UI programs put on hiatus

By Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

UI officials, bracing for looming state budget cuts, suspended several programs that award money for research projects on Tuesday.

The move means the university will not consider proposals from faculty, staff, and students seeking funding for research initiatives across the campus until officials can gauge the size of a budget cut the state will impose.

Officials stressed that they were only suspending the six internal funding programs, not cutting them. They said slashing the programs would free up approximately $1.1 million, most of which comes from the university's general fund.

Gov. Tom Vilsack has suggested a $21.9 million budget cut for the university, but lawmakers could adjust that when they convene in January.

"The budget was motivation," said Bill Decker, a UI associate vice president for Research. "We didn't want faculty to be spending their time in that way now. We don't think it's wise to proceed with funding because we don't know the nature of those cuts."

The programs fund grants for a variety of tenure-track faculty to initiate research, he said. One of the programs cut, the Iowa Research Experiences, allows undergraduates to get involved in research activities, officials said.

By receiving university-funded grants, faculty members can compete for larger, external grants

UI looks to out-of-state students

By Vanessa Miller
The Daily Iowan

As fewer Iowans graduate from high school and the state's population decreases, UI officials anticipate the university will increasingly rely on out-of-state students to maintain enrollment.

Regardless of a tuition increase that could drive non-resident tuition/fees to more than $13,000, officials said, those students will become a greater percentage of the student body.

"There's very little doubt: We have a shrinking pool of students from Iowa," said Joe Coulter, the associate provost for diversity. "We definitely don't want to downsize, so we may have to increase the number of out-of-state students."

The only other option, Coulter said, would be to lower admission standards for in-state students, which is unlikely. The school accepts any Iowan who graduates in the top half of her or his class and recruits those that score a 19 or above on the ACT test.

The number of UI in-state students is already shrinking. The 1999 freshman class was made up of 62.2 percent in-state students, a number that dropped to 60 percent last fall, and 59 percent this fall, records show.

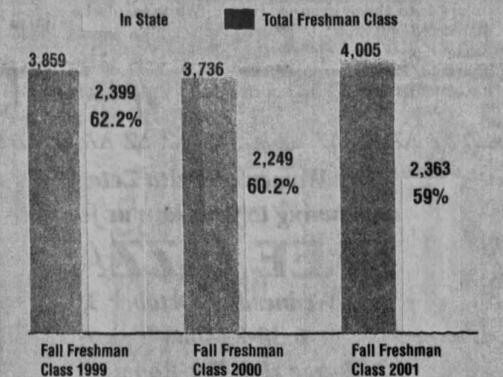

Coulter said the reduction of in-state enrollment might be due to a decrease in the state's population and an overall drop in academic performance.

"Not only are students failing to continue their education, but the number of high-school graduates is leveling off, too," he said. "We project those numbers to continue to go down over the next few years."

State economic forecast is gloomy

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — A weakening economy has hammered the state's budget even harder than the most gloomy predictions had forecast, a new report sent to lawmakers said.

The report showed state tax collections for the first quarter of the budget year 1.3 percent less than the same period last year. All economic indicators measuring economic health indicated a downturn.

"It's everything," said Dennis Prouty, the head of the nonpartisan Legislative Fiscal Bureau. "They are all down."

Timing of the report is significant, because a panel of budget experts meets next week to forecast how much the state will collect in taxes.

Prouty, a member of that panel, said it's likely as much as $125 million will be trimmed from the predicted tax collections. Gov. Tom Vilsack and lawmakers are required by law to use that forecast as the base for their budget, meaning they are facing even bigger budget problems than they had thought.

"Sitting here now, we are looking at slower growth," Prouty said.

Vilsack has already announced plans for a $108 million cut in this year's state budget and another $200 million next year, but Prouty's prediction would mean he would have to go even further in cutting spending.

That could mean further bad news for state agencies, including the UI, which are already facing employee layoffs. University officials are developing plans to deal with a $21.9 million cut under Vilsack's plan, which could cause some programs to be eliminated.

Aggravating the problem, Prouty said, is the fallout from the terrorist attacks Sept. 11. Those attacks have sent markets plunging, and consumer confidence has fallen in the face of uncertainty about what comes next.

"People are hesitant to purchase goods," he warned. That caused state sales-tax collections, considered by economists a measure of consumer confidence, to fall well short of expectations.

This year's state budget was based on projections that state tax collections would grow by 4.5 percent over last year, but few now have faith in that prediction.

Prouty has prepared an economic model showing that state tax collections growing by 2 percent, a $125 million reduction, as a guide for lawmakers.

Law school plans for Oct. 11 Reno lecture

By Peter Boylan
The Daily Iowan

The first female attorney general in U.S. history will meet with UI faculty and students Oct. 11 in addition to presenting a lecture at the College of Law.

"She is definitely coming," said William Hines, the dean of the law school. "We talked to her manager today to confirm that they are making flight reservations. Unless something catastrophic happens, she will be here."

Reno will participate in the annual Richard Levitt Distinguished Lecture Series and will speak in the Levitt Auditorium of the Boyd Law Building. Law-school students will have the opportunity to listen to and interact with a historical figure.

"She served eight years in tumultuous times," Hines said. "She is a nationally prominent person."

Reno's lecture is titled "Lawyers as Problem Solvers and Peacemakers."

"She can draw on a lot of her experiences as a prosecutor in Florida and as the attorney general for many years," said UI law Professor David Baldus. "She has seen the law applied in many diverse and complicated contexts."

He believes the premise for Reno's lecture is concurrent with the law school's mission.

"We want people to get along," Baldus said. "We encourage problem-solving and the resolution of controversy short of litigation."

During her eight-year tenure as attorney general, she faced many controversial decisions, including the 1993 confrontation with the Branch Davidian religious cult in Waco, Texas, the same year she was sworn into office.

The standoff ended after FBI agents attempted to force cult members out of the compound, which resulted in many cult members' burning to death, according to Reno's unofficial gubernatorial campaign Web site. Reno is gearing up for her 2002 Florida gubernatorial run against incumbent Jeb Bush.

In 2000, Reno made the difficult decision to raid the home of Elián Gonzalez's relatives in order to return the 6-year-old Cuban to his father's custody. Despite relentless criticism, Reno stood firm by her decision, according to the Web site.

"It's an occasion for faculty and students to meet her and see her firsthand," Hines said. "She is a very good role model for male and female students alike."

NATO affirms bin Laden ties

By Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The United States, seeking the full moral backing of its 18 NATO allies, provided "clear and compelling" evidence Tuesday of Osama bin Laden's involvement in terror attacks on New York and Washington, NATO Secretary-General Lord Robertson said.

He said the allies have determined that the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon were directed from abroad and thus are covered by NATO's Article 5 — which says an attack on one member is an attack on all.

"The facts are clear and compelling," he told reporters after a top U.S. counterterrorism official gave NATO's ruling council a classified briefing. "The information presented points conclusively to an al-Qaida role in the Sept. 11 attacks."

"We know that the individuals who carried out these attacks were part of the worldwide terrorist network of al-Qaida, headed by Osama bin Laden and his key lieutenants and protected by the Taliban government in Afghanistan."

The allies had already declared their full backing for the United States in its war

Training mandatory for maxivan drivers

By Nick Narigon
The Daily Iowan

The UI Motor Pool is requiring drivers of large university vans to complete a training program after reports of the vehicles' high rollover rates.

The once-voluntary training program became mandatory in June. It followed a National Highway Transportation and Safety Administration finding in April showing that 15-passenger vans, or maxivans, are three times more likely to roll over when filled with 10 or more occupants. Maxivans have a rollover rate similar to light trucks or vans when they are not fully occupied, the report said.

"We realized we weren't doing everything we could," said Mike Wilson, the Motor Pool manager.

The training program involves watching an instructional videotape, completing a workbook, and a practice drive.

Liz Neblett, a spokeswoman for the safety agency, said it is important for trainees to practice in a van loaded with passengers or cargo because the extra weight moves the center of gravity to the rear.

However, the university's training program does not use fully occupied vans because there are not sufficient resources, Wilson said.

"Our goal is to get someone ready to drive," he said.

The study was conducted in the wake of several highly publicized accidents involving athletics teams and maxivans, Neblett said.

"We want people to know there is a risk, especially when the vans are loaded with people and cargo," she said.

The university's training program is mandatory for everyone wanting to drive a maxivan, Wilson said, with an exception for individuals with prior experience driving a 15-passenger vehicle.

The university started its Fleet Safety Program in 1996; it took several years to fully implement, said Diana Cook, the director of the UI Risk Management Department. The program is now capable of training students, faculty, and staff to drive maxivans safely, she said.

A 1997 accident involving a university maxivan resulted in serious injuries, said university officials, who were unable to provide further details of the accident. At approximately the same time, Wilson said, an unspecified number of UI students were killed while driving a maxivan rented outside of the university.

As part of the university's training program, familiarization drives are conducted by Cambus trainers every Wednesday. Motor Pool requests that participants make reservations the Friday before training is conducted.

The training costs $39 for individuals, $28 per person for a group of two to three participants, and $24 per person for four to five participants.

Local man arrested for meth possession

Iowa City police arrested a local man Monday night for possession of methamphetamine after he locked himself out of his house.

Police charged Jason Holderness, 24, with possession of methamphetamine with intent to deliver at 11:46 p.m. Monday, according to police reports. Police allegedly found six individually packaged one-third gram rocks of the drug in Holderness' pocket, said Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Brotherton.

"The amount and the fact that they were packaged are pretty indicative of the intent to deliver," Brotherton said.

Officers responded to a call from one of Holderness' neighbors reporting suspicious activity in the Hilltop Trailer Court, Brotherton said. Upon arrival, police saw Holderness shining a flashlight into his own trailer, according to police records. Holderness told officers he was locked out of his home, police said.

During a routine background check, police discovered an outstanding warrant for violation of a no-contact order and searched Holderness, Brotherton said.

Police said they uncovered the packaged drugs during the search; they did not specify the offenses that led to the warrant.

West High student reports assault

A female student at a local high school reported Monday that a male classmate had sexually assaulted her during school hours on school grounds.

The 17-year-old West High student told police the suspect grabbed her inappropriately on two occasions, once in the school parking lot and once near some lockers in a hallway, according to police records. The alleged incidents occurred Sept. 1 and Sept. 28, said Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Brotherton.

School officials will not pursue the case because the suspect was removed from school Sept. 28 and is not likely to return, Brotherton said. The suspect was removed because of problems unrelated to the alleged sexual assaults, which police would not specify.

School officials did not know about the assaults until officers told them, Brotherton said.

School Superintendent Lane Plugge said after Tuesday's School Board meeting he was unaware of the incident and that he would try to learn more about it.

Local police are still investigating the case. The suspect would likely face simple assault charges because the incidents took place in public, Brotherton said, citing Iowa law that specifies how inappropriate touching must take place in a location where a sex act is likely to occur in order to file charges of assault with intent to commit a sexual act.

MEMMER TRIAL

20 excused in Memmer voir dire

By Kellie Doyle and Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

A judge released more than 20 potential jurors from bench duty Tuesday during the opening day of the Jonathan Memmer double-homicide trial.

