Strikes enter second week

By Kathy Gannon and Amir Shah
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — U.S. jets pounded targets in Kabul and other cities Sunday as the U.S. air campaign to force the handover of Osama bin Laden entered a second week. The White House rebuffed yet another offer by Afghanistan's Taliban rulers to negotiate on the terror suspect's fate.

The third most-powerful figure in the Taliban, Deputy Prime Minister Haji Abdul Kabir, said Sunday that the militia was willing to hand bin Laden over to a third nation if the United States offers evidence against him and halts the bombing. President Bush quickly rejected the offer.

"There's no need to discuss innocence or guilt," Bush said. "We know he's guilty."

In neighboring Pakistan, Islamic militants opposed to the bombardment clashed with police while trying to storm an air base reportedly used by the Americans to support the air campaign. One person was killed and approximately 24 injured, police said.

Aboard the USS Enterprise, the launching pad for raids on Afghanistan, U.S. officers described Sunday's attacks as "cleanup" missions to hit targets pilots had missed in earlier raids.

"We're sort of in a cleanup mode right now," the carrier commander told reporters without allowing his name to be published — part of military rules.

In the latest raids, U.S. jets destroyed Kabul's Chinese-built international telephone exchange, severing one of the last means of communication with the outside world.

Shots sound in quiet neighborhood

By Mike Dhar
The Daily Iowan

Big Wheels and jack-o'-lanterns line the driveways and front steps along Dolan Place, a street running through a middle-class neighborhood in west Iowa City.

When nine bullets penetrated the wooden walls of a duplex on the quiet street the night of Oct. 13, residents were shocked. The bullets buzzed beneath the basketball hoop where Dan Oglesby's children usually play.

"The first thing I thought of was my kids," he said while observing the bullet holes on the side of his 1329 Dolan Place home along with his 4-year-old son, Joshua-Michael. "Normally, on any other day, my kids would have been out here playing, but they were visiting their grandmother."

No one is charged in the incident, which police are still investigating.

A majority of the bullets hit the blue, wooden walls at 1327 Dolan Place, the other half of the duplex. A resident there who spoke with police Sunday was unavailable for comment.

Oglesby reported the gunshots at 9:30 p.m. on Oct. 13, Iowa City police said. The shots did not injure anybody, and no witnesses were outside at the time of the shooting, said police, who checked the immediate area but did not find any suspects.

"We were all in shock," Oglesby said. "I thought, 'We just moved into a decent neighborhood. Those can't be gunshots.'"

Oglesby and his family didn't believe their house had been hit by gunfire until they discovered bullet holes later in the evening, he said. They didn't think immediately to look outside for who might have fired the shots, he said.

"We just thought someone was banging on the door real hard," Oglesby said.

Incidents like this rarely happen in the area, said Sgt. Doug Hart.

"I can remember one, maybe two other times it happened," he said. "And that was more than six years ago."

One of the nine bullets went through the wall, shattering a bathroom mirror at 1327 Dolan Place, Oglesby said.

Another passed through a bedroom in the adjoining unit where Jonathan Bramlett was sleeping and exited into the garage, Oglesby said. Bramlett did not wake up until 11:30 p.m., when family members discovered him covered with dry-wall dislodged by the bullet, Oglesby said.

Police did not have an estimate of the damage to the duplex.

Students' strengths grow at high school

Hani Elkadi once watched one of his frustrated art students throw a completed picture into the garbage. After the student left, Elkadi fished it out and uncrumpled it.

"I sent this picture to a national scholarship competition and he got the scholarship," said Elkadi, who teaches art, psychology, and science at the Iowa City Senior High School Alternative Center.

Many of Elkadi's teaching techniques focus on helping students find their strengths — like art — when others have given up on them. The program has expanded this year, now allowing graduates to receive Iowa City high-school diplomas for the first time in its history.

District administrators say the school fills an important role, and they are studying ways to expand alternative education in the district.

The low student-to-teacher ratio is one of the main advantages of the alternative high school, said Superintendent Lane Plugge. Expanding the school is part of a districtwide plan managing student distribution between schools, he said.

Only about 65 students attend the alternative school, where teachers also boast more one-on-one learning. Most of those students, officials say, have unconventional needs.

Elkadi has received numerous professional awards, but the recognition he said he's most proud of is a plaque from a few former students that reads, "You teach us we are more than we know." The sign is displayed prominently in his art classroom.

UI BUDGET CRUNCH

Programs face draconian cuts

By Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

In September, President Mary Sue Coleman proposed a four-year, multimillion-dollar revitalization of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Scheduled to begin next fall, the plan was to attract and retain new faculty and staff and purchase more instructional equipment. By adding courses and cutting class sizes, Coleman hoped to accommodate students' demands for popular courses in the college in which 16,000 students are enrolled.

Less than one month later, Coleman finds her plan in jeopardy as the university faces a new 4.3 percent budget cut from the state.

"I'm still going to try to do something, even in tough times," she said. "But it may be at a slower pace than I hoped. We're going to have to make some choices."

Cuts will 'affect everybody'

The university has tried to shield the liberal-arts school from the effect of past budget cuts, but all indications show that's about to change.

When the university suffered an $18.7 million slash in its general budget, the college only cut 1 percent, which eliminated some faculty and staff positions.

Now, in light of Gov. Tom Vilsack's proposed 4.3 percent across-the-board cut, the university prepares for a second slash, one that Coleman warned will "affect everybody." She said she will present a plan of action at the state of Iowa Board of Regents' meeting Thursday; officials are still working out the details of the proposal.

The effect on the college could be potentially disastrous, said Linda Maxson, the dean of the liberal-arts

Everything is uncertain but this: The UI is facing the worst budget crunch in its history. It started last spring, when lawmakers approved a budget reduction of $18.7 million, or 6 percent of state appropriations, for the UI. Now that the economy and state-tax revenues have gone from bad to worse, Gov. Tom Vilsack has proposed another $13.5 million, or 4.3 percent, cut.

Extensive tuition raises, layoffs, and pay cuts are all ways the university might deal with the financial blow, but no plan will be unveiled until Thursday's state of Iowa Board of Regents meeting in Ames.

The DI is running stories today and Tuesday focusing on various aspects of the budget cuts.

Look for these stories Tuesday:

- Some university officials are worried the school's reputation will suffer from budget slashes, making it harder to attract and retain top faculty and students.
- Some students have already been hit hard by funding deficiencies.
- Strained relationships exist among lawmakers, the state's universities, and the governor.

Also, look to the Opinions section today and Tuesday for the DI Editorial Board's views on the budget cuts.

More online courses, more students

By Pam Dewey
The Daily Iowan

Wilfrid Nixon teaches students living as far from Iowa as Sweden and Canada.

The UI professor of civil and environmental engineering first offered his winter highway-maintenance class four years ago over the Iowa Communications Network, a fiber-optics network connecting classrooms throughout the state with video, telephone, and the Internet. Nixon converted his class into an online course in the fall of 1999 to widen the market.

"This class really is worldwide," he said of the course, which started with eight students; it has 24 this year.

The number of online courses offered by the university has more than doubled during the last year, and numbers are expected to grow, school officials say.

The total of Web-based courses jumped from approximately 30 last year to approximately 75 this year, said Wayne Prophet, an assistant dean in the Division of Continuing Edu-

More than 220 students were enrolled in semester-based Web courses, and 384 enrolled in correspondence courses last year, according to a new report by the state of Iowa Board of Regents.

Enrollment in Web courses has risen to approximately 1,000 students because many correspondence classes, completed through mail, were converted to online courses, Prophet said, adding that more are being offered on the Web this year.

Specialty semester-based classes, such as Nixon's, aren't included in the number of students enrolled. Officials tally enrollment in year-long Web courses only.

The increase in online classes, a focus for the continuing-education program for the past year and a half, is partially fueled by an effort to eliminate more traditional correspondence courses in order to modernize distance education, Prophet said.

education, said offering Web courses allows the UI to reach people with conflicting schedules and sometimes saves the university money.

"Nothing is ever going to take the place of face-to-face instruction, but some people you can't reach this way," Jeppsen said. "It's better to be able to take the course electronically than not take it at all."

Although his program is trying to increase the use of the Web at the university, officials are not trying to make every class available online, Prophet said.

"We are generally interested in expanding the use of the Web, but we would like to target programs that can really use it," he said.

The bachelor of liberal studies degree, which can be completed without attending courses on-campus, is a target program that is now completely available online.

"I think where [Web classes] grow is in specialty classes people can't get anywhere," Nixon said. "I don't think standard classes are going to be used effectively on the Web."

An additional 50 Web-based courses are planned to be offered by the end of this academic year, Prophet said.

Bin Laden was late with Palestinian support, Jewish Congress official says

By Vess Mitev
The Daily Iowan

Dressed in a quiet blue suit, the former editor-in-chief of the Jerusalem Post called for loud actions against terrorism and the complete rejection of Osama bin Laden's assertions.

Carl Schrag said America's relationship with Israel must continue to be as strong as before, and he stressed that "it's a travesty" if people believe Israel's ties with the United States were the cause of the Sept. 11 attacks.

"Bin Laden's trying to pick up support on the streets and [of] the masses by using the U.S.-Israeli relationship and the Palestinian cause," said Schrag, speaking to a crowd of 80 at the Sheraton Hotel Sunday evening. "He knows it's a red flag that a lot of Arabs can dance around."

Schrag said that historically, bin Laden's hatred of the United States stems from U.S. troops stationed in Saudi Arabia, the home to the holiest places in the Islamic religion.

"This was an attack against America, not against America's ties with Israel," he said, challenging Jewish people to "not let these charges go unanswered."

"When you hear that all that's happened is because of Israel, point a finger at bin Laden and recall that very recently his problem was strictly with America."

Schrag, now the Midwest regional director of the American Jewish Congress, said he found the recent threats against Israel by Al Qaeda ironic, considering that until recently, Israel was never a primary topic on bin Laden's list.

"Israel has suffered terrorism for decades," he said. "But since Sept. 11, all of a sudden, the Palestinian cause is getting more and more attention from bin Laden and Al Qaeda."

Schrag called on U.S. officials to become more involved in using media to broadcast their message across the Middle East. One idea would be to let the private Arab satellite network al Jezzira interview American administrators, he said, instead of allowing it to serve only as a mouthpiece for radical Muslim groups.

"The truth will ultimately have an impact, if they [American officials] made al Jezzira a top priority," he said. "Al Jezzira has suddenly become a prime source of information for the Western world."

Asked about the UI's recently concluded Middle East Education Week, Schrag expressed concern over the apparent lack of a Jewish viewpoint.

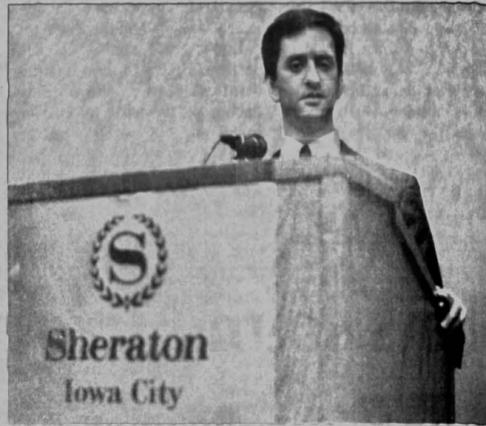

"It seems to me that a presentation of the Middle Eastern world without representation of Israel is ludicrous," he said. "Israel is not a fringe element in the Middle East; it is a rather central one."

Americans will get a better understanding of the effect of the attacks on Israel when they see the lists of victims from the World Trade Center, he said.

"When you see all the Jewish names and you see synagogues in mourning, then you begin to understand that terrorism has reached us all," he said.

What Happens If You Don't Pay Your Bills on Time...

Think paying bills late won't do any harm? Think again.

Your bill-paying history (this includes utilities and rent) is recorded in a credit report, and here's who can look at your credit report:

- Lenders
- Insurance companies
- Potential landlords
- Potential employers

Bottom line: If you don't pay your bills on time, you might not get that apartment or that job or that loan! Wait...they may give you a loan, but you'll probably pay a steep price with a high interest rate.

So pay on time...all the time.

NEW YORK — A police officer and two lab technicians involved in the NBC anthrax investigation have tested positive for the bacteria, Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said Sunday. Nevada officials said four people who may have come into contact with a contaminated letter at a Microsoft office tested negative; the results weren't known for two others.

In Washington, meanwhile, Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson said that he considered the anthrax cases in New York, Nevada, and Florida to be instances of bioterrorism. "It certainly is an act of terrorism to send anthrax through the mail," he said on Fox News Sunday.

