Settlement closes Garofalo case

By Sara Faiwell
The Daily Iowan

The alcohol-related death of Matthew Garofalo will leave an indelible mark on the UI even after a settlement was reached in a wrongful-death suit filed by his parents, said a university fraternity leader.

The parents of the Elgin, Ill., fraternity pledge settled a wrongful-death claim in October against Chad Diehl, the Lambda Chi Alpha mentor and provider of alcohol to Garofalo during a pledge ceremony in 1995.

"The UI campus will never forget this," said Chris Niro, the president of the UI Interfraternity Council.

However, Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for Student Services, said the settlement bears no significance to the university because the school was not involved in the litigation.

"Garofalo's death didn't initiate interest [in alcohol consumption]; it dramatized it," Jones said. "It is a tangible example of consequences of abusive use of alcohol."

The Garofalo family's attorney, Edward Gallagher of Waterloo, said the family is pleased the case is closed, averting a trial that had been scheduled to begin today. The Garofalos hold no ill will toward anyone involved in the matter, he said.

Details of the settlement were not revealed.

Garofalo's death occurred at the beginning of the UI's efforts to curb binge drinking; it resulted in all fraternities voluntarily becoming alcohol-free in 1998.

The Stepping Up Project formed shortly after Garofalo's death to raise awareness about binge drinking. Garofalo's death underscores the dangers

UI turns eye on Mideast

By Mike McWilliams

Increased student interest and concern among professors have persuaded the UI to offer courses about the Middle East and the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks in the coming spring semester.

Rex Honey, a professor of geography and the director of the Global Studies Program, said the university will offer at least six courses dealing with interests in the Middle East. The move comes amid criticism from professors that the university has ignored the region for too long.

"I'm pleased to see the increase in student interest," said Honey, who is teaching a course called The Middle East. "I actually changed my plans for next semester to teach this class."

Courses related to the attacks also include Law in the Muslim World, Scientific Basis of Biological Warfare, Media Coverage of Terrorism, Inside/Outside the Middle East, United States in World Affairs, and Terror, Rhetoric, and Television.

Honey lived in Jordan for one year in the early 1980s, working for too long.

Ex-UI official alleges abuse of power

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

He secretly typed the letter to the dean of the College of Medicine in November 1996, letting only his wife see its contents to proofread.

Robert James Hegeman came forward with accusations of mismanagement and abuse of power in emergency-medical operations at the UI Hospitals and Clinics when he delivered the note the following day.

Soon after, when the letter was no longer secret, his supervisors retaliated against him, Hegeman alleges. The actions forced his May 1997 resignation as director of Emergency Medical Services, he contends.

The letter will be at the center of his civil lawsuit — which names some of the hospital's top officials — when the 3½-year-old legal struggle comes to trial in February. Hegeman is seeking compensation for damages he says were caused by his resignation.

After delivering the Nov. 18, 1996, note, he met with Robert Kelch, the dean of the College of Medicine, the next day to discuss the matters.

"Kelch said, 'I can tell by your body language that you feel uncomfortable being here.' I said, 'Yes, sir. My job is on the line.' I knew it then," Hegeman said.

The married father of four, who now works at a medical clinic in Williamsburg, Iowa, speaks quickly as he recounts his little-known struggle against a powerful institution and its top officials.

Dear Dean Kelch:

As medical director of Emergency Medical Services, I am writing to inform you of serious problems that have developed in the relationship between emergency medicine and the Department of Surgery. These problems include the following: (1) There has been wrongful interference with the hiring process for selecting qualified emergency physicians on three separate occasions. (2) There has been wrongful interference with the medical director's responsibility to formulate and approve medical policy affecting the Emergency Treatment Center on three different occasions. (3) There has been failure to provide support for emergency medicine within the academic medical center. (4) Emergency physicians have been denied effective representation when their medical director serves in an "at will" position in an environment suggesting a serious lack of respect. These events call into question the wisdom of the current structure. It is important that the situation be remedied before further harm is done. I request a hearing with you personally to discuss the details of my concerns and what solutions might be possible.

Sincerely,
Robert J. Hegeman, M.D., J.D.

Wave of violence hits Israel; 25 dead

By Karin Laub

JERUSALEM — After a series of suicide bombings against Israel that killed 25 people and wounded nearly 200, Yasser Arafat ordered dozens of Islamic militants arrested and promised harsh action. But Israel was deeply skeptical, with hard-liners calling for the removal of the Palestinian leader.

Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon cut short his U.S. trip to rush home after meeting with President Bush, who denounced the bombings as "horrific acts of murder."

Bush and other world leaders pressed Arafat to crack down on militants. The Palestinian leader "must do everything in his power to find those who murdered innocent Israelis and bring them to justice," Bush said.

Images of bodies lying on sidewalks and blood-smeared survivors crying out in agony filled TV screens, and Israelis had a growing sense that 14 months of Israeli-Palestinian fighting had reached a crossroads.

"It must be understood that we are at a turning point," said Cabinet Minister Matan Vilnai. He did not say how Israel would retaliate, but he warned the Palestinian Authority was

Old Capitol damage estimated at $5 million

By Tony Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Damage estimates to the Old Capitol are $3 million more than initially assessed by the Iowa City Fire Department, UI officials say.

University Risk Management discovered damages in excess of $5 million after touring the building Nov. 28 with university insurance agents and representatives of asbestos-abatement company Enviro Safe Air.

Steve Parrott, the director of University Relations, said the building's age, artifact damage, and increased water damage all contributed to the new estimate of the damage in a Nov. 20 fire that destroyed the 160-year-old gold dome.

"Plaster has been damaged, and there are now cracks in the walls," said Iowa City Fire Marshal Roger Jensen. "We had no idea that the water damage would be so bad."

Jensen, who made the initial estimate of $1.5 million to $2 million, said it was impossible to include factors that could not have been properly assessed the day after the fire.

Last week, the university filed a $2 million insurance claim with Enviro Safe Air, whom local and state fire departments deem responsible for the fire. The South Dakota-based company used heat guns and propane torches, without university consent, on the gold-leaf dome while removing asbestos. Foul play is not suspected, and the fire has been ruled an accident.

Plaster has been damaged, and there are now cracks in the walls. We had no idea that the water damage would be so bad.

— Roger Jensen, city fire marshal

Officials from Enviro Safe Air have refused comment since the blaze.

University officials have said a lawsuit is "certainly a possibility" if the company refuses to pay the liability.

However, a UI law professor said two letters dated Sept. 13 and Oct. 25 warning the university of Enviro Safe Air's unsafe work practices could hurt the school in a potential lawsuit.

"The fact that the university didn't respond aggressively could be ruled as negligence, forcing it to pay part of the cost," said John Whiston, a law professor who has done extensive work in insurance-litigation cases.

If insurance money the UI seeks does not cover the cost of repairing damages to the Old Capitol, the UI may appeal to Regents for additional funds.

Anthrax found at postal facility

By Pat Eaton-Robb
Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. — Trace amounts of anthrax were found at a postal facility that sorts mail for the town where a 94-year woman mysteriously died of the disease last month, officials said Sunday.

Ottile Lundgren of Oxford was the fifth person in the nation to die since the anthrax scare began in October. The source of her exposure has baffled officials, who are investigating whether she could have come in contact with tainted mail.

The spores were found on sorting machines during tests at the Southern Connecticut Processing & Distribution Center in Wallingford. The center processes mail for Oxford and other towns.

The trace amounts most likely were left on the machines when a letter sent to Seymour, near Oxford, passed through the facility on Oct. 11, said Jon Steele, the vice president of the Postal Service's Northeast Area Operations.

"This finding is not a complete surprise," he said. "The public should not be panicked by trace elements occurring nearly 60 days ago."

The tainted Connecticut machines will be decontaminated, a process that could take several days, Steele said. The center will remain open for business, he said.

The facility was tested on four separate occasions and 389 samples were taken, said Steele. Five samples in the latest round of testing revealed the anthrax, he said.

"This is a very small amount of anthrax," said Dr. Joxel Garcia, the state's commissioner of public health. "The people of Connecticut should not be concerned about opening their mail."

On Nov. 30 officials announced they had found a single spore of anthrax on a letter sent to a Seymour residence a few miles from the home of Lundgren, who died of anthrax Nov. 21.

OAKLAND, Calif. — Gabriela Pingarron and her three daughters live, like many Latino families, in Oakland's bustling flatlands. They share a house with two other families and shop for tortillas on a busy commercial street, where Pingarron also wires money to her mother in Mexico.

Linda Borof and her husband have a three-bedroom home that fits right into their largely white neighborhood, among hills dotted with oak and bay trees. Borof walks to her store in an upscale business district, where she sells yarn and teaches knitting.

There are only approximately five miles between the two homes, but — as is often the case in America — they are worlds apart.

An Associated Press review of U.S. Census information on ethnicity in communities with more than 100,000 residents found that Latinos were more segregated from whites in Oakland than in any other U.S. city and that blacks were most segregated from whites in Chicago.

gated — and stays that way — is a complex equation involving economics, discrimination, immigration, and personal choice.

In Oakland, the divide between whites and Latinos falls mostly on economic lines. Affluent whites, along with some Asians and blacks, reside in the hills. Working-class Latinos live in the flatlands, which has seen several waves of Mexican and Central American immigrants since the 1950s.

Blacks live throughout the city, although neighborhoods such as West Oakland have a heavier concentration of black residents.

UI seeks to fill health-care positions

By Casey Wagner
The Daily Iowan

The university will form a committee within the month to launch a nationwide search to fill two high-profile positions in UI Health Care.

Robert Kelch will become the sole leader of UI Health Care later this month when UI Hospitals and Clinics CEO and Director R. Edward Howell leaves his post on Dec. 19.

Kelch will also continue serving as the vice president for Statewide Health Services and dean of the College of Medicine until his replacements can be found.

The move comes after UI administrators announced a structural change that eliminated the co-directorship of UI Health Care and as Howell steps down to become vice president and CEO at the University of Virginia Medical Center in Charlottesville.