Judge David Remley excused approximately one-fifth of a pool of more than 100 Johnson County residents. The pool will eventually be narrowed to 16.

"We request your patience," he told the group of prospective jurors. "This jury selection is going to take several days."

A clean-shaven Memmer sat quietly next to one of his attorneys and sifted through hundreds of documents all morning as the 2½-year-old homicide case got under way. The Marshalltown native is charged in the March 1999 slayings of 29-year-old Laura Watson-Dalton and 27-year-old Maria Therese Lehner, whose mutilated bodies were found in a South Van Buren Street apartment.

Remley forbade the prospective jurors from accessing media coverage of the case, from forming an opinion about the case, and from discussing the trial with anyone. All potential jurors may not in any way communicate with the attorneys, he added.

Inside the largest courtroom in the Johnson County Courthouse, Remley divided the potential jurors into three groups according to the first letter of their last names. Each group was then directed to rotate among three courtrooms to participate in a preliminary screening and watch an 18-minute video. Potential jurors were also provided free time during which they were instructed not to discuss the case.

Remley spoke one-on-one with individuals who believed they might not be available to serve in the anticipated month-long trial because of previous obligations, such as medical appointments, employment, or vacation plans. He excused more than 20 during the preliminary screening sessions.

Prospective jurors waited, sitting in squeaky chairs among the whispers of Remley and prosecution and defense attorneys, for further instruction. A few maintained hushed conversations in the near silence, while others occupied themselves by reading.

Before noon, Remley again divided the remaining potential jurors into three groups. He instructed one group to return to the courthouse during the afternoon for further questioning. Another group is to return to the courthouse at 9 a.m. today. Others will return this afternoon.

After Remley, Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White and Memmer's attorneys are row the pool to 40 individuals they will begin questioning to expose any biases or prejudices. The sides will then strike, or remove a juror, until each has eliminated 12. The remaining 16 will make up the jury and four alternates.

White said last week he hopes to begin presenting evidence by Friday.

Hills questions new school

By John Molseed
The Daily Iowan

HILLS — Some Hills Elementary School parents Tuesday night restated an Iowa City School Board proposal that would require sixth-grade students to depart from their local school a year early.

"I live in a small community; we have a school here," said Hills parent Dick Ollendick during an open forum at the school discussing a proposed sixth-through eighth-grade center.

"I'd just rather see them stay here," he said. Ollendick was among more than 20 parents attending the forum. The School Board holds open forums every month at various schools in the district to receive input from schools and parents. This was the first meeting in which the board presented the proposal to parents.

Some parents said the proposal would ease the transition for sixth-graders into a larger school. Others disagreed.

"Our kids are growing up too fast. I want to keep them a little longer," said Hills parent Katie Schaub.

Parents expressed concern about possible curriculum changes, and some suggested alternatives to a new secondary school.

"We could accomplish the same thing by expanding the school, not setting up another administration," Ollendick said.

Board member Matt Goodlaxson said the board was pleased with the input it received at the forum.

"What we're going to base the decision on is the values the communities have," he said. "We're not going to make everyone happy, regardless of what we do."

Many parents said they were concerned about the location of a new facility, pointing out the 40-minute bus ride students take to Northwest Junior High School. They said a location farther north would lengthen that ride, making transportation difficult.

Board members said they will consider locations based on land availability for the estimated 25 to 40 acres needed for the facility.

Both sides agreed that space was tight in Hills Elementary School, where attendance has climbed from 180 students in 1995 to 259 students this year.

A sixth- through eighth-grade center would take care of junior-high school growth as well as elementary, said Superintendent Lane Plugge.

"One option we don't have is to do nothing," he said.

Coralville OKs traffic lights

By Vess Mitev
The Daily Iowan

The Coralville City Council on Tuesday unanimously gave the go-ahead for the construction of traffic signals at the intersection of Highway 965 and Oakdale Boulevard, saying the crossing is unsafe for motorists.

"Every time you go through there, you take your life in your own hands," said Councilor Henry Herwig. "This should make it a lot safer."

Officials expect the lights to be in place sometime this fall.

Streb Construction of Iowa City was awarded the contract, worth $407,091. Its bid was well below the original estimated cost of $465,000. City engineer Dan Holderness said the city will also save $40,000 to $50,000 by moving traffic-control signals from the intersection of Highway 6 and First Avenue to the new location.

"[The equipment's] good stuff, and we should be able to use it for a long time," he said.

When construction begins on the Iowa Child project, Highway 965 and Oakdale Boulevard will have to be redone, with more lanes added and a more sophisticated system of traffic control, Holderness said.

"It's an interim solution that should last a long time," he said of installing the traffic lights.

In other action:

• Councilors agreed to move forward with preliminary research into a new family aquatic center. Councilors agreed they are looking for a neighborhood facility rather than one that would be a regional attraction.

Parks and Recreation Director Seydell Johnson said a bond issue would be a likely source of funding. "Since the funds have been built into our budget, the bond issue would not yield a net tax increase," he said.

• Johnson also announced Coralville is one of 11 finalists in an international competition for best places to live in the world.

Nations in Bloom presents an international award for the best communities worldwide. Communities were judged on different criteria, including community involvement, heritage management, and sensitivity to the environment. Cities from the Netherlands, England, Russia, and Slovenia are some of the other finalists. The winners will be announced later this year.

CITY BRIEF

Vilsack announces homebuyer rate cut

DES MOINES — Interest rates for first-time homebuyers under a program run by the Iowa Finance Authority have been cut to an all-time low of 6.125 percent, Gov. Tom Vilsack said Tuesday.

That rate is for a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage, and it signals the state's commitment to making home purchases affordable, the governor said.

"It is important that we restore confidence in the country's economy," Vilsack said. "One key to providing economic security is to restore consumer and business spending."

The loans are available under the state's FirstHome program, a partnership of the Finance Authority, lending giant Fannie Mae, and lenders in the state. It's offered through more than 300 lenders around the state.

First-time homebuyers who meet income and purchase price guidelines are eligible for the low-interest loans. The Iowa Finance Authority issues bonds, purchased by Fannie Mae that, in effect, underwrite the low-interest loans.

"The housing- and mortgage-finance industry stands united and ready to further economic growth in Iowa and throughout the country," said Joe O'Hern, the head of Fannie Mae's Iowa offices.

Interest rates have fallen. As the economy has slowed, the Federal Reserve has repeatedly slashed rates in an effort to avoid a recession.

UI donations unaffected

By Sara Faiwell
The Daily Iowan

UI Foundation officials said they don't expect a negative effect on private donations even after freezing for three weeks telephone and mail solicitations in the area where the terrorist attacks occurred.

It is too early to tell whether recent terrorist attacks will negatively affect the economy and cause a decrease in private donations later in the year, the officials said.

Halting phone solicitations in affected areas was one way to show sensitivity following the terrorist attacks, said Alan Swanson, the foundation's senior vice president. He said the foundation will soon resume calling those sources.

Last year, the foundation had received 4,082 gifts in the three-week period following Sept. 11. This year, the foundation has received 4,076 gifts in that same period, officials said.

This will not be highly damaging for us in long-term effects, because we have other areas to get money from.

— Ted Yank, assistant director of administration for Holden Cancer Center

"Amazingly, the number of gifts is almost identical," Swanson said. "Obviously, the disaster may have had some effect — in that we might have raised more."

George and Linda Lopos of Getzville, N.Y., have donated money to the foundation for more than five years. Linda Lopos said the couple will still support the university despite the tragedies that occurred in New York and Wash-ton, D.C.

"People who supported other organizations before this happened will keep supporting," she said. "The UI Foundation is still worthy of support."

Robert Lamb, who has donated money to the university for more than 20 years, said he is unsure where he will donate his money this year.

"I will probably still make the same contributions that I have in the past," he said.

The foundation has also received donations from large corporations, securing a $50,000 gift in September from the Walgreen Co. to support the College of Pharmacy's new student activity center.

A large portion of foundation money goes toward cancer research, said Ted Yank, the assistant director of administration for Holden Cancer Center. He said he thinks it's appropriate if people channel their donations elsewhere in light of the attacks.

"This will not be highly damaging for us in long-term effects, because we have other areas to get money from," he said.

Feds investigate C.R. man

By Bernard McGhee
Associated Press

DES MOINES — While authorities try to determine whether Youssef Hmimssa has any connections to a federal terrorism investigation, officials say one thing is becoming clear — he was a man of many names.

In Chicago, the Secret Service said, he went by the name Patrick Vuillaume and is accused of using a device that stole credit-card numbers, causing more than $40,000 in losses.

In Detroit, the FBI said, he was known as Jalali and is accused, along with two other men, of having false visas and other documents.

In Cedar Rapids, Hmimssa lived as Michael Saisa and often talked with his apartment manager about the plight of Muslims throughout the world. He told neighbors he worked out of his apartment for a computer-software company based in Chicago.

Hmimssa, 30, was arrested Sept. 28 by the Secret Service at his Cedar Rapids apartment on a warrant issued by a federal court in Detroit.

He waived his right to a removal hearing Tuesday, and a federal judge ordered him sent back to Detroit, said Bob Teig, an assistant U.S. attorney.

He remained in the Linn County jail, kept separate from other inmates. He was quiet and did not cause any problems, said Sgt. Mike Zlatohlavek.

Hmimssa had more than one driver's license in Iowa, said Kerry Kirkpatrick, the commander of the investigative unit at the state Department of Transportation's motor-vehicle enforcement division. Kirkpatrick would not say how many licenses Hmimssa held or what names they were under, but he said, none was under the name Youssef Hmimssa. There also were no licenses that had hazardous-materials endorsements on them, Kirkpatrick said.

The FBI has requested records on all commercial driver's licenses in the state, he said. A spokesman from the FBI's Omaha office said he could neither confirm nor deny any details of FBI investigations.

Federal authorities in Chicago accuse Hmimssa of using stolen credit-card numbers to buy computer equipment and other merchandise.

There, Hmimssa allegedly gave a "skimming device" to a restaurant employee. The employee would take cards given to him by customers and run them through the device, said documents filed in U.S. District Court in Illinois. The device would copy the credit-card numbers from the magnetic strip, and Hmimssa would later come back and retrieve the numbers, court documents said.

The employee, Mourad "Mark" Madrane, told Secret Service agents that he stole approximately 250 credit-card numbers from the end of January to March 22, while working at the restaurant. Madrane told agents on one occasion he even watched as Hmimssa downloaded numbers from the device onto a laptop computer, according to court documents.

Bush sends Rumsfeld to Mideast

By Ron Fournier
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush sent Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld on a four-nation mission Tuesday that could be a prelude to military strikes against terrorists. Bush warned Afghanistan's ruling Taliban "there will be a consequence" if it fails to surrender Osama bin Laden and his followers.

The Defense secretary left Tuesday night for military talks with leaders in Saudi Arabia, Oman, Egypt, and Uzbekistan, key members of Bush's growing coalition. Uzbekistan borders Afghanistan, where terrorist suspect bin Laden is being sheltered by the Taliban government.

