top rebel leader later announced that his guerrillas, known as the National Liberation Army, had disbanded.

On Sept. 29, Macedonia's government promised to use restraint in restoring control over areas that were in rebel hands during the fighting, which broke out in February and killed dozens of people.

The Macedonian-dominated government said it would not move into those areas until other provisions of the peace accord are fulfilled — including its own obligation to implement legal reforms granting broader rights to ethnic Albanians who make up nearly one-third of the population.

But the authorities also say there is an urgent need to restore law and order in the contested areas and enable thousands of refugees displaced by the fighting to return home. The mostly Macedonian refugees have held a series of protests demanding that the government help them return home.

NATO officials, Western diplomats, and international monitors have warned that any hasty action by Macedonian police or the army could undermine peace efforts, which have halted armed clashes for weeks.

U.K. ran nuke tests on dead kids

By Chris Fontaine
Associated Press

LONDON — Thousands of bones were removed from dead British children without their parents' consent during Cold War-era nuclear tests, the nation's Atomic Energy Authority said Sunday.

The femurs of approximately 4,000 young children were removed from 1954 to 1970, agency spokeswoman Beth Taylor said. The bones were used in tests to measure the effects atmospheric explosions of hydrogen bombs were having on humans and the environment.

"It is true that parental or relatives' approval wasn't sought," she said. "We assume that parents weren't asked because it wasn't the norm at the time."

Similar revelations were made in Australia in June. The Australian Radiation Protection and Nuclear Safety Agency said bones from dead Australian children were once shipped to the United States and Britain for testing.

Taylor stressed that the British research — conducted in London and Glasgow, Scotland — contributed to a decision to halt atmospheric nuclear explosions in 1963.

"The program was done for the best of reasons," she said. "It was the period when we were doing atmospheric tests of hydrogen bombs, and there was quite a bit of concern about the dangers of nuclear fallout."

The issue of parents' control over their children's bodies following death made headlines earlier this year in Britain when it was revealed that a Dutch pathologist working at a Liverpool, England, children's hospital had stripped children of their organs during post-mortem examinations between 1988 and 1995 — without parental consent.

A spokeswoman for Scottish Parents for a Public Inquiry into Organ Retention said Sunday that stronger laws were needed to ensure that parents had the power to decide what happened to their children's remains.

Dr. Dick Van Velzen left Britain in 1995 to work at a hospital in Halifax, Canada; he was fired in 1998 and later hired by a Dutch hospital. He lost that job in February, after Canadian police issued a warrant for his arrest for storing human organs in Canada.

In June, he pleaded guilty in a Nova Scotia provincial court to charges he had illegally retained organs removed during autopsies of two children. He was sentenced to a year probation for committing an indignity to human remains. Van Velzen's work was not connected to Britain's nuclear research.

The British government said in a January report that the actions of Van Velzen were "unethical and illegal" and that "the pain caused to the parents by this dreadful sequence of events is unforgivable." The doctor's license to practice medicine there has been suspended.

A related report said more than 100,000 hearts, brains, lungs, and other organs were held by hospitals and medical schools across the country, many without the knowledge of next-of-kin.

The nuclear-related tests in Britain and Australia concentrated on strontium 90, a radioactive isotope that mimics the properties of calcium. The similarity allows bones and plants to absorb the isotope.

Raise awareness of domestic violence

Today marks the beginning of Domestic Violence Awareness Month. The term "domestic violence" is used to refer to situations in which a deliberate physical assault, generally on a woman, is made by an intimate partner such as a spouse, ex-spouse, boyfriend, or ex-boyfriend. In recent years, the term has also begun to include other forms of violence, such as abuse of elders, children, and siblings. Domestic violence also includes the often-overlooked situations of violence against male victims and violence between same-sex partners. Some public and private institutions now use the term "intimate-partner violence" in order to define more broadly the intentional emotional and/or physical abuse.

During October, a national campaign about issues and realities of domestic violence is developing to increase public awareness of the social and health problems that arise from intimate-partner violence in the United States. For example, not many people realize that family violence, which includes intimate-partner violence, involves elements of control and abuse of power by the perpetrator. People often justifify this behavior, calling the person very strict, or even just too concerned about the family. But the reality is that violence is used by the person to control either one member or the whole family.

In 1999, the Iowa Coalition Against Domestic Violence released the following facts:

- Between January 1990 and September 1999, at least 87 Iowa women were murdered by a husband, boyfriend, or intimate partner. During this time, 12 children were killed in related homicides.
- In Iowa, 116 children survived the murder of their mother; 81 of the surviving children were minors; and 48 children were present at the scene of the murder.
- Researchers point to battery as the cause of as much as 63 percent of homelessness among women.
- In the state of Iowa, crisis telephone hotlines reported 26,795 calls from July 1998 through June 1999.
- In Iowa in 1998, 2,543 women and 2,756 children sought refuge in domestic-violence shelters.
- The Iowa Judicial Branch Annual Report notes that the number of domestic-abuse civil filings rose from 188 in 1990 to 4,753 in 1996.

- The Department of Public Safety states that in 1997, 6,243 incidents of domestic abuse were reported to law enforcement. The FBI estimates that only one in 10 domestic assaults is ever reported.
- Between 20,000 and 44,000 Iowa women suffer abuse in their homes each year.

What can one do to help counter this problem? Learn more about intimate-partner violence. Information is available in libraries, from local and national domestic-violence organizations, and from the Internet, through sites such as the Family and Intimate Violence Prevention Team Web site (www.cdc.gov/nceip/dvp/fivpt.htm). In fact, the Family and Intimate Violence Prevention Team suggests that the more one understands intimate-partner violence, the easier it will be to recognize it and help friends who may be victims. Should you find yourself, a friend, or a family member in such a situation, contact the Iowa Domestic Violence Hotline at 1-800-942-0333 or the Iowa City police. Awareness is the best tool we have to fight domestic violence.

Letter to the Editor

A Homecoming worth remembering

One of the things I have enjoyed for the last 21 years is returning to the UI for Homecoming weekend to be in the alumni band. Frankly, most years are hardly memorable. They are one long blur of laughs and good times. This one was different. After the Sept. 28 parade, approximately 20 of us toured the various downtown bars, playing the school fight song. We were in a bar that was jammed with football weekend partiers. One of our members started playing "The Star Spangled Banner," and the rest of us joined in. The place stopped; we all stood and sang the national anthem.