"It's a way to make sure we continue our commitments," Kelch said. "However, it's a little sad because I loved being dean."

Howell and Kelch served as co-directors of UI Health Care for seven years, overseeing education in the health-science departments, the improvement of patient care, and research funding.

Kelch will be responsible for overseeing patient care at the UIHC and College of Medicine and will also manage funds for the university's health-science departments.

The new hospital director and new dean will report to Kelch, who reports to UI President Mary Sue Coleman, on both academic and financial matters.

The search for a new dean may take nine to 12 months and could last longer than the search for a new hospital director, Kelch said.

In the meantime, Ann Madden Rice, the UIHC associate director and chief financial officer, will serve as interim director and CEO of the UIHC.

coordinated, Rice said.

Worcester firefighters share New York's grief

By Adam Gorlick
Associated Press

WORCESTER, Mass. — As he watched television coverage of the World Trade Center collapse, Mike McNamee's mind jumped back to the night six firefighters under his command were killed battling a warehouse blaze.

"I knew right away there were at least 100 dead firefighters," he said of the Sept. 11 attack. His guess was short by 243.

"My gut churned. It just dropped," said McNamee, a district chief.

As Worcester firefighters prepared to observe the second anniversary of their own tragedy with a simple ceremony today, they also shared the grief of New York City firefighters.

"I knew they were going to be numb that day and stay that way for a very long time," Capt. Robert Johnson said. "I felt the same sense of loss on Sept. 11 that I had on Dec. 3, 1999. Those feelings — that numbness — came right back."

New York City has "Ground Zero." Worcester has "The Site."

"This is sacred ground for us," McNamee said, looking over the rubble-strewn open space where the six-story Worcester Cold Storage building went up in flames, causing what was then the nation's largest loss of firefighters in a building fire since the 1970s.

The six firefighters, ages 34 to 51, had gone into the abandoned building to search for a homeless couple believed to be inside, but became trapped and disoriented in a maze that flooded with smoke.

The couple allegedly started the blaze by accidentally knocking over a candle, then left the building without reporting the fire or telling anyone they were safe. Manslaughter charges against them were dropped.

"It was an accidental fire, but the bad part of this is that they didn't call to say they weren't in there. That could've made all the difference," McNamee said. "We could've just knocked the fire down in a few minutes, and it would've been a routine call."

Since the warehouse fire, Worcester has worked hard to prevent any similar losses.

In October, the Fire Department hosted a three-day training course that focused on firefighter safety. Firefighters came from 34 states.

The department also has been marking abandoned industrial buildings with an "X" if they are deemed too risky to enter during a fire. Those signs will be ignored if people are inside.

"All these years, the focus has always been on saving other people," McNamee said.

"Now, we're paying attention to ourselves. Firefighters need to know what to do when we get into trouble."

Firefighters say the intense training over the past two years has moved them on from the tragedy, helping them focus on doing a better job instead of wallowing in misery.

But their memories of loss and grief still smolder, and were stoked by the New York attacks and the aftermath.

"When I heard the excavators clearing away debris at Ground Zero, it was the same sound I heard here two years ago," said Worcester Fire Chief Gerard Dio, who was invited to visit the trade center scene. "And the smell — that diesel smell — it was just the same. What happened in New York was a million times worse than what happened here, but it just brings back the memories."

Busloads of other Worcester firefighters went to New York to attend memorial services and funerals.

Ashcroft warns of coming surveillance

By John Solomon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Attorney General John Ashcroft warned Sunday that religious or political groups normally free from government intrusion could be monitored by agents if suspected of engaging in terrorism.

"People who hijack a religion and make out of it an implement of war will not be free from our interest," he declared as officials took to the Sunday news shows to debate America's new anti-terrorism police powers.

The Senate's top Democrat said he might support the narrow use of one of the most controversial tactics — secret military tribunals to try terrorists.

"Under certain circumstances, very, very restricted circumstances, depending on how it's handled, I'm willing to look at it," Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota said.

"With regard to the situation in Afghanistan in particular, trying a Taliban [member] or terrorist or ... people involved in terrorist activity — clearly, there's at least the possibility that something like that might have merit," Daschle said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

The debate offered a preview of a Senate hearing this week at which Ashcroft will address criticisms of both liberal Democrats and conservative Republicans concerned the new tactics will erode civil liberties.

Meanwhile, law-enforcement officials told the Associated Press that investigators have gathered evidence showing similarities among the last three terrorist attacks against Americans by Osama bin Laden's supporters.

Those attacks include the Sept. 11 suicide hijackings, the October 2000 bombing of the USS Cole in Yemen, and the 1998 bombings of two U.S. embassies in Africa.

The officials, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said the similarities included the way the attacks were planned, communicated, and carried out, and the way the attackers were trained. The officials declined to be more specific.

"There are certainly similarities among the three, some of which have emerged more clearly in the last few weeks," one official said.

does, I'll skin your hide and hang it in my office as a decoration," surgery Chairwoman Carol Scott-Conner told him, according to court records.

That was the beginning of a poor relationship between the two, Hegeman said. Gradually, the situation got worse, Hegeman alleges:

• Even though it was Hegeman's job to recruit physicians to work in emergency medicine, Scott-Conner interfered with hiring practices. Hegeman says he was ready to hire one qualified physician, but at a key point in negotiations, Scott-Conner told him to make no further commitments.

Recruiting was very important to the understaffed department at that time, Hegeman said.

• Scott-Conner adopted medical policies, despite emergency physicians' opposition, that increased unneeded consultations. Those consultations cost patients extra money and involved surgical physicians, making the surgery department look good, Hegeman said.

After these and other issues, Hegeman said, he had no choice but to speak out, which was difficult. "If it wasn't, I would have come forward a lot sooner," he said.

Alleged retaliation begins
After receiving the letter, Kelch allegedly shared the information with Scott-Conner and others. The next month, Scott-Conner asked Hegeman to step down after two physicians said they would take his position. Hegeman declined.

In a series of other actions — excluding Hegeman from meetings, giving another doctor, Siroos Shirazi, some of Hegeman's duties — officials tried to gradually force him out during the following months, Hegeman alleges.

"Shirazi has inserted himself as the functional head of the [department]," a UIHC official acknowledged at the time in a memo to Kelch. "This is a mess."

After other alleged actions of retaliation — investigating financial records of Hegeman's department without cause, threatening his job — Hegeman resigned in May 1997 after Kelch and David Skorton, the UI vice president for Research, declined to intervene.

Approximately two months after his resignation, the university offered him a $35,000 settlement if he agreed not to pursue litigation against the school and if he never made his story public, court records show. Hegeman declined the offer.

Ten months later, he filed the lawsuit in Johnson County District Court. His attorney, Leon Spies, made settlement negotiations with university lawyers as the case moved through the discovery process.

Dismisses Spies
Both sides say the case took a surprise turn in September 2000, when Hegeman dismissed Spies from the case and decided to represent himself.

Hegeman, who has a law degree but has never taken up a case, accused Spies of kowtowing to the university and not representing his client's best interest, records show.

Spies acknowledged in May 2000 that he was a "friend" of UI General Counsel Mark Schantz, and Hegeman alleges in court records that connection may have been enough to taint Spies' judgment.

"That was [a surprise] to us," said Marc Mills, a lawyer who is handling the case for the university along with an assistant state attorney general.

"We've had a number of dealings with Spies in the past, and we have significant respect for him as being a good attorney."

In his First Amendment claim against the university, Hegeman must prove that he spoke out in the public's interest, that he spoke in a manner that did not disrupt the institution, and that adverse action was taken as a result.

"The quick and easy response is that the university denies each one of those things," Mills said. "We feel quite strongly about the correctness of our position and what we have done."

Both sides are preparing for the expected five-day trial, which pits a rookie attorney against two experienced lawyers.

"It was intimidating at first, but I'm comfortable with what happened," Hegeman said. "They might know the law better than me, but no lawyer knows the facts of what happened better than me. And this case will be decided by facts."

Just Peace and Peace of Just: Israel Shamir on the Middle East

Monday, December 3

Palestine is not a dead object, it is a living country. Palestinians are her soul. Palestine is what Palestinians are re-creating in real time, in the same way that France is what the French create and re-create every day. It is a vast confusion of mind, to presume one can love France and abhor French, as what kind of France would exist without the French soul. Only silly tourists from rich countries, pestered by beggars, prefer to stay in reclusive posh hotels where they can enjoy the country without encountering the natives. It is like loving a beautiful lady but bating her character and her very essence. To love a country and wish away her inhabitants is the kind of romance that can only appeal to those who have a passion for necrophilia.

The gateway to Strawberry Field, with graffiti and tributes to the "quiet" Beatle, George Harrison, is seen in Liverpool, England, Sunday. Harrison died in Los Angeles Nov. 29 after a long battle against cancer. Harrison was born in Liverpool in 1943.

There goes the sun

By Jill Lawless
Associated Press

LIVERPOOL, England — Prayers of remembrance were said for George Harrison in his home city Sunday — in churches, cathedrals, and at makeshift street-corner shrines.

Three days after 58-year-old Harrison died from cancer in California, Canon Michael Wolfe offered a prayer of thanksgiving for "the Liverpool Beatle, George Harrison," at the city's Anglican cathedral.

Wolfe told approximately 200 parishioners in the vast and echoing cathedral that Harrison would be remembered "for his contribution over the years to song and music and for his work for charity."

As Liverpool launched into the Christmas holiday season Sunday with a parade, many in the city paused quietly to remember the local son who bore his fame and his illness with equal forbearance.

"George will be remembered for being dignified about being a member of the Beatles," said 21-year-old James Elliker, stopping outside the gates of Strawberry Field, the Salvation Army children's home immortalized in a Beatles song. "He'll be remembered as the nice one."

Behind him a sign pinned to the red wrought-iron gates echoed Harrison's final message to his fans: "Love one another."

