Gen. helps vets celebrate holiday

By Vess Mitev
The Daily Iowan

The military campaign to retaliate for the attacks in New York and Washington will be a whole new ball game, but the United States has thus far followed a sound strategy, two retired top Defense officials said. It will be difficult to measure the success of the war against terrorism in concrete terms, and the conflict will last for years, predicted retired Maj. Gen. Stewart Wallace and retired Maj. Gen. Kenneth Leuer. "Terrorism is unlike warfare that we've known in the past," said Wallace, who was in Iowa City for a Veterans Day banquet. "It attacks a different part of society — civilians — so we have to deal with it in a different way."

The most important thing the United States can do now, the 1968 UI graduate said, is to realize the nation is in this for the long run.

"Our campaign is measured, steady, and consistent, and that's what we need," he said, adding that despite protests, a military retaliation is the proper course of action.

"Terrorists will hit and run again. They will wait until

Companies cut back on UI recruiting

By Tyler Baldwin
The Daily Iowan

A total of 14 high-profile companies have canceled recruiting trips to the UI this semester, leaving scant prospects for many graduates in a time of economic slowdown, experts say. The overall number of companies visiting the university for recruiting purposes has also plunged by 28 percent from last fall, officials said.

"It is definitely a different time from what it was a year ago," said Cathy Colony Bunnell, the director of Engineering Career Services.

The companies that canceled recruiting trips to the university — such as Microsoft, Sprint Finance, and H&R Block — would have done so whether the Sept. 11 attacks had happened or not, said Jerry Paschal, the executive director of the Career Center in the Tippie College of Business.

The slowing economy is mainly to blame, he said, and it has affected those seeking positions in accountant consulting the most. Four of the 14 companies that canceled visits were

Costs pile up in terrorism battle

By Calvin Woodward
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A U.S. helicopter lost in Afghanistan a week ago cost up to twice as much as the government spends yearly on scenic byways. Each cruise missile is worth several American homes.

The total expense of the Afghan war may be nearly as hard to find as people hiding in Afghan caves. By one estimate, the military assault is costing $500 million to $1 billion a month — and that's in addition to the $1 billion in promised U.S. economic assistance to Pakistan and debt relief for the country.

The Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments, a private research group that closely examines the cost of war, offered that monthly figure. Precision is impossible without knowing more about how many bombs are being dropped and what is happening with U.S. forces on the ground, among other variables.

Mixed results in Florida-vote analysis

By Robert Tanner and Sharon L. Crenson
Associated Press

A vote-by-vote review of untallied ballots in the 2000 Florida presidential election indicates George W. Bush would have narrowly prevailed in the partial recounts sought by Al Gore, but Gore might have reversed the outcome — by the barest of margins — had he pursued and gained a complete statewide recount.

Bush eventually won Florida, and thus the White House, by 537 votes out of more than 6 million cast. But questions about the uncounted votes lingered.

Almost a year after that cliffhanger conclusion, eight news organizations, including the Associated Press, sponsored the most thorough review to date of more than 175,000 disputed ballots. The findings underscored that the prize of the U.S. presidency came down to an almost unimaginably small number of votes.

The new data also suggested that Gore followed a legal strategy after Election Day that would have led to his defeat even if it had not been rejected by the U.S. Supreme Court. Gore sought a recount of a relatively small portion of the state's disputed ballots, while the review indicates his only chance lay in a course he advocated publicly but did not pursue in court — a full statewide recount of all Florida's untallied votes.

"You've got to accept it, and move the bitterness aside, and move ahead," a key adviser to Gore, Carter Eskew, said Sunday. He said, however, that the results backed up the conviction of Democrats that their man had won. Said Bush Press Secretary Ari Fleischer: "The election was settled a year ago, President Bush won, and the voters have long since moved on."

Against the backdrop of the disputed Nov. 7, 2000, election, the news organizations set out earlier this year to examine as many as possible of the ballots set aside as either undervotes or overvotes. Undervotes involved approximately 62,000 ballots on

Copyright Complaints Increase

The request for reduced use of file sharing programs comes after the number of complaints about copyright violations increase 10-fold.

Dorm downloaders clog Ethernet

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

UI students who live in dormitories must curtail their use of programs that download music and videos or face a ban on those programs, officials warn.

Ethernet connections in the residence halls have been congested as students increasingly use such programs as KaZaA, Morpheus, and BearShare, officials said. Major congestion occurs when outside computers download files from machines hooked to the residence-halls system, resulting in slower connections, officials said.

"Our goal is not to ban programs like these but instead to promote responsible use so that further action is not needed," said Steve Fleagle, the UI director of Telecommunications and Network Services.

The warning came as the number of formal complaints to the university from copyright holders, such as Sony, has risen from four last year to more than 40 since the beginning of this year, Fleagle said.

Music and video files can be pirated by others as long as downloading programs are left open on computers, clogging the networks, he said.

"Even if you aren't using your machine, others may be downloading files from your computer and generating large amounts of network traffic," Fleagle said, adding that students should shut off their computers to avoid generating excess traffic.

The university said it is soliciting recommendations from students — which it plans to make public — on how to cut back the excessive traffic on the network.

"If you choose to use these kinds of file-sharing programs, please use them in a responsible manner until those recommendations are available so that the situation doesn't become critical," Fleagle said.

Upgrading the Ethernet capabilities to accommodate the congestion could cost at least $1 million; maintaining Ethernet currently costs approximately $500,000 per year.

Students who keep files open — permitting excessive downloading — could be disciplined. Information Technology Services officials will pinpoint the location of excessive or illegal downloading and notify residence-hall officials. Punishments will range

Iowa student coalition looks to increase funding for education

By Jennifer Sturm
The Daily Iowan

A coalition of student leaders from across Iowa elected officials to lead a group that will lobby lawmakers to make higher education a priority.

But some of the nine student representatives from community, private, and public colleges who met at the UI on Nov. 10 were uninformed about some higher-education issues, said UI Student Government Vice President Dan Rossi.

One student was unaware that Gov. Tom Vilsack was up for election next year. Others expressed surprise when they learned that the cost of tuition for nonresident students at the UI — $11,544 — was less than some other states' in-state tuition.

"I think one of the main goals right now is to do realistic research to see just where we should be going," Rossi said.

UISG President Nick Klenske organized the Iowa Student Association — the first group of its kind — to mobilize Iowa student leaders in an effort to lobby state legislators. The group will research how to increase public awareness about the importance of education.

The coalition was formed because students have been unsuccessful in conveying their concerns to lawmakers. The group will travel to the Statehouse in Des Moines to lobby for funding and push higher education into the forefront of gubernatorial debates next year, Rossi said.

However, some legislators say past student behavior is one cause of state lawmakers turning a deaf ear.

Sen. Steve King, R-Kiron, said he once overheard UI students at a Statehouse lunch discussing Spring Break plans with another legislator, a situation that led him to rethink the students' financial situations. The students, who were lobbying lawmakers for funding, were also wearing T-shirts with the word "regents" misspelled.

"Every student had a place that required a significant amount of money to travel to, making us question their motives," King said.

To base funding for higher education on previous students' actions is "ridiculous," said Sen. Joe Bolkcom, D-Iowa City, who added that students are not being taken seriously right now but will be once they are organized.

"I think the coalition is a great idea," he said.

The coalition will next meet in January, and additional schools will be added in February. A representative from each community, private, and public institution of higher education is being sought to serve on the coalition.

"Right now, we are setting the groundwork," Rossi said. "We are trying to get people aware to have a large-scale voice."

Peres: U.S., Israel are on same side

By Sara Faiwell
The Daily Iowan

WASHINGTON — Israel's top leaders said Sunday they support the United States in its war against terrorism, comparing the situation with the conflict they face with Palestinians.

"[We are in the] same war, with the same direction and the same determination," Israel's Foreign Minister Shimon Peres told 4,000 Jewish delegates who gathered in the nation's capital Sunday evening.

"All of us stand by Bush's side for the reason there is no other side," said Peres, speaking to the United Jewish Communities General Assembly Conference.

In a video address from Jerusalem, Prime Minister Ariel Sharon also commended the United States on its campaign against terrorists. Sharon was originally scheduled to speak at the conference, but he said he was unable to attend because of security considerations.

"The struggle against terrorism is also Israel's struggle," he said. "Mr. President, Israel is your ally. Israel has been fighting Arab terrorism for 120 years."

Peres called for Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat to "stop talking and start doing," saying Israel is not interested in seeing Palestinian people suffer and that Arafat should be judged by his deeds and not his words.

"The only thing that holds back a solution ... is terror," Peres said. "We want to stop being their enemies and start being friends."

The conference, the largest gathering of Jewish leaders from North America and Israel, runs this weekend through Tuesday. Forums and speakers addressed delegates on Jewish-Muslim campus relations and Israel and Jewish campus activism.

Speakers during the weekend included Peres, Minister of Knesset Avshalom Vilan, and Deputy Foreign Minister Michael Melchior. Homeland Security Director Tom Ridge, President Bush, Secretary of Health and Human Services Tommy Thompson, and others are scheduled to speak Tuesday.

Vilan, a member of the opposition Meretz Party, said Israel needs to take risks to achieve peace, criticizing Sharon for a lack of an effort finding a compromise with Palestinians.

He called the settlements established in the West Bank and Gaza territories a "strategic mistake" and said the only solution to the conflict is through diplomatic means.

"The only game in town is to find a territorial compromise where each side will live in its own space," he said.

Amish unruffled by terrorism crisis

Associated Press

KALONA, Iowa — Despite a lifestyle that shuns radio and television, even Iowa's Amish community was made aware of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks that brought down the World Trade Center towers and damaged the Pentagon.

Truman Miller, a member of the Old Order Amish sect, said he got the news that morning from a neighbor who had a television.

"It was right about the time when it happened," Miller, 75, said. "It was discussed quite a bit among our people."

But while the Sept. 11 attacks, the anthrax attacks, and military strikes in Afghanistan have left many in the nation on edge, the Amish community remains largely unstirred.

Some of this might be because of Amish rules against television, meaning few of them would have seen the footage of hijacked planes crashing into the World Trade Center towers. But some Amish also credit their faith with helping them remain calm.

"We're concerned about it," Miller said. "But we feel we have God. He will provide. He will take care of us."

But even in the Amish community, where travel by horse-drawn buggies is common, there have been some ripple effects of the Sept. 11 attacks.

Rudy Brenneman, who operates a welding shop and sells toy wagons along Iowa Highway 1, said he had few sales right after the attacks.

"I didn't have very many stop and look that week," he said. "It might be off a little bit still, but I don't know if that's why."

Brenneman said he has also received a card from the post office informing him of how to handle suspicious mail.

"I'm sure there's some who are a little bit worried about what's going on," he said. "It doesn't do me any good to sit here and worry about it. There's not much we can do anyway."

And while a wave of patriotism has caused many Americans to proudly display the American flag, the Amish have not. They believe in being loyal to God.

But while avoiding military service and overt signs of patriotism, the Amish say they still support the government as it responds to the terrorist attacks.

"We believe in being obedient to the government," Miller said, commenting on the difficult task President Bush has before him. "We should pray for our government. I think that is our duty."

U.S. wants missile deal with Putin at summit

By Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When Russian President Vladimir Putin makes his first visit to the White House on Tuesday, President Bush hopes he can overcome Russian objections to his missile-defense plans with promises of new cuts in the U.S. nuclear arsenal.

What the two presidents can accomplish the next day at Bush's Texas ranch — over a chuck-wagon picnic with crooning cowboys — is less tangible but perhaps more important to Bush's war on terrorism and his broader agenda for U.S.-Russia relations.

As National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice put it, Bush and Putin are steadily building "a relationship that is very, very good and also normal," where issues can be addressed without the high-stakes negotiations that were the hallmark of the Soviet era.

On Bush's wish list for his three days with Putin are several issues, both long-range and immediate, that could benefit from the personal friendship and trust that Bush hopes to cultivate in a mix of formal White House talks and down-home hospitality at his 1,600-acre ranch in central Texas:

- Unflinching Russian support in the U.S.-led war against Osama bin Laden, his Al Qaeda terrorist network, and its allies in Afghanistan's ruling Taliban.

Putin has called the terrorists behind the Sept. 11 attacks a common enemy and vowed to help the United States "fight this evil."

