U.S. strikes at Taliban; bin Laden declares jihad

The United States and Britain launch air attacks on Al Qaeda strongholds

President Bush announces air strikes on Afghanistan from the Treaty Room in the White House Sunday. Osama bin Laden, at an undisclosed location, praises God for the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. He said America "will never dream of security [until] the infidel's armies leave the land of Muhammad" in a videotaped statement aired after the Sunday strikes, which hit at least three cities in Afghanistan.

KABUL, Afghanistan — Missiles and warplanes streaked through the Afghan night and rocked at least three cities in a U.S.-British attack on Osama bin Laden and his Taliban backers Sunday. Bin Laden and the Taliban's leader both survived, Taliban officials said.

The strike began after nightfall Sunday in Kabul with five blasts followed by the sounds of anti-aircraft fire. Electricity was shut off throughout the city for more than two hours afterward. A Taliban official said civilians were killed in the barrage but did not say how many or where.

Early this morning, the Taliban's ambassador to neighboring Pakistan said civilians had been killed in the strikes. But the envoy, Abdul Salam Zaeef, would not say how many or where they occurred.

"There were casualties," Zaeef told the Associated Press. "Civilians died. It was a very huge attack." Zaeef said earlier that bin Laden, the main suspect in the Sept. 11 attacks, and Taliban leader Mullah Mohammed Omar had survived.

"By the grace of God, Mullah Omar and bin Laden are alive," he said Sunday, without saying whether either leader was near the scene of the attacks.

The attack also targeted the heart of the Taliban movement, hitting its military headquarters and the home of Omar in the southern city of Kandahar, according to Afghan sources reached by telephone from Islamabad, Pakistan.

The sources said the first wave struck the Kandahar airport, destroying radar facilities and the control tower. The strike also targeted hundreds of housing units built for members of bin Laden's Al Qaeda terror movement.

The second wave, which appeared to be more precisely targeted, struck the Taliban national headquarters in downtown Kandahar, the sources said. They said smoke was seen billowing from Mullah Omar's high-walled compound approximately 12 miles outside the city.

The sources spoke on the condition of anonymity for fear of reprisal. In Jalalabad, other sources reached by telephone from Islamabad said three loud explosions could be heard. One seemed to be coming from the area of Farmada, a bin Laden training camp approximately 12 miles south of the city.

In Washington, Pentagon officials said the United States and Britain launched 50 cruise missiles against targets inside Afghanistan in an

Allies staunchly back U.S. air raids

By Marcus Eliason
Associated Press

The United States' European and Asian allies gave swift and solid support to the attack on Osama bin Laden and his backers Sunday, with France and Canada saying they had agreed to President Bush's request to contribute forces.

Arab governments largely kept silent in the hours after the U.S.-British action in Afghanistan. But Iran and Iraq voiced protest, and on the streets across the Islamic world, many denounced the missile attack and air raids as an act of war against Arabs and Muslims.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in Baghdad called the attack "an act of aggression that runs contrary to international law." Israel supported it as "the right and courageous decision." In an address to the nation, Bush said Canada, Australia, Germany, and France have "pledged forces as the operation unfolds," and numerous other countries have granted air transit or landing rights. Still more nations are providing intelligence, he said.

Bush telephoned several European leaders just before the attacks began, including French President Jacques Chirac.

Later, in a televised address to the French people, Chirac said: "Our forces will participate. At this stage, French vessels are associated with this operation."

Until now France had offered airspace and naval logistical support. "In recent days,"

UI students said they were not surprised by or particularly interested in Sunday's attacks on Afghanistan by American and allied forces, saying they had expected that the United States would pursue military action at some point.

Crowds at downtown bars and restaurants were watching televisions tuned to Sunday's professional football games instead of the incidents unfolding on the other side of the world.

At the IMU, students quietly studied and ate dinner. One person sat in front of a television showing the news. It was a stark contrast to the crowd of students around the television Sept. 11 after the worst terrorist attacks on U.S. soil.

The reaction by the Iowa City community was normal because of the physical distance between Iowa and Afghanistan, said Adrien Wing, a UI professor of international law.

Iowa City resident Nikita Kaim offered other reasons for the lack of interest.

"Maybe it's because Americans can't find Afghanistan on a map," Kaim said. "It might also be because we are stupid, ignorant, and vile people."

Approximately a dozen students and local residents interviewed generally said they expected the use of military force. The question

Profs may rethink unionizing

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

University of Northern Iowa professors already know they won't have to give up the 5.6 percent average raise they are under contract to receive this year.

They also know their collective-bargaining contract with the state has a clause that will govern how the university treats them while chopping millions from the budget.

And after representatives from their union meet with state officials today, the school's 800 professors will have a clearer picture of how state budget troubles will affect them.

UNI professors, the only ones in the state represented by a union, are "absolutely" in better shape right now than their UI and Iowa State University counterparts as the universities' budgets dwindle, said Chuck Quirk, the executive director of the United Faculty union.

Some union leaders predict that UI professors may take a new look at forming a union as a result. And if they are forced to make a variety of sacrifices after $21.9 million is slashed from an already anemic budget, a movement to unionize may gain steam.

"We hope the cuts will send a message to some of our colleagues to at least consider unionizing," said Quirk, a UNI professor emeritus of history.

"Professors should take a hard look at unionizing," said Cathy Singer, the president of a union that represents 2,000 professional and scientific employees at the UI Hospitals and Clinics. "I know I would right now ... It will be interesting to see what happens."

Singer's group, Service Employees International Union Local 199, became the newest of three university-employee unions when it was formed in 1998. It often takes a drastic stimulus, such as pay-cuts or layoffs, to motivate employees to unionize, union leaders said.

UI Employee Unions

More than 9,000 UI employees are represented by unions, but professors have never formed one. The UI's unions and their workers:

AFSCME Local 12:
Represents 4,700 UI trade workers.

Campaign to Organize Graduate Students:
Represents 2,600 teaching and research assistants.

Service Employees International Union Local 199:
Represents 2,000 professional and scientific employees at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, a majority of whom are nurses.

Higher raises a 'mixed blessing'

While UNI professors bargained for a 5.6 percent average raise from the state this year, UI and ISU professors received a more modest 3.5 percent.

UNI union representatives will meet today with the state of Iowa Board of Regents to discuss how professors will be affected by the cuts. Quirk said the union isn't likely to re-open negotiations on the contract, meaning that professors will not give up their hefty raises.

"The real danger here is that if we give up part of our raises, we will actually be losing money because the cost of living is increasing," he said.

UNI professors faced tough choices if their raises came at the cost of other university programs, said UI Faculty Senate President Amitava Bhattacharjee. UI professors might think differently, he said.

Bargaining in the face of shrinking resources yields tough gains that are a "mixed blessing," he said.

"I don't feel the faculty at the UI are interested in hefty raises when it comes at the expense of the entire university," he said. "We care about our salaries very much, but we care about the university, and we care about our students."

Bhattacharjee said unionizing "has crossed some people's minds" in the past, and he expects the topic will become more popular as faculty members begin feeling the effects of further budget reductions.

'Not clear-cut'

Discussions on the matter will generate a variety of opinions, which, Bhattacharjee said, he is interested to hear.

"This is an idea that's not so clear-cut," he said. "You can't say it's what the faculty wants or what it doesn't want. Opinion will be divided."

Quirk said some professors resent the idea of thinking of themselves as labor workers. That perception has hindered a union movement at the UI in the past, he said.

"I think a lot of faculty at ISU, the UI, and even here don't really think of themselves as labor. They see themselves as professionals," he said. "They tend to think of themselves as freelance entrepreneurs who can cut their own deals."

"We're not like John Deere workers, but we do all share some similar traits," said Quirk, who earned his doctorate at the UI.

Lee Anna Clark, the UI associate provost for faculty, said she has not heard interest in a professors' union, and she doubts whether it is a possibility.

"Faculty are a forward-thinking group that anticipate consequences well," she said. "I think there would already be a fair amount of interest by now. But that's just my opinion."

Green gets a bad rap on Snoop

By Deldre Bello
The Daily Iowan

The head of UI Public Safety defended Sunday his use of the word "undesirables" to describe the crowd a Snoop Doggy Dogg concert would attract to campus.

Chuck Green, the assistant vice president for Public Safety, said officials from SCOPE, the student organization that books bands, who criticized his use of the word as racist, "have no idea what they're talking about" and were trying to deflect their own failure to book the rapper.

Members of the Black Student Union also criticized Green's comment — "such a concert would draw quite a few undesirables from various cities and probably quite a few [armed] gangbangers" — as stereotyping and racist.

When Green used the term "undesirable," he said, he was referring to persons likely to commit unlawful acts.

"It's not about race," said Green, who is black. "Gangster rap is known for toughness and a thuggish element."

After hearing Green's advice, Phillip Jones, the university's vice president for Student Services, rejected a proposal to allow Snoop Dogg to perform at the UI Field House on Halloween night.

Jones also stood by Green's comment Sunday.

"Chuck Green's comment was accurate," Jones said. "How people choose to interpret the statements is their prerogative. They have the right to their opinions."

The decision to cancel the concert had to do with specific data laid out about factual statistics on arrests, drug use, and gun confiscation, Jones said.

The rap artist likely would have been allowed to perform at the university had the location been Carver-Hawkeye Arena, Green said. That location was off-limits because the men's basketball team had an exhibition game in the arena the next night.

Carver-Hawkeye is easier to secure because it has fewer entrances, Green said. "The Field House is not used for a place of assembly. It has so many entrances," Green said.

SCOPE officials say the UI has lost out on more than a few top-name acts as a result of Carver-Hawkeye's inaccessibility. Shows as big as Britney Spears, Aerosmith, and Tool could have performed this fall had administrators granted permission, said Scott Leslie, the assistant SCOPE director.

"The overriding image of SCOPE in the industry is that we are dedicated students

Green
assistant vice president for Public Safety capable of pulling off large concerts," he said. "The administration handicaps us."

Jones said UI policies and procedures in place will not change.

Public Safety regularly asks for lists of possible performers that will come to campus during the year, Leslie said. But it's hard to provide the list because shows are often booked only a few weeks in advance, he added.

Law students take class to the courtroom

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

Media reports about the Jonathan Memmer trial — one of the most highly publicized criminal cases in Johnson County's history — will enhance the curriculum for UI law students, several professors said this weekend.

N. William Hines, the dean of the UI College of Law, said that in the 40 years he has been with the law school, he has not seen more than three cases of this magnitude in Iowa City. The Memmer proceedings, however, are only the "tip of the iceberg" of what law students must learn, he said.

