Renowned engineers to discuss Iowa Child

By Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

Four international engineers working on the Iowa Child indoor rain-forest project will visit Iowa City and the UI this week to discuss the design and planning of the facility.

They will visit university engineering classes, and tonight they will meet with area architects, consultants, and construction companies sorting through the intricacies of the multimillion-dollar project. They will speak about their experience with past complex projects and make alterations to the project's new design, officials said.

The meeting tonight will feature Edward Peck and Greg Crozler of Foiltec, GmbH, and Steven Varga and Peter Quigley from Weidinger Associates. It is co-sponsored by the Great Iowa City Area Home Builders Association and the Iowa Child Institute.

The association has been on the forefront of backing the Iowa Child project, a $225 million learning environment featuring an enclosed rain forest, said Joan Tiemeyer, the executive officer of the Home Builders Association.

"We're happy to be able to bring some world-renowned people into the community," said Sheila Boyd, the director of community relations for Iowa Child. "We want to keep getting our message out."

The project was modified in September to reduce costs with a new design. The 4.6-acre complex will house a rain forest, aquarium, exhibit hall, and a 200-room hotel. The project will be located in Coralville at the intersection of Interstate 80 and First Avenue, adjacent to the proposed Coralville conference center.

The engineers from Weidinger will also give a presentation to UI engineering classes on Friday about past projects the company has completed, said Wilfred Nixon, the interim chairman of the industrial-engineering department.

Although he will not attend the meeting tonight, he will hear the engineers speak to the classes, he said.

"It's too good of an opportunity when you get professional engineers to come speak at the university," Nixon said. "It is a great chance."

Schools discuss new insurance options

By John Moiseed
The Daily Iowan

A union employee says the Iowa City School District should consider more options to offset insurance-premium costs for district employees rather than reaching a decision too soon.

The district is acting too soon in drafting a plan by a self-imposed Dec. 1 deadline, said critics during the board's Tuesday meeting.

Tony Villhauer, a representative of Service Employees International Union 199 in Coralville, criticized the School Board's failure to prepare district employees for a 35 percent premium hike this year.

The Health Insurance Committee, formed earlier this year to address the hike, isn't looking into alternatives to cutting benefits, he said.

"What I'd like to see is the committee explore alternatives to having one plan," said Kim Miller, the union's executive director.

Board member Peter Wallace presented the Health Insurance Committee's proposal that would have employees pay $10 for a doctor's office visit and a 10 percent co-payment for medical services. Under the new prescription-drug

In other action, a map developed by the UI geography department to cope with elementary-school crowding was unveiled. Proposed district lines would place students into the closest school and take all 17 schools' capacities into account. All schools except Hills Elementary would have 21 empty seats, not counting students outside of the district and transfers.

UI geography Professor Gerard Rushton warned that the map might not adequately address growth on the district's West Side.

"You can't make changes to solve 2001's problems," he said. "You have to look ahead at least three years."

Some board members said the map was helpful, but they were not in favor of some district lines moving farther away from the schools.

Mercy moves to keep 20% of nurses from vote

By Tony Robinson and Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

Almost 20 percent of Mercy Hospital's nurses will be excluded from an upcoming vote on unionizing if an appeal by administrators is granted.

Mercy Hospital officials filed an appeal Tuesday to prevent 44 nurses from voting. The move comes after a Nov. 13 ruling that excluded 30 of the hospital's 430 nurses.

The Mercy administration said it wants to bar all "charge" nurses from voting. The National Labor Relations Board will eventually rule on the appeal.

The additional nurses are general-staff nurses who fill in as charge nurses as little as one weekend a month.

Mercy officials refused to comment regarding their appeal and the unionization.

Staff nurses at the hospital, 500 E. Market St., say unionization will occur no matter how many votes the administration tries to eliminate.

Even though Mercy's administration considers charge nurses to be supervisors, they hold little clout in the overall decision-making process at the hospital, said Mercy staff nurse Karen Leigh.

"There is nothing supervisory about the position," she said. "If they want to categorize me as a supervisor, they should let me know and adjust my pay accordingly."

The work environment has remained "as usual" during these past four months, despite the administration's actions to challenge the nurses' right to vote, said Mercy staff nurse Claudia Barber.

"We're all professionals," she said. "We all have the same goal: to provide the best health care possible."

Although communication between employees and administrators has improved during the four-month effort to unionize, the appeal indicates that administrators don't want to relinquish their power, Leigh said.

"[The administration] has invested tremendous resources in stopping our unionization, but we are still confident the group will be organized," she said.

Nurses at the hospital began unionization discussions with the Service Employees International Union Local 199 in mid-July. The union, the largest health-care group nationwide, represents more than 700,000 employees, including 110,000 nurses.

The unionization movement began in order to create a voice in administrative decisions, Barber said.

"Each nurse has her own voice," she said. "Management can choose to listen or not to listen, to act or to not act. As a group of professionals, we'll have a much stronger voice."

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Harvard biologist Don Wiley was last seen at a banquet in Memphis just before Nov. 15. His rental car was hours later, abandoned on a River bridge with the keys in it and the tank full of gas.

His family does not believe he committed suicide, and police say there is no evidence that the 57-year-old married man with no known financial or domestic problems was kidnapped or killed.

But the disappearance in the and anthrax attacks has drawn attention of the FBI. Wiley is how the human immune system infections; he had recently such dangerous viruses as AIDS, and influenza.

Investigators are reviewing ties to what might have happened. Wiley jumping from the bridge target of some kind of terrorism napping because of his research.

"Right now, nothing is pointing, except he is missing," police said Tuesday.

Wiley's wife, Katrin Valgeirsdottir, said she doesn't believe her husband killed himself.

The words came to Ann Travers as she watched her husband sleep that night: "He's going to make an excellent father."

And there it was, the answer she'd been searching for — her personal response to tragedy, after walking out of Manhattan and turning to watch the World Trade Center collapse.

Little more than 10 days later, she was pregnant. Not long after, so was Stacey Stapleton, who made the decision with her husband, Paul, to have a child as a fighter jets flew over their Manhattan apartment. Anthony Andreano and wife Tamara, who live on Staten Island, also have started trying to conceive a Christmas "surprise" for their families.

While the trend may be strongest in New York, doctors say people nationwide seem to be shunning talk of a world gone wrong and pursuing pregnancy not just in spite of, but because of, the Sept. 11 attacks.

"It's the 'carpe diem' mode," explained Dr. Michael Silverstein, an obstetrician and gynecologist at NYU Medical Center in Manhattan. "They're saying, 'Life's too short — who knows what's down the road.'"

Dr. Steven Brody said Alvarado Hospital Medical Center in San Diego has received roughly 25 percent more calls from new patients wanting to learn about overcoming infertility since the attacks.

"The concept is not [just] having a baby — it's building a family," said Brody, the medical director of the hospital's reproductive

Fourth teen charged in Columbine-style plot

BOSTON (AP) — A 17-year-old girl who authorities say agreed to take part in a Columbine-style massacre at her school but spilled the secret by warning her favorite teacher that the woman was in danger was charged Tuesday with conspiracy to commit murder.

Amy Lee Bowman, who pleaded innocent, is the fourth teenager charged in what authorities say was a plan to smuggle guns under black trench coats into the school and emerge from a bathroom shooting to kill.

Three other students — brothers Eric McKeenan, 17, and Michael McKeenan, 15, and Steven Jones, 15 — were charged earlier in the plot to kill "thugs, preps, and faculty" at New Bedford High School. They pleaded innocent Monday to conspiracy to commit murder, possession of ammunition, and other charges.

An unidentified 16-year-old is scheduled for arraignment today on the same charges, police said.

Unlike the other defendants, Bowman was released pending her next court appearance, on Dec. 17. "Sometimes we have to treat people differently based on the circumstances," prosecutor Raymond Veary said.

The students allegedly modeled themselves after the two teenagers who carried out the 1999 Columbine High School massacre near Littleton, Colo., that killed 15.

Missing biologist draws attention

By Bill Poovey
Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Harvard molecular biologist Don Wiley was last seen leaving a banquet in Memphis just before midnight on Nov. 15. His rental car was found a few hours later, abandoned on a Mississippi River bridge with the keys in the ignition and the tank full of gas.

