Turkey, pumpkin pie, and sushi

By Lauren Smiley
The Daily Iowan

Eun-Sun Choi tasted gravy for the first time on Sunday. On Thursday, the South Korea native will attempt, with cookbook in hand, to prepare her family's first Thanksgiving dinner.

"I want to cook turkey and pumpkin pie, but I don't have the experience to cook those," said Choi, mother of two and the wife of a UI visiting professor of dermatology. She will also serve Korean soup and steamed rice.

Living in Iowa City since February, Choi will take a crash course in Thanksgiving traditions and cuisine along with many other UI international students' families.

Choi was one of 14 women at a welcome dinner on Nov. 16 hosted by Iowa City resident Joanne Madsen through the International Women's Club, a social and educational organization that offers English as a Second Language classes to women of the university community. The club hosts a total of 10 social dinners throughout November.

Choi said Thanksgiving isn't entirely unfamiliar because she celebrated a similar holiday at her Christian church in South Korea. The Korean national holiday Chosuk, or the "Full Moon Festival," celebrates a plentiful harvest with family in traditional dress in October.

Madsen said the club has hosted the November dinners for 20 years. The dinners are now co-hosted by international women, too, adding Azerbaijani bread and Korean sushi to the cuisine in the place of mashed potatoes and cranberry sauce.

During another dinner, Margaret Heffron served a more customary meal to teach international students more about American traditions.

"The purpose is to welcome the new members and to sit down and have a dinner having some of the traditional foods we would have in November," she said.

U.S. government inquires about UI int'l students

By Deidre Bello
The Daily Iowan

At first, the UI doctoral student of Middle Eastern descent thought the call was a joke.

He had lived in the United States for more than 17 years, but an agent from the FBI called him at work and was asking personal questions. What do his parents do? Has he been asked to join any new organizations? Does he go to mosque?

The student, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said he realized the agent was just following standard investigative procedures. He was at least mildly relieved when the agent offered assistance if he was being harassed based on his nationality.

Nonetheless, the experience left the student distraught for some time.

"For a week, I was really unhappy and nervous. Suddenly I get finger-pointed because of my nationality," said the student. "I don't know if they are tapping my phones."

The incident illustrates the close scrutiny international students around the country have faced during the weeks following the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Federal investigators have contacted more than 200 college campuses, including the UI, to collect information about international students, specifically those from Middle Eastern countries.

Almost 1,800 international students attend the UI; 150 are from Middle Eastern countries, said Gary Althen, the director of the Office of International Students and Scholars.

Three weeks ago, the UI Registrar's Office was contacted by officials from the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said Catherine Pietrzyk, the senior associate registrar.

At the time, the Registrar's Office could not provide the INS with data because the request was too broad and the university only keeps track of directory information, she said.

"They were asking for things we simply don't know," Pietrzyk said; she declined to say what information specifically the agency was seeking.

From burlap sacks to millions in donations

By Vess Mitev

The man who has donated a total of $15 million to the UI started out mending burlap and cotton sacks. The eighth of nine children born in a Polish immigrant family, Marvin Pomerantz says he knows what it's like to start from scratch.

"I started with absolutely nothing," he said.

As a child, Pomerantz worked for his father before graduating with a UI business degree in 1952. He founded his first paper-packaging business, Great Plains Bag, in 1960.

"It taught me a lot," he said. "It's not how much you make but what you do with it that counts."

Pomerantz's latest contribution is $10 million for the university for a new career center that will bear his name.

After strikes, Taliban offers to give up Kunduz

By Ellen Knickmeyer
Associated Press

BANGI, Afghanistan — The Taliban offered on Sunday to surrender its last northern stronghold if Arab and other foreign fighters loyal to Osama bin Laden in the city are spared, an anti-Taliban commander said. The Northern Alliance, meanwhile, agreed to a conference on neutral ground to plan a multi-ethnic government.

The offer to surrender Kunduz came after U.S. bombers unleashed their heaviest strikes so far on the city. Warplanes were also reported in action near the Taliban southern stronghold of Kandahar and areas of eastern Afghanistan where Osama bin Laden is believed to maintain camps and hide-outs.

In Washington, National

Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice said the advances on the ground were reducing bin Laden's room to maneuver. "We think that the more that we are stripping away his protection ... that we're beginning to narrow his possibilities for hiding," Rice told CNN's "Late Edition."

Secretary of State Colin Powell said the Northern Alliance had agreed to take part in U.N.-brokered talks with other Afghan factions about forming a new power-sharing government in Afghanistan.

The head of the alliance, Burhanuddin Rabbani, said on Nov. 17 that his group supported such a conference but wanted it to take place in the capital, Kabul. The United Nations favors a neutral site.

Bar employees to fight new alcohol-law charges

By Mike Dhar
The Daily Iowan

Employees at two downtown bars who became the first to receive citations under the city's new alcohol ordinance say they will appeal the charges to the City Council.

"I'm going to fight it. We didn't do anything wrong," said Mike Porter, the owner of One-Eyed Jakes.

Two bartenders at Porter's bar — David Urech, 23, and Mark Thibos, 21, — were cited late on Nov. 15 for allegedly selling more than two drinks in a single sale. The same night, Q Bar manager Ingrid Madsen was ticketed for the same offense.

Undercover police officers allegedly spotted the transactions, which were reported to uniformed officers, police said.

Porter denied that his employees sold more than two drinks during one sale. At the Q, Madsen, 27, said she was charged after selling a drink to a patron of legal age who then gave it to another person of legal age.

Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman said he's confident the citations will stand up to appeals.

The employees were charged with a simple misdemeanor and face a fine of up to $500. Councilors could also pursue civil penalties against the bars, said Assistant City Attorney Andrew Matthews.

Police waited until Nov. 15 to begin enforcing the ordinance so bar owners would have time to approach city officials with questions and train their employees, said Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Brotherton.

"There was a grace period," he said. "We gave them time to discuss the procedure with the city attorney."

The ordinance limiting the number of drinks patrons may purchase at one time went into effect Aug. 1. The measure also banned two-for-one and all-you-can-drink specials.

Councilors said they discussed an acclimation period with police but did not tell them to forestall enforcement.

"I don't think the City Council pretends to tell the police how to do their work," Lehman said.

Despite the acclimation period,

Feingold tour stops in Iowa City

By Tony Robinson
The Daily Iowan

The U.S. senator who cast the lone vote against President Bush's anti-terrorism bill will come to the UI today to speak about his personal experience with anthrax, terrorism in the White House, and moving on.

Sen. Russell Feingold, D-Wis., will speak roughly one month after anthrax was discovered in his Washington, D.C., office, as part of his college-campus tour. The 48-year-old Democrat's tour was scheduled before Sept. 11 at students' request, but he said discussion will be dominated by international and domestic policies in light of the terrorist attacks. His speech, titled "What We Can Do for Our Country," is part of a tour that includes Michigan, Iowa, Texas, and North Carolina.

"It's a chance to learn from students," he said. "It's time to start listening to what young people have been telling us."

The Janesville, Wis., native is serving his second term in the U.S. Senate. He received bachelor's degrees from the University of Wisconsin and Oxford University and a doctorate from Harvard in 1979. He is currently a member of the Senate committees on foreign relations and international operations.

Feingold said the Nov. 11 discovery of anthrax in his office has not influenced his opinion on foreign policy. Three of the 26 people working in his office tested positive for the anthrax bacteria.

"Of course it made me angry," he said. "But just because people do terrible deeds doesn't mean we give up our values."

the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, Mich., on Nov. 11, Feingold told students he firmly backed his choice to cast the only opposing vote to President Bush's anti-terrorism bill. He said the bill could infringe on individual rights and Americans should fight to protect their civil liberties.

Mayrose Wegmann, the president of the University Democrats, said the senator's rationale behind the tour is to reach young people who are misrepresented by an older Congress.

"We are very fortunate he chose Iowa as one of the universities to visit," Wegmann said.

Feingold said he will also discuss racial profiling, a balance between law enforcement and civil liberties, and campaign-finance reform.

During his two campaigns for Senate, Feingold kept his pledge of limiting spending to $1 per voter and not allowing soft money to be spent on his behalf. He is also pushing for the McCain-Feingold bill, a measure co-sponsored by Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., that would ban the use of soft money in elections.

Feingold's lecture, sponsored by University Democrats, will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the IMU Second Floor Ballroom. It will consist of a speech and a question-and-answer session, each accounting for about half of the two hours.

Watching the night the sky rained light

By Andrew Bridges
Associated Press

MOUNT WILSON, Calif. — Thousands of shooting stars provided a dazzling light show Sunday that amazed veteran and novice stargazers alike as the Leonid meteor shower made the moonless sky appear to rain light.

At the peak of the early morning shower, as many as 1,250 meteors per hour streaked overhead, according to NASA estimates.

Atop Mount Wilson, hundreds of cars clogged the road leading to the observatory high above the Los Angeles basin, as stargazers sought out dark spots to watch the display.

Patty Ronney, 49, said she had never seen a single meteor before leaving her El Segundo home late on Nov. 17. Hours later, she had seen countless numbers.

"It's getting exciting, because the more I see, the more I want to see. It's such a novel event," Ronney said as she stood wrapped in a woolen poncho near the observatory.

Streak after streak of light shot across the sky as tiny bits of comet debris burned up harmlessly in the atmosphere. The brightest flares left shimmering, smoky trails that hung in the sky for a few seconds.

"There are the little 'eeee' ones; then there are the 'oooh' ones — those ones you have to stand up and follow with your head," Susan Kitchens said on Mount Wilson.

The shower was less intense than the 4,000 per hour some had predicted, but nonetheless it was a more impressive display than astronomers have seen in years.

"I'm seeing more [meteors] in the last six hours than I have in my whole life," said George Heald, who teaches astronomy at the University of New Mexico, as he watched the shower with 20 students in the Cibola National Forest southeast of Albuquerque, N.M.

It was the most spectacular meteor display in 35 years, said Tony Phillips, an astronomer and editor of the ScienceNASA Web site, <http://science.nasa.gov>. The largest fireballs rivaled Venus in brightness, momentarily illuminating objects on the ground.

"Right now, we're getting the best of both worlds: a lot of meteors, and they're really bright," Phillips said in a telephone interview from Bishop, along the east side of the Sierra Nevada and sheltered from the rest of California's light pollution. "It was worth getting up for."

The best viewing in the United States was between 4 and 6 a.m. EST, but people on the East Coast reported seeing meteors fly even after dawn broke at 6:46. Some meteors could be seen even in New York City, where light pollution normally makes for poor skygazing, Phillips said.

Candy and snacks rule in state prisons

Associated Press

NEWTON, Iowa — While inmates in Iowa's prisons may have to do without many freedoms, they can still enjoy doughnuts, corn chips, and other luxuries.