Putin said in a weekend interview that Russia has supplied the United States with air corridors and "very valuable intelligence information," as well as "tens of millions of dollars worth of military-technical assistance" to Afghan opposition forces fighting the Taliban.

Andrew Kuchins, a Russia expert at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, warned that "if the United States wanted to take the military efforts outside Afghanistan, especially Iraq or Iran, our nascent partnership with Russia is going to get pretty complicated pretty fast." There are also signs that a U.S.-Russia squabble over the political configuration of any post-Taliban Afghanistan could be in the offing.

- A deal to begin reducing warheads on each side.

Bush will present to Putin the results of a nuclear-strategy review by the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff and announce plans to send two-thirds of America's stockpiled nuclear warheads to the scrap heap.

The idea is that, if the American arsenal fell below 2,000 — to roughly match the 1,500 that would be left in Russia's stockpile under Putin's cost-savings plans — then the Russians might rest easy that any American missile shield is not meant as a weapon against Russia. Each side currently has approximately 6,000 warheads.

- Further softening of Russian opposition to U.S. missile defense.

Whether it happens this week or further down the road, experts monitoring U.S.-Russia talks expect Bush and Putin to arrive at some sort of executive agreement that the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty could be interpreted to permit testing of a system to protect the United States and its allies from missiles launched by Iraq, North Korea, or other "rogue" states. Such an agreement would forestall for years the thorny question of what to do with the treaty when it bumps up against actual deployment of a U.S. missile shield.

Putin said in the interview that he was very optimistic a compromise could be found.

"We know the president's view that strategic offensive weapons can and must be reduced. This is a compromise in the right direction," he said.

Bush will forge ahead with or without agreement.

U.S. targets weapons sites

By Matt Kelley
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. forces have bombed some sites in Afghanistan that could have been involved in producing chemical, biological, or radiological weapons, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said Sunday.

Other such sites have been left alone, and others likely have not been found, he said.

"If we had good information on a chemical or biological development area, we would do something about it," Rumsfeld said on CBS' "Face the Nation." "It is not an easy thing to do. We have every desire in the world to prevent the terrorists from using these capabilities."

Getting information that a site may be producing weapons of mass destruction "faces you with a situation — are you best taking it out or are you best learning more about it?" Rumsfeld said earlier on "Fox News Sunday."

The New York Times reported Sunday that the United States had identified three possible chemical or biological weapons sites in Afghanistan used by bin Laden's Al Qaeda network and had avoided bombing them.

In a recent interview with a Pakistani journalist, bin Laden claimed to have nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction but said he would not use them unless the United States used such weapons first.

Rumsfeld said he is worried bin Laden's boast may be true, although it is unlikely the terrorist leader has nuclear weapons. He said Al Qaeda is known to have links to terrorism-sponsoring countries that can make chemical, biological, and radiological weapons.

"It does not take a leap of intelligence to know that if they have a relationship ... then he [bin Laden] either has them, will have them, or wants to have them," Rumsfeld said. "I know a lot about it from intelligence. On the other hand, you have to know a lot more to know precisely whether you have these capabilities that are readily useable."

Radiological weapons are made with nuclear material, combined with conventional explosives, and spread radiation without creating a nuclear blast.

Condoleezza Rice, President Bush's national security adviser, said there is "no credible evidence" bin Laden has acquired nuclear weapons. Secretary of State Colin Powell said he thought it unlikely the Saudi exile had such weapons.

She said America is doing everything possible to make sure Al Qaeda does not get chemical or biological weapons, either.

"We believe that we have a very, very aggressive program under way to make certain that he does not acquire them," Rice said on ABC's "This Week."

"We have every intelligence operation practically in the world on the problem of Al Qaeda and the Taliban and their weapons of mass destruction at this point."

In NY, Bush salutes veterans

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

NEW YORK — President Bush, touring the World Trade Center's smoking rubble two months after suicide hijackings, called on Americans to remember "the terrible harm that an enemy can inflict" as they reflect anew on the sacrifices of their military.

In a Veterans Day tribute, the commander-in-chief said attacks on New York, Washington, and Pennsylvania deepened the nation's debt to soldiers who fight abroad and police and firefighters who serve at home.

"The great purpose of our great land ... is to rid the world of evil and terror," Bush said at a Veterans Day breakfast as he thumped the lectern.

"Evil ones have roused a mighty nation, a mighty land. And for however long it takes, I am determined that we will prevail. And prevail we must, because we fight for one thing — and that is the freedom of our people and the freedom of people everywhere."

Several hundred veterans, uniformed soldiers, and police jumped to their feet and filled a cavernous military armory building with applause. The speech, Bush's first Veterans Day address as president, were his only public remarks on the final day of his two-day U.N. visit.

He met privately with the presidents of South Africa, Argentina, and Colombia before attending a U.N. ceremony at the site of the collapsed twin towers in lower Manhattan.

Actor Ron Silver methodically read the names of each country that lost citizens in the Sept. 11 attacks. An honor guard carried each country's flag and planted it in stanchions set in front of the dignitaries.

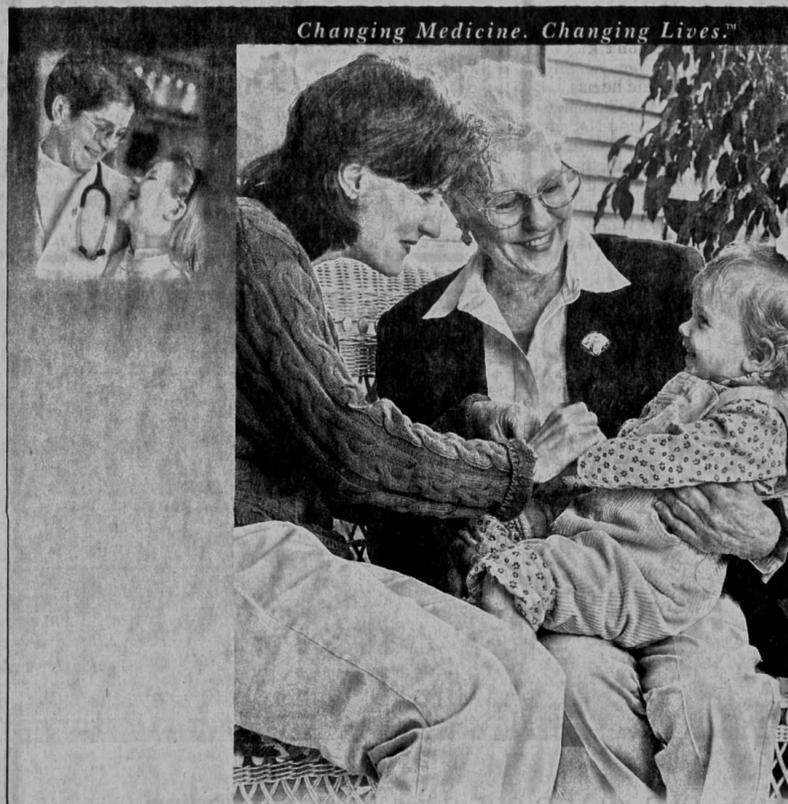

Bush, his eyes watery, either by tears or the stinging smoke wafting up from the rubble, walked over to a wall listing the names of the nations. Just beneath the name of the United States, he wrote, "Good will triumph over evil. May God bless all of us. George W. Bush."

Patriotism surges on Veterans Day

By Josh L. Dickey
Associated Press

Awash in patriotism that has surged since Sept. 11, Veterans Day celebrations across the nation bustled with heavy turnout and raucous cheer — or proceeded with renewed solemnity and reverence.

In the tiny resort town of Branson, Mo., the sidewalks were stacked four deep on Sunday; its 6,000 residents were expecting some 150,000 guests.

Today, we acknowledge that freedom costs long after the guns go silent. We now face our most insidious enemy ever — terrorism.

— Gen. Benton Smith
New Hampshire National Guard

An unusually warm wind blew over the sea of mostly red, white, and blue that marked the 67th year that bands, color guard units, floats, and soldiers have paraded on Veterans Day.

In New York City, patriotic spirit energized the once-fading ritual of military veterans and politicians marching through midtown Manhattan. Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and Mayor-elect Michael Bloomberg were cheered on as they laid a wreath at Madison Square Park, the starting point for the 18-block parade.

"It is a day in which all New Yorkers and all Americans now understand, maybe better than ever, what our veterans have done for us," Giuliani said.

In Phoenix, Ariz., more than 100 people gathered outside the Heard Museum for an American Indian gourd dance. Warriors traditionally participated as a way of showing thanks for having survived and remembering the dead.

"I'm thanking the good Lord for my return and the return of others," said Danny Jenkins, a dancer who served in the Vietnam War.

In Washington, Vice President Dick Cheney made a pilgrimage to Arlington National Cemetery, placing a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknowns and promising victory in the war on terrorism.

"Americans have no illusions about the difficulties that lie ahead," he said. "We cannot predict the length or the course of the conflict. But we know with absolute certainty that this nation will persevere and we will prevail."

At a solemn gathering at the Statehouse in Concord, N.H., Brigadier Gen. Benton Smith of the New Hampshire National Guard said this year's observances held special significance because Veterans Day fell on the two-month anniversary of the terrorist attacks.

"Today, we acknowledge that freedom costs long after the guns go silent," he said. "We now face our most insidious enemy ever — terrorism. We simply cannot apply logic to understand their motives."

Many veterans said they have enjoyed a newfound respect since Sept. 11. Wisconsin Army National Guard Commander Brig. Gen. Kenny Denson helped dedicate a monument in Richland Center, Wis., to the Purple Heart, given to members of the armed forces wounded or killed in combat. Denson received the award after he was shot down over Vietnam, but he remembers changing into civilian clothes on his way home from his second combat tour so people wouldn't recognize him as a veteran.

"You got called some very nasty things in the airports before you even got home to see your mom and dad," Denson said. But with U.S. troops in Afghanistan, Americans are thinking more favorably about military men and women, Denson said.

Patriotism took one Dallas man by surprise: Paul Wills was changing buses at Union Station on Nov. 10 when he heard the rat-a-tat-tat of drums coming from a nearby parking lot where hundreds of veterans, police officers, and others had gathered to start the annual parade.

When they took to the streets, so did Wills, who missed his bus to cheer them on.

"It's good to be in this country," he said. "I'd rather be here than anywhere else."

Schools rethink cell-phone bans

By Greg Toppo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As students rushed to get in touch with their parents in the anxious hours after the Sept. 11 attacks, Principal Ann Monday decided she had bigger worries than enforcing her school's ban on cellular phones.

The attacks have led school officials to reconsider long-standing bans on cell phones and pagers during school hours.

"Enforcing a cell-phone ban was not on our agenda" that day at Robinson Secondary School in Fairfax, Va., Monday said. "Taking care of the emotional needs of our students was."

When word spread of an airliner crashing into the Pentagon, just 14 miles away, the phones began appearing everywhere. "The reality was that many kids are carrying around phones and carrying them around responsibly," she said.

Last week, her School District decided to let students carry cell phones, which must be kept off during school hours.

Judy Seltz of the American Association of School Administrators said superintendents are reporting a "fairly low-key" shift toward loosening restrictions since Sept. 11.

"Pagers and cell phones are not the oddity they were five years ago. I think it's harder for schools to make an issue of something that's so commonplace these days," she said.

Knox Bricken, an analyst with the Yankee Group, a Boston technology-research company, said that after the attack as many as 2 million people bought cell phones.

She said a recent survey found that 32 percent of children ages 10 to 19 use cell phones, compared with 25 percent last year. Overall, 42 percent of Americans use cell phones, Bricken said. Her company predicts that in 2003, more than half the youngsters and adults in the country each will have cell phones.

In Boston and several New York suburbs, students may keep cell phones with parental permission. Other cities maintain a virtual "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy, hoping students will keep the devices quiet so teachers do not have to confiscate them.

School districts in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Washington, D.C., Baltimore, and other big cities are retaining their bans for now. Officials say cell phones and pagers are a distraction and easily can be used for drug deals or bomb threats — the reason for the bans in the first place.

In California, the principal of James Monroe High School in North Hills wants the Legislature to repeal a statewide ban. Gregory J. Vallone estimates that as many as 70 percent of his 4,600 students carry cell phones. Penalizing most students because a few still use them for illegal means is not practical or fair, he said.