Notes, flowers, and cards continued to arrive at Beatles sites across Liverpool on Sunday — at the tiny terraced house where Harrison spent the first seven years of his life and by the road sign at the top of Penny Lane, the quiet suburban street the band eulogized in song. They were left by people who paused for a moment in silence before moving on.

As costumed revelers and folk dancers prepared for the Christmas parade at Liverpool Town Hall, people trickled in to sign a book of condolence that has been open since Harrison's death was announced on Nov. 30. An ambulance worker added her message to more than 1,000 in the book, as did a mother with her four children.

"As long as people need to sign it, it'll stay out," said

Stephen Gibbs, the assistant head of the Lord Mayor's office. "At the moment, a lot of people are in mourning."

Some mourners feel the loss as if he were a close friend.

"We came because we can feel him here," said Diane Machin, her jacket covered in Beatles patches and her eyes red from tears.

"Yesterday we spent watching television and listening to all the tributes," Machin said as she stood outside Liverpool's Cavern Club, where the Beatles launched their career in the 1960s. "Today, we wanted to grieve with people who feel the same way we do."

Marines may join Kandahar assault

By Kathy Gannon
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Relentless U.S. air strikes pummeled the defenders of Kandahar Sunday with anti-Taliban forces within 20 miles of the last militia stronghold. A U.S. Marine officer said his troops might join the assault.

In the east, a provincial military official said U.S. warplanes bombed an anti-Taliban headquarters Sunday, killing at least eight people. The claim came a day after the official reported similar bombings killed scores of civilians nearby.

At U.S. Central Command headquarters in Tampa, Fla., spokesman Lt. Col. Mark Compton said the command was looking into the reports but had no immediate information about the latest attacks.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said U.S. forces would do "whatever is necessary" to root out the Taliban and Al Qaeda terrorists from their cave hide-outs near Kandahar and Jalalabad.

Asked on NBC's "Meet the Press" whether poison gas would be pumped into the caves, Rumsfeld noted that Northern Alliance forces used flooding to force the surrender Dec. 1 of the last 82 Taliban holdouts in a prison fortress near Mazar-e-Sharif in the north. One of the Taliban soldiers contended that he was an American citizen. Hundreds of their comrades and a CIA operative died in an uprising last week.

"I guess one will do whatever it is necessary to do," Rumsfeld said. "If people will not surrender, then they've made their choice.

"The remaining task is a particularly dirty and unpleasant one. We expect that there will be casualties; we expect that there will be people captured."

of drinking on campus, said Stepping Up Director Julie Phe, adding that she is happy for his family's settlement.

"This was an example of an already important issue made more personal," she said.

The then sophomore's family is happy the university and fraternities have worked to improve alcohol awareness, Gallagher said.

"This is the main reason they went ahead with this ... to see that this didn't happen again," he said.

Officials determined that Garofalo, 19, died of pulmonary edema and fluid in the lungs because of excessive drinking during a "Big Brother/Little Brother" pledge ceremony at 222 N. Clinton St. on the night of Sept. 7, 1995.

In September 2000, the Iowa Supreme Court ruled that the fraternity was not responsible for the death and that the family could pursue legal action against Diehl. The fraternity was banned from the UI six years ago; it reopened this fall, attracting 32 members.

Diehl's attorney could not be reached for comment.

Damages set at $5 million

The university is investigating whether the consulting company Shive-Hattery, which was hired to oversee the entire restoration project, provided the letters alleging that burn marks were visible on the dome to top school officials in a timely and efficient manner, Parrott said.

Contractors from Renaissance Restoration, which was in charge of a different aspect of the project, allegedly discovered damage in the building more than a month before the fire. Enviro Safe Air reportedly ignored warnings that the building could catch fire.

The $2 million from liability insurance the university seeks equals the school's deductible on all campus buildings with FM Global, a Plymouth, Minn., company handling the claims.

"Now that the estimate is done, we have to wait and see how much [FM Global] is willing to reimburse," said UI General Counsel Mark Schantz.

Parrott said Enviro Safe Air's liability insurance should cover the university's insurance deductible. The UI may have to ask the state of Iowa Board of Regents for additional funds should the insurance fall short, he said.

Suicide bombers kill 25 in Israel

"endangering its existence" by not cracking down on militants.

The carnage began in Jerusalem just before midnight Dec. 1, when two suicide bombers set off their nail-filled bombs on Ben Yehuda Street, an area of cafes and bars packed with young Israelis. Ten people, mostly teens, were killed; 150 were wounded.

At noon Sunday, another Palestinian blew himself up in a bus in the northern port city of Haifa, sending bodies flying and destroying the vehicle. Fifteen people were killed and 40 injured.

The Islamic militant group Hamas claimed responsibility for the bombings in retaliation for Israel's slaying of a Hamas leader nine days ago. Three suicide attackers were killed in the bombings. Hamas said its gunmen were behind the shooting Sunday of an Israeli driver in the Gaza Strip; Israeli soldiers killed the two gunmen in that attack.

Near the West Bank city of Jenin, the army said, troops shot and killed four armed Palestinians. The four approached an Israeli position with the intention of carrying out an attack, the army said.

Echoing Bush's comments, Russia, Germany, France, Italy, Britain, and the European Union demanded that Arafat move against groups backing terrorism. Pope John Paul II told pilgrims at the Vatican that the attacks were "sorrowful and worrisome," and he urged prayers for peace.

Arafat promised to take harsh action against the militants, and he declared a state of emergency in the Palestinian areas. Palestinian police, accompanied by journalists, began rounding up Islamic militants.

An official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said 90 militants have been arrested, including senior Hamas leaders Ismail Abu Shanab and Ismail Haniya. Security chief Jibril Rajoub said those involved in the bombings "would pay the price."

Skeptical Israelis pointed to a string of past broken promises. "Arafat will be judged according to his actions, not his declarations," said Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres.

Infrastructure Minister Avigdor Lieberman called for expelling Arafat and sending Israeli troops into Palestinian-controlled territory. Even some dovish politicians said they no longer considered Arafat a partner for peace.

In at least six Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon, gunmen fired in the air to celebrate the bombings. Some Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip also supported the attacks, with celebratory shots fired outside the home of one of the Haifa bombers.

But some Palestinians said they were tired of the bloodshed. "The world should help both of us, Israelis and Palestinians, to get out of this pool of blood," said Omar Jumma, 31, an engineer in Gaza City.

In a first step, the Israeli military further tightened travel restrictions, barring Palestinians from driving on most West Bank roads. The Defense Ministry said the army would take "a series of steps" and called this "a critical test" for the Palestinian Authority.

A U.S. envoy in the region,

Anthony Zinni, denounced the attacks as the "lowest form of inhumanity," but he said the violence must not derail his efforts to arrange an Israeli-Palestinian truce.

On Sunday, the bomber in Haifa — identified as Maher Habashi, a 21-year-old plumber from the West Bank town of Nablus — got on a crowded city bus, paid his fare, and within seconds detonated the nail-studded explosives belt strapped to his body, witnesses said.

"The bus came down the hill ... and as it leveled out it blew up, it began to run off the road," said witness Rachel Antebe.

The blast hurled bodies in the air and blew out the sides off the red-and-white bus.

"I saw the driver of the bus, his face and body covered in blood. I heard people screaming in the bus. I will never forget it," said Manal Masri, 32, an Arab resident of the mixed Arab-Jewish neighborhood where the explosion went off.

Thirteen bus passengers and two pedestrians were killed, and approximately 40 bystanders were wounded, including 10 who were in serious condition, police said.

The attack the night before in Jerusalem came at an hour when the shops, cafes, and bars of the Ben Yehuda pedestrian mall were packed with Israeli teenagers.

ing in the country's Ministry of Planning; he has spent much of his professional career studying the region.

His goal is to educate people about the region's political and economic history and its relationship with the United States, Honey said.

"I think it's important for students to understand ... and to construct their own informed and un-biased conclusions," he said.

Political-science Professor John Nelson, who will co-teach Terror, Rhetoric, and Television, said the UI hasn't paid enough attention to the Middle East during his 25-plus years at the university.

"The UI has been pretty weak in covering this part of the world," he said. "In political science, we've had a Middle Eastern politics course taught only a few times, mostly by visiting professors. We've never had a permanent instructor."

Efforts are being made through the Office of the Provost to secure the approval to search for permanent faculty to teach courses on the Middle East, Honey said. The office has earmarked funds to subsidize international-faculty positions for the next three years, he said. But UI Provost Jon Whitmore said the state budget cuts will hinder the university's search efforts. The amount of money to be set aside won't be determined until the university's budget is completed, he said, adding that the current focus is to shift resources to accommodate student demand for courses about the Middle East.

"The test will be if the enrollment and interest [in the courses] stay strong," Whitmore said. "We'll try to find the resources to do this on a long-term basis, but if the interest isn't there, we'll probably expend the resources on something else."

Last month, the university approved funding for a full-time professor of Islamic Studies. Reza Aslan, a visiting professor in the School of Religion, teaches one class on Islam every semester.

Quoteworthy

When you've seen beyond yourself, then you may find, peace of mind is waiting there. And the time will come when you see we're all one, and life flows on within you and without you. — George Harrison, (1943-2001), "Within You Without You"

Guest Opinion

Diversity losing out to athletics

In 1968, Columbia University, which borders Harlem, was going to build a new gymnasium on a strip of land that had previously been a community park. Columbia agreed that locals would be able to use the gym, too — but they'd have to come in through the back door. In April of that year, the black activists who'd been upset about the gym and the white activists who'd been upset about Columbia's war research came to see that they were fighting a common enemy: a university that put its own interest before that of its neighbors — particularly if those neighbors were of a different class, or race, or in a land far away. The policy disregard for people of color at home was matched only by the hostility of the policy toward people of color abroad.

Unfortunately, 33 years later, a parallel situation exists in the policies of the University of Iowa. For years, the Afro-American Cultural Center and the Latino-Native American Cultural Center have served as havens for people who have been recruited to the UI and ignored once they arrived. Now the UI plans to tear them down to make way for an athletics learning center.