Each year, Iowa's 8,100 inmates spend approximately $2.5 million on such items as tobacco, candy and snacks, electronics, personal-hygiene products, and writing supplies.

Prisoners are given three meals a day, but many inmates complain that the meals are too small and lack variety.

"Prison food is lousy to begin with, and now with budget cuts, they have cut back," said Luel Robinson, 56, who is serving time for second-degree robbery. "They boil the vegetables down so there are no vitamins in it, so guys have to look out for themselves."

In previous years, inmates bought items from each prison. But Iowa Prison Industries began centralizing sales last July, establishing a 20,000-square-foot center at the Newton Correctional Facility. There, orders from four state prisons are filled. Officials expect to expand operations next year to serve all nine of the state's prisons.

"This reduces any potential contraband from coming in, and it allows us to standardize items and pricing from one prison to another," said Roger Baysden, the director of Iowa Prison Industries.

Thomas O'Connell, 44, a worker at the Newton facility, sees other advantages to the centralized facility.

"There is a greater variety of products, and overall the products are cheaper, not by a whole bunch, but a little bit," said O'Connell, who has served 20 years in prison for first-degree murder.

The centralized system also makes it possible to account for all inmates and what they have bought, Baysden said. This makes it possible for prison officials to tell if one inmate has strong-armed another and has products in his cell that are not authorized, Baysden said.

Inmates can buy things from a catalogue of 700 items with money deducted from their prison accounts. One of the most popular items is Ramen noodles, which cost 24 cents.

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Thousands of demonstrators marched outside Fort Benning Sunday to protest a former Army school they blame for alleged human-rights violations against Latin American civilians. Approximately 40 people were taken into custody.

During the annual funeral march to the front gate of the post, protesters carried signs reading "Imperialist Assassins" and created a memorial to alleged victims of graduates of the School of the Americas, which was a training center for Latin American soldiers. Some stuck crosses through the chain-link fence.

"I wanted to bear witness to these deeds by SOA graduates — to take a stand against terrorism wherever it happens," said Ralph Armbruster, a social-science teacher from Santa Barbara, Calif.

Approximately 40 people were taken into custody after they slipped through an opening in a fence and onto base property. The crowd, estimated by police at 6,000 to 7,000, included senior citizens and veterans.

With the United States at war against terrorists, Americans riding a patriotic wave, organizers said it was more important than ever to protest the school.

"We are fighting terrorism of one kind or another in other parts of the world but here we are harboring and training terrorists," the Rev. Roy Bourgeois, who founded the School of the Americas Watch in 1990, said Nov. 17.

The annual demonstration at the gates of Fort Benning commemorates the Nov. 16, 1988, killings in El Salvador of Jesuit priests, to whom some of the school's graduates have been linked.

Fort Benning officials drag away one of many School of the Americas Watch protesters who crawled under the fence near the main gate of Fort Benning, Ga., Sunday. Approximately 70 protesters were detained. The protesters rallied in order to shut down the school, which is now called the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation.

Military officials strongly deny Bourgeois' claims.

"Criminals often go on to commit crimes in spite of the best efforts of the institutions they attend," said Brig. Gen. Paul Eaton. "People are focusing on the past. We are focusing on the future."

The Army closed its School of the Americas in December of 2000 after a decade of protests.

A month later, SOA was replaced by the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation, which is operated by the Department of Defense. The department says the institute's new mission is to focus on 21st century challenges, not the bloody Latin American insurgencies of the 1980s.

NATION BRIEF

New Yorkers, Dominicans mourn Flight 587 victims

NEW YORK (AP) — Mourners from New York to the Dominican Republic gathered in separate ceremonies Sunday to grieve for the passengers of American Airlines Flight 587, the Dominican Republic-bound airliner that plunged into a suburban neighborhood shortly after takeoff.

"Oh Lord, we come before you with open hearts, with broken hearts," said the Rev. Ruben Diaz, who gave the invocation in New York after the singing of the Dominican and U.S. national anthems.

New York's outdoor, interfaith ceremony took place at Riis Park, approximately two miles from the crash site on the oceanfront Rockaway Peninsula of Queens. Mourners included Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, Gov. George Pataki, and U.S. Sens. Charles Schumer and Hillary Rodham Clinton.

It was intended to unite two communities that had little contact before the Nov. 12 crash.

Poll: 60% of Americans want smallpox vaccine

By Will Lester
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Three-fifths of Americans say they would want a smallpox vaccination if it were widely available, according to an Associated Press poll that suggests continued nervousness about bioterrorism.

Approximately half of the respondents say they are concerned about the threat of a smallpox attack and think last month's anthrax attacks are the beginning of an extended campaign, according to the poll conducted for AP by ICR of Media, Pa.

Some of those still concerned about bioterrorism say they generally are nervous because they do not know what's coming next. "To me, now, anything can happen," said Michelle Hunt, a 50-year-old retail clerk from Boulder City, Nev. "If it's out there, it could happen. I try not to worry about it."

The U.S. government is stockpiling the smallpox vaccine in case of terrorist attacks but has no plans to routinely vaccinate the general public. Smallpox vaccine is made with a live virus related to smallpox, so it can cause some very serious side effects. Experts estimate that if every American were vaccinated against smallpox, some 400 people would die from the vaccine.

A majority of Americans indicate they would get the vaccine if it were available, even after they are informed of the possible risks.

"Smallpox is incredibly contagious, and they only have 15 million vaccinations," said 28-year-old Bradford Rubinoff of Tucson, Ariz. "If people would use anthrax against us, who's to say they wouldn't use smallpox?"

Asked if he would want to get the smallpox vaccination even though it carries some health risks, he said, "Absolutely."

Among the risks: Approximately 3 in every 1 million people vaccinated would get encephalitis, which can cause permanent brain damage or death. Another 250 would get a smallpox-like rash that also can be fatal if not properly treated.

People with weak immune systems — patients who have AIDS, cancer, or organ transplants, or are taking high-dose steroids — are most at risk for the side effects, as are people with the skin condition eczema.

The anthrax attacks through the mail, which rattled the nation throughout October, have subsided a bit. But last week's discovery of a suspicious letter to Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., may revive public concern.

Dems, GOP face off on education

By Greg Toppo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's economic downturn is forcing states to cut billions of dollars from their education budgets and leading congressional Democrats to push for more federal education spending.

Democrats, led by Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Rep. George Miller of California, cite an expected $11.3 billion shortfall in state education budgets in fiscal year 2002. Congressional analysts compiled the figures from state budget offices. Their report was to be released today.

"The faltering economy is putting at risk the advancements that many states are making to improve the quality of their educational systems," Miller said.

Congressional negotiators are working to reconcile differences in education bills approved by the House and the Senate.

The Republican-controlled House proposes approximately $24 billion in spending. The Senate, run by Democrats, wants $33 billion. The federal government is spending roughly $18.4 billion this year on elementary and secondary education.

Dave Schnitger, a spokesman for Rep. John Boehner, R-Ohio, the chairman of the House Education and the Workforce Committee, said the bill isn't just about money.

"To simply provide massive new funding increases without providing red-tape relief for schools and insisting on better results would be fundamentally unfair to the next generation of American children," he said.

David Shreve of the National Conference of State Legislatures said he doubts whether the money included in the education bill will help much.

"The problem is that the money that they have is very limited, has too many strings, and has a great deal of bureaucracy," Shreve said.

He said the bill, which mandates more state testing and data reporting, would require states to spend more to maintain their federal funding.

David Griffith of the National Association of State Boards of Education said states support the Democrats' bid for money. "States are under the gun right now," he said.

Deep Dish goes Global at the pinnacle of its game

By Aaron M. Brim
The Daily Iowan

Global Underground employs progressive house DJs/remixers Deep Dish for its 21st release, recorded from the reddest capital of the world, Moscow. The double-disc compilation's message contrasts from preceding Yoshitoshi releases, such as the Yoshi-esque series, which filled dancing tummies craving an entrée of funky, mashed-up beats sopped in soul gravy.

In luring the listener into the 146-minute séance, Moscow visits the nu-techno and nu-trance ends of the dance spectrum.

Twanged by barren beats and croaky vocals, disc one is bottomless, sensual, and dark. Even Deep Dish's unreleased remix of Dido's "Thank You" incorporates a deceptively callous appeal.

Prior to the eloquent Dido text, the aura evokes a sullen domino effect, triggered by SSHH's "Hold That Body" and Manaca, Chus & Ceballos' "The Strong Rhythm." While the body is held and the rhythm is strong, the overall gratification is minimal.

Not to fear, Deep Dish recovers from the brief glitch in programming with IIO's "Rapture." The cut's sumptuous female vocal blankets Deep Dish's crafty beat-melody mish-mash and secures my vote for progressive-house track of the year.

Disc two fills any gaps left underutilized by the first mix. BT's "Shame" entails a gemütlichkeit piano-laced melody remastered by Way Out West and featuring vocals by none other than electronic innovator BT.

Sander Kleinenberg gets his kicks remixing PMT's "Deeper Water," creating a rendition with enough haunted, tech-edged vibrations and recklessly lush female dialogue to get even the most inhibited clubbers on their tippy-toes.

Jacking vocal techno manifests in Dino Lenny's "I feel Stereo." Markus Schultz applies dynamic progressive re-craftsmanship to Fatboy Slim's "Bird of Prey" and again with Luzon's "Manilla Sunrise."

Deep Dish has covered all the bases. From the early days of mixing classic American house to the deep and sexy prog U.K. house grooves of the Yoshi-esque mixes, the Deep Dish boys are headlining a new-era of progressive purveyors.

While disc one isn't quite up to par, disc two revitalizes any doubt whether Deep Dish is at the pinnacle of its game.

Potter's magic in text, on screen

Film: Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone
Director: Chris Columbus
Writer: Steven Kloves
Starring: Daniel Radcliffe, Robbie Coltrane
Length: 153 minutes
Rated: PG
★★ 1/2 out of ★★★★★

If you've heard any of the hype surrounding Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone, then you know that it is supposed to be one of the most faithful book-to-screen adaptations ever. Frankly, I wouldn't know. Despite the vast popularity of J.K. Rowling's series, and the repeated assurances by friends who tell me how wonderful the books are, I've yet to read any of them — which makes me either the worst person to review this movie or the best, depending on your perspective.

The most-common complaint about films based on books, of course, is that they tend to leave out all the good stuff, whether it's your favorite supporting characters, crucial details about a particular situation, or entire subplots. My feeling is that this criticism probably won't apply here. At 153 minutes, screenwriter Steven Kloves and director Chris Columbus have jam-packed Harry Potter with so many characters and secondary storylines that a little cutting here or there might not have hurt.