In Maryland, several school districts moved to drop their cell-phone bans this fall after the Legislature struck down a statewide ban for most of the state's 24 school districts.

Dana Dembrow, the lawmaker who sponsored the repeal, said the 1987 ban "was overkill in the extreme." He called it a throwback to a time when only drug dealers had the devices.

"Parents want to be able to get in touch with their kids on an immediate basis," said Bob Gardner, the PTA president at the Fairfax school.

Bishops may elect first black president

By Rachel Zoll
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops is likely to elect its first black president during a four-day meeting that begins today.

Diversity also will be the focus, and the group will renew the church's fight against abortion, while proposing a day of prayer for peace as the war in Afghanistan continues.

Bishop Joseph Fiorenza of Texas is finishing his three-year term as head of the group, which serves as the church's national voice on social, political, and religious issues.

Bishop Wilton Gregory of Belleville, Ill., now the organization's vice president, is expected to succeed him. Conference vice presidents are traditionally elected president.

The vote is scheduled for Tuesday.

The Roman Catholic Church in the United States is 78 percent white, according to the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate at Georgetown University, and black Catholics have long sought recognition from church leaders.

Estimates of the number of black Catholics range from 2 million to 3.5 million, out of 63.7 million Catholics nationwide. They welcome the upcoming election of Gregory as a sign their voices will be heard.

The bishops also are concerned about serving the growing number of Asian Catholic immigrants. Fiorenza, from Galveston-Houston, estimates that 2.6 percent of U.S. Catholics are Asian or Pacific Islanders. The conference leaders are expected to issue a statement urging Catholics to welcome their Asian brethren and be attentive to their spiritual needs.

A 53-year-old Chicago native, Gregory was ordained a priest in 1973 and later earned a doctorate in sacred liturgy from the Pontifical Liturgical Institute in Rome. He became a bishop in 1983, serving for 10 years as auxiliary bishop under the late Cardinal Joseph Bernardin in Chicago.

Gregory was installed as the Belleville bishop seven years ago, becoming the spiritual leader for 105,000 Catholics in a diocese that covers roughly the southern third of Illinois.

The bishops also will propose designating Jan. 1 as a National Day of Prayer for Peace as the war on terrorism continues. The bishops have urged U.S. leaders to avoid punishing innocent civilians in Afghanistan and elsewhere.

"Our military response must be guided by the traditional moral limits on the use of force," Fiorenza said in a statement after the U.S. air strikes began Oct. 7. "Military action is always regrettable, but it may be necessary to protect the innocent or to defend the common good."

Taliban on the run, rebels claim

By Kathy Gannon
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Two days after a major victory in a key northern city, anti-Taliban forces claimed Sunday they were routing the Taliban through northern Afghanistan, capturing the former opposition headquarters of Taloqan and other major strongholds.

A Taliban official denied Taloqan had been overrun, and the claim could not be independently verified.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld told "Fox News Sunday" that the opposition was "putting pressure" on Taloqan and the northwestern city of Herat.

Rumsfeld also said the opposition was facing "pockets of resistance" in Mazar-e-Sharif, the northern city that it captured Nov. 9. He said the alliance had not yet completely secured the city's main airport.

And, he added, "there could always be a counterattack."

Clearly, however, it appeared the Taliban were in full retreat in the north, possibly to reorganize their forces around the capital, Kabul, and southern strongholds of their ethnic Pashtun base.

U.S. aircraft, including B-52 bombers, roamed the skies, blasting Taliban positions on the frontline approximately 30 miles north of Kabul and seeking out retreating bands of Taliban fighters.

Jubilant opposition spokesmen claimed the Taliban had been routed in the north except in Kunduz province on the border with Tajikistan and in Badghis province on the border with Turkmenistan.

Opposition forces planned to move into Kunduz late Sunday, opposition spokesman Mohammed Abil said.

"Hopefully, we will manage Kunduz tonight or tomorrow. They are fully encircled. They have no way, no escape," Abdullah, the opposition's foreign minister, said in Jabal Saraj.

Taloqan, the capital of Takhar province, fell Sunday after a fierce battle outside the city with Taliban forces that included Arabs and Pakistanis, opposition spokesman Mohammed Abil said. Once that line of defense crumbled, opposition fighters swiftly occupied the city, he said.

"There was fighting all last night and all today," Abil said.

Taloqan is approximately 140 miles east of Mazar-e-Sharif, some 155 miles north of Kabul.

Abdul Hanan Hemat, the chief of the Taliban's Bakhtar news agency, denied claims that Taloqan had fallen. "They are lying," he said.

An opposition spokesman, Ashraf Nadeem, said Taliban also withdrew from the key road junction town of Pul-e-Khumri in Baghlan province and that Taliban forces in the area were headed toward central Bamiyan province west of Kabul.

Later Sunday, opposition spokesman Ahmed Baram of the Shiite Muslim faction said anti-Taliban units were entering the city of Bamiyan, west of Kabul, and he declared that Bamiyan province "is completely with us."

The opposition said its fortunes in Bamiyan were bolstered after a Taliban commander there switched sides after seeing the battlefield momentum swing against him.

The defection of the commander, Isamuuddin, cut off the road for Taliban troops retreating from Mazar-e-Sharif to Kabul and isolated those still in the north, Abil said.

The report of the Taliban commander's defection could not be independently verified.

Elsewhere, opposition official Noor Ahmad said advancing anti-Taliban troops seized Qalainau, capital of Badghis province, and were about 25 miles east of Herat.

Despite some confusion over specific claims, the Taliban has acknowledged that its troops are withdrawing southward following weeks of round-the-clock U.S. bombing of their positions in the north.

The Northern Alliance is composed mainly of ethnic Uzbeks and Tajiks — the dominant ethnic groups in much of the north. The Taliban derives its support from the country's dominant ethnic Pashtuns, who are mostly in the south.

In Kabul, buildings shook and windows rattled on Sunday as American warplanes bombed the outskirts of the capital. Heavy U.S. bombing overnight and into the day was intended to soften up Taliban positions.

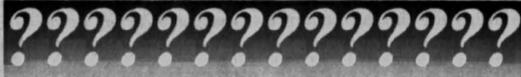

The fortunes of the opposition Northern Alliance shifted dramatically following the Taliban withdrawal on Nov. 9 from the strategic northern city of Mazar-e-Sharif, 45 miles south of the border with Uzbekistan.

After seizing Mazar-e-Sharif, the opposition threatened to launch a major attack on Kabul within days. However, President Bush said Nov. 10 that opposition troops should steer clear of Kabul until a broad-based government including all ethnic groups could be formed.

The body of West Papuan independence leader Theys H. Eluay is moved by relatives and officials in Koya village, outside of Jayapura, Irian Jaya, approximately 2,500 miles east of Jakarta, Indonesia, on Sunday.

Rioting breaks out in Indonesia

By Lely T. Djuhari
Associated Press

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Riots erupted Sunday after an independence-movement leader was kidnapped and killed in Irian Jaya, one of several Indonesian provinces wracked by violence amid a traumatic transition to democracy after decades of dictatorship.

Villagers found the body of Theys Eluay, 64, in his wrecked car in a ravine 18 miles east of the provincial capital, Jayapura.

Police said he appeared to have been strangled and that his assailants had tried to make the killing look accidental by pushing the car off a remote stretch of road. There were no clear suspects, and his driver was missing, they said.

Eluay's widow, Yanoke, blamed the Indonesian military, which is often accused of human-rights atrocities. Police said Eluay was killed as he returned home after dining with local Indonesian army commanders the night of Nov. 10. Senior military officers refused to comment.

Hundreds of independence supporters set fire to a hotel, a market, and a bank near Eluay's home in Sentani, close to Jayapura's airport. Others blocked roads with burning tires and threw rocks at police, who responded with warning shots. There were no reports of injuries, and police dispersed the crowds around dusk.

Eluay, the head of the separatist Papuan Presidium Council, had been on bail awaiting trial for subversion, an offense that carries a maximum 20-year prison term.

Local and foreign rights activists had criticized his prosecution and accused Indonesia of muzzling free speech in Irian Jaya, 2,500 miles east of the capital, Jakarta.

However, Eluay also had opponents among enemies of Indonesian rule. Some more militant independence activists accused him of weakening their separatist fight by trying to negotiate a settlement with Indonesia.

Eluay was friendly with some senior officials, and earlier this year the Indonesian government paid for months of hospital treatment for him. He suffered from heart trouble and diabetes.

Piecing together his final hours, relatives and friends said Eluay's driver, Aristoteles Masoka, made a frantic cell phone call to Eluay's wife and said their car had been stopped by a gang of kidnapers.

"My son called with his mobile phone, but in mid-conversation, the connection was broken," Masoka's father, Yonas Masoka, told the Associated Press. The driver's body was not found in the car with Eluay, police said.

Jayapura Police Chief Lt. Col. Daud Sihombing said Eluay's corpse had lacerations around the neck and wrists that appeared to be rope burns. He said police suspected Eluay was strangled with a rope.

The circumstances of his killing — a pro-independence figure found dead after dinner with a military chief — underscore the volatile political situation in Irian Jaya, which covers the western half of New Guinea island and is home to huge mineral and petroleum resources.

Palestinians not arresting militants

By Karin Laub
Associated Press

RAMALLAH, West Bank — Palestinian jails remain largely empty of militants, despite U.S. demands for large-scale arrests of those accused of attacks against Israelis.

Forty-four suspects are in custody, a Palestinian monitoring group says, while police put the number at 53. But many more, including leading militants and bomb-makers, have avoided capture, often shielded by sympathetic neighbors.

Last week, police backed away from arresting an Islamic Jihad leader after influential supporters of Yasser Arafat, ringed by men brandishing pistols and grenades, negotiated the suspect's escape.

Palestinians say Arafat is holding back because he fears a more aggressive manhunt will trigger internal strife. Arrests of militants are hugely unpopular in the West Bank and Gaza Strip at a time of harsh Israeli military strikes, including incursions into Palestinian towns ruled by Arafat's Palestinian Authority and the killing of Palestinians whom Israel believes to be involved in attacks on Israelis.

What the Israelis — and many in the West — see as terrorist attacks against civilians is viewed by Palestinians as a legitimate response to military occupation.

"The Palestinian public ... does not accept that the Palestinians should prevent resistance by force without the other side taking any steps, like the Israelis stopping assassinations and lifting the closures," said commentator Ghassan Khatib.

Israel has given the Palestinians a long list of militants to be arrested, and it says Arafat is only going through the motions of trying to capture them to please the United States. Arafat hasn't abandoned violence as an option; instead, he has forged a "coalition of terror," Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said last week.

Sharon's spokesman Raanan Gissin said Sunday that Arafat was taking some steps to crack-down on militants, but more were needed — particularly to prevent suicide bombings. "Those you have to stop," he said. "If you arrest them, there won't be terror attacks."

Asked about Arafat's arrest efforts, U.S. National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice said, "We still don't think that there has been enough in this regard."

Still, the Palestinian Authority's policy toward the militants has hardened. At the start of Israeli-Palestinian fighting in September 2000, Arafat's security forces freed dozens of members of the Hamas and Islamic Jihad groups from prison.

In the following months, police did nothing to stop attacks on Israelis. Arafat's Fatah movement joined forces with the Islamic militant groups — their former political rivals — in an umbrella organization that coordinates the uprising against Israel.

But after the Sept. 11 terror attacks on the United States, Arafat became eager to join the U.S.-led anti-terror coalition and to dissociate himself from suspected terrorist Osama bin Laden.

U.K. eyes detaining terrorists sans trial

By Audrey Woods
Associated Press

LONDON — Prime Minister Tony Blair's government today will seek parliamentary approval for emergency powers that would give authorities the right to detain terrorist suspects without trial.

The leader of the opposition Conservative Party said he supported the plan but that the measures should have a so-called sunset clause that limits their time frame and require legislative approval for renewal. Rights groups criticized the measures as a violation of civil liberties.

Home Secretary David Blunkett will seek the right to detain suspects without trial under what the Home Office called "very limited circumstances" — foreign nationals suspected of involvement in international terrorism who pose a threat to national security but cannot be immediately deported.