Students from the cultural centers have repeatedly objected to this plan. They have repeatedly asked to meet with administrators to discuss their concerns; repeatedly, they have been rebuffed, or listened to and then ignored.

Such behavior on the part of this university's administration is disturbing, but it is not surprising. Anyone who has followed the UI's policies on people of color and people who dissent cannot be surprised by this latest move.

In the mid-1980s, students at the UI called for their school to abandon all investments in South Africa as part of a global economic boycott on apartheid. The UI, like many other schools, refused to do so. It took 128 people getting arrested in the president's office for the university to change its mind.

Two years ago, a group of students campaigned for the UI to help put an end to the use of sweatshop labor in the production of collegiate apparel. Black and brown women overseas, these students believed, should not be paid pennies an hour and be subjected to atrocious working conditions to sew Hawkeye merchandise. Students Against Sweatshops got the endorsement of everyone from the UI Center for Human Rights to Sen. Tom Harkin, and still it took a sit-in at Jessup Hall for the UI to make any progress on this crucial human-rights issue.

Now the cultural centers are going to be overrun because Steve Alford wants an academic center for his athletes. Someone needs to tell Alford that there already exists an academic center for his athletes; it's called the University of Iowa.

The Athletics Department may be financially self-supporting, but that does not give it the right to run rampant over anyone it chooses. A department is a part of a university, not the other way around. Of course, given that several hundred thousand dollars of Alford's salary comes directly from Nike — a company that has repeatedly shown it has no compunction about exploiting workers abroad in order to sell $150 sneakers in the United States — it is perhaps not surprising that Alford feels justified in reaping profits from his athletes and removing any obstacles (like buildings) that stand in his way.

It took an occupation — and a raid by police that broke windows, damaged buildings, and injured students — to get administrators at Columbia to see the light about the gym they were building and the war they were helping fight. It has taken sit-ins and arrests in the past to get the UI to make any progress on human rights abroad.

I don't know what it will take to stop this assault, but I believe that it can be done, and I ask you now to join the fight.

Ashcroft's power play undermines justice

Our judicial system is built on the principle that the worst miscarriage of justice is to send an innocent person to prison. To prevent this, every person accused of a crime has the right to an attorney, who supposedly is able to interpret the law better than the average citizen. In order to properly defend their clients, attorneys must be able to confidentially communicate with them. If that confidential communication is taken away, accused persons lose their right to an adequate defense.

Recently, Attorney General John Ashcroft decided that federal prisoners no longer deserve this civil right of attorney-client confidentiality and instituted a policy of eavesdropping on telephone conversations between federal prisoners and their attorneys. While Ashcroft maintains that his decision was made in the interest of national security, the facts speak differently.

It is true that terrorists could communicate secret messages through their lawyers to other terrorists, but this is nothing new. It has never been impossible for investigators to eavesdrop on conversations, but there have always been safeguards. Before Ashcroft's new policy, a court order was required before investigators could begin listening to phone calls and reading mail.

Now, however, all that is required to authorize eavesdropping is the label "terrorist." Anyone Ashcroft believes is a threat to national security can be designated a terrorist, and her or his rights evaporate.

The result is that overzealous anti-terrorism investigators can operate outside the umbrella of our legal system — a system designed to protect us from malicious prosecution and intimidation. After all, if investigators can produce evidence that a prisoner is a threat to national security, then surely a federal judge will recognize this fact and produce a court order allowing eavesdropping. Perhaps Ashcroft is simply tired of collecting evidence and wants to skip directly to sentencing without the hassle of an investigation or jury trial.

Ashcroft's new policy is a grab for power, pure and simple. He wants to take power out of the hands of federal judges and claim it for himself. There is a word for a public official who seizes power: dictator. Two hundred years ago, the framers of the Constitution decided that living under a totalitarian regime was unbearable. Today, however, John Ashcroft is positioning himself as the sole judicial authority in the nation. If he succeeds, it will mean the destruction of the delicate system of checks and balances designed to protect the innocent, and our justice system may never recover.

When Heaven freezes over, or, missing the Great Equalizer

God or Cosmos or It or Underlying Principle or Tao or Big Bang Before or Nothing At All or Whatever You Are, this column's for You. Because it's about time you get some snow down here, goddamnit. It's December now. It's the Midwest.

And there's a reason people stay in the Midwest in December, and though none of us seem to be all too sure what on earth that reason could be, I'm fairly certain it's the snow.

The Great Equalizer, my mom always called it, because it blanketed the earth high and low, didn't discriminate, laid it flat, laid it out plain, blank, new, fresh, smooth, and indifferent, taking people's lives but taking away some of the ugliness, too, in its insulating embrace.

You can ask any kid who's ever lain down, warm, under a foot of it.

You can ask any kid who's ever tobogganed down, fast, over a hill of it — because what else in this world makes you fly, skipping across and then floating over the hard earth, quite like that?

Airplanes, I guess. But their shells are so thick and they don't quite let you get your head in the wind like you want to when you get going fast, and anyway we're all scared of 'em even more now, maybe for good reason.

We base a large part of our lives on what comes falling out of the sky.

That's only natural, I think. We're fancy monkeys, after all, or really fancy protozoa, come crawling up out of the muck. And if you don't believe that one, well then we're fancy ribs, or flesh of our flesh, or innocents thrown out of the Garden — which I hear was nice, and where it most likely snowed on occasion, if it was anything like the Midwest.

Man, do you remember that?

Being kids, I mean. Toboggans. Long, dangerous

DRAWING CONCLUSIONS ON THE WALL

sleds that always seemed to me a lot more like one side of a coffin than any kind of a fun little play-mobile. And the trees, just waiting. Just wanting to complete that coffin, to smash you up real good, you and your daredevil zooming around the turns.

Yessirree, I smashed my face up real good, and plenty of times. The trees always seemed to land square on my right front tooth (and if you don't believe me, I'll show it to you sometime — not the original, of course, but one that's four times removed and that accounted for at least a third of Dr. McLane's yearly salary — it was always my holiday-season present to him), rrrrraaaaaack! (Except more like the grind of cold wood on cold bone than a simple "rrrrraaaaaack!" really gets across.)

Yet oh-so peaceful, I remember, every time. Every time I remember: rrrrraaaaaack!, then blood, then peace. Just lying down belly-up, struck dumb, helpless, wide-eyed gazing into the black winter bubble with flakes falling down, slow, all around as though I were Luke Skywalker up-shifting into hyper-super-Mach-whatever-cross-the-universe speed, stars falling toward me from the vanishing point and beyond.

Which is a nice feeling to remember when you're not all too sure what on earth we've all stuck around for so long. In the Midwest, I mean.

I wish that it could snow all over the world.

I wish the Great Equalizer would come and make everything smooth.

I wish people would get back up in the sky again with joy, and have the knot in their stomachs be from love of heights and not fear of them.

Instead, life is a toboggan.

Life is one side of a coffin, flying down a hill, rickety, smashing apart on rocks that poke up through the Great Equalizer. Life is one of four sides of a big, long box of forever, just sort of catapulting through, waiting to be completed, waiting for whatever is going to give it its final shape, its other three sides at the bottom of the hill.

But maybe we get to walk back up. Maybe we race back up again, exhausted, steaming, losing feeling in our toes, surging and cursing with blood, sometimes inside of us and sometimes outside. I'm pretty sure that starting over, and then over, and then once again is an option, in fact, because I've seen old men in winter on the Red Brick Hill where I grew up. They were there for their children, they said, but when you saw the mischievous secret grins under their icicle mustaches, you knew that their children were just as much there for them.

I've seen old women. I've seen dog-walkers. I've seen teenagers without proper winter clothing, then little kids, back from college.

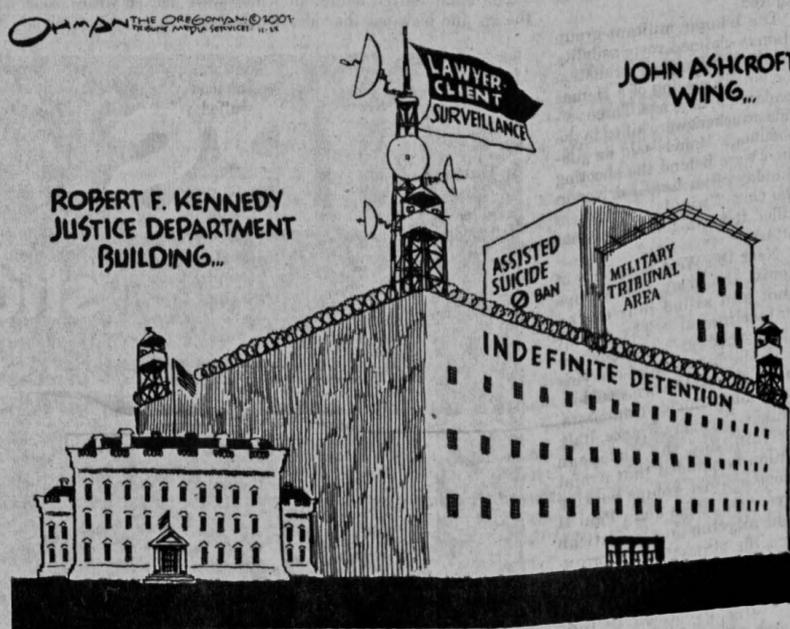

I've seen little kids home from kindergarten, lying down belly-up and dumb-struck in front of laughing trees. I've told them:

Here's the secret, kid: You don't get your mouth smashed as badly if you don't smile at all on the way down.

Here's the better secret:

If you don't smile, you also don't get to feel the universe on the tips of your teeth, crisp in the night, the stuff worlds are made of.