The movie opens with an infant Harry being delivered to the doorstep of his aunt and uncle's home. Harry's parents were both wizards who were killed by the evil Voldemort. But something prevented Voldemort from killing Harry, and the legend of this story makes Harry something of a celebrity when he is summoned on his 11th birthday to attend the famed Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry.

At Hogwarts, Harry makes friends with Ron Weasley (Rupert Grint), an inept but good-humored young wizard, and Hermione Granger (Emma Watson), an uptight bookworm. He also meets the giant Hagrid (Robbie Coltrane) and the eccentric members of the faculty, including Headmaster Dumbledore (Richard Harris), Professor McGonagall (Maggie Smith), and the creepy Professor Snape (Alan Rickman).

Like his mother and father before him, Harry becomes an instant star at Hogwarts, first helping to disarm a huge, menacing troll who gets into the school — or was he let in? — and later becoming the youngest "seeker" in the history of Quidditch, a fast-paced sport that resembles soccer except that the participants zip through the air on broomsticks.

FILM REVIEW
By Adam Kempenar

Watching the film, I understand now why so many children have been caught up in the Harry Potter phenomenon. Along with all the magic, there's also an intriguing little mystery involving Voldemort and the title stone, a powerful jewel that gives its holder immortality. As Harry and his cohorts try to unmask and prevent the would-be thief, I was reminded of the Hardy Boys and Encyclopedia Brown mysteries that I enjoyed reading as a kid.

Unlike these young heroes, however, the Harry Potter presented here didn't strike me as very dynamic. Daniel Radcliffe's performance is likeable enough, but the script makes him a rather passive leader. In many scenes it's his friends who push him into action, not the other way around. And although he's smart, inquisitive, and courageous, Ron and Hermione steal the show with their quick wit and humor.

Also, Harry's potential is always apparent, but we don't get many chances to see the young wizard practice his craft in or out of the classroom. When Hermione tells Harry near the end that he is the best wizard in the school, her remark rings somewhat hollow, especially when she is the one who performs the most magic.

Columbus, an American, is known for making by-the-book, box-office hits such as Home Alone, Mrs. Doubtfire, and Stepmom. I kept waiting for a scene where Harry and his Gryffindor housemates would share a special bonding moment as they all sang "Ain't No Mountain High Enough" or a tearful exchange when Hermione would tell her friends she was dying of cancer. Though Columbus is a Hollywood hired gun who makes sentimental drivel, with Harry Potter, he shows a passion for the material, shunning the melodrama that has marred his previous work. The set design, art direction, and special effects are all stunning, particularly at Hogwarts, where the staircases randomly shift places and the ceiling in the dining hall is a convincing illusion of a starry, night-time sky.

Still, I can't help wondering what a more visionary filmmaker such as Terry Gilliam (The Fisher King, Brazil) a Brit whose name was mentioned in early discussions of the film, would have done with the book.

After all, the true test of a good adaptation isn't whether it gets all the details right; it's whether the movie is faithful to the spirit of the text. Columbus seems so intent on getting the specifics of the book right that I fear he might have missed some of the spirit — and isn't that what Harry Potter should be all about?

Old warriors never die
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bruce Lee will fight again.

A Korean studio announced plans Thursday to use computerized special-effects to resurrect the kung-fu star's image for a new movie, more than 28 years after his death.

"I realized the technology had advanced so far I could recreate one person perfectly — including the voice," said Chul Shin, the president of ShinCine Communications.

Shin expects to spend $50 million on the movie, tentatively titled Dragon Warrior, and he hopes to have it completed in three years.

U.S. audiences first encountered Lee as sidekick Kato in the 1960s TV series "The Green Hornet."

Less than a year after his starring debut, he died at age 32 from brain edema in 1973.

The double-wide rap

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — Some Warren residents have complained that Eminem's clout supersedes those who live in the trailer park where the rapper-actor is shooting a $50 million movie based on his life.

Jim Bickel, a security guard with DaimlerChrysler AG, is one of approximately 30 residents who complained at a Warren City Council meeting this week about the Grammy-winning rapper's red-carpet treatment.

Bickel said school buses have been rerouted, driveways blocked, and fire hydrants and stop signs obscured by movie-staff trucks. Some trailer-park residents also have to wear photo IDs to get in and out of their neighborhood.

Filming in Warren ends next week on the untitled movie, which Curtis Hanson is directing, due in theaters in summer 2002.

That would represent a major concession by the alliance, which clearly wanted the conference to take place in a city under its control. Abdullah said some locations proposed by the United Nations "were acceptable to us," citing Germany, Switzerland, and Austria.

The office is required by law to give public information to anyone who inquires, but this is the first time INS has requested information, she said.

Students can ask the university to restrict their directory information, Pietrzyk said.

While the government has kept a close eye on international students, a new $40 fee for those students will not be used to pay for an agent to closely track them, UI officials said.

Several international students thought that was the case when the fee showed up on their U-bills this month. But in a mass e-mail to international students and scholars, officials explained the proceeds will be used for increased programming and financial aid and to hire two staff members who will aid in advising.

"The fee is in no way related to a tracking fee," officials said.

goal. "This will be the first place where students can facilitate their careers when they leave," he said.

Any improvement for the university would reflect positively on the state, said Pomerantz, who is the co-chairman of the UI Foundation campaign attempting to raise $750 million by June 2004 for university improvements.

"The UI sets the tone academically for the entire state," he said. "We have a tremendous impact on the businesses and companies that hire our graduates."

In 1987, Pomerantz was appointed to the state of Iowa Board of Regents, for which he later became president, serving until 1993. Gov. Terry Branstad then appointed him for a second term, but the Iowa Senate voted against the reappointment.

In 1995, Branstad appointed Pomerantz to serve for one more year. Pomerantz's tenure on the board was controversial but productive, said current Regent David Neil, who worked with Pomerantz.

Pomerantz drew attention when he pushed for consolidation of programs, preschool education, and higher salaries for teachers. He was criticized for cutting programs at the state's three universities and for selling ISU's commercial television station in 1993.

"Over the objection of faculty, staff, board members, and students, Pomerantz took WOI-TV and sold it for rock-bottom dollar," said ISU Professor Neil Harl, who led a campaign that unsuccessfully sued the regents in 1993. "I have never seen anything like it."

Pomerantz was denied reappointment because of his efforts to cut programs, said Arthur Walsh, a lobbyist to the Iowa Legislature and the leader of the campaign for removing Pomerantz from the board in 1992. Walsh said he especially opposed Pomerantz's efforts for the removal of the journalism school and home-economics college at Iowa State University.

"He had to be stopped," Walsh said. "He was trying to establish a corporate entity in an educational institution."

Other regents, however, respected Pomerantz's leadership, even though they disagreed at times, said current board President Owen Newlin.

"We might have had differing views on some things, but we got things accomplished," Newlin said. "He worked very hard for the board."

Pomerantz said that although he is still extremely busy in different ventures, he's been more laid-back. At this point in his life, he said, his four daughters and nine grandchildren are his greatest accomplishment.

"I've had a lot of fun in everything I've done," he said. "There's always a few you'd like to do over, but for the most part I have no regrets."

Officials did not adequately answer questions about the law's definition of "one drink," Madsen said.

Some city officials, however, said there should be no confusion about the ordinance.

"There's been plenty of time for those people to understand the rules," Lehman said. "I don't think anyone has been able to show that those rules are unclear."

The ordinance clearly defines a portion, including the stipulation that a pitcher counts as a multiple serving that must be delivered to a table, City Councilor Connie Champion said.

Uzbekistan, with U.S. envoy James F. Dobbins, the alliance's foreign minister, Abdullah, said the meeting "will be held outside Afghanistan," possibly as early as this week.

"It is my understanding based on the discussions we had today that the issues of venue and timing of such a meeting are agreed," Dobbins said.

The United States had been putting heavy pressure on the Northern Alliance to drop Kabul as a venue for the talks. Powell expressed hopes the meeting organized by the top U.N. envoy for Afghanistan, Lakhdar Brahimi, would take place in days.

"We've got to get this moving," Powell said on "Fox News Sunday."

He told ABC's "This Week" that the United States believes any new power structure in Afghanistan should include women. However, he said, "we're not going to dictate what they do with their government."

Rice echoed those comments.

"We have to remember that Afghanistan is a place where women were educated, where girls were educated, where lots of women were doctors and teachers. This is not a new concept," she said on NBC's "Meet the Press." "But certainly, we cannot choose the members of the next Afghan government."

The United States launched its military campaign against Afghanistan on Oct. 7 after the Taliban refused to hand over bin Laden, the chief suspect in the Sept. 11 terror attacks in the United States.

The Afghan Islamic Press, a private Pakistan-based news agency, reported that more than 70 people were killed by U.S. bombing around Kandahar and in eastern Nangarhar province. The assertion could not be independently verified.

B-52s struck Taliban positions outside Kunduz, unleashing their biggest bombs yet in the area.

Flames shot into the air after bombs hit, and cracking booms carried across the valley floor toward the Northern Alliance's foxholes in opposing ridges. Avalanches of soil cascaded down hillsides. Taliban soldiers could be seen running out on the distant ridges, trying to find cover.

Refugees fleeing Kunduz say a hard core of Taliban soldiers and allied Arab, Chechen, and Pakistani fighters are in control after fleeing other districts across the north in the past week.

The refugees told of terror at the hands of Taliban troops and foreign fighters. The foreigners, fearing they will be killed if the city falls, were reportedly blocking Afghan Taliban trying to surrender.

One refugee, Dar Zardad, said the Taliban killed eight boys in their late teens after some of the youths laughed at the militia fighters. Zardad and other refugees in Bangi, a village approximately 30 miles to the east, recounted how fighters shot and killed a doctor when he delayed responding to their summons to come treat wounded Taliban troops.

Witnesses said at least 100 Taliban soldiers were shot, apparently by gunmen from their own side, as they approached Northern Alliance lines in an attempt to surrender.

Still, Taliban leaders in the city were negotiating with alliance commanders by radio.

The Taliban officials said they would surrender if the alliance guaranteed that non-Afghans fighting alongside the Islamic militia would not be killed and if the surrender were witnessed by U.N. representatives, an alliance commander, Nahidullah, said in the city of Taloan, approximately 40 miles to the east.

There was no immediate word whether the opposition group has accepted the offer. Northern Alliance forces had moved a multiple-rocket launcher and two tanks up to the road that is the eastern approach to Kunduz, but there was no sign an attack was imminent.

The Taliban was barring people from leaving Kunduz, telling them, "If you leave, the U.S.A. will bomb all the city," said Zardad, the refugee. He said he made it out of the city only after Taliban beat him with their rifle butts.

Other refugees said Kunduz residents were hiding indoors and closing their shops for fear of summary execution by the Taliban. Foreign fighters, using local translators, were broadcasting loud-speaker announcements saying they would be taking the offensive against Northern Alliance troops laying siege to the city.