The definition would cover asylum seekers suspected of terrorist involvement who cannot be sent home because they have a well-founded fear that their lives would be in danger there.

Blunkett said Sunday he would strike a balance between cracking down on terrorist activity in the United Kingdom and protecting people's human rights.

"I am determined to protect this country from anyone who is prepared to abuse our hospitality and welcome in order to plan or promote terrorism here or abroad," he said Sunday in a written statement.

"Equally, I intend to protect human rights and ensure the right to a properly constituted legal hearing and appeal for those suspected of engaging in terrorism," he wrote.

On Oct. 15, the government announced plans for emergency anti-terrorism legislation that would extend police and customs powers, tighten immigration regulations, and halt the flow of terrorist funding.

Blunkett warned at the time that the government would require a limited suspension of a provision of European human-rights legislation. Governments are allowed in times of war or public emergencies to opt out of the provision guaranteeing the right to liberty and prohibiting detention.

Internment without trial has been used before — against Northern Ireland terrorist suspects and against German citizens during World War II.

Suspects would be able to appeal the detention, a Home Office spokesman said, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

John Wadham, the director of the civil-rights group Liberty, called the move "a fundamental violation of the rule of law, our rights, and traditional British values."

Ehrlich's haunting sense of snow

By Jen Brown
The Daily Iowan

There is something haunting in Gretel Ehrlich's writing — mystery lurking behind every corner. The author of many varied books — poems, narrative essays, short stories, a novel, a novella, a biography, and two memoirs — brings this haunting tone to the page again in her latest release, This Cold Heaven, a nonfiction narrative chronicling her seven-year love affair with Greenland. She will read from the book at Prairie Lights Books today at 8 p.m.

When skimming a short bio on the author, you get the sensation the person conjured in the words has embraced life in a way few are able. Ehrlich has been a filmmaker. She has been a writer. She has traveled to Alaska and to the high Canadian Arctic. She has written for National Geographic and the New York Times. She has been a rancher in Wyoming; she has won a Guggenheim Fellowship. And she has been traveling to and around Greenland for seven years, witnessing it in every season: the four months of dark, the four months of light, and the remainder suspended in twilight.

Not only did Ehrlich travel to the largest island in the world, not only did she watch the changing seasons and meet the people, but she lived and traveled among them as she gradually made her way to the northernmost town in the world, Qaanaaq, where she journeyed with Inuit hunters up the coast in search of walrus, seal, and polar bear.

This Cold Heaven traces her path. In the preface, Ehrlich gives her reason for first traveling to Greenland as an effort "to get above treeline." She alludes to "an accident that affected my heart," when explaining her discomfort at the latitudes in which she would normally feel at home.

The accident Ehrlich hints at is chronicled in her memoir A Match to the Heart, where she relates being hit by lightning and surviving. In the memoir, as in This Cold Heaven, Ehrlich baits the reader with mystery and direct, yet rich, language. As you read Ehrlich's prose, you are unequivocally consumed. Ehrlich is able to walk a tightrope between mystery and clarity in her prose while capturing grace in the process. She writes:

"I sleep by a cold window which I've opened a crack. Frigid air streams up the rock hill and smells of minerals. In a dream, I hear the crackling sound that krill make under water. Earlier in the day, the chunk of glacier ice I dropped into a glass of water made the same sound."

You might never fathom traveling to Greenland, living on the ice for months, hunting with the Inuit people, sleeping by an open window in the Arctic, but you are happy to do so through Ehrlich, as she weaves a tapestry of a land both familiar and unfathomable.

Into that tapestry, Ehrlich also weaves excerpts from the travelogue of Knud Rasmussen, an Inuit-Danish explorer who studied and wrote of the Inuit lifestyle as he trekked from Greenland to Alaska in the early 1900s. These excerpts create a harmony with Ehrlich's own narrative, and together they paint a picture of a strong and singular people largely untouched by the modern ways of the world.

While Ehrlich's writing is informative, powerful, and alluring, it's not entirely clear what specifically enamored her about Greenland. Her captivation with the unique way of Inuit life, her awe for the landscape, the solitude in which she traveled gave to her a kind of clarity of mind — all these things seem part of the writer's fascination with the frozen island. But these qualities don't explain an inherent melancholy between the lines, a sadness somehow captured in the final line of the preface. She writes:

"For seven years I used the island as a looking glass: part window, part mirror."

Perhaps for Gretel Ehrlich, Greenland came to symbolize something the book cannot begin to discuss in length: that nostalgic quality to places that attracts us, sometimes without explanation. So that we return there again and again, sing our songs and write our passages in effort to capture, to make tangible, that magic that holds us there as it held Gretel Ehrlich, for seven seasons, in Greenland.

When stealing the scene is just not enough

Film: Heist
Director: David Mamet
Writer: Mamet
Starring: Gene Hackman, Danny DeVito, and Delroy Lindo
Length: 107 minutes
Rated: R

There are a few things you can usually count on from David Mamet, the playwright-turned-director whose previous films include Glengarry Glen Ross (screenplay), House of Games, and The Spanish Prisoner — con men, rat-a-tat dialogue accented with witty one-liners, and a whole lot of testosterone.

All of these elements are on display in Mamet's latest film, Heist, an intriguing if somewhat too-clever crime drama starring Gene Hackman as a thief named Joe Moore. Joe's career turns sour when he is caught by a surveillance camera during a jewelry-store robbery. All he wants to do now is hop aboard his sailboat with his pretty wife, Fran, (Rebecca Pidgeon) and leave the country.

The only problem is that Joe is flat broke. His fence, a greedy, short-tempered crook named Bergman (Danny DeVito), won't pay him for the last job unless he agrees to pull off one more big heist — a score big enough to keep Joe and his crew, including Bobby Blaine (Delroy Lindo) and Don Pincus (Mamet-regular Ricky Jay), from ever needing to work again.

If this all sounds awfully familiar, it should. Joe is essentially the same character Robert DeNiro portrayed in both Heat and this year's The Score, which co-starred Edward Norton as a brash up-and-comer who tries to outsmart his aging partner. Similarly, Joe has to contend with his own reckless hothead named Jimmy Silk (Sam Rockwell). Jimmy is Bergman's nephew, and Joe has no choice but to include him in the plan.

But what separates Heist from The Score is the sheer audacity of the robbery, a task so complex and intricate that it makes The Score's customs-house job seem like a 7-11 stick-up. The objective is to steal $50 million in gold bullion from a Swiss Air jet as it sits on a runway, and Mamet expertly shows how each phase of the plan clicks into place in order to pull it off. In terms of production value, Heist is by far his most accomplished movie yet.

As with any Mamet film, however, the real star of the show is the writing.

When asked whether Joe will be able to talk his way out of a police stop, Pincus tells Jimmy: "My man's so cool, when he goes to sleep, sheep count him." In a scene near the end of the film, Joe is told that the man pointing a gun at him doesn't really intend to kill him. To which Joe replies: "Then he shouldn't point a gun at me. It's insincere."

Of course, great dialogue is useless without a great cast, and Mamet has assembled another first-rate ensemble that can deliver his sharp, unique brand of banter without making it sound stilted. Hackman's timing and intonation in particular seem well-suited for Mamet-speak. Also, much like all of Mamet's favorite leading men (Joe Mantegna and Alec Baldwin among them), Hackman effortlessly alternates between calm control and violent anger.

Sadly, Heist loses some of its allure in the final act, when the plot comes undone with double-crosses. There's a saying I'm fond of that usually gets applied to little kids who keep repeating the same joke over and over. "First time's a laugh. Second time's a chuckle. Third time's a spanking." The first couple of times someone gets double-crossed, it's exciting. After the fifth or sixth time, it just becomes tiresome.

In the end, though, my biggest problem with Heist is that the snappy dialogue and top-notch acting aren't enough to elevate it that far above your average crime flick. Past Mamet films all delved deep into their characters' psyches, raising troubling questions about self-identity and discovery. With Heist, Mamet seems intent simply to play games with us, to entertain rather than to challenge, which isn't necessarily a bad thing I suppose — unless you are as talented as Mamet.

Economic-stimulus package full of pork for big business

Ever since Sept. 11, our economy has been reeling. In the blink of an eye, thousands of people across the country were laid off, especially in the airlines and hospitality/tourism industries. In the week following the terrorist attacks, both the NASDAQ and the Dow Jones took record-breaking losses. For an already-faltering economy, the events of Sept. 11 seemed like the final nails in the coffin marked recession. In order to combat this downward spiral, President Bush put together an economic-stimulus package that he asserted would help those in need. In reality, the Republican plan is just another right-wing attempt to funnel money to the rich.

In this time of national crisis, the president wields incredible power. The office of the president is an easy focus for the patriotic sentiments of the people, and they look to him for leadership. Bush, like any good politician, revels in this power and tries to put on a façade of control and authority. Unfortunately, like any good politician, he also uses this power to further the special interests he represents. His economic-stimulus lus package is an excellent example.

Costing $100 billion next year, the package offers various tax incentives purported to increase investment in our faltering economy. Notable, however, is who is offered the money for investment. Rather than give money back to the people, as Republicans often contend to be doing, this bill gives billions of dollars to corporations in the form of tax rebates. The Republicans assert that these incentives will lead to investment and will allow corporations to keep employees on the payroll, reducing layoffs. A good example of such incentives is the retroactive repeal of the alternative minimum tax, which forces corporations to pay some taxes. Otherwise, it is sometimes possible for corporations to pile on so many deductions that they end up paying no taxes whatsoever. Not only does the Bush administration want to repeal this law, it wants to retroactively repeal it. Corporations will be able to file for refunds of taxes paid as far back as 1986. Some big corporations, such as IBM, will be able to cash in for a tax refund of more than $1 billion. That means more than 1 percent of the total stimulus package goes to a single corporation.

At least Bush is a man of his word. He asked for every American to try to live normally following Sept. 11, and he is definitely following his own advice. He continues to pander to special interests and line the pockets of big corporations with tax money, just as he always has. While this will probably not stimulate the economy by any noticeable amount, at least the American people can hail it as a return to the everyday, normal, status quo in Washington.

Characterization provides no benefit

Holly Eggleston (DI, Nov. 7) is as simple-minded as ever, choosing to characterize anyone who differs from her lily-white worldview. If war has proven pivotal in our nation's history, so has dissent. The abolitionist, women's-suffrage, and civil-rights movements, to name a few, were all fostered by those in the minority who had the courage of their convictions if not the strength in numbers. Yet Eggleston cites majority support for the bombing as though that alone validates the ill-considered positions of the many who have responded emotionally to the Sept. 11 attacks.

First off, this won't be a quick war. Afghanistan is a landlocked country, and its capital is nestled in the mountains. To access Kabul, you have to traverse narrow mountain passages vulnerable to ambush. The last military leader to actually conquer this region, in fact, was Alexander the Great. When you add to this the eschatological zealotry of the ruling Taliban, who would rather die than surrender, you have to wonder what the Pentagon leaders were thinking when they expressed surprise that the war hadn't ended after a few weeks.

As the number of civilian casualties increases — and our so-called free media aren't showing the heart-rending images seen on televisions throughout Europe and Asia — international support for the U.S. effort will decrease. There will be, moreover, no shortage of newly radicalized Muslim recruits lining up to oppose us. More forebodingly, the bombing in Afghanistan might destabilize the region, allowing Muslim extremists to take over in Pakistan, a country with nuclear capabilities.

Warmongering in Afghanistan might appeal to saber-rattling politicians and make sense to Americans devastated by the Sept. 11 attacks, but it won't prevent further acts of terrorism. There are no easy answers to the terrorist threat, but glibly painting those who oppose this war as patchouli-soaked fools won't help.

Mark Dowdy
UI graduate student

Calling for compassion

I disagree with your decision to publish the name of the woman arrested on prostitution charges. As a former co-worker of the woman involved, I know her to be an attractive, educated woman who has struggled with psychological problems with accompanying substance abuse. Publishing her name will be a deterrent to her rebuilding her life and finding employment. She is the only victim of her self-destructive behavior, committed in an "intoxicated" state. How about showing a little compassion?

Kathy Schulz
Iowa City resident

Responding to nationalism

Examining Holly Eggleston's contempt for teachers and "the intelligentsia," which she makes quite clear in her articles, I can only surmise that she enjoys being ignorant. There's a cause and effect to war and terrorism? Ridiculous.