On Sept. 29, as we entered the stadium, there was a typical Iowa crowd ready for Big Ten football. I noticed groups of students holding up large American flags, and 18-year-old boys with red, white, and blue face paint. I have been to more than 100 games in Kinnick Stadium and have never seen anything quite like it.

This year the plan for the pregame band presentation was to include a moment of silence for all those affected by the Sept. 11 attacks. As I stood at attention under the goal post, I wondered just how you could quiet a crowd of 70,000 tailgaters and students—but then it happened. Everyone there understood. We were one.

I have stood at midfield every Homecoming for the last 21 years and been filled with emotion as I sang the Iowa fight song with thousands of Hawkeye fans. This year I stood at midfield and sang "America the Beautiful" with thousands of tear-filled Americans. This homecoming I will not forget.

The sanctity of moving on

I live for distractions. Especially lately. On most days, I would rather watch television than read about legislative processes at the federal and state levels. I would rather read the newspaper than write a paper analyzing the causes of World War I. But lately, I would rather clean my apartment several times consecutively than do any of these things.

Since the fateful events of Sept. 11, television stations have become saturated with news anchors offering "follow-up" stories, which have reshaped practically the same information since Sept. 17. Though there is rarely anything new being reported, there is nothing else to watch. Newspapers have exploited every possible source for information that could potentially present a different look at the same tragedy, while other stories receive minimal coverage in paragraphs on the last pages.

I have been stunned. I have mourned. And I have been angry. Now I am ready to move on.

This is why, since Sept. 11, I have been searching for a distraction from news that doesn't change. I have been waiting for the next issue of US Weekly to be delivered to my mailbox. I want to read trivial tidbits about which celebrity has been seen where. I need to laugh at the "Fashion Police" comments. I want to read an out-of-nowhere story about female stars of the '80s and what they are doing now.

Amanda Mittlestadt

I am ready to read about the wonderful things in the world again, because I know that they are still there. I want to read about a great new CD that I absolutely must have or a movie that I absolutely must see. I want to read stories that make me laugh and see pictures that make me smile.

I am ready to turn on the television to the fall premiere of my favorite shows on CBS and NBC. I want to watch "King of Queens" and "Everybody Loves Raymond" and laugh until my sides hurt. For an hour each Thursday, I want to wonder who is the father of Rachel's baby on "Friends" and submerge myself in the antics of Jack on "Will and Grace."

Sports made its triumphant return last weekend, to the delight of many people who were seeking a similar escape, their own distraction. As teams resumed play, fans were able to find a return to the routines of their regular lives. They found sanctity in sports entertainment at a time when little entertainment could be found. The Hawkeye football team took the field last weekend for the first time since that catastrophic September morning. In a style true to Hawkeye tradition, fans rallied wholeheartedly behind their team, forgetting everything and becoming completely caught up in the diversion that this weekend's game provided.

"Saturday Night Live" also returned this weekend. New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani opened the show with a brief acknowledgment of last month's tragedy. The rest of the show, however, presented generic humor and avoided all things sensitive or offensive. Declared by Giuliani as "one of our great New York City institutions," SNL's 27th season premiere delivered the jokes that so many had been seeking for the past few weeks.

I want to believe that we are still creative beings who can restore some sense of normalcy to our own lives by making each other smile.

I am ready to reaffirm my belief in the sanctity of entertainment.

We need to read magazines that exist only for enjoyment. We need to laugh at television sitcoms. We need to attend football games and get excited when our team scores. We have to laugh at ourselves. It is time to revisit the happiness in life.

We need to remember — to never forget — and we need to move on.

Length: 101 minutes

 The Daily Iowan

Sometimes one scene is all it takes for a film to sink its emotional claws into you.

For me, it is the moment in Hearts in Atlantis when 11-year-old Bobby Garfield (Anton Yelchin) and the beautiful Carol Gerber (Mika Boorem) get stuck on a Ferris wheel at the carnival. Without warning, Bobby leans in and pecks her on the lips. Carol sits frozen. It's not that she didn't want the kiss, she explains. "I just wasn't ready." Bobby pauses, then slowly leans in again.

What's remarkable about this scene is that director Scott Hicks (Shine) doesn't try to manipulate the drama into anything more than it is. There's no extra music, no close-ups caught in slow motion — just a tender exchange between two friends on their way to becoming adults.

Based on a Stephen King novella, Hearts in Atlantis is appropriately set in the summer of 1960, when America, like Bobby and Carol, was on the cusp of great change. Bobby lives with his mom (Hope Davis), a pretty but resentful woman who spends more time worrying about her job and her wardrobe than her son. When a mysterious man with a psychic gift, Ted Brautigam (Anthony Hopkins), moves into a room in Bobby's house, the two develop an unlikely but important friendship.

Atlantis is a modest, absorbing film that transcends its overly nostalgic view of a bygone America because Hicks and writer William Goldman (Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid) don't overstate the sentimental or the supernatural aspects of the story.

Even as Ted's gift gradually starts to rub off on Bobby, there are no amazing scenes of metaphysical phenomenon, such as in The Green Mile, another King adaptation that shares many similarities with this film. The psychic gift Ted and Bobby share isn't a "special power" so much as an insight, a lucid, thorough way of looking at the world and the people around them. Not surprisingly, the movie abounds with visual imagery, especially mirrors and prisms, which reveal the many faces of each character.

 Ted (Anthony Hopkins) and Bobby (Anton Yelchin) embrace in the movie Hearts in Atlantis.

The film's photography is enchanting; many scenes are shot at the magic pre-dusk hour, producing a warm, yellow-orange glow. It's almost too beautiful to watch at times, but its fairy-tale quality is what gives Atlantis charm.

When Ted asks Bobby to help him look out for the "low men" who are after him to exploit his gift, I was reminded of The Princess Bride, also written by Goldman. Bobby becomes intrigued by Ted's story about these evil men and the possibility of them coming to his sleepy little town, just as the boy in The Princess Bride gets caught up in his grandfather's tale of swordfighting heroes and true love.

Goldman's screenplay isn't always as subtle as it could be. Namely, there's an unnecessary voice-over at the end, where the grown-up Bobby (David Morse) explains what has already been made explicitly clear — that this was the last summer of his youth, that Ted, played perfectly by Hopkins with just the right mixture of sorrow and hope, opened his eyes to the world around him. Still, Hearts in Atlantis is a touching portrait not of innocence lost, but knowledge gained.