Building a case for war, U.S. diplomats shared confidential evidence with allies linking bin Laden's al-Qaida network to the Sept. 11 attacks and other terrorists acts. America's 18 NATO partners said the information was conclusive, and they formally declared the attacks on New York and Washington an assault against the alliance.

Bush sought to shore up his support in the Arab world, saying for the first time that the idea of a Palestinian state is part of the Middle East peace process. British Prime Minister Tony Blair, in step with Bush, planned a trip to Pakistan to solidify the U.S.-led campaign against the Taliban.

But first, he forcefully made the case for an assault on Afghanistan's Taliban regime, warning Tuesday that they must "surrender the terrorists or surrender power."

In an emotional speech to his Labor Party, Blair positioned Britain squarely with the United States and delivered the toughest warning yet by a European leader.

The Taliban ambassador to Pakistan, Abdul Salam Zaef, dismissed the threats by the United States and its allies, telling a news conference in Quetta, Pakistan, "Only Allah changes the regime, and only Allah brings the others instead of us."

Speaking to 3,000 delegates at his party's annual conference, Blair said the Taliban had ignored demands to hand over bin Laden, the prime suspect in the Sept. 11 attacks on New York and Washington, but he stopped short of declaring that military strikes against Afghanistan were inevitable.

"I say to the Taliban: surrender the terrorists, or surrender power. It's your choice," Blair said.

Rounding out a day that underscored Bush's broad campaign against terrorism, the Pentagon added more than 2,000 Reservists to its gathering war effort.

"We put together a coalition of nations that says terrorism won't stand," Bush said while announcing the reopening of Reagan National Airport outside Washington, the only airport that was still closed after the attacks three weeks ago. "We've got our military on alert for a reason: Terrorism won't stand. We're cutting off their money because we're saying, Terrorism won't stand."

The White House welcomed Blair's forceful remarks — which went further, predicting an overthrow of the Taliban, than Bush himself has been willing to go. Senior White House officials, briefed in advance about Blair's address, said the president shared Blair's belief that the Taliban must bow to U.S. demands or surrender power.

The administration's rhetoric against the Taliban has increased in forcefulness, with aides beginning to say only late last week that the United States would assist forces that oppose the regime. Though he has threatened military action, Bush has stopped just short of calling for the Taliban's overthrow.

"The Taliban must turn over al-Qaida [terrorists] living within Afghanistan and must destroy the terrorist camps," Bush said. "And they must do so; otherwise, there will be a consequence. There are no negotiations. There's no calendar. We'll act on our time."

As the politicians talked, the military prepared for war.

The Pentagon announced that 2,263 National Guard and Reserve troops were called to active duty, bringing the total mobilized to more than 22,400.

Approximately 30,000 American military members are in the region, including two aircraft carrier battle groups and 350 planes. Two additional aircraft carriers are under way.

The administration hoped to keep the Taliban guessing about U.S. military plans.

White House spokesman Ari Fleischer suggested that nothing else needs to be done "before military action can be taken."

In Pakistan, the nation's foreign-ministry spokesman said Afghanistan's Taliban rulers had been told they "don't have much time" to stave off military strikes.

Fearing recession, Fed cuts key rates

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve cut a key interest rate by half a percentage point Tuesday, pushing it to the lowest level since John F. Kennedy was president, in a struggle to offset economic shocks from the terrorist attacks.

The central bank said the Sept. 11 attacks had "significantly heightened uncertainty in an economy that was already weak." For the first time, a top member of President Bush's economic team publicly used the word "recession" to describe the country's present circumstances.

The latest cut, the ninth this year, pushed the target for the federal-funds rate to 2.5 percent, its lowest level since May 1962. The move was quickly matched by a half-point cut in commercial banks' prime lending rate, the benchmark for millions of consumer and business loans. That rate fell to 5.5 percent, a level last seen in October 1972.

The Federal Reserve also cut its discount rate, the interest it charges to make direct loans to banks, to 2 percent, the lowest level since November 1958.

The Fed has used its discount window to pump out billions of dollars in direct loans to banks in the wake of the attacks to keep the financial system operating.

Wall Street, which had suffered the biggest one-day point loss in history following the Fed's last rate cut on Sept. 17, had a better reaction this time around. The Dow Jones industrial average finished with a rally to jump 113.76 points to 8,950.59.

Even with the funds rate at its lowest level in nearly four decades, analysts predicted more rate cuts to come, with many looking for half-point reductions at the Fed's final two meetings of the year on Nov. 6 and Dec. 11.

While such an aggressive easing effort on the part of the Fed would normally raise fears of higher inflation down the road, analysts said there was little danger of that, given how weak the economy is.

"It is entirely appropriate for the Fed to be pulling out all the stops now," said Bill Cheney, the chief economist at John Hancock

Financial Services in Boston. "The economy was stumbling before the attacks, and it now seems all but certain that we will fall into a recession."

R. Glenn Hubbard, the chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, told Congress that the loss of life, the blow to the financial sector, and the disruption of airline service "increase significantly the likelihood that the economy is in a recession."

Bush, working with leaders of Congress to put together an economic stimulus package of tax relief for businesses and individuals and increased government spending, said he would "let the number crunchers" make the decision on whether a recession had begun.

Limited licenses drive down crashes

By Lindsey Tanner
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Restricting teenagers' driving privileges until they prove their ability behind the wheel can dramatically reduce crashes involving 16-year-olds, according to studies of "graduated license" laws in Michigan and North Carolina.

The programs may work by simply limiting the amount of time teenagers spend driving or by less obvious means, such as rewarding safe driving with more privileges. The studies said both may help explain the programs' success.

Traffic accidents are the leading cause of death among U.S. teens, and the youngest drivers have the highest likelihood of crashing. In the past four years, 34 states and Washington, D.C., have enacted graduated-licensing programs, researchers said.

Michigan and North Carolina enacted theirs in 1997. The studies compared crash statistics there in 1996 and 1999.

In Michigan, 16-year-olds were 25 percent less likely to get into a car crash in 1999, said researchers led by Jean Shope of the University of Michigan.

The risk of a crash in North Carolina dropped 23 percent among 16-year-olds. Nighttime crashes involving 16-year-olds declined by 43 percent, and fatal crashes plunged 57 percent.

In North Carolina, during 1999 alone, the result was dozens of lives preserved, thousands of injuries prevented, and millions of dollars saved.

— Robert Foss,

Gunmen kill two Israelis

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Palestinian gunmen broke into a Jewish settlement in the Gaza Strip and opened fire Tuesday, killing two Israelis and wounding 11 in an attack threatening an already shaky Mideast truce.

The Palestinian Authority condemned the attack, saying it constituted a violation of a cease-fire worked out between the sides last week.

The shootings came only hours after President Bush expressed support for a Palestinian state and spoke of efforts to revive Mideast peacemaking — a statement welcomed by Palestinians who want more U.S. involvement.

The gunmen slipped into the Alei Sinai settlement on the northern tip of the Gaza Strip, shooting at several residents and soldiers before entering a home, witnesses said.

Two Israeli teenagers were killed, and 11 more Israelis were injured, two of them babies, the army said. It said three soldiers were among the wounded.

Two of the attackers were killed by troops, said Israeli Cabinet Minister Tzipi Livni. She said another militant was involved, but it was not clear what happened to him. Livni dismissed reports that the attackers had held hostages.

Military officials said the residents of one home managed to climb out a window after two militants entered the building in the settlement, which is protected by army outposts and patrols.

Approximately 6,000 Jewish settlers reside in closely guarded enclaves in Gaza, where more than 1 million Palestinians live.

The shootings — claiming the first Israeli lives in eight days — could shake the truce worked out last week. "This is a very grave incident," said army spokesman Lt. Col. Olivier Rafowicz.

The Palestinian Authority denounced the attack, saying Yasser Arafat had ordered Palestinian security forces to search for those behind it.

"The Palestinian leadership condemns completely the attack that took place in the Jewish settlement of Alei Sinai and considers it a violation of the cease-fire declared," a statement said. The truce was declared on Sept. 26, at U.S. urging, but each side charges the other with constant violations. The United States has been looking for calm in the region as it tries to build an anti-terror coalition to respond to the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11.

Earlier Tuesday, Bush said in Washington that "the idea of a Palestinian state has always been a part of a vision so long as the right to an Israeli state is respected."

His administration was planning to introduce a new peace initiative, but it was put on hold by the attacks in the United States. The new peacemaking plan is only now beginning to take shape again, a senior U.S. official said Monday.

Palestinian Cabinet minister Saeb Erekat welcomed Bush's remarks. "I think it's time for the American administration to declare its support for a Palestinian state next to the state of Israel," he said.

An aide to Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said that full calm must be restored before full-scale peace negotiations can resume.

Restaurateur savors taste and time

By Becca Sutlive
The Daily Iowan

With a small, round black cap on his head and baggy checkered pants, Chef Kurt Michael Friese sits down at a corner table in his new Iowa City restaurant, Adagio.

The walls surrounding him are a two-toned provincial yellow. Pepper mills are strategically placed throughout the restaurant. The day is slowly fading into late afternoon, and the kitchen staff is preparing for dinner. Among other dishes, tonight's menu includes a striped bass farmed in Massachusetts. Friese hopes to patronize a more local source for fish in the near future — a man near Des Moines who raises trout.

Adagio, 325 E. Washington St., is Italian for slow, but Friese talks and moves with a swift efficiency as he pushes crisp, white napkins across a black table top to create more room for the carbonated water. His 11-year-old daughter, Taylor Friese, cheerfully helps some of the waitresses move tables. Friese is running late for his 4 p.m. appointment. A staff member comes in to tell him there are problems with a freezer in the back. Friese tells him to unplug the freezer and await further instruction.

"My wife tells me not to forget to eat," Friese said, "I forget a lot of the time."

This coming from a graduate of the New England Institute of Culinary Arts and owner of two area restaurants, Adagio and Devotay.

"I wish I spent more time in the kitchen," Friese said. "Lots of my time is spent figuring out logistics and putting out fires — logistically speaking, that is."

Lately, however, he has been spending most of his time with what he calls the new baby. At the age of 37, Friese and wife Kim McWane Friese are welcoming a new member into their family. Along with their two children, Devon and Taylor, and their first restaurant, Devotay, comes Adagio.

"It's a lot like having a baby," Friese said of Adagio. "The infant requires more attention than the 5-year-old."

Billed as genuine Northern Italian, Adagio's cuisine is influenced by the regions of Tuscany, the Piedmont, and Emilia Romagna.

"If there is a culinary center of the West, I think that's probably it," Friese said of the regions.

In comparison to their heartier southern counterparts, dishes from Northern Italy are lighter in texture, body, and color. Adagio's menu varies slightly day to day and changes with the seasons and availability of certain foods.

"Northern Italian tends to be more delicate," Friese said. "It's not without its meats, though."

One of the most famous of Italian meat dishes is Osso Buco. Traditionally prepared with veal shanks, Friese has developed his own version using local pork supplied from Niman Ranch, a cooperative of growers in the Des Moines area. For Osso Buco à la Iowa, Friese braises pork shanks for approximately six hours in a rich stock. The tender pork is served on a bed of risotto, an Italian rice.