Some past US action or decision somehow precipitated this event? Unthinkable; we're always right. Holly's world is as black and white as the paper she's printed on. Paradoxically, she glorifies her right to free speech and assembly by blindly endorsing everything the government does while at the same time tolerating no dissent.

I encourage her to pause and actually understand what the shrieking activists are saying. In times of excessive nationalism, we must have a voice of reason to reign us in a bit.

Also, I suppose it never occurred to Eggleston that instead of "meddling in the Middle East" or destroying a wildlife preserve, we could increase funding to develop a clean, cheap, and renewable fuel source. But that would be suggesting that the natural world doesn't exist for the sole purpose of serving us and that it may have some sort of intrinsic value. Of course, this is heresy to the oilmen in the White House (or wherever Cheney's been hiding these last two months), so we can't expect any real thought on the matter for a couple years.

Brian Schuering
UI student

Taking political risks

Election Day is over. This time, there were no hanging or pregnant chads. There was no doubt, even before it was over, who would win. The three Iowa City City Council incumbents up for re-election all seized victories over three challengers.

Perhaps the incumbents' successes were so quickly awarded because they worked so hard to keep out opponents with potentially dangerous new ideas. The day before the election — although not isolated to this particular time — the incumbents expressed the council's overall distaste for new vision. They agreed that "new members on the council could hinder policy development because they do not fully understand the process," (DI, Nov. 6). How does the City Council expect to reap the benefits of its legislation when the councilors refuse to hear the other side, well-represented by this election's challengers? If the city councilors feel important issues such as the alcohol and nuisance ordinances and the proposed smoking ban cannot be fully understood by those challenging their positions, how do they expect to justify themselves to their constituents?

After the votes were in, incumbents were also quick to admit that the history of disrespect and disparity among the council's members would likely go unchanged, despite a request by the voters for a more-civil governing body. This unwillingness to provide Iowa City with a more courteous council could prove exceedingly dangerous for future proposals. Members may end up voting for or against another member, not for or against an issue. Citizens deserve more from their elected officials than rulings based on petty personal arguments.

The victors have also asserted that the challengers used the student population as a pawn in the election by mobilizing their vote against the incumbents. The challengers worked to get out the student vote, and consequently, the election produced a record number of young registered voters — 6,705 to be exact. However, the current issues facing the City Council are also very relevant to UI students. Students are one of the largest renting groups in Iowa City, so the proposed nuisance ordinance could have large consequences for students. Most bars make a large part of their revenue from student patronage, so both the alcohol and smoking ordinances do (or will) affect students as well. Though most students make Iowa City their home for only four years, councilors should not discourage them from getting involved in local politics, as both Mayor Ernie Lehman and Councilor Connie Champion have. Students deserve to have their voice heard, and they have a right to councilors who are willing to listen.

Amanda Mittlestadt

The council is expected to act on the smoking ban sometime this week. On Nov. 9, Champion told the DI, "It doesn't matter if people think the ordinance is right or wrong; we are going to do it." Already, more than 70 restaurants have voluntarily adopted no-smoking policies. The ordinance will impose unnecessary fines on bar owners and patrons who violate it. Restaurants should be able to decide for themselves what is best for business. This ordinance is just one more example of the uncompromising nature of the City Council, as well as its desire to play a motherly role to businesses and citizens alike. The city cannot regulate all activity, and its attempts to do so will leave it spread thin and unpopular.

The results of the Nov. 7 council elections are not an uncommon occurrence. In state legislatures, as well as in the U.S. Congress, incumbents are re-elected at a rate usually well over 90 percent. It is difficult for challengers to raise campaign money, to have their name widely recognized by constituents, and to prove that their ideas are better than the incumbents.

Though high re-election rates are common, it does not mean they should be tolerated. The blind acceptance of our elected officials is an inherent problem in American politics. The only way to change that with which we disagree is to know the issues and have faith that challengers can do the job just as well, if not better, than incumbents.

Without accurate representation — both in the City Council and in larger legislative bodies — Iowa City residents end up with ridiculous ordinances, and American women end up with abortion laws made by middle-age, white males. We must be willing to elect people representative of our views, those who speak with our voice. We must be willing to take political risks.

across the country have experienced some cancellations in on-campus recruiting solely because of the Sept. 11 attacks.

At the UI, recruiting visits for graduates from the Masters of Business Administration have fallen 17 percent from last year, said Kathie Decker, the M.B.A. Career Services director.

Students with noteworthy credentials, such as UI senior Kevin Long, are also struggling to attract solid offers. The biomedical-engineering major sports a GPA of 3.6 and said he will graduate in the spring of 2002.

"It's hard to even get interviews right now," he said. "In engineering, you probably have a better chance of getting a job than other majors because there's usually a demand, but it's still hard."

Long said his peers in biomedical engineering are often forced to choose between going to medical school or a graduating without many job prospects.

Careers in public relations are also becoming increasingly competitive, said UI senior Lauren Sloan, who has yet to receive a single job offer in that field.

"I'm worried about having to do another internship after graduation instead of getting a real job," said Sloan, who said she will graduate with a degree in communication studies. "There is not a lot of opportunity, but a lot of highly educated and highly qualified students."

Placement directors have been advising graduates to be cautiously optimistic, because the United States could soon climb out of the sluggish economy.

The economic slump was projected to lift this January, but that was extended a few months following the Sept. 11 attacks, Decker said.

Unemployment is manifesting itself in most areas. According to the U.S. Department of Labor, it has peaked this year, reaching 5.4 percent — the highest level since December 1996. Approximately 2.2 million more Americans were unemployed this October than were in October 2000.

The education field, however, is almost desperate for graduates to fill the vacancies left by retiring teachers, said Rebecca Anthony, the director of Educational Placement Office.

"Our job prospects are excellent," she said.

U.S. faces rising cost of war

WAR COSTS

Still, parts of the war are adding up: the estimated $5,000 an hour to fly a Navy FA-18 fighter-bomber, the $25,600 cost of one of the frequently used Joint Direct Attack Munition bombs, the top-of-the-line Tomahawk cruise missiles.

As for a running total, "It's very much ballpark," said Steven Kosiak, the center's director of budget studies. Some other analysts have projected higher costs.

Stretched over a year, the price of the war could be $12 billion, half of what the federal government spends on medical research.

By comparison, the bombing campaign against Yugoslavia in 1999 cost the United States approximately $3 billion.

The 1991 Persian Gulf War cost America an estimated $61 billion, but all but about $7 billion was reimbursed by allies. By some accounting methods, the United States may have even made a profit.

Munitions at the disposal of U.S. forces in the Afghan war vary wildly in price.

From the bargain basement: the 500-pound M-117, dropped from a heavy bomber, for a mere $300 apiece.

At the high end: Tomahawk cruise missiles costing $600,000 to $1 million each, many times more than the $147,100 median price of an American home.

U.S. officials said 50 Tomahawks alone were launched in the opening assault, some from British forces, making an expensive debut. Dependence on cruise missiles has lessened since then.

Pentagon spokeswoman Susan Hansen said it takes time to calculate costs above those normally associated with having forces abroad in peacetime.

"The Department of Defense will collect those figures, but at this point, a month into the conflict, we don't have them," she said.

On the home front, a study has taken a stab at the costs of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks and all their fallout — an expense likely to dwarf the costs of the Afghan war.

General sees 30-year war

WALLACE

our vigilance wanes and strike again — unless we get them," Wallace said. "If we don't, then we'll see another 9/11 in some form or another in the future."

Wallace saw combat action as a commander for one year in Vietnam. Despite the similarities between Afghanistan and Vietnam — a rough terrain, the use of guerrilla warfare, and a division of support worldwide — Wallace is quick to point out substantial differences.

"The effort that we're projecting here has the will of the people behind it and the will of the political leaders — unlike Vietnam," he said.

Wallace, who worked in the Pentagon until 1997, said his old office was only 150 feet from where the hijacked plane crashed. Although the nation's Defense elite had suspected that terrorism against the United States was imminent, Wallace said, he was surprised by the "magnitude, accuracy, and efficiency" of the Sept. 11 attacks.

Leuer, a 1956 UI graduate who served for two years in Vietnam, said the current U.S. strategy is solid, but he advised against the gradual infusion of troops in order to avoid another Vietnam.

"I would be very hesitant to commit troops to static positions," he said. "When you place troops in an area, you immediately fix their location for the enemy. All the enemy has to do is pick the time to attack."

The rough terrain, poor weather, and the geographic location of Afghanistan could be a problem for ground troops, Leuer said. "The supply lines are a big problem," he said. "It's an inland area, so any supplies to the troops have to go through at least two other countries."

Despite projections from the Bush administration that the war will not continue for more than a year, he believes it will take a lot longer, Leuer said.

"I foresee a 30-year effort," he said. "It can't be only from the U.S., but we need warfare from a coalition against terrorism."

Wallace and Leuer returned to Iowa City this weekend to speak at the Johnson County Military Affairs Association Veterans Day recognition banquet. Leuer was the featured speaker at the event. The group honored Wallace, the first recipient of an Army ROTC scholarship, by naming a scholarship after him.

UI freshman Casey Schroeder was the first recipient of the four-year scholarship. A member of the ROTC and the Civil Air Patrol, he plans to follow in the footsteps of Wallace and Leuer and become a major general. "To be the first one that gets this is an honor in itself," he said.

which voting machines were unable to detect a choice for any presidential candidate, while approximately 113,000 overvotes were read by machines as possibly containing more than one choice.

The goal of the news organizations was not to learn who really "won" Florida; the Electoral College already had determined Bush was the winner following a U.S. Supreme Court decision that ended further counting and led to Gore's concession. The aim was to provide a valuable historical record by thoroughly assessing tens of thousands of ballots that no one had fully examined.

Much of the legal wrangling focused on how votes were defined, and the ballot review did, too, calculating results under different standards — for example, whether to count as votes "hanging chads" on punch-card ballots or ballots marked with an "X" instead of the required filled-in oval on optical-scan ballots.

Completing two partial recounts that Gore unsuccessfully pursued in court showed Bush maintaining a lead ranging between 225 and 493 votes.

Under any standard that tabulated all disputed votes statewide, however, Gore erased Bush's advantage and emerged with a tiny lead that ranged from 42 to 171 votes.

Strikingly, all these outcomes were closer than even the narrow 537 votes of Bush's official victory. With numbers that tiny, experts said it would be impossible to interpret the survey results as definitive.

The Florida election review was developed by AP, CNN, the New York Times, the Palm Beach

Post, the St. Petersburg Times, Tribune Publishing, The Wall Street Journal, and the Washington Post. Tribune newspapers include the Chicago Tribune, Los Angeles Times, Newsday, the Orlando Sentinel, and the South Florida Sun-Sentinel in Ft. Lauderdale.

The media consortium hired the National Opinion Research Center at the University of Chicago to view each untallied ballot and gather information about how it was marked. Founded in 1941, the center is a not-for-profit corporation whose charter is to advance the methodology of public-opinion surveys and provide accurate survey data.

The consortium used computers to sort and tabulate votes, based on varying scenarios provided by the news organizations that had been raised during the postelection scramble in Florida. County election officials made the ballots available to the research center under state and local laws.

A research-center supervisor said county officials sometimes had difficulties identifying the exact ballots that went untallied along with the possibility that ballot observers mistook some data in such a mammoth tabulation, it would be impossible to guarantee which candidate prevailed if the margins were within a few hundred votes, he said.

"As that differential between the two candidates becomes smaller and smaller, there's the potential that the inherent variability in the data could be larger than that minimal difference," said Kirk Wolter, the senior vice president for statistics and methodology who helped supervise the project for the research center. Wolter spoke before the results were known.

As President Bush and the nation address a host of new concerns after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, those who once were embroiled in the Florida political contest — on either side — had little reaction.

Neither Bush nor Gore would comment directly. "It's over," Fleischer said.

Florida's election saw 6.1 million votes cast, and county figures suggest that more than 176,000 ballots, or 2.9 percent, never made it into the certified totals.

That percentage is not unusual and likely would have attracted little attention but for the closeness of the outcome. Nationwide last year, approximately 2 percent of ballots were disqualified. Some states were far higher: Illinois, with 3.9 percent, Georgia, 3.5 percent, South Carolina, 3.4 percent.