Law students might be too overloaded with coursework to observe the double-homicide trial, but developments in the case, highlighted by local media outlets, will likely double as classroom lessons for law students in the next few weeks, said David Baldus, a UI law professor who specializes in criminal law.

"The trial will be interesting to watch, regardless of who wins," he said. "From a legal standpoint, it's very exciting." Baldus said he encourages second- and third-year students to watch the trial if they have time. He plans to attend himself once he has finished his immediate duties at the law school.

"What has impressed me is how well-prepared both attorneys [in the Memmer trial] are," he said. "It shows that the real key to success in this business is preparation and systematic research. The papers make it easier for us because they provide all of the trial's highlights."

The Marshalltown native's trial, which began Oct. 2, has also touched on various aspects of the undergraduate law courses, said Kirsten Frey, an adjunct assistant professor who teaches Introduction to Law. "The Memmer trial helped students better understand the legal issues," she said. Her students discussed jury selection, or voir dire, following the procedure in the Memmer trial.

Law students have opportunities to involve themselves in large legal proceedings, said law Professor James Tomkovicz. He said one of his former students, Sara Smith, now works directly with Memmer attorney Clemens Erdahl. She has appeared multiple times in court, sitting next to Memmer and taking notes. It is rare, though, for law students to participate in a high-profile criminal law proceeding, he said. Most end up in civil or business law, he said.

"The majority of work in real law is avoiding litigation," Hines said. "But I still encourage students to participate in some legal or administrative activity to provide them with hands-on experience."

The law school encourages second- and third-year law students to become legal interns or participate in mentoring programs that expose them to lawyers, judges, plea bargainers, and judiciary proceedings, Hines said.

Memmer, 26, is accused of bludgeoning to death Laura Watson-Dalton, 29, and Maria Lehner, 27, at 427 S. Van Buren St. Apt. 4 in March 1999. If convicted, he faces life in prison without parole. His trial is expected to last approximately four weeks.

Council candidates seek voters

By Sean Thompson
The Daily Iowan

Just a day before the election, early and absentee votes for the Iowa City City Council primary are approximately 60 ballots shy of the number cast in the 1999 race.

According to the Johnson County Auditor's Office, 430 voters have cast early or absentee ballots, compared with 494 cast two years ago.

Few students have taken part in the early voting. Satellite stations in Burge, Mayflower, and Quadrangle Residence halls have attracted 13 voters; an IMU satellite station has attracted 74 voters.

Candidates have been speaking with residents in person, making courtesy phone calls, e-mailing voters, going door-to-door, and appearing on radio shows to remind voters of the importance of participating in primaries.

"Every vote counts," said District B candidate Charles Major. "With the small turnout, it's more important to decide and cast a vote."

Primaries have suffered from low voter turnout in the past, said Major, who lost by a slim margin to Councilor Steven Kaner in the 1999 general election.

Mayor Ernie Lehman, an at-large candidate, said incumbents like himself do not have to worry about name recognition but face other challenges unknown to newcomers. Incumbents, including Councilors Mike O'Donnell and Connie Champion, have built a reputation on the council, which is not always an advantage, he said.

"People know who I am and what my philosophy is, but I also have baggage," Lehman said.

Challengers have focused their energy on pushing their names into the public spotlight, promoting the change they feel incumbents will be unable to provide.

"I'd like to see voters say they'd like a change," said challenger Leah Cohen. "I tell everyone I know to tell others to go out and vote."

The top two District B and top four at-large candidates in the primary will advance to the Nov. 6 council election.

The candidates seeking two at-large seats are: Cohen, Brian Davis, Colby Friend, Ollie Habbab, Lehman, O'Donnell, John Robertson, and Aaron Winter. Tim Borchardt, Champion, Major, and Brandon Ross are running for the District B seat. The terms expire in four years.

Eastern Iowa Airport Guard troops arrive

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — Officials from the Eastern Iowa Airport were informed Friday that National Guard personnel would arrive at the airport at noon on Sunday to augment the airport's security staff.

Gov. Tom Vilsack ordered National Guard troops to eight commercial airports after a request by President Bush to supplement airport security staff with Guard units.

The Iowa Army National Guard soldiers will be assigned to help monitor and reinforce security.

Up to two soldiers will work in conjunction with the ground security coordinator and provide assistance to screeners and supervisors as necessary.

When there is no activity in the screening area, soldiers will conduct indoor patrols.

The airport's police, fire, and safety personnel remain in charge of all incidents involving criminal activity.

National Guard soldiers will not be involved in airport perimeter patrol, routine baggage or wand searches, traffic control, or vehicle searches, tasks that will remain under the control of the airport staff and security personnel.

Davenport nuisance law rarely used

By Casey Wagner
The Daily Iowan

Davenport city officials say their 4-year-old nuisance ordinance, enacted to hold landlords more accountable for gang activity on their property, has given the city a strong weapon in fighting crime, though it is rarely put to use.

Members of Iowa City neighborhood associations say Iowa City should consider a similar ordinance to make landlords responsible for unruly tenants, and they will propose that idea to the Iowa City City Council tonight.

Later this week, councilors will consider creating a committee to discuss issues caused by nuisances and work with those who are concerned to develop an effective ordinance. If created, the committee may look to a Davenport ordinance as a model for a local code.

"It's another legal measure," said Bill Sherwood, a Davenport city councilor. "It's one more tool in going after drug houses, gangs, troubled houses and apartments, and bad commercial properties."

The nuisance ordinance in Davenport was created after landlords who did not reside at their own complexes made no effort to challenge gang activity that was occurring at their properties, said Roland Caldwell, the representative for Davenport's Third Ward.

Davenport officials have enforced the ordinance only twice in the past two years. "We haven't used it that much, but when we have, it has been very effective," he said.

The ordinance is most productive when a neighborhood association is active in the area, Caldwell said. A neighborhood group may help city officials by recording and observing nuisances, giving the city more evidence to file reports in court.

Without strong evidence and good documentation, it is almost impossible for the city to file charges, said Davenport City Councilor Bob McGivern.

"I always tell people that they have to call 911," Caldwell said. "A lot of people don't like that idea, but it's the best way to document disturbances."

Most of the nuisance reports deal with drug trafficking and violence among neighbors, he said, which take place in mostly low-income areas with large numbers of rental properties.

Davenport has rarely enforced the ordinance in cases where loud music is involved, officials said. Caldwell, however, said that when there is an incident involving loud music, most likely there are drugs and alcohol involved, and he added the ordinance may be used in those cases to curb public intoxication and drug trafficking.

Punishments specified by the Davenport ordinance range from fines to possible eviction, Sherwood said. The Iowa City committee will discuss fines for initial violations and possibly revoking rental permits for landlords on record for repeat disturbances.

"I don't think anybody assumes that all renters are bad, or all landlords are bad," said Iowa City City Councilor Mike O'Donnell. "But this would help when there are bad tenants and with bad buildings."

McGivern said the nuisance ordinance allows the city legal, housing, and police departments to work together and is successful at getting rid of bad tenants.

"You can't make people be good neighbors," he said. "But if it's something that can be cured, maybe a city ordinance can help, but maybe it can't."

Police warn of counterfeit bills

At least five counterfeit $20 bills have been used locally to purchase items, and police warned businesses to watch for more.

Four counterfeit $20 bills were used Oct. 3 at the Dublin Underground, 5 S. Dubuque St., police reports show. The other incident occurred at the L&M Mighty Shop, 504 E. Burlington St., where one $20 bill was reported.

All of the bills have been turned over to the Iowa City police; they share the same serial number — H19764443A — leading authorities to believe that they were used by a single party, police said.

Investigators believe the bills are computer-generated and that they were made to appear old. The bills are easily recognizable by the texture of paper used and their size, police said. The bills are noticeably smaller than normal bills, police said.

Iowa City businesses have been asked to be on the lookout for more counterfeit bills, which is common practice when such incidents occur. According to police Sgt. Mike Brotherton, businesses thought to be at the highest risk are those with busy hours during the evening and other times when lighting is limited.

Police detectives are currently investigating the incidents.

Fire damage costs I.C. condominium $10K

Firefighters are still investigating an Oct. 5 fire that caused an estimated $10,000 in damage to a three-story Iowa City condominium.

It took firefighters approximately 10 minutes to put out the fire at 25 West Side Drive after arriving at 6 p.m. on Oct. 5.

None of the residents of the three-story condominium was injured; the cause of the blaze is still under investigation, said Fire Battalion Chief Elmer Brenneman.

Firefighters first spotted the fire on a second-story porch. They then checked inside the building and cut into a burnt plywood wall to ensure that no fire was still burning. The flames damaged an additional porch, siding, and the aluminum overhang, firefighters said.

A neighbor reported the fire. Warren Kinninger, the inhabitant of the condominium with the burning porch, was not home at the time. All of the tenants in the building's 12 condos evacuated the building; some rooms suffered minor smoke damage but are still habitable.

Radisson Hotel auditor robbed

An Iowa City hotel night auditor was robbed at knife-point early Oct. 6, police said.

The Radisson Hotel, 2525 N. Dodge St., was robbed at 12:24 a.m. The suspect allegedly held a knife to a night auditor's back and demanded an undisclosed amount of money, said Iowa City police investigator D.J. Sheva. He fled on foot after seizing the money, police said.

The suspect was described as a black male wearing a dark blue or black nylon hooded jacket and dark pants. He was approximately 5 feet, 10 inches tall and 170 pounds.

No one was injured, and the incident is still under investigation. Anyone with information is encouraged to call the Iowa City police at 356-5275.

Air strikes, missiles rock Afghanistan attack that also involved the most sophisticated U.S. warplanes. Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said an initial goal of the strikes was to render air defenses ineffective and to wipe out the Taliban's military aircraft.

Gen. Richard Myers, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said 15 bombers and 25 strike aircraft, both sea- and land-based, launched the missiles at 12:30 p.m. EDT, 9 p.m. Kabul time. Myers said the attacks included B-1, B-2, and B-52 bombers as well as ships and submarines in the region.

President Bush gave a live televised address after the strikes began, saying U.S. and British forces were taking "targeted actions" against Taliban military capabilities and Al Qaeda.

In the days following the strikes at the World Trade Center and Pentagon, the president had issued a series of demands for the Taliban to hand over bin Laden, a Saudi exile. The Taliban offered to negotiate but refused a handover.

"Now the Taliban will pay a price," Bush vowed.