And Attorney General John Ashcroft said it was "premature at this time to decide whether there is a direct link" to Osama bin Laden's terrorist network, but "we should consider this potential that it is linked."

The new New York cases brought to 12 the number of people around the nation who either have anthrax or have been exposed to it. That does not include a second NBC employee who is taking antibiotics after displaying possible symptoms of the disease.

The anthrax scare began Oct. 4, when it was confirmed that a Florida tabloid editor had contracted the inhaled form of the bacteria. His death a day later was the first resulting from the disease in the United States since 1976.

being treated with antibiotics. None have developed the disease. A second round of blood tests for more than 300 of the company's employees is expected this week.

News of the exposures has caused jitters around the world, with a number of false or pending cases reported over the weekend. Among them:

- In Hawaii, hazardous-materials teams were called to Lihue Airport after passengers on a flight from Los Angeles discovered a white powder on their luggage after they arrived. Tests were being conducted on the powder.

- In Uniontown, Pa., a 49-year-old woman was given Cipro, an antibiotic for anthrax, and was tested for exposure after receiving an envelope containing a powdery substance.

She was later released from a hospital.

In New York, Giuliani said the officer and two technicians were exposed while working on the anthrax case involving Erin O'Connor, 38, the assistant to NBC News anchor Tom Brokaw. O'Connor is expected to recover from the infection.

Green likely winner of NYC mayoral runoff

By Katherine Roth
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mark Green's victory margin over Fernando Ferrer in the Democratic mayoral runoff shrank as an examination of unofficial returns showed thousands of votes were mistakenly entered more than once. An election official said the outcome was unlikely to change.

"There's no realistic doubt about the outcome," Election Commissioner Douglas Kellner, a Manhattan Democrat, said Sunday after examining the unofficial reports returned to the board.

Unofficial returns reported by the Associated Press after the Oct. 11 election had shown Green, the city's public advocate, with 417,329 votes to Ferrer, the Bronx borough president, for a margin of just under 30,000 votes.

But in an audit of the returns begun on Oct. 12, the news service found significant duplication of vote reporting by police officers who tally the unofficial returns.

By early evening Sunday, revised results showed 395,053 votes for Green and 370,454 for Ferrer, a margin of about 24,600 votes. That also meant the total number of votes cast had shrunk from about 805,000 to about 765,500.

The winner faces Republican Michael Bloomberg in November.

Sam Boyle, chief of the AP's New York City bureau, said the errors were made in numbers transmitted to the news service by the New York Police Department. He said the audit was still going on but that the canvass sheets likely to contain large errors had all been checked.

After the polls close, election inspectors at each polling place record the numbers from each machine on a sheet that is given to a police officer. The officer takes the paper back to the precinct, where the numbers are entered into the police computer system, and the raw vote is sent to the AP. There it is tabulated for the unofficial returns distributed to newspapers and broadcasters.

Boyle said the errors occurred because some police officers misunderstood how to report results in cases where two precincts had been consolidated into one polling place. For example, if there were a total of 100 votes cast in that polling place, some officers reported 100 from each precinct — doubling the true number. In a few cases the same votes were entered three times when three precincts combined into one polling place.

"We have pointed out these kinds of errors to the cops in the past," Boyle said. "We are concerned about the accuracy of the numbers we report and the audit is one part of what we normally do to pinpoint any mistakes. We have not found any errors in AP systems."

There was no immediate response to a request for comment from the police department's public-information unit.

Door to U.S. wide open, even for terrorists

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press

He seemed eager to learn English in America. So he signed up for a four-month language course in California. Nothing seemed strange about that.

When Hani Hanjour didn't show up, the school wasn't alarmed. That happens now and then with foreign students.

A year later, he is believed to have been at the controls of American Airlines Flight 77 that plowed into the Pentagon — one of four terrorist hijackings Sept. 11 that left more than 5,000 people dead in New York, Washington, and Pennsylvania.

Most of the 19 hijackers entered the United States legally with the kinds of visas routinely granted each year to millions of foreign tourists, students, workers, and business travelers.

Some didn't leave the country when their visas expired. Some may have used phony names.

Their success in eluding detection spotlights the plight of immigration officials, who are swamped by the flood of visitors and have no real hope of finding violators.

The ease with which the hijackers exploited the system has prompted calls for tighter immigration laws, a moratorium on new foreign students, and a narrowing of America's open door.

"The terrorist attacks reveal to the whole world how weak our immigration system is and how lax the enforcement of immigration law has been," said U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, a Texas Republican and co-author of a 1996 wide-ranging immigration-reform law.

Some lawmakers are urging steps be taken to close immigration loopholes that terrorists might use to get across the borders and roam the country at will.

Sen. Christopher Bond, R-Mo., is pushing a measure that would require intelligence and law-enforcement agencies to share information with the State Department and Immigration and Naturalization Service as a way of weeding out potentially dangerous visa applicants.

"The INS system is very, very inadequate," he said. "We haven't put the personnel in; we haven't put the resources in INS to do the job that is reasonable to expect of it."

Similar warning lights flashed in recent years after it was discovered that participants in other terrorist plots on U.S. soil had violated immigration rules or managed to slip into the country.

Mohammed Salameh, who rented the van used in the 1993 World Trade Center bombing, had overstayed his visa. Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, sentenced to life in prison for a plot that included plans to blow up New York landmarks, came in on a tourist visa even though his name was on a federal watch-list of undesirables.

Not everyone is enthusiastic over the idea of fighting terrorism with immigration laws, saying that could harm businesses and universities. Some experts say better intelligence is needed.

"The idea that you can close the borders of the United States is just pure fiction," said Ira Kurzban, a Florida attorney and the former president of the American Immigration Lawyers Association. "It's just not in our economic and political interests."

The sheer volume of visitors makes trying to impose controls a daunting task. Last year, the State Department issued 7.1 million visas — more than triple the number 30 years ago, according to the Center for Immigration Studies. And once people get in, there's no telling where they go or if they leave on time.

"It's probably easier to disappear into the crowd in this country than it is anywhere else,"

Passengers line up for processing at the Immigration and Naturalization section at John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York on Jan. 9. This is the first INS checkpoint encountered by hundreds of immigrants who enter the country each year.

said Mark Krikorian, the center's executive director.

Forty percent of the 7 million to 8 million illegal aliens in the United States are those who remained after their visas expired, according to government and private estimates.

In wake of attacks, everyone wants federal aid

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After an initial burst of federal aid, the Bush administration and some lawmakers are tapping the brakes on taxpayer assistance to groups seeking help after the terrorist attacks.

From hotel companies to urban water systems, scores of trade associations and state and local governments are pleading for aid. While no one has an authoritative tally, congressional aides estimate that the requests total tens of billions of dollars, probably more than $100 billion.

"You name the industry, and it's been coming by" for help, said Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D.

Lawmakers also have their own proposals.

Sens. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., and Zell Miller, D-Ga., want to provide $500-per-person tax credits for personal travel. Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., wants more than $30 billion to improve highways and other transportation systems. Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Bill Frist, R-Tenn., are pushing $1.4 billion to prepare for bioterrorist attacks.

Congress has approved $40 billion to repair the damage and bolster domestic security and the military. Federal agencies have proposed more than $120 billion in "helpful suggestions" to spend it, White House budget director Mitchell Daniels said last week.

President Bush and Congress have provided $15 billion for the airline industry. Lawmakers are now writing rival plans for stimulating the dormant economy. House Republicans have a $100 billion plan, heavy with tax cuts; Democratic packages may grow to $120 billion, mostly for government spending.

"The bucket was full. It can take a few leaks," Daniels said, referring to robust federal surpluses that had been projected until recently. "It can't take the bottom dropping out, however."

Competing for federal help is a dizzying list of groups: travel industry employees, gambling interests, tourist-reliant Hawaii, Amtrak, restaurants, travel agents, airports, the insurance industry, mortgage bankers, and others.

City water departments serving 160 million people have asked for $5 billion to protect drinking water and wastewater plants.

Amtrak, the federally subsidized passenger railroad, has requested $3.1 billion to improve security.

Representatives from the tourism industry asked lawmakers for grants, federally backed loans, and spending to promote travel.

No one knows what the final total will be, but the requests have begun causing concern among lawmakers from both parties. They realize that what in August looked like a $176 billion surplus for the fiscal year that started Oct. 1 is now all but certain to end up as a deficit in the tens of billions.

"We'll look at other situations case by case, but we're not making any invitations" for requests for aid, said House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill.

"They're asking for the moon," said Rep. Gene Green, D-Texas. "But we need to address it."

New York Gov. George Pataki and several New Yorkers from Congress visited congressional leaders last week, pursuing $54 billion for debris removal, rebuilding, and economic recovery.

New York bore the brunt of the Sept. 11 attacks that killed more than 5,000 people, leveled the World Trade Center, and destroyed part of the Pentagon. But Pataki emerged only with promises that his request would be considered.

"There's no lack of sympathy here," said Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, which controls one-third of the $2 trillion federal budget. "We can only say we'll do the best we can with the limited resources the federal government has."

PHILIP MORRIS HAS COME TO IOWA TO FIGHT SMOKE-FREE LEGISLATION. HERE'S WHY WE SHOULD FIGHT BACK.

SECONDHAND SMOKE KILLS 65,000 PEOPLE EACH YEAR.

Big tobacco and their lawyers have come to Iowa to overturn the smoke-free ordinance in one of our communities. This is not about freedom of choice. This is about freedom to breathe clean air.

The fact is, secondhand smoke is dangerous. According to the National Cancer Institute, secondhand smoke contributes to some 65,000 deaths each year, 300,000 cases of childhood bronchitis or pneumonia, and it doubles the risk of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

Big tobacco also claims that smoke-free legislation hurts restaurant revenues. The truth is, numerous studies have proven that revenues do not decline, and in some cases, increase.

It's time to let Philip Morris know one thing: saving lives is more important than selling cigarettes.

To get involved in the fight for smoke-free air, please call 1-800-ACS-2345.

IT'S TIME ALL OF US STOPPED SECONDHAND SMOKING.

'Smart' bombs in fallible hands

WASHINGTON — The precision bombs and missiles with complex targeting technology are only as fail-safe as the humans who create and program them.

A guided bomb dropped on Afghanistan missed its target by a mile Oct. 13. The Pentagon said a target coordinate was entered incorrectly into its satellite navigation system.

Ground reports indicated that four people were killed and eight injured, according to a Pentagon statement. U.S. officials said they had no way to confirm the number of casualties.

"The munitions that are being used tend to be very precise. They are not 100 percent," Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said.

The Bush administration has gone to great pains to hold together its anti-terror coalition with promises that efforts are being made to minimize civilian casualties.

One week into the new war, those casualties are mounting — ranging from eight to 200, depending on which side is counting.

"In the United States, there is support for the bombings, and the fact that some civilians are going to be killed is part of the expectation of what bombing means," said Jeffrey Goldfarb, a sociology professor at the New School University in New York.

More than seven in 10 Americans in a recent poll said they support military action against the terrorists responsible for the Sept. 11 attacks even if it means thousands of American military personnel are killed. Support is nine in 10 without a mention in the poll question of thousands of possible military deaths.

The 2,000-pound guided bomb that went astray Oct. 13 hit a residential neighborhood instead of a military helicopter at the airport in Kabul, the capital.

On Oct. 8, an errant missile or bomb struck a building and killed four U.N. workers in Kabul. The building was located not far from a Taliban communications tower that may have been a target in the raid.

The Taliban said at least 200 were killed Oct. 10 when the village of Karam was hit by missiles.

Neither the United States nor Britain has confirmed those casualties, which are extremely difficult to verify because Afghanistan is all but sealed off from the outside world.

Civilian casualties, whether directly from military fire or indirectly through starvation, could boost anti-American sentiment in the region, giving more political power to Osama bin Laden and the Taliban.

Images of dead civilians also could erode public support among Americans for the campaign against terrorism.

Approximately two-thirds of the public backed the U.S. bombing campaign in Serbia during its opening weeks, but that dropped to roughly half of the population after what the U.S. government labeled as an accidental bombing of the Chinese Embassy in Belgrade.

Union deals end Minn. strikes

By Ashley H. Grant
Associated Press

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Leaders from the two largest state-employee unions agreed Sunday to accept contract deals reached with the state, ending a two-week walkout by 23,000 government workers.

Nearly half the state's employees were idled by the strike, the largest by state workers in Minnesota's history. The unions represent workers ranging from tax collectors to parole officers to zoo staff.