In the western city of Herat, Northern Alliance officials showed journalists a mass grave near Shindand military airport that they said contained the bodies of 27 anti-Taliban fighters massacred by the Taliban. They said the Taliban killed the men — many of whose bodies had bound hands — sometime before the Taliban fled the city last week.

In Kandahar, meanwhile, the Taliban appeared still in control despite a reported deal last week for their supreme leader, Mullah Mohammed Omar, to leave the city. However, the situation there was said to be tense, and sources in the city, contacted by telephone from Pakistan, said the Taliban had extended the nighttime curfew to keep people off the streets.

The sources spoke on the condition they not be named. Afghan sources in Pakistan, also speaking on the condition of anonymity, said a delegation of tribal leaders was in Kandahar trying to negotiate a transfer of power. The report could not be independently confirmed.

In Quetta, Pakistan, Ahmed Karzai, the younger brother of anti-Taliban leader Hamid Karzai, said opposition forces clashed with Taliban fighters late on Nov. 17 in Uruzgan province north of Kandahar, but he had no further details.

Local leaders not connected to the Northern Alliance have taken control of several areas in southern Afghanistan. The Northern Alliance, which is made of several factions, has seized cities in the north.

A unique opportunity

Something funny happened on our way to the 21st century. The Europeans, who were No. 1 when the 20th began, blew themselves up in two world wars. The sun set on empires that never expected to see that evening sun go down. A Big Red Machine in Moscow discovered too late that the red was a terminal case of rust. A Big Red Machine in Beijing decided it would be better off stocking shelves at K-Mart than building backyard steel mills.

Meanwhile, the world got hooked on Starbucks and Pizza Hut, and hooked up on CNN and America Online. Our movies, rock bands, energy consumption, and trade deficits became wonders of the world. Little bulls far beyond the shores of Lake Michigan dreamed of growing up to be Michael Jordan.

At the same time, a Suzuki who was neither a motorcycle nor a violin teacher made Seattle and the American League glow in the dark and Japanese sit in front of their televisions at strange hours. Now, the sun never sets on the Nikkei and the Dow.

Even Iowa got into the act. Suddenly there were two real Chinese restaurants in Carroll, and blond, blue-eyed customers ate real Vietnamese in Coralville with chopsticks. Tex-Mex reached all the way to River City. Three million Iowans were second only to 35 million Californians in farm exports.

UI science departments, like everybody else's, imported TAs from places Sen. Chuck Grassley never visited. The swim team recruited in Poland, the orchestra in Brazil.

The point? In fact, there are two of them. Like never before, America matters to the world and vice versa. Like nobody ever — the Romans, early industrial Britain, let alone the Soviet Union that Germany's Chancellor Helmut Schmidt once called a Third World country with intercontinental missiles — the United States had also become the most super superpower in history, and the American university the university of the world.

You might assume that this would turn our thoughts to foreign policy. On the contrary, Western Civilization TAs as yet unborn may one day note that, at just the point America became more entangled in the world than ever before, American thoughts turned to O.J., Monica, and Gary Condit. Serious interest in foreign policy became something like — well, how about a serious interest in Afghanistan? Just count the Middle Eastern and Muslim students on campus. Then count current UI courses on the Middle East and Islam.

Historically speaking, of course, there is nothing new about this. Most Americans at most times think about foreign policy as little as possible. Should it surprise us that departments, deans, and provosts hold back where news anchors and presidential candidates fail to tread? As recently as six weeks ago, even the White House thought foreign policy was an elective course. But as so often in U.S. history, the wake-up call invariably followed — in this case Sept. 11.

"It's a volatile, complex world. Today's undergraduates want to understand it," Eyal Press noted in the Nov. 11 New York Times. "Are today's universities prepared to teach them?" It's a good question.

The answer is that we can at least give it a try. One option is the latest-improved, enriched-edition of a curricular classic, History 016.152, "The United States in World Affairs." On 14 consecutive Monday evenings, starting on Jan. 28, the course will address a lot of things we need to know, and have just possibly been afraid to ask, with the help of an uncommonly knowledgeable roster of visitors.

Among them are Michael Armacost, a former ambassador to the Philippines and Japan; Ken Quinn, a former ambassador to Cambodia; Adm. Stansfield Turner, the director of Central Intelligence in the Carter administration; Larry Korb, the assistant secretary of Defense in the Reagan administration; Chris Rossi, the director of the National Security Council's human-rights desk in the Clinton administration; and Jim Leach, a one-time Foreign Service officer and our U.S. representative. Going back to the Truman administration, their aggregate professional and policy-making experience adds up to a couple of hundred years.

It would be a shame if they turned up to talk only to themselves. At the least, they should give us cause to rethink our Civic Education Requirements, to acknowledge that there's a world out there, and to realize that what we don't know can hurt us.

David Schoenbaum is a UI professor of history.

Heckling was immature

To all those fans who laughed, chanted, and made fun of Maryland-Eastern Shore's "00," grow up. As a die-hard Hawkeye fan, I love going to games and seeing the Hawks pulverize their opponents. However, during the Maryland-Eastern Shore game, I was actually ashamed to be in the arena. With the Hawkeyes up by over 20 points, Maryland-Eastern Shore put in its player "00" toward the end of the first half. Along with his entrance came laughter and heckling from the fans (mainly the students) about his size, appearance, and lack of agility. This heckling persisted throughout the rest of the first half and the entire second half. Sure, basketball is a game where the home team can gain an advantage when the crowd gets in the head of opposing players, but it shouldn't be done like this. Here Iowa had a huge lead and controlled the entire game. The entire reason for the heckling was purely to poke fun ... something you could expect from junior-high students. "00" can't control who he is, and yet he still goes out there in front of 15,000 fans to play a game he loves. He shouldn't have to endure what the heckling fans put him through. There's a time for heckling in sports, but it shouldn't be directed at the personal attributes of the players. Such heckling is childish and makes me ashamed to be a Hawkeye.

Martial law creeps up

President Bush, in asking for the power to establish military courts to try terrorism suspects, is rapidly laying the groundwork for martial law in America — for the suspension of the very rights that make our flag worth defending. Do we trust the people now in control of our government to properly discriminate between real terrorists and those who are, instead, honorable citizens with contrary opinions to express nonviolently? The people who now protect us from airborne nail clippers and tweezers will soon be protecting us from members of the Green and Reform Parties — then our neighbors and then members of our own families. If this comment seems like a rash overreaction, note that 91-year-old cross-country walker Doris "Granny D" Haddock, who dared suggest that campaign-finance reform is needed to clean up the corruption of Congress, is now singled out for hand searches and frisking at every airport. Once it begins, it moves quickly. Surely our freedoms, and the civil rights that guarantee our freedoms, are more endangered by extremists in government than extremists who are, after all, only trying to kill us.

The Milky Way's soup of the day

But the desk clerk said, "It happens every day," As the stars fell down and the fields burned away.

— Bob Dylan

WEST BRANCH — Our correspondent in Hampshire, Ill., reported that they were "poppin'" off like 30 a minute. Wild! And so we had no choice but to drive toward Hampshire. Well, toward Illinois, at least. None of us really knew how to get to Hampshire. (None of us really knew the kid on the other end of the line, either; that's how phone calls work in college at strange apartments where anyone feels free to pick up the line, regardless of whose place it is.)

But it was 4 o'clock in the Midwestern morning and there were rocks falling out of the sky, and Eric Clapton was on the radio swinging low, sweet chariot, and any good true magician worth his salt can tell you that the magic is in the misdirection, so what'd it matter who was steering this thing anyway.

And when we ended up in a pitch-black field on a gravelled 310th Street in West Branch, Iowa — and not Illinois — not one of us was all too surprised, because that is always exactly where you end up: not exactly where you thought you were going.

On Sept. 9, I remembered, I wrote a column titled "In Defense of Reality," in which I argued that the world is not such a bad place after all. Three days later, I was crossing an abandoned George Washington Bridge in the cold New Jersey dawn, trying to reconcile my knee-jerk optimism with two lanes and then four lanes and eight lanes of cross-country emptiness, and the National Guard, and the Transnational Watch.

On Nov. 2, I remembered, I received an e-mail from an old friend teaching English in Japan now. "Early last Sunday morning," he wrote, "I was on the train on my way to work in Tokyo. Sitting in the front car about two-thirds of the way to downtown, I heard a loud thud, followed by a piercing human scream.

Jesse Elliott

"The train slowed abruptly and violently shook and swung slightly off course. At first I thought there had been a terrorist attack. But the train eventually stopped, and it was quiet outside. A man had committed suicide by jumping in front of the moving train. The sound I heard was that of a man dying.

"Such incidents are fairly common in Japan: Suicide is not a rare occurrence, and the train is the method of choice. Suicides are as much traffic announcements as they are personal and social tragedies. After about 20 minutes of cleanup, our train moved along towards its destination, and everyone continued with the day. During the delay, one man hardly even looked up from his newspaper."

The remainder of the e-mail juxtaposed this experience with a description of a solitary hike he took up Mount Fuji; the subject line of his e-mail was a simple "Thoreau was right."

On Nov. 17, an old man went out of his way to hold a door for me at the Iowa City Public Library.

I was walking past the library, actually, and didn't need the door held for me. But I'm not one to refuse friendly invitations, which is how I ended up in the library with no real library business to take care of but nonetheless here so why not just look around.

Which is how I ended up in West Branch at 4 a.m., even when it was pretty clear to everyone involved that the clouds were unpenetrable, the Leonids impervious, the rain inescapable.

Which is how I ended up in this world, I imagine, though I've yet to ask a true authority of the cosmos about it.

And if I hadn't been so sure that my friend in Japan was already on his way back up the mountainside to that silent forest cabin to chop some wood and forget for a while about civilization, I think I would've written him and told him to hang in there. I would've let him know that we all get sickened by this world's suicides, sometimes, and then we all get enchanted by its meteors, on occasion, and then we get disgusted again by something else, more often than not.

But hate it or love it, we're always in it. We've always already stumbled into it, or taken a wrong turn into it, or come in the good way through a door that was held for us, but regardless, we're in it now and we'd better learn how to deal with it.

I have a sneaking suspicion that he knows this already, and that he's returned to people and teaching and even subways. But I'd like to tell him anyway, just so he knows that we all know how he feels sometimes on this whipping orbiting rock these days.

And these were just three days that happened to me. I can't imagine the 18 billion days that happened to everyone else on this whipping orbiting meteor of a rock when Sept. 9 rolled around and Nov. 2 set and Nov. 17 rose. And then the stars rained down.

And what'd it matter who was steering this thing anyway.

Because it was just another evening on the Planet Earth.