A senior Pentagon official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said targets included air defenses, military-communications sites, and terrorist training camps inside Afghanistan.

Power went off throughout Kabul almost immediately after the first of the thunderous blasts, which appeared to have been in the southwest of the city. The southwestern part of Kabul includes the Darulaman Palace, an ancient royal residence, and the Balahisar Fort, an old Mogul-style installation. Anti-aircraft fire rattled when planes could be heard overhead. Early today, a lone aircraft dropped one bomb in the northern edge of Kabul, shaking the area with a powerful explosion.

Electricity was restored in Kabul more than two hours after the attack, but it later went out again. It was unclear whether the blast had damaged transmission facilities or the Taliban was shutting off electricity to darken the city from attackers. There was no sign of panic among Kabul's 1 million people, long inured to war after more than two decades of relentless fighting that has destroyed most of the city.

The private, Islamabad-based Afghan Islamic Press agency quoted the Taliban as saying American planes had bombed areas near the Kabul airport in the northern part of the city. The agency said there were no details of casualties and no reports of damage to the city itself. It added, however, that "huge smoke is rising near Kabul airport."

Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chrétien confirmed that his country would meet Bush's request for a military contribution. In a message to the nation, he said military units were being told to report for duty.

Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi put his country on heightened alert and promised that "Italy is by the side of the United States and all who are committed to the battle against terrorism."

Italy has offered troops, as well as use of its ports and airports.

German Chancellor Gerhard Schröder promised Bush his country's "unlimited solidarity."

was never if, but when, the attacks would begin, those interviewed said.

"It's about time," said Iowa City resident Kevin Grimm of the 26 days it took for the United States to retaliate. But, he added, "We had to make sure we had the right guys."

UI senior Emily Ma said another possible reason for the lack of public interest was the unified support for military action. Iowa City resident Mike Michuda agreed.

"The American public is bloodthirsty," he said.

The little interest in Sunday's attacks, others said, reflects a strong desire for the United States to return to normalcy. "People are probably getting tired of [the story]," said UI freshman Andy Hunsberger.

Hunsberger and others worried that innocent Afghan civilians would be killed in the attacks. "There's no proof, but military targets might be mixed with non-Taliban targets," Wing said.

Asma Haidri, the co-president of the UI Association of Muslims, said she was shocked that the United States attacked Afghanistan before showing the public concrete proof of guilt. America needs to slow down and make sure it has identified the terrorists beyond a shadow of a doubt, she said. The Association of Muslims has not planned a special event or rally in response to the attacks, she said.

Most also voiced concerns of possible continued terrorist activity on American soil and apprehensions about attacking a country such as Afghanistan. "This could result in an endless cycle of violence," Haidri said.

EDITOR'S NOTE

The DI extended the opportunity to write a guest opinion to all of this year's Iowa City City Council candidates. The pieces conclude today. We hope the forum helps inform the public about the candidates' platforms before Tuesday's primary.

Brandon Ross — District B Candidate

I am a musician who owns a small book business. I was married in Hickory Hill Park and have a 6-month-old daughter. I have taught in both high school and college and have worked as a news writer, radio program coordinator, and city parks and recreation employee. My love of Iowa City and my interest in city planning would help me be an effective councilor.

I supported the proposed Charter Amendments because I feel that police practices need reform and that the city manager and police chief are too far-removed from the voters. People aged 18-24 make up most of the jail population; too many are arrested for nonviolent misdemeanors such as public intoxication and simple possession of marijuana. These arrests do nothing to make the town safer. I am dead-set against arrest quotas, garbage searches, anonymous tips, and "knock and talks."

Current city government does not care about proper inspection of rental properties and fair treatment for renters, nor about having sufficient bicycle racks or bicycle lanes. Responsible renters should be able to get their rental deposits back! Repairs for such necessities as heating, plumbing, and window screens should be done promptly.

Mayor Ernie Lehman once said his only reason for running for office is to let the city manager do his job. But the city manager is merely the middleman between the council incumbents and the developers, for whom Lehman has been paving a golden road with taxpayers' money — to the detriment of neighborhoods. The human-services agencies we count on and the community-events organizations get only the crumbs from the city's table.

Campaign-finance reports show that the campaigns of Lehman and Councilor Mike O'Donnell already have raised more than $6,500 and $5,400, respectively. Where did the money come from? Looking at the list of donors and yard-sign locations tells us: the developers. A councilor's salary is only $5,700 a year, but the city manager's salary is approximately $125,000 per year. Follow the money.

Council incumbents keep reciting the mantra "Expand the tax base! Expand the tax base!" — holding out the carrot-on-the-stick that this will reduce taxes. But it never does. And their expansion policy does nothing to benefit the 80 percent who are middle- and lower-income seniors and students.

An example: Councilor Connie Champion, Lehman, and O'Donnell voted to give $500,000 to a plastics corporation to build a factory here. Plastic production is a strong suspect in breast, ovarian, and testicular cancers. The manufacturer also has several OSHA violations.

I supported saving the Englert Theatre. I opposed destroying three good buildings to construct a parking garage at Iowa Avenue and Gilbert Street. I worked to stop First Avenue. Allowing Hy-Vee to place a liquor store in the old Pearson's Drug is unacceptable: It compromises John's Grocery, a true corner store in the neighborhood. I support a Fareway grocery in the Southeast neighborhoods.

For a more livable Iowa city with a responsive city government, please vote for me. Polls close at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Brandon Ross
District B Candidate

Tim Borchardt — District B Candidate

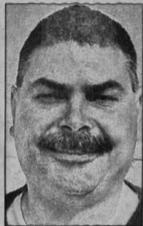

As a university town, Iowa City has long been pointed to as a free city. A city where people were free to be different in both their lifestyles and thoughts. A city where differences were viewed as good and encouraged. Today, this city is steadily working on more restrictions that take our freedoms and diversity. These restrictions come down to two simple premises: You are unable to think, let alone take care of yourself, and even if you are engaged in legal activities, your property really isn't yours.

First, let's look at law-enforcement practices. Did you know that the Iowa City police can come to your place of residence without a formal complaint? This was passed so that some residents could complain about their neighbors anonymously. Taken a few steps further, this law has tremendous potential for abuse.

How about the practices commonly referred to as "knock and talks"? Law-enforcement officials coming to your home to say "Hello," all the while trying to find probable cause to proceed farther into your home. Throw something away? Better be careful. It is perfectly legal for police to search your garbage once you set it out.

How about the placing of undercover police officers in stores to nab minors attempting underage tobacco purchases. It appears that privacy rights are being eroded in the name of law and order. I will end these practices. Property rights? They are under assault. Have more than four cars on your land? You're illegal. What's next, guidelines for Christmas lights or lawn ornaments?

Business-owner property rights are also under attack. With the alcohol and smoking ordinances, business owners are restricted in how they conduct business. The very people who are taking the risks by starting small business are being told how they can and can't conduct business. I can't support these assaults, and I will do everything I can to repeal them.

Ever heard of personal responsibility? [It is] being responsible for your own well-being.

At 41, it still amazes me that the city doesn't think I'm old enough to make my own decisions about the consumption of alcohol. The alcohol ordinance has got to go.

The smoking ordinance, easy answer ... Take responsibility for your own health and seek out places that are smoke-free. It is your choice whether to expose yourself to smoke. Some argue, "But the children don't have any choice where their parents take them." If you look closer at that statement, you will find that the supporters must believe one of two things: That either those parents who take their children to smoking restaurants are bad parents, or they aren't smart enough to understand the dangers of second-hand smoke. Either way, they want to take care of us. It's for our own good.

The city has embarked down the path of restricting our freedoms. I can't follow that path and will do everything I can to restore Iowa City to the free city it once was.

One last thing — VOTE on Tuesday.

Tim Borchardt
District B candidate

Letter to the Editor

City Council endorsement

I'm writing this letter to make two points about the upcoming City Council election. First, one of my votes will be for Ernie Lehman for an at-large seat. I've known Ernie for years, as a friend and as a fellow businessman. He has always been active in working for Iowa City's best interests. Ernie's dedication, trustworthiness, and leadership are qualities vitally needed for our City Council.

Second, getting out the vote is always important for our freedoms and liberties. But the upcoming election is especially important.

With the emphasis on patriotism, in addition to flying flags and singing songs, we need to remember that the most patriotic action we can take is to vote. Also, this City Council election involves candidates with clearly differing philosophies about local government and the future of Iowa City.

Our votes are always important, but never more so than in this fall election.

Dave Harbo
Iowa City resident

Love Handles and the Need for the Nude

I have not heard a news-cast or read a column or even begun a conversation with a good friend in the last month (minus a day) that has not been prefaced with the following statement: It's hard to know what to say in times like this.

I have a simple solution to the problem that I learned in seventh-grade English class: When speaking in a public place, picture your audience naked.

And so, at the risk of sounding a fool and by the power vested in me by the Fourth Estate of Trying to Make Some Sense Out of This Whole Big Mess, I hereby declare tomorrow, Tuesday, Oct. 9, World Naked Day.

And in celebration of this glorious holiday, I am asking all good citizens of the world to take off their clothes and fly on a plane to somewhere on the globe they have never been before. (Please pause for a moment here to get a visual of this phenomenon in your head, because what the world needs now is skies that are not just friendly but downright laughable.)

The derobing of the globe would serve several important political and cultural functions.

For one, it would get the libertarians to stop spouting off their nonsense that if everyone carried a gun around all the time, somehow none of this would've happened. (Don't get me wrong; I love libertarians and guns just as much as every other Midwestern kid who grew up shooting skeet with his cousins and uncles in grandma's corn field in Indiana. But please stop telling me that a world filled with paranoia and itchy trigger fingers is the same thing as a secure world.) Because no one would even have the option of concealing firearms, or knives and boxcutters, or anything for that matter.

It would all be out in the open. Ours is a planet too cloaked in its own possessions and protections to remember that underneath we're all basically the same. Which is to say that underneath we're all basically ridiculous-looking. We've got these strange things hanging off us in all sorts of strange configurations and misconfigurations.

Jesse Elliott

For this reason, it's hard to be mean to a naked person. It's even harder to kill him. Had the British stormed in with parts flying free instead of with those silly red coats all buttoned up, American guerrilla tactics might never have been born. Our Founding Fathers would have been too keeled over laughing and snorting in the woods to get off any shots at the waves of pasty white bums. And vice versa: Had those Brits come over ready to kill and instead seen a bunch of ridiculous-looking naked grown men and women running through the forest experiencing the wonders of the New World, they might have just turned their ships back around and let us have the thing.