They were expected to return to their jobs this week.

The executive directors of both unions said they would recommend ratification when the rank-and-file vote on the contracts, which probably wouldn't happen for several weeks.

"There's a lot of hard feelings," said Lisa Maidl, a revenue collector in Ely, in northeastern Minnesota. "I'm just going to go in, sit at my desk, and hopefully avoid some of those people for awhile."

The contract deals, reached just after 2 a.m., would give American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees workers 3.5 percent wage increases for each of the next two years, said Don Dinndorf, spokesman for the union's Council 6.

Workers belonging to the Minnesota Association of Professional Employees would receive 3 percent pay hikes for each of the two years.

"This is the offer that should have been the floor offer in July," said Deb Schadeegg, MAPE president.

Both unions would see "significant improvements" in the health-care package over what the state had offered before the strike, Dinndorf said.

State negotiators also sounded positive.

"All sides ought to be very pleased at how they came through this," said Julien Carter, Minnesota's employee-relations commissioner.

The final state offers before the strike included back-to-back 3 percent raises for all AFSCME workers for two years and a one-time, 4 percent across-the-board raise for MAPE's members.

AFSCME had asked the state for a 5 percent across-the-board raise each of the next two years. For MAPE, the union sought 4.5 percent raises annually.

Carter didn't rule out layoffs as a way to pay for the contracts, but said he would leave it to state agencies to determine how to trim money from their budgets.

"We certainly would hope that's not likely," Dinndorf said of possible layoffs.

The unions had contended all along that the state had more money available than it had offered to the unions.

Workers went on strike Oct. 1, three weeks after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, and the timing has been a public-relations challenge for union members.

Don't propose just yet. Wait a while longer. Like until she decides to date other guys.

Does that sound as bad to you as it does to us? Come see us. You're ready, she's ready, and so are we!

Powell travels to Asia on a diplomatic mission

By George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Colin Powell headed to Asia Sunday on a diplomatic mission intended to keep tensions between Pakistan and India from further complicating the U.S. anti-terror campaign in neighboring Afghanistan.

Pakistan has been supporting Islamic militants who seek an end to Indian rule in the predominantly Muslim region of Kashmir. A terrorist attack last week in the Indian sector of Kashmir killed about 40 people.

Deputy Secretary of State Richard Armitage said last week that Powell would try to see if there were a way "to lower the temperature" in the two countries.

Pakistan's president, Pervez Musharraf, has cooperated with U.S. efforts to track down Osama bin Laden and go after his Taliban government hosts in Afghanistan. Musharraf has allowed American military aircraft to land in Pakistan and has granted the United States use of at least two air bases despite widespread protests in Pakistan.

Mindful of that cooperation, President Bush last month lifted sanctions against Pakistan and India that were imposed after the two nations tested nuclear weapons in 1998. The sanctions barred economic and military assistance to the two countries.

The United States and Pakistan also recently signed an agreement to reschedule $379 million in bilateral debt.

On Oct. 12, the Overseas Private Investment Corporation announced a variety of economic initiatives for Pakistan, including extension of a $300 million special line of credit.

The organization is a self-sustaining federal agency that backs U.S. business-expansion programs in developing countries.

"Pakistan's commitment to the war against terrorism becomes even more meaningful for ordinary Pakistanis when foreign direct investment supports the country's economic development," President Peter S. Watson said.

India also has won praise from the State Department for sharing intelligence on terrorist groups after the Sept. 11 attacks on the United States.

ATTACKS

Fort, built in the early 20th century, was in ruins. The report could not be confirmed because security kept outsiders from the area.

Other targets included the cities of Mazar-e-Sharif, Kandahar, Jalalabad, and Herat, according to the Taliban Information Ministry. Explosions were heard late Sunday well north of Kabul in the direction of the front lines between opposition and Taliban fighters.

One strong detonation about midnight triggered what appeared to be a series of secondary explosions.

A nighttime attack on the Taliban headquarters in Kandahar plunged the city into darkness and enveloped it in dust Sunday, the private Pakistan-based Afghan Islamic Press said. The main target appeared to be military headquarters, it said.

The U.S.-led barrage has left Afghan civilians with frayed nerves because some of the targets are close to populated areas and, at least in one case, homes have been struck by accident.

"There is no Osama in Kabul," bank worker Mohammed Arif said. "Osama and his people are not living in small mud houses. Why do they attack us? We are not his supporters. We have never seen his face."

Washington says the raids do not target civilians, but the Pentagon has acknowledged that one bomb went astray and hit a residential neighborhood near Kabul.

The Bush administration has repeatedly refused any conditions on its demands that the Taliban surrender bin Laden and his Al Qaeda terror movement — suspected in the Sept. 11 terror attacks in the United States. The United States launched the bombardment of Afghanistan on Oct. 7 after the Taliban refused for weeks to comply.

Al Qaeda has released three videotaped statements since the start of the air campaign, the latest on Oct. 13, warning of new terror attacks against the United States.

Kuwait decided Sunday to strip the citizenship of the spokesman who appeared in the tapes, Sulaiman Abu Ghaith, a former Kuwaiti teacher. Once Kuwait's emir approves the government decision, Abu Ghaith will share the same stateless status as bin Laden, who was stripped of his Saudi citizenship.

Meanwhile, a commander in the coalition battling the Taliban said opposition leaders have organized a 2,000-strong security force to maintain law and order in Kabul if they capture the city.

The lightly armed force would secure the city until a new government can be established, Gen. Haji Almaz Khan said in Charikar, an alliance stronghold 25 miles north of Kabul.

The United States and its partners have been urging the opposition to avoid launching an all-out attack on Kabul until a broad-based government can be formed to replace the Taliban. Most of the Taliban is ethnic Pashtun; the alliance is dominated by ethnic Tajiks and Uzbeks.

Taliban intelligence chief Qari Ahmedullah appealed to opposition fighters Sunday to join in the battle against America for "our religion and country."

"We will forget our past differences with those who join us now," he said in a statement distributed by the Afghan Islamic Press.

Since last month, the Taliban has banned most foreign journalists from entering the roughly 90 percent of Afghanistan under the religious militia's control. This weekend, however, they allowed a group of international journalists to visit Nangarhar province in eastern Afghanistan.

Mural, in pieces, ready for new life

By Lauren Smiley
The Daily Iowan

The colorful mural painted by Hani Elkadi's art students now sits stacked in 10 large slabs on the floor of the closed Leno & Cilek building.

Workers spent three hours on Oct. 13 cutting and unscrewing the mural from its support columns. The building will be destroyed to make room for the Iowa City Public Library's expansion.

One student's uncompleted painting will go untouched during Elkadi's restoration of the pieces. At the mural's inception in 1993, Chris Harding started a picture of a boy on a bicycle near a car, foreshadowing his death that night. Harding was riding his bicycle when he was hit by a drunk driver.

Elkadi emotionally recalls entering the building to find Harding sitting atop a telephone booth, painting a car in the sky. Elkadi asked Harding what he was doing; Harding replied he was following Elkadi's instructions to be creative and jokingly warned Elkadi not to paint over his creation.

Elkadi's memory of Harding has become part of the mural, too, in an image he painted of Harding at work that day.

"I painted Chris how I saw him before I yelled at him, so now Chris is up in that corner painting his car," Elkadi said tearfully.

At least six area organizations will display pieces of the mural, which were delicately salvaged and are in good condition, said Liz Nichols, the library's assistant director. Starting in January, the library will loan out the sections to area organizations and businesses for an indefinite period of time.

"We'll try to match up the pieces with the businesses that are the most interested in them," Nichols said.

One piece depicting two women and a child was not salvaged because the slab could not be removed without destroying its integrity, she said.

The library will house two of the 75-100 pound slabs in the Young Adult Section, a part of the new addition, and the Iowa City School Board will receive one of the pieces.

A special Library Board committee sent 20 letters to highly visible businesses and organizations in August regarding the display of the mural. Sites in consideration include the city manager's office, the Chamber of Commerce, the San Joaquin Historical Museum in the Old Capitol Town Center, and the Children's Museum in Coral Ridge Mall.

The mural was an interactive project between alternative high-school students and community members whose portraits grace the slabs, Elkadi said.

"We wanted to change the community's feeling about this particular group of kids," he said. "They are not the ones you should be ashamed of; they are not punks, deviants, or druggies. They might be different from the mainstream, but they are loving, talented, gifted, and can do something to make this town better."

Elkadi oversaw the mural's removal to ensure that each piece's composition was kept intact; he will restore each segment to its original condition.

from Iowa City West, where she said she was told she wouldn't graduate. Now, the senior expects to receive a diploma.

"Hani is a wonderful person," Marsh said. "He helps students get back into school. He knows how to get to our minds and teach us."

Elkadi said the education process is more of a conversation between the students and the teacher. "I believe when you teach, you share a little bit of yourself," he said.

Elkadi was born in Egypt and lost his home and members of his family during World War II.

His studies led him around Europe, where he eventually became a surgeon in England.

He came to Iowa City in 1980 when the International Writing Program invited him, then established as an author, to participate in the program.

Elkadi eventually landed at the school, where he said he identified with the students who are often unlucky, disadvantaged, and needing support.

"I thought I could be very helpful to people who are going through difficult times growing up," he said. "The narrative of my life is the backdrop of my curriculum. You need to learn to pick yourself up from tragedies."

CANTERBURY, England — Several hundred people evacuated from Canterbury Cathedral on Sunday after a rash of scares around the world prompted by the discovery of white powder.

Church staff began evacuating the cathedral — the Archbishop of Canterbury's spiritual headquarters in the Church of England — at 1 p.m. after a worker saw a man dropping white powder in one of the aisles.

Emergency workers in chemical-protective gear cleared up the powder, took samples for analysis, and Kent police said. Several were also on the scene.

It was not immediately clear what the substance was, but police said they did not know how long the tests would take. In the meantime, they kept the cathedral closed as they were searching for a man alleged to have dropped the powder.

Several hundred people were inside the cathedral when the evacuation began, but no services were held.

Jitters about biological and other forms of terrorism spread since anthrax were confirmed last week in Florida and New York, and bacteria was found in Nevada.

"We are taking extra caution at this stage, we have sent in firefighters with protective suits, fire department woman, speaking on condition of anonymity, too early to say exactly what the powder is."

school. Popular classes would be protected, but improvements would be hard to come by, she said.

"Depending on where the cuts are made, it will be difficult or even impossible to make improvements," she said. "Our resources will be focused on keeping popular courses and maintaining the excellence we have already."

Cuts may cause already-crowded courses to have additional students sitting on the floor, and departments may strain even more to retain faculty, Maxson said. "We are simply shortstaffed," she said.

Programs already struggling

Maxson said some programs — such as the communication studies department, the journalism school, and the computer-science department — are struggling even now to keep up with the demand for popular courses.

Communication studies was short-handed last year in staff members, said Chairman Randy Hirokawa. The department didn't have to reduce its budget, but it did suffer staff reductions in teaching assistants and visiting professors, whom the college was unable to rehire because of the tight budget constraints, he said.

If Vilsack's proposed budget cuts are passed, Hirokawa said, it would be very difficult on the college and his department, but the faculty would strive to preserve students' education. His department serves 900 majors and 75 graduate students.

In preparation for tighter budgets in future years, the department placed limitations on such luxuries as the number of photocopies a person can make, long-distance phone calls, and overnight mailings, Hirokawa said. Additionally, the department set aside a percentage of its budget in case it has to tighten even more, he said. He hopes those cost-saving measures will be sufficient.

"This past year we were spared," he said. "We implemented cost-cutting measures, anticipating that we wouldn't be as lucky in future years."

Despite the uncertainty, Hirokawa said, he was "absolutely committed" to protecting the curriculum of the department. He said the quality of courses would try to be preserved.

"We all have to tighten our belts," he said. "But we're not going to do it in a way to hurt students. It's tough times. Everyone is in the same position. We just have to make choices. All departments need to look for ways to cut that don't prevent a student from graduating in a timely way."

'I can't imagine what else we can cut'

The journalism school is still trying to recover from budget cuts made last year, said the school's interim director, Venise Berry. The program lost four faculty members and one staff member because of not rehiring after retirements and resignation, she said.

"Our department has already given significantly," she said. "Right now, we're struggling to maintain our program. I can't imagine what else we can cut."

The positions that were lost last year, such as the computer-technology staff person, had a negative effect on the department, Berry said. If additional positions are dropped, or faculty and staff members choose to leave, the program may suffer even more, she said.