It was just another midnight in the galaxy. It was just one of those days.

MADRID, Spain — A Spanish magistrate accused eight men in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the United States of ordering them jailed and charged them with belonging to Osama bin Laden's Al Qaeda network.

The suspects "were directly linked to the preparation and carrying out of the attacks perpetrated by 'suicide pilots' Sept. 11, 2001," Judge Baltasar Garzon said in his jailing order. Garzon, an investigative judge formally charged the men with membership in a terrorist organization and with document falsification, robbery, and weapons possession. He accused them of "many terrorism crimes as the victims on Sept. 11."

The men denied the charges which Garzon said were based on evidence from telephone conversations of the group's alleged leader — Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, whose alias is Abu Dahdah before and after the attacks.

Entries in a diary found in Germany also linked him to Mohammed Atta, one of the hijackers, Garzon said. The judge did not provide details of the evidence.

MADRID, Spain — A Spanish magistrate accused eight men of involvement in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the United States, ordering them jailed and charging them with belonging to Osama bin Laden's Al Qaeda network.

The suspects "were directly linked to the preparation and carrying out of the attacks perpetrated by 'suicide pilots' on Sept. 11, 2001," Judge Baltasar Garzon said in his jailing order.

Garzon, an investigative judge, formally charged the men with membership in a terrorist organization and with document falsification, robbery, and weapons possession. He accused them of "as many terrorism crimes as there were victims on Sept. 11."

The men denied the charges, which Garzon said were based on evidence from telephone conversations of the group's alleged leader — Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, whose alias is Abu Dahdah — before and after the attacks.

Entries in a diary found in Germany also linked him to Mohammed Atta, one of the hijackers, Garzon said. The judge did not provide any details of the evidence.

The eight were among 11 detained Nov. 13. The others were released without charges.

Seven of the eight suspects originally came from Muslim countries. Most were Spanish citizens, but police said they were investigating the authenticity of their citizenship papers.

Garzon said the men "formed part of an extremist Islamic group of a terrorist nature integrated in the support and development structure of the Al Qaeda organization's criminal activities."

He said the group was involved in recruiting people for terrorist training and providing cover for Islamic militants in Spain and elsewhere in Europe. They also rounded up money for the organization, mainly through stolen credit cards and robberies, he said.

The suspects will remain in jail while Garzon prepares a case against them, a process that court officials said could take several years.

Garzon said the one native Spaniard jailed, Luis Jose Galan Gonzalez, whose alias is Yusuf Galan, was trained at a camp run by bin Laden in Indonesia in July. At his Madrid home, police seized weapons, ammunition, and forged identity documents.

Galan was also said to have monitored an election for Spain's radical pro-Basque independence party Herri Batasuna in 1989. The party has been linked to the armed separatist group ETA.

Another of the jailed men, Osama Darra, opened an electronics store in Spain that he used to collect money for Al Qaeda, Garzon said.

In the house of another, Bas-san Dalati Satut, alias Abu Abdo, police found a diary allegedly containing a bank account number of Mustapha Setmariyan Nasar, who, authorities said, ran a bin Laden training camp in Afghanistan.

Elsewhere Sunday, an uncle of Ziad Jarrah, a Lebanese man named as one of the hijackers, said he did not believe German prosecutors found a letter from Jarrah telling his girlfriend he would not return from the United States. Jamal Jarrah charged that the letter was "fabricated."

In Egypt, a domestic terror case involving 94 suspected Islamic militants went to trial, and defendants accused the authorities of using it to show the United States they are serious about combatting terrorism.

Holiday drivers to see tighter scrutiny

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police pledge strict enforcement of safety laws this holiday week as more Americans take to the road for their Thanksgiving travels.

The AAA predicts that 30 million Thanksgiving travelers — a record 87 percent of those going on a trip of 50 miles or more — will choose to drive because of fears of flying after the Sept. 11 attacks.

The survey was taken before last week's crash of American Airlines Flight 587 in New York, so even more people may consider driving.

But Chuck Hurley, the executive director of the Air Bag & Seat Belt Safety Campaign, said the risk per mile of driving is 37 times higher than that for flying.

For five years, police and safety groups have combined forces for a high-profile enforcement of restraint and drunken driving laws in an attempt to reduce crashes during Thanksgiving week.

Conoco, Phillips merge, creating world's third-largest oil company

By Danny M. Boyd
Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. — Phillips Petroleum Co. and Conoco Inc. are merging in a $35 billion deal that will create the nation's third-largest integrated oil company, the companies announced Sunday.

The merger would create a corporation with more than $60 billion in assets. The deal, expected to close during the second half of 2002, is subject to regulatory and shareholder approval.

The new company will also assume $18.6 billion in debt and preferred securities.

The combined company, to be called ConocoPhillips, would be based in Houston, home to Conoco. It would keep a reduced presence in Bartlesville, Okla., where Phillips employs 2,400 at its headquarters and research facility.

"This is really a growth story for Conoco and Phillips," said Conoco Chairman Archie W. Dunham, who is delaying a planned retirement to serve as chairman of the combined company. "We think this is the best way to create long-term and short-term value for our shareholders."

Phillips Chairman James Mulva will be the chief executive officer and president of the new company and become chairman when Dunham retires in 2004.

"What we saw was just an ideal time for us to put our growth plans together," Mulva said.

ConocoPhillips would be the nation's third-biggest oil and gas company in terms of production and the fifth-largest refiner in the world. The two companies have a combined employment of 58,000 worldwide and expect to save at least $750 million a year by merging.

Mulva said most of the savings should come from operating efficiencies instead of job cuts. Work-force reductions are planned in Bartlesville, he said.

Under terms of the deal, Phillips shareholders will get one share of ConocoPhillips stock for each Phillips share they own. Conoco shareholders will get .4677 shares of the new stock.

Phillips shareholders will end up with a 56.6-percent stake in the company, despite the fact that both companies characterized the merger as one of equals.

The merger should result in cost savings in refining, marketing, and transportation and more capital to fund worldwide exploration and production, the two men said during a teleconference.

Merger talks began in earnest approximately six weeks ago, Dunham said. Both have been rumored merger candidates for years.

Phillips is a familiar face to motorists in the United States with its Phillips 66 logo. The company has more than 5 billion barrels of oil in reserve.

Last year, it merged its gas-gathering and processing operations with Duke Energy and combined its chemicals division with ChevronTexaco.

Hog wild!

For the first time since 1997, the Iowa football team qualified for a bowl berth, regained possession of Floyd of Rosedale, ensuring it will finish the season with a winning record

Those partial to storybook endings would have taken special delight in the events of Nov. 17.

With Iowa's convincing 42-24 win over Minnesota, the Hawkeyes recorded the sixth win of the season, making them bowl eligible for the first time since 1997.

If that were not enough, beneath sunny skies and in 70-degree air, Iowa took back Floyd of Rosedale — the traveling trophy both schools compete for — in the seniors' final day in Kinnick Stadium.

"You couldn't have asked for anything better," senior running back Ladell Betts said. "The weather, the game, the points — what else could you ask for?"

Not much. Fully aware of all the sidebars surrounding the Nov. 17 contest versus the Golden Gophers, Iowa came out of the tunnel focused at the game's outset for the second-straight week.

After putting up a quick 21 points against Northwestern on Nov. 10, the Hawkeyes repeated their fast start again on Nov. 17, jumping out to an identical 21-0 lead through the first 15 minutes versus Minnesota.

Behind what was arguably Iowa's most efficient offensive performance under third-year coach Kirk Ferentz, the Hawkeyes scored on six of their first seven possessions, the only blemish being the 50 seconds they killed prior to half-time.

The ground game accounted for three touchdowns and 267 yards of total offense on the afternoon, riding the legs of Betts who had 171 yards on 28 carries.

The passing game, meanwhile, accounted for 206 yards and three touchdowns. Junior quarterback Brad Banks connected on his three pass attempts. Senior starter Kyle McCann was 10 of 11 for 159 yards and three touchdowns. His only incompleteness of the afternoon came with 2:42 left in the third quarter, as he threw it into the stands to avoid the pass rush.

Conrad Schmidt/The Daily Iowan

Iowa running back Fred Russell fights for extra yardage while Minnesota's Michael Lehan tries to tackle him during Iowa's 42-24 win over the Golden Gophers in Kinnick Stadium No. 17. Russell, a sophomore, carried the ball seven times for 37 yards in the game.

Todd Brommelkamp

It would be an understatement to say this game held a lot of meaning for Iowa's senior class.

With former coach Hayden Fry in attendance, the Hawkeyes avenged a 49-7 loss to Minnesota in 1998. That game not only led to the absence of Floyd of Rosedale from the Iowa football offices for three seasons but also to the end of Fry's tenure in Iowa City.

Fry made Hawkeye football into a powerful force in his 20 years at Iowa. The lopsided loss in Minneapolis three years ago tarnished Fry's legacy in a small way, but on Nov. 17, he finally got his due as he watched from the stadium level of Kinnick Stadium's press box.

The seniors, with the exception of transfers Derrick Pickens, Joe Uselman, and Scott Rathke, were freshmen when Fry made his tearful goodbye shortly after the Minnesota game. They owed more than a victory to him Nov. 17; they owed him the type of dominating performance they failed to turn in three years ago.

How sweet it must have been for the much-maligned Kyle McCann to be near-perfect Nov. 17, even scoring Iowa's first touchdown on a keeper. Had he not needed to waste a pass to avoid a sack, he would have finished the day a perfect 10-10.

Ladell Betts surpassed 800 yards rushing for the third time in his career with a 171-yard performance against the Gophers.

Aaron Kampmann had crucial back-to-back sacks to thwart a Minnesota drive in the first quarter.

Then they fell asleep at the wheel.

The No. 9 Hawkeyes woke up just in time to fend off the Bulldogs for a 75-67 victory at Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Nov. 17 to improve to 3-0 this season.

throw shooting in the closing minutes allowed the Hawkeyes to hold the Bulldogs at bay and preserve the victory.

Reggie Evans paced the Hawkeyes with 22 points and eight rebounds in the victory. Recker and Chauncey Leslie also reached double-digits in scoring, adding 17 and 10 points, respectively.

Louisiana Tech dominated the Hawkeyes in the rebounding department during their season opener. The Bulldogs hounded Iowa on the boards, 48-30, and out-rebounded Iowa on the offensive glass by a staggering 22-9.

"We rebounded the hell out of the ball tonight," said Louisiana Tech coach Keith Richard. "I don't think Reggie got his double-double, did he?"

Evans may not have pulled in a double-double, but Bulldog junior Zach Johnson did. Johnson finished the night with 10 points and 10 rebounds. Guard Gerrod Henderson, a former Iowa State recruit, led Louisiana Tech with 21 points.