Zoolander, Atlantis push box office

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A trio of strong new releases helped lure audiences back to theaters after the worst weekend of the year. Don't Say a Word, Zoolander, and

Hearts in Atlantis took in a combined estimated total of more than $43 million, driving a strong fall weekend for the industry. Zoolander, starring Ben Stiller as a feeble-minded fashion model, grabbed the No. 2 spot with $15.7 million. Hearts in Atlantis, a coming-of-age tale starring Anthony Hopkins, opened third, taking in $9.5 million.

Together, the three openers claimed two-thirds of the total estimated weekend box office of $66.2 million for the top 12 movies.

No bin Laden negotiations, U.S. says

TALIBAN

The Afghan ambassador to neighboring Pakistan said bin Laden was hidden away for his own protection at a site inside Afghanistan known only to top Taliban security officials.

"He's in Afghanistan. He is under our control," the envoy, Abdul Salam Zaeef, told journalists in Islamabad. "He's in a place which cannot be located by anyone."

The president of Pakistan, Gen. Pervez Musharraf, said hopes were "very dim" that the Taliban would surrender bin Laden. Taliban supreme leader Mullah Mohammed Omar took a hard stance in a radio address Sunday, telling Afghans not to fear U.S. strikes because "Americans don't have the courage to come here."

Zaeef said the Taliban, which has rejected a series of appeals to hand over bin Laden and avert a military confrontation, was willing to talk. "We are thinking of negotiation," he said, adding that if direct evidence against bin Laden were produced, "it might change things."

White House Chief of Staff Andrew Card responded: "The president has said we're not negotiating."

Card said Taliban government officials have been told what to do. "They've got to turn not only Osama bin Laden over, but all the operations of the al Qaeda organization. They've got to stop being a haven where terrorists can train," he said on "Fox News Sunday."

Bin Laden must "be purged from Afghanistan, and the Taliban knows that," Card said. "The United States is very patient, but we want to see justice done, and we want to see it done quickly."

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld was skeptical of the Taliban claim.

"It was just a few days ago that they said they didn't know where he was, so I have no reason to believe anything a Taliban representative has said," he said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

The continuing threat against Americans was cited by Ashcroft as he argued for legislation he said would help confront those plotting terrorism.

He called on Congress to meet President Bush's Friday deadline for approval of the administration's plan.

"We think that there is a very serious threat of additional problems now. And frankly, as the United States responds, that threat may escalate," Ashcroft said.

"Very frankly, we need to do everything we can here at home," the attorney general said, repeating his assertion that his department needs increased powers for surveillance, the ability to use information gathered by foreign governments and the ability to detain terrorist suspects for longer periods of time.

"Talk will not prevent terrorism. We need to have action by the Congress. We need the tools to prevent terrorism," Ashcroft said.

Congress has appeared cool toward the Bush administration's anti-terrorism package. Some lawmakers have questioned whether some of the provisions infringe on civil liberties.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said headway is being made, but he offered no timetable for passage.

At memorial, firefighters honor 'family'

FIREFIIGHTERS

Lt. Gov. Sally Pederson said she commended firefighters for their roles in their communities.

"This memorial is to mourn those we have lost," she said. "They were heroes, as each of you is."

Those in attendance also contributed approximately $50,000, said firefighter association Treasurer Mike Reuman. The donations will assist New York firefighters and their families. The Algona Fire Department also presented a $6,500 check.

The ceremony ended with the ringing of the house bell five times in four sets, a traditional sign of tragic news, and a rendition of "God Bless America."

Afghan refugees might suffer most

AFGHANISTAN

Many Afghans were on the edge of starvation before the attacks, and they have fled to the countryside, where food is even more scarce. The Taliban also kicked out all foreign-aid workers this month and threatened Afghan relief workers with execution if they contacted anyone outside the country. U.N. officials left behind only a two weeks' supply of food.

"What's amazing is how much damage can be done without even starting military action," said Kathleen Newland of the Migration Policy Institute in Washington.

U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan on Sept. 27 appealed for $584 million to aid 7.5 million Afghans over the next six months. On Sept. 28, President Bush directed the State Department to release $25 million to help with Afghan relief efforts.

On Sept. 29, a convoy carrying 200 tons of wheat left Pakistan for Kabul, the Afghan capital — the first food aid since the terrorist attacks.

U.S. military leaders are "very closely watching how the humanitarian crisis is developing," Pentagon spokesman Lt. Col. George Rhyndance said Sept. 29. The State Department is leading U.S. government efforts to deal with the refugees, and the Defense Department is consulting with diplomatic officials and humanitarian groups "to determine the proper course if there is a defense piece to this," Rhyndance said.

Americans to blur the party lines and transcend cultural differences.

"Leadership is to put partisan in the back seat," he said. "The president will have to make some decisions we will question. Bipartisanship cannot be temporary."

The American way is to stand up for one another, he said, and in this time of conflict, the country must be true to tradition.

"A gate has been opened," he said. "Things we knew before have been left behind. We face new dangers and new opportunities."

Gore did not mention any intention to run for public office at the fund-raiser, which, Wegmann said, left her disappointed.

"I really wanted him to talk about future plans," she said. "But it would have been inappropriate at this time."

Sara Stephenson, a member of the UI Democrats, said Gore's lecture style reflected his new role as a visiting professor at Columbia University and two Tennessee universities.

"I felt like I should be taking notes," she said.

IOWA 24, PENN STATE 18

Ugly, but a win

Turnovers and penalties mar 3rd Iowa victory

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

A masterful performance it was not, but that doesn't mean the Iowa football team won't take a victory over Penn State — even an ugly one.

The resounding words from the Hawkeyes' mouths following their 24-18 win over the Nittany Lions were that another poorly executed, penalty-filled Saturday afternoon will not end with such a positive result.

"If we continue to do that, it will hurt us," senior receiver Kahlil Hill said. "We can't escape that fact."

Despite being flagged 10 times for 94 yards, Iowa opened the Big Ten season in successful fashion, improving to 3-0 on the year. Meanwhile, the Nittany Lions dropped to 0-3 for the second time in coach Joe Paterno's 36-year tenure.

Penn State's fifth loss in its last six games, stemming back to last season, prevented Paterno from notching career win No. 353 as well. The 74-year-old coach is one win away from tying Paul "Bear" Bryant as the winningest coach in major college-football history.

After the loss, Paterno found little consolation in the improvements his young squad made because the answers to the team's unnerving questions linger

The devil is in the details

Much of the talk surrounding Iowa's Big Ten season opener pertained to how the team would react to having three weeks off. The talk was warranted, as the Hawkeyes looked less than impressive in defeating Penn State, 24-18.