"These people are crucial to the operation of our school," she said. "It's possible that people will leave. Those people who we lose will be our best people."

Computer science did not lose staff members but is limited in the amount of support it can offer for the demand of classes, said Steve Bruell, the department's chairman. If the governor's proposed cuts are passed, he said, the department, which is seeing record enrollments, will not have the staff to deal with the growth.

"Fortunately, we have been able to accommodate that until now," he said. "If there's a cut, it will affect our ability to offer classes."

Local economists applaud Vilsack's budget decisions

By Vess Mitev
The Daily Iowan

Local economists say Gov. Tom Vilsack's decision to order an across-the-board cut in state spending was the right move.

A budget cut is the best way to handle the state's economic downturn, said UI economics Professor Beth Ingram. Neither of the state's two remaining options, dipping into the state's rainy-day fund or raising taxes, would be effective in combating the sudden decline in revenues, she said.

"Up until March of last year, the economy was operating at a fast pace," Ingram said. "The amount of revenue collected was suddenly smaller than expected, and Sept. 11 sort of broke the camel's back."

Ted Temzelides, an assistant professor of economics, said budget cuts are an appropriate economic safeguard until the economy rebounds. In fact, they may even help stabilize the state's budget in the long run, he said.

"We are in a recession right now, so people aren't spending as much, and the result is budget cuts," he said. "However, once this clears out, the economy should show its fundamental strength."

Vilsack spokesman Joe Shannahan said the governor won't consider raising taxes as an alternative to budget cuts. The governor also said he won't dip into the rainy-day fund because lawmakers rejected that option last spring.

"We believe that [budget cuts] will work over raising taxes," he said.

Iowa's plan to remain fiscally conservative this year by reducing the state's budget by $200 million and cutting an additional $200 million next year will ensure the stability of Iowa's economy once the recession ends, Shannahan said.

Other states have suffered worse than Iowa from the economic downturn, he said. Indiana, for example, has drained its rainy-day funds, and Ohio has a $1 billion deficit, he said.

The United States and its partners have been urging the Taliban to avoid launching an attack on Kabul until a coalition-based government can be formed to replace the Taliban. The Taliban is ethnically diverse; the alliance is dominated by ethnic Tajiks and Uzbeks. Taliban intelligence chief Qari Muhammad appealed to opposition fighters Sunday to join in a battle against America for their religion and country. "We will forget our past differences with those who join us," he said in a statement distributed by the Afghan Islamic Press.

Since last month, the Taliban has banned most foreign journalists from entering the roughly 90 percent of Afghanistan under the religious militia's control. This weekend, however, they welcomed a group of international journalists to visit Nangarhar province in eastern Afghanistan.

White-powder scares crop up around globe

Associated Press

CANTERBURY, England — Several hundred people were evacuated from Canterbury Cathedral on Sunday in one of a rash of scares around the world prompted by the discovery of white powder.

Church staff began evacuating the cathedral — the seat of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the spiritual head of the Church of England — around 1 p.m. after a worker said he saw a man dropping a white powder in one of the chapels.

Emergency workers wearing chemical-protection suits cleared up the powder and took samples for analysis, Kent police said. Paramedics were also on the scene.

It was not immediately clear what the substance was, and police said they did not know how long the tests would take. In the meantime, they planned to keep the cathedral closed; they were searching for the man alleged to have dropped the powder.

Several hundred visitors were inside the cathedral when the evacuation began, but no services were under way.

Jitters about bioterrorism and other forms of attack have spread since anthrax cases were confirmed last week in Florida and New York and the bacteria was found on a letter sent to a Microsoft office in Nevada.

"We are taking every precaution at this stage and so we have sent in firefighters with protective suits," said a fire department spokeswoman, speaking on the condition of anonymity. "It is still too early to say exactly what the powder is."

We are taking every precaution at this stage and so we have sent in firefighters with protective suits. It is still too early to say exactly what the powder is.

— fire department spokeswoman

Among other scares and anti-bioterror measures around the world Sunday:

- Hundreds of people were evacuated from north London pubs and restaurants after eight people reported feeling ill at a nearby rail station on the night of Oct. 13, police said. Police said they did not believe there were any terrorist links, and no one was hospitalized. Sgt. Bob Alloway said exhaust fumes may have caused the problem.

- Cleaning staff at Rio de Janeiro's International Airport in Brazil found white powder on a flight from Frankfurt after passengers left the plane, federal police and health authorities said. Scientists were analyzing the substance, and the 12-member cleaning staff that found it was isolated in a room at the airport.

- In Toronto, authorities stopped a plane at Pearson International Airport when baggage handlers found white powder in the cargo hold. Test results were expected by this afternoon, but police said they didn't think the substance was dangerous.

- Belgian Health Minister Magda Aelvoet said preliminary tests showed a powder found in six confiscated letters was not anthrax. The letters were addressed to the Belgian Pharmaceutical Institute and several of its employees; the postal service seized them after finding the powder. Aelvoet said it was probably a prank.

- German Defense Minister Rudolf Scharping said the military was going over its defenses against biological and chemical weapons, and leaders called for increased sentences for anyone caught sending copycat anthrax letters. Scharping assured Germans that the military was capable of defending itself from biological and chemical warfare.

- Major newspapers in two Australian states on Sunday began toughening and reviewing security, particularly mail-handling procedures.

Rebels threaten to behead two American hostages

Associated Press

ZAMBOANGA, Philippines — A Muslim extremist rebel leader threatened to behead an American couple before the president's scheduled visit to the United States next month if the army does not halt its offensive on the group.

Abu Sabaya, a leader of the Abu Sayyaf rebels, warned today that he would kill Martin and Gracia Burnham of Wichita, Kan., to coincide with President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo's Nov. 20 visit with President Bush.

"It would be very embarrassing if President Arroyo goes to the U.S. with the bodies of Martin and Gracia," Sabaya told Radio Mindanao Network by telephone.

The southern-based group already has killed a third American, Guillermo Sobero of Corona, Calif. The Abu Sayyaf still is holding at least 10 Filipinos captive. The group was seized from a southwestern beach resort in May.

The Abu Sayyaf, thought to number 1,000 fighters, has kidnapped dozens of foreigners and Filipinos in recent years and raised millions of dollars in ransom. The group also is suspected of having links to Osama bin Laden, the Saudi exile accused of plotting the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks in the United States.

The guerrillas claim to be fighting for Muslim independence in the southern Philippines, but the government considers them bandits.

A man Sabaya identified as Martin Burnham told Radio Mindanao today he was "very tired, weak and scared."

"Gracia's feet are blistered from walking so much. My hands are tied in chains always so I won't escape," he said.

He appealed to the government to halt its intensifying offensive against the guerrillas on the southern island of Basilan, where the hostages are held. "We cannot be saved by artillery," he said.

His voice cracked as he wished his daughter a happy birthday. Sobero's skeletal remains were found more than a week ago on Basilan, ending speculation that he may be alive despite the guerrillas' claim that they beheaded him in June. The original threat to behead Sobero was also coupled with a demand that the army call off its offensive.

The United States is helping the Philippines train and supply weapons to some of the more than 7,000 Filipino soldiers pursuing the Abu Sayyaf on Basilan, which is about 560 miles south of Manila.

The army has apparently heightened its offensive on the guerrillas in recent weeks and has claimed success. "We're seeing the start of the end," National Security Adviser Raulo Golez said.

On Oct. 13, the fleeing guerrillas seized four farmers and beheaded two of them. The other two escaped.

Early Sunday, troops rescued four Filipino hostages while hunting the Abu Sayyaf, military officials said.

Sexual Harassment

Sexual harassment is illegal. The University of Iowa is committed to maintaining an environment free of sexual harassment. The Office of Affirmative Action publishes sexual harassment prevention information annually in The Daily Iowan to inform members of the University community about the prohibitions against sexual harassment and the limitations on consensual relationships between faculty and students. Please cut out and keep this information for your future reference. Students, faculty, and staff can help by understanding and working to eliminate sexual harassment.

DEFINING SEXUAL HARASSMENT

Anyone can be targeted for sexual harassment, regardless of gender, age, race, or physical characteristics. Both women and men may experience sexual harassment; it can occur among peers or between people of unequal power and authority. It can occur between members of the opposite sex, and between people of the same sex.

Sexual harassment is defined as unwelcome advances, requests for sexual favors, or other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature when:

- submission is made an express or implied term or condition of employment or status in a class, program, or activity; or
  - submission to or rejection of the behavior is used to make an employment or educational decision (such as hiring, promotion, or grading a course); or
  - the conduct has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with a person's work or educational performance or creates an intimidating, hostile, or offensive environment for work or learning.
- Sexual harassment may take many forms; including but not limited to:
- physical assault
  - a pattern of conduct that is intended to humiliate

- direct or implied threats that submission to sexual advances will be a condition of employment, work status, promotion, grades, or letters of recommendation
- direct propositions of a sexual nature
- comments of a sexual nature or subtle pressure for sexual activity
- sexually explicit statements, questions, jokes or anecdotes
- unnecessary touching, patting, hugging or brushing against a person's body
- remarks of a sexual nature about a person's clothing, body, about sexual activity, or about previous sexual experience.

ABOUT CONSENSUAL RELATIONSHIPS

The University prohibits amorous relationships between faculty (all instructional personnel at the University, including graduate students and instructional staff) and students enrolled in their classes or subject to their supervision. These amorous relationships are prohibited and viewed as unethical even when the relationship appears to be consensual (i.e., both parties have consented). Due to the power imbalance, the student's voluntary consent is questionable. Such relationships present a conflict of interest for the parties, which significantly impacts the learning environment.

Amorous relationships between students and faculty outside the instructional context are discouraged because they also present the potential for conflicts of interest.

COMPLAINTS ON CAMPUS

The University takes sexual harassment seriously. During the 2000-2001 fiscal year, there were a total of 26 sexual harassment complaints reported to various University offices. Nine of the complaints were filed in the Office of Affirmative Action; the remaining 17 complaints were handled by other University offices. Eighteen were informal complaints and eight were formal complaints. Thirteen complaints resulted in action being warranted. Actions taken may range from verbal warning to termination. In some instances, more than one action was warranted. Examples of the types of actions taken during FY 2000-2001 include: apology to complainant (4), counseling and educational training (14), verbal/written reprimands (5), no contact order (2), campus prohibition (1), negotiated separation (1), and arrest by Public Safety (1). These examples are offered to demonstrate the seriousness with which the University regards sexual harassment.

IF YOU ARE SEXUALLY HARASSED

Remember: You have the right to a work environment or an educational environment free from sexual harassment.

Learn more about your rights and responsibilities: Request copies of the University's sexual harassment policy and complaint procedures, available from the Office of Affirmative Action or any one of the offices listed under the University Resources section which follows.

Seek information and support: You may feel a range of emotions from helplessness, to rage, to confusion, to fear. Talking with someone can help you develop strategies to remedy the situation and lessen the isolation you may be feeling.

- Explore your informal and formal options:
- Document the incidents.
  - Talk with the accused directly or write a letter to the accused. Clearly recount the incidents in question and their impact on you, and demand that the behavior stop. Deliver the letter by certified mail or in person; keep a copy.
  - Discuss your experience with a supervisor, the Office of Affirmative Action, or a resource person in an office listed under University Resources. We can further assist you in defining and remedying the situation.
  - Contact the Office of Affirmative Action for an informal resolution or a formal investigation of the situation. Your concerns will be handled in a confidential manner.

BE AWARE OF YOUR BEHAVIOR

- Pay attention to how your words and actions affect the work/learning environment, performance, and self-esteem of others.
- Distinguish between behaviors which may be acceptable socially, but which may not be acceptable in the workplace or classroom.
- Stop when someone asks you to discontinue a behavior.
- Do not assume that your peers or supervisees enjoy comments about their appearance, sexually-oriented jokes or comments, being touched, stared at, or propositioned.
- Do not assume that what you consider to be welcome sexual invitations will be welcomed by others.
- Do not instruct co-workers and supervisors to put up with offensive behavior.

Education is fundamental to the prevention of sexual harassment. The Office of Affirmative Action provides educational programs and materials on this topic to individuals and units throughout the campus.

Copies of the University of Iowa's Policy on Sexual Harassment and Consensual Relationships, the Sexual Harassment Complaint Procedures, and brochures on sexual harassment prevention are available from the Office of Affirmative Action. Materials will be made available in alternative formats. # Israel kills Hamas leader

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Firing from long range Sunday, Israeli forces shot and killed a Palestinian militant accused of orchestrating a suicide bombing that killed 22 people in June.