His family does not believe he committed suicide, and police say there is no evidence that the 57-year-old married father of four with no known financial or domestic problems was kidnapped or killed.

But the disappearance in this time of war and anthrax attacks has attracted the attention of the FBI. Wiley is an expert on how the human immune system fights off infections; he had recently investigated such dangerous viruses as AIDS, Ebola, herpes, and influenza.

Investigators are reviewing all possibilities to what might have happened, from Wiley jumping from the bridge to his being a target of some kind of terrorist-backed kidnapping because of his research.

"Right now, nothing is pointing at anything, except he is missing," police Lt. Walter Norris said Tuesday.

Wiley's wife, Katrin Valgeirsdottir, said "suicide is everybody's first reaction," but she doesn't believe her husband would have killed himself.

She said "there is no connection to terrorist activity. None."

"We don't know what happened. We can speculate until the cows come home, but we don't know," she said in a telephone interview from Cambridge, Mass.

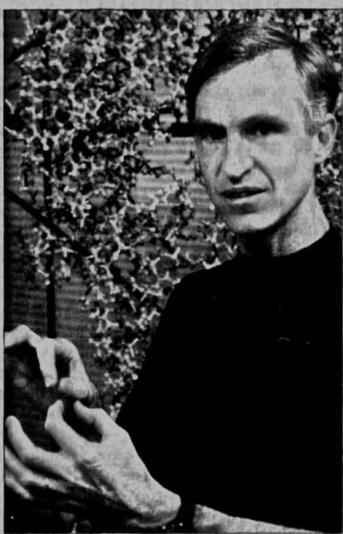

Wiley is a professor of biochemistry and biophysics in Harvard University's molecular and cellular biology department. He and another Harvard professor, Dr. Jack Strominger, have won honors for their work on how the human immune system works, including the Japan Prize two years ago.

Wiley was in Memphis to attend a two-day annual meeting of the scientific advisory board of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, a board Wiley has served on for approximately 10 years.

Dr. William Evans, the hospital's deputy director, said Wiley seemed "in a great frame of mind" and was looking forward to time with his family when he left a Nov. 15 dinner at the Peabody Hotel about midnight.

Four hours later, police found Wiley's abandoned Mitsubishi Galant a few miles from the hotel, in a lane of the Hernando DeSoto Bridge that rises 100 feet above the Mississippi River between Memphis and Arkansas.

Norris said police have no clues about Wiley's whereabouts during those four hours. He said patrol boats and helicopters have been checking the river, but divers wouldn't be helpful because the current is too swift.

U.S. holding 600 in Sept. 11 probe

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government is detaining 603 people in its terrorism investigation, including some alleged members of Osama bin Laden's network. Federal agents have cited concerns about nuclear-power plants, guns, and box cutters in seeking the detentions, according to documents reviewed by the Associated Press.

Faced with growing congressional concern about the secrecy and scope of his investigation, Attorney General John Ashcroft announced Tuesday that 104 people have been charged with federal crimes in the probe.

In his most detailed public accounting yet, Ashcroft released the names of those facing federal charges. But he refused to provide names for the hundreds held on immigration violations, saying he didn't want to aid bin Laden's Al Qaeda network.

"The Department of Justice is waging a deliberate campaign of arrest and detention to protect American lives," he said. "We are removing suspected terrorists who violate the law from our streets to prevent further terrorist attacks."

Documents provided to Congress and reviewed by the AP divulged evidence in some of the cases.

For instance, a Pakistani man who took video footage of the World Trade Center a few days before the Sept. 11 attacks was charged by agents in Wilmington, Del., with being an illegal immigrant who possessed firearms, the documents show.

A Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms affidavit also alleged the Pakistani, Raza Nasir Khan, requested maps of a hunting area near a rural Salem County, N.J., nuclear-power plant and had a handheld global-positioning system. A search of his home found four long guns and one handgun. Khan told authorities he visited the World Trade Center a few days before the attacks and shot videos, the documents said.

The magistrate who ordered Khan held said she didn't see any connection to terrorism. In fact, few of the hundreds of pages of supporting documents provided to Congress mentioned a connection with the Sept. 11 attacks.

In Northern California, an Immigration and Naturalization Service affidavit alleged that Nabil Sarama, a Palestinian, made a false statement to obtain a permanent residency card. Sarama was arrested Sept. 16 in Orlando, Fla., after police found him near a pay phone that had been used to make bomb threats, the documents alleged.

And there it was, the answer she'd been searching for — her personal response to tragedy after walking out of Manhattan and turning to watch the World Trade Center collapse.

Little more than 10 days later, she was pregnant. Not long after, so was Stacey Stapleton, who made the decision with her husband, Paul, to have a child as fighter jets flew over their Manhattan apartment. Dr. Steven Brody said Alvarado Hospital Medical Center in San Diego has received roughly 25 percent more calls from new patients wanting to learn about overcoming infertility since the attacks.

"The concept is not [just] having a baby — it's building a family," said Brody, the medical director of the hospital's reproductiveendocrinology unit. "I think that's the priority that this disaster has made apparent to people."

Right after the attacks, some patients put plans on hold, said Dr. Matan Yemini, the co-director of the Diamond Institute for Infertility and Menopause in Millburn, N.J. But recent weeks have seen a surge in interest — and an unprecedented willingness in patients to talk frankly about their fertility problems.

"In a way, it's opened people," Yemini said.

Dr. Kenneth Johnson in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said many potential mothers he's seen recently are asking more about the role of exercise and nutrition in pregnancy.

"Lately, I sense a lot of interest in getting it right," said Johnson, the director of the Women's Health Center at the Nova Southeastern University College of Osteopathic Medicine.

But business has not been booming for everyone. Maureen Rayburn, a certified nurse and midwife in Manhattan, said several of her pregnant clients left New York after Sept. 11. And another, who before the attacks planned to have her baby without the father's help or blessing, decided to get an abortion.

"With all the chaos, it's hard for people who aren't getting adequate support to take on that challenge," Rayburn said, though, she added, the patient who sought an abortion was the "exception," not the rule.

One population expert said major crises often cause people to procreate in attempt to "return to normalcy." But he's not convinced there will be a baby boom this-time, because the sagging economy may cause some people to postpone pregnancy.

"It could go either way," said Douglas Bachtel, a demographer with the University of Georgia College of Family and Consumer Sciences.

For Travers, it wasn't economics that was holding her back before Sept. 11. Mostly, it was fear.

and other reckless behavior, Brotherton said. Some UI students said cell phones provide them with an increased sense of security. Sophomore Jenny Smith said she made the decision to buy a cell phone after her car stalled one night last year, leaving her stranded. "The main reason I got my phone was for safety and protection," she said. "Now, I'm really glad I [have it]. I usually always bring it with me, and it's a nice comfort to have." Iowa City resident RaeAnn Pierce, 27, said she used her cell phone to report a car that had just hit a deer. Even though she was unable to stop, she said, she helped by calling the police. "They told me someone was on the way," Pierce said. "It's really nice to have a phone if you ever need it. If you're driving down the road in the middle of the night, it's nice to be able to get hold of someone if you have to." Iowa City police have also discovered the convenience of the phones. This is the first year they purchased and mounted the phones in all 15 squad cars. The phones make it possible for officers to respond quicker and use their time more efficiently, Brotherton said. "We want the police to be out on the streets and not at the station," he said. "Cell phones allow us to do that." file grounds, which state the reason he wants an appeal. Once a formal explanation is provided for the appeal, the attorney general's office will review the case and set a trial if grounds are reasonable. Whether Memmer will be tried by a panel of judges or only one will be decided in the screening process, White said.