Even less impressive was the play of Penn State. Despite what Kirk Ferentz may have said heading into the game, the Nittany Lions are not a good football team. To put it bluntly, they looked exactly like the Hawkeyes two years ago.

They were young, relatively inexperienced, and definitely overmatched.

The Hawkeyes basically spotted Penn State nine points, two on a safety snapped out of the back of the end zone and seven on a blocked punt in the final minutes of the game. Still, the Nittany Lions could not win because they proved inept at creating their own points.

That's why Penn State lost. Now, about those Hawkeyes.

A win is a win is a win, but there wasn't much to celebrate on the field Sept. 29.

Special-teams play, with the exception of kickoff returns, was abysmal. A blocked field goal in the first quarter, the safety on a dropped snap, the second blocked punt that resulted in Penn State's final touchdown — it was enough to make a special-teams coach shudder.

The Hawkeyes definitely need to clean up their act on special teams, but that wasn't the only area that will need some polish before Iowa takes its act on the road to Purdue.

NFL ROUNDUP

Patriots hammer previously unbeaten Colts

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Otis Smith and Ty Law returned interceptions for touchdowns, and the New England Patriots got their first victory of the season, 44-13 Sunday over previously unbeaten Indianapolis.

The Colts (2-1) averaged 33 first-half points in their two victories as Peyton Manning threw six touchdown passes. But he also threw four interceptions, and that tendency continued against the Patriots, who led 20-0 at halftime.

Antowain Smith ran for 94 yards and two touchdowns. Smith's interception return was for 78 yards, and Law's was for 23. Adam Vinatieri kicked three field goals as the Patriots (1-2) won without quarterback Drew Bledsoe.

Rams 42, Dolphins 10

ST. LOUIS — Kurt Warner threw four touchdown passes, and Marshall Faulk scored three touchdowns in a rout of Miami.

Miami (2-1) was supposed to pose a stiff test, but the Rams (3-0) rolled up 451 yards in total offense, and Warner engineered a 99-yard scoring drive in the third quarter.

Warner, 16-0 in home games, counting regular season and playoffs, was 24-for-31 for 328 yards and no interceptions. In the first two games, he had four touchdown passes and three pickoffs.

Warner opened the game going 8-for-8 for 68 yards on a 10-play drive capped by a 3-yard touchdown pass to Ricky Proehl, giving him 13-straight completions in a span of two games.

Chiefs 45, 'Skins 13

LANDOVER, Md. — Kansas City scored more points in the second quarter than it managed in the first two games as Priest Holmes had 147 yards rushing and 78 yards receiving against Washington.

New Chiefs coach Dick Vermeil avoided his first 0-3 start, a record that new Redskins coach Marty Schottenheimer now has for the first time in his 16-year career.

Holmes, who had only 51 yards rushing in the first two games, had 99 yards rushing and scored three times in the second quarter alone. The Chiefs (1-2), who scored 28 points in the quarter, had only 27 in losses to the Raiders and Giants.

Packers 28, Panthers 7

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Brett Favre passed for 308 yards and three touchdowns, two coming after Carolina fumbles by Steve Smith, as Green Bay remained undefeated.

The Packers also got two field goals from Ryan Longwell, 128 total yards from Ahman Green and a defense that held the Panthers (1-2) to 169 yards.

Favre, completely healthy for the first time in years, shook off two early interceptions to lead the Packers (3-0) to 28-consecutive points and their seventh-straight victory dating back to last season.

Green Bay took control after rookie kick returner Smith fumbled on Carolina's first two kickoff returns of the second half.

Bonds stuck at No. 69

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Barry Bonds never had much of a chance at matching history.

Bonds stayed at 69 home runs, and the San Diego Padres beat the San Francisco Giants, 5-4, Sunday on Bubba Trammell's seventh-inning solo shot.

Bonds remained one homer away from Mark McGwire's single-season record set three years ago. Bonds had homered in each of the first two games of the Giants' final series this season with the Padres.

But on Sunday, Bonds grounded out, walked twice and was hit by a pitch from reliever Jose Nunez.

Bonds saw 11 pitches, only one of them a strike. He was left on deck when the game ended.

The game drew a sellout crowd of 41,669, and McCovey Cove — an inlet of the San Francisco Bay just beyond Pacific Bell Park's right-field wall — was jammed with fans in boats, kayaks, and on surfboards. All were hoping for that elusive home run from the Giants' left-hander.

The Giants have six games remaining, including three at homer-friendly Enron Field as the Giants head to Houston on Tuesday night.

And Bonds isn't the only one who must wait to make history.

San Diego's Rickey Henderson still needs one more run to reach 2,245, matching Ty Cobb's 73-year-old record. Henderson, who went 0-for-4 with a double-play grounder, is also three shy of his 3,000th career hit.

Nearly forgotten in all the home-run hoopla was the Giants' fight for a playoff spot. San Francisco missed a chance to move up, staying two games behind Arizona in the NL West.

Trammell, who agreed Sunday to a three-year contract extension, homered to left field for the go-ahead run off Tim Worrell (2-4).

With a 4-2 lead, Brian Tollberg loaded the bases with no outs in the fifth inning, giving up singles to Marvin Benard and Rich Aurilia before walking Bonds. Jeff Kent hit a sacrifice fly and John Vander Wal

Iowa Soccer team continues hot play

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Capping an unprecedented week for Iowa soccer, the Hawkeyes shut out Minnesota, 1-0, Sunday for their first-ever victory over the Gophers. The win came just three days after getting the program's first-ever win over Iowa State. The suddenly resurgent Hawkeyes have won three out of their last four games. They are 2-1 in the Big Ten, 4-5 overall, and are playing with a newfound confidence after a slow start to the season. Minnesota had won all five of its previous matches with the Hawks, but in those meetings, the Gophers never had to deal with as aggressive a defense as Iowa now possesses. Nothing is sweeter for Hawkeye defenders to look up and see an "0" on the scoreboard for the opposing team. It happened twice this past week; Iowa has allowed only one goal in its past four games. While defenders Chrissy Howard, Michelle Mobily, Tessa Poole, Lindsay May, and Katie Poole deserve plenty of credit, solid goalkeeping has given Iowa a chance to win. Freshman goaltender Britta Voegle continued her stellar play, saving 10 Gopher shot attempts. "The key to our win was the goalkeeper," said Iowa coach Wendy Logan. "Britta stopped two point-blank shots and totaled 10 saves." Late in the second half, Iowa converted a corner-kick opportunity. At the 86:36 mark, freshman midfielder Katie Clymer scored off an assist by May and Mobily. It was the first college goal for the Cedar Rapids native. Iowa has already equaled its Big Ten road-win total from a year ago. The Hawkeyes could only manage a win at Wisconsin during the 2000 season. "This was a huge win on the road for us because we have six conference road games and only four conference home games," Logan said. Two of those road games take place this weekend, as Iowa will visit Wisconsin Friday, followed by an afternoon game on Oct. 7 at Northwestern.