Sunday's shooting raised Mideast tensions, but Israel said it was prepared to scale back some security restrictions imposed on Palestinians.

Palestinians called the death of Abed-Rahman Hamad, a regional leader of the radical Islamic group Hamas, a serious violation of a shaky truce, and said the shooting was timed to undermine the latest efforts to solidify the cease-fire. Hamas vowed to strike back against Israel.

While Palestinians were harshly critical of Israel in public statements, political leaders and security officials held private talks with the Israelis on removing barriers to Palestinian movements in the West Bank and the Barring last-minute glitches, Israel was expected to start lifting a number of restraints Sunday night and today, the Palestinians said.

UNITED NATIONS — For U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan, winning the Nobel Peace Prize in the midst of a U.S.-led war on terrorism means the United Nations has to work harder to bring peace to a world torn by conflict.

It's a daunting task, and he's the first to admit it's going to be a long struggle — not just for the United Nations but for all 189 U.N. member states, as well as the business community and voluntary organizations.

"The world is a messy place, and unfortunately, the messier it gets, the more work we have to do," Annan told cheering U.N. staff members after the Oct. 12 announcement that the Peace Prize had been awarded to him and the United Nations as a whole.

13 killed in Nigerian clashes

By Glenn McKenzie
Associated Press

KANO, Nigeria — Fires smoldered in burned cars and ruined buildings in the northern city of Kano on Sunday, a day after Muslim-Christian clashes left at least 13 people dead and religious tensions high.

The Oct. 13 fighting was apparently ignited by clashes between police and an armed mob on Oct. 12 following a protest by Muslims against the U.S.-led air strikes on Afghanistan.

Hundreds of soldiers patrolled Kano, located 500 miles north of the commercial capital Lagos, restoring an uneasy calm Sunday. Burning tires and garbage littered a four-lane road in Kano, and firefighters battled to put out fires in several buildings.

Witnesses said three churches and a mosque were partially burned Oct. 13, but government officials said only one church and one mosque were damaged.

Police said they had confirmed 13 deaths in the Oct. 13 violence, including five rioters shot by police. There were unconfirmed reports of hundreds dead, but by Sunday, no bodies were visible on the streets. Hospitals refused to admit journalists and gave no casualty figures.

Kano's state government, anxious to play down the violence, dismissed the reports.

"To say hundreds is an exaggeration," said government spokesman Ibrahim Gwagwarwa.

Some Muslims vowed more protests against the U.S.-led air strikes on Afghanistan.

"As long as George Bush continues to drop bombs on Afghanistan, then we Muslims in Nigeria will protest," said Bilyaminu Muhammad, a 38-year-old who hurriedly dismantled his roadside barbecue-chicken stand Oct. 12 in anticipation of violence.

Yet most residents expressed dismay at the fighting, saying they feared relations between Christians and Muslims in the largest city in northern Nigeria had been seriously damaged.

"I just pray for the fighting to stop," said Tony Sojay, an employee at St. George's Anglican Church who saw a mob stab a man to death outside his church.

Rethink tuition hikes in light of smaller budget cut

All across campus, students have their fingers crossed, waiting for the final decision on tuition for next year. With the possible increase ranging from a high 12 percent to an astronomical 25 percent, students are checking their bank accounts and tightening their belts. After examining all the evidence, the regents declared that the increase will most likely be around 19 percent. However, with Gov. Tom Vilsack's recent announcement that budget cuts will not be as extreme as previously thought, the regents need to reassess the situation and revise their estimates.

After the initial $21.9 million budget cuts were announced, the regents decided to increase tuition by 18.5 percent for in-state and 15.5 percent for out-of-state translating into an increase of $669 and $1,883, respectively. At the time, this seemed unavoidable. The UI had just been hit with a huge 7 percent cut to its budget in addition to cuts announced earlier in the year. The administration was scrambling to make up the money, and raising tuition was the quickest answer. Even though the entire university community cringed at the idea of such extreme tuition hikes, there seemed to be no alternative.

Now, however, the situation has changed. Instead of getting a 7 percent cut as expected, Vilsack has revised his plan and intends to cut the UI's budget by 4.3 percent, or $13.5 million. The first thing on everyone's list should be passing this break on to the students in the form of a lower tuition increase. As it stands now, the proposed 18 percent tuition increase would generate an additional $32 million for the UI. A less-painful 15 percent increase, however, would generate only $3.5 million less. This $28.5 million in additional funds from students is more than enough to compensate for the state's cuts. The rest of the university can then easily bear the rest of the financial burden.

The students are the lifeblood of this university, and with tuition rising at extreme rates every year, they are quickly being denied access to it. In order to preserve the affordability of higher education in Iowa, every effort must be made to keep tuition down. While it is tempting to raise tuition in times of budget difficulty, in the end, doing so only succeeds in prolonging the crisis by ensuring that fewer and fewer people have access to higher education. Without the tax revenues that college graduates produce, the budget crisis will only worsen.

Action in Afghanistan is a just cause

The recent protests against the bombing of Afghanistan have me puzzled. Actually, I shouldn't be puzzled, because this is the typical liberal prescription for an event such as this. That is, to find a quick and easy feel-good solution for a very complex problem. A problem such as the one the United States faces requires more consideration. My first consideration is the need to strip terrorists of any means to carry out future attacks on the United States. Punishment aside, saving lives should be our No. 1 priority. Would you rather see a couple of hundred die or thousands? Yes, these bombings that target military sites will inevitably leave some civilian casualties. However, leaving terrorists a means to attack civilian targets in the United States will inevitably lead to thousands more civilian casualties.

My second consideration is the need to oust the brutal Taliban regime. To me, it would be a greater injustice to do nothing and leave millions of Afghans subject to the Taliban's oppressive hands. Doing nothing would symbolize U.S. support for political killings, cruel and unusual punishment, and denying women basic human rights. The Taliban took power by force, and the only way to remove it is by force. Again, we have the question of whether to face a few hundred deaths because of our bombings, or thousands because of a brutal regime.

Fighting fear by finding the humanity in us all

Last semester, I spent a fair amount of time working on a 30-page psycho-biography of former U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno for my Political Psychology class. I combed through stacks of speeches and piles of books to find information supportive of my thesis — that Reno's personality affected the events that unfolded throughout her political career.

The supporting facts were not hard to find. Every speech Reno gave at law schools, every press conference she held — and even the way she lived her daily life — illustrated her belief in judgments made in morality under the law. She based her decisions on what she believed was right, and she stood firmly behind those decisions, even in the face of her numerous critics.

On Oct. 11, I met Janet Reno while she was in Iowa City. A colleague and I interviewed her for the DI. I found myself shaking the hand of a woman I felt I had already spent hours with — and essentially, I had. I knew the stories of her life from my research — from her admiration for the meticulous way her mother had built the family house to her first political success, from her early appreciation for education to her days of volunteering at an elementary school while she served as the first female attorney general of the United States.

Our interview was conducted from the back of a minivan as the dean of the law school shuttled Reno to the Sheraton Hotel. Though it was not the ideal setting for an interview with such a prominent political figure, her concise answers to our quickly fired questions served to remind me of the intellectual aptitude of this woman. Before me was a woman who had devoted more than 20 years to public service while never compromising her ideals. She still believes in the power of education, in the importance of family, and in the law as a tool for good. She remains passionate about the principles instilled in her more than 60 years ago — a passion that is too often missing from our political stage and one that we would all do well to emulate.

Amanda Mittlestadt

I also attended Reno's speech at the law building on Oct. 11, titled "Lawyers as Problem Solvers and Peacemakers." Her speech was a reiteration of her values, with lines not altogether unfamiliar to me. I had read many of the points Reno made on Oct. 11 in her speeches to the graduates of Harvard and other law schools during my research. Her convictions are unwavering, and it showed in her speech.

I used to be terrified of speaking in front of large groups. Even at my high school, which was incredibly small, I would become nervous at the prospect of giving a speech before my classmates. I have since overcome this fear thanks to the UI rhetoric program, specifically my freshman-year speaking and reading class. It afforded me the opportunity to develop my confidence in the company of complete strangers.

I also used to fear phoning people I didn't know. I would rehearse my part of the conversation several times before dialing. However, through my work in the English department and at the DI, I have now become rather phone-friendly. But I still have this irritating apprehension about meeting important people, especially people who hold top positions on the national stage — especially Janet Reno. Though I wouldn't say that I idolize Reno, I do respect her and the amazing political career she has had, and the chance to meet her personally left me feeling unusually nervous.

I expressed these fears to my colleague the day before the interview with Reno, and his response surprised me — "Why would you be nervous to meet another human being? I don't get nervous about people, only things."

His reply impressed me. And when I met Reno, I was not nervous, because she is just another person. She suffers from Parkinson's disease but has still found the strength to run for governor of Florida. She has made mistakes — show me a politician who hasn't. We are all human, working to overcome the same battles as we go through life. It took one colleague and one great woman to show me that.

Before you slight Iron Monkey as yet another futile attempt to capitalize on the recent success of martial arts movies such as Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon and The Matrix, consider this: Neither of these films would have been made if not for Iron Monkey.

Iron Monkey was originally released in 1993. The film's director, Yuen Wo Ping, served as the fight choreographer on both Crouching Tiger and The Matrix. Thanks to Miramax and Quentin Tarantino, a huge kung-fu fan, the movie has been restored and released in the United States. Set in the mid-1800s, the story focuses on a Robin Hood-like folk hero called Iron Monkey. By day he is Dr. Yang (Yu Rong-guang), a mild-mannered physician. At night, he emerges from the shadows to steal from the rich, corrupt officials governing the Chinese provinces and share the wealth with the poor.

In order to capture Iron Monkey, the sleazy Governor Cheng (James Wong) enlists the help of a brilliant martial artist named Wong Kei-ying (Donnie Yen) by holding his son captive. Cheng won't release the boy, also a talented martial artist, until Wong Kei-ying has captured Iron Monkey. But Cheng's plan backfires, as the two righteous men join forces to restore peace and justice to the town.

It all culminates in a stunning final battle that rivals Crouching Tiger's treetop sequence in which the combatants are balanced on tall wooden poles above flames. While equally remarkable, Iron Monkey's finale, with its furious kicks and rapid-fire editing, is flashier than Crouching Tiger's, which is more meditative and graceful.

Generally, this distinction can be applied to films as a whole. Iron Monkey lacks the quiet, poetic quality that Crouching Tiger had because it is more concerned with being entertaining than artistic. The plot is there merely to connect the high-flying fight scenes, unlike Crouching Tiger, which used its bal-letic fight sequences to advance its tale of love and honor across two generations.

Iron Monkey should appeal to the people who appreciated Crouching Tiger's stunts, but perhaps thought the story was too solemn and plodding. The movie is even laced with a number of funny, tongue-in-cheek moments, such as when one of Cheng's soldiers arrests a man out of suspicion that he might be the Iron Monkey — actually, the man was just scratching himself while sitting on a chair.

Iron Monkey is a must-see for fans of the genre who want to see how kung-fu should really be done, and how it was done originally, before the Hollywood hit machine stole all of the moves and shamelessly appropriated them into trash such as The Musketeer and Charlie's Angels.

Home on the range, with feminism

This is the perfect time and place for the showing of O Pioneers!, a musical about life 100 years ago on the American frontier.

The musical's message of survival, perseverance, and triumph in the Midwest is especially timely for Iowa City residents after the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11, said director Alan MacVey, the chairman of the UI theater department.

"It's very much about America and about the Midwest," he said. "It's an affirmation of the different values we share as Americans."

O Pioneers!, the first University Theatre Mainstage production of the year, opened Oct. 11 and runs through Oct. 21. The musical features UI undergraduate and graduate students, faculty, and community members.

Actor Brian Bennett, a UI graduate student in the play, said that he thinks the musical is relevant to the events that have taken place in the country within the last month.

"You see the pioneers, the people who made something out of nothing," he said. "It has the message that we will survive no matter what happens. It centers a lot on what people can do if they set their mind to it and work together."

O Pioneers!, based on Willa Cather's classic novel, is renowned for its vivid portrayal of the challenges of life on the plains. The musical chronicles the life of Alexandra Bergson, an independent and determined Swedish immigrant who overcomes hardships on the Nebraska plains in order to build a better life for herself and her family.

MacVey said the musical appeals especially to women because it focuses on a strong, independent female character during a time when most authors were writing about male cowboys, outlaws, and farmers. Cather is recognized as a writer particularly interested in women's struggles before most others were, he said.