Friese's use of local pork is not just a coincidence, and the restaurant isn't called Adagio (slow) just because it sounds high class or trendy. Friese and wife/business partner McWane Friese take such measures for a certain reason.

Roughly half of the produce used in both Devotay and Adagio is local. All pork comes from cooperative members of Niman Ranch. Jordon Creek Bison Farm of Solon provides beef, and some local cheeses are used. When a contract is needed, Friese looks to local contractors first. Even the water-filtration system is provided by a local business, Williams Water System, instead of Culligan, which is a nationally run company.

Chef Kurt Michael Friese stands at the bar of his restaurant, Adagio.

"Everywhere I can, I use local produce, products, and services," Friese said.

Friese is a member and local leader of an international movement called Slow Food. The movement began in Rome in 1986. An Italian food writer, Carlo Petrini, organized a protest in front of the doors of the first McDonald's ever opened in Italy. Petrini and fellow protesters stood outside the doors of McDonald's on the Piazza Di Spagna and served free penne pasta and marinara to passers-by. Their mission: to preserve endangered dishes, products, and animals, and to keep local tastes alive — a resistance to the globalization and standardization of fast foods.

Today, the movement is worldwide, with 65,000 members in 45 countries. Organized into local chapters, or convivia, Friese is the leader of the Iowa City Convivium.

"Slow food is an educational organization whose purpose is to counteract cultural effects of fast food," Friese said. "The mission isn't to destroy McDonald's; but this type of food isn't a life model, and other foods are becoming extinct as a result."

Fellow slow-food members Jeff and Sally Allen of Solon have run Stone City Brewery for five years. Stone City microbrews eight different styles of Iowa pale ale. Jeff Allen said the idea of slow food is centered on the local flavor of each area.

"You can go to L.A. and drink a Budweiser, and it would taste the same as it does in St. Louis or New York," Allen said. "With microbrewed beer, there's a different taste."

Along with the Frieses and Allens, the local slow-food convivium has roughly 35 members. The name Adagio reflects the Frieses' commitment to and support of the slow-food movement.

"Iowa City has more than enough burger joints and steak houses," Friese said. "In my opinion, it doesn't have enough dining. It could use a dose of slow food."

Album Reviews

Fantasies & Delusions
Billy Joel

(AP) — The musician usually gets attention when a new recording is released. But on Fantasies & Delusions pianist Richard Joo plays second fiddle to composer Billy Joel.

Fantasies & Delusions marks the classical debut of Joel, best known for a rock 'n' roll career that's produced such hits as "Piano Man" and "New York State of Mind." Joel's early training was as a classical pianist; it is one he says he hasn't forgotten — and drew from for this collection.

The 10 songs are lovely, if a bit conventional, with the inspiration primarily coming from the 19th-century Romantic era.

"Soliloquy" is especially beautiful, but the entire album is easy on the ears, thanks to the sensitive touch of Joo, a winner of the Stravinsky International Piano Competition.

Fantasies & Delusions, Joel's first new album in eight years, is an accomplishment to be proud of. It's also one that should draw new fans both to Joel and classical music.

beautifulgarbage
Garbage

(AP) — The new CD beautifulgarbage brings the smooth and sometimes jarring Garbage sound back to the fore. Song styles include the thundering power chords of "Silence Is Golden." The CD also includes the crushed-heart ballads "Drive You Home" and "So Like a Rose."

The album's highlight is the updated '60s girl-group lament "Can't Cry These Tears." Other standouts include the electro-rap "Til the Day I Die" and "Parade," which echoes "Heroes"-era David Bowie. The near-teen pop sound of "Cherry Lips (Go Baby Go)" is topped by "Untouchable," which is eerily similar to Christina Aguilera and Britney Spears in verse and chorus, respectively.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stop griping and start on some worthwhile project. Don't blame others. If you are loving and affectionate instead of persnickety, relationships will be rewarding.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take action on those improvements in your personal life. Taking care of legal matters can clear the air and finishing paperwork can clear the slate.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Participate in events to meet some fascinating people. Partnerships are possible and progress can be made, but be careful. Someone's word may not be good, so get all promises in writing.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Home-improvement projects will add value. You can make money if you concentrate on financial planning. Forming a partnership could be what you need to subsidize your ideas.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A dream can turn into reality. Your luck is mounting so don't be afraid to play the odds and find a way to take that long overdue vacation. This hectic nonstop pace seems never-ending.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Involve yourself in real estate or redecorating. Help others in a practical and timely manner. Changes at work will prove beneficial even if it doesn't appear that way right now.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romance is in the air. Your partner won't take no for an answer. You need the break anyway, and your relationship will be closer.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You must put your energy into your work. If you do a good job, it will be hard for an opponent to stand in your way. Your intensity and cooperation are hard to beat.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't be afraid to tell that special person how much you care. Financial opportunities and contracts should prove to be prosperous. Take some short trips in search of information.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stick to what you do best and don't make proclamations about subjects that you have absolutely no clue about. Follow through on a money-making idea that you have researched thoroughly. Your partner may be emotional if you want to spend joint funds.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spend time with friends and don't let trivial annoyances at work get you down or ruin your day. Your renewed discipline makes this a superb day to start a diet or an exercise program.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Start to save your hard-earned cash. You've always given in to others. Remember, charity begins at home. If you are too generous, you will be the one who is left short.

Bad Reasons to Hate 'N Sync

- You want to be Britney's virgin boyfriend.
- They don't play your favorite song on the radio.
- They are old and over the hill for pop music, O-Town is where it's at now.
- They upstaged Aerosmith at the Super Bowl.
- Their live show doesn't sound enough like their album because they spend too much energy singing.
- You think New Kids on the Block is the only true boy band.
- You actually think their songs are worse than the Backstreet Boy's.
- Their music is too alternative and inaccessible for you.
- You can't decide which one to lust after.
- You've spent hours on your hair but you still can't get it to look like J.C.'s.
- Their songs are just too emotionally draining for you.

quote of the day

I want my flowers while I'm alive. I can't smell them when I'm dead. I will not have the music business ignore my position in the industry.

— Chubby Checker, in a full-page ad in Billboard magazine, arguing that he's one of rock 'n' roll's most important but underappreciated figures.

EDITOR'S NOTE

The DI has extended the opportunity of writing a guest opinion to all of this year's Iowa City City Council candidates. These pieces will run today through Oct. 8. We hope the forum will help inform the public about the candidates' platforms before the Oct. 9 primary.

Aaron Winter — At-Large Candidate

Mutual respect and common courtesy go a long way toward a well-functioning society. The Edward J. Byrne memorial grant employs neither of these characteristics.

The approval of the budget, including this grant, is the primary reason I am running. This grant encourages police tactics indicative of a "guilty until proven innocent" approach to law enforcement. Removal of this grant from the budget is my top priority.

Treating adults like adults is not a radical notion. I support a movement to reinstate the 18 year-old drinking age. Removal of all sanctions imposed against taverns and all restrictions on drink specials is crucial.

A new policy allowing parking on downtown streets between the hours of 2 to 6 a.m. is necessary. The current policy actually encourages drunken driving via the threat of being towed.

Public intoxication should be viewed as a minor offense, and the fines for it and other similarly minor offenses should be lowered to reflect this. Such minor offenses must be dealt with under a "cite and release" set of principles.

Social freedoms, civil liberties, and preservation of our Constitutional rights make up the backbone of my campaign. These are of the utmost importance.

High-level city officials ... have a responsibility to the taxpayers.

I think that high-level city officials sometimes forget who is actually paying their salaries. They have a responsibility to the tax-payers. This is not an aristocracy.

The City of Iowa City should never be in the business of loaning out the taxpayers' money to private entities — loans that no local financial institution would even consider (such as the Peninsula Project).

Kirkwood and UI students — YOU CAN make all the difference in the world. All you must do is vote.

This is a low-budget, word-of-mouth campaign. If you agree with any or all of the points listed above, then please relay this message.

Thank you for your consideration,
Aaron Winter,
 at-large candidate

Breast cancer awareness and civic responsibility

October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month. Breast cancer is second only to lung cancer in cancer-related deaths. During 2001 an estimated 192,000 new cases of breast cancer are expected to occur among women in the United States. Approximately 40,000 lives will be claimed. Men can also develop breast cancer, although the risk is significantly lower.

This weekend I will travel to Cedar Rapids to participate in the 11th Annual "Especially for You" women's race against breast cancer. This will be my third year participating in the 5K walk through downtown Cedar Rapids. It is a time to bond with my mother as we giggle incessantly over our fierce determination to walk as fast as we possibly can, trying to be victorious in our respective age categories. It is also a time to inhale crisp autumn air and reflect on the fleeting preciousness of life. A few years ago, my grandma Becky, one of the smartest, most successful women I've ever known, was diagnosed with breast cancer. Thankfully, she discovered her lump early. She underwent a mastectomy, received radiation treatment, and has made a full recovery. My grandma is the reason I walk. I am proud and grateful that she is in the crowd, wearing a pink bandanna, the emblem of survival.

Early detection is the key to survival. Women who are genetically at-risk or over 40 should include a mammogram in their annual health-care regimen. Mammograms are available locally at the University of Iowa Health Care, Breast Imaging Center, 200 Hawkins Drive, (319) 356-3378, and Mercy Hospital Breast Imaging Center, 500 E. Market St., (319) 339-3971.

RIGHT, NEVER TRITE

Life is precious and fleeting, but beyond taking care of ourselves, we need to take care of our civic duties, as well. Next week there is a primary for City Council. Voter turnout in Iowa City is abominably dismal in off-year elections. UI students' monetary presence sustains Iowa City. We pay the majority of property taxes, and we live with ordinances imposed by the City Council. The current City Council not only fails to reach out to students, it slaps us with frivolous ordinances that merely interfere with commerce. (And will do so again if they make restaurants nonsmoking.) Students don't vote, but perhaps that is because there is never a candidate who addresses our needs.

Next Tuesday, there are many good reasons to vote for Brian Davis. (I am aware there are people in hell with blue lips right now. City Council is nonpartisan, and besides, whom else can I endorse? The homeless guy outside Pizza on Dubuque? I want someone on the council who doesn't just say he or she is "concerned" with students, but is a student. A former graduate student at the UI, Davis will soon attend the Iowa law school. Davis' campaign advocates sensible, accountable city spending and economic growth for the downtown area, views I heartily endorse for their pro-entrepreneur, fiscal conservatism.

Noteworthy ideas from Davis's campaign include programs and protections for UI students. Apartment complexes desperately need convenient recycling services. As a former (and never-ever again) AUR tenant who was gouged a few months ago, I like Davis' landlord accountability idea — detailed receipts for "alleged damages." Reinstatement of the free shuttle services during the summer is an important convenience.

Davis says he would work to ease the tax burden on homeowners and renters and advocate development of moderate-income housing.