WOMEN'S TENNIS Hawkeyes struggle in first meet of year

By Ali Noller
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team faced tough competition at the three-day Furman Fall Classic in Greenville, S.C., winning only one match in the final day of action. Senior Toni Neykova won the Flight Two fifth-place match over Middle Tennessee State's Verena Preiss in straight sets (6-1, 7-6) Sunday afternoon. Neykova was also the only Hawkeye winner in singles competition in the Sept. 29 consolation round, defeating Wisconsin's Katie Dougherty in three sets (6-2, 1-6, 7-5). Neykova fell in the first round to Aniela Mojzisz of North Carolina on Sept. 28. Sophomore Cassie Haas finished fourth in Flight One after losing the third-place match to North Carolina's Julie Rotondi in straight sets (6-0, 6-2). Haas lost the semifinal match to Vanderbilt's Sarah Riske (6-2, 6-3) but won the first round of competition, defeating Kate Pinchbeck of North Carolina. Sophomore Denitza Alexan-drova finished eighth in Flight Three after having to retire after the first two rounds because of an injury. Alexandrova lost (4-6, 6-2, 7-5) in the first round to Kristin Koenig of North Carolina and fell to Carien Venter of Middle Tennessee State in the second round (7-6, 6-3). Sophomore Pascale Veraverbeke finished fourth in the Flight Four bracket after losing to Mary Neil Hagood in three sets (2-6, 7-6, 6-1). Junior Steffi Hoch also had to forfeit her Flight Five third-place match because of injury. In doubles competition, all three pairs played in consolation matches Sept. 29 after losing in the first round of competition Sept. 28. Neykova and Haas were winners in their Flight One seventh-place match after defeating Wisconsin's Katie Dougherty and Lara Vojnov (8-2). The Hawkeyes will next travel to Bloomington, Ind., to compete in the three-day Indiana Invitational Friday through Oct. 7.

Hawks continue to struggle in Michigan

By Jesse Steinfeldt
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's golf team continues to toil in mediocrity. The Hawkeyes returned from Ann Arbor, Mich., with a 12th-place tie at the Michigan Invitational. Baylor shot a 36-hole score of 574 (296-278) to capture the team title, while Iowa shot a 601 (301-300) to tie Air Force and Louisville. Baylor's Ryan Baca shot a 140 (72-68) and won a playoff with Ball State's Mike Gant to garner individual honors. Hawkeye coach Terry Anderson is confident that his golfers can perform better, but he is perplexed about what is miring the Hawkeyes in this fall slump. "We have streaks of brilliance, then we fall asleep," he said. "What the reason is, I don't know, but we are missing a lot of three-, four-, and five-foot puts." Juniors Kevin Johnson and Bo Anderson were Iowa's top performers, finishing in a tie for 36th place in medal competition. Course conditions were conducive for low scores, but the Hawkeyes couldn't take advantage. "The weather was perfect,"

Terry Anderson said. "The course was in good shape; it was absolutely pure." The tournament was scheduled to be a 54-hole event, but because of the rescheduled Michigan-Illinois football game, it was reduced to 36 holes played over two days. Team members teed up for 18 holes Sept. 28, then were provided with complimentary tickets to watch the football game on Sept. 29. The final 18 holes were completed Sunday. "It was a good weekend," Terry Anderson said. "It was fun to be a part of 107,000 fans in the Big House. Kinnick is much more friendly, though." The Iowa coach said the weekend's festivities were not a distraction to his golfers. Regardless, it is time for a talented team to wake up and begin to compete up to its abilities. The Hawkeyes will travel to Colorado Springs this weekend, the last chance to shore up their game before they defend Iowa's Big Four title on Oct. 15. "It's about time we turn it around," Terry Anderson said. E-mail DI reporter Jesse Steinfeldt at: jesse-steinfeldt@uiowa.edu

This week's winner is Dave Fontechia. Brian Anderson came in second, Jeff Reuter was third.

Hawkeyes emerge victorious and healthy

Iowa overcame penalties and early season mistakes to hold off the Nittany Lions, 24-18, in the Hawkeyes' second-straight Homecoming victory. The win also kept Joe Paterno one short of tying the record for Division 1 winningest football coach.

Dallas Clark had one goal in mind for his first season as tight end for the Hawkeyes: a 100-yard receiving game. No one, not even Clark himself, expected he would reach that goal in just three games.

"I didn't think I'd reach it that quick," Clark said. "It was just what the defense gave us." The junior caught seven Kyle McCann passes for 116 yards in Iowa's 24-18 victory over Penn State. Nittany Lion coach Joe Paterno may not have known Clark's name, but he did know what an effect he had on the Nittany Lion defense.

"No. 44?" he said. "He's a good player. He's a big part of their offense."
 After three games, Clark is the team's leading receiver with 274 yards on 16 catches.

Hanks helps out

Former Iowa defensive back and NFL All-Pro cornerback Merton Hanks served as more than an honorary captain Sept. 29.

Hanks, who starred at Iowa from 1987-90, spent the day helping Iowa's current defensive backs deal with Penn State's massive receivers.

"We were asking him, 'These guys are big; give us some tips of what we can do differently to take these guys out," and it worked," Matt Stockdale said.

Hanks' advice helped the Hawkeyes hold Penn State to under 200 yards of total offense, including just 161 in the air.

Kaeding's kick streak ends

Kicker Nate Kaeding had 11 consecutive field goals snapped on his first attempt of the afternoon.

Kaeding set up for a 22-yard chip shot in the first half, but Penn State's Sam Crenshaw cleanly blocked the kick, preventing an Iowa score. Kaeding shouldn't feel too bad; Crenshaw has blocked three kicks in two games this season.

The former Iowa City West star made his only other attempt of the afternoon in the fourth quarter, booting a 47-

Notre Dame, 0-3. Bob Davie cringes when he says it.

Penn State, 0-3. Joe Paterno smiles halfheartedly and says he feels good about his team "if you can feel good about getting licked."

Life is miserable at two of college football's most passionate places, the Golden Dome and Happy Valley. Two schools that subscribe to "winning is everything" are losing at record rates.