Gore outpolled Bush in the nationwide popular vote by 540,000 ballots, but the presidency is decided in the Electoral College. Neither candidate had a majority without Florida, and the vote on Election Night was literally too close to call, putting the focus on Florida's untallied absentee ballots and disqualified votes. Bush was narrowly ahead, and so it fell to Gore to seek a recount and the Gore campaign's slogan became "Count all the votes." Nonetheless, his legal strategy was to pursue a narrower recount.

At first, Gore's attorneys sought a hand recount of all 1.8 million ballots cast in the predominantly Democratic counties of Palm Beach, Miami-Dade, Broward, and Volusia. In the following weeks, Gore and Democratic supporters argued for recounts in various other counties.

IOWA 59, NORTHWESTERN 16

Utter domination

Iowa takes preseason favorite Northwestern down in a 59-16 blowout

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

EVANSTON, Ill. — None of the Iowa Hawkeyes would divulge what was said behind closed doors earlier this week, but the results spoke for themselves Nov. 10.

Just days after a players-only meeting in which four Iowa seniors discussed the direction the 4-4 Hawkeyes were heading with just three games remaining, the team exploded for a season-high 602 yards in total offense in a 59-16 mauling of Northwestern.

"A lot of the younger guys weren't really familiar with what it took to win," senior fullback Jeremy Allen said. "[The meeting] helped get everyone on the same page."

If the Hawkeyes weren't familiar with what it took to win, they didn't let it show on Nov. 10. Iowa exploded out of the gates, scoring on eight of its first 10 possessions en route to becoming just one win shy of being bowl eligible for the first time since 1997.

"We just can't seem to come out of the blocks and make the plays we have to make early on," Northwestern coach Randy Walker said. "We let people build momentum."

With Kyle McCann starting at quarterback, Iowa opened the game with a seven-minute drive, which ended with the first of three touchdowns on the day for Allen. With touchdowns on their next two possessions, the Hawkeyes set the tone for a lopsided day in Evanston.

"We felt confident in our game plan," said receiver Kahlil Hill, who finished the day with 233 all-purpose yards. "Opening up big the way we did today just gave us confidence. Once a team thinks that it can do anything, it's hard to stop it."

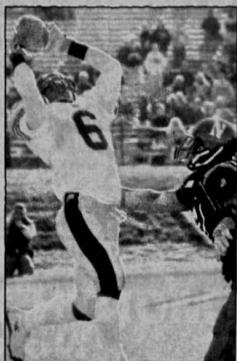

Iowa's success carried over on defense as well. The Hawkeyes, one of the nation's top defenses early this season, returned to its old form, holding Northwestern to just 256 yards of offense. The Wildcats entered the game averaging a league-best 440.6 per game. The Big Ten's top passer, Zak Kustok, turned in just 86 yards passing

Potent running game powers Hawkeyes during NU blowout

EVANSTON, Ill. — I needed a second opinion, so I went to Iowa senior Aaron Kampman.

It seemed like a good idea, but he couldn't explain why Northwestern, after winning the opening coin toss, would elect to start the game with its best player on the sidelines either.

That is exactly what happened when the Wildcats opted to defer until the second-half, giving Iowa the clearance to begin on offense — which it obviously took.

Instead of sending quarterback Zak Kustok and the Big Ten's most-potent offense onto its own field first, Northwestern coach Randy Walker shoved the conference's worst defense out against a victory-starved Hawkeye team. Then, he watched helplessly as Iowa feasted upon Wildcat defenders en route to an impressive 31-7 lead.

Walker's early decision to pick which end zone he wanted instead of possibly gaining early momentum may have been dictated by the sun and westerly breeze. But no one was out catching fly balls in centerfield. This is football. The game is decided on the ground.

And was it ever. Iowa's offensive line spent the entire afternoon carving out lanes wide enough for the Hawkeye Marching Band to high-step through, as the rushing attack amassed 297 total yards.

Even without injured senior Alonzo Cunningham, and despite the loss of junior Eric Steinbach to an elbow injury in the second quarter, Iowa's ground game was relentless. The Hawkeyes' front five, regardless of who stepped in, made another strong case that it is the Hawkeyes' most-improved unit.

When a team's fullback — even if he comes in the form of Iowa's deceptively quick Jeremy Allen — averages five yards

Packers end Bear magic

CHICAGO (AP) — No amazing comeback win for the Chicago Bears this time. Brett Favre and the Green Bay Packers' defense wouldn't allow it.

The elusive Favre — who was 19-of-32 for 268 yards — threw touchdown passes to Bill Schroeder and Antonio Freeman, and Green Bay kept Chicago out of the end zone Sunday to beat the Bears, 20-12.

The Packers (6-2) ended Chicago's six-game winning streak and moved into a first-place tie with the Bears (6-2) in the NFC Central. All Chicago had to show offensively was four field goals by Paul Edinger, even though the Bears moved inside the Packers' 25 four times.

Green Bay's Ahman Green gained 93 yards on 18 carries, while the Packers held Chicago rookie Anthony Thomas to 45 yards on 22 carries.

Rams 48, Panthers 14

ST. LOUIS — Marshall Faulk returned to the line-up after missing three weeks with a bruised right knee and ran for 183 yards and two touchdowns in just one half in St. Louis' victory over Carolina.

Faulk's backup, Trunc Candidate, had 145 yards on 16 carries, including a 23-yard touchdown run.

The Rams (7-1), coming off their bye, ran out to a 31-0 second-quarter lead. The start was reminiscent of their last game, when they led the Saints 24-6 at the break but lost 34-

Hawkeyes get two big victories over weekend

By Tyler Lechtenberg
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team may have begun to turn the tide on its season. The Hawkeyes gathered two victories in Carver-Hawkeye Arena over the weekend: a 3-1 Nov. 10 win over Purdue and a 3-0 annihilation of Western Illinois Sunday afternoon.

With the wins, Iowa improved its record to 6-19 overall, 3-13 in the Big Ten. Purdue fell to 4-21 overall, 1-15 Big Ten, while Western Illinois dropped to 4-19 overall.

After going through a 16-game stretch with only one victory earlier in the season, Iowa is now catching stride — it has won three matches out

We finally pushed through, and we didn't back down when the other team pushed us.

— Rita Buck-Crockett, on Iowa's two wins of four, and the Hawks are playing with confidence.

The Purdue match marked the first time Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett saw her squad match the runs and rallies of the opposition, something the coach has been looking for all season.

"We finally pushed through, and we didn't back down when the other team pushed us," she said. "We didn't maintain our same level — we went up another level. I think that's the beginning of what you need to win consistently."

The Hawkeyes took the first two games from the Boiler-makers, 30-23, 30-24, and appeared well on their way to a quick victory. But Purdue stepped up its level of play after intermission and took a 7-1 lead in game three from which the Hawkeyes could never recover.

The two teams played neck-and-neck during the fourth game, with ties at 26, 28, 29, and 30, before Iowa won the final two points to put away

Men's C. C. team falls short

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's cross-country team came up 34 points short of an automatic bid to the NCAA Championships when it finished fourth at the NCAA Midwest Regional on Nov. 10.

Minnesota and Oklahoma State got their tickets to the national meet stamped by placing first and second with 75 and 88 points, respectively. Nebraska placed third with 94 points, and the Hawkeyes followed with 122 points.

Missing out on the automatic bid was a disappointment, Iowa coach Larry Wiecezorek said, but he felt nothing but pride about the Nov. 10 meet.

"I really feel like the guys laid everything out on the line. I was really proud of the effort they gave," he said. "It's a good team; it's a good group of guys — they just fell a little short."

The Hawkeyes competed very well early in the race, and at the 7K mark, Iowa was in first or second overall. From there though, Wiecezorek said, the Hawkeyes broke apart and fell into fourth.

Three Hawkeyes garnered All-Region honors by finishing in the top 25. Junior Joe Welter, a late addition to the Hawkeye lineup, paced the Hawkeyes in the 10,000-meter race with a 15th-place finish in 31:21.

Fifth-year seniors Nick Nordheim and Trent Corey finished 18th and 21st in times of 31:23 and 31:27, respectively.

This season marks the third time Nordheim and Corey earned All-Region honors, and the mark they will leave on the program will not be forgotten, Wiecezorek said.

"They've been sensational," he said. "They've been the mainstays for our program for five years now."

Freshman Dan Haut crossed the line in 31:39, good for 28th place, and seniors Sean Moeller and Shaun Allen placed 42nd and 43rd with identical times of 31:52. Senior Adam Thomas did not finish the race.

Iowa's inability to get a high finisher plagued the team Nov. 10, though had a Hawkeye or two finished closer to the front, the results may have been a little different, Wiecezorek said.

"If you look at the different teams, almost everyone had a lower number," he said.

Women's tennis team hits peak at end of fall season

By All Noller
The Daily Iowan

We finished this season on a high note.

— Paul Wardlaw
Iowa coach

The Iowa women's tennis team dominated in the final day of competition at the Wisconsin Invitational on Sunday, winning all 17 matches against Northern Arizona. The Hawkeyes also competed against players from Northwestern and Wisconsin from Nov. 9-10, winning five against Northwestern and six against Wisconsin.

The victories were valuable for the Hawkeyes. Northwestern has won the Big Ten championship the past three years, and Wisconsin returns many seasoned veterans.

"Due to the caliber of competition, the singles players did very well," Hawkeye coach Paul Wardlaw said. "Our top court of Toni [Neykova], Cassie [Haas], and Steffi [Hoch] won all their matches."

The Hawkeyes won 14 singles matches out of 17 and five of eight doubles matches. Neykova, Haas, and Hoch won all three of their matches, and Deni Alexandrova won two out of three matches. Neykova and Alexandrova were undefeated in doubles competition, with victories over Rauh and Stacy Kokx of Northwestern (8-2) and Lara Vojnov and Katie McGaffigan of Wisconsin (8-4).

Hawkeyes Pascale Veraverbeke and Gloria Okino each earned a pair of victories over Wisconsin and Northern Arizona.

"We finished this season on a high note," Wardlaw said. "We had the best record of the tournament."

Lyle stands out; team finishes 1-2

By Travis Brown
The Daily Iowan

During a weekend road trip to Indiana, the Iowa women's swimming team recorded one win over Ohio State and two losses to Indiana and Purdue.

Lyle

The Hawkeyes took on the Hoosiers on Nov. 9, falling, 194-106. Then they traveled to West Lafayette, Ind., the following day for a double-dual meet against Purdue and Ohio State. They split in the event, defeating the Buckeyes, 194-102, but losing to the Boilermakers, 159.5-139.5.

At Indiana, the Hawkeyes won five events; the team was led by Jennifer Skolaski, Christie Hooper, and Allison Lyle. The freshman Skolaski won the 1,000-freestyle (10:07.67), and placed second in the 200-backstroke. Hooper won the 200-freestyle (1:52.41) and finished second in the 500-freestyle. Lyle won the 200-breaststroke (2:19.85), placed second in the 50-freestyle, and was a member of the relay team that won the 200-freestyle. Kristin Eide added a win, placing first in the 100-breaststroke (1:06.70).

The Hawks did well on Nov. 9, despite the absence of senior Melissa Loehndorf, who took the day off to rest a sore shoulder. "She's got a limited amount that she can swim. Purdue and Ohio State were a priority," Iowa coach Garland O'Keeffe said.

Loehndorf was back the next day for the meets against Purdue and Ohio State, recording a win in the 200-butterfly (2:03.79) and finishing second in the 100-butterfly. Skolaski again had a big day, winning both the 100-free (10:09.38) and the 500-free (4:58.75). Lyle, Hooper, Michelle Bagi, and Erin Cochran each also won an event for the Hawkeyes.

O'Keeffe was happy with how Skolaski swam.

"She had an outstanding weekend," she said. "I was extremely pleased with her performance. For a freshman to stand up and win events consistently is excellent."

O'Keeffe was also impressed with Hooper and Lyle.

"Christie Hooper's times were outstanding, and she had back-to-back event wins in the 200-free," she said. "Another standout was senior Allison Lyle. She sprained her ankle on Tuesday [Nov. 6]. Our trainers did a great job with her."