Even if we did go ahead and kill each other in big naked wars, at the very least we'd be forced to think of the victims of our shots as more than walking uniforms. Military outfits, like nuclear weapons, were created so no soldier would have to think about the person he or she is killing.

Also, it's hard to fire a gun naked for any extended amount of time, a lesson I learned from careful observation of the aforementioned cousins and uncles in grandma's field.

If George and Osama want a showdown at the OK Corral, that's fine with me. But I say first we strip them of their cowardly terrorist attacks and their misguided missile systems and their uniforms and all the other decorum and pomp and circumstance their organizations are so ready to wield over the rest of the world. The rest of us, on World Naked Day, will be too busy ogling at the strangeness and beauty of each other's finally re-personalized beings to remember that we're all supposed to hate each other. We'll be busy forgetting that we're supposed to take our own beliefs more seriously than other people's, because who could take any naked person seriously?

Pablo Neruda knew it back in 1931, when he, too, was dealing with the ravages of world warfare:

Always, manufactured products, media, shoes, or simply the infinite air come between my feet and the earth exacerbating the isolation and the solitude of my being, something tenaciously posited between my life and the earth, something openly invincible and an enemy.

The poem is about lying around naked. I think Neruda would have supported my bid to institute an international holiday to celebrate this most basic state of existence.

For those of you who think I'm joking, remember Shakespeare's advice that many a truth was said in jest.

For those of you who think what I'm giving here is the whole truth and nothing but the truth, remember your mother's advice that you shouldn't get naked just because a stranger tells you to.

For those of you who are as worried as I am, don't be afraid to hide your imperfections any longer. It's time to get our selves and our bodies out there and into the world for everyone to see. Though they're not usually visible under all the wraps and disguises we wear, everyone's got love handles (some of us are more blessed than others). There must be a reason for that.

U.S. unleashes high-tech armada

By Robert Burns

WASHINGTON — Forty U.S. and British warplanes and an armada of warships and submarines pummeled strongholds of the al-Qaeda network and the Taliban regime in Afghanistan on Sunday with Tomahawk cruise missiles, 500-pound gravity bombs, and computer-guided bombs.

The targets included early warning radar, surface-to-air missiles, airfields, aircraft, military command and control installations, and terrorist camps. In one case, Taliban military equipment, including tanks, was struck near Mazar-e-Sharif in northern Afghanistan, officials said.

The demonstration of Western firepower was the first wave of an anti-terrorism campaign promised after the Sept. 11 attacks on the United States. One senior administration official said the military strikes would be sustained and would last at least a few days.

"Our objective is to defeat those who use terrorism and those who house or support them," Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld told a Pentagon news conference.

Rumsfeld said the administration believed an offensive campaign was the only answer to terrorism.

"The only way to deal with it is to take the battle to where they are and to rout them out and to starve them out by seeing that those countries and those organizations ... and those individuals who are supporting and harboring and facilitating these networks stop doing it and find that there's a penalty for doing it." Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., the vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said early indications were positive.

"It looks to be at this early juncture successful," he said Sunday night. "This is only the beginning, and it looks to me to be a strong beginning."

Along with the strikes against air defenses of the Taliban and their small fleet of warplanes, U.S. Air Force C-17 cargo planes flying from Ramstein Air Base, Germany, were dropping food and medical supplies inside Afghanistan as part of President Bush's effort to aid displaced civilians.

Rumsfeld said 37,500 sets of rations were to be dropped in an initial wave Sunday in the beginning stage of a humanitarian operation that might eventually include moving relief supplies by ground. Another official said the air drops probably would continue for several days.

At the same time, Air Force EC-130E Commando Solo aircraft equipped with sophisticated radio equipment flew over the area and broadcast messages aimed at both the Taliban and Afghans opposing the ruling regime, U.S. officials said. Among the messages were assurances that the U.S.-led attacks were aimed at terrorists and not the Afghan people, said one official familiar with the operation.

A Pentagon official said the United States also will conduct operations inside Afghanistan that will not be seen publicly — an apparent reference to the use of Army special-operations ground forces.

U.S. readies for retaliation

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — "I know many Americans feel fear today," President Bush said Sunday. Truer words were never spoken.

The military campaign now under way exposes Americans to retaliation from the same shadowy forces who engineered the Sept. 11 suicide attacks that killed more than 5,000.

"People are scared," said Charles O. Jones, a presidential historian from Wisconsin. "Never before, at least not since we killed each other in the Civil War, have we had to face the possibility that military engagement will lead directly to domestic casualties." Those days are over.

As of last week, the Justice Department had analyzed 240 new threats that it deemed serious and credible. In response, the government arrested or detained more than 500 people, many of them being held on immigration violations to keep them off the streets.

Concerned about more terrorist attacks, the FBI on Sunday urged law-enforcement agencies nationwide to move to their highest level of alert after the U.S. military strikes in Afghanistan.

"All law-enforcement agencies have been asked to evaluate whether additional local security measures are warranted in light of the military operations and the current threat level," the FBI said.

The Coast Guard expanded armed defense of major ports Sunday and added special security zones around sensitive piers, waterways, and other facilities in the agency's largest port-defense operation since World War II.

Within hours of the first strikes by American and British warplanes, Missouri shut the doors at its state Capitol to visitors, Utah state troopers were shifted from their desks to the highways, and airport officials in Chicago, Detroit, Kansas City, and Florida further tightened security.

The Energy Department placed its facilities, including nuclear-weapons laboratories and nuclear-materials storage areas, on a heightened level of security, spokeswoman Jeanne Lopato said.

District of Columbia police closed off a main street in front of the State Department as a precaution. Americans overseas were warned of the possibility of "strong anti-American sentiment and retaliatory actions against U.S. citizens and interests throughout the world."

President Bush remained at the White House, working from the Oval Office and the residential quarters. Vice President Dick Cheney was taken elsewhere, presumably so the two leaders would not be in the same place should disaster strike; the White House would not say where.

NATION BRIEF

Strike may be one of the biggest in labor history

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — With state workers ranging from soup-servers to nut-tighteners on strike, Minnesota's week-long walkout may go down as one of the most expansive public-sector strikes in recent history.

Minnesota is one of only about 10 states in which its employees can legally go on strike. And even in some states where such strikes are technically legal, in practice they're never allowed, labor experts say.

Based on the 22,000 workers who stayed off the job Oct. 1, Minnesota's strike is the second-largest public walkout since 1990, said Michael Cimino, an economist with the Bureau of Labor Statistics. About 47,000 county workers in Los Angeles joined a job action last year.

Sympathy for the devil

By Adam Kempenaar
The Daily Iowan

If you're like me, you've probably wondered at some point why so many women seem to go for bad guys. Watch Denzel Washington's performance in Training Day, and you'll start to understand.

As the brash Alonzo Harris, a corrupt narcotics officer, Washington (Malcolm X) prowls the mean streets of Los Angeles with so much energy and charisma that he almost leaps off the screen. Even when he's at his worst — and trust me, this is not a guy you want to spend a lot of time with — it's impossible to take your eyes off him.

His job is to train an ambitious rookie named Jake Hoyt, played capably by Ethan Hawke (Reality Bites) despite being stuck in a truly thankless role. Hawke is smart enough to know that nobody in the audience is here to see him. While Washington swaggers around like a god among men, stealing almost every frame of the film, all Hawke can do is get out of the way.

The story plays out over one frenetic day, as Jake tries to prove his worth to Alonzo in the hope of securing a spot with the narcotics unit and eventually becoming a detective. Seeing Alonzo's sly grin as Jake admits that he doesn't know anything about the streets and that he will do anything Alonzo asks him to do is like watching a shark that smells fresh blood.

Director Antoine Fuqua was a successful commercial and music-video director before turning to films. Like most videos, Fuqua's previous two movies, The Replacement Killers and Bait, were all style and no substance — filled with flashy camera moves and quick-cut editing, none of which were the least bit original or fun to watch. With Training Day, Fuqua has taken a dramatic step forward as a director. He wisely lets his capable stars do most of the work, subtly provoking us with the camera rather than assaulting us with eye candy.

Much of the film's first 90 minutes takes place in Alonzo's "office," a pimped-out black Monte Carlo. Fuqua presents these conversation scenes between Jake and Alonzo in a safe, conventional manner, relying on medium close-ups and two-shots. The camera is often times placed outside the car, so we can safely observe with the windshield or window to protect us from Alonzo's grasp.

As Jake's "training" becomes more and more intense, and he is faced with increasingly difficult choices between "right" and "wrong," the camera placement shifts as well, literally putting the viewer in the back seat. Gone are the cozy, wide shots in favor of uncomfortable, extreme close-ups that heighten the tension and claustrophobia within the car.

This first section of Training Day is as good as any film I've seen this year. Fuqua's fluid direction is bolstered by David Ayers's smart dialogue and Washington's inspired performance. There is legitimate suspense in trying to figure out just what kind of evil lurks in Alonzo's heart and what corrupt path he is leading Jake down. Unfortunately, once the plot kicks in, and we begin to see exactly why Alonzo wants to steal Jake's soul, the movie loses its momentum. I won't give anything away except to say that the last half hour is mostly standard-issue cop-movie material with a climax that is predictable and dissatisfying.

Training Day was originally scheduled for release two weeks ago but was shelved in light of the events of Sept. 11 because of its violent content. This is somewhat ironic because the film, like most Hollywood movies, ultimately supports a position that is consistent with what most Americans surely want to believe in a time of crisis such as this — that good and evil can be clearly defined, and that good always triumphs in the end. Is it a fantasy? Probably. But we can hope.

Religion, Politics, and Violence: Toward Understanding September 11

Monday, October 8, 2001
7:00 - 9:00 p.m.
Terrace Room, Iowa Memorial Union

Panelists:

- Reza Asian, Visiting Professor, Religion
- Thomas A. Lewis, Religion
- Fred Smith, Religion/Asian Languages & Literature
- Richard B. Turner, Religion/African American World Studies

The School of Religion of the University of Iowa invites all faculty, staff, students, and community members to a discussion of the relation between religion and politics in the wake of September 11. The terrorist attacks as well as the U.S. response manifest some deep connections among religion, politics, and violence.

- *How are religion and politics connected?
- *Can and should they be separated?
- *How do religion and politics give rise both to violence and to movements of non-violence?