"Willa Cather was ahead of her time," said Mollie Mook, a UI graduate student in the play. "She gives a message of the strength, beauty, and endurance of this particular woman. [Alexandra] does things that were typical of men at that time, but she still maintains her femininity."

The form of O Pioneers!, somewhere between a play and a musical, is not often seen, said MacVey. The script was written by UI alumna Darrah Cloud, who earned degrees from both the Iowa Playwrights' Workshop and the Writers' Workshop. Kim D. Sherman, a visiting lecturer at Yale University who has written music for plays in regional theaters and on Broadway, wrote the score.

"The story is simple and the characters are clear," MacVey said. "In its simplicity, there's a lot of depth. It sort of sneaks up on you."

Arizona wins Game 5

PHOENIX (AP) — Tony Womack turned disaster into delirium, and sent Curt Schilling and the Arizona Diamondbacks to the NL championship series.

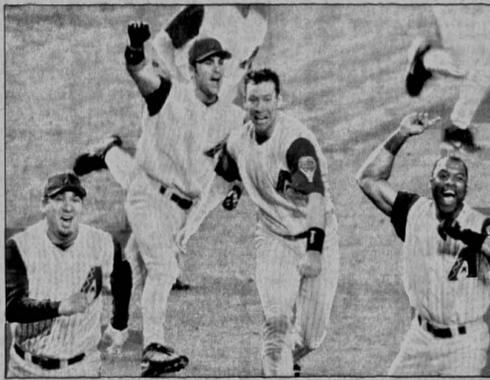

Womack failed to get down a suicide-squeeze bunt, then singled home the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning to lift the Diamondbacks over the St. Louis Cardinals 2-1 Sunday night in the deciding Game 5 of their division series.

In an awesome encore, Schilling won his second duel with Matt Morris in five days. Schilling allowed six hits, struck out nine and walked one in his third consecutive postseason complete game.

The Diamondbacks will begin their first NLCS on Tuesday at home against the Atlanta Braves.

Reggie Sanders' 447-foot home run off Morris put Arizona up 1-0 in the fourth inning. J.D. Drew's two-out homer off Schilling tied it at 1 in the eighth.

Schilling, still throwing 98 mph, struck out Edgar Renteria and Mike Matheny with a runner on second in the St. Louis ninth. After that, the drama really began.

Matt York/Associated Press

Diamondback players rush from the dugout after beating St. Louis, 2-1, in the bottom of the ninth inning of Game 5 of the National League Division Series in Phoenix, Ariz., Sunday.

Dave Veres relieved Morris to begin the inning and Matt Williams, brutalized by boos from the home crowd and hitless in 15 at-bats in the series, opened with a double — narrowly missing a home run to right field when his drive hit the bullpen fence.

Damian Miller's sacrifice bunt advanced pinch-runner Midre Cummings to third. Steve Kline relieved, and intentionally walked pinch-hitter Greg Colbrunn to put runners on first and third with one out.

Arizona manager Bob Brenly, who had used the suicide squeeze several times this season, called for it from Womack. But he couldn't make contact with a breaking ball in the dirt, and Cummings was tagged out easily.

Colbrunn moved to second on the play, and Danny Bautista replaced him as a pinch-runner.

Four pitches later, Womack slapped a single to left field. Kerry Robinson fielded the ball cleanly and made a strong throw to the plate, but had no chance to get Bautista.

Womack hit three singles in the game. He did not have an RBI in the series until the winning one.

Arizona lost in its only other playoff appearance, in the first round to the New York Mets in 1999. The Diamondbacks are in their fourth year of existence.

Morris, winless in the series despite allowing just two runs in two starts, allowed seven hits, struck out six and walked three. He threw 130 pitches in eight innings.

Schilling threw 121 in his second win in the series.

Randy Johnson was warming up in the bullpen for the Diamondbacks, but they never needed him. He'll likely start the opener against the Braves.

Hawkeyes drop second tough one

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Matt Stockdale stood in the visiting team's trailer on Oct. 13, making stabbing gestures toward his heart.

Michigan State had just beat Iowa 31-28, but he didn't believe the Spartans inflicted the most pain upon the Hawkeyes. He thought the wounds were self-induced, and he wasn't alone holding steadfast to the belief that Iowa let another winnable road game slip away.

Senior running back Ladell Betts shared similar feelings.

"I can't stand here and say the two teams we lost to are better than us," said Betts, who gained 79 rushing yards on the afternoon. "They were better than us on those particular days, but I don't know if they are necessarily better than us."

That is why the frustration levels are high among the Hawkeyes. Practices are tough. Confidence is soaring. Talent isn't an issue, but in recent weeks, all three prongs of Iowa's attack — offense, defense, and special teams — haven't played well together when it counts — on Saturday.

The Hawkeyes struggled defensively at the outset of the game against the Spartans, allowing them to score on their first three possessions. Jeff

 The Daily Iowan

Teenagers screaming their undying love for Luke Recker and UI students getting rowdy in the Hawk's Nest set the tone for the 2001-02 Iowa men's basketball season at Game Night on Oct. 12.

Young and old alike watched Iowa coaches battle intramural champions in three-on-three, but the 10,000 screaming fans came to countdown to the unveiling of a fresh Hawkeye basketball squad.

Senior Duez Henderson said he was impressed by the number of students who turned out in the Hawk's Nest.

"It's amazing to me, to get a lot of college students out on a Friday night at 11 p.m. on a Big Ten campus," Henderson said. "That says something about the excitement we're creating."

In fact, 13-year-old fans Katie Neppel, Krista Strammel, and Rachel Winkler could barely contain themselves in front of Recker, who signed his name under the marked words "I love Luke" on their matching shirts.

Swarmed for autographs, Recker said he didn't mind signing T-shirts and programs for fans.

"I love doing it, because as a kid I really enjoyed it," he said. "It's fun to make a kid happy; but I won't deny, my hand gets tired."

In the Hawk's Nest, senior Jonathan Linder came wearing a hefty fluorescent-yellow wig to show his pre-season support. Linder said he and six friends would be equipped with the "superfro" for the season's start.

Only the ticker-tape parade was missing as coaches and players were announced under fireworks for the kickoff of Iowa's 100th year of basketball. To honor the event, Iowa coach Steve Alford and alumni Kenyon Murray, Brad Lohaus, and Bobby Hanson presented an anniversary banner.

Alford thanked fans for their support and announced an invitation to "walk down memory lane" by voting for an All-Century team and favorite moments in Iowa basketball. He also said the Hawkeyes' 2001 Big Ten Tournament banner would be unveiled on Nov. 13.

Senior Reggie Evans said he was elated to be a part of the crowning of a Hawkeye basketball century.

"It's really good to be a part of history," he said. "You can't beat that. It's not going to get any better than knowing I am a part of history — and it's the first night."

Just as guard Brody Boyd's first-year play caught the attention of 12-year-old Nick Brayton, who said Boyd "had the moves," freshman Pierre Pierce established fans by winning the dunk contest.

"Fans are expecting a big season," Evans said. "The new class can see how it is and step on the court in a uniform. Everybody needs to see who the coach recruited and players from last year."

Secondary's woes costly for Hawks

Todd Brommelkamp

EAST LANSING, Mich. — It was supposed to be the other way around.

Iowa should have been the team picking on an injury-plagued Michigan State's secondary.

Instead, Iowa looked like the victim of a playground bully. The only thing Michigan State's receivers failed to do was grab Iowa's secondary and hold it upside down to shake out its lunch money.

Granted, Iowa finished with more receiving yards than Michigan State did, but the Hawks got most of theirs after the catch. The Spartans got theirs by going down field, exploiting both Iowa's lack of height in the secondary and its tendency to play a zone defense.

With much of the focus on stopping running back T.J. Duckett and slowing down star receiver Charles Rogers, the Spartans' Herb Haygood emerged from nowhere for a career-high 119 receiving yards. He also had a back-breaking 100-yard kickoff return for a score as well.

In defense of the Hawkeyes, they did hold Rogers to just one catch for 13 yards and Duckett to just 71 yards. For the second game in a row, Iowa's defensive front kept the team buoyant while the rest of the squad took on water like the Lusitania.

The Hawkeyes turned in their worst offensive showing of the season. Number-wise, Iowa finished with 364 yards of offense but at times looked clueless when it came to moving the ball.

With much of the focus heading into the game on Michigan State's lack of an experienced

Betts healthy, Hawkeyes falter

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Iowa's special teams had another difficult day on the field. The defense held up pretty well, but it failed to stop the Spartans in their first three possessions. Iowa will have to pick up the pace if it hopes to beat Indiana and Randle El this weekend.

Game quotes

"I think our effort level is good, but obviously we made a few too many mistakes to overcome," said Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz. "Special teams. Penalties on special teams. We didn't start out intensively. We didn't play like Iowa's been playing."

Indiana at Iowa
 The Hoosiers won their first Big Ten Conference game against Wisconsin on Oct. 6. On Oct. 13, Indiana lost to Illinois.
 Kick-off is at 11:10 a.m.; will be shown on KGAN.

Iowa's Kahlil Hill (3) watches as Josh Shaw (95) lands with the ball after an interception.

yards of the end zone and Bradley for longer kicks.

Both Kaeding and Bradley worked with former Iowa punter and NFL All-Pro Reggie Roby on Oct. 9. Bradley said Roby gave him several tips on improving his game and also gave him a business card. The extra work showed, as Bradley looked much better against the Spartans and avoided the problems that plagued him against Purdue.

Kaeding had not punted since his days at Iowa City West, when he handled both kicking and punting duties.

Montgomery out, Cunningham back

The defensive line has been the strength of Iowa's team this year, but the team was dealt a blow when senior lineman Jerry Montgomery sprained his ankle during the second quarter. Coach Kirk Ferentz said following the game that Montgomery would have an X-ray and his status is doubtful for Iowa's Saturday game with Indiana.

Hundred-yard hustle

When Michigan State's Herb Haygood returned an Iowa kickoff 100-yards for a touchdown in the second quarter, he became the first player to do so against the Hawkeyes since the Ford administration.

Iowa had not allowed an end-zone-to-endzone return since Wisconsin's Ira Mathews made the trek against the Hawkeyes in 1976.

Topsy-turvy on turf

The Hawks played on artificial turf for the first time this season with mixed results; last season, they went 0-3 on the surface. Many of the Hawkeyes slipped on the green carpet of Spartan Stadium during the Oct. 13 loss, but there were no injuries resulting from poor footing.

The Hawkeyes will have only one more game on an artificial surface this year when they travel to Madison to play the Badgers on Nov. 3. Michigan State plans to install natural grass following the 2001 season.

Spartans honor heroes

Playing in East Lansing for the first time since the Sept. 11 attacks, Michigan State paid homage to rescue workers involved in the relief effort.

Two members of the New York Police Department and two New York Fire Department members were in attendance for the game and were presented with a check for more than $100,000, donated by the crowd. The money will be split between the two departments.

Teams begin trail to championship

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — When Damon Duval's 44-yard field goal split the uprights Oct. 13 night in Auburn, Ala., hundreds of football fans at a packed restaurant here stood and cheered the Tigers' 23-20 victory over Florida.

Florida State might have lost to Miami a few hours earlier, but Seminoles fans everywhere were feeling a little better knowing the mighty Gators had fallen, too.

In Florida, you're either "for the Gators, or against them," as coach Steve Spurrier likes to say. So in this state where national titles are usually on the line whenever two of the three teams play each other, the Gators' loss had even more impact than Miami knocking the Seminoles out of contention with a 49-27 win at Doak Campbell Stadium.

The halftime half-dozen still have league games against each other, and the results probably will determine who plays in the Bowl Championship Series' title game at the Rose Bowl on Jan. 3. But these are the teams with the best chances to play in Pasadena.

But because the first BCS standings don't come out until Oct. 22, put away the calculators. Stop trying to figure out strength of schedule, power ratings and bonus points that are part of the BCS formula.

Here's a guide to which teams have the easiest road to Pasadena:
 1. Virginia Tech: The Hokies should be 10-0 when the Hurricanes visit Blacksburg, Va., where the 'Canes haven't won since 1992. Quarterback Grant Noel has been a capable replacement for Michael Vick, and he has a strong running game plus star receiver/returner Andre Davis. The defense is No. 1 in the nation, allowing 185.6 yards and 7.3 points per game. Also, Miami looked sloppy at times against the Seminoles, being called for 15 penalties for 125 yards. Remaining schedule: Syracuse, at Pittsburgh, at Temple, at Virginia, Miami.