White said he anticipates Memmer's grounds will be similar to his request for a new trial, which was filed earlier this month and rejected by Judge David Remley. Defense attorneys claimed some evidence admitted by Remley, including a pair of eyeglasses and a footprint, was either irrelevant or a violation of Memmer's rights. "I think a lot of those same issues will come up again in the motion for appeal," White said. "I don't know how the appellate court will act on them." Remley did not return phone calls regarding the case Tuesday. Memmer was sentenced to two life terms on Nov. 21 for bludgeoning to death Maria Lehner, 27, and Laura Watson-Dalton, 29. The sentence came following a two-and-one-half year investigation that has reportedly cost the state more than $100,000, an amount that is expected to rise. The victims' burned and mutilated corpses were found in a South Van Buren Street apartment on March 19, 1999, after a fire Memmer allegedly started. In the first measurable progress, the four factions representing the Northern Alliance, exiles backing the former king, and two smaller exile groups agreed their goal was to establish an interim administration that would lead to a national council of tribal leaders, or loya jirga, U.N. spokesman Ahmad Fawzi said. The loya jirga could convene in the Afghan New Year in March.

a planned full session with U.N. envoy Lakhdar Brahimi on Tuesday night so they could continue individual consultations, Fawzi said. Dobbins said the agreement on the agenda "is not insignificant" and that prospect for a consensus on forming an interim administration were good. Officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said agreement on a security force would be much more difficult. The delegations received a strong endorsement from the Pashtun ethnic group, the largest in Afghanistan, with a phone call broadcast throughout the conference room from Pashtun leader Hamdi Karzai in Afghanistan, Fawzi said. While the Pashtuns have no delegation of their own at the talks, each faction includes Pashtun delegates. Fawzi read excerpts from the call: "We have been made extremely poor and vulnerable, but we are a strong people who would like to assert our will and a sense of self-determination so that we really can live in an environment of brotherhood and mutual respect. "This meeting is the path toward salvation." Underlying the unifying mood among the 25 Afghan delegates gathered around a large conference table at the Petersberg hotel, Fawzi said the four delegation leaders used the same words to describe "their thirst for peace." "All four leaders spoke of this meeting as the beginning of a new era for Afghanistan, one that promises dignity and peace to its people," Fawzi said. While the international community supports their efforts, German Foreign Minister Joschka Fischer told them plainly that it was up to them to bring an end to the Afghan people's suffering. "The responsibility is yours. No one can relieve you of it, and no one wants to," he said in remarks opening the talks. "The international community is prepared to make this great effort. This readiness is linked with clear expectations." The delegates must agree on binding rules for a future political system and respect for human rights, particularly for women, Fischer said. The international community's vision for a future administration is tied directly to the development of democratic institutions and ideals. During the two-year transitional administration, Fawzi said, Afghan leaders will be expected to establish a Constitution and government that will protect human rights, guarantee an education for girls, foster good relations with Afghanistan's neighbors, and demonstrate a commitment to fighting terrorism.

Costs of correspondence courses to increase

disparity between correspondence and on-campus courses is vanishing as both use the Web for instruction with more regularity. Correspondence-course registrants will receive a UI identification card, entitling them to university services. They will also be eligible for federal financial aid under the new policy effective Jan. 22, 2002. Although colleges will individually decide whether to accept the correspondence courses for their degree programs, Prophet says the classes should be considered equivalent to all other courses. "We want to make sure the perception of the university and students is that these classes have a value and aren't something less than regular classes," he said. Students can register at any time for the correspondence courses; they are now required to complete them in nine months, whereas before, they could apply for a three-month extension, said Susan Beadle, the assistant director of credit programs. In the 2000-01 academic year, the correspondence program offered more than 160 classes. Boote said one-third of registrants are on-campus students. Despite the tuition increase for the classes, more might be inclined to enroll when they have access to resident credit, she said. # U.S. tightens Taliban 'noose'

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — More Marines poured into Afghanistan Tuesday, and Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said America was "tightening the noose" around Osama bin Laden and his Taliban allies. Taliban control in its southern stronghold appeared to be crumbling.

"We'll pursue them until they have nowhere else to run," Rumsfeld told reporters at the U.S. Central Command headquarters in Tampa, Fla.

With the collapse of Taliban resistance in the north, attention has focused on the south, where the Islamic militia that protected bin Laden remains in control of the city of Kandahar and a handful of provinces.

President Bush launched military operations Oct. 7 in Afghanistan after the Taliban refused to surrender bin Laden, the alleged architect of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks in the United States.

In Washington, U.S. officials said that of an estimated 4,000 to 5,000 members of bin Laden's Al Qaeda terrorist network in Afghanistan, several hundred have been killed, including seven considered to be leaders. The officials spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Franks said the hunt for bin Laden and his Al Qaeda followers was focusing on two areas: Kandahar in the south and a mountain base called Tora Bora, south of Jalalabad in the east near the Pakistan border.

U.S. Marines, who established a base in southern Afghanistan late Sunday, sent out armed patrols Tuesday as part of the American effort to bring the fight to the Taliban's southern homeland.

Fewer than three days after first landing in southern Afghanistan, more than 600 Marines were on the ground, with at least 400 more on their way. Pentagon officials said they would help choke off escape routes for Taliban leaders and fighters loyal to bin Laden.

Rumsfeld said U.S. efforts "will be shifting from cities at some point to hunting down and rooting out terrorists where they hide."

Franks described the situation inside Kandahar, the dusty backwater city where the Taliban took shape in the early 1990s, as "very confused" — an observation borne out by reports from residents and travelers reaching Pakistan.

Kandahar residents reached by telephone said Taliban fighters were positioning anti-aircraft guns and mortars on hilltops surrounding the city. But the center of the city appeared largely deserted.

"Taliban morale seems low. They're not as active or alert as they used to be," said Mohammed Asan, who traveled Tuesday from Kandahar to the Pakistani border town of Chaman in search of work.

He said people in Kandahar were aware of the Marines' presence from foreign radio reports.

Ghulam Mahmood, another traveler from Kandahar, said residents were afraid for themselves. "Will civilians get killed in the cross fire? They don't know what to expect."

The Taliban has vowed to defend Kandahar rather than abandon it as it did Kabul, the capital, and other cities. However, the South Asian Dispatch Agency, a private Pakistani news service with a correspondent in Kandahar, quoted unidentified Taliban fighters in the city as saying they had been ordered to prepare to leave on short notice.

Alliance says uprising over

By Burt Herman
Associated Press

MAZAR-E-SHARIF, Afghanistan — Dozens of shattered bodies lay in the dusty courtyard of a mud-walled Afghan fortress prison Tuesday as the Northern Alliance asserted it had ended a three-day uprising by Taliban prisoners with the help of American air strikes and U.S. special forces.

U.S. military officials said 30 to 40 men still were holding out in the sprawling Qalai Janghi complex. "It is not yet fully under control," Gen. Tommy Franks, who heads the war effort in Afghanistan, told reporters in Florida.

Northern Alliance troops turned back journalists trying to enter the complex outside the northern city of Mazar-e-Sharif on Tuesday night, making it impossible to confirm whether fighting had ended.

But representatives of the international Red Cross said late Tuesday that they were working to arrange for burials today — an indication the battle had abated.

"The situation is completely under control. All of them were killed," said Alim Razim, the political adviser to Gen. Rashid Dostum, the Northern Alliance commander responsible for Qalai Janghi.

The postscript from three days of fighting was grisly: The remains of soldiers from both sides lay around the prison, where non-Afghans who fought alongside the Taliban had been locked up since Sunday.

One television report showed some 60 bodies, believed to be those of Taliban fighters, scattered across a courtyard. In another spot, a body believed to be that of a Pakistani lay in a ditch, and villagers said he had been strangled with a rope. One man, laughing, picked up the body by its robe and kicked it in the head. Another villager posed over the dead man, holding a knife.

The hundreds of captives at Qalai Janghi — which means "Fortress of War" — held out for days, despite heavy U.S. air strikes and thousands of Northern Alliance fighters from around the region coming to reinforce local troops. U.S. special forces and other troops believed to be British also participated in the battle and coordinated air strikes.

Fighting against freedom

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal... Written more than 200 years ago, these words set the stage for the birth of our great nation. While they were first interpreted to apply only to white, male land owners, today these words have come to encompass both sexes and all races so that now we truly are a nation of equals.

Nowhere has this equality been more important than in our legal system. In the eyes of justice, all human beings stand equal. Black or white, male or female, gay or straight, all people, no matter their label, are guaranteed the same protections under our legal system. Now, however, a new label has been introduced that strikes at the heart of all it means to be American: terrorist. Terrorists attempt to destroy everything we hold dear. They use our freedoms against us while hiding behind our privacy laws. Worst of all, in attempting to capture and punish these people, we are becoming more and more like them.