The forum seeks to provide a broad context for understanding September 11 by examining the diverse interactions among religion, politics, and violence in the Middle East, as well as elsewhere around the world in South Asia, Latin America, and the United States. Brief presentations by faculty will be followed by an hour of questions and discussion.

Barry Bonds smiles and sticks his tongue out as he rounds the bases after he hit his 73rd home run of the season against the Dodgers in San Francisco, Sunday.

Bonds sets mark at 73

By Rob Gloster
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds hit his 73rd home run Sunday, further extending the major-league record he broke two days earlier.

In what could be his final game with the San Francisco Giants, Bonds connected in the first inning off Los Angeles' Dennis Springer. The Giants won the game, 2-1.

"This was a great, great way to end it with a victory and a home run. You can't ask for anything better," Bonds said after the game. "I never thought I could do it."

Bonds, who broke Mark McGwire's record by slugging two homers on Oct. 5, homered in his first at-bat Sunday after taking a day off on Oct. 6. He singled in the third, popped out in the sixth, and flied out in the eighth.

Instead of feeling the pressure in the final few games of the season, Bonds finished the year in style — he hit four homers in his final three games.

Bonds shook his head and shrugged his shoulders, almost in disbelief at what he has accomplished this season, as he took the field for the top of the second inning.

When McGwire set his record of 70 homers in 1998, a mark then thought unbreakable, he hit two homers on the final day of the season and five in his final three games.

Bonds' homer, onto the arcade above the right-field fence, was the 567th of his career — leaving him six behind Harmon Killebrew for sixth all-time. Bonds started the season 17th on the career list.

The ball was grabbed by Patrick Hayashi, 36, from nearby Santa Clara County, after a scrum among fans on the arcade.

Bonds' 73rd homerun also wrapped up another major-league record for the Giants' left fielder. He finished the season with a slugging percentage of .863, easily surpassing the record of .847 set by Babe Ruth in 1920.

And it also secured another record for Bonds — he homered every 6.52 at-bats this season, breaking the record of a homer every 7.27 at-bats set by McGwire in 1998.

The solo homer came on a full-count knuckleball from Springer. It gave Bonds a career-high 137 RBIs.

Fans accustomed to Bonds' heroics this season gave him a standing ovation, and he stepped out of the dugout for a quick curtain call.

Before his second at-bat, fans chanted "Five more years!" — a reference to comments by Bonds' agent that he will seek a five-year deal after this season.

Even though Bonds had one of the greatest offensive seasons in major-league history, he may not be back in San Francisco next year. He is eligible for free agency after nine seasons with the Giants, who may not be able to afford his demands.

Bonds, 37, earned $10.3 million this season in the last year of a three-year, $22.9 million contract extension. His agent, Scott Boras, is expected to seek a contract worth perhaps $20 million a year starting in 2002.

Bonds would like to return to the Giants, the team of his godfather — Willie Mays — and one of the teams his father, Bobby Bonds, played for. He made that clear Oct. 5 in a ceremony following his record-breaking homer.

"I don't know what my future is," he said. "I love San Francisco."

Defense couldn't save Hawkeyes late in game

The Daily Iowan

Another dominating performance from Iowa's defense was not enough to overcome inconsistent special-teams play and a nonexistent ground game on Oct. 6, as an opportunistic Purdue team won, 24-13, in the Hawkeyes' first road game of the year.

Freshman David Bradley averaged 30.9 yards on 11 punts. Senior running back Ladell Betts had just six yards on 12 carries.

Iowa's entire rushing attack picked up 33 net yards.

The Hawkeyes' inability to move the football or punt it out of their own territory repeatedly provided the No. 21 Boilermakers with great field position. Purdue started inside midfield seven times — six after a punt and once after an interception late in the game.

"We couldn't seem to get it going," junior offensive lineman Bruce Nelson said. "We're upset because we really felt like we had a lot of opportunities in the game. We were in it."

Despite the offense's overall ineffectiveness, Iowa actually took the lead, 14-13, around the 7-minute mark in the third quarter after senior quarterback Kyle McCann and senior receiver Kahlil Hill connected on a seven-yard touchdown pass.

The game remained close because of both teams' inspired defenses. One week after surrendering 406 total yards in offense against Minnesota, the Boilermakers gave up just 207 net yards to the Hawkeyes.

Iowa nearly cut Purdue's production in half as well. Putting up around 410 yards in offense per contest, the Boilermakers netted 217 yards with one offensive touchdown. At halftime, Purdue led, 13-7, but seven of those points came off an interception, and the other six could be considered victories by the Iowa defense.

Iowa loses battle of positioning

Football, many say, is much like a 100-yard war.

If that's the case, then Iowa won the battle but lost the war against Purdue on Oct. 6.

Much like a war, the side that comes out ahead in football usually has a better position. There was no arguing that after watching the Boilermakers scrape past the Hawkeyes with a 23-14 win.

No ands, ifs, or buts about it, field position and a stringent defense led to Purdue walking off the turf undefeated and Iowa asking how it could have lost such a winnable game.

Iowa had 18 possessions, and, with the exception of the Hawkeyes' two touchdowns, two interceptions and the end of both halves, was forced to punt each time. That's bad, but worse was Iowa's forced kick from the proverbial nail in the coffin.

Six times Iowa could not manage to move past its own 20. Punter David Bradley finished

Hawkeyes notch win over Penn State

By Roseanna Smith

The Iowa field hockey team spent its last three games searching for a Big Ten win, or at least some sign of improvement. The team slid down two positions in last week's rankings to No. 18 following a 4-1 loss to Michigan.

At home on Oct. 5 for the first time since Aug. 26, the Hawkeyes weren't leaving without a victory over No. 17 conference rival Penn State. Lauren Edwards and Jess Zosky streaked war paint beneath their eyes, but it was more than just grease — it was a sense of team resolve.

"Before the game we were like, 'We've got to win; we're going to win,'" sophomore Rebekah Heavrin said. "We felt like the last three losses were taken from us. Today was redemption."

But the 2-1 triumph wasn't easily won. With the game tied at 1 to start the second half, the two teams played back and forth, each refusing to give an inch.

Iowa made several offensive breakaways before Heavrin scored the game-winner on an outside pass from Pattie Gillern with 8:54 remaining.

Penn State kept up pressure on the Iowa goal, earning consecutive penalty corners with no time remaining on the clock. The Hawkeye defense and goalkeeper Barb Weinberg cleared both attempts to hold on for the win. Weinberg registered her first Big Ten start and made six saves on the game.

IOWA VOLLEYBALL

Hawks fall twice

By Tyler Lechtenberg
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team dropped two home Big Ten matches over the weekend, losing, 3-0, to Illinois and suffering a heartbreaking 3-2 loss to Indiana. Iowa dropped to 2-10 overall, 0-6 in the Big Ten, while Indiana improved to 4-9 overall, 1-5 in the Big Ten. Illinois improved to 8-5 overall, 2-4 Big Ten after the weekend's matches.

Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett said the team's troubles stem from a lack of consistency.

"We've stopped our service errors," she said. "But now it goes from one disease to another."

After a rough night on Oct. 5 against Illinois, a new lineup took the floor on Oct. 6, and the more aggressive, confident volleyball squad won the first two games against the Hoosiers, 30-27 and 30-26.

The Hawkeyes came out of intermission confident and loose, but Indiana became the aggressor early in the third game. The Hoosiers jumped out to a 14-3 lead and won the game, 30-18, taking away any Hawkeye momentum from the first two games. Indiana cashed in on the reversal of fortune to take the next two games, sneaking away with a 15-10 fifth-set win.

Freshman Laura Simpson, playing in her natural position in the middle, and senior Sara Meyermann led Iowa with 16 kills apiece. Sophomore Renee Hill racked up 45 assists in the loss. The loss came as a disappointment to the team, but Simpson said the key was how the Hawkeyes played, not that they lost.

"Even though we didn't win, we had better chemistry," she said. "That's all it is — it's team cohesion."

There were positives the Hawkeyes could build off against Indiana, such as improved passing and discipline, but the Illinois match was one Iowa would like to forget about.

The Hawkeyes played the Fighting Illini tight in the first game, but Illinois ripped off seven of the final 10 points and ended the game with a 30-27 win.

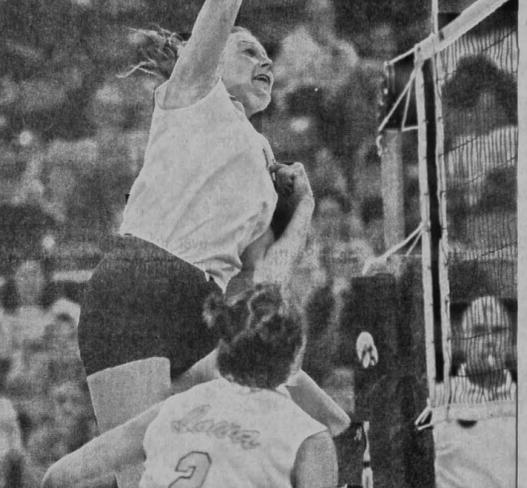

Then in game two, the bottom fell out for the Hawkeyes.

Illinois led, 12-10, and then took control of the game by taking 15 of the next 18 points, building its lead to 27-13. Iowa could never regroup from there, losing game two, 30-19, and game three, 30-22.

Buck-Crockett was not happy with the team's passing, defense, and discipline against the Illini.

"On Oct. 5, they were at rock bottom," she said. "There were errors that shouldn't have happened."

One large milestone did take place this weekend. Midway through the third game against Illinois, Meyermann contributed a bright spot for the Hawkeyes.

Nick Tremmel/The Daily Iowan

Iowa Senior Sara Meyermann spikes the ball against Indiana Saturday Oct. 6 in Carver Hawkeye Arena.

The senior topped the 1,000 kills mark for her career, becoming the 13th Hawkeye to do so. She recorded a team-high 20 kills for the match.

Illinois coach Don Hardin was impressed with Meyermann's play.

"We couldn't slow her down," he said. "She was very impressive. It shows incredible spirit when things aren't going so well but a leader keeps on playing to carry her team."

After the two losses, Iowa will look to regroup against Bradley at 7 p.m. Tuesday in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"We can only go up," Simpson said. "Things can only get better."

Game Night nears

Iowa's Game Night festivities are scheduled for Friday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Game Night is Iowa's version of the popular Midnight Madness events staged across the nation to mark the start of the college basketball season.

The doors will open at 10 p.m. for a wide variety of activities leading up to midnight, when coach Steve Alford will introduce the 2001-02 Hawkeyes.