The casualties of Hollywood

Film: Behind Enemy Lines
Director: John Moore
Writers: David Veloz and Zak Penn
Starring: Owen Wilson and Gene Hackman
Length: 105 minutes

If you have any doubts about how talented and irresistibly likable Owen Wilson is, Behind Enemy Lines should help dispel them. The quirky, hilarious actor who stole the show in Meet the Parents, Zoolander, and Bottle Rocket, among others, manages to make what is really just a ridiculous, 105-minute recruitment commercial for the Navy almost fun to watch — almost.

As the opening credits roll, we see the men aboard the USS Carl Vinson frantically scurrying into their battle positions, only to learn it's just another drill. Eager for action, Wilson's character, a Maverick-like navigator named Chris Burnett, sarcastically asks his pilot, Stackhouse (Gabriel Macht), if they could get more excitement flying jets for rock stars.

Proving the adage "Be careful what you wish for," Burnett is handed a seemingly routine reconnaissance mission over Bosnia on Christmas Day — a little present from the ship's commander, Adm. Reigart (Gene Hackman), who doesn't think Burnett understands what it really means to be a soldier. But Burnett quickly finds out when his plane is shot down while photographing Serbian soldiers who are covering up mass graves full of Muslims they have murdered.

Wanting to keep those pictures from ever being seen, the Serbs send a tracker into the mountains to kill Burnett, who is by now alone and trying to get to a safe zone to be rescued. The bad guy is clearly evil — he never smiles — but the most terrifying thing about him is the navy-blue and white-striped Adidas jacket he wears throughout the movie, last worn by Run D.M.C. circa Raising Hell. Apparently, Bosnia has the U.S. Navy but it doesn't have Old Navy.

Most of the second half of the movie features shots of Burnett running really fast while trying to evade his would-be captors. As if this isn't exciting enough, director John Moore tries to add to the fun by shooting everything hand-held. The camera-work is so shaky even the guys who made The Blair Witch Project would be nauseous, which might be forgivable if the stylistic device wasn't totally inconsistent with the first half of the film, which is shot and edited in a conventional Hollywood style. Maybe Moore thought he was being arty and clever by adding a documentary-style feel to what is otherwise a straightforward action flick, but the technique doesn't work here.

Where Behind Enemy Lines really falls apart, though, is during the laughably staged finale. As Burnett is caught in the crossfire of his American rescuers and a sizable band of Serbian soldiers, we get a flurry of random close-ups designed to disguise the fact that three American choppers are hovering motionless about 100 yards from a bunch of tanks and men with machine guns.

No Americans get hurt, of course, including Burnett, even though the movie buries any thread of believability by having our hero successfully run back into the line of fire to retrieve the incriminating photographs.

Even more offensive, however, is that he not only puts his own life at risk, but he further endangers the men who are there to rescue him. It's the same quibble I had with Spy Game, a much better film that makes use of a similar storyline. Both have an American in need of rescue; both have powers-that-be trying to prevent said rescue for political reasons; and both have a rogue American who goes against these forces to bring his boy back — in this case, it's Reigart who disobeys orders and plans the mission.

Doing what you think is the "right thing" is admirable, of course, but it gets a bit more complicated when your reasons put other people in harm's way. I suppose it's like going for it on fourth and one — if you make it, you look like a genius; if you get stuffed, you're an idiot.

Would it have been a happy ending if Burnett's and Reigart's heroics resulted in a few American casualties? What about just one? But hey, this is just a Hollywood movie — we don't have to deal with such complex issues.

The ABCs of Wizardry

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — The Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry is sticking with its ABCs. In a joint announcement with Warner Bros. on Nov. 29, ABC said it secured the television rights to the hit movie Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone and that Warner has acquired rights to its sequel, Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets.

The sequel is expected to arrive in theaters next November.

Warner would not confirm or deny published reports that the two-movie deal is worth at least $130 million.

"Harry Potter is already considered a timeless family classic that audiences all over the world have embraced in record numbers," said Eric Frankel, the president of Warner's Domestic Cable

Distribution. "We think that ABC, with its multifamily platforms, is a terrific vehicle to showcase this film."

ABC said it has a 10-year license to show each film and plans to air them first on its broadcast network. They will then go to cable, including the Disney Channel.

The Walt Disney Company is ABC's parent.

Stupid things people do when they're drunk

horoscopes

Monday, December 3, 2001 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Things are looking up for you, so don't waste time. You've cooled down somewhat and you're ready to make a serious effort in order to sort out past mistakes and push future accomplishments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't take comments made to heart. Problems with a family member may play on your emotions. Don't worry about what others are doing or saying. As long as you are happy with yourself and what you are doing, that's all that counts today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get out and have some fun. Social activity or time spent conversing with friends will be most entertaining. Get involved in the activities of children.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may be getting a little bored. Professional changes should be considered. You must refrain from overspending on entertainment. Risky ventures will not turn in your favor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you can work at home, you should. The peace and quiet will help you accomplish so much more. It will help your own emotional well being to work in a relaxed and uninterrupted atmosphere.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't get trapped in a relationship that will lead to bad vibes. Secret affairs will end up causing devastating circumstances. Listen to a good friend who is truly concerned about your emotional well being. Protect your heart and your best interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep your money in a safe place. You may want to purchase lavish gifts or spend a lot on travel or entertainment but this will leave you cash poor by the New Year. Friends may want to borrow money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you aren't happy with the way things are going, remember that changes can be made that will aid you in achieving a better position and a better life. All you need to do is take the initiative.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You'll be in an adventurous mood today. Your need to get away should prompt you to be spontaneous. You will learn a great deal about yourself if you go somewhere secluded.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It's time to pamper yourself. Don't let anyone burden you with her or his problems when you have your own demons to fight. Take the time to sort out your own thoughts and future direction.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It's time to be bold and direct. Lay your cards on the table and fess up to the way you truly feel. A trip to visit relatives should be rewarding and possibly help you see your own situation with more clarity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Moneymaking opportunities will surface. Do your research before you take on a financial burden that you can't afford. Decisions made in haste will come back to haunt you.

- Repeatedly kick a pop machine with the idea that if you beat it hard enough, you'll eventually get a free Mountain Dew.
- Decide that even though she's told you 87 times she isn't interested, you'll still drop by her place for a booty call.
- Lather themselves in Vasoline and persuade the cat to lick them clean.
- Set a couch on fire and perform a pseudo-Native American rain dance around it — in the middle of Burlington Street.
- Take pictures of themselves naked to post on ebay.
- Try to remove the "L" from the decals on Public Safety squad cars.
- Proclaim that Dude, Where's My Car? was robbed when it didn't win the Oscar for best picture.
- Debate the merits of the farmer blow versus picking your nose.
- Decide Hamm's is an adequate substitute when the wine runs out.

Remember the Alamo

Iowa is returning to the San Antonio bowl game for the third time

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

With all due respect to Derrick Fox, the Alamo Bowl's executive director, the Iowa football team is thankful he was delayed in a Richmond, Va., airport.

Nearly 20 minutes after Iowa Athletics Director Bob Bowsby told reporters that the Hawkeyes' postseason hopes would likely remain uncertain until Sunday or today, Bowsby's cell phone rang as he sat watching the men's basketball team in press row at Carver-Hawkeye Arena on the evening of Dec. 1.

It was Fox.
 "He called and said, 'I've only got one question for you. Are you interested in coming back to San Antonio?'" Bows-by said at halftime of the Iowa-SMU basketball game. "Between the screaming and cheering of the crowd I said, 'Sure. Is this official? Can we announce it?'"

Immediately after Hawkeye football coach Kirk Ferentz was informed that his team's season would be extended by one game, a sold-out Carver crowd, several members of the Iowa football team, and the recruits in town scouting out the program all caught the news over the loudspeakers: The Hawkeyes will represent the Big Ten in the Dec. 29 Alamo Bowl in San Antonio.

"Needless to say, we're thrilled to death," Ferentz said with a smile as wide as the Lone Star State. "It's a great day for Hawkeye football and for Hawkeye fans around the absolutely fantastic, so it's a great reward. We're looking forward to heading to Texas. I don't know whom we're playing, and I really don't care."

The one thing that's certain about Iowa's opponent is that it will be from the Big 12. With all the upsets in college football, particularly Colorado's win over Texas on Dec. 1, the number of teams that will represent that conference in the Bowl Championship Series is still uncertain. Once the BCS makes its selections, the Cotton Bowl and the Holiday Bowl will pick their teams before the Alamo Bowl finds an opponent for the Hawkeyes.

Suggested teams have been Texas A&M, Texas Tech, and even Iowa State, but Rick Hill,

The Hawkeyes defeat SMU to win the Gazette Hawkeye Challenge

By Tyler Lechtenberg
 The Daily Iowan

After dropping its two previous games to top-five ranked opponents Missouri and Duke, the Iowa men's basketball team regained some self-confidence with two wins in the Gazette-Hawkeye Challenge in Iowa City over the weekend.

Hawkeye seniors Reggie Evans and Ryan Hogan shared MVP honors for the four-team tournament, as Iowa outlasted a scrappy Alabama State team, 73-64, on Nov. 30 and then posted an 86-69 victory over Southern Methodist in the Dec. 1 championship game.

The two previous losses sent Iowa into a bit of a spin, said Iowa coach Steve Alford, and getting two wins over the weekend was key for his players' psyches.