Admittedly, Davis advocates several things I consider frivolous: municipally owned utilities, a "powerful" citizens-review board for the police, favoritism for unionized labor contractual city projects, and living-wage ordinances. However, the presence of a student on the council greatly outweighs the costs of a boomer-plus council that is out of touch with the lifeblood of Iowa City.

Register and vote in one stop this Saturday at the Iowa City Public Library from 10 to 6 p.m. The registration deadline has not passed to vote for the primary next week; a few hundred votes from students will make the difference. This is our town, and we deserve to have our voices heard.

City Council endorsements

In the upcoming primary, I will cast one of my votes for Ernie Lehman. Integrity, leadership, and common sense have been the hallmarks of his tenure on the City Council.

He has worked hard to attract economic development to the area. He supported the resurgence of Sycamore Mall, the expansions of ACT and Seabury & Smith, and other efforts to increase our city's tax base.

I encourage all citizens to consider casting one of their at-large votes for Ernie Lehman on Oct. 9.

Tim Negro
 Iowa City resident

John Robertson has a lot to offer the City Council. He is bright, articulate, and hardworking. He has taken the time to master many of the difficult issues that confront Iowa City, such as police-citizen relations and public transportation. John also has worked closely with the broad range of Iowa City's population. As an attorney, he is familiar with the strains of being a professional and small-business owner and is comfortable with individuals from those backgrounds. He has, however, spent years representing hundreds of people at the other end of the social-economic spectrum: the working poor, the people who so often need the social services that are in such short supply. In that respect alone, John would bring a badly needed balance to the council.

John Whiston
 Iowa City resident

I have lived in Iowa City since the fall of 1997 and have come to love the diverse nature of this city. I feel this so strongly that I am doing two things I have never done before.

First, I am writing a letter to the editor. I want to urge my fellow Iowa City citizens to register to vote. I believe this is an effective way to help our city and nation heal after the trauma of Sept. 11.

Second, after talking with Leah Cohen about the issues — which affect us all here in Iowa City, whether we are elderly, handicapped, students, or growing families — I came to understand and support her position and candidacy. I am working for Cohen in her campaign for one of the at-large City Council seats.

I urge my fellow citizens to investigate the candidates' positions, vote in the primary on Oct. 9, and vote in the election on Nov. 6. Let's all celebrate our democracy and freedom.

Anthony R. Partee
 Iowa City resident

I'm supporting Brandon Ross for City Council. He will work to protect neighborhoods and the environment and keep our taxes under control. Ross is a nice person who cares about people and will bring a sense of democratic participation to the council.

Please vote for Brandon Ross on Oct. 9 (District B) and Nov. 6.

Steven Kanner
 Iowa City resident

Iowa City's recent improvements are nice, but millions of dollars are being spent without citizen approval. With a City Council that is obsessed with alcohol abuse, one would think it would invest in alternative activities, creating an atmosphere where students and long-term residents can collectively enjoy what Iowa City has to offer. Yet the council chooses to waste money on expensive cosmetic improvements instead of enriching the Pedestrian Mall with concerts and festivals to promote city pride. The City Council will never help the alcohol problem with ridiculous laws and harsh policing. Leah Cohen, the only sensible candidate for City Council, wants to invest in the community and bring the Ped Mall back as the festive centerpiece of Iowa City. Cohen wants to give the power back to the people. We live in a city where the mayor is not even elected by the populace but by the dangerously powerful City Council. We need a voice of the people; Iowa City needs Leah Cohen.

A background on Teets

As a human-rights advocate involved in a number of issues locally, I find Dan Teets' remarks in the Sept. 27 DI rather self-serving. While entitled to voice his views and to critique local activists such as Karen Kubby, readers should be aware of his record.

As the chairman of the UI Charter Committee, Teets' commitment to human rights begs critical examination. Last spring, when a number of valued UI licensees did not sign the UI's Code of Conduct, Teets' committee essentially gutted the Code of Conduct, allowing Nike, Reebok, and other corporations to draft language that largely exempted them from any commitment to ending abusive labor practices. The changes enacted under Teets' command essentially set up two different sets of standards for UI licensees.

The first, signed by the bulk of progressive principles agreed upon by faculty, students, and staff, was written by the committee created by Teets' committee, was written by corporate operatives to protect their interests and deplorable practices. The obsequiousness Teets exhibited for these internationally known human-rights abusers is indefensible; it undercuts his credibility and places his moral rhetoric firmly in the place of hypocrisy.

Given the pervasive labor conditions in the United States and around the world, the obstacles to achieving a modicum of human-rights protections are nothing short of a constant struggle undertaken by far too few. That charlatans like Teets abuse the moral authority of their positions to undermine the commitment of engaged activists does nothing to advance human rights and much to stymie our struggles.

Human Rights Commission concerns

At the Sept. 25 meeting of the Human Rights Commission, I stated my concern that the impartial investigative stance of the commission had been compromised by the actions of commission member Charles Major. The essence of my concern was that Major, as a frequent caller to KCJJ who identifies himself as a Human Rights Commission member, created the impression that it might be futile for someone to bring a complaint before the commission. I must now add to this some new concerns.

If you criticize Major, you can expect the KCJJ DJs to attack, ridicule, and demean you on the air. You can expect Major to call KCJJ and put his spin on Human Rights Commission business. You can expect Major to accuse, on air, the Human Rights Commission of being unwilling to listen to the DU who came to the meeting to defend him. You can expect Major to call KCJJ to praise DJ Steve Soboroff for his understanding of human rights and his knowledge of how the Human Rights Commission works.

In short, you can expect Major to try to make KCJJ the voice of the Human Rights Commission.

UI suspends funding programs from other agencies, said Joanne Dochterman, the director of the Center for Nursing Classification. Internal funding programs have helped her recruit professors, she said. The postponement will have an effect on untenured professors, who many times do not have access to other funding sources, she added.

Phyllis Cullen, a UI assistant professor of nursing, began the application process for two of the programs when she was recently notified of the suspension.

"I'm not angry or upset, but I'm asking, 'What can I do now?'" she said. "I do believe we all have to do our part in this budget crisis."

Cullen said the funding programs were one incentive to come to the UI because they would allow her to be more competitive when applying for larger grants.

"If you can't find these small ones, it's going to set you back," she said. "We're going to have to get creative and look outside the university for funds."

Cullen needed the funds to research artificial intelligence, what she calls "computer systems that learn."

Cullen is looking at other forms of funding and is confident the university will offer the sources again in some form.

David Skorton, the UI vice president for Research, said it was unfortunate that the programs had to be suspended and that he understood applicants' distress.

"This is disappointing to people," he said. "It's very disappointing to me. But it's important to remember that we are suspending, not canceling. I'm hoping to reinstate these soon."

against terrorism. Invoking Article 5 merely adds political weight. It is morally, but not legally, binding. A country may still decline to take a specific action.

Meanwhile, in the United States, the government is investigating trading in shares of 38 companies, including major airlines, cruise lines, General Motors, and Raytheon, to determine if people used advance knowledge of the terror attacks to profit.

The Securities and Exchange Commission asked brokerage and investment firms in the United States and Canada to review their records for trading in the stocks to find any unusual patterns from Aug. 27 through Sept. 11, the day hijackers slammed planes into the World Trade Center's towers and the Pentagon.

There was unusually heavy trading in airline and related stocks several days before the attacks, using a market tactic that essentially bets that a stock will decline in value.

The SEC list also includes several big companies that were tenants in the collapsed Twin Towers in the heart of New York's financial district: investment firms Morgan Stanley and Lehman Brothers, Bank of America, and the financial firm Marsh & McLennan.

The SEC has not disclosed details of its investigation, part of a worldwide inquiry into possible advance trading by individuals linked to the terrorists. But the agency's list of 38 companies was posted Monday on the Web site of the Investment Dealers Association of Canada, which represents that country's securities firms. The association sent a notice of the list to its approximately 190 member firms.

The 38 companies include the parents of major airlines American, Continental, Delta, Northwest, Southwest, United, and USAirways as well as cruise lines Carnival and Royal Caribbean, aircraft maker Boeing, and defense contractor Lockheed Martin.

In the days before the terrorist assaults, unusually high numbers of "put options" were purchased for the stocks of AMR Corp. and UAL Corp., the parents of American and United — each of which had two planes hijacked. A put option is a contract that gives a holder the right to sell an asset at a specified price before a certain date.

Germany's stock market regulator has said it was looking into the possibility of suspicious short-selling of insurance company shares — including AXA, a big French company whose shares also are traded in the United States — just before the terrorist attacks. As with put options, investors who engage in short-selling are betting that the price of the stock will fall.

On the diplomatic front, as Ambassador-at-Large Francis Taylor, the head of counterterrorism at the State Department, was briefing the allies, President Bush again threatened the Taliban, who, he said, are harboring bin Laden and other members of his network.

"I have said that the Taliban must turn over the al-Qaida organization living in Afghanistan and must destroy the terrorist camps," Bush said. "They must do so; otherwise, there will be a consequence. There are no negotiations."

IN-STATE

The majority of out-of-state students come from Illinois. Last year, 1,098 people crossed the Mississippi to attend school in Iowa City.

"There are more college-aged students in Illinois," said Linda Maxson, the dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. "The education we deliver here at the UI is highly regarded, and it is a very good deal financially."

While the rate of high-school graduates attending community colleges has almost doubled in the last two years, officials do not expect tuition increases to have a negative effect on UI enrollment.

"If we didn't raise the tuition, we would have to cut programs and staff, and then people would begin to question the quality of our school, and that would decrease enrollment," Coulter said.

While the overall enrollment number of in-state students could.

"One thing we will never do is tell an Iowa resident he or she can't attend the UI because a nonresident has taken her or his place," Coulter said. "That's simply not going to happen."

Iowa must curb mental, physical breakdowns

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Special teams play a key role in Iowa's attack, leading coach Kirk Ferentz to target the unit's numerous mental and physical letdowns on Sept. 29 as an area warranting immediate attention.

At Tuesday's weekly press conference, the Hawkeye head coach suggested similar breakdowns the rest of the way will cost the team victories.

"We've got to get that cleaned up, or we're just living on the edge," he said. "If there's a positive out of it, just about every mistake we saw was a correctable mistake. This week, we have to get it changed either through better concentration, better execution, or changing personnel. We're open to all three of those possibilities."

Ferentz suggested he would take a look at using sophomore place-kicker Nate Kaeding rather than sophomore punter David Bradley in certain situations — mainly, when Iowa is stuck near its own end zone.

Ferentz said this wasn't because of a lack of faith in Bradley but because Kaeding simply has more experience in pressure scenarios.

In the Hawkeyes' 24-18 win over Penn State on Sept. 29, Bradley dropped a snap in the second quarter and had a punt blocked and returned for a touchdown in the fourth. However, Ferentz didn't fault Bradley for the blocked punt.

In addition to re-evaluating the punting situation, long-snapper Kevin Worthy, also a backup linebacker, will get a second look. Ferentz said the sophomore's Sept. 29 performance was "inconsistent." But he also said Worthy has handled the majority of the snaps since last season well and didn't foresee his losing the job.

But if the kicking and punting unit has another sub-par performance Saturday, Iowa will likely lose, considering the opponent is No. 21 Purdue.