Male swimmers see improvement in loss

By Travis Brown
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swimming team lost to Purdue, 172-128, on Nov. 10 during a meet in West Lafayette, Ind.

Despite the loss, the Hawkeyes said they saw improvement from their performance last week.

"We improved a lot from our meet at Wisconsin," said sophomore Jason Snider. "We swam well as a team. Purdue was a very deep team. It had a lot of guys who could perform in a lot of events."

The Hawks were paced by seniors Marko Milenkovic and Simon Chrisander. Milenkovic won the 200-backstroke (1:50.82) and the 200-individual medley (1:52.42). Chrisander won both diving events.

Snider and Alex Boyce also each won an event. Snider took first in the 200-butterfly (1:51.40), winning his second event of the year. Boyce placed first in the 100-butterfly (0:50.69), giving him his first win this year.

"It was really close to my best time," Snider said. "Hopefully, I can improve on that when we go to Minnesota next weekend. I felt really confident about my race."

The team of Andrei Prada, Gregg Gazvoda, Andrei Ciurca, and Jay Buys won the 200-free relay in a time of 1:27.05.

Iowa fell to 0-2 in dual meets for the season. The Hawkeyes will hop into the pool Friday and Saturday at the Minnesota Invite in Minneapolis.

SOCCER BRIEF

Iowa's Lynch scores All-Big Ten honor for third-straight year

Junior forward Sarah Lynch was named to the first-team All-Big Ten squad in soccer during the Big Ten Tournament over the weekend in West Lafayette, Ind.

Lynch has been so honored three-consecutive years; she has set many school records.

This season, Lynch finished second in the conference in shots and shots per game. She scored 10 goals, including four game-winning goals.

Iowa was knocked out of the tournament by Illinois, 4-1, in the first round on Nov. 8.

The Daily Iowan

For one day, the only quarterback controversy facing coach Kirk Ferentz was when to insert third-stringer David Raih into the ball game.

With a solid performance by starting quarterback Kyle McCann and another sound effort by backup Brad Banks, Iowa posted 305 yards passing in its 59-16 victory over Northwestern.

Though Ferentz started McCann for two series, he stuck to his game plan of bringing Banks in for the next two series, then doing what the situation dictated.

McCann, who did not speak with the media afterwards, went 9-14 for 156 yards with one touchdown. Banks was 7-9 with one touchdown and an interception while passing for 145 yards.

"We just felt like we'd balance it out a bit," Ferentz said of the equal performances.

Banks continues to adjust to his role as Iowa's No. 2 quarterback, and he remains at ease with the way in which the coaching staff is handling the platoon.

"I'm comfortable; I'm getting on the field," he said. "I'm just thankful to be playing."

Let's bowl!

With the victory, the Hawkeyes improve to 5-4 on the year and move one victory closer to becoming eligible for a bowl for the first time since 1997.

Ferentz played down the importance of the victory for bowl hopes, choosing to focus on the fact Iowa could finish at least .500 in the conference for the first time in his three years.

However, players seemed more cognizant of what may be in store for Iowa.

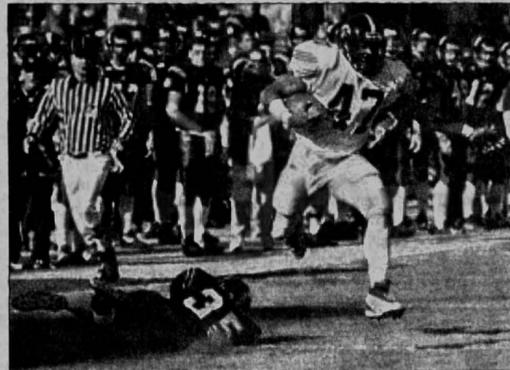

"It's really big," said defensive back Bob Sanders. "We're all still shooting for a bowl game."

Home run for Siaka

Stuck behind Ladell Betts, Aaron Greiving, and Fred Russell on Iowa's depth chart, junior running back Siaka Massaquoi didn't know if he would see action in his last trip to Ryan Field.

Massaquoi, a native of Evanston, got more than he bargained for when he took a pitch from Banks and scored from one yard out for Iowa's final score of the day. It was Massaquoi's first career touchdown as a Hawkeye.

"It felt great, real good," he

Zach Boyden-Holmes/The Daily Iowan

Jeremy Allen breaks a tackle en route to a 45-yard touchdown in the Hawkeyes' 59-16 routing of Northwestern Nov. 10.

said. "I was just thinking about it on the bus ride up — I've got to do something big for my family and friends."

Starters return

Defensive linemen Jerry Montgomery and Derrick Pickens returned to the field for the Hawkeyes on Nov. 10 after missing last week's game at Wisconsin. Though the two did not start, each recorded a tackle in the victory.

Also returning to the field for Iowa were offensive linemen Andy Lightfoot and Ben Sobieski. Lightfoot replaced Eric Steinbach late in the second quarter because of an injury, while Sobieski replaced Robert Gallery for Iowa's final scoring drive. Both had been recovering from injuries in recent weeks.

Sanders and tight end Dallas Clark also saw action after missing portions of the Wisconsin game.

One sure thing, quarterback will win Heisman

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

For those trying to sort out the national championship puzzle, here's something else to ponder: Who's the leading contender for the Heisman Trophy?

With three weeks to go before Heisman ballots are due at New York's Downtown Athletic Club, the race has turned into a mad scramble. All that seems certain is a quarterback will win college football's top individual prize the night of Dec. 8.

Which quarterback is anyone's guess, especially after Nov. 10 games. So take your pick from this final four: Nebraska's Eric Crouch, Miami's Ken Dorsey, Florida's Rex Grossman, and Oregon's Joey Harrington.

One of these guys will become just the third quarterback since 1993 and 21st overall to win the Heisman, first presented in 1935.

Other quarterbacks, including Texas' Chris Simms, Mississippi's Eli Manning, Fresno State's David Carr, and BYU's Brandon Doman, have received Heisman support, but none are likely to make the A list.

The contending running backs, meanwhile, took themselves out of the race either by getting in trouble or just playing poorly.

UCLA's DeShaun Foster and Boston College's William Green missed games on Nov. 10 due to suspensions, and their playing status is uncertain; Northwestern's Damien Anderson, recently injured, and Oregon State's Ken Simonton were eliminated early thanks to poor performances.

For now, the leader is Crouch. He has run for 953 yards and 16 touchdowns, passed for 1,312 yards and seven touchdowns, and has his Heisman-defining moment — a 63-yard TD catch off a trick play in the biggest game of the year, a 20-10 win over Oklahoma on Oct. 27.

With the Huskers ahead 13-10, wingback Thunder Collins took a handoff from Crouch around right end and pitched it to freshman Mike Stuntz, a quarterback playing receiver this season. Stuntz threw a perfect pass to Crouch, who caught the ball at the 40 and sprinted into the end zone with 6:10 left.

Of greater importance,

Crouch's team is 11-0 and in the middle of the national championship chase. On Saturday, Crouch was steady in a 31-21 win over Kansas State, running for 106 yards and a TD and passing for 60 yards with two interceptions.

Dorsey was the leader before the 18-7 escape at Boston College Nov. 10, a game in which he threw four interceptions to give him eight for the season. In the worst game of his career, the Miami junior was 20 of 41 for 222 yards and did not throw a TD pass. For the season, he's passed for 2,004 yards and 15 touchdowns.

To get back in the race, he needs to come up big in Miami's final three games — against No. 14 Syracuse, No. 16 Washington, and No. 18 Virginia Tech. Plus, the Hurricanes (8-0) must keep winning.

Grossman has been not only the model of efficiency, but he's piled up the biggest numbers of all in leading the Gators to an 8-1 record. The sophomore — no sophomore has ever won the Heisman — is the nation's pass-efficiency leader, completing 199 of 302 for 3,244 yards and 30 TDs.

He was 21 of 33 for 302 yards and three TDs — and ran for another — in the Gators' 54-17 rout of South Carolina on Saturday.

If he wins the Heisman, he may not attend because of a prior commitment — the Southeastern Conference title game is the same day.

Miami stays No.1

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Miami is still No. 1 in the Associated Press media poll. A shaky No. 1.

The Hurricanes (8-0) held off Boston College 18-7 on Saturday, then held off No. 2 Nebraska (11-0) in Sunday's balloting by the 72 sports writers and broadcasters on the AP panel.

Miami wasn't as lucky in the USA Today/ESPN coaches poll, where Nebraska took over the No. 1 spot, with the Hurricanes second.

In the Associated Press Top 25, Miami received 44 first-place votes and 1,768 points, with Nebraska collecting the other 28 first-place votes and 1,756 points.

Last week, Miami led Nebraska by 36 points. The Huskers are just 12 points behind now. Nebraska beat Kansas State, 31-21, on Nov. 10 after trailing by a point at halftime.

Oklahoma (9-1), the defending national champions, remained No. 3, followed by No. 4 Florida (8-1), No. 5 Texas (9-1), No. 6 Tennessee (7-1), No. 7 Oregon (9-1), No. 8 BYU (10-0), No. 9 Washington State (9-1), and No. 10 Maryland (9-1).

The top seven teams remained the same as last week; BYU moved up one spot, Washington State two places and, Maryland three.

Michigan was No. 11, followed by No. 12 Illinois, No. 13 Stanford, No. 14 Syracuse, No. 15 Colorado, No. 16 Washington, No. 17 Auburn, No. 18 Virginia Tech, No. 19 Louisville, and No. 20 UCLA.

Florida State tumbled 11 places to No. 21 after a 34-28 loss to unranked North Carolina State. South Carolina was

No. 22, followed by No. 23 Georgia, No. 24 Marshall, and No. 25 Ohio State.

Florida State (6-3) is in danger of dropping out of the AP poll for the first time since Sept. 17, 1989, a streak of 210 consecutive polls. The Seminoles play at No. 4 Florida on Nov. 10. The last time Florida State lost three or more games in a season was 1986, when the 'Noles went 7-4-1.

Syracuse (8-2) plays at Miami on Saturday with the Big East Conference title on the line. The Orangemen moved up four places to No. 14 with their eighth win in a row, 24-13 over West Virginia.

Colorado (8-2) jumped six spots after beating Iowa State, 40-27. The Buffaloes play host to the Cornhuskers on Nov. 23 with the Big 12 North title riding on the outcome.

Marshall and Ohio State are the new Top 25 teams this week, with Georgia Tech and Michigan State dropping out.

Seattle's Shaun Alexander tears apart Oakland with 266 yards in 24-17 win

31 under an avalanche of eight turnovers.

This time there was no collapse, as the Rams handed the Panthers (1-8) their franchise-worst eighth straight loss.

Jets 27, Chiefs 7
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Curtis Martin, the NFL's top rusher, ran for 113 yards and three touchdowns to lead New York over Kansas City.

Martin also moved into 16th place on the career rushing list with 8,671 yards, passing Hall of Famer Jim Taylor. The Jets (6-3) also had three interceptions and a fumble recovery in winning their third straight. They showed all the elements a team needs on a blustery, chilly day in manhandling the Chiefs (2-7).

Falcons 20, Cowboys 13

ATLANTA — Darrien Gordon had punt returns of 74 and 41 yards in the fourth quarter, setting up a touchdown and a field goal that carried Atlanta to a sloppy victory over Dallas.

The Falcons (4-4) won without quarterback Chris Chandler, who sat out with a rib injury. No. 1 draft pick Vick made his first pro start, but coach Dan Reeves borrowed from Steve Spurrier's playbook in the second half.

Patriots 21, Bills 11

FOXBORO, Mass. — Antowain Smith ran for 100 yards and two touchdowns to lead New England over Buffalo, as Bills quarterback Rob Johnson struggled before being knocked out of the game on his fifth sack.

With the crowd chanting for Doug Flutie, who went to San Diego after three uneasy years of sharing starting job with Johnson, Alex Van Pelt entered for the Bills (1-7) and threw a 17-yard touchdown pass to Peerless Price with 2:43 left. Van Pelt — who completed just two of seven passes — then hit Eric Moulds for a 2-point conversion, making the score 14-11.

Steelers 15, Browns 12

CLEVELAND — Kris Brown, who missed four field goals last week and was wide once Sunday, kicked his fifth field goal with 9:38 left in overtime to lift Pittsburgh over Cleveland.