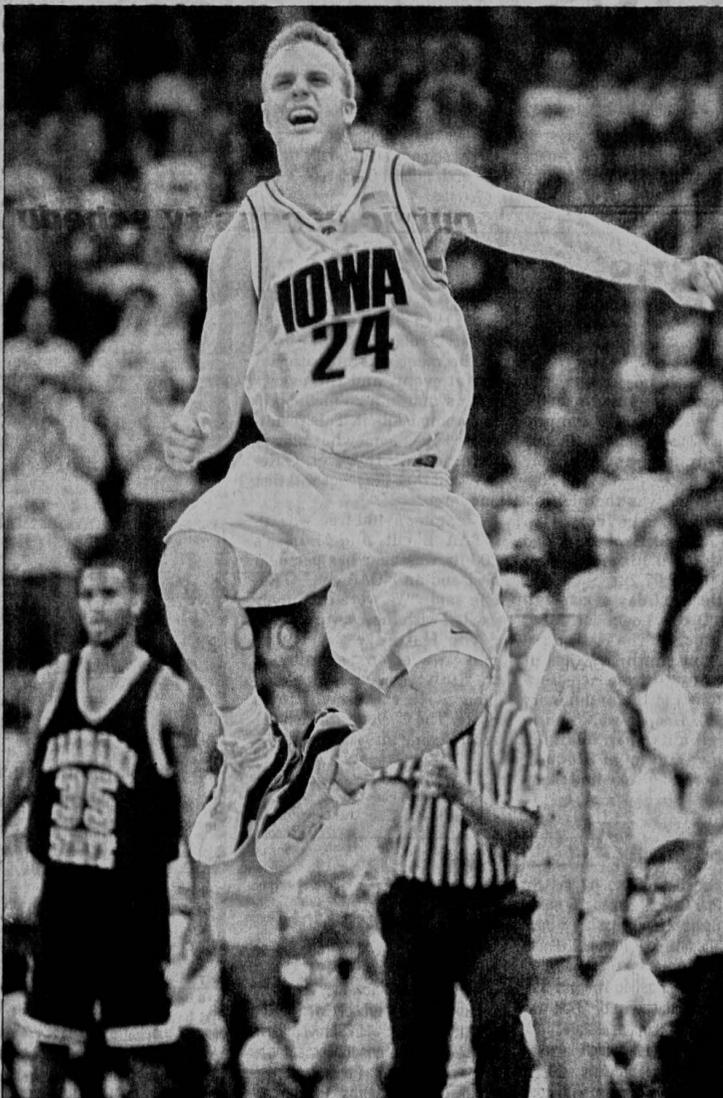

"Hopefully, we've got some confidence back," Alford said. "Winning a championship gets us going back in the right direction."

In the championship game, Hogan's career-high 16 points sparked Iowa off the bench. A confident Hogan torched the Mustang zone by going five of eight in 3-point shooting.

"When I saw that SMU was going to play zone, my eyes kind of lit up," he said. "I had a lot of confidence coming into this game, and it helped me a lot."

Alford said Hogan, who scored two points against Alabama State, was worthy of the honor because of the boost he gave the Hawkeyes.

"I thought he was very deserving of an MVP honor because when you have a team that's struggling, you have to look to something," Alford said. "We've been look-

Todd Brommelkamp

Watching the Gazette Hawkeye Challenge, I couldn't help but feel nostalgic about my first car. It was a brown 1981 Grand Prix, and when the sunlight hit the rust the right way, it had a truly magnificent luster. There was only one problem with this fine piece of auto-industry ingenuity — it usually didn't want to start. This Iowa basketball team reminds me a lot of that wonderful two-door beast, minus the cream-colored interior and awful window tinting. The Hawkeyes, like my V6 engine of old, seem to have a hard time turning over when it's early. Maybe it was the chill in the air this weekend; that was always the cause of my car's problems this time of year. However, I doubt whether the Hawkeyes sat outside in the harsh elements overnight like my old ride. Maybe Iowa was questioning itself after losing by 18 points to No. 1 Duke on Nov. 27, much like I questioned what I had done to deserve the wrath of my Grand Prix on a cold winter's day.

All speculation aside, Iowa definitely struggled against Alabama State and,

IOWA WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Hawkeyes go 1-2 in Colorado

By Jeremy Shapiro
 The Daily Iowan

Despite an electrifying 7-0 run late in the game, the Iowa women's basketball team could not overcome the mountain of a lead that No. 11 Colorado had built early in the second half.

Iowa fell to the Buffalos, 92-83, in Boulder on Sunday, in probably its toughest nonconference test of the season. Down 83-70, the Hawks scored seven straight to get within six points with 2:34 remaining. However, the Buffalos did not lose their poise, sinking several free throws down the stretch. Despite two Lindsey Meder 3-pointers, Colorado refused to let the Hawkeyes get back into the game.

Colorado avenged a painful 92-66 loss in Iowa City one season ago. It improved to 6-2 in the season. Iowa dropped to 4-2, including a 84-72 win at Denver on Nov. 30.

The Hawkeyes will look to take some positives out of the trip. They stopped Denver's 15-game home-court winning streak and then gave a top-15 team a scare on its home floor.

Particularly impressive was the rebounding Sunday. Iowa outboarded the taller Buffs, 43-31, after beating Denver, 45-27, on the glass.

"We emphasized rebounding," said assistant coach Jan Jensen. "I don't care if we are undersized. It's about the effort. We had that today. We will need the effort to knock off a taller team like that."

Jerica Watson had 11 of those rebounds, along with 15 points Sunday. Watson continues to surprise observers by averaging double digits in points and rebounds after averaging three points and three rebounds per game last season. Iowa also had a big game from Meder with 21, while Jennie Lillis added 18 against Colorado.

Assistant charged with drunk driving

Rich Walker, an assistant coach on the Iowa basketball team, is facing a drunk driving charge after being pulled over by Iowa City police after allegedly running a red light Friday morning.

He was pulled over at 1:33 a.m., according to a police report, and his blood alcohol level was .12. According to Iowa state law, a person is considered drunk with a blood alcohol level of .10.

Walker, 51, has been an assistant at Iowa for 12 years. He made a court appearance early Nov. 30, and was released on his own recognizance and ordered to undergo substance-abuse evaluation.

Walker was on Iowa's sidelines for the Nov. 30 game against Alabama State and during the Dec. 1 game against SMU.

NFL ROUNDUP

Chicago clinches winning season

CHICAGO (AP) — Leon Johnson scored on a 1-yard run with 5:34 left, and the Chicago Bears beat winless Detroit, 13-10, Sunday, surviving when the Lions' Jason Hanson missed a 40-yard field goal with 21 seconds to go.

It was the third miss of the day for the normally reliable Hanson, who had made 13 of 16 field goals entering the game. Again, the Lions (0-11) couldn't find a way to win a close one — their last eight losses have been by a total of 35 points.

Chicago (9-2) clinched its first winning season since 1995 by rallying against the Lions, who lost starting quarterback Charlie Batch to a shoulder injury in the third quarter.

Steelers 21, Vikings 16

PITTSBURGH — Troy Edwards, who had all but disappeared from Pittsburgh's offense, re-emerged with a 12-yard scoring run and a big special-teams play, and the Steelers held off a frantic rally by Minnesota.

The Steelers, 9-2 for the first time since 1983, were cruising with a 21-3 lead and Vikings quarterback Daunte Culpepper out of the game with a sore left knee early in the fourth quarter.

Ravens 39, Colts 27

BALTIMORE — Rod Woodson set an NFL record with his 10th career interception return for a touchdown, going 47 yards with 1:34 left to clinch Baltimore's victory over frustrated Peyton Manning and Indianapolis.

The Ravens (8-4) committed four turnovers but rallied to win for the fifth time in six games. In each of those five victories, the Super Bowl champions either trailed or were tied entering the fourth quarter.

The Colts led 27-26 until Elvis Grbac threw a 5-yard touchdown pass to Qadry Ismail with 13:29 left.

Dolphins 12, Broncos 10

MIAMI — Kenny Mixon returned his first NFL interception 56 yards for the go-ahead score, and a fumble on the ensuing kick-off set up another touchdown to help Miami rally past Denver.

The Dolphins came from behind in the final period to win for the fifth time this season, including four of their past six games. They improved to 8-3 and moved a game ahead of the New York Jets in the AFC East.

Patriots 17, Jets 16

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Adam Vinatieri kicked a 28-yard field goal with 6:29 left, and New England snapped New York's four-game winning streak, tightening the AFC East standings.

It was the seventh win in nine games for New England (7-5) since an early-season loss to the Jets (7-4). Miami (8-3) took the division lead by beating Denver.

Titans 31, Browns 15

CLEVELAND — Steve McNair threw two of his three touchdown passes to Derrick Mason before leaving with an injured elbow, and Tennessee kept its slim postseason hopes alive by defeating Cleveland.

The Titans (5-6) hadn't looked like a team just two years removed from a Super Bowl berth for most of the season before beating the Browns (6-5).

Bucs 16, Bengals 13

CINCINNATI — John Lynch stripped the ball from Corey Dillon and jumped on it at the 3-yard line, setting up Martin Gramatica's 21-yard field in overtime for Tampa Bay.

The Buccaneers (6-5) got their first back-to-back wins of the season, but it wasn't easy. They missed two field goals and had a late defensive collapse that let Cincinnati (4-7) rally for 10 points in the last 4:29.

Saints 27, Panthers 23

NEW ORLEANS — Joe Horn denied a touchdown in the first quarter when he collided with an official, caught a 17-yard scoring pass from Aaron Brooks with 1:31 remaining, giving New Orleans the victory over Carolina.

The Saints (6-5) had to rally despite holding the Panthers (1-11) to 150 yards in offense.

Cards 34, Raiders 31

OAKLAND, Calif. — Bill Gramatica kicked a 36-yard field goal with 7:31 left in overtime and the Arizona Cardinals beat the Oakland Raiders.

Earlier in the day, Gramatica's brother, Martin, kicked a 21-yarder in overtime to send Tampa Bay past Cincinnati, 16-13.

Arizona (5-6) won its third straight. Gramatica's fourth field goal of the game, which he celebrated with a somersault, came after David Dunn fumbled a punt on the Oakland 25.

Rams 35, Falcons 6

ATLANTA — Kurt Warner threw four touchdown passes, Marshall Faulk scored three times, including his 100th career TD, and the St. Louis Rams rebounded to beat the Atlanta Falcons.

St. Louis (9-2) was coming off a dismal 24-17 home loss to Tampa Bay on Nov. 26. The Rams lost three fumbles, and Warner was picked off on the final two possessions.

Cowboys 20, Skins 14

LANDOVER, Md. — Emmitt Smith got his first touchdown of the season, Quincy Carter got the first touchdown pass of his career, and the Dallas Cowboys beat the Washington Redskins for the ninth straight time.