Tickets are required for entry and can be used as the official entry form for door prizes. Tickets are available at the IMU Box Office, the UI Athletics Ticket Office, the Iowa City and Coralville locations of Sueppel's Flowers, the Iowa City and Coralville locations of Wendy's Restaurants, and all Hills Bank locations.

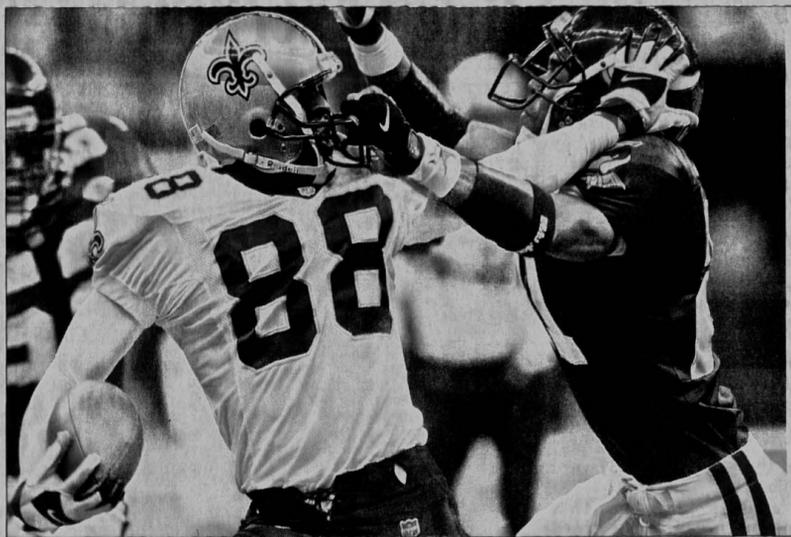

Here are just some of the activities planned:

- Entertainment by the group Transformation.
- Performances by Herky, the Iowa Pep Band, and Iowa's cheerleading and dance squads.
- Finals of the UI Recreation Department's three-on-three, 3-point, and two-ball shooting contests. The winners of each contest will be crowned "Game Night Champions" and will then square off against Alford and other members of the coaching staff.

• A slam-dunk contest featuring the 2001-02 Hawkeyes, which will be judged by former Hawkeyes Brad Lohaus, Bobby Hansen and others

Minnesota struggles against Saints

Bill Haber/Associated Press
New Orleans Saints wide receiver Willie Jackson (88) and Minnesota Vikings safety Henry Jones (21) do battle during first half NFL action Sunday in the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ricky Williams ground out yards, and the New Orleans defense ground up the Vikings.

John Carney also kicked five field goals Sunday as the Saints beat Minnesota, 28-15.

Williams ran for 136 yards and a touchdown and had five receptions for 42 yards. He averaged 4.5 yards a carry, helping the Saints chew up 32 minutes and 34 seconds and keep the ball away from the Vikings.

New Orleans harassed Minnesota's offense throughout, forcing the Vikings out of their rhythm and into intentional grounding and delay of game calls.

What looked as if it would be a 52-yard touchdown by Cris Carter in the second quarter was thwarted when Saints cornerback Kevin Mathis stripped Carter on the 3-yard line. Safety Sammy Knight recovered the ball in the end zone.

Dolphins 30, Patriots 10

MIAMI — Lamar Smith's inside running, Jay Fiedler's timely scrambling, and the Miami Dolphins' stout defense were too much for the New England Patriots.

Smith rushed for 144 yards, Fiedler added 37, and the defense did the rest as Miami won, 30-10, Sunday.

The Patriots mustered only 150 yards, mounted just one scoring drive, and were shut out over the final 36 minutes. Defensive end Jason Taylor punctuated the victory with a 1-yard fumble return for the final touchdown.

Steelers 16, Bengals 7

PITTSBURGH — Heinz Field looked a lot like Three Rivers Stadium to the Cincinnati Bengals — and Jerome Bettis looked a whole lot like Jerome Bettis.

The Pittsburgh Steelers finally played in their new stadium and dominated Cincinnati with their running game — something they did often in Three Rivers — as Bettis went over the 10,000-yard career rushing mark in a 16-7 victory Sunday.

Bettis needed 54 yards to become the 14th player in NFL history to rush for 10,000 yards. He got them on his first five carries, gaining 103 yards by halftime and finishing with 153 in his eighth 100-yard game against Cincinnati since 1996.

Giants 23, Redskins 9

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Damon Washington, limited to one carry in two NFL seasons, stepped in for injured Ron Dayne on Sunday and helped the New York Giants escape with a 23-9 victory over the winless Washington Redskins.

Washington, who spent last season on special teams and gained 1 yard on his lone carry this season, ran for 90 yards on 25 carries. He saved a Giants offense that was stalled against the Redskins, who had the worst-ranked defense in the league.

He carried three times for 10 yards in the first half and then, with Dayne sidelined by a sprained neck, drove the Giants to the game's only offensive touchdown.

Bears 31, Falcons 3

ATLANTA — The Chicago Bears showed the Atlanta Falcons just how much they're going to miss Jamal Anderson.

Marty Booker caught a 63-yard touchdown pass and threw for another score, as the Bears shut down the Anderson-less Falcons, 31-3, Sunday.

Brian Urlacher returned a fumble 90 yards for a touchdown to help Chicago (2-1) get off to its best start since 1995, the team's last winning season.

Cardinals 21, Eagles 20

PHILADELPHIA — Jake Plummer did it again.

Plummer threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to MarTay Jenkins with nine seconds left, lifting the Arizona Cardinals to a 21-20 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles on Sunday.

Plummer led the Cardinals 74 yards in 1:04 for his fifth fourth-quarter comeback victory over Philadelphia and 13th in his career. He completed passes of 16 and 28 yards to Jenkins before connecting on fourth-and-10 for the game-winner.

Donovan McNabb threw two touchdowns passes to Todd Pinkston, and Correll Buckhalter ran for 134 yards for the Eagles.

Ravens 26, Titans 7

BALTIMORE — The shift of power within the AFC Central is now complete.

The Baltimore Ravens kept the Tennessee Titans winless Sunday, harassing Steve McNair and stuffing Eddie George throughout a surprisingly easy 26-7 victory.

The Super Bowl champion Ravens (3-1) limited Tennessee to five first downs in taking a 17-0 halftime lead, then cruised through the second half behind the running of Terry Allen and Jason Brookins.

Browns 20, Chargers 16

CLEVELAND — As Doug Flutie watched helplessly from the sideline, Tim Couch and the Cleveland Browns came up with some early season magic to match San Diego's.

Couch threw a 19-yard TD pass to Kevin Johnson with 1:15 left Sunday as the Browns defeated the San Diego Chargers, 20-16, giving Cleveland its first three-game winning streak since returning to the league in 1999.

In just four weeks under first-year coach Butch Davis, the Browns (3-1) matched their entire win total from last season and became the NFL's biggest surprise after four weeks.

Broncos 20, Chiefs 6

DENVER — When Kansas City quarterback Trent Green wasn't completing passes to Tony Gonzalez, he inevitably found Denver cornerback Deltha O'Neal.

O'Neal tied a Denver record with four interceptions as the Broncos put on a show in front of their former defensive coordinator in a 20-6 victory over the Chiefs on Sunday.

Mike Anderson ran for 155 yards and Rod Smith had 110 yards receiving to account for nearly 90 percent of Denver's offense as the Broncos (3-1) ended a four-game losing streak against the Chiefs (1-3).

Seahawks 24, Jaguars 15

SEATTLE — The Seattle Seahawks found out what the Baltimore Ravens discovered last season: Trent Dilfer is a winner.

Dilfer, replacing the injured Matt Hasselbeck, made his first start at quarterback since the Super Bowl and helped the Seahawks beat the Jacksonville Jaguars, 24-15, Sunday.

Dilfer, who won his last 11 starts in Baltimore last season on the way to a Super Bowl victory, teamed with backup tight end Itula Mili for a 1-yard touchdown pass in the opening quarter and a 41-yarder to Mili to set up Seattle's third touchdown in the second quarter.

Raiders 28, Cowboys 21

OAKLAND, Calif. — The Oakland Raiders played it conservatively

Sunday, which was good enough to hold off the Dallas Cowboys, who are off to their worst start in 12 years.

The winless Cowboys were once again plagued by missed opportunities in a 28-21 beating by the Raiders. The last time the Cowboys, who blew three excellent scoring opportunities, were 0-4 was 1989, Troy Aikman's rookie year. They lost their first eight games and finished 1-15 that season.

Jerry Rice caught his third touchdown pass in two games, while Tyrone Wheatley ran for two scores and Zack Crockett ran for a third. Rich Gannon finished 21-of-28 for 209 yards for Oakland (3-1).

Jets 42, Bills 36

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Curtis Martin scored two touchdowns and rushed for 135 yards as the New York Jets found a team with a more porous defense than theirs.

The Jets were also opportunistic, converting four turnovers into scores in beating the bumbling Buffalo Bills, 42-36, on Sunday.

Martin's performance was threatened to be undone by Buffalo backup quarterback Alex Van Pelt, who took over after starter Rob Johnson was elbowed in the back of the head by linebacker Mo Lewis late in the first quarter.

Bucs 14, Packers 10

TAMPA, Fla. — Tampa Bay's defense answered its doubters by scoring a touchdown and containing previously unbeaten Green Bay.

The Buccaneers (2-1) intercepted three of Brett Favre's passes, and Shelton Quarles returned one of them 98 yards in a 14-10 victory over the Packers on Sunday.

The Packers (3-1) led 10-7 after Favre's 67-yard touchdown pass and Ryan Longwell's 35-yard field goal before Tampa Bay put together the longest scoring drive in team history — 95 yards — to go ahead with 6:45 to go.

Five Pac-10 teams stay undefeated

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Let Florida and Miami flip-flop at No. 1.

Let the defending national champion Oklahoma Sooners hang tough at No. 3, waiting for the Gators or Hurricanes to slip up.

This week it's about the Pacific-10 Conference, where half the league is undefeated going into the second weekend of October.

It's a state of affairs that won't last long, but still, count 'em for now: No. 5 Oregon is 5-0, No. 7 UCLA is 4-0, No. 10 Washington is 4-0, No. 23 Stanford is 3-0, and unranked Washington State is 5-0.

Yes, the Gators are more deserving of the No. 1 ranking at this point, but the Sooners wouldn't be a bad choice, either. A 14-3 victory over previously No. 5 Texas — in Dallas — is a pretty strong case in their favor, especially after a 38-37 win over then No. 11 Kansas State a week earlier.