President Bush recently issued an order for noncitizen terrorist suspects to be tried in military tribunals. These tribunals are a shallow mockery of the American judicial system. Suspects tried in such a court have no right to a trial by jury, nor are they allowed to confront their accusers. Furthermore, the government would decide what, if any, details would be released about the proceedings. By proposing such miscarriages of justice, Bush is effectively flying a jetliner into the Bill of Rights and watching it burn.

Since when do noncitizens not count as humans? If all people are supposed to be equal under the law, why should those labeled as terrorists be robbed of their right to a jury trial in the American judicial system? In the words of Vice President Dick Cheney, "They don't deserve the same guarantees and safeguards that would be used for an American citizen going through the normal judicial process." It seems as though Cheney thinks that being American and being a terrorist are mutually exclusive.

While an American citizen such as Timothy McVeigh, a terrorist in every sense of the word, would be exempt from the military tribunal due simply to his place of birth, foreign students at the UI could be labeled as terrorists and hauled off in the middle of the night never to be seen again. Is that justice? Is that the self-evident equality spoken of in the Declaration of Independence?

Civil and human rights apply to all people, regardless of place of birth or current residence. To actively deny others the freedoms we fight to defend is criminal and shameful. Bush wants equality to apply only to American citizens, and he is willing to trample all that is American in the process. If Bush were a noncitizen, perhaps he could be brought to trial under his own military tribunal. After all, what greater threat to America is there than a man who is willing to destroy the country in order to save it?

Eliminate fun fairly

Even though I am not a smoker and therefore appreciate a smoke-free environment, I strongly disagree with our City Council's plans to regulate smoking in restaurants by using a percentage of food versus alcohol sales as a guideline.

This will have disastrous effects on businesses that support the arts, specifically live music at restaurants such as the Mill and the Sanctuary. It will also change the nature of downtown, forcing some restaurants to shut down or close their kitchens permanently and become bars. We already have plenty of bars to choose from downtown.

I'm a kitchen manager at a downtown restaurant that stops serving dinner at 10 p.m. but continues to operate as a bar until closing time. My co-workers and colleagues would be directly affected by the council's proposed ordinance. Our restaurant, which is already no-smoking until 10 p.m., is the less profitable part of the business. We all know that rent is not cheap downtown, and I suspect the owners would choose to cut their losses by eliminating lunch service or lowering the quality of food available. No doubt, many restaurant workers — both smokers and nonsmokers — will lose their jobs if this goes through. This whole debate irritates me because the ordinance aims to increase choices for nonsmokers (patrons or employees), but it will actually limit choices when restaurants close or become bars. The fact is that smoking is legal, drinking is legal, and many successful and popular restaurants already cater to non-smokers. This is a classic case of a solution in search of a problem.

Quoteworthy

Basically, cell phones have completely changed the face of crime reporting.

— Lori Peterson, emergency communications operator for the Iowa City police.

If the council insists that it must diminish the freedom of individuals and business owners, I urge it to do so fairly by eliminating smoking in restaurants at times when the menu is being served — without regard to the percentage of food and alcohol sales.

Aaron Wolfe
Iowa City resident

Not a puritanical blow job

Beau Elliot labels those who support a restaurant smoking ban as "Puritans Nouveaux" (DI, Nov. 20). His contention is that those concerned about secondhand smoke in public are motivated not by worries about health but by "puritanism." Though Elliot uses variants of the word "puritan" 14 times, his argument that puritanism is the culprit is not clear. I studied his discussion of blow jobs performed on tailpipes, but could find no argument for puritanism there.

Without quite saying so, Elliot implies that a 1998 World Health Organization report shows that there is no connection between secondhand smoke and health. In actual fact, the WHO report's conclusion is precisely the opposite of what Elliot implies it is. The tobacco companies have conducted a well-funded propaganda campaign to misrepresent the WHO report, and perhaps Elliot's disinformation is a secondhand blowback from it.

There are dozens of scientific studies of secondhand smoke's effects on health. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control draw the following conclusions from them: Secondhand smoke causes 3,000 deaths from lung cancer and 62,000 heart-disease deaths in U.S. nonsmokers each year. Secondhand smoke has especially severe effects on children's health, increasing the risk of middle ear infections and even sudden infant death syndrome and causing childhood asthma to worsen (CDC study, March 21).

Smoking bans are not intended to keep smokers from smoking but to require they do so only in non-public places, where they cannot damage other people's health. Apparently Elliot is using the H.L. Mencken concept of "puritanism," whereby puritanism is the practice of keeping people from enjoying life. But bans on smoking in public are in fact designed precisely to enable people to enjoy life and to live longer. By Elliot's concept, it is those who blow smoke in the public's face who are the puritans.

Come on, world, quit pissing me off (please)

For weeks, my mother (who reads my stuff online) has been begging me to write a positive column. "Come on," she says. "Just write about something nice for once." Sadly, I must disappoint her. Thanksgiving Break gave me an extra week in which to work myself into a hissy fit over the more trivial aspects of life, and I must vent. So, without further ado, I present a number of actions that, if ceased, would make me considerably less pissed off.

Using Harry Potter lingo in inappropriate situations. You may think that Harry Potter is a great book. You may think that Harry Potter is a great movie. But I swear to God, if I have to read one more time how many "muggles" swamped the box office over the holiday weekend, I'm going to shoot someone. Here's a reality check for all over-zealous entertainment journalists: "MUGGLE" IS NOT A REAL WORD! Please, quit using it in actual news stories.

Shoving Add Sheets in my face.

Today is Wednesday, so you can expect to be attacked at every corner by advertisement-wielding entrepreneurs. Just once, I'd like to grab one of these guys by the collar, back him into a corner, and desperately plead with him, "O Add Sheet Man, why must you torment me so?" But no, instead I mutter a civil "no thanks" and walk passively on my way.

People complain when the Gideons come to pass out Bibles once a semester, but at least they're handing out something of worth. It's one thing to have a man in a suit smile at you and ask you if you'd like a free New Testament. It's quite another to see someone pull a yellow mass of nudie-bar coupons out of a garbage bag, roll it up, and ever-so-rudely thrust it into your chest as you try to go about your everyday life.

Fouling in a tied basketball game with 0.8 seconds left.

Steve Alford can blame the officiating for the Missouri game as much as he wants, but the fact is, Glen Worley swatted at a guy whom he shouldn't have been anywhere near. Mizzou's shot was a last-second Hail Mary prayer, and the game would have gone into overtime if Worley had been able to keep his hands to himself. Frankly, I'm sick of how Alford, the university's highest-paid employee, has been passing the buck lately. When the Hawks couldn't get things going early against Boston University, it was supposedly because the fans were late in coming to the game. Now, when his team gets outplayed by the Tigers, it's because the referees are calling against them.

When you blow a 10-point lead with two minutes remaining, don't whine about the officiating. Take it like a man, and tell your team to learn how to run out a clock.

Raising my tuition by 18.5 percent.

To be honest, I'm not quite sure what a regent is. However, one thing is certain: There exists a board full of them, and this board thinks that I should have to pay an extra six or seven hundred dollars to go to school here next year. Mary Sue Coleman, to top things off, says that she is "very supportive" of the increase. — Now, I know that Coleman is very dedicated to this school. I learned that this summer, when she donated her entire raise back to the university. However, the important question is this: How dedicated is she to the students? At times, it seems that undergrads are only here to fund the research activities of the academic elite, as well as to give them some students to teach in their free time. Also, a number of our resources appear to be just for show, as if a certain amount of equipment will make us a more respected university. Two prime examples of this phenomenon are Schaeffer Hall, which I like to refer to as the building of extraneous iMacs, and Phillips Hall, in which the classrooms are equipped with two wall-mounted television sets, a movie projector, and a laser disc player (do they even make laser discs anymore?).

Hopefully, Coleman will do students a favor and take a knife to the university budget. God knows the Legislature isn't going to fund us.