After the game, Alford laid the blame for Iowa's near-loss

IOWA SWIMMING

Men finish fourth

By Travis Brown
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swimming and diving team traveled to Gopher country for the weekend for the Minnesota Invitational. The Hawkeyes spent Nov. 16 through Sunday treading water in fourth place. They finished behind host Minnesota, who won the meet with 1,311 points, Air Force, and Wisconsin. Air Force overcame Wisconsin on the meet's final day for second place.

"We were swimming against the Big Ten champions in Minnesota," Iowa coach John Davey said. "They're a strong team. Air Force was really trying to do well for this meet and were prepared. Wisconsin already beat us in a dual meet." The goal of the team for the weekend was to get the team's younger members experience and to gear up for the Big Ten meet.

"The meet is the same as the Big Ten's," Davey said. "It's the same situation, kind of like a dress rehearsal."

Leading the way for the Hawkeyes were Marko Milenkovic and divers Simon Chrisander and Roberto Gutierrez. Milenkovic won Nov. 17's 400 individual medley final (3:57.86) after also winning the

The Hawkeye women's swimming and diving team participated in the three-day Minnesota Invitational this weekend, finishing fourth among the 12 teams competing. Notre Dame won the meet, Wisconsin was runner-up, and host Minnesota placed third.

"We swam really well all three days," said coach Garland O'Keefe. "We finished fourth against very good competitors. We passed Kansas for fourth today and beat them by 17 points."

The Hawkeyes were led by senior swimmer Melissa Loehndorf and freshman diver Nacilea Underwood. Loehndorf won the 200 butterfly (2:02.19) on Sunday and Underwood took gold in the 3-meter dive (479.80) on Nov. 17.

"Those were very huge wins for us right now," said O'Keefe. "Also adding another impressive weekend of swimming was freshman Jennifer Skolaski. Skolaski finished fifth in the 500 freestyle (4:57.51) on Nov. 16, fourth in the 1,650 freestyle (17:00.85), and sixth in the 200 backstroke (2:05.15), both on Sunday.

Lewis knocks out Rahman in fourth

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS—Lennox Lewis has his championship belts back. Now he wants Mike Tyson.

"Since the Evander Holyfield fight [in 1999], I've been waiting for Tyson," Lewis said Sunday after regaining the WBC-IBF heavyweight titles on a fourth-round knockout of Hasim Rahman.

The 36-year-old Lewis might not have to wait much longer. "HBO is committed to making a Lewis-Tyson fight," HBO President Ross Greenburg said. "We will negotiate with our brethren at Showtime."

Tyson congratulated Lewis for recapturing the title. "He said he wants me," Tyson said. "Well I really look forward to it."

Lewis has a multifight contract with HBO, while Tyson is tied to Showtime.

"We already have had many discussions with Showtime, and now it's time to make it happen," Greenburg said. Making it happen probably would be easier without Don King, who promoted the Nov. 17 rematch at Mandalay Bay.

Rahman has a multifight deal with King, but Lewis had a contract with the promoter only for Saturday's match. Lewis called King "a truly great promoter," but Tyson said he would not fight again for King. He and King are suing one another.

In boxing, however, yesterday's enemies are today's friends, especially when megabucks are involved.

The 35-year-old Tyson, a former undisputed champion, is expected to fight Ray Mercer on Jan. 19 at a site to be determined. The match has not been announced officially.

John Ruiz is the WBA heavyweight champion, and he will defend his title in a third bout against Holyfield on Dec. 5 at Foxwoods Resort Casino at Ledyard, Conn. Lewis had become undisputed champion by outpointing Holyfield, but was stripped by the WBA for not giving Holyfield a rematch.

A Tyson fight would be a mandatory WBC title defense for Lewis.

Lewis appeared headed for a Tyson bout when he was upset by Rahman on a one-punch knockout in the fifth round April 22 in South Africa.

Lewis admittedly took Rahman too lightly in that fight. Not this time.

"When we went to camp, everybody was focused, and they kept me focused," Lewis said.

The first two rounds were a battle of jabs. Lewis then hurt the 29-year-old Rahman with a couple of rights to the head in the third, and shook him with another right 20 seconds into the fourth round.

This week's winner is Elizabeth Jensen.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

The loudest cheers at Kinnick Stadium on Nov. 17 came when two Minnesota managers carried a small wooden box from the Golden Gophers' locker room during the third quarter.

Contained in the box was none other than Floyd of Rosedale — a traveling trophy of a bronze pig — which has spent the last three years in Minneapolis.

The pig, which sat near the 50-yard line on the Minnesota side of the field, was the focus of attention throughout the remainder of the second half.

"I was kind of scoping out where that pig was," said quarterback Kyle McCann, who had the opportunity to scout out Floyd when coach Kirk Ferentz gave the senior a rest at the end of the game.

Other players were more determined to find Floyd. Defensive lineman Jerry Montgomery, who promised to be the first one to Floyd, began bouncing up and down on the sidelines as the box appeared. In the closing seconds of the game, all focus was on the Minnesota sideline.

"It's great to see Floyd back here again and to see the players get their hands on him," said Ferentz.

Despite Iowa's reclamation of Floyd this year, the Gophers still hold a distinct 38-27-2 advantage in the annual battle.

'Fry Days' return

Former coach Hayden Fry was in attendance Nov. 17 along with roughly 40 members of the 1981 Iowa team, which made the school's first Rose Bowl appearance since 1959.

With the exception of three of Iowa's 19 seniors, all played under Fry during his final season in 1998.

Fry stayed out of the limelight, watched the game from the press box, and did not address the players as a group.

"I saw him around," said McCann of his former coach, "But I didn't get a chance to talk to him."

Betts bags another milestone

With his 171 rushing yards on Nov. 17, running back Ladell Betts reached the 800-yard mark for the third time in his career at Iowa, making him only the second Hawkeye back ever to do so.

Betts rushed for 857 yards in 1999 and a career high 1,090 yards during his junior year in 2000. He has 906 yards with one game remaining this season.

The only other back to reach the 800-yard mark three times was Sedrick Shaw, Iowa's all-time leading rusher, who accomplished the feat from 1994-96.

Clark, Lightfoot return

The Iowa offense was bolstered by the return of Benny Sapp and Aaron Kampman celebrate after breaking up a pass play in the endzone during Iowa's victory over Minnesota on Saturday.

starters Dallas Clark and Andy Lightfoot on Nov. 17.

Clark, Iowa's starting tight end, returned after not starting Iowa's last two games because of injuries, to grab four passes for 96 yards.

Lightfoot returned to the starting lineup on the offensive line, which is still missing three players. Eric Steinbach, Alonzo Cunningham, and Sam Aiello continue to battle injuries.

Defensive back Derek Pagel missed the majority of the Minnesota game due to a bout of stomach flu.

Score early, win often

Iowa's opening touchdown drive against the Gophers marked the fifth time in 10 games the Hawkeyes have started a game with a score.

The Hawkeyes have scored first against Minnesota, Northwestern, Indiana, Miami (Ohio), and Kent State — all games Iowa eventually won.

Going to the Ag Bowl?

While the Hawkeyes became bowl-eligible for the first time since 1997, Ferentz prefers to keep his focus on the season-ending clash with intrastate rival Iowa State.

"Right now, our bowl game will be this weekend," he said.

Cougars make comeback to stay undefeated

By Tim Korte
Associated Press

PROVO, Utah — There might be some BCS for BYU after all.

Luke Staley had two touchdowns and a 2-point conversion in the final 3½ minutes as BYU rallied from an 11-point deficit to beat rival Utah, 24-21, keeping the Cougars undefeated and on track for a possible BCS game.

BYU (11-0, 7-0) won the Mountain West title and a berth in the Liberty Bowl against Louisville. School officials were careful to say they're happy for that, but clearly the Cougars are thinking bigger.

They expect to play in a major bowl game.

"There's a little destiny here," quarterback Brandon Doman said. "We win these next two games, we'll get in somewhere. That's my feeling. If they hold us out, they're going to have a big-time war on their hands."

With representatives from the Fiesta and Sugar Bowls watching Nov. 17, BYU stunned the rival Utes (7-3, 4-2).

Thousands of fans swarmed the field afterward, crushing each other as they tried to reach first-year coach Gary Crowton. Players lifted him onto their shoulders, then someone handed the coach a microphone.

"Let's put some pressure on the BCS," Crowton said over the public-address system, drawing a deafening cheer.

While the Mountain West champ doesn't automatically qualify for the BCS, the Cougars might become the first outsiders to crash the big-money games if they can win Dec. 1 at Mississippi State and at Hawaii one week later.

"These are lofty goals, but this is a special team," Crowton said. "I hope we can continue to play well in these last two games."

The Fiesta Bowl is the best possibility because the Cougars would have no trouble selling tickets. Large concentrations of Mormons live in Utah, Arizona, California, and Nevada.

"We're definitely aware of the great fan base BYU has, not only here but also in Arizona," said Fiesta Bowl committee member Alan Hyde.

"That's certainly something that's in the mix."

The Cougars struggled against a strong Utah game plan, but remain unbeaten because Doman stayed cool down the stretch, Staley found a way into the end zone, and BYU's defense delivered when needed.

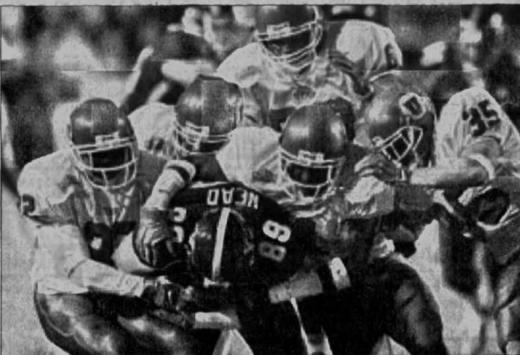

Utah set the tempo for 54 of the 60 minutes, using a ball-control strategy to keep BYU's high-scoring offense on the sideline and a hard-hitting, stack-the-box defense to keep Doman and Staley in check.

Adam Tate's 1-yard TD dive gave Utah a comfortable 21-10 lead with 9:53 to play. The teams traded punts, and it didn't look good for the Cougars when they took over at their own 8 with 5:47 remaining.

But Doman directed an eight-play drive that included a 32-yard pass to Reno Mahe, who played less than a week after an emergency appendectomy. Doman capped it with a seven-yard TD pass to Staley with 3:22 to play.

That pulled the Cougars to 21-16, and it was 21-18 after Staley went left on the PAT. He found a small hole, and slipped across the goal line.

The BYU defense, which has given up gobs of yardage to lesser teams this season, came alive.

BYU's Spencer Nead (89) is taken down by five Utah players during the first quarter on Nov. 17 in Provo, Utah.