The Cowboys (3-8) snapped a four-game losing streak and ended a five-game winning string by Washington (5-6).

Seattle 13, Chargers 10

SEATTLE — Rian Lindell, who missed twice in the final five minutes of regulation, hit a 24-yard field goal with 8:37 left in overtime to lift the Seattle Seahawks over the San Diego Chargers.

Lindell was wide right on a 43-yard try with 4:25 left in the fourth quarter, then was wide left on a 48-yard attempt as time ran out.

49ers 35, Bills 0

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco 49ers finally looked every bit as good as their record.

Garrison Hearst rushed for 124 yards and a touchdown, and Ahmed Plummer had two of San Francisco's four interceptions to lead the 49ers to their first shutout of the season in a 35-0 victory over the Buffalo Bills on Sunday night.

During their implausible run to a tie for the NFL's best record at 9-2, the 49ers specialized in escaping from trouble. They've already matched an NFL record with four overtime games, and they had only one win by more than 10 points.

Turnovers, bench play plague Iowa

The Buffalos held a slim lead for the majority of the first half and took a 43-40 advantage into the locker room at halftime. Colorado hurt Iowa with hot 3-point shooting and superior depth. Colorado hit five second-half 3's, and its bench embarrassingly outscored Iowa's, 44-5.

"We need to do a better job developing kids coming off the bench," Jensen said. "We need to give them some confidence so when they come in, they play with confidence and don't commit a crucial turnover."

Turnovers have plagued Iowa all year. While the number of turnovers dropped to 15 Sunday, the flip side was these turnovers leading directly to important Colorado points.

"While the turnovers are down, they just killed us today," Jensen said. "They really happened at crucial times."

Iowa's seniors carried the team past Denver on the first stop of the trip. Meder scored 20, while Leah Magner chipped in 15 key points. Freshman Jamie Cavey got significant playing time with Lillis in foul trouble. Cavey took advantage of the time, scoring 12 points and grabbing five rebounds.

The Hawkeyes used a 14-2 run late in the first half to take a 35-29 halftime lead. After Denver grabbed a brief second-half lead, the Hawkeyes used a 17-8 spurt to put the game away.

Iowa returns home to host the Gazette Hawkeye Challenge on Friday. Its first-round opponent is Texas Pan-American. Kent State and the University of Alabama at Birmingham complete the field.

Iowa-Iowa State matchup not likely

the Alamo Bowl's director of marketing, said a Hawkeye-Cyclone rematch is unlikely.

"We are looking for the best matchup possible," he said. "Some teams that don't make sense are Iowa and Iowa State simply because the national television audience wouldn't be great."

Sophomore Bob Sanders echoed the words of his coach in saying he didn't care whom he played. He was just excited that Iowa will have the chance to finish its season with a win.

"We never lost our hopes," he said. "We thought we would be able to play in a bowl game. It was a long wait, and now that we know it's the Alamo Bowl, it's just a great feeling."

The Hawkeyes started thinking postseason after they watched Virginia upset Big Ten member Penn State on Dec. 1, knocking the Nittany Lions out of bowl eligibility. When Notre Dame beat Purdue several hours later, the Alamo Bowl became a reality.

Still, sophomore Benny Sapp, one of eight Iowa players catching some basketball action on Dec. 1, said he was surprised.

"I know my teammates back home are jumping up and down and are glad we're going to the Alamo Bowl," Sapp said. "It's going to mean a lot to the seniors. When we were in our training room at the complex, it was mainly seniors watching the Penn State game. When they lost, it was something we wanted, and it turned good in our favor."

This will be Iowa's third trip to the Alamo Bowl. It lost to California, 37-3, in the inaugural 1993 game and blanked Texas Tech, 27-0, in 1996 before a crowd of 55,677.

The Alamodome seats 65,000, and the national reputation of Hawkeye fans, in addition to its 6-5 record, made Iowa an appealing selection.

"We are looking for the Hawkeyes to bring their high-powered offense and defense along with their devoted fans and outstanding football tradition to this Sylvania Alamo Bowl," Fox said.

All current faculty, staff, and students should receive an e-mail today, providing information on tickets and an application that can be printed out and mailed or delivered to the Athletics Department.

ing for unselfish play — we've been looking for someone to step it up."

Hogan's 3-pointer with 12:07 remaining in the first half sparked an 11-2 run that put the Hawks up, 24-19, giving them a lead they would never relinquish. After the Mustangs closed to 26-24, Iowa sprinted into the halftime break on a 21-6 run to end the half at 47-30.

Fending off every SMU second-half rally, Iowa maintained its quality play and finished the game with the same 17-point cushion, 86-69.

Iowa senior Luke Recker led the Hawkeyes with 22 points, including six 3-pointers, while Evans racked up 17 points and 12 rebounds.

The Nov. 30 win took a little bit more work. A red-hot Alabama State team stormed the Hawkeyes in the first half of the game, leading 37-30 at halftime. The Hornets nailed 61 percent of their first-half shots, including 5-9 from behind the 3-point line, compared with 37 percent Hawkeye shooting.

The poor first-half effort disgusted Alford, leading to a fiery halftime discussion with his team.

The Hawkeyes used Alford's motivation to play much more solid defense in the second half, holding Alabama State to 33 percent second-half shooting. Balanced scoring helped Iowa outscore the Hornets, 43-27, after halftime and finish with the nine-point win.

Still, Alford wants his team to play spirited on its own accord.

"As I told the team after the game, 'Why make me have to have a spirited halftime to get you to play hard and play tough?'" he said. "You gotta be tougher than your opponent, and I didn't think in the first 20 [minutes] we were."

Five Hawkeyes finished with double-figure scoring totals against the Hornets. Evans and Recker paced Iowa with 14 points apiece, while Duez Henderson and Jared Reiner chipped in 12 points and Glen Worley added 11. Keith Gamble torched the Hawkeyes for 25 points, including five 3-pointers, to lead the Hornets.

Gamble joined Hogan, Evans, Recker, and SMU's duo of Damon Hancock and Quinton Ross on the all-tournament team.

Hawkeyes still in need of some fine-tuning

at times, Southern Methodist. Against the Hornets on Nov. 30, the Hawkeyes looked as if they thought they were still playing against the Blue Devils.

The Hornets reeled off a nine-point run during the first half to take a 10-point, led largely in part by Keith Gamble's 15 first-half points. That's Keith Gamble, not Kevin, though at times Iowa certainly made him look like the Hawkeye star of the mid-80s.

It was around this time that Steve Alford blew a fuse, something else I became very accustomed to in my early driving days. Feverishly screaming at his team during a time out, Alford's face turned as red as my oil light did years ago.

While they did take a 17-point lead to the locker room at halftime against SMU, Iowa started slow once again against the Mustangs. With SMU leading the game, it took a 13-0 run from the Hawkeyes to permanently swing momentum in their favor.

And just as with my former set of wheels, once things got running there were few problems. Strong second halves ensured there would be little "challenge" for Iowa as it claimed its 19th Hawkeye Challenge title in 20 attempts.

Against Alabama State, it was sophomore Glen Worley leading Iowa's resurgence, tallying eight of his 11 points in the final half. On Dec. 1, it was tournament co-MVP Ryan Hogan who led the way for Iowa, scoring a career-high 16 points, including several key 3's.

Despite the perception that everything is fine, there is some obvious fine-tuning that needs to be performed before the Hawkeyes are hitting on all cylinders. Making sure everyone knows the offense — and becomes patient enough to execute it — and tightening up on defense are certainly high on the list of things Iowa needs to do. Hopefully for Alford and his team, they can perform the needed maintenance during their next three contests against intrastate rivals Northern Iowa, Iowa State, and Drake. If not, I may be once again reminded of my first vehicle.

One day, after seemingly minor problems, it failed to start at all.

Jordan out with swollen knee

By Joseph White
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Given the physical setbacks he suffered over the summer, it seemed rather ambitious when Michael Jordan said he planned to play every game this season. That plan already is in jeopardy.

After just 16 games, Jordan can barely practice and was dominated down the stretch Dec. 1 by Orlando's Tracy McGrady. Jordan's right wrist and both knees have been ailing, but it is soreness and swelling in the right knee that prompted him to schedule an appointment Sunday with a doctor in Chicago.

"I just developed some fluid on my knee, and I think it's about time to pay attention to it so it won't linger all season long," Jordan said. "I don't think it's going to be something that's going to linger. I have to make sure there's no ligament damage, and get it treated, get it drained, and see what the doctors say I have to do and see if I can get rid of it."

Jordan has already had the knee drained once this season. He last missed a game due to injury on March 5, 1993, against San Antonio, the second he missed while hospitalized with a foot infection.

The Wizards next opponent: San Antonio again. A four-game road trip starts Tuesday, and Jordan said he might have to sit out a game or two if the Wizards team doctor and the doctor in Chicago agree that it's for the best.

"It's early in the season. I don't want to. I'd rather continue to play," Jordan said. "But if it's not going to get any better other than me sitting out — long-term, I want to play later in the season."

Jordan scored a season-low 15 points in Dec. 1's 96-87 loss to Orlando. Matched one-on-one against McGrady, Jordan was 2-for-12 in the second half, missed all four shots he took in the fourth quarter, and was taken out by coach Doug Collins with 3:50 to play and the Wizards trailing by 13.

"He would have played until the end of the game no matter what, because he doesn't want to make it look like he's walking away from a player," Collins said. "But I saw him stop a couple of times, just shoot his jump shot, and it's almost like he didn't put the leg down. I said to the coaches, 'That's it.'"

McGrady scored 16 of his 26 points in the second half in a much-anticipated matchup between Jordan and one of the "young dogs" he said would be chasing him this season. Jordan also missed a few minutes in the first half when his eye was poked while grabbing a rebound.

"I got poked in the eye and my knee's a little sore. Is that why he took it easy on me?" Jordan said. "Obviously I felt it on my left on my shot more than anything, and I did whatever I could to contain him in the second half."