Tinkering with marriage

By Tracy Nemitz
The Daily Iowan

Mark Montgomery and his wife, Irene Powell, have found that many are surprised a heterosexual couple would write a lesbian novel. In fact, when Powell submitted Theoretically Dead to their publisher under the pen name Tinker Marks, Montgomery said, they did not divulge their identities until they absolutely had to.

Although the book is classified as lesbian literature, Montgomery and Powell told them, the role of sexuality was a minor issue. So was the idea to make the book into a mystery novel. The idea for the book originated when a lesbian couple with whom Montgomery and Powell are friends tried to get pregnant through artificial insemination.

"There was no political agenda as far as women's issues or sexuality is concerned," Montgomery said. "Being very good friends with the couple this book was based on, we don't see them as a lesbian couple. To us they are a couple like any other with problems just like any other couple."

Reading Theoretically Dead written with the intelligence and wit of what would seem to be an experienced author, one would likely be surprised to learn that this is, in fact, the first novel either Montgomery or Powell has written. It won't be the last — plans for a sequel are already under way, Montgomery said.

"It was suggested that writing a novel centered around a heterosexual couple would be easier to sell," Montgomery said. "But we have developed an odd attachment to these characters, and besides, we are never going to be best-selling authors."

This is fine by the couple, who have been economics professors

Tinkering with mystery, marriage, and a moniker

By Tracy Nemitz
The Daily Iowan

Mark Montgomery and his wife, Irene Powell, have found that many are surprised a heterosexual couple would write a lesbian novel. In fact, when he and Powell submitted Theoretically Dead to their publisher under the pen name Tinker Marks, Montgomery said, they did not divulge their identities until they absolutely had to.

Although the book is classified as lesbian literature, Montgomery and Powell told them, the role of sexuality was a minor issue. So was the idea to make the book into a mystery novel. The idea for the book originated when a lesbian couple with whom Montgomery and Powell are friends tried to get pregnant through artificial insemination.

"There was no political agenda as far as women's issues or sexuality is concerned," Montgomery said. "Being very good friends with the couple this book was based on, we don't see them as a lesbian couple. To us they are a couple like any other, with problems just like any other couple."

This is fine by the couple, who have been economics professors at Grinnell College since 1989. One would think that after being married for 21 years and working together in the same department, devoting even more time collaborating to write the book would push most couples over the edge.

At times, Montgomery and Powell admittedly had their differences over the book's development. But each brought something unique to the story: Powell acted as the expert on the structure and rules of mysteries and Montgomery focused on adding humor to the text. "There are already plenty of things to fight about when you're married," Montgomery said. "But neither of us could

2 Israelis dead in Palestinian shooting

By Steve Weizman
Associated Press

AFULA, Israel — Two Palestinians sprayed a bus station and open-air market with gunfire Tuesday, killing two Israelis and wounding 14 others before being shot to death. Two U.S. envoys witnessed the immediate aftermath of the attack from the air, flying over Afula in a helicopter tour narrated by Israel's prime minister.

Later, a Palestinian attacker in Gaza fired at a car and killed an Israeli woman, the military said. Three other Israelis, including a baby, were wounded. Israeli soldiers shot and killed the gunman, Palestinian security and Israeli military sources said.

An Israeli army spokesman said the attacker fired at the convoy and threw grenades. In a faxed message to the Associated Press, the militant Hamas organization took responsibility.

One of the American mediators, retired Marine Corps Gen. Anthony Zinni, said the bloodshed underscored the need for a truce after 14 months of fighting. "A cease-fire is what we need to get to something more comprehensive and lasting," he said.

Two Palestinian groups — Islamic Jihad and the Al Aqsa Brigades linked to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement — claimed responsibility for what they said was a joint attack to avenge the targeted killings of Palestinians.

The Palestinian Cabinet

issued a statement condemning the two attacks "and all operations targeting Israeli civilians."

The gunmen were from the Jenin refugee camp in the West Bank, approximately 10 miles south of Afula. They slipped into Israel, reportedly in a stolen car with Israeli plates, despite a strict security closure of the West Bank and of Jenin in particular. Only a few hours earlier, Israeli troops had withdrawn from areas in Jenin, the last of six West Bank towns Israel partly occupied for several weeks.

At 11:30 a.m., the gunmen opened fire near the central bus station in Afula. Uri Kalman, a shop owner, said the assailants fired methodically at a traffic light.

"They were firing at the cars, one car, then another car, then another, time after time. There were five cars, all facing different ways. They had nowhere to turn," Kalman told Israel TV's Channel Two.

The assailants then ran to the nearby open-air market.

"They shot the first person [they encountered] in the head," witness Mordechai Cohen told Israel Radio.

One woman approached a gunman from behind and tried to attack him, but he turned around and shot her, said another woman who gave her name as Iris. "It was shocking. It's a mess," she said.

After several minutes, the assailants were cornered by security forces and killed in a firefight, said police spokesman

Gadi Kabalo/Associated Press

An unidentified Israeli woman carries Hodaia Baret, 2, to safety after she was wounded lightly when the car she was riding with her mother Hanna was attacked by a Palestinian gunman near Kisufim in Gaza Strip late Tuesday. According to reports, Hanna Baret was seriously injured and remains hospitalized. Israeli army said that an Israeli woman was killed and two others were wounded before the gunman was killed by its soldiers.

Gil Kleiman, a reserve soldier, Menashe Mekonnen, said he shot one of the gunmen in the head. "He shot again, and then he fell," Mekonnen said.

A 23-year-old man and a 25-year-old woman were killed, and 14 other Israelis were wounded, including four who were in serious condition, hospital officials said. Many of the wounded were given first aid while lying on the pavement. One woman, apparently a passer-by, wiped the face of a wounded Israeli soldier.

CHICAGO — They aren't the defending national champions for nothing.

In Chicago's United Center, the No. 1 Duke Blue Devils systematically defeated the Iowa Hawkeyes, ranked seventh in the latest Associated Press poll, 80-62, on the opening night of the ACC/Big Ten Challenge.

Unanimous preseason All-American Jason Williams led Duke with 25 points, while his junior courtmates Carlos Boozer and Mike Dunleavy collected 22 and 18 points, respectively.

Iowa senior Luke Recker paced the Hawkeyes with 15 points, but hit just 1-8 from 3-point range. The Hawkeyes dropped their second-straight game, sending their record to 4-2. Duke improved to 5-0 overall.

Poor shooting plagued the Hawkeyes. For the game, Iowa shot 38.5 percent and hit just two of 16 from behind the 3-point line, statistics that Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said were key in the game.

"They didn't shoot well, and that helped us," he said. "They're not going to go 2-16 every game."

Inside play was another key for the Dukies. The Blue Devils outrebounded the Hawkeyes, 41-35, and frustrated Hawkeye All-American candidate Reggie Evans from the start, holding last season's national leading rebounder to just eight points and nine rebounds. Much of the credit goes to Boozer, who also grabbed 14 rebounds, Krzyzewski said.

"[Boozer] moved his feet well, so he didn't give Reggie as many angles," he said.

The two teams battled with great intensity through the first 10 minutes of the first half. A Glen Worley lay-up at the 9:18 mark gave Iowa a 19-16 lead. But Blue Devils tapped into their experience to go on a 14-4 run that put them up 32-25 with 3:44 to go in the half.

IOWA 84, SMS 64 Hawkey

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

Try as it might, Southwest Missouri State simply could not stop Iowa's momentum in the second half Tuesday night, noticeably missing the 30.3 points per game thunder of NCAA career scoring leader Jackie Stiles and ultimately falling to the Hawks, 84-64, Tuesday night.

The Hawkeyes maintained a steady advantage after taking a 13-point lead in the second half. Iowa used powerful minutes from Beatrice Bullock and Jennie Lillis down low combined with an effective zone defense to keep the Bears locked out.

"I'm extremely proud of them," Iowa coach Lisa Bluder said. "They showed tremendous character after a physically draining, emotional loss two nights ago to Drake. With one day to prepare, I was thrilled with the way they bounced back after the loss with lots of intensity."

On Sunday, the Hawkeyes lost an exciting overtime thriller against the Bulldogs, 75-72.

Wasn't Duke's time to falter

CHICAGO — So much for the Sports Illustrated curse — at least for now.