The Cougars forced Utah to punt again, and BYU took over at its own 41 with 2:11 to go.

Staley ran 10 yards into Utah territory before Doman was tackled for a 3-yard loss. Then Soren Halladay caught Doman's pass at the Utah 42, shook off a tackle by D'Shaun Crockett and ran to the 30.

The Utes expected another pass when Doman started to the right, stringing the play out as several defenders closed. He pitched the ball at the last moment, and Staley raced down the sideline.

"I kept saying, Pitch it, pitch it, pitch it," Crowton recalled.

"He pitched it right at the last second so they couldn't come and squeeze the boundary."

That touchdown came with 1:16 on the clock, so it wasn't over.

The Utes took over a their own 7 and started downfield. Facing fourth-and-10 at BYU's 43, Lance Rice threw a tackle-eligible pass to Jordan Gross, who rumbled 13 yards to the 30.

On the next play, Jernaro Gilford intercepted Rice's throw to Cliff Russell with eight seconds to play. Moments later, fans were all over the field as they chanted, "B-C-S! B-C-S!"

Miami should make strides toward No. 1 in BCS

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

MIAMI — Clinton Portis was smiling away in the Miami locker room, poking fun at those who doubted the Hurricanes were national-championship material.

Soft schedule. Nearly lost to Boston College. And this week, even after Nov. 17's 59-0 rout of Syracuse, the running back was trying to figure the next knock on Miami:

"Now something's going to be wrong with Syracuse," he said. "They'll say Syracuse wasn't so tough."

Easy, big fellow.

On Sunday, No. 1 Miami (9-0) increased its lead over idle Nebraska (11-0) in the AP media poll, and also regained the top spot in the USA Today/ESPN coaches poll a week after losing it to Nebraska.

When the BCS standings are released today, expect second-place Miami to gain significant ground on Nebraska, while also pulling away from third-place Oklahoma.

Added Portis: "If we go 11-0 and don't play in the Rose Bowl, then something's wrong."

For now, all seems right in the BCS world. If Miami and Nebraska complete perfect seasons, it'll be Hurricanes-Huskiers for the national championship. No arguments, no controversy.

But just when all the pieces appear to be falling into place, something is bound to happen to scramble things up. That's just the way college football works, at least until there's a playoff system.

If form holds, it looks like nine teams are fighting for eight BCS slots, with either an undefeated BYU or a one-loss Illinois being left out.

Using the theory that Miami and Nebraska win out, here's one scenario, with predicted final regular-season records:

Rose Bowl: Miami (11-0) vs. Nebraska (13-0). Far from a gimme. The Hurricanes still have to beat No. 12 Washington at home on Saturday and No. 16 Virginia Tech in Blacksburg on Dec. 1. The Huskers need to beat No. 14 Colorado in Boulder on Friday, then win the Big 12 title game on Dec. 1. The likely opponent? Oklahoma, 20-10 losers to Nebraska on Oct. 27.

Sugar Bowl: Florida (11-1) vs. Texas (11-1). Sounds like a pretty good national-title game, too. The Gators still need to beat No. 7 Tennessee on Dec. 1 at the Swamp, then win the SEC title game on Dec. 8. The opponent?

Probably Auburn, which dealt the Gators their only loss. The Longhorns close at Texas A&M on Friday, and will likely gain the edge over Oklahoma, which could be finishing with a second loss to Nebraska.

Orange Bowl: Maryland (10-1) vs. Michigan (9-2). The Terps clinched one of six automatic BCS berths as ACC champions; the Wolverines will clinch the Big Ten spot with a win over Ohio State on Saturday. Even if Illinois finishes 10-1 overall and ties Michigan for first, the Wolverines own the tiebreaker — a win over the Illini.

Fiesta Bowl: Oregon (10-1) vs. BYU (13-0). Yes, BYU. Bowl officials are interested in an unbeaten team, and the Cougars should qualify for a spot by moving into the top 12 in the BCS standings. They are currently 13th. An 11-2

Oklahoma would be a strong choice, but BCS bylaws limit conferences to only two teams (Nebraska and Texas are the two other Big 12 teams). Illinois may end up 10-1, but is on the outside looking in.

Miami was overpowering against Syracuse, which came to the Orange Bowl with an eight-game winning streak and a No. 14 ranking. The Hurricanes were coming off an 18-7 win at Boston College, a team poised to win the game in the final minute before an interception turned into an 80-yard TD by Miami's Ed Reed.

"This football team is a little scary when it hits on all cylinders," Canes rookie coach Larry Coker said after the win over Syracuse. "This team was challenged and they wanted to make a statement."

Mission accomplished.

Fans rally to support Twins

By Renee Ruble
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Wearing her favorite Kent Hrbek-signed baseball earrings, Shirley Fisher spent Sunday standing in the rain outside the Metrodome with thousands of other Twins fans to say that Minnesota needs baseball.

Major-league owners want to eliminate two teams next season. If the Twins are one of them, Fisher is finished with baseball.

"I'll never go to Wisconsin. I'll never go to Cooperstown. I'll never spend another nickel on baseball again," she said.

Fisher attended the "Keep the Twins at Home" rally with her sister.

The two attend dozens of Twins games a year. They were at the World Series in 1987 and 1990. And they went to upstate New York this summer to see former stars Kirby Puckett and Dave Winfield inducted into the Hall of Fame.

"It's just such a shame," Fisher said. "Baseball is America. It's apple pie and family."

Petition-gatherers were busy as politicians, athletes, and fans shared their Twins loyalty with the crowd, from U.S. Sen. Paul Wellstone and Minnesota Attorney General Mike Hatch to Twins great Tony Oliva and current player Corey Koskie.

Together, the crowd turned away from the Metrodome and faced East to chant, "Save our Twins" toward the direction of baseball Commissioner Bud Selig, who lives in Milwaukee, Wis., and formerly owned the Brewers.

And when asked if they would invite Selig over for Thanksgiving, there was a bellowing, "No!"

Marlin Levison/Associated Press

Former Minnesota Twins great Tony Oliva addresses a crowd of several thousand gathered in the Metrodome parking lot to solidify their support for the team Sunday in Minneapolis.

The grass-roots group "Keep the Twins at Home" hopes to gather tens of thousands of signatures on petitions in support of the Twins. The group has sent red, white and blue "Twins Fans Vans" across the state. And on the Internet, more than 27,000 of the petitions have been downloaded, group organizers said.

The group had some good news Nov. 16 when a district judge ordered the Twins to play its 2002 home schedule in the Metrodome. Twins owner Carl Pohlad also was ordered not to sell the team unless the new owner agrees to have the team play its 2002 home schedule in the ballpark.

Karen Sneed still has her hotel reservations to watch the Twins in spring training next year. Sneed was 6 years old when the Twins arrived in 1961, and she's been a fan since. She listened to games on the radio with her dad and now brings her own daughter to spring training.

"People don't realize that baseball is more than just about money," Sneed said. "It's tradition. It's part of summer."

She said Gov. Jesse Ventura and state lawmakers are at fault for not helping to get a new stadium. And Pohlad is simply a "sellout," Sneed said as her 11-year-old daughter, Sara, held a sign that read "God Bless + Save our Minnesota Twins."

"There's a lot of people who vote," Sneed said. "And this year, we're keeping track."

A Twins fan for 20 years, Tim Hanson said the team's surprise season this year revived his excitement in the team.

Holding a "Kirby for Governor" sign, he said it's disappointing that the community hasn't backed a new stadium with tax money and that Pohlad won't spend some of his millions to keep the team that's just beginning to make noise again.

"I sort of feel ashamed in the community for not supporting the team with a stadium," said Hanson, of Minneapolis. "Instead, they want a couple extra bucks."

NFL ROUNDUP

Bears, Niners win thrillers

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jeff Garcia threw a 7-yard touchdown pass to Terrell Owens and made a 2-point conversion with 1 second left in regulation. Then the quarterback helped set up Jose Cortez's 26-yard field goal Sunday that lifted San Francisco to a 25-22 win over the Carolina Panthers.

It was the fourth time this season Garcia rallied San Francisco (7-2) to either win or tie a game in the waning moments of the fourth quarter. The 49ers are 3-1 in overtime in 2001.

Bears 27, Bucs 24

TAMPA, Fla. — Jim Miller threw three touchdown passes to Marty Booker and the Bears held on when Martin Gramatica's 49-yard field goal bounced off the right upright as time expired.

The Bears (7-2) have won twice in overtime this season after wiping out double-digit deficits in the closing minutes of regulation. This time, they nearly let an 11-point lead slip away in the final seven minutes.

Cardinals 45, Lions 38

TEMPE, Ariz. — Jake Plummer passed for 334 yards and four touchdowns, two to David Boston, as the Cardinals rallied from 10 points down to keep the Lions winless.

It was the sixth-consecutive time Detroit (0-9) has lost by a touchdown or less.

Skins 17, Broncos 10

DENVER — Kent Graham threw two touchdown passes in the fourth quarter as the Redskins won their fourth straight after opening the season with five losses. Graham led the Redskins to all their points, replacing Tony Banks after he suffered a concussion and was carried off the field late in the first half.

Raiders 34, Chargers 24

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jerry Rice caught three of Rich Gannon's four touchdown passes, including a 20-yard score with 2:46 to play. Rice caught eight passes for 131 yards in his biggest game since joining the Raiders (7-2) in the off-season — and his first 100-yard receiving game since the 1999 season finale with the 49ers.

Oakland won its 10th-straight regular-season home game, the longest streak in the NFL.

Steelers 20, Jaguars 7

PITTSBURGH — Kordell Stewart hit Hines Ward for a 28-yard score and also ran for a TD. Stewart, forced to carry the offense with Jerome Bettis held to minus yardage for much of the game, threw for 266 yards and ran for 51 for the Steelers (7-2).

Ward had nine catches for 112 yards, his first 100-yard game in the NFL.

Falcons 23, Packers 20

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Green Bay melted down on an unseasonably warm day at Lambeau Field.

Needing about 15 yards to get in field-goal range, Brett Favre instead threw a deep pass that Ashley Ambrose intercepted at the 2 with 1:08 remaining. Ambrose also picked off Favre's first pass on a day when temperature at kickoff was 59 degrees — more normal for Atlanta (5-4).

Saints 34, Colts 20

NEW ORLEANS — Aided by an official's call that could have put Indianapolis (4-5) ahead at half-time, the Saints (5-4) held on as Aaron Brooks shook off a slow start and four sacks, throwing for 249 yards and two touchdowns.

Near the end of the first half, Peyton Manning ran in from the 33 after faking a spike. But officials appeared to be faked out as well, blowing their whistles to halt play. According to Jim Daopoulos, an NFL supervisor of officials, field officials ruled that whistles blew with a second left on the clock, although television replays showed no time remaining.