Fans want Davie fired, even though he signed a five-year contract extension after leading the Irish to the Fiesta Bowl last year. So what, they say. That was then.

The atmosphere isn't quite so charged at Penn State, where 74-year-old Joe Pa is still very much revered. However, the whispers grow louder with each loss.

This isn't supposed to happen at schools that are among the top five in all-time wins — the Irish with 776 and the Nittany Lions with 739.

• Notre Dame's winless start is its worst in 115 years of Irish football. "It stings to hear that, but all that matters is how it ends," Davie said. The Irish play Pittsburgh at home Saturday.

• The Lions are right behind in futility. A loss Saturday against No. 15 Michigan would make it Penn State's worst start in its 115 years, too. "We're tentative, making mistakes," Paterno said. "We gotta grow up a little bit."

An added element at Penn State is Paterno's quest to break Bear Bryant's major college mark of 323 career wins. He's stuck on 322. The way the season is going, Florida State coach Bobby Bowden, now with 318 wins, may pass Bryant first.

After the Sept. 29 24-18 loss at Iowa, Paterno was asked about the record. He sighed, stood up, and walked out without saying a word. End of news conference.

While Notre Dame's inability to win is a surprise after last year's 9-2 regular-season, Penn State's isn't. Since being ranked No. 2 and losing to Minnesota late in the '99 season, the Lions have won just five of 16 regular-season games.

Nerves are frayed at campus-yard field goal to extend Iowa's lead at the time to 24-11.

In two games against the Nittany Lions, Kaeding has connected on attempts of 46, 47, 48, and 49 yards.

Betts gets on the board

Senior running back Ladell Betts scored his first rushing touchdown of the season when he completed a 1-yard run in the first quarter.

Betts also scored from two yards out in the second half to tie him for 10th all-time on Iowa's career rushing-touchdowns list with 17 and for 18th in career points.

He carried the ball 33 times for 95 yards despite appearing less than 100 percent. Betts was understandably a little sore following the game but happy with his effort.

"In a game like that, you always want to be in there," he said of playing injured.

Ground game halts

Despite the performance of Betts, neither team had an outstanding day rushing the football. The Hawkeyes finished with 104 yards rushing, and the Nittany Lions notched just 33.

Tailback Eric McCoo led the Nittany Lions with 27 yards rushing, while Betts' efforts paced the Hawkeyes.

"[Iowa] played the run real well," Paterno said.

Healthy Hawkeyes

Iowa escaped its Homecoming game with no new injuries. The Hawkeyes suffered a minor scare in the third quarter when defensive back Betts Sapp went down after making a tackle, but he walked off with the help of trainers.

Preliminary reports said Sapp may have suffered a minor concussion, but he appeared in the locker room for post-game interviews and seemed fine.

Offensive linemen Eric Steinbach and Alonzo Cunningham and defensive back Bob Sanders all returned from injuries to see playing time. It was Cunningham's first appearance of the season.

Starting strong

The Sept. 29 victory marked the first time the Hawkeyes have started the season 3-0 since 1997, when the team began the year 4-0.

The Hawkeyes finished the 1997 season 7-5 and earned a berth in the Sun Bowl, where they lost, 17-7, to Arizona State.

Conversely, Penn State has begun the season 0-3 for just the second time in Paterno's 26 years as head coach. The Lions began the 1983 season 0-3, losing to Iowa, 42-34, for their third loss.

Easy wins kept Miami and Florida 1-2 in the AP media poll, while a close call did nothing to shake Oklahoma's No. 3 standing.

The Sooners beat Kansas State, 38-37, on Sept. 29, holding steady behind the No. 1 Hurricanes and No. 2 Gators and ahead of two Big 12 Conference rivals, No. 4 Nebraska and No. 5 Texas.

Miami tops the Associated Press Top 25 for the fourth-straight poll, collecting 34 first-place votes and 1,744 points from the 72 sports writers and broadcasters on the AP panel. The Hurricanes (3-0) beat Pittsburgh, 43-21, on Sept. 27 night.

Florida (4-0) knocked Mississippi State out of the Top 25 with a 52-0 win Sept. 29 and received 22 first-place votes and 1,725 points.

Oklahoma (4-0) had nine first-place votes and 1,648 points.

Nebraska (5-0), a 36-3 winner against Missouri, had two first-place votes and 1,546 points. Texas (4-0) defeated Texas Tech, 42-7, and had four first-place votes and 1,511 points.

On Saturday, Oklahoma plays Texas in Dallas.

Georgia Tech took the biggest hit in Sunday's poll, tumbling eight spots to No. 17 after its 47-44 overtime loss to Clemson.

Tennessee, with a 26-18 win over LSU, moved up a notch to No. 6, followed by No. 7 Oregon, No. 8 Virginia Tech, No. 9 UCLA, and No. 10 Fresno State (one first-place vote).

The Bruins (4-0) are the newest members of the top 10 after their 38-7 win over Oregon State knocked the Beavers out of the poll.

The top five in the USA Today/ESPN coaches' poll match the AP poll — Miami, Florida, Oklahoma, Nebraska, and Texas.

Washington moved up two places to No. 11 in the AP poll with its 31-28 win over California, followed by No. 12 Kansas State, No. 13 South Carolina, No. 14 Northwestern, No. 15 Michigan, No. 16 Florida State, No. 17 Georgia Tech, No. 18 LSU, No. 19 Clemson, and No. 20 BYU. K-State fell only one spot after its loss at Oklahoma.

Purdue is No. 21, followed by No. 22 Stanford, No. 23 Toledo, No. 24 Texas A&M, and No. 25 Maryland.

In addition to Oregon State and Mississippi State, Illinois and Michigan State fell out of the Top 25. New this week are Clemson, Stanford, Texas A&M, and Maryland.

Volleyball team extends losing streak

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

Iowa came home winless from its weekend road trip to the Great Lakes, losing to Michigan, 3-2, on Sept. 28 and to Michigan State, 3-1, on Sept. 29. The defeats extended the Hawkeyes' losing streak to five matches; the last Iowa win was on Sept. 4.

With the loss, Iowa drops to 2-8 overall, 0-4 in the Big Ten.

But the Hawkeyes remain upbeat. Coach Rita Buck-Crockett said she knew her team would have to go through plenty of growing pains during the year, and she is confident that the Hawkeyes' improved play will start showing up in the win column.

"I said we're going to lose some matches and win some matches," she said. "As long as we're fighting, then we'll get along. When you lie down and die, that's when you've got problems."