Since it's still early, let's not quibble. The first Bowl Championship Series standings will be released a week from today and then the catering will commence. And then the real run for the Rose Bowl fun begins.

Speaking of the Rose Bowl, these five Pac-10 teams know the way to Pasadena. But unless the Pac-10 champion finishes No. 1 or No. 2 in the final BCS standings Dec. 9, the league champ plays elsewhere.

The way the season is going, though, don't be quick to eliminate Oregon, UCLA, or Washington from playing in Pasadena on Jan. 3.

Start in the Pacific Northwest, where Oregon — the pre-season choice here to win the national title — is fresh from a 63-28 victory at Arizona. The Ducks called it a statement game after unimpressive wins against Wisconsin, Utah, USC, and Utah State.

"We've heard a lot of people talking that we don't deserve to be ranked so high, and we wanted to show them that we do," Ducks quarterback Joey Harrington said after throwing for three touchdowns and running for three more against the Wildcats.

Oregon is for real, all right, and if the Pac-10 keeps up the pace, the Ducks' strength-of-schedule will be a plus at BCS standings time.

If the Ducks head south — road games at Washington State and UCLA are potential pitfalls — then the winner of Saturday's Huskies-Bruins game is the next likely Pac-10 candidate for the title game.

UCLA, off last weekend, not only has a potent offense led by running back DeShaun Foster, but a top-notch defense as well. That combination has coach Bob Toledo more enthused about this team than his teams that won 20 in row a few years back.

Washington, under coach Rick Neuheisel, pulled out another nailbiter as John Anderson's last-play, 32-yard field goal lifted the Huskies to a 27-24 win over USC. Washington brings a 12-game winning streak into Saturday's game against the Bruins.

Cody Pickett may have separated his right shoulder in the second quarter, but Taylor Barton stepped in and threw two TD passes before leading his team on its winning drive.

"I didn't come up here to be a backup," Barton said, an indication of how competitive these Huskies are.

And then there's Stanford and Washington State, the surprise teams of the league who meet Saturday at Stanford.

The Cardinal are off to their best start since 1986, while the Cougars are among the top-scoring teams in the nation.

On Oct. 6, Washington State jumped to a 31-0 lead over Oregon State and held on for a 34-27 win as 25-year-old ex-Marine David Minnich ran for 195 yards and threw a TD pass.

The Cougars are off to their best start since quarterback Ryan Leaf led them to the Rose Bowl after the '97 season.

Oregon visits UCLA on Nov. 10, and Washington and Oregon do not play, meaning the Ducks and Huskies can both go undefeated.

Iowa 14, Purdue 23

Both teams stall at line of scrimmage

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Redshirt freshman punter David Bradley admittedly had a bad day against the Boilermakers on Oct. 6.

"Overall, I felt relaxed," he said. "But I'm young, and I've a lot to learn."

The quarterback-turned-punter was put on the spot for the first time this season when he was forced to kick 12 times during Iowa's 23-14 loss, including six times from deep within his own territory.

Bradley finished the game with an average of 30.9 yards per kick, far below his average of 38.6 yards per game.

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz has said all year that he expects ups and downs from his inexperienced punter, but he did admit to thinking about using sophomore kicker Nate Kaeding during the game.

Bradley experienced a new career high and low Oct. 6, booting punts of 54 and 12 yards among others. His previous career-long was 53 against Miami (Ohio).

Running in place

Both defenses did an excellent job of shutting down the running game on Oct. 6.

The Hawkeyes held Purdue to 70 yards on the ground and leading rusher Montrell Lowe to just 10 yards. Quarterback Brandon Hance led the Boilermakers with 53 yards.

The story was much the same for Iowa, as backup quarterback Brad Banks led the team with 14 yards. As a team the Hawkeyes managed just 33 yards, the same amount of yardage they allowed Penn State last week.

Jones steps up

Tight end Dallas Clark and wide receiver Kahlil Hill also found the going tough in West Lafayette. The duo combined for 56 yards of Iowa's 174 yards in the air.

Making up for the coverage of both players was receiver C.J. Jones. Jones, a cousin of Banks, led Iowa with 77 yards of receiving on six receptions. He also had the longest play of the game with a 37-yard effort.

Jones went down with a minor injury in the third quarter and had to leave the game, but he said he was feeling fine following the game.

Offensive output lacks punch

Iowa's 207 yards of total offense is the second fewest yards allowed by a Purdue team coached by Joe Tiller. It was the lowest showing against the Boilermakers since the lowly Ball State Cardinals gained just 180 against Purdue on Sept. 20, 1997.

The Hawkeyes had entered the game averaging 435 yards of total offense against their three opponents.

Cunningham stays home with the team to Purdue who had the possibility to play.

Cunningham has been nursing an ankle injury since the start of the season; as of Oct. 2, he was going to make the trip, but he did not.

Senior Ben Sobieski took Cunningham's place on the Iowa roster.

Junior offensive lineman Andy Lightfoot and sophomore defensive back Chris Smith also did not travel because of injuries, but that had been expected.

Purdue puts up 23

The 23 points scored by Purdue Oct. 6 were the most allowed by the Hawkeyes this season.

Following the game, Ferentz said the key to Iowa victories will be keeping the score low, preferably a little lower than the outcome of the Oct. 6 game.

"The one bright spot for the day was our defensive play," he said. "Giving up less than 20 points a game will enable us to win consistently."

Iowa's defense was responsible for only 16 of Purdue's points; the other seven came off an interception in the first quarter.

E-mail DI reporter Todd Brommelkamp at: tbrommel@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu

Two words spell out the victory for Purdue and the loss for Iowa: special teams. Purdue's held strong, while Iowa's faltered. Iowa's strong defensive game kept the Hawkeyes close, but Purdue enjoyed promising field position all game long.

Soccer team splits

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa soccer team lost a game it probably should have won, then won a game it probably should have lost in a peculiar weekend on the road.

After a disheartening 3-1 loss to Wisconsin on Oct. 5, Iowa bounced back to shutout Northwestern, 1-0, Sunday. The win kept Iowa in the upperhalf of the conference. Halfway through the season the Hawks are 3-2 in the Big Ten, 5-6 overall.

Hawkeye coach Wendy Logan said Iowa actually played much better overall in the Wisconsin game but didn't make the plays necessary to pull out the win.

"We played our most complete game of the year in terms of execution, focus, and intensity," she said. "It was a valiant effort on the part of our team, though the score is not indicative of that."

Iowa did not nearly have as good a rhythm against the Wildcats, but with the strong play of the defenders and goaltender Britta Vogele, they were able to preserve a sloppy victory.

"We did a poor job of handling their high pressure and were out-shot," Logan said. "Still, we capitalized when we needed to."

Iowa profited on a designed throw-in play 73:56 in the second half. Junior Sarah Lynch settled a ball headed by freshman forward Nicholle Taylor, then spun around and blasted a 15-yard shot that swept past Northwestern's Suzie McCreery's right side into the goal. The play worked almost exactly how it was designed with junior defender Jamie Jorgensen supplying the inbounds to Taylor.

The defense took over the next 16 minutes, stopping Northwestern's experienced forwards Katie Hertz and Kase McCoy from getting any good looks at the goal. Senior defensive starter Chrissy Howard's absence after suffering an injury earlier in the week made the shutout more impressive. It was the fourth time in the last six games the defense didn't allow a goal.

The win was important because the team thought it gave one away against Wisconsin. After an early Sarah Lynch goal, the rest of the first half remained scoreless. Wisconsin came out firing in the second, taking 12 shot attempts and making three of them.

"We showed an aggressiveness and assertiveness in the second half," said Wisconsin coach Dean Duerst. "In past games, the ball hasn't bounced our way, but the ball did bounce our way today."

Logan said she will use the loss as a teaching tool.

"That is why we tell the team every play is critical. The difference in the two games was Wisconsin made the plays in the first game, and we made the plays against Northwestern."

Iowa will host No. 9 Penn State on Friday at 4 p.m. and Ohio State on Oct. 14 at 1 p.m. at Hawkeye Recreation Fields. Admission is free.

SOCCER BRIEF

U.S. qualifies for its fourth-consecutive World Cup

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The United States clinched its fourth-consecutive World Cup berth, beating Jamaica, 2-1, Sunday on Joe-Max Moore's penalty kick in the 81st minute.

Combined with Mexico's scoreless tie at Costa Rica and Trinidad and Tobago's 1-0 upset win at Honduras, the Americans (5-3-1) assured themselves of finishing among the top three nations in the North and Central American and Caribbean region.

The United States, coming off its first three-game losing streak in 29 years, didn't play well, squandering a lead Moore created with a goal on a header in the third minute.

James Lawrence tied the score in the 14th when U.S. defenders stood in the penalty area and beat goalkeeper Brad Friedel off a long throw-in.

But the United States got the crucial penalty kick when Claudio Reyna, back from a groin injury, sent a pass into the penalty area to a streaking Landon Donovan. Jamaica's Tyrone Marshall, who entered in the 63rd minute, pulled him down with a sliding tackle and referee Rodolfo Sibrían of El Salvador immediately pointed to the penalty spot.

Women's tennis wins

The Iowa women's tennis team thoroughly dominated the Indiana Invitational this weekend, finishing in first, second, and third place in Flight 1 singles matches. The Hawkeyes faced competition from Louisiana State, Kansas, Missouri, Indiana, and Maryland.

Iowa coach Paul Wardlaw was more than impressed with the Hawkeyes' performance in the tough meet.

"I don't know if you can have a better showing than we did this weekend, considering the caliber of teams that we faced," he said. "As a team, we played well and competed well."

Iowa players Cassie Haas and Toni Neykova faced off in the Flight 1 singles title competition Sunday, with Haas winning the title by default.

Haas advanced to the finals by defeating Missouri's Urska Jurie in a tiebreaker. Haas defeated Kristina Olskanskaya of Missouri and Inga Radel of Indiana in the opening matches Oct. 5.

"I was very happy with my performance and the overall team performance," she said. "Other teams' coaches even commented on how well we played as a team."

Neykova also won a tiebreaker over Iowa junior Steffi Hoch in the semifinals. Neykova advanced with wins over Kansas's Cheryl Mallaiah and Louisiana State's Amanda Mang.

Hoch was a winner in the Flight 1 third-place match with a victory over Urska Jurie of Missouri in a tiebreaking third set. Hoch's only loss was to fellow Hawkeye Neykova, and she had wins over Missouri's Katarina Seveikova and Indiana's Amanda Field.