The Boilermakers, like the Hawkeyes, are 3-0 overall and 1-0 in the Big Ten. They are ranked 21st nationally by the Associated Press and are one year removed from a Rose Bowl appearance.

And those were only a few of the accolades Ferentz showed on Iowa's upcoming foe.

"They are a veteran ball club that knows how to win," he said. "They are good in all phases. It's going to be a great challenge for our football team."

At this point in the year, after playing all of its games in Iowa City for the entire month of September, the team is ready to measure its place on the road.

Ferentz hopes to use the Hawkeyes' win against Penn State last season in State College, Pa., as motivation, saying that if last year's team could pull out a victory in famed Beaver Stadium, then the 2001 squad can win anywhere.

"Before you even get on the plane or bus, you have to have a certain mentality," Ferentz said. "If you want to win consistently as a football team, you have to win on the road."

Iowa and Purdue have not met since 1998. Ferentz has never faced the Boilermakers as a head coach and has never personally coached against Purdue coach Joe Tiller. Still, respect abounds.

"Things don't happen accidentally," Ferentz said. "They've got a great scheme. They are a very well-coached football team. They don't make many mistakes. They don't beat themselves."

So, Iowa will take its shot on Saturday. The Hawkeyes are looking to beat Purdue in West Lafayette, Ind., for the first time since 1991. Kickoff is set for 11:10 a.m., and ESPN will broadcast the game. Tickets are still available through the Boilermakers' ticket office.

Altercation at bar displeases Ferentz

An altercation that took place outside of Etc. on Sept. 22, allegedly involving some members of the Iowa football team, is becoming a little more clear to Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz.

Ferentz said Tuesday that Iowa players were involved, that alcohol was involved, and that he's looking into punishment for the players who were involved.

"I pretty much have my course of action laid out, and I'm going to meet with the leadership group about it this afternoon," Ferentz said. "There will be disciplinary action. Right now, it won't be noticeable. If I learn anything else down the road, then there may be something visible."

The leadership group consists of 12 Iowa players who help set guidelines for team violations.

As of Tuesday, no formal charges had been filed in connection with the incident. Ferentz said that if there were charges filed, he would look at it a little differently.

"There are some things I've found out I'm not pleased about," he said.

Ferentz did not elaborate on exactly how many players were involved or which players were involved. He did say, however, that they were of legal drinking age.

Iowa cornerback Benny Sapp, who was present when the incident occurred, said he

On the gridiron

By Jesse Steinfeldt
 The Daily Iowan

The quarterback poised to lead a UI football team to victory this season was a starter on Wheaton South High School's 1998 Illinois state champion team.

His name isn't Jon Beutjer. Brendan Ferrari, a high-school teammate of the former Hawkeye turned Illini player, is the quarterback of reference. A defensive end at Wheaton, Ferrari is now the field general for Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity's flag-football team, the defending All-University champions.

Instead of such targets as Kahlil Hill, C.J. Jones, and Chris Oliver, Ferrari throws to Andrew Morris, Aaron Pickett, and Rick Eisenlauer. Instead of Aaron Kampman terrorizing opposing quarterbacks, Joe Holmes is the menacing sackmaster in flag-football backfields.

"It's different," said Eisenlauer, who transferred to Iowa after playing wideout at University of South Dakota. "It's not nearly as fast as college, but you incorporate the same skills."

Flag football is alive and well on campus. This activity, sponsored by Recreational Services, makes football available to those who want to get back on the gridiron. Different levels are set up for those with varying abilities and interests.

"Our intramural flag-football leagues are a great opportunity for those who want to continue playing football but may not be Division I football players," said Mike Widen, an assistant director of Recreational Services. "Some of the football we see is very competitive, played by great athletes."

SAE team manager/player Addison Boughton likens the format of play to that of the Arena League, minus the contact. Fast-paced seven-on-seven action occurs in the blink of an eye on the shortened field. In theory, offensive production is the premium. However, defense wins championships in this game, a distant cousin to tackle football.

"Against a man-to-man defense, it is easy to just go deep," Morris said. "We play a cover two, which is a tough defense to throw against."

Intramural rules strictly prohibit physical contact, so former linebackers with a penchant for decapitating hits may not be totally satisfied. Flag football cannot replicate that aspect of the game, but it certainly provides an outlet for displaying general football skills.

"We miss the contact, but our team is really athletic," Boughton said. "We play a wide-open style of football that complements our athleticism. All of our receivers can burn it downfield."

SAE displays an organized, yet improvisational, brand of football. It has a core set of plays but will draw one up in the dirt if the situation calls for it. Practices are completely informal, so the players rely on past experience to guide their performance.

"One of the key things about our team is that we are really football-minded," Boughton said. "Everyone knows what to do. In the huddle, Brendan can tell us to do this, this, and this, and it gets done."

Even though SAE suits up some very talented football players, they are cognizant of the fact that this league is not a stepping stone to tryouts with Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz.

Sosa nails No. 60

CHICAGO (AP) — Sammy Sosa became the first player in major league history with three, 60-homer seasons, but it wasn't enough to keep the Chicago Cubs from being eliminated from post-season contention.

Adam Dunn hit a solo homer off Kyle Farnsworth in the top of the ninth inning, giving the Cincinnati Reds a 5-4 victory over the Cubs on Tuesday night. Dmitri Young and D.T. Cromer also homered for the Reds.

The loss, along with St. Louis' 5-1 victory over Milwaukee, eliminated the Cubs from the NL wild-card race. The Cubs are six games behind St. Louis with only five games left.

While Barry Bonds chases Mark McGwire's record of 70 home-runs, Sosa remains amazingly consistent. He reached 60 on Tuesday with a solo shot in the first off Reds left-hander Lance Davis, an arching shot to left-center that almost went out of the park.

Pirates 10, Mets 1

NEW YORK — The New York Mets were eliminated from post-season contention Tuesday night when Bronson Arroyo pitched a five-hitter and Craig Wilson drove in a career-high four runs, leading the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 10-1 victory.

The defending NL champions, who captivated a shaken city with a stirring September surge that got them back into the NL East race, played like they had already been knocked out, giving up 15 hits against the team with the poorest record in the league.

New York, coming off its first NL pennant since 1986, pretty much ended its comeback hopes by losing two of three in Atlanta last weekend. The Mets can win no more than 84 games this season, and either the Braves or Phillies will win at least 85.

Marlins 4, Expos 3

MIAMI — A.J. Burnett won for the first time in seven starts and Chicago Cubs slugger Sammy Sosa hits his 60th home run of the season Tuesday off of Cincinnati Reds pitcher Lance Davis at Wrigley Field in Chicago.

Kevin Millar added a two-run homer as the Florida Marlins defeated the Montreal Expos, 4-3, Tuesday night.

The game drew 7,737 fans, the smallest home crowd of the year for Florida.

Burnett (10-12) allowed five hits and three runs and struck out eight in 7½ innings to earn his first win since Aug. 21.

Tony Armas (9-14) lost for the ninth time in his last 11 decisions, leaving the game in the fourth inning after being hit by a line drive.

Giants 4, Astros 1

HOUSTON — Barry Bonds reached base four times — but still remained one short of Mark McGwire's home run record — and the San Francisco Giants further scrambled the NL playoff picture Tuesday night with a 4-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

Bonds went 1-for-2 with two walks, and was hit by a pitch. He stayed at 69 home runs, with five games left to break Big Mac's mark.

Hawkeye signee talks Iowa football

Iowa recruit Chris Felder could have attended virtually any school in the country, but the Oelwein High School senior decided to fulfill his dream of becoming a Hawkeye. The 6-foot-7, 296-pound giant should bolster an already much-improved Iowa offensive line. An Iowa fan for years, Felder selected the UI last month over traditional powerhouses Notre Dame, Nebraska, and Michigan. DI sports reporter Jeremy Shapiro talked to Felder about this year's Hawkeyes, the recruiting process, the NFL, and his intriguing hobbies.

DI: How has the offensive line figured in Iowa's early success?
Felder: It's been a big part. I'm not sure how many sacks it has given up, but it's not many. It has also gotten the running game going.
DI: When did you know the Hawkeyes were right for you?
Felder: They offered me a spot the summer after my sophomore year, which was quite flattering, being the first person they went after. I knew in my heart Iowa was the place, but I wanted to look around and see what other places were like. This summer, it became obvious Iowa was the pick, so I decided not to wait any longer.
DI: Are you relieved the recruiting process is over?
Felder: It's not too bad now, although it's not completely over because I am trying to influence others to come to Iowa.
DI: So you have become one of the recruiters?
Felder: Yeah, that's kind of true. I mean, this year's freshman class tried to recruit me last year, so now I'm telling people what a great place it is to play.

DI: Did you have a football idol growing up?
Felder: It probably was Jared DeVries. Being a Hawkeye and from a small town, I followed his career all the way to the NFL.
DI: Do you have any NFL aspirations yourself?
Felder: I think I have a good shot. Still, I'll work hard in school so I have a college education to fall back on in case it doesn't work out.
DI: What's your favorite NFL team?
Felder: I like the Vikings a lot, even though they are not off to the best start.
DI: How do you prepare for each game?
Felder: I just try to do the same thing every week. Come home from school, go over to a friend's for a while, grab a bite to eat, and then take off for the game. I'm thinking about the game a lot, trying not to think about anything else.
DI: What's going through your mind right before the ball is snapped?

Felder: I just think about my responsibility. Also, I try to be a leader and keep my teammates motivated.
DI: What are some other hobbies you enjoy?
Felder: I play baseball. I might play for the Hawkeye baseball team as well, if it fits my schedule. And I snowmobile in the winter.
DI: Your coaches don't mind that you go out on the snowmobile?
Felder: (laughing) I think it's all right because I try to avoid the dangerous situations.
DI: Seen any good movies lately?
Felder: The last movie I saw was American Pie 2. I've been pretty busy.
DI: Do you have an all-time favorite?
Felder: My favorite movie is The Program.
Felder: Yeah, I don't know why; it's just my favorite.

Bettendorf teen makes design finals
DAVENPORT (AP) — Until this spring, Leah Rose had never played golf nor had any interest in the game. Then she saw Sergio Garcia and everything changed. Rose, a freshman at Luther College, is one of 10 finalists in a golf-course design contest. She and the nine others — all men — each had to create a fantasy golf course using 3D designer software. Garcia helped pique her interest. "I was watching a golf tournament on television — they usually put me to sleep — and was watching Sergio Garcia play," said Rose, a graduate of Bettendorf High School. "A few days later, a CD golf-designer game box with Sergio on the cover caught my eye." "It said there was a contest to meet Sergio and play a round of golf with him." That possibility was enough to get Rose interested. "I decided to take up golf and enter the contest," she said. Rose took no lessons and was shooting about 60 for nine holes. With practice and time on the driving range, she said she has cut her average by more than 10 strokes.