Against Michigan, the Hawkeyes alternated game wins, eventually falling in the fifth game, 15-8. Iowa was led by senior Sara Meyermann's 21 kills and 12 digs and Renee Hill's 41 assists and 12 kills.

A slow start once again plagued the Hawkeyes against Michigan State. Iowa dropped the first two games, 30-18 and 30-16. After the break, however, the Hawks came out with new life. They took the third game, 30-26, but dropped a tight fourth game, 30-28. Junior Jamie Lansing led the Hawkeyes with 12 kills and four blocks. Meyermann chipped in with 10 kills and 3 service aces, and Hill added 28 assists against the Spartans. Freshman Laura Simpson picked up a career-high 13 digs.

The Hawkeyes start three freshmen and one sophomore, and Buck-Crockett said the only way to combat the slow starts is to learn on the fly.

"I think it's just going to have to be experience," she said. "They've got to find something to get them out of the fear of competition. I think we're getting there."

Iowa made improvements on its serving and passing games, areas that have given them trouble all season, but the Hawkeyes still struggled on defense at times.

Meyermann, who led the nation in kills going into the weekend, has seen them decline recently. Buck-Crockett said a little more time in the limelight will help the senior.

"I think she is struggling a little bit," she said. "Being somebody that is in the top of the nation probably put a little pressure on her. Even though she's a senior, she's a young senior."

The Hawkeyes will take the court at home Friday and Saturday against Illinois and Indiana, and Buck-Crockett said the Hawkeyes can build on the end of the Michigan State game for confidence.

"I don't think there's much more that we have to find," she said. "We've found it; now we just have to build on it."

Rowing squad victorious

By Ali Noller
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa rowing team won all varsity events for the second year in a row in its season opener Sept. 29 in the Head of the Des Moines Regatta.

The team won the Varsity Eight, the Varsity Four, and the pairs race to emerge as the top collegiate crew in a field of teams that included Kansas, Kansas State, Minnesota, Drake, and the Minneapolis Boat Club.

Coach Mandi Kowal praised the Hawks for their early season domination.

"It was a bonus winning all of the events," she said. "The whole team was thinking of each other, and we seemed more like a team than we ever have before."

The Hawkeyes notched their fifth-consecutive title in the Varsity Eight.

In the three-mile race, the Iowa A Varsity Eight finished in 16:14, followed by Kansas State at 16:30. The second Hawkeye boat finished close behind, taking third place in 16:31. Twenty boats competed in the Varsity Eight.

In the Varsity Four, the Iowa A finished first in 18:13. Marquette was the next finisher in 18:45, followed by Kansas at 19:01. The Iowa B team finished one second later.

Other Hawkeye finishers in the Varsity Four included Iowa D in 19:48 and Iowa C in 22:28. There were 33 boats in the Varsity Four.

In the pairs race, Iowa A finished first again in 19:37. Kansas State B finished second in 19:45, and Iowa E finished third in 20:09. Iowa C was the fourth pairs finisher in 20:19. The Iowa pairs teams B and D tied for fifth place in 20:38, followed by Iowa F in 20:42.

"We were able to dominate because the team allowed no other influences and raced really hard after we took care of business on land," Kowal said. "We showed good speed and depth, which really made me excited for the rest of the season."

Last season, the Hawkeyes finished in ninth place at the spring NCAA Championships.

In the fall season, the Hawkeyes compete in non-traditional races ranging from two to three miles. In the spring season the team will compete in sprint races of a mile and a quarter.

The Hawkeyes will resume competition Oct. 14 at the Head of the Rock in Rockford, Ill.

CROSS-COUNTRY

Women's team lands 10th

By Ali Noller
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's cross-country team earned 10th place at the Stanford Invitational in Palo Alto, Calif., on Sept. 29.

Host team Stanford captured the team title with 40 points, followed by BYU with 53 points and Wisconsin with 69 points. The Hawkeyes finished with 244 team points.

Stanford's Alicia Craig won the 4,000-meter individual title in 12:40. Michaela Manova of BYU was second in 12:54, followed by Cheryl Smith of Hawaii in 13:01.

The Hawkeyes were the lone Big Ten representative in the field of 19 teams competing in the 4,000-meter race.

Freshman Katie Donlon was the highest Hawkeye finisher, crossing the finish line in 35th place in 14:34. Sophomore Georgia Millward, who has been the first Hawkeye finisher in every other meet this season, finished two seconds behind Donlon for 36th place.

Junior Michelle Lahann finished 42nd for Iowa in a time of 14:41. Sophomore Atalie Barber finished the 4K race in 14:51 for 55th place, and junior Ericka Roberts came in 85th at 15:28.

Jenni Capista finished 104th in 16:02 for the Hawkeyes.

Coach Joan Hansen decided not to race freshman Michelle Sokol because of a tight hamstring.

Assistant Coach Robert Lester said the decision to not race Sokol cost the team points.

"The team probably could have finished in the top five if Michelle would have raced," he said.

This was the second 10th-place finish for the Hawkeyes this season. The Hawkeyes also finished 10th at the Illinois Invitational on Sept. 22; they notched second at the Purdue Invitational on Sept. 8.

The Hawkeyes continue to prepare for their biggest day of the season, Oct. 28, when they return to Illinois to compete in the Big Ten Championships.

The Hawkeyes compete again on Oct. 13 in their last regular-season meet, traveling to Kenosha, Wis., for the Parkside Invitational.

Men's finish not whole story

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's cross-country team came home from the Roy Griak Invitational in Minneapolis on Sept. 29 with a 24th-place finish out of 36 teams.

But the low finish doesn't tell the story.

"I think this was one of the toughest meets ever conducted in the history of the United States of America outside of the NCAAAs," Hawkeye coach Larry Wiczorek said.

Big Ten power Wisconsin won the meet with 129 points, with cross-country powerhouses Portland College and Providence checking in at second and third. Iowa finished with 594 points.

"When you go down the list you think, 'Who was missing?'" Wiczorek said. "And really, there weren't many teams of that level missing."

Senior Shaun Allen did what he could for the Hawkeyes, running a very strong 25:00 8K, good enough for 51st place. The other four Hawkeye scorers finished within 18 seconds of each other. Senior Adam Thomas finished 108th in 25:28, freshman Dan Haut finished 113th in 25:31, senior Sean Moeller finished 145th in 25:43, and freshman Tony Rakaric finished 157th in 25:46.

Allen's running over the past couple of weeks has impressed Wiczorek.