In doubles competition, the doubles teams of Hoch and Denitza Alexandrova and Neykova and Hass lost in the semifinals and did not play the third-place match, which would have been between the two Iowa pairs.

"We all competed really well, and everyone worked hard and supported each other," Neykova said. "We need to work a little harder on our doubles matches."

The team won seven of nine tiebreaking matches.

"This is the best fall tournament we have had in the five years that I have been here," Wardlaw said.

The Hawkeyes have to wait three weeks until they compete again, at the Midwest Regionals Oct. 25-29.

co and I love you fans. My family knows, God knows, I'm proud to wear this uniform." But the Giants have a projected payroll of $66 million next season, and signing Bonds would mean committing nearly a third of that amount to one player. Also, the Giants may not be prepared to offer the five-year deal Boras apparently is seeking. "It's a simple equation," general manager Brian Sabean said. "We'll only pay him what we can pay him to put a competitive team on the field. If he's looking to break the bank, our chances to sign him diminish." And Giants owner Peter Magowan, serenaded with chants of "Sign him! Sign him!" during the Oct. 5 celebration, said it's not such a simple situation. "It sounds like a stupid question — are your chances to win better with Barry or without him," Magowan said. "But the biggest question is, depending on what we have to pay him, how much do we have left over to win with?" "Barry has said all the right things. His primary motivation is to win, and he doesn't want to saddle the Giants with a number that would prohibit us from having that chance. He has said that money is not the most important thing. But Scott Boras hasn't said that, and it remains to be seen what comes out of the negotiating process. "I'm sure he'd take less to stay here," Magowan added. "How much less, who knows."

first-half field goals, the Boilermakers' offense started on or inside the Iowa 40-yard line. Prior to the game, Dorsch, the Big Ten's highest-rated kicker, had made both his field-goal attempts that were between 40-49 yards this year, including a 48-yard game-winner Sept. 29. Iowa's defense was pleased with its effort but was not completely satisfied; nor was it blaming the other two facets of its game for the defeat. "We're all a team," said sophomore Bob Sanders, who paced the defense with 12 tackles, two pass deflections, and his first career interception. "If one part loses, we all lose." And the loss was tough to take for the Hawkeyes, especially considering it was one they had a chance of winning. Betts was visibly upset with the offense's response to Purdue's barrage-of-blitz packages. "I pretty much take offense to what they did," Betts said. "They challenged our manhood. When someone challenges that, we really need to step up." But, Betts noted, the holes were few and far between for the ground game. Bradley, also disappointed with his overall performance, said he must respond too. "I did have a bad day, but it can only get better," he said. "I know what I have to do." So do Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz, his staff, and the rest of the team. They must review mistakes and regroup for another tough road game and opponent in Michigan State. The Spartans are 2-1 after suffering a last-second loss to Northwestern on Sept. 30. They will be looking to avenge last season's 21-16 defeat, which ended the Hawkeyes' 13-game losing streak. But now, the 3-1 Iowa team has its own loss to avenge. "Purdue did what it had to — win," Ferentz said. "This one is tough to lose." E-mail DI reporter Melinda Mawdsley at: melinda-mawdsley@uiowa.edu

Timari Legel knotted up the score for the Lions with five minutes left in the first half. Iowa coach Tracey Griesbaum said the win was crucial because both Penn State and Iowa were 0-2 in the conference. the game averaging 30.9 yards per punt. The math does itself. The majority of Purdue's possessions began near midfield or within Hawkeye territory. Looking at the Purdue drive chart following the game, the Boilermakers started with the ball in Iowa territory seven times, two of which resulted in Purdue scores. When the Boilermakers weren't playing on just half the field, they were darn close. Purdue had five additional possessions that began on its own 30 or better. It's easy to win football games when the field you're playing on is essentially cut in half. Not even a stellar performance by Iowa's defense, which essentially shut down Joe Tiller's spread offense, could save the day for the Hawkeyes.

If not for some rather inspired defense by the Hawkeyes, Purdue's margin of victory could have been a lot larger. Iowa can definitely claim a victory on the defensive side of the ball, as it held Purdue's heralded offense to half its typical production. The Boilermakers put up only 217 yards of total offense against the Hawkeyes, drawing the ire of Tiller after the game. Things were so bad for the Purdue offense and quarterback Brandon Hance that freshman Kyle Orton even began throwing on the sidelines. I would be remiss if I didn't also give credit to Purdue's defensive corps. The Boilermakers were just as tough on Iowa as Iowa was on them. To paraphrase Purdue running back Montrell Lowe: When both sides don't give up, you've got quite a tussle. Matt Mitrone and the remainder of the Boilermaker defense kept Iowa pinned deep and completely grounded Iowa's running game. Backup quarterback Brad Banks led the team with 14 yards on the ground; Ladell Betts mustered only 6 yards on 12 carries. It was the same story in the air, as Purdue effectively covered both Kahlil Hill and Dallas Clark, shutting down Kyle McCann's high percentage, short-passing game. With no passing attack and little help coming from the ground, Iowa was essentially left in the hands of its defense. The best generals in history from George Washington on down will tell you when two sides are at a standstill, the advantage goes to the side with a better position. Purdue had the upper hand in field position and, with both defenses evenly matched, thus had the leverage to hold off the Hawkeyes and win the war. Houston wins NL Central, Henderson gets 3,000th hit

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Houston Astros forgot their late-season woes and clinched their fourth NL Central championship in five years on the final day of the season. Shane Reynolds won his 100th career game Sunday as the Astros beat St. Louis, 9-2, Sunday, leaving the Cardinals with the wild-card spot. "Climbing on the last day is very exciting," Reynolds said. "It is one of the highlights of my career."

The Astros have home-field advantage throughout the NL playoffs. They will open the first round at home Tuesday against East champion Atlanta. The Cardinals will start Tuesday night at West winner Arizona. They don't seem that worried about facing Randy Johnson and Curt Schilling, with 22-game winner Matt Morris going Tuesday.

"I think we beat Randy twice already, and last year when we faced Schilling we didn't beat him up, but I think we beat him," outfielder Craig Paquette said. "So we're going to go in there pretty confident."

Rickey Henderson gets 3,000th hit
SAN DIEGO — Rickey Henderson made sure he didn't go into the winter still waiting for his 3,000th hit. Henderson became the 25th member of the 3,000-hit club with a bloop double Sunday, doing it in the last game of the season. "It's a great feeling, a feeling that you can't really describe," said Henderson, the San Diego Padres' flamboyant 42-year-old leadoff hitter who is baseball's runs, steals, and walks leader. "I thought I would never get there because I walk so much. If you continue to play as long as I've been playing, you get the opportunity to do it." Ending his 23rd season, Henderson made history as quickly as possible in the Padres' 14-5 loss to Colorado. With the huge crowd on its feet — it was Tony Gwynn's final game and the fans got this as a bonus — Henderson lofted the first pitch from Colorado's John Thomson toward the right-field line. Three Rockies converged, but the ball dropped in, about 10 feet inside the line. Henderson chugged into second base standing up, with yet another big number that will eventually adorn his Hall of Fame plaque. "I knew this was the last day and I thought I'd have four at-bats," Henderson said. "I wanted to take up the whole at-bat and get as many swings as I could get until I got the hit."

Tony Gwynn ends his MLB career
SAN DIEGO — Tony Gwynn took batting practice early in the afternoon, spraying balls to all fields. When the session was finished, he walked over and hugged the man who'd been pitching to him, bench coach Rob Picciolo. It was just one of many ways Gwynn said goodbye Sunday, his final day in the big leagues after a 20-year Hall of Fame career, all spent with the San Diego Padres. On his way back to the dugout, the eight-time NL batting champion and .338 lifetime hitter greeted a major-league baseball official. "I'm OK — so far," Gwynn said. A day after Cal Ripken played his last game in Baltimore, it was San Diego's turn to see Gwynn off into retirement. A sellout crowd of more than 60,000 filed into Qualcomm Stadium, many wearing Gwynn shirts of one variety or another. Some were in the garish yellow-and-brown color scheme the Padres wore when Gwynn made his debut in 1982.

Mariners short of major-league record
SEATTLE — The Seattle Mariners are fairly certain they will never be playing for their 117th win again. And Edgar Martinez was disappointed they let the chance slip away. The Mariners fell one win short of setting a major-league record for victories in a year, losing their regular season finale, 4-3, to the Texas Rangers on Sunday. "I'm sure everyone here knows this opportunity doesn't come around very often," Martinez said. "But it's still been a great year, and we're still in the record books." The Mariners (116-46) equaled the record set by the 1906 Chicago Cubs on Oct. 6, but lost their final game when Rafael Palmeiro hit a go-ahead single off Jeff Nelson (4-3) in the ninth inning. "When we left spring training, if you would have told me we'd win 116 ballgames and tie the record, I would have thought you'd have been smoking dope or something," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said.

Ripken will find game hard to watch
BALTIMORE — There's a reason Cal Ripken always showed up at the ballpark expecting to be in the starting lineup. Sitting on the bench was absolute torture. That's why he played 2,632 games in a row. So now that he's retired from baseball, the future Hall of Famer figures to be squirming in his seat at Camden Yards on opening day next year. "It might be a little hard to watch a game," Ripken said after his final game Oct. 6. "I'm the kind of person who would rather play than watch." Ripken didn't miss playing one game for the Baltimore Orioles from May 30, 1982, through Sept. 19, 1998. He voluntarily ended the streak in the final home game of the 1998 season, and the following year experienced back pain that forced him to miss 76 games. That was an unprecedented — and agonizing — experience for baseball's Iron Man. "I tried to come out to the bench and I tried to watch. But I was way too close to the action," he said.

The Ledge by Scott Adams

Bad things do on a road trip

- Head anywhere near West Lafayette
- Insist on stopping at all the Big Boys for an undisclosed reason.
- Seek out all the Top 40 stations, despite everyone else loathing pop music.
- Leave Iowa City heading toward Chicago at two in the afternoon.
- Swerve from lane to lane at 80 mph for no reason.
- Babble for hours about how great president Bush is.
- Slide the seat forward everytime you slow down and yell "woosh!"
- Try to beat the land speed record on I-80.
- Point out the exit when you're 10 feet from the off-ramp.
- Drink a gallon of Diet Coke before you leave and whine about how bad you need to pee.
- Ride naked in the car — tell everyone you can't get comfortable unless you're nude.