Duke's Jason Williams stood head and shoulders above the rest of the competition Tuesday evening at the United Center. This coming just a week and half after gracing the cover of SI, an honor akin to the kiss of death for many athletes and teams in recent history.

The Blue Devils' time to falter may come yet, but it most certainly wasn't going to happen against the Hawkeyes at the United Center on ESPN. Duke was able to push its lead to double-digits and keep it there due in large part to the production of the junior guard, who chose to forgo entering the NBA to compete for at least one more season with the national champions.

Despite the fact that Williams made few friends by complaining about officiating during the start of the second half, you didn't have to be Dick Vitale to realize he turned in a stellar effort. With 25 points and five assists, Williams played with a consistency seldom seen from a col-

Bush rejects IOC's request

By Sonya Ross
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Tuesday turned aside an IOC request for a military truce during the Salt Lake City Olympics, and he will propose a U.N. resolution calling for athletes to travel safely to and from the games.

After a meeting, International Olympic Committee President Jacques Rogge said Bush assured him he would submit the resolution — a tradition for Olympic host nations — to the United Nations on Dec. 11. It will advocate safe passage of Olympic athletes and urge nations to compete peacefully, Rogge said.

"We did not go into specific issues. He just assured me of the support of the government for the resolution," Rogge said.

An administration official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the resolution would not contain the word "truce" or address a cease-fire. Earlier this month, Secretary of State Colin Powell said the U.S. military campaign in Afghanistan would continue.

The U.N. General Assembly approved a resolution calling for a global cease-fire during the 1996 Summer Olympics in Atlanta. Earlier this month, Rogge asked the Bush administration for a truce — which he defined as a cease-fire — during the Feb. 8-24 Salt Lake City Games.

On Tuesday, Rogge said the idea of a truce was not tied to the situation in Afghanistan or any other region or country. "It's a world concept," he said.

Afghanistan is the only nation barred from participating in the Winter Games. The country was suspended two years ago after the ruling Taliban would not allow female athletes to compete.

"We would love to see an Afghan team at the next Olympic Games, but that will only be possible when there is a stable government in place, and when all the conditions that are put by the [IOC] are fulfilled," Rogge said.

Bush also met Tuesday with U.S. Olympic Committee President Sandy Baldwin, CEO Lloyd Ward, Salt Lake Olympics chief Mitt Romney, and a few Olympic athletes to discuss security for the games.

Hawkeyes dominate SMS

By Roseanna Smith
 The Daily Iowan

Try as it might, Southwest Missouri State simply could not stop Iowa's momentum in the second half Tuesday night, noticeably missing the 30.3 points per game thunder of NCAA career scoring leader Jackie Stiles and ultimately falling to the Hawks, 84-64, Tuesday night.

The Hawkeyes maintained a steady advantage after taking a 13-point lead in the second half. Iowa used powerful minutes from Beatrice Bullock and Jennie Lillis down low combined with an effective zone defense to keep the Bears locked out.

"I'm extremely proud of them," Iowa coach Lisa Bluder said. "They showed tremendous character after a physically draining, emotional loss two nights ago to Drake."

On Sunday, the Hawkeyes lost an exciting overtime thriller against the Bulldogs, 75-72.

"It was a hard loss, and we had to prove we could [come back]," Lillis said. "We had to come out and play our A game."

That proved to be a high-intensity effort all around. From the start, Iowa came out fired up, fighting back and forth with Southwest Missouri for the first seven minutes. After that, the Hawkeyes went on an eight-point, four-minute run, capped off by two from the charity stripe from April Calhoun, to build a 24-16 lead. Helped with Leah Magner's 3-pointer and four points from Jerica Watson down low, Iowa took a 36-23 lead into the half.

In the second half, the scoring accelerated, with the Hawkeyes going up by as many as 20 points. Kristi Faulkner scored 11 in the second to finish with a team-high 17 points.

But the real story was the work under the boards, where Watson and Magner led the assault. Though the Hawkeyes were outsized in the post by the Bears, especially 6-4 center Erika Rante and 6-3 forward Ann Cavey, they managed to out-rebound Southwest Missouri, 42-25.

"I was surprised at [Iowa's] post play," Southwest Missouri coach Cheryl Burnett said. "I thought we could get around and stop them, but the two starting posts are more like four. They can drive and rebound. We could never get a good mix of defensive stop with an offensive drive."

Southwest Missouri's pace was also slowed because of Iowa's zone defense, which it implemented in the middle of the first half. It was effective, holding the Bears to a mere 14 percent shooting from the 3-point line.

"We ran zone because they can't shoot as well outside, and

Williams returns red, white, and bronze

As well as being Iowa's current strength and conditioning coach, Joe Williams is still an active wrestler. He recently returned from the World Freestyle Championships with a bronze medal, representing his country well in Sofia, Bulgaria. Williams lost his chance for gold in the semifinal match when the official deemed he was out of bounds, thus denying his two-point throw of Russia's Bouwaisa Satiev with three seconds remaining. Satiev won by decision, 5-4.

Williams sat down with DI sportswriter Jesse Steinfeldt at Carver-Hawkeye arena Monday night during Iowa's wrestle-offs to discuss his international experiences, signing Bear paraphernalia, and how he leads Iowa's wrestlers by word as well as by example.

DI: How do you feel about your performance this weekend?

Williams: Kind of mixed emotions. One side of me is happy, but the other side is disappointed. I didn't have the intentions of placing third — my intention was to go over there and win it all.

DI: What about the controversial call?

Williams: It could have gone either way. Being over there, the chances of me getting the call were slim, but it was a pretty close call.

DI: In light of Sept. 11, did you have any extra patriotic sentiments in competing for your country?

Williams: I always feel proud representing the USA. I felt like everyone was watching and maybe hoping for something different.

DI: How did this compare to other international competitions?

Williams: One thing I noticed was that they went out of their way to make sure our accommodations and security were great, so that kind of eased us a little bit. The security was a lot better as far as traveling back and forth to the venue and hotel — it was pretty tight.

DI: Did you notice any anti-American sentiments or demonstrations?

Williams: No.

DI: What's next for you competition-wise?

Williams: I don't know. I'm going to take some time off, get healed up, and talk to Jim [Zalesky] and see what kind of comments or suggestions he has for me, and kinda go from there.

DI: Are you banged up a little bit?

Williams: No, just sore and tired.

DI: Do you think being an active participant in wrestling helps or hinders your ability to coach?

Williams: I think it helps. It lets those guys know that I am still training and competing. I think my presence gives the guys a path to follow. A lot of times, when your coaches are done, it's kinda hard to look back on tapes and really get a feeling for what they are doing. When I'm training in the room, they see what I'm doing; they get a sense of what they need to do and where they need to go.

DI: Where do you see Joe Williams in five years?

Williams: Hopefully, still here at the university and an Olympic and World Champ. Those are some of my ultimate goals, so I'm still working away at those.

DI: I just saw a kid come up and ask you to sign his Chicago Bears jacket. How does that make you feel?

Williams: Every time I have an opportunity to do that, it feels good. I think the fans — the kids — they love it. For me, it shows that it's meaningful to some people, and that makes me feel proud to be able to do that.

Colorado's Barnett named coach of year

By John Mossman
Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. — Gary Barnett, on the Colorado staff when the school won its lone national championship in 1990, came back to Colorado as head coach in 1999 with the slogan "Return to Dominance."

It took three seasons, but even Barnett couldn't have imagined this.

Coming off a 3-8 season, Barnett guided the Buffaloes to a 9-2 record, including a shocking 62-36 win over Nebraska on Nov. 23, and into the Big 12 championship game this weekend against Texas.

ACC/BIG TEN CHALLENGE

Illini floored by Maryland

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Juan Dixon scored 25 points and No. 6 Maryland built a 20-point lead and held off No. 2 Illinois, 76-63, Tuesday night in the ACC/Big Ten Challenge.

It was the 80th-consecutive non conference home victory for Maryland, the longest such run in the nation.

After the Terrapins (4-1) went up by 12 at halftime, Dixon scored seven points in a 10-2 run at the outset of the second half to make it 51-31.

Despite playing its fifth game in nine days, Illinois (5-1) fought back — even after leading rebounder Brian Cook fouled out with 5:11 left.