"I think Shaun Allen has made that step where he's running like an outstanding individual," he said. "If you break 25:00 on this course, you're pretty doggone tough."

Iowa ran its second-straight meet without seniors Trent Corey and Nick Nordheim, two of the team's top runners. Having the duo in the lineup would have made a big difference, Wiczorek said.

"It was a great experience for the guys, but the reality is, we have to have our best people out there to compete with the best teams," he said.

Corey and Nordheim are slated to run in the Hawkeyes' next meet, the Pre-Nationals on Oct. 13.

Field-hockey team yet to win Big Ten game

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa field-hockey team traveled to No. 4 Michigan on Sept. 28 in search of redemption from a mid-season losing streak, but it ran into a pack of hungry Wolverines.

After beginning the season 6-0, the Hawkeyes (6-3, 0-2) have now lost their third-consecutive game, falling, 4-1, at Ocker Field in Ann Arbor. Conversely, Michigan has outscored its last three opponents 20-3, and the victory ups its Big Ten record to 2-0.

On the offensive early, Michigan (7-2) attempted eight of its 23 shots-on-goal in the first half. Despite pressure, the Hawkeye defense held strong until April Fronzoni broke through with a Wolverine goal in the final two minutes of the first half.

Iowa has often struggled when opponents score first, but junior Lauren Edwards said the early Michigan goal inspired a rally.

"I don't think we ever got down after they scored," she said. "When they scored, I was more fired up, and I know some other women were, too."

An intense Wolverine offense produced an additional two goals early in the second half, extending the Michigan lead to 3-0. Stephanie Johnson converted on a penalty stroke in the first minute, and Molly Powers tipped a shot from Jessica Blake from the outside.

Senior Maria Merluzzi said the Hawkeyes' lack of intensity in the second half contributed to the outcome.

"We weren't down on ourselves, but we needed to get back in the game," she said. "The thing that hurt us in the second half was that they came out a step ahead [of their play] in the first half, and we came out flat. They were ready to fight again, and we fought like we were intimidated."

At 21:25, junior Tiffany Leister overcame Michigan on an Iowa penalty corner, assisted by Merluzzi and Edwards.

Iowa will return home this week for the first time since a home-opener shutout of St. Louis on Aug. 25. The Hawkeyes will play No. 15 Penn State Friday.

"We're still in it," Merluzzi said. "We're not just going to lie down and say it's over when we're only halfway through the season. We need to pick up our play, and we're looking forward to a good rivalry with Penn State."

E-mail DI reporter Roseanna Smith at: roseanna-smith@uiowa.edu

Healthy

Healthy Hawkeyes

Iowa escaped its Homecoming game with no new injuries. The Hawkeyes suffered a minor scare in the third quarter when defensive back Benson went down after making a tackle, but he walked off with the help of trainers.

Preliminary reports said Benson may have suffered a minor concussion, but he appeared in the locker room before post-game interviews and was fine.

Offensive linemen Eric Storch and Alonzo Cunningham and defensive back Blake Sanders all returned from injuries to see playing time in Cunningham's first appearance of the season.

Starting strong

The Sept. 29 victory marked the first time the Hawkeyes have started the season 3-0 since 1997, when the team won the year 4-0.

The Hawkeyes finished the 7 season 7-5 and earned a berth in the Sun Bowl, where they lost, 17-7, to Arizona State.

Conversely, Penn State has won the season 0-3 for its second time in Paterno's 30th year as head coach. The Lions won the 1983 season 0-3, lost to Iowa, 42-34, for their third loss.

Hopkins defeats Trinidad for title

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

Laura Rauch/Associated Press

NEW YORK — About midway through the fight, the hot air of Bernard Hopkins' boasts became the cold wind of reality. Felix Trinidad Jr. — Puerto Rico's beloved Tito — had met his match, and almost everybody in Madison Square Garden early Sunday morning knew it.

They knew it well before Trinidad was knocked down and stopped in the 12th round. In a late round, a chant of "Hopkins, Hopkins" was not answered by "Tito, Tito," which has signaled the end of Trinidad's previous opponents. The 36-year-old Hopkins had repeatedly said he was the best middleweight in the world. When he walked out of the Garden, he was the undisputed middleweight champion of the world.

"I stand by what I say; I mean what I say," Hopkins said.

Trinidad, who had won his first 40 fights and championships in three weight classes, was impressed.

"Hopkins is a great champion, a good fighter," he said.

Hopkins was a dominant fighter against Trinidad.

"I said before that this would be the easiest fight of my whole career," Hopkins said at a post-fight news conference that was not attended by Trinidad.

"If I had lost, I would have been here," Hopkins said. He, however, was gracious in victory, apologizing for pre-fight demonstrations in which he twice threw down the Puerto Rican flag.

"First of all, I want to apologize to the Puerto Rican people," Hopkins said. "We're all the same."

Hopkins, a natural middleweight, had said he had too much experience against top-level competition and too much strength and power for

Felix Trinidad waves to fans as he leaves the ring area after his loss to Bernard Hopkins early Sunday, at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Trinidad, a former welterweight and super welterweight champion from Puerto Rico, who was fighting as a middleweight for the only second time. He won the WBA 160-pound title by stopping William Joppy in the fifth round May 12 in the Garden.

Hopkins, the IBF middleweight champion since 1995, who won the WBC title on points over Keith Holmes on April 14, fought brilliantly — moving, jabbing, counter-punching. The 6-foot-1 Philadelphian, the biggest opponent ever faced by the 5-11 Trinidad, was not fazed by the Puerto Rican's vaunted power (33 knockouts) and hurt his rival on several occasions. Hopkins (40-2-1, 29 knockouts) nearly finished the fight at the end of the 10th round.

"I felt the fight was more or less even until the end," Trinidad said.

It was more or less even for the first six rounds, before Hopkins won the next five rounds on all three officials cards.

The Ledge by Scott Morgan

How tell you had a good night

You wake up on the City High football field.

- Everyone you see the next day winks and calls you Poncho.
- Your girlfriend calls, wondering why all of your personal belongings are duct-taped to her car.
- Everyone seems surprised that you can still walk erect.
- The dominant photo on the front of the newspaper is of you running through the Ped Mall wearing a shaving cream Speedo.
- You suddenly have chest hair.
- You wake up in a sandtrap on Finkbine Golf Course wearing your best suit with your shoe in your mouth.
- Your new tattoo reads, "I love Beutjer."
- Someone is crying on the phone and keeps calling you daddy.
- You find Mary Sue's personal phone number written on your chest in lipstick.