Magic Johnson adds Fatburger chain to business ventures
SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Magic Johnson, who brought high-end coffee shops and movie theaters to blighted areas, is adding gourmet hamburgers to his menu of business ventures with the purchase of the Fatburger restaurant chain. The former Los Angeles Lakers basketball star said Tuesday he and fellow investors plan to open more than 100 new stores nationwide in both urban and suburban areas, a marked change from his past focus on revitalizing inner-city areas. "We're still about the urban community, but sometimes you have to venture out," Johnson said. "We're going to do what Fatburger has been doing, but we're just going to take it to another level because a lot of people still don't know about Fatburger." Terms of the acquisition were not released. Through his Johnson Development Corp., Johnson has worked to bring economic development to troubled urban areas by opening up his trademark Magic Johnson Theaters, Starbucks coffeehouses, and T.G.I. Fridays restaurants.

the majors' best control pitchers, Bonds swung only once in four trips at Enron Field. Against Billy Wagner's 98-mph fastballs, he grounded out.

Phillies 3, Braves 1

ATLANTA — The Philadelphia Phillies aren't the least bit impressed with Atlanta's quest for another division title.

Randy Wolf allowed three hits in eight innings, Bobby Abreu hit a two-run homer, and the Phillies beat the Braves, 3-1, Tuesday night in the opener of a big three-game series.

Philadelphia closed within a game of Atlanta in the NL East with five to play.

Greg Maddux (17-11) failed for the seventh time to win his 18th game, even though he gave up just two runs and six hits in eight innings.

Twins 5, Tigers 0

DETROIT — Brad Radke pitched a three-hitter for his second shutout of the season, leading the Minnesota Twins over the Detroit Tigers, 5-0, Tuesday night.

Radke (14-11), who took a no-hitter into the eighth inning against Detroit on Sept. 18, improved to 4-0 against the Tigers this year. He was coming off a pair of losses in which he had allowed nine runs in eight innings.

Radke struck out one and walked two, getting his sixth complete game this year. Minnesota is 14-3 against Detroit with two games left between the teams this season.

Ed Zurga/Associated Press

Kansas City Royals' catcher Gregg Zaun, left, goes into the air as he tries to tag out Cleveland Indians' Eddie Taubensee, who tried to score from second on Roberto Alomar's hit right in the sixth inning Tuesday in Kansas City, Mo. Taubensee was called out on the play.

Devil Rays 10, Red Sox 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Paul Wilson allowed two runs over seven innings as the Tampa Bay Devil Rays routed the Boston Red Sox again, 10-3, Tuesday night.

Wilson (8-9), who twice worked out of bases loaded jams, has won six of eight decisions since rejoining the rotation in late July. He allowed 11 hits.

The Devil Rays (59-98), winners of seven of nine, also beat the Red Sox, 10-3, Monday. Tampa Bay is trying to avoid becoming the first AL team to lose 100 games since the 1996 Detroit Tigers (53-109).

The Red Sox (77-79) fell two games under .500 for the first time since Apr. 9, 2000. Boston has dropped nine of 11 and has just six wins over the past 29 games.

Tampa Bay scored four times off Casey Fossum (3-2) in the first inning.

Yankees 6, White Sox 4

NEW YORK — Derek Jeter and Jorge Posada each homered and drove in two runs Tuesday night as the New York Yankees moved closer to wrapping up home-field advantage in the first round of the playoffs with a 6-4 win over the Chicago White Sox.

The Yankees, who have clinched the AL East, started the day 3½ games ahead of Central winner Cleveland in the race to open the postseason at home.

If New York stays ahead of the Indians, it would start the playoffs against Oakland on Oct. 10 at Yankee Stadium.

Ted Lilly (5-6), making his first start since Aug. 18, allowed four runs and six hits in six innings to get his first win as a starter since July 5 at Baltimore.

Lilly, who pitched 7½ innings of relief Sept. 28 to get the win against the Orioles, had won only once in his previous 14 starts.

Orioles 4, Blue Jays 3

BALTIMORE — Tim Lincecum Jr. got his first major league hit and scored on a bases-loaded walk to Brady Anderson with two outs in the ninth inning, lifting the Baltimore Orioles past the Toronto Blue Jays, 4-3, Tuesday night.

Cal Ripken went 0-for-4 for Baltimore, his seventh-straight hitless game. Ripken, who will retire after this season, is mired in an 0-for-29 skid.

Jose Cruz Jr. homered in a fourth-straight game and had three RBIs for the Blue Jays. He's the sixth Blue Jay to homer in four successive games, including Carlos Delgado, who's done it twice.

Raines, the son of Montreal Expos outfielder Tim Raines, was 0-for-3 in his first major league start before leading off the ninth with a double off Matthew Dewitt (0-2). After a sacrifice, Dewitt issued two intentional walks to load the bases for Tony Batista, who struck out.

Royals 5, Indians 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Carlos Beltran hit a two-out tiebreaking RBI single off John Rocker, and Mike Sweeney followed with a three-run homer, lifting Kansas City to a 5-1 victory over Cleveland on Tuesday night.

Sweeney hit a 1-2 pitch from Rocker (3-7) for his 29th home run of the season and 99th of his career.

Pinch-runner Donnie Sadler stole second and went to third when Rocker threw a wild pitch with a 3-2 count to Angel Barroa, then Beltran singled into left.

Rocker started the eighth for the Indians, who on Sunday clinched their sixth AL Central title in seven years.

had nothing to do with the situation. He said those who were there met with Ferentz and informed him of what happened.

"We told him everything that happened — that was it," Sapp said. "I was there — people accuse me because I was there. I didn't take part in it. They tried to put me in it because the only person they knew was Benny Sapp."

Sapp said he did not know what kind of punishment would take place as of yet, adding that Ferentz could wait to "see if it's a big issue." He also didn't know exactly how many people were outside the bar when the incident occurred.

"There were a lot of people down there," he said.

Ferentz said Iowa has established team rules and that being downtown on a Saturday night isn't a violation of those rules. Saturday night is the one night Iowa players do not have a curfew; it's not a violation for a football player to consume alcohol on a Saturday night.

"They didn't violate a rule, but that may cause me to re-examine some rules for some individuals," Ferentz said.

However, it would be a presumptuous to label them as castoffs or wannabes.

"We are out here to have fun and compete against good athletes," said Holmes, before adding facetiously, "But if Iowa ever needs anyone..."

On its way to the championship season last year, SAE dethroned perennial champ Sexual Chocolate in the semifinals before defeating Tiggie Bitties for the title.

After winning its first game to start this season, top-ranked SAE squared off against arch-rival Sigma Epsilon. In a hotly contested battle, SAE was upset in a thrilling marathon that featured seven overtime stanzas. Sigma Epsilon players and fans, some 60 plus in total, stormed the field in a mass congratulatory gesture as if they had just defeated Penn State.

Despite the loss to its nemesis, SAE still feels confident about its chance for back-to-back titles. It slipped from first all the way to eighth place in the IM rankings, but playoff time is when SAE is at its best.

"The same thing happened last year," Pickett said. "We lost to Sig Ep in the regular season, then beat them in the playoffs. We'll come ready to play."

BASEBALL BRIEF

Beinfest becomes Expos interim general manager

MONTREAL (AP) — Larry Beinfest was appointed interim general manager of the Montreal Expos on Tuesday.

Beinfest, 37, had been assistant to general manager Jim Beattie, who resigned on Sept. 21.

Beinfest joined the Expos on Dec. 3, 1999. He had been Seattle's assistant to the vice president for baseball operations after serving as the Mariners' director of player development.

"Larry's background in player development and scouting and his expertise in baseball operations make him the ideal person for this job at this time," Expos owner Jeffrey Loria said in a statement.

Ultimate Ripken fan unveiled

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Bill Haelig refuses to call himself Cal Ripken's biggest fan.

The evidence suggests otherwise.

Haelig, 40, owns several Ripken bats, 34 jerseys, dozens of official lineup cards, and hundreds of momentous programs. He also has about 250 autographs — including one on a check Ripken cashed as a minor leaguer with the Rochester Red Wings.

Haelig's collection is so extensive he has items on loan to the Babe Ruth Museum in Baltimore and the Ripken Museum in Aberdeen.

An avid fan? Without question. However, Haelig emphatically claims he's not nearly as fanatical about his hobby as the Trekkies who dress up as Captain Kirk at Star Trek conventions.

"I am not a mutant fan," said Haelig, who stores his collection in one room in his home in Reading, Pa. "I would never say I'm Cal's biggest fan, because people might think, 'He's got to be crazy.' All I've done is taken an intellectual, respectful approach to souvenir collecting."

Haelig began gathering Ripken memorabilia in 1982, long before it became apparent that the Baltimore Orioles' infielder would go on to enjoy a Hall of Fame career. Ripken is retiring after this season.

"At the time, as with most kids my age, my favorite player was Brooks Robinson. But he was already big then, and I couldn't afford to buy Brooks items," Haelig recalled. "So I figured I'd try to start following someone on his way up. I latched onto Cal because he, too, was a Brooks Robinson fan, playing for his hometown team."

Ripken doesn't duck for cover when he sees Haelig coming. They first met in 1988, when Haelig secured a pass that allowed him entry into the Baltimore Orioles' clubhouse. After sheepishly approaching Ripken, he received a hearty handshake and was asked if he wanted anything in particular.

Haelig asked for the nameplate above the locker. Ripken complied, and it remains Haelig's most valued possession in a collection that includes hundreds of items worth thousands of dollars.

Haelig's collection has grown so large because he is much more interested in sentiment than resale value, a quality that receives Ripken's full approval.

I would never say I'm Cal's biggest fan, because people might think, 'He's got to be crazy.'

— Bill Haelig

NFL, auto dealers still negotiating

By Mary Foster
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Even though the mayor of New Orleans was all but certain the Super Bowl would be played there Feb. 3, the NFL and an auto dealers group were still trying to resolve problems Tuesday with switching dates. "This is not a done deal yet," said David Hyatt, a spokesman for the National Automobile Dealers Association. "We have logistical problems. We have some other problems."

The Super Bowl had been scheduled for New Orleans on Jan. 27, but the NFL wants to delay the playoffs a week because of the week it took off after the Sept. 11 attacks in New York and Washington. Its other alternatives are playing Feb. 3 in another city or condensing the playoff schedule to have teams play as many as three games in 10 days.

Mayor Marc Morial said earlier the switch was "99 percent certain" and repeated it Tuesday but noted there were issues that needed a few more days to resolve.

Hyatt said the auto dealers committee sent a reworded copy of the latest NFL proposal back to the league for what he called "technical clarifications." He would not elaborate.

The auto dealers committee wants the NFL to cover its multimillion-dollar expenses and losses of shifting its convention.

Hyatt said four major hotels, including the Hilton, which would be their convention site, had not returned agreements guaranteeing the auto dealers rooms on their new date. However, Hilton general manager Paul Buckley said: "We have returned everything they requested."

Ed McNeill, the president of the New Orleans Tourist and Convention Bureau, said: "The NADA has all the rooms it needs."

However, officials were still scrambling to get rooms for the NFL, which was 3,000 shy of the number if needed for the championship game.

"Right now, there's a lot of work going on, a lot of movement," McNeill said. "We're getting close; hotels are working hard to move things around and free up rooms. We'll get there."