The comeback was aided by poor free-throw shooting by Maryland, which finished 12-for-24 at the line. The Fighting Illini closed to 66-58 with 2:56 left, but Chris Wilcox scored in the lane, then made one of two free throws on Maryland's next possession for an 11-point cushion.

At that point, the Cole Field House crowd began chanting, "ACC! ACC!"

Wilcox scored 19 points off the bench for Maryland, which won its fourth straight after dropping its opener to Arizona.

Blandon Ferguson had 11 points for Illinois, which three days earlier won the Las Vegas Invitational and was off to its best start in six years.

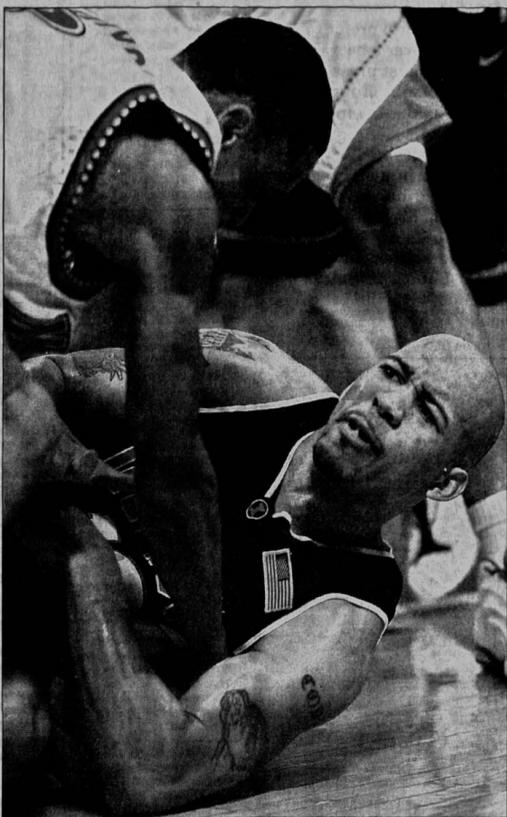

The Illini shot 33 percent and committed seven turnovers in the decisive first half.

Four different players scored in a 9-2 run that put Illinois up, 17-10, but Wilcox had four points and Steve Blake and Byron Mouton hit 3-pointers during a 12-0 spurt that put Maryland ahead for good.

After Ferguson made a free throw for the Illini, Wilcox sank a hook shot and scored on an alley-oop pass from Blake for a 26-18 lead.

Damir Krupalija followed with a 3-pointer — Illinois' first field goal in nearly six minutes — but Maryland reeled off eight-straight points to push the margin to 11.

Illinois closed to 34-29, but Drew Nicholas hit a 3-pointer and a layup as Maryland finished the half with a 7-0 spree.

The Terrapins have not lost at Cole Field House since falling to Coppin State on Dec. 12, 1989. The streak began 18 days later against Alcorn State.

Illinois was the highest-ranked non conference team the Terrapins faced at home since they upset No. 1 Notre Dame in 1979.

Ohio St. 64, N.C. St. 50

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Brent Darby scored 22 points and Brian Brown 18 as Ohio State used a late, 12-2, run to beat North Carolina State, 64-50, on Tuesday in the ACC/Big Ten Challenge.

The Buckeyes (3-0) led 43-40 with 10:32 remaining after two foul shots by the Wolfpack's Julius Hodge.

Over the next 8:40, however, the Wolfpack (5-1) hit just 1-of-15 shots from the field with five turnovers.

North Carolina State ended up hitting just 27.3 percent (15 of 55) of its shots from the field. The Wolfpack came in shooting 49.8 percent from the field while winning by an average margin of 23.4 points a game.

Ohio State was making its first appearance in the third year of matchups between two of the big-name conferences. The Buckeyes had declined to be a part of the series because coach Jim O'Brien feared being left out with an 8-22 record "his first season" in Columbus.

Will Dudley added 12 points. Zach Williams and Boban Savovic each had eight rebounds for Ohio State.

lege basketball player in November.

The Hawkeyes will see few teams that play the caliber of basketball the Blue Devils do, and even fewer players with the skill of Williams.

If there was a bright spot for Steve Alford and the Hawkeyes in the 80-62 thumping by the Blue Devils, it can be found in the final box score. Alford has called upon his team to step up and help take the load off scorers Luke Recker and Reggie Evans. Iowa finally got that type of effort Tuesday, getting two other players in double-digits.

Pierre Pierce tallied 10 points in his first trip home since playing for Westmont High, with the interchangeable Chauncey Leslie tallying 11 of his own. As usual, Recker led the Hawkeyes with 15 points, but both he and Evans seemed to be the missing link Tuesday. Despite combining for 23 points and 14 rebounds, neither had the typically big night needed for a Hawkeye victory.

While Alford got others to step up in the scoring department, Iowa failed to play the type of sound, all-around basketball needed to defeat the top-ranked team in the nation. The Hawkeyes committed an abysmal 20 turnovers, as did Duke, and shot a pathetic 12.5 percent from 3-point range. Iowa was also out-rebounded 41-35, something that never bodes well for the Hawkeyes.

Even with the numerous mistakes the Hawkeyes made against the Blue Devils, they proved for the third-consecutive game that they can play with one of the nation's best teams. If the Hawks are giving this type of effort in November, one can only stop and wonder what level they will be playing at further into the season. They just weren't at that level Tuesday night.

Point guard play paced Hawkeyes

But it was a deep Mike Dunleavy 3-pointer with 7.9 seconds remaining in the half that stung the Hawkeyes the deepest. The trey pushed Duke's lead up to 41-32 at the break in an otherwise evenly played half.

"That 3 by Dunleavy at the end of the half was huge," Recker said after the game. "If we could have held them to six at halftime, that's an emotional lift for us."

Williams led the Blue Devils with 14 first-half points. Recker and senior Ryan Hogan paced the Hawkeyes with seven points apiece in the first half. Evans was held to just four points and three rebounds before halftime.

Dunleavy's 3 spilled over to a 10-2 Duke run to start the second half, sending its lead to 51-34 with 17:01 remaining. Iowa made a few mini-runs at the Blue Devils in the second half but was never able to pull within single digits, as Duke held on for the 18-point win.

Iowa coach Steve Alford said the Hawks let too many things bother them during the game.

"We let bad shots or bad plays or tough fouls affect us for a lot longer than what they should," he said.

Strong performances from Hawkeye point guards Pierre Pierce and Chauncey Leslie helped keep Iowa within striking distance. Pierce finished with 10 points, six rebounds and four assists, while Leslie chipped in 11 points and five steals.

All in all, Krzyzewski was impressed with the Hawkeyes.

"I think Iowa's good," he said. "They are very well coached — the kids played passionately. I thought it was a big win for us."

SPORT BRIEF

Nebraska fans attack CU linebacker

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Colorado linebacker Drew Wahloos accused five Nebraska fans of attacking him outside a strip club after his team's big victory, breaking his nose and giving him a black eye.

"It was nothing, really," Wahloos said. "I was at the wrong place at the wrong time."

Wahloos, a 21-year-old junior, will not press charges. The university said Tuesday it would not comment on the case but said no disciplinary action was planned against Wahloos.

Wahloos was celebrating his team's 62-36 win Friday over then-No. 2 Nebraska when he stepped outside the club and got into an argument with the five Cornhuskers fans, police officer Owen McKinney said.

we wanted to test that," Bluder said. "That, and not a lot of people play zone."

In the second half, however, the Bears' Jennifer Lingor was able to poke some holes in the defensive, tying a Carver-Hawkeye record for 100 percent 3-point shooting by going five for five. She scored a game-high 25 points on the day, 20 in the second half.

One of the interesting highlights of the game was the connection between the two players wearing No. 52. Approximately 280 people were spread through Carver-Hawkeye, wearing Iowa's gold and Southwest Missouri's maroon in support of Jamie and Ann Cavey, the sisters from Mechanicsville who faced each other for the first time in their careers.

"I would be guarding, and then be like, 'That's my sister.' I was in shock," Hawkeye Jamie Cavey said. "We never played against each other, always with [each other]."

Ann Cavey said she only noticed when her little sister came into the game eight minutes until the end because of the cheers.