Jets 24, Dolphins 0

MIAMI — New York's typically opportunistic defense scored on interception returns of 60 yards by Aaron Glenn and 63 yards by Victor Green, helping the Jets beat Miami for the eighth-consecutive time.

Seahawks 23, Bills 20

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Shaun Alexander rushed for 93 yards and scored the go-ahead touchdown as the Seahawks (5-4) spoiled the day for Jim Kelly.

Kelly, who quarterbacked the Bills to four Super Bowl appearances, had his No. 12 retired and his name placed on Ralph Wilson Stadium's Wall of Fame at halftime.

Eagles 36, Cowboys 3

IRVING, Texas — Jeremiah Trotter returned an interception 50 yards for a touchdown to close the first half. William Hampton returned Ryan Leaf's other interception 33 yards for a score with Chicago wide receiver Marty Booker pulls in a touchdown pass from quarterback Jim Miller during the third quarter against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers Sunday at Raymond James Stadium in Tampa, Fla.

Browns 27, Ravens 17

BALTIMORE — Anthony Henry had three of Cleveland's four interceptions against Elvis Grbac. Grbac committed five turnovers, yet the Ravens (6-4) nearly overcame those miscues and a 17-0 deficit. But with Cleveland nursing a 20-17 lead, Tim Couch moved

Titans 20, Bengals 7

CINCINNATI — Derrick Mason returned the opening kickoff 101 yards, and Kevin Dyson caught a 28-yard touchdown pass for Tennessee (4-5), which was coming off a 16-10 loss to Baltimore that could have scuttled its season.

The Titans were jumping and Defensively, the Hawkeyes weren't pleased with their overall performance. While they were able to contain Minnesota for a majority of the first-half and did hold its potent ground attack to 134 yards — nearly 100 yards below its average — Iowa surrendered 368 yards via the air, most of which came in the second half as senior receiver Ron Johnson snagged seven receptions for 181 yards.

"From the sidelines, I didn't think we played that well on defense," Ferentz said. "We can play better, and we need to do better. We weren't as sharp up on the line and we weren't tackling as well."

Senior defensive tackle Jerry Montgomery, who had guaranteed a victory on Nov. 13, was especially disappointed in his performance, but he couldn't help but smile since his prophecy came true.

"No one doubted it," he stated.

While Iowa was fairly confident in its chances against the Golden Gophers, perhaps the biggest surprise of the afternoon came when sophomore offensive lineman Robert Gallery, all 6-7, 300-pounds of him, was the first one to get to Floyd.

"It seemed like there was food over there," senior receiver Kahlil Hill said on Gallery's sprint towards the Minnesota sidelines. "He is first to the buffet line, so I'm sure he's going to be first to the pig."

In an afternoon filled with highlights and stories to bring a smile to anyone's face, perhaps the best ending came from McCann. Showered with boos the last time he was on the Kinnick Stadium grass in an Oct. 27 loss to Michigan, he returned valiantly on Nov. 17 to lead Iowa to its first winning season since 1997.

"To see his face up there as Player of the Game and to hear the fans scream for him, whether he says it or not, I was listening," Hill said.

McCann, his usual humble self following a victory, felt any one of 25 guys could have earned Player of the Game accolades, but even he got caught up in a little bit of the senior storybook ending.

"I'm not into scripting things," he said with a smile. "But I wouldn't change a thing."

squarely on the shoulders of the team's five seniors — especially Evans and Recker.

"I thought Reggie made some poor decisions down the stretch," he said. "I thought Luke made some very poor decisions down the stretch. Those are our go-to guys."

Evans took a questionable shot late in the game, rather than pulling the ball out and running time off the clock, and Recker had a team-high four turnovers.

Alford's message to the seniors hit home with Duez Henderson. Henderson finished the game with just six points and two rebounds in 21 minutes of play. Alford's criticism was warranted, and the team's veterans know they must improve their play, he said.

"It's just like any part of the game," Henderson said. "You have got to work with it."

Louisiana Tech's steady progress in the second half nearly obliterated the Hawkeyes' strong first-half showing. Iowa led 42-30 at the break, due in large part to Leslie's play. Leslie added seven points, five rebounds, and two steals to the Iowa effort off the bench in the first half.

The Hawkeyes, who played three games in five days last week, next travel to Kansas City for the championship rounds of the Guardians Classic, where they will meet No. 11 Memphis.

IOWA VOLLEYBALL

Momentum halts as Hawkeyes drop two

By Tyler Lechtenberg

The Daily Iowan

This weekend's road trip stopped any momentum the Iowa volleyball team had been building.

After winning three of their last four matches, the Hawkeyes fell to Big Ten foes Wisconsin and Northwestern, dropping their record to 6-21 overall, 3-15 in the Big Ten. The conference-leading Badgers improved to 22-3 overall, 16-1 in the Big Ten, while Northwestern upped its mark to 9-16, 5-13.

"It was the worst that I've seen them play as a team," Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett said. "We thought we were doing a lot better, but I guess, as we're learning with this type of team, there are going to be valleys and hills. We ended up in a valley this weekend."

On Nov. 16, the sixth-ranked Badgers waltzed past the Hawkeyes in front of 4,054 fans at the Wisconsin Field House. Wisconsin won all three games, 30-9, 30-13, 30-20. The Badgers nearly doubled Iowa's kill total, 50-28, while they hit a .462 percentage for the win. All-American candidate Sherisa Livingston hit .773 for the match on her way to 18 kills. The Hawkeyes were led with seven kills apiece by sophomore Renee Hill and senior Sara Meyer-mann. Freshman Pam Kavadas' eight digs and fellow freshman Kassie Petty's 18 assists led the way for the Hawkeyes.

The following evening in Evanston, Ill., the Hawkeyes were unable to make it a season sweep of the Wildcats, losing in four games, 30-25, 23-30, 30-25, 30-20. The win ended a nine-game losing streak for Northwestern.

Meyermann, leading the Big Ten in kills, got back on track against the Wildcats to notch her 11th double-double of the season with 28 kills and 14 digs. Hill, who returned to the setter role, led Iowa with 38 assists, and sophomore Carolyn Giese racked up a career-high 8 blocks in the loss.

The switch of Hill and Petty, who had inserted six games earlier to try to spark the offense, came after Petty struggled against the Badgers. However, Buck-Crockett was not down on

Other seniors, such as Kahlil Hill and Jeremy Allen, turned in their usual solid performances, all under the watchful eyes of their former coach.

This was the solid, all-around performance reminiscent of some of Fry's best teams — like the 1981 squad, which was honored Nov. 17 for making the school's first Rose Bowl appearance since 1959.

That team had very few "stars," such as Andre Tippett, but was loaded with talented players who knew their roles as team players. There was the quarterback duo of Gordy Bohannon and Pete Gales, which was very similar to the 2001 team's use of McCann and Brad Banks.

The '81 Hawkeyes had a talented running back in Norm Granger, who excelled behind a talented offensive line much like this season's Betts.

Defense was also a focal point, as it was with most of Fry's teams. The defense has been the most solid part of Iowa's game in 2001.

The only glaring difference between the 1981 team and the 2001 team is how it played against Minnesota. In a season filled with roses, the '81 squad failed to recapture Floyd of Rosedale. In a season filled with doubts, the 2001 squad was able to pull off a victory.

If there was one disappointment with Nov. 17, it would be that Fry and the '81 Hawkeyes were not afforded the honor they deserved. Merely bringing the team on the field and raising a banner no more than a gesture, along the lines of throwing a dog a bone.

Thankfully for Fry and the members of that team, the Hawkeyes paid them a far more fitting tribute than anything the powers that be did by winning big against the Gophers.

the freshman, saying she was proud of the way she stepped in and led the team during her stint as setter.

"She's a freshman leading a Big Ten team; it's fair to say that it's her right [to have a bad game]," she said. "You can't blame her."

With just two games remaining on the schedule, the Hawkeye coach said she is satisfied with the development of her young players, even though it may not be showing in the win column.

"Mentally, they're very up and down still," Buck-Crockett said. "But when you look at what we have as young players trying to compete against senior All-Americans, I do believe they're doing a very good job. If you look at the overall picture, they're doing the best they can, and no one wants to have a bad game. They don't practice as hard as they do to come in and have a bad game."

Top-10 teams lace Maui Tourney

By Jim O'Connell

LAHAINA, Hawaii — For the second-straight year the Maui Invitational has three teams ranked in the Top Ten, including the No. 1 team in the nation.

At least two of those three — No. 1 Duke, No. 5 UCLA, and No. 7 Kansas — will leave the 50th state with a loss, something that has become familiar for Top Ten teams this November.

Four teams in the preseason Top Ten — No. 2 Maryland, No. 4 Kentucky, No. 6 Florida, and No. 10 Saint Joseph's — have already lost a game less than two weeks into the season.

"That's a fact of life," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said Sunday, the day before his Blue Devils opened the Maui Invitational against Seton Hall. "When you play tough people you have a chance to lose. It's a chance to get better. You don't come to Maui expecting to go 3-0. You come to Maui expecting to have three very difficult games and to come out getting better."

This is Duke's third trip to Maui, and the Blue Devils have left 3-0 each time. They won the eight-team tournament in 1999, also as the No. 1 team in the country and defending national champions, and in 1997, as the preseason No. 3.

BANGI, Afghanistan — battle for the Taliban's northern stronghold of Kunduz intensified Monday, international negotiators reportedly agreed to meet weekend in Germany to discuss forming a new, broad-based Afghan government.

More signs of normalcy hold in the capital, Kabul, television returned to the air and a movie theater reopened — both were shut down during the fighting.

Attorneys for convicted double-murderer Jonathan Memmer asked for a new trial on Monday, saying evidence used during the original one was "irrelevant and prejudicial."

Memmer deserves a new trial because Judge David Remle should not have admitted some key pieces of evidence — a hardware-store receipt, eyeglasses and a footprint, states the motion.

"Admission of such evidence resulted in a violation of the defendant's rights," Memmer attorney Clemens Erdahl wrote in the eight-page motion. "Considering the evidence in the light most favorable to the state"

On Monday afternoon, the call for prayer rings through the low City mosque. A collage of white, black, and brown men, dressed in everything from traditional prayer clothes to khakis, jeans and designer shirts, line up.

The differences among the men are only superficial, local Muslims said as they gathered Monday to pray in observance of the holy month of Ramadan.

"In Chicago, there are so many mosques that people tend to stay within their own racial group," said UI senior Tariq Aleemuddin. "In Iowa City, we have to come together, and it's a blessing in disguise."

Wearing a red turban and traditional prayer robe, Musa Vanderlinden faces in the direction of the holy city of Mecca and kneels in prayer. The red-haired, pale-skinned UI senior converted to Islam three years ago.