Even if the dates are switched, other problems remain.

The NFL Experience, originally scheduled for the convention center the week of the Super Bowl, probably would not be able to get the space it needs if the game is moved. The Superdome would also have to cancel a monster truck show, and two minor-league hockey games would have to be rescheduled.

The weekend is also the first weekend of Mardi Gras and fifteen parades are scheduled for the city and suburbs.

Morial said the NFL asked whether the city can provide adequate security for parades at the same time as the Super Bowl. Police chief Richard Pennington said the only concern would be two Sunday parades in New Orleans, and those can be rescheduled.

On Sunday, Tagliabue said Giants Stadium in New Jersey was under consideration.

SPORTS BRIEF

NU tight end's future still uncertain

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska tight end Jon Bowling, who was arrested over the weekend for not leaving a party when ordered by police, was charged Tuesday with failure to disperse.

Bowling is the fifth Cornhusker to be arrested since the summer.

Bowling will continue to practice with the fourth-ranked Cornhuskers while his legal case is pending, coach Frank Solich said Tuesday. Bowling, 21, who police said sat on the hood of a squad car after being told several times to leave the party, is scheduled to appear in Lancaster County Court on Oct. 24. The player arrests, all on misdemeanor charges, have grown frustrating to Solich.

"The potential for off-field stuff is there for every coach. It's never behind you," Solich said. "In this profession, as in any other profession, you just deal with things as they occur."

Jordan practices with Wizards

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

WILMINGTON, N.C. — Michael Jordan practiced twice Tuesday behind closed doors. The only witnesses were his teammates, his coaching staff, some state troopers, and a few college students.

"He was awesome," one young woman said as she emerged from the gymnasium doors.

"He's buff," said another. A pack of reporters and cameramen didn't get to see Jordan do anything more than cheer from the bench. The Washington Wizards let the media watch the final 15 minutes of practice, by which time Jordan had already finished playing in two scrimmages.

Jordan spoke with the media for a few minutes, standing behind a protective barrier of folding chairs arrayed in a semicircle.

"I had a good time today. I'm pretty sure I'll be sore, but it was fun to be out there and be a part of the drills. It's a quick way to get back into shape," Jordan said.

At 38, Jordan is at least four years older than every other player on the team. The Wizards have six rookies and two one-year veterans on their camp roster. One player, Kwame Brown, was 2 years old when Jordan was a rookie in 1984.

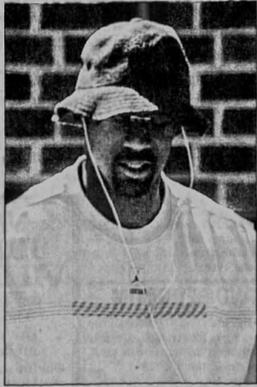

"It's hard to compare with the Chicago Bulls," Jordan said. "It's different because you have a lot of young players — guys who don't know what to do because it's their first year."

Jordan had said he would probably not take part in both practices as the Wizards hold two-a-days during the first week of training camp. But he played in both Tuesday, sitting out the final 20-25 minutes of the morning session by design, according to assistant general manager Rod Higgins.

Brown described Jordan as being about 90 percent effective mentally, while other teammates said they were most impressed by Jordan's passing skills.

"All you had to do was get to the open area, and he was finding you. He was making some great passes, he was scoring. He looked great," forward Pop-eye Jones said. "Hey, I was on his team, and I don't know if you guys saw the scoreboard, but we won."

Coach Doug Collins said he was concentrating on getting the ball to Jordan in the low post and letting the offense run from there.

Steve Helber/Associated Press
Washington Wizards player Michael Jordan leaves Trask Coliseum at the University of North Carolina-Wilmington after the first practice in Wilmington, N.C., Tuesday.

The rest of the Wizards are trying to get comfortable with the idea of playing alongside a teammate who had a hand in acquiring most of them over the past two seasons when Jordan was the team's president of basketball operations.

Higgins said Jordan was keeping his in-practice comments to a minimum, giving a pointer here and there. Brown, who entered the NBA straight out of high school and was drafted first overall last June by Jordan, said he didn't "have time to catch myself taking it all in, because then he'll catch me doing something wrong."

The Wizards arrived Monday night in this city on the coast of North Carolina and held a team dinner.

"Last night, he didn't say a lot in the group setting. In fact, he really didn't say anything, but I'm sure there's a method to the madness," Higgins said.

"He probably wants to take a step back, and coming from a different professional situation, going back between the lines, it's a different role for him. Our coach is going to be the voice for the team, and he wants to let Doug do that," Higgins said.

More than 200 students from UNC-Wilmington lined up outside the arena Monday night for a chance to get free tickets to an open scrimmage Oct. 9. Local television crews covered the arrival of the team's charter plane and led their late newscasts with footage of Jordan descending an airplane staircase.

A media crowd of about 100 covered the first day of practice.

NATIONAL HOCKEY LEAGUE BEGINS PLAY

Lemieux vs. Avalanche: NHL opens with marquee matchup

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Colorado Avalanche barely had time to stop celebrating their Stanley Cup championship — and to start signing the big contracts that followed it.

Mario Lemieux barely had time to rest up following a comeback that might have been the best ever by a world-class athlete, one that gave the NHL the superstar attraction it had lacked since he and Wayne Gretzky retired.

So, after the shortest of off-seasons, the NHL will match its new marquee team, the Avalanche, against its marquee player, Lemieux, on the opening night of a new season that figures to be very different from last season. Even if that season ended a little more than three months ago.

Also on today's schedule are a couple of rivalry games, Ottawa at Toronto and Edmonton at Calgary. Eight more season openers are Thursday, as the NHL begins only the second season in league history that will be interrupted at midterm by an Olympic break.

The NHL's fast-changing face is reflected in the Avalanche-Penguins opener.

The Penguins will have Lemieux in their opening-day lineup for the first time in five years — remember, he didn't end his 44-month retirement until late December — but five-time scoring champion Jaromir Jagr is gone. He was dealt to Washington as the Penguins shed his $10 million salary to resign their other core players, Colorado at Pittsburgh.

NHL season opener

Martin Straka, Alexei Kovalev, and Robert Lang.

As a result, a Penguins top line that had long featured Jagr now is manned by three players who weren't with them for their opener last year: Lemieux, rookie Kris Beech, one of the three players obtained for Jagr, and Stephane Richer, a 407-goal scorer who didn't play last season.

"It is certainly a different look, but over the years people make changes and change their minds, and that's what's been happening," Lemieux said.

With the high-scoring Lang, Straka, and Kovalev still together, Lemieux said his line shouldn't even be considered the Penguins' top line.

"We're probably the second line now," he said.

Don't tell the NHL that. The Avalanche spent more than $100 million to re-sign stars Joe Sakic, Patrick Roy, and Rob Blake after their exhausting seven-game Stanley Cup final against New Jersey last spring, yet they also aren't the same team.

Ray Bourque, the Stanley Cup finally his after chasing it since the 1970s, has retired. Also missing is Peter Forsberg, who is taking time off after having his spleen removed and might not play this season. Also, defenseman Adam Foote could miss the first month of the season following shoulder surgery.

As a result, the Avalanche spent much of camp working on new line combinations and pairings — Blake is now with Martin Skoula, for example — and were only 1-4-0-1 during the preseason.

"It's important for us now to forget about training camp and make sure we prepare ourselves for a big start in Pittsburgh," Roy said. "We know it's going to be a very big game, and they'll be ready for us. We have to be ready for a big start and pick up a bit of confidence here and there."

Lemieux said the same thing about the Penguins, ousted in the Eastern Conference final by New Jersey. They have a younger look than in recent seasons, even after adding the 35-year-old Richer, a two-time 50-goal scorer who left Washington's camp after a day last year and subsequently sat out the season.

"Every year you try to get some guys who can help your team," Lemieux said. "Stephane looks good, has been working hard all summer and is in great shape. He's won two cups and has a lot of experience ... it's just a question of playing together and getting some confidence, something we'll try to do early in the season."

Richer said, "Playing with the greatest player in the world is great, but the bottom line is to win games no matter who you are playing against. We're playing the Stanley Cup champions, so it will be a great test."

BOXING BRIEF

Garden happy to have Hopkins back — on its terms

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernard Hopkins, who won the undisputed middleweight championship Sept. 29 at Madison Square Garden, believes the building has barred him from fighting there again.

Kevin Wynne, who runs the Garden's boxing program, said that's just not true.

"He's not barred," Wynne said Tuesday. "No one has presented us with any Bernard Hopkins fight. If and when someone does, we'll evaluate it on its merits. If we can strike a deal that makes sense, under the right circumstances, we would have him back. He's welcome here."

That's not the understanding of Hopkins and his adviser, Lou DiBella. DiBella said promoter Don King called him Monday with the news that Hopkins, who stopped Felix Trinidad in the 12th round to win the title, was no longer welcome to fight in the Garden.

"I called Wynne," DiBella said. "He said, '[Garden President] Seth Abraham and I made the decision together. We don't want Bernard in the Garden again.'"

"King told me that and Wynne confirmed it."

DiBella was outraged at that. "I'm shocked and I think they should be ashamed," he said. "It doesn't matter to us. It's hypocrisy and demeaning. They're trying to demean him. If we never fight in the Garden again, that's cool."

Cameron focusing on wins, not future

By Michael Marot
Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Three games into the college football season, and the rumblings are already beginning about Cam Cameron.

The Hoosiers are 0-3 after losing to Ohio State on Sept. 29, certainly not the kind of start Cameron or anyone else envisioned in this, his fifth season in Bloomington.

But Cameron said Tuesday that he isn't listening to his critics or pondering his job security. Rather, he's trying to do what he's always done — win.

"If you start getting into that type of mindset, you give yourself little chance," he said during his weekly news conference. "I know this, one way for it to start snowballing is to start thinking that way."

For now, Cameron prefers to focus on something he can help control — Saturday's game at Wisconsin.

The problem is, the Badgers have given Indiana trouble for nearly a decade.

Cameron has yet to beat the Badgers in four tries, and the Hoosiers have lost six straight to Wisconsin dating to 1993. Indiana hasn't won at Madison since 1991, and the last time the Hoosiers played at Camp Randall Stadium, Indiana was dealt a 59-0 loss — the second worst in Cameron's tenure.

The Hoosiers are trying to ignore what they can.

"I don't even remember that game," quarterback Antwaan Randle El said of the rout in Madison, Wis., two years ago. "I put it out of my mind right away."

That's by design. Cameron does not want his players thinking about him or his future or their winless start or anything else — other than playing better football.

"I am realistic," he said. "When you are not getting it done, you have to try to figure out a way to do that."

His biggest concern this week will be limiting the Badgers ground game, which averages 205 yards rushing per game. The Hoosiers defense ranks eighth in the Big Ten, allowing 161.3 yards per game.

Even worse is a pass defense that is 89th out of 115 Division I-A schools and a defense that has had trouble stopping opponents, period.

Last week, the Hoosiers allowed Ohio State to convert seven of 15 third downs, something Cameron knows must improve if the Hoosiers are to start winning.