"I'm really proud of my sister," Ann Cavey said, wiping away tears of joy. "A lot of people told her, 'Division I at Iowa, that's way too much,' and, 'You're getting in over your head.' It was a lot of fun."

One of the few problems the Hawkeyes will have to face going into this weekend's set of road games in Colorado will be turnovers; they committed 22 against the Bears.

"It's a problem," Bluder said. "Last year, we didn't have this many, and I think right now we just might expect too much of ourselves."

"We can't panic. At least they're not the same errors as we made the other night. A lot of them were passing errors, which is due to a very good defensive team that forces a lot of turnovers."

Iowa will play Denver on Friday at 8 p.m. and then travel to the University of Colorado on Dec. 2.

Bonds' record home-run ball on trial

By Justin Pritchard
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The baseball Barry Bonds swatted for his record 73rd home run is headed to trial.

A judge ruled Tuesday it's unclear who should keep the million-dollar memento — the man who first gloved it, or the man who took it home after a tussle among fans.

Superior Court Judge David Garcia ruled the ball should remain locked up until a trial answers whether it belongs to Alex Popov, who snatched it and says he was robbed in the ensuing struggle, or Patrick Hayashi, who says he found it loose amid the skirmish.

Garcia did not set a date, but the trial likely won't start until next baseball season, lawyers for both men said.

The custody dispute is believed to be the nation's first trial over fan ownership of a ball hit into the stands at a major-league stadium.

Popov sued Hayashi days after the San Francisco Giants slugger hit the home run Oct. 7 at Pacific Bell Park. The ball could be worth more than $1 million, according to the man who brokered the $3 million sale of Mark McGwire's then-record 70th home-run ball in 1998.

Bonds

But that value will dip if, next spring, someone begins to launch home runs at a pace projected to surpass Bonds' single-season record.

To protect against potential loss of value, the judge ordered Popov to post a $100,000 bond within three days. Garcia also agreed to Popov's request that lawyers from both sides go to verify that the ball sitting in a safe deposit box is indeed No.

73 and not a fake.

Outside court, Popov called the results "a victory for the fans."

He said he'd prefer to settle the issue over a beer, but failing that, must press forward. "The mob mugged me," Popov said. "I want my ball back."

Hayashi shied away from court but in a written statement said he was compelled to defend his reputation.

"I've been asked many times about a settlement," Hayashi said. "But it's difficult to make friends with the schoolyard bully."

Yankee's former MVP Brosius retires

By Landon Hall
Associated Press

McMINNVILLE, Ore. — Having accomplished more in baseball than he ever imagined, New York Yankees third baseman Scott Brosius retired Tuesday, overjoyed to be with his family and already reflecting on his brief but glorious career in pinstripes.

"I'm just ready to be home," Brosius said at Linfield College, his old school. "I can look back with no regrets and know that everything I wanted to do as a baseball player, every dream I had, has been fulfilled, and there's nothing else for me to chase as a ballplayer."

Brosius, 35, became a free agent after the Yankees' loss to Arizona in Game 7 of the World Series, and returned home to Oregon immediately.

"I was surprised about Scott," Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said in Rosemont, Ill. "But he wanted to retire a Yankee. He's a great warrior. I hate to lose him."

The Yankees did not plan to re-sign the former World Series MVP. Although he could have tried to play elsewhere, he felt the toll on his wife and three children would be too high.

"I still feel like I could play, but I never wanted the game to feel like work," he said. "I never wanted to play the game when my heart was in two different places, and I was getting to that point where a huge side of me just wanted to be home, and I still had a job to do out in New York."

Brosius guessed that he had missed about one-third of his 10-year-old daughter Allyson's life while on the road.

"I just never wanted to get to the point where I looked back 10 years or 20 years from now and my daughter asks me, 'Why weren't you there when I needed you?' And I would say, 'Well, because I wanted to play one more year.' I couldn't answer that question that way."

Brosius, who came to the Yankees from Oakland as a player to be named in a deal for Kenny Rogers, made a name for himself in New York. He reached the World Series in all four seasons he spent in the Bronx, winning three times.

Steady in the field and a clutch hitter in big spots, Brosius was a key contributor in the Yankees' recent run of championships.

He was the MVP of the 1998 World Series, hitting .471 with two home runs and six RBIs in a four-game sweep of San Diego.

Brosius' greatest moment came in Game 5 of this year's Series against the Diamondbacks. In his final at-bat in Yankee Stadium, he hit a tying, two-run homer off closer Byung-Hyun Kim with two outs in the bottom of the ninth. Alfonso Soriano's single in the 12th won it.

"That's a pretty good memory to end on," Brosius said of his fist-pumping trip around the bases.

Brosius said he plans to help out with the Linfield baseball team, for which he played from 1985-87. But first he plans to get his degree in business. He was drafted after his junior year by Oakland and wanted to show his children the value of finishing what he started.

After completing correspondence courses he began in the summer of 2000, he'll attend commencement ceremonies on Dec. 16.

"In about a month I'll be an unemployed college grad," he joked. "It probably should have happened when I was 21, but now that I'm 35, it's come back to get me."

Acquired from Oakland after slumping to .203 in 1997 with Oakland, Brosius was an All-Star in his first season in New York. He batted .300 with 98 RBIs — marks he did not reach in his final three seasons with the Yankees. He hit .247 in 1999, .230 in 2000 and .287 in 2001 with 13 homers and 49 RBIs.

Selig's stay extended

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Baseball owners extended Commissioner Bud Selig's contract through 2006 but did not take any action Tuesday on the game's most debated issue — eliminating two teams before next season.

The unanimous vote of confidence for Selig came at a time when the sport faces economic stress and possible labor problems. He said baseball had lost more than $500 million this year, and he was under pressure to stem losses.

Owners left the elimination of two teams — widely believed to be the Minnesota Twins and Montreal Expos — on hold as the issue winds its way through the courts.

"Baseball will contract," Selig said. "I can't give you a timetable today. Some things are out of our hands."

Selig said 25 of the 30 teams lost money this year and said baseball will release specifics Dec. 6, the date tentatively set by the House Judiciary Committee for a hearing on the sport's 79-year-old antitrust exemption.

He said the commissioner's office had guaranteed loans to an unspecified number of teams to get through this year.

"We've had to help clubs, quite frankly, to stay afloat," he said. "We're doing something now we should have done years and years ago: We're addressing our problems. We had an option to do something, and we just didn't do it."

Selig had Gregory R.D. Nash of FleetBoston Financial Corp. and James Nash of Bank of America Corp. in Charlotte, N.C., address owners at the meeting. Selig said the $500 million loss came on revenue of $3.5 billion.

"The loss stunned everybody," Selig said. "The debt is even more worrisome to people we do business with."

The public proclamation of losses points to yet another confrontation with the players' association, which has resisted change since the current system of free agency and salary arbitration came into effect in 1976. In that time, the average salary has climbed from $51,000 to about $2.15 million.

There have been eight work stoppages since 1972, and baseball's latest labor contract expired Nov. 7.

"There's nothing I can say now. We'll see what happens," union head Donald Fehr said.

Selig gave hope there would be a 2002 season, saying a potential lockout of players was "not on the radar screen."

Ron Frehm/Associated Press

quote of the day

It really is a horrendous thing to stop this research. These people are treating this issue the way they treated Copernicus and Galileo.

— Rep. Jim Greenwood, R-Pa.,

the author of an unsuccessful House bill that would have permitted cloning for research. He and other supporters urged the Senate not to act hastily, saying it is possible to ban human cloning without limiting research.

The Ledge

by Scott Morgan

Signs your boy band is getting screwed

• Lou Pearlman got you and 50 other guys to dance for him.

• The best gig you can get is opening for Britney Spears playing to a bunch of 11-year-old girls and pedophiles.

• Your record company is only promoting your album in prisons.

• The only fan mail you get is from older girls who are still fans of New Kids.

• You got your wardrobe from the New Edition reject bin.

• Milli Vanilli sang more than you do, and can dance better, too.

• You couldn't crack the top 10 on TRL despite the $2 million in advertising.

• Your signature apparel item is a codpiece.

• Mariah Carey's movie Glitter was supposed to launch your new album.

• You're in a boy band.