2. Miami: The 'Canes should also cruise to 10-0 by Dec. 1. Ken Dorsey has been unflappable at quarterback and is a top Heisman Trophy contender. The defense needs discipline, but new coach Larry Coker plans to make sure his team stays focused with four of the next five games at home. Visiting are West Virginia, Temple, Syracuse and Washington. The road game is at Boston College.

3. UCLA: Now that they've beaten Washington — 35-13 on Saturday — the Bruins' toughest games are at Washington State on Nov. 3, followed by the Oregon game, crosstown rival USC, and the season finale against Arizona State. With Heisman contender DeShaun Foster coming off a record 301-yard effort and a defense allowing just 12 points per game, UCLA is ready for its second title run in four years.

"We are shooting for the national championship; we just can't get ahead of ourselves," Foster said.

4. Oregon: Before traveling to UCLA, the Ducks still have to get past Stanford on Saturday and survive a visit to Washington State. After the Bruins, it's the Civil War game against Oregon State on Dec. 1 in Eugene.

5. Oklahoma: The defending champs have a 19-game winning streak, but a tough trip lies ahead even if they beat the Huskers in two weeks at Lincoln. Two weeks later, it's Texas A&M and then on to the Big 12 title game, where Nebraska is likely to show up again.

IOWA SPORTS

Volleyball squad on downward spiral

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team came home from an extremely tough road trip this weekend with two losses, 3-1 to No. 10 Ohio State on Oct. 12 and 3-0 to No. 11 Penn State on Oct. 13. The Hawkeyes extended their losing streak to 10 games, dropping their record to 2-13 overall, 0-8 Big Ten. Ohio State improved to 12-1 overall, 6-1 Big Ten, and the Nittany Lions upped their mark to 13-3 overall, 6-2 in the Big Ten.

Coach Rita Buck-Crockett and the rest of the Hawkeyes, although not happy with the losing streak, remain positive about their recently improved play.

"I think that we did some good things," Buck-Crockett said. "We went there with some goals set, and the majority of the team met their goals."

Against Ohio State, the Hawkeyes started slowly and lost the first game, 30-22. The second game was a much more positive experience for the Hawkeyes — Iowa beat the Buckeyes, 30-28, and came away with increased confidence about its team play.

"It was so good for the women to see," Buck-Crockett said. "They realized that we can play with the best. We didn't sustain it the whole match, but just to know that it can be done was a big step for us."

The Buckeyes put the hammer down after the break, taking games three and four by scores of 30-17 and 30-11 to win the match.

Senior Sara Meyermann had a field day against Ohio State. She racked up a match-high 22 kills, 11 digs, and three service aces, all of which led the Hawkeyes. The statline marked Meyermann's seventh double-double of the season. Sophomore Renee Hill collected 28 assists in the loss.

Penn State swept the Hawkeyes by scores of 30-15, 30-18, and 31-29. The tight third-game score again showed Hawkeye improvement on the court. Iowa should have won the game, Buck-Crockett said, but became a victim of circumstance.

"We happened to be in the wrong rotation at the wrong time to win that game," she said.

Meyermann again led the Hawkeyes in kills, this time collecting 12 for the match. Hill posted 20 assists and nine kills, and junior Kelli Chesnut topped the team in digs with nine against the Nittany Lions.

Buck-Crockett remained steadfast in praise of her young team's improvement, saying a spirit of confidence has been kindled within the team — even through the losing streak.

"I've said all along that we're going to win some, and we're going to lose some," she said. "I'm still waiting for the wins. But I do feel like we're moving forward."

Soccer team drops two

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

The soccer ball behaved like a boomerang Sunday in Iowa's 3-1 loss to Ohio State. Throughout the game, the two teams fought the gusty wind from the west, but the wind seemed to be on the Buckeyes' side. The breeze caused a chill through the crowd and consequently through the Hawkeyes.

"We wanted it with us in the first half, in the hopes of getting an early goal," junior midfielder Julie Atkocaitus said. "But that didn't happen."

It was actually the Buckeyes who scored first on Sunday, with precise passing to forward Lisa Grub streaking through the middle. Grub eluded Hawkeye defenders, netting her sixth goal of the season.

After a few chances to score sailed just wide, the Hawkeyes' Rennice Sherard finally scored with six minutes left in the half to pull even with the Buckeyes.

However, Ohio State wasn't done yet. At the 41-minute mark, Lindsay Eckles scored on a breakthrough.

"I think once we got behind, it was more difficult to come from behind and battle the wind, too," coach Wendy Logan said. "We put ourselves in that position by giving up soft goals in the first half. Poor decision-making led up to those goals."

Ohio State scored its third goal rather quickly in the second half, when Grub scored her second goal of the game. Iowa goalkeeper Britta Voegel knocked the shot to the ground, but when she landed on it, the ball spit into the back of Iowa's goal.

Then, with the wind picking up speed, the Hawkeyes were in an even more difficult position.

"When we got down by two, we had to change formations," Logan said. "We went into desperation mode."

With the Hawkeyes falling to 5-8 overall, 3-4 in the Big Ten, Logan said the team is at a crossroads.

"The players understand the system, and they know their roles in the system," she said. "We need to find a little emotional fortitude, bring what we need to do onto the field, and find that final emotion to win."

Atkocaitus also said that it is lack of heart, not tactics, that is plaguing the Hawkeyes.

"In the areas of unity and tactical skills we are where we need to be," she said. "We just need to have the heart that we are lacking."

While the Ohio State game was named the most important game of the season by Logan, the Hawkeyes also dropped a game, 3-1, to No. 7 Penn State on Oct. 12.

Iowa recorded its only goal of the game on a penalty kick by Linzy Wolman, her first goal of the season.

The two games rounded out Iowa's Big Ten season at home. They are left to face conference foes Purdue, Indiana, and Illinois on the road. Logan said the Hawkeyes will probably have to win two of those three games if they hope to make it to the Big Ten Tournament.

Women's cross-country finishes in eighth place

By Ali Noller
The Daily Iowan

Despite treacherously muddy conditions and a brisk 58-degree temperature, the women's cross-country team finished in eighth place at the Parkside Invitational on Oct. 13.

Indiana lead the field of 30 teams, winning the meet with 62 team points. Wisconsin-Oshkosh finished second with 82 points.

Eszter Erdelyi of Central Methodist had the winning individual time, 19:34, more than a minute slower than an average winning time for a Division I race. Jenni Goebel of Illinois at Chicago finished second in 18:33.

Georgia Millward was again consistent for the Hawkeyes, earning a 27th-place finish in 19:34. Coach Joan Hansen said Millward is the benchmark for the performances of the other team members.

"Millward continues to improve with each race, and the other runners improve behind her," Hansen said.

Two Hawkeyes showed drastic improvement among the field of 325 runners.

Michelle Sokol finished in 31st place with a time of 19:38, improving 28 seconds on her previous season best time.

"Michelle was able to move closer to Georgia, finishing only four seconds behind her despite the horrible conditions," Hansen said.

Jenni Capista also ran a noteworthy race, finishing in 114th place in 20:56. Capista improved her previous season best time by 37 seconds.

Other Hawkeye finishers included Atalie Barber in 42nd place, Katie Donlon in 49th, and Michelle Lahann in 60th.

"When the other women turn in the performances they are capable of, the team will show a much better finish," Hansen said.

Ericka Roberts and Amanda Tuttle also competed for the Hawkeyes.

"This course was extremely challenging and will make the Big Ten championships a fast-racing phenomenon," Hansen said. "We are really looking forward to the Big Tens."

The Hawkeyes will return to Champaign, Ill., to compete at the Big Ten Championships on Oct. 28.

IOWA SPORTS BRIEFS

Rowing struggles through weather

Whitecaps and thrashing wind hindered the performance of the Iowa women's rowing team at the Head of the Rock Regatta Sunday.

The Hawkeyes struggled in the last 15 meters of the race as they battled a strong headwind and also battled each other as they struggled to row as a team.

"We had a lot of little situations that got in the way of our performance," said coach Mandy Kowal. "A few times, the rowers had to stop rowing, realign, and start over. We are going to work in the next two weeks to handle these situations better."

The Iowa A Pairs team of Sarah Zulewski and Julia Kirkland finished in first place despite being stopped in the middle of the race by a ski boat. The team finished nine seconds ahead of the second-place team of Notre Dame, a margin that could have been larger if not for the interruption.

In the Open Eight, Iowa A finished in third place in 16:36, behind Wisconsin and Notre Dame, which finished 16:12 and 16:15, respectively. Iowa B finished in 13th place out of 20 entries in the Open Eight competition.

The Hawkeyes struggled in the Open Four race, with Iowa A finishing in seventh and Iowa B finishing in 10th place. Host team Wisconsin won the race in 17:20.

Iowa next competes at the host team at the Head of the Iowa Regatta on Oct. 28. The 11th annual regatta features schools and clubs from around the Midwest.

Men's swimming dominates first meet

The Iowa men's swimming team dove into its first meet of the season and dominated the field at the October Shootout, which was held Oct. 13 through Sunday.

Three Hawkeyes claimed the throne for each of their individual events.

Senior Marko Milenkovic won the 200-yard backstroke event, sophomore Andrei Prada won the 100-yard breaststroke, and freshman Joe Lureau won the 200-yard breaststroke.

Iowa's best event on the weekend was the 100-yard breaststroke. In addition to Prada's win, the next five placers were Hawkeyes. Junior Chris Brunson finished second, then Lureau, freshmen Elliot Ptasnik and Cal Shelangoski, and finally Milenkovic in sixth.

In day one of the competition, the Hawkeyes finished three in the top five in the 100-yard freestyle. Prada finished third (48.16), then freshman Alex Boyce swam to a fourth-place finish (48.66), just beating out fifth-place Andrei Ciurca (48.67).

Three Hawks also finished in the top six of the 50-yard freestyle. Boyce grabbed third place with a 21.86 finish, nudging out Prada, who finished in 21.98 seconds. Ciurca finished in sixth with a time of 22.40.

Iowa has next week off from competition to prepare for its first chance to prove itself in a collegiate meet when it travels to Wisconsin on Oct. 27.

Men's tennis disappointed

The Purdue Invitational wasn't everything the Iowa men's tennis wanted in a competition.

Inclement weather on Oct. 13 and Sunday postponed the tournament, pushing back and eliminating some matches. Flight brackets were also altered because of the absence of some team members.

Hawkeye tennis coach Steve Houghton was disappointed that his players did not all receive the guaranteed three singles and two doubles matches in the meet.

"With more matches, we can make more observations on how they match up with each other," he said. "Coaching-wise, we get an idea of where things fall apart and can discover how to prevent that."

Results from the nine players were scattered from first to eighth place.

Pete Rose defeated Western Michigan's Daniel Grupp, 6-3, 6-4, in the B Flight title match.

In the A Flight, Hunter Skogman played through the third round, defeating Purdue's Seth McKinley 6-1, 6-1. His fifth-place game was also canceled. Justin Gaard lost to Lovre Brajkovic from Indiana State in the second round.

Jake Wilson defeated Justin Kates from Western Michigan, 6-1, 6-1, but lost in the championship round to Vedran Vidovic from Indiana State in three (4-6, 6-2, 6-1).

Because Stuart Waters and Petar Mandic competed last weekend at the All-American Tournament, the duo did not travel with the team to West Lafayette, Ind.

Field-hockey team happy with victory

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

Dominating possession, statistics, and scoring led the way to a 2-1 Iowa field-hockey victory Sunday at Northwestern.

"We're obviously happy with the outcome," coach Tracey Griesbaum said. "At this point in the season, we'll take any win we can. We're standing solidly in the middle of the pack now."

The Hawkeyes (8-3 overall, 2-2 Big Ten) excelled in every aspect of the game, setting the tone early with a goal from Tiffany Leister in the first half. The goal off a penalty corner was assisted by Maria Merluzzi and Lauren Edwards and was Leister's fifth on the season.

Iowa kept the ball in Northwestern's scoring circle for the majority of the first half, taking 11 shots-on-goal in the game.

In the second half, adverse weather conditions delayed the game for 25 minutes.

"We had to get back on the bus to wait it out," Griesbaum said. "I think it hurt us; we definitely had momentum and dominated through the first half."

But the hurt didn't last too long, as Hawkeye forward Pattie Gillern extended the lead to 2-0 on an assist from teammate Gina Carr.