Brown's game-winning, 32-yard kick was set up by Jerome Bettis, who ran for 163 yards — 58 on Pittsburgh's winning drive in OT — as the Steelers (6-2) stayed alone atop the AFC Central.

Dolphins 27, Colts 24

INDIANAPOLIS — Jay Fiedler threw two touchdown passes to Chris Chambers, and Travis Minor ran for one as the Dolphins won their fourth straight in Oakland's Jerry Rice is brought down by Seattle Seahawks' Willie Williams and Reggie Tongue after catching a pass for an 18-yard gain in the second quarter Sunday in Seattle.

Indianapolis.

The Colts finished with Peyton Manning and leading tackler Mike Peterson both injured. Manning, who was bloodied by a helmet-to-helmet shot late in the game, had a swollen jaw after the game and said he would have X-rays to see if it was broken. Peterson tore a PCL in his knee.

Bucs 20, Lions 17

PONTIAC, Mich. — Martin Gramatica's 35-yard field goal with 4 seconds left gave Tampa Bay a victory and kept Detroit the lone winless team in the NFL.

The Buccaneers are 4-4 for the fourth-straight year, while the 0-8 Lions are off to their worst start since going 0-11 in 1942.

Detroit began the fourth quarter with a 17-7 deficit, but tied it with 1:49 left. But the Buccaneers drove 63 yards in 1:45 to set up Gramatica's kick.

Jaguars 30, Bengals 13

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Mark Brunell threw for two touchdowns, and Stacey Mack ran for two more to help Jacksonville snap a five-game losing streak.

The Jaguars (3-5) scored 21 points in the third quarter to take a 28-13 lead over Cincinnati (4-4) and, unlike the last two weeks, they figured out how to hold onto a double-digit lead.

Broncos 26, Chargers 16

DENVER — Brian Griese threw

two touchdown passes just 39 seconds apart late in the first half to lead Denver over San Diego.

Denver (5-4), moving into a second-place tie with San Diego (5-4) in the AFC West, capitalized on a sprained left knee sustained by San Diego's leading tackler, safety Rodney Harrison, and injuries to linebacker Orlando Ruff (stinger) and cornerback Alex Molden (left ankle).

The Broncos built a 26-3 lead midway through the third quarter. San Diego rallied with a long touchdown pass and a fumble recovery for a touchdown, but Doug Flutie subsequently threw three interceptions.

Giants 17, Cards 10

TEMPE, Ariz. — Michael Strahan punched the ball out of Jake Plummer's hands during a sack to stop an Arizona scoring threat, setting off a wild play that led to a New York touchdown.

Tiki Barber rushed for 118 yards on 17 carries, and Ron Dayne added 49 yards in 19 attempts, including a 3-yard touchdown run on the first possession for New York (5-4).

49ers 28, Saints 27

SAN FRANCISCO — Garrison Hearst rushed for 145 yards against one of the NFL's best run defenses, and Jeff Garcia threw four touchdown passes as San Francisco beat New Orleans for its fifth victory in six games.

Garcia, who was 21-of-34 for 252 yards, hit Terrell Owens with eight passes for 100 yards and two touchdowns for the 49ers (6-2). Garcia also found Eric Johnson for the go-ahead TD with 11:06 left.

Eagles 48, Vikings 17

PHILADELPHIA — Duce Staley had 146 yards rushing and one TD in his first start since injuring his right shoulder in Week 2, and Donovan McNabb threw three touchdown passes, and ran for another one to lead Philadelphia over Minnesota.

Philadelphia (5-3) scored on six straight possessions, including its last five in the first half. The Vikings (3-5) have lost two straight by a lopsided margin. Tampa Bay beat Minnesota 41-14 on Oct. 28.

Seattle 34, Raiders 27

SEATTLE — Shaun Alexander ran himself into the Seattle Seahawks' record book and almost into the NFL record book.

Alexander set franchise marks with 266 yards rushing and an 88-yard touchdown run as the Seahawks beat the AFC West-leading Oakland Raiders, 34-27, on Sunday night.

The second-year running back from Alabama, starting his fifth-straight game in place of the injured Ricky Watters, also had TD runs of six and 10 yards for the Seahawks (4-4).

Win comes as no surprise to Ferentz

before being pulled for backup Tony Stauss near the end of the third quarter.

"To me, the story of this game today is defense," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said.

With a commanding 59-9 lead at the end of the third quarter, the Hawkeyes finished the game with a solid performance from reserves on the field. Iowa's second- and third-string defensive units followed the lead of the starters, allowing just one touchdown in the second half on Northwestern's final series.

gin shows what we are capable of when we play as a team," running back Ladell Betts said. "We can do anything."

Betts finished the day with 86 yards rushing and two scores.

Winning by this big of a margin shows what we are capable of ... We can do anything.

— Ladell Betts

The Hawkeyes ran up 297 yards rushing while using nine different backs in the victory.

The dominating performance did not surprise Ferentz, though he believes this team is not much different than the one that lost two of its last three games.

"I swear we're not doing anything fancy or extravagant," he said. "When we don't give up the easy one, we're a tough team."

Both McCann and Banks thrive with great protection

a carry, it's an indication that there is plenty of room to roam. Actually, four different Hawkeye backs averaged five or more yards per carry, turning the chains into an orange-headed caterpillar slinking down the sidelines.

The efficiency demonstrated by heavily protected quarterbacks Kyle McCann and Brad Banks did two things. First, it allowed the Hawkeyes to score a ridiculous 59 points. Second, it kept Northwestern's potentially dangerous offense off the field.

But Iowa's defensive pursuit made the veteran Kustok, when he was in the game, look like a confused freshman and turned the Wildcats' corps of receivers into men running routes with little reason.

Kunle Patrick, Sam Simmons, and Jon Schweighardt were averaging nearly 36 receptions for a combined 180.5 yards a game prior to the Nov. 10 game.

The Hawkeyes' secondary held the trio to four catches for 55 yards. Schweighardt's stat line was empty after the game.

No single defender had an amazing game. No single offensive player stood above the rest. Poor Nate Kaeding, his third-quarter botched handling of a long snap was the only blunder of the game.

But then again, he was also kicking the football into and out of the end zone, so the post-game ritual of handing out a game ball becomes a pretty daunting task.

The offensive line should get one, but the secondary's protection and the defensive front's pursuit were also noteworthy. McCann and Banks had outstanding afternoons, and Allen put up impressive numbers, along with senior receiver Kahlil Hill.

So I went to Kampman, but he, once again, didn't help much.

"Kahlil had a great day," he said. "Both Kyle and Brad instrumented some great drives. Jeremy had some big plays. Derek [Page] had that interception. Nate was just booming kicks. I could go on if you want me too."

Thanks, point taken.

Hawkeyes showing more confidence in each other than before

the victory with a 32-30.

Senior Sara Meyermann, the Big Ten kills leader, racked up 31 more kills in the win. The Camanche, Iowa, native did not have to carry the entire scoring load, though; three other Hawkeyes cracked double digits in kills. Sophomores Carolyn Giese and Renee Hill both collected 13, and freshman Laura Simpson had 10. Freshman Kassie Petty dished out 46 assists, and Hill added 16.

On Sunday, Western Illinois jetted out to a quick 6-2 lead in the first game, but that proved as the only formidable lead the Westernwinds held all afternoon. Iowa eventually took the lead at 11-10 and sat in the driver's seat for the remainder of the match. The Hawkeyes won the first game, 30-22, behind nine Meyermann kills.

Meyermann matched her first game total with nine more kills in the second game.

Iowa annihilated the Westernwinds in game two, 30-13, marking their largest victory of the season, and the Hawks closed out the match with a 30-20 game-three victory.

For the match, Iowa hit .393 as a team and featured three players — Meyermann, Giese, and junior Jamie Lansing — who hit higher than .500. Meyermann led the Hawkeyes with 21 kills, while Lansing and Giese chipped in 10 and 6 apiece. Petty again led the team with 33 assists.

The difference for the Hawkeyes in their late-season surge has been confidence, Buck-Crockett said, which was especially evident in Sunday's serving — Iowa notched 10 service aces, including five by freshman Pam Kavadas.

"Now, they're threading the needle because they have the confidence not to think, 'If I miss, it's not going to cause a tragedy on the team,'" she said. "Everybody's starting to have confidence in each other, and I think that's what helps."

Iverson makes return to hardwood

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

DALLAS — The Philadelphia 76ers are finally starting to resemble the team that made it to the NBA Finals last season.

Reigning NBA MVP Allen Iverson played Nov. 10 for the first time after elbow surgery, and the Sixers won their first game, 98-91, at Dallas. Iverson shared the court with Aaron McKie, in just his second game after shoulder surgery.

Iverson

"We are finally getting our team out there," Philadelphia coach Larry Brown said. "Anytime you get key players back, and a kid as competitive as Allen, and a kid as competitive as Aaron, it makes it easy for everybody."

Iverson wasn't near top form, shooting 7-for-28 with several bad misses, but he scored 18 points and had nine assists in his return. And half of his points came in the fourth quarter as the Sixers held off Dallas.

"No question, those guys have been waiting for me to get back, and I've been waiting to get back to help them," Iverson said. "I just felt good coming back and being able to contribute. I really didn't care about my overall game. I just wanted to help get a win."

The Sixers, who won the Eastern Conference last year, were the first conference champions to lose their first five games the following season.

Before the returns of Iverson and McKie, Dikembe Mutombo was the only starter remaining from the Philadelphia quintet that started the NBA finals last June, a five-game loss to the Los Angeles Lakers.

Eric Snow is out at least two more months with a broken left wrist, and Tyrone Hill was traded to Cleveland during the off-season.

Iverson grabbed the opening tip against the Mavericks and passed to Matt Harpring for a quick driving layup. The game was tied only once — at 2-2 — and the Sixers never trailed after that.

"This was our best game so far," Brown said. "There's no way we win unless Aaron and Allen are out there."

The Mavericks — denied their first 6-1 start — were within five, 89-84, after Michael Finley made a 3-pointer with just under five minutes left. Iverson then made a sudden stop at the baseline, caught himself from falling down and made a short shot.

A driving layup by Iverson after Harpring's steal made it 95-86 with 1:08 left.

Iverson also had a one-hand, over-the-head assist to Derrick Coleman behind him and hit several other jumpers that kept his team in front. But there were also the 21 missed shots, including some that never hit the rim.

"My shot wasn't there because my legs weren't there. I don't even believe it was because of my elbow," Iverson said.

Iverson said he doesn't have a timetable for being back at top form. But he doesn't sound like he wants to wait long.

"Hopefully, next game," said Iverson, who practiced only a week before playing.

The Sixers play Tuesday at Miami.

McKie, the league's sixth man of the year last season, had right shoulder surgery on Sept. 25 — the same day as Iverson's operation.

In his first game back, a 77-72 loss at Houston on Thursday night, McKie scored eight points — on just 3-of-15 shooting — and had 10 assists in 42 minutes. In his second start Nov. 10, McKie was 8-of-13 from the field with 19 points and five rebounds.

"We've been fighting so hard. We got this one under our belt, and the pressure's off now," McKie said. "We can go ahead and try to build off this one and try to build some momentum and play catch-up."

Last year, the Sixers started a franchise-best 10-0 and didn't lose their fifth game until Dec. 11, in their 21st game.

quote of the day

As a die-hard Red Sox fan who has hated the Yankees all my life, I thought I would never utter such words. But my flimsy logic is that the Yankees are from the same division as the Red Sox.

— Matt Damon,
on confessing that he rooted for the Yankees during the World Series.

The Ledge

by Scott Morgan

Things to do when a really drunk guy hits on you

- Ask if he thinks sex is better than getting wasted. If so, tell him you wouldn't have mattered because there is no way you'd ever sleep with a loser like him.
- Tell him they are giving out free drinks at the back bar and that you'd like him to get you one. When he comes back empty-handed, tell him it was the other bar, and so on.
- Insist that you are actually a guy dressed in drag.
- Insist that he is actually a lesbian dressed as a man, and that you're flattered, but straight.
- Look him in the eye, tell him he just wet himself, and to go away.
- Inquire where you can find that wonderful shade of bloodshot eyeshadow.
- Tell him you'll only go home with him if he has drugs — when he comes back with some, tell a cop that he's holding.