The Wildcat offense responded with a goal from Diane Provencier at 15:01, third-consecutive penalty corner. Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week Barb Weinberg registered her second conference start and made two saves on the day.

Late in the game, the Hawkeyes made twin breakaway opportunities within three minutes, but the Northwestern goalkeeper held her own to deny the offensive each time.

Iowa returns home for the remainder of the season this week. In the weekend's doubleheader, the Hawkeyes face Indiana (1-10, 0-3) on Friday and Southwest Missouri State (8-6, 6-0) on Oct. 21.

Griesbaum said she expects a weekend of tough competition from both opponents, but the Hawks will focus more on the conference game against the Hoosiers.

"Indiana played No. 9 Michigan State last weekend and lost, 3-2, in overtime, so Indiana is for real," Griesbaum said. "They're much improved as a second-year program. This week will be geared toward preparing for Friday's game."

Men's C.C. lands 18th out of 36

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

Heading into the Oct. 13 Pre-National Invitational, and Iowa men's cross-country team was excited to have its top runners toeing the line for the first time since the season opener on Sept. 8.

However, the Hawkeyes came home from the meet in Greenville, S.C., disappointed — they placed 18th in the 36-team field.

"We went in there with high hopes, and we didn't really come through," senior Shaun Allen said.

Junior Joe Welter's 79th-place finish and freshman Dan Haut's 86th-place finish led the Hawkeyes. The two ran 25:39 and 25:46, respectively, on the 8,000-meter course.

But their strong performances were overshadowed by a bad day for the team's top three runners, seniors Shaun Allen, Trent Corey, and Nick Nordheim. The three finished 115th, 123rd, and 156th, marking the Hawkeyes' lowest three finishes.

"It was a bad day; nobody was injured," Allen said. "It was just a matter of not taking care of things once we got there."

The meet was Corey and Nordheim's first meet back since the season opener, and the Hawkeyes were excited to have the duo back in uniform for the weekend's meet. Disappointment over missed chances made the trip home long one, Allen said.

"You don't travel that far to go and get beat by that many teams," he said.

The next four weeks will make or break the season for Iowa, in terms of the Big Ten Championships and NCAA Regionals. The Hawkeyes have two weeks to put this weekend's performance behind them — the Big Ten Championships will take place on Oct. 28 in Champaign, Ill.

The team's goal of qualifying for the NCAA Championships has not changed, Allen said, but there is a lot of work to be done between now and then.

Stockdale says this Iowa team will come back fired up

GAME STORY

Smoker picked Iowa's zone defense apart, completing nine of his first 11 attempts for 149 yards and two touchdowns.

"We weren't crisp," Hawkeye coach Kirk Ferentz said. "The biggest thing is we didn't tackle. Usually when you aren't playing good defense, that's a factor. We were kind of throwing our body instead of bringing our arms with us. That's uncharacteristic."

However, the Hawkeyes found themselves down by just seven, 28-21, heading into the locker room at halftime after Iowa's offense capitalized on senior Tim Dodge's blocked punt with less than two minutes remaining in the second quarter.

Iowa's defense emerged from the tunnel settled, holding Michigan State to just 34 yards in the third quarter and three points for the entire second-half, but the Hawkeyes' offense skidded to a halt.

It did manage 80 yards in the third quarter, but sustained no drives, and the Hawks only crossed mid-field twice. The fourth quarter presented more opportunities for Iowa to close the gap, but two interceptions and a missed field goal ended three separate drives.

With 57 seconds left in the game, and the Hawkeyes trailing by 10, Iowa went 58 yards in six plays for a touchdown capped off by McCann's second rushing score of the afternoon.

But six seconds on the clock didn't allow Iowa many options. In a last-ditch effort to get the football so sophomore Nate Kaeding could attempt a field goal and tie the game, the Hawkeyes used a squib kick with hopes for a better field position. The Spartans snagged the kick-off. On the ensuing snap, Smoker took a knee, and Iowa's hopes for a win were dashed.

After the game, the faces and voices of Ferentz and his players clearly displayed frustration, but they also remained confident. Ferentz said this team will win. It will take an increased focus and intensity, which he believes is within his men.

So does Stockdale. The loss wounded Iowa's heart, but he seemed sure the pain will be temporary.

"More than anything I think guys are going to come back this week a little pissed off and fired up," Stockdale said. "When you take two close losses on the road and lose them in the fourth quarter, that's frustrating."

Yankees win, keep dynasty alive

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — This dynasty just won't die.

Playing with poise and pride in the face of postseason elimination, Bernie Williams and the New York Yankees escaped Oakland with their second victory in two days — and forced a decisive Game 5 back in their ballpark.

Williams drove in five runs as the Yankees' offense finally emerged from its slumber, tying the AL division series at two games each with a 9-2 victory over the Athletics on Sunday.

With two gutsy wins at the Coliseum — where Oakland had won 17 straight — the three-time World Series champs return to Yankee Stadium for a deciding game tonight. Roger Clemens will face Mark Mulder in a rematch of the opener.

The day was disastrous for the young A's, who lost their fourth-straight home playoff game to the Yankees and were forced into another cross-country trip. What's more, cleanup hitter Jermaine Dye broke his leg on a foul ball in the third inning.

Last year, the Athletics beat Clemens on the road in Game 4, sending their first-round series back to Oakland. The Yankees built a big lead and hung on for a 7-5 victory.

After hanging on for a 1-0 win on Oct. 13, New York had no problem evening the series on a balmy California afternoon. The Yankees were baffled by the A's starters in the series' first three games, but they chased Cory Lidle in the fourth inning.

Williams had a two-run double in the third inning and a two-run single in the fourth, connecting for the big hits that neither team had seemed capable of getting early in the series. He added an RBI double in the ninth and scored.

While the Yankees scored early and often against Lidle, Orlando Hernandez — who didn't win a game until September in a regular season filled with injuries and inconsistency — used his veteran guile to survive for 5 2-3 innings.

El Duque faced his biggest test in the first inning after the A's put runners on first and third with no outs. He retired Jason Giambi and Dye on popups and, after a walk loaded the bases, got Jeremy Giambi on a foul pop.

Those three outs made Oakland 0-for-26 with runners in scoring position in the series.

Hernandez gave up eight hits, but limited Oakland to two runs while constantly pitching out of trouble.

Mariners 6, Indians 2

CLEVELAND — Whew. Take a deep breath, Seattle.

Just when it looked like the Mariners would tie the 1906 Chicago Cubs again, rookie Ichiro Suzuki got another big hit, and baseball's best team this season got the biggest of its 118 wins.

Suzuki's RBI single highlighted a three-run rally in the seventh inning as the Mariners forced a decisive Game 5 back in Seattle with a 6-2 win over the Cleveland Indians in the AL playoffs.

"Now, we take it to our house," center fielder Mike Cameron said.

Seattle, which won 116 games during the regular season, was perilously close to doing the same thing the '06 Cubs — the team whose wins record the Mariners matched — did 95 years ago. The Cubs didn't win the World Series that year.

But showing the resilience that made them almost unstoppable since April, the Mariners came back in the seventh off Bartolo Colon (1-1), who shut them out for eight innings in Game 1 and blanked them for the first six on Sunday after a 2-hour, 20-minute rain delay.

"We battled back from adversity all season," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said. "We weren't going to lose because of the pressure. We were going to lose because the other team outplayed us."

Suzuki went 3-for-5, and Edgar Martinez hit a two-run homer in the ninth for the Mariners, who were blown out 17-2 and played possibly their worst game all season in Game 3 on Oct. 13.

"We got our butts kicked," second baseman Bret Boone said. "But remember, I said this team is ready."

Freddy Garcia (1-1) pitched 6 1/2 innings for the win.

Jamie Moyer, who beat the Indians in Game 2 and went 2-0 against them in the regular season, will start Game 5 for the Mariners today at Safeco Field against Chuck Finley.

"I'm elated about getting to pitch in a fifth game," said Finley, who waited 15 years to make his first postseason start in Game 2 and gave up a pair of two-run homers in the first. "I started thinking about that after Game 2. I had the feeling we might be back in Seattle anyway."

Before Game 4, a relaxed Piniella was confident his team would go home to play another day.

Hawkeyes need to start turning the tables

BROMMELKAMP

secondary, Iowa instead chose to focus on running short sideline routes. Iowa finished with 22 first downs, thanks in large part to those short passes, but when the Hawkeyes needed a big play, they couldn't pull the trigger.

Kyle McCann visibly had his worst game of the season on Oct. 13. Bad enough that he competed only 22 of 41 passes with four interceptions, but he also routinely missed open receivers downfield. When he did go downfield, it was into coverage. A fine example — his final interception of the game on a pass intended for Chris Oliver in the end zone. With just over six minutes left in the game, that interception should have put Iowa away for good.

However, Iowa fought back, only to be the victim of its own miscues. The little things once again became big nightmares for Iowa. Costly penalties throughout the game, terrible clock management, and a missed field goal in the fourth quarter combined to sound the final death knell in Spartan Stadium.

On the Hawkeyes' next to last possession, they drained the play clock before running two plays that yielded few results. Ladell Betts kept the clock running with a five-yard gain, and McCann ran off 24 seconds of the clock before dumping an incomplete pass. The ensuing play was Nate Kaeding's 36-yard field-goal attempt, which according to holder David Bradley would have been on the money if not for the swirling winds in the south end of the stadium.

Iowa did get the ball back, but with just six seconds on the clock. Little time for much of anything except a squib kick and a prayer.

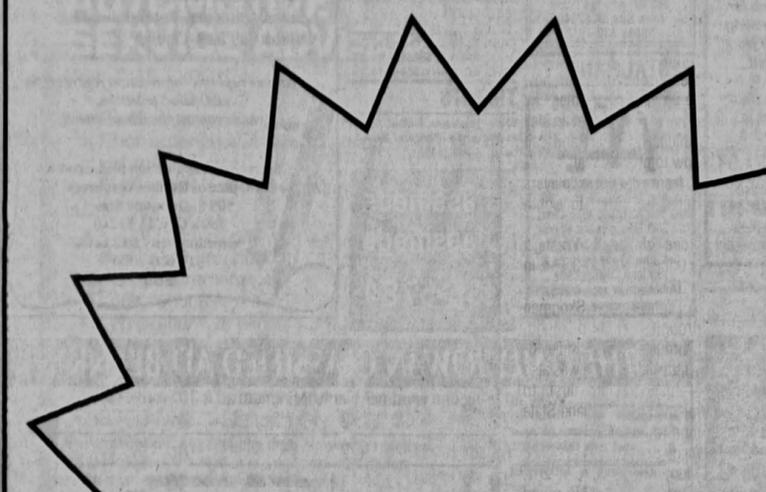

For the second-consecutive week, Iowa walked off an opponent's turf ahead in most statistical categories, yet behind in the only place it mattered — on the scoreboard. Fans could just as easily be looking forward to a 5-0 team playing Indiana Saturday, rather than a 3-2 squad.

Losing to Purdue was a reality check. Losing to the Spartans was rubbing salt into an open wound. It's time for the Hawkeyes to be the ones turning the table on their opponents.

Tyson looking for fight

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

Mike Tyson says he needs two more bouts before getting a heavyweight title shot. "Two more, and I'll be ready," the former undisputed champion said Oct. 13, when he stopped Brian Nielsen after six rounds in Copenhagen, Denmark.

There's no way that will happen.

Barring away-from-boxing problems, Tyson's next fight will be against the winner of the Nov. 17 match between WBC-IBF champion Hasim Rahman and Lennox Lewis.

The Rahman-Lewis winner must make a mandatory World Boxing Council defense against the top available contender, and Tyson is ranked No. 1 despite not having fought in 51 weeks before Oct. 13.

If Tyson were not available, the challenger could be Vitaly Klitschko of Ukraine, currently ranked No. 3 by the WBC, behind Tyson and Lewis.

Tyson, though, will be available.

He is the opponent both Rahman and Lewis need, and they will produce the payday he needs. Rahman or Lewis vs. Klitschko would be a blash fight as far as the public is concerned.

Tyson is rarely blash. He cut Nielsen over his left eye in the second round and dropped him in the third. The referee finally ended the fight after the sixth round with the Dane still in his corner, his eye swollen shut.

Tyson also will be available because of his age. He could be 36 by the time he fights either Rahman or Lewis, even if he doesn't have that fight or two he says he wants beforehand.

Another reason to put Tyson in a title fight right away is that his popularity isn't what it was. He is no longer "the baddest man on the planet." It is not as much fun for people to root for Tyson to lose ... because he has lost.