Collins said Jordan had scheduled the trip to Chicago before the Dec. 1 game, the Wizards' fourth in five nights. The injury is not only hampering Jordan's performance, it's slowing the development of the team chemistry that needs to develop as the young Washington players try to learn to play with the returning superstar.

Tennessee tops No. 6 N.C. State

By Mike Branom
Associated Press

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Now, No. 8 North Carolina State knows what it's like to be on the bad end of a defensive throttling.

Kara Lawson had 15 of her 20 points in the first half, and Tennessee's defense sparked an early charge Sunday, leading the No. 2 Volunteers to a 93-56 victory over the Wolfpack.

The game opened the Elite 4 Holiday Classic doubleheader, held at Disney's Wide World of Sports Complex.

NC State (6-1) entered the game as one of the nation's better defensive squads, allowing its opponents an average of 52 points on 33 percent shooting.

But it was Tennessee that brought its defense, forcing NC State to shoot 32 percent and turn the ball over 28 times, 17 in the second half.

"We just stopped thinking in every way," Wolfpack coach Kay Yow said. "I personally take the blame for this type of loss, because I feel like I don't have the team prepared as well as it should be prepared."

The Wolfpack were led by Carisse Moody's 18 points and nine rebounds. Amy Simpson added 12 points.

"I think that defense creates offense," said Volunteers forward Gwen Jackson, who had 14 points and 12 rebounds. "Once we started picking it up on the defensive end, it started turning into easy points on offense."

Tennessee coach Pat Summitt credited her seldom-used zone defense for the smothering of the Wolfpack.

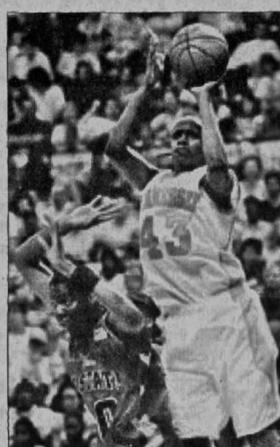

"We've been 95- to 99-percent man-to-man," Summitt said. "But, whatever works. Right now, our zone's been good to us."

The Volunteers outscored NC State by 18 points over the half's last 12 minutes for a 36-21 lead at the break. The Wolfpack were held scoreless for a 7:32 span and missed their last 13 shots of the half.

Lawson's 3-pointer with 8:06 remaining in the half tied the score at 19, and her long jumper at the buzzer capped off Tennessee's 22-4 run. Lawson finished with four 3-pointers in five attempts.

NC State fell behind, 42-23, early in the second half, but rallied to cut the deficit to 11 points. Simpson's steal and breakaway layup brought the Wolfpack within 44-33 at the 15:39 mark.

Tennessee, however, put NC State away with seven unanswered points in a 30-second span. April McDivitt's 3-point play gave the Volunteers an 18-point lead with 14:13 remaining.

Tennessee cut loose after that, outscoring NC State, 42-23, until the game's end. The team shot 59 percent after halftime, with 15 steals leading to breakaways.

"I think this team should be able to generate easy baskets," Summitt said.

Duke extends winning streak

By David Droschak
Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Top-ranked Duke needed a half to warm up in its Atlantic Coast Conference opener. Then, it was business as usual Sunday night.

The undefeated Blue Devils got 23 points from Carlos Boozer, 19 from Jason Williams, and 15 from Mike Dunleavy in a 96-80 victory over Clemson, which turned the ball over 22 times.

Duke (6-0) improved to 72-9 in its last 81 ACC games and beat Clemson for the 12th-straight time — the last eight coming by double digits.

Chris Hobbs had a season-high 25 points to lead the Tigers (5-2), who have lost 24 of their last 25 ACC road games.

But Hobbs couldn't do it alone against a team of stars, as Duke extended the nation's longest winning streak to 16, the first 10 coming in last year's national-title run.

The Tigers, with the biggest team in the ACC, played a good first half and trailed by just six at the break as their size gave the Blue Devils some trouble.

But Clemson's offense hit the skids in the early part of the second half as Duke cranked up the defensive heat and its running game.

Duke got lay-ups from Dunleavy, Boozer, Dahntay Jones, and Williams during a run to open the second half that put the game away with 13 minutes left.

The Blue Devils, struggling this season from the outside, didn't take their first 3-pointer of the half until Dunleavy made one with 12:52 left, but by then it was 65-48, as Clemson missed 11 of its first 12 shots and turned it over six times.

Clemson trailed by as many as 14 points in the first half after coughing the ball up eight times in a 4-minute span.

But the Tigers went on a 17-6 run to close within three as Edward Scott and Tony Stockman hit consecutive 3-pointers at the end of the spurt as the Blue Devils continued to struggle from the outside.

Duke came in shooting 29.5 percent from beyond the arc in five wins, and were just 4-of-15 in the opening 20 minutes as the Tigers stayed within six at the break.

Davie fired with no regrets

By Tom Coyne
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — When Bob Davie was hired by Notre Dame in 1996, he got some advice from former Irish coach Ara Parseghian.

"He said, 'There are a lot of things to worry about. Worry about one thing — and that's winning,'" Davie said.

He didn't win often enough and Notre Dame fired him Sunday, a day after the storied football program completed its second losing season in three years.

The Irish lost six or more games three times under Davie, whose 35-25 record gives him the third-worst winning percentage in Irish history at .583.

"I'm the first one to stand up here and say that we may not have won as many games as what would be expected," Davie said.

During his tenure, the Irish were placed on NCAA probation for the first time. They also produced no first-team All-Americans and only one first-round draft pick, Luke Petitgout.

Athletics Director Kevin White said that while Davie's teams have done well academically, "We also expect and intend to excel on the field, and there, unfortunately, our results and progress have been disappointing."

The search for a new coach will begin immediately, White said, adding that he had a "short list" of candidates, none of whom he has contacted.

The Irish went 9-2 during the regular season last year, and Davie was rewarded with a five-year contract before an embarrassing loss to Oregon State in the Fiesta Bowl. The Irish started this season 0-3 for the first time in school history and finished 5-6.

"A year ago at this time, I believed that we had turned the corner under Bob, and that we were prepared to reclaim our traditional standing among the nation's elite college football programs," White said. "Today, I can no longer say that."

Davie said that after Notre Dame's Sept. 29 loss to Texas A&M, White threatened to fire him during the Nov. 10 week if things had not turned around. But Davie said White decided the next day to give him the rest of season to redeem himself.

"If Notre Dame thinks they can hire someone who can come in here and do a better job of winning games than I can, that's certainly its prerogative," Davie said.

"I accept that, and I wish them well."

Notre Dame's assistant coaches were told Sunday morning that the new coach would select his own staff but that they would continue as university employees at least until a new coach is named.

Notre Dame will honor the remainder of Davie's contract, White said, but declined to elaborate.

Players sympathize with

Davie, who has been heavily criticized by fans.

"We'll stand behind him anytime, anywhere," kicker Nicholas Setta said.

Davie leaves without leading the Irish to a top-10 finish in his five seasons. The Irish were ranked at the end of the season only twice under Davie — No. 15 last season and No. 22 in 1998.

Davie was never fully embraced by the Notre Dame community after getting off to a tumultuous start.

The most devastating blow to Notre Dame's image came two years ago, when the university was placed on probation for the first time. It was the result of a relationship between Irish players and a former booster who embezzled more than $1.2 million from her employer and lavished the players with gifts, trips and money.

The NCAA report said Notre Dame's coaching staff had opportunities to look into the woman's relationship with players on two occasions but didn't ask enough questions. The relationship started under coach Lou Holtz and continued under Davie.

To many Irish fans, though, the most upsetting thing was losing.

The Irish were 6-15 against ranked teams during Davie's stay, 1-7 against teams ranked in the Top 10, and 11-18 away from Notre Dame Stadium.

"I talk to our football team every single day about how it's not the bad things that happen to you that's important, it's how you handle them," Davie said. "In no way do I have a chip on my shoulder as I leave Notre Dame."

Wrestlers win three on the East Coast

By Ali Noller
The Daily Iowan

The perennially powerful Iowa wrestling team picked up a trio of victories in its opening weekend of regular-season competition. The Hawkeyes were led by Mark Juergens, Jessman Smith, and Steve Mocco, who all had perfect records in their first dual matches of the season.

"We had a lot of good matches, with seven new faces in the lineup," coach Jim Zalesky said.

But Zalesky was disappointed in the points given up to teams over which the Hawkeyes are usually dominant. The Hawkeyes gave up 34 points in three matches.

"We are never satisfied (with losing matches)," Zalesky said. "These wins are a starting point, and we need work on consistency from match to match."

The Hawkeyes notched wins over Pennsylvania on Nov. 30 and Hofstra and Princeton on Dec. 1.

Against Pennsylvania, the Hawkeyes struggled in the middle weights but showed dominance in the lower and upper weights in their 21-12 victory.

"We really need to focus on individual matches," Zalesky said of the lost matches. "We aren't coming out hard enough in the first period."

Matt Anderson and Tyler Nix fell to Pennsylvania's returning All-Americans Yoshi Nakamura and Rich Springman.

"When we wrestle ranked guys, we really want to come out to win these matches," Zalesky said.

The Hawkeyes were back on track by Dec. 1, showing familiar command beating Princeton, 36-7.

Iowa dropped only two matches, at 149 and 174. Returning All-American Mike Zadick made the trip east but did not compete at 149 because of an injury.

"He hasn't really had a lot of practice time, and we didn't really think we would need him (to win) this weekend."

Zadick is expected to be ready to compete in this weekend's matchup with Iowa State.

Freshman Steve Mocco returned to dominate in familiar surroundings, wrestling in the Blair Academy's Walker Gymnasium, where he defeated every opponent he faced in his high-school career.

Mocco pinned opponent Joe Looke in 2:37, much to the satisfaction of Zalesky.

"Mocco wrestled well and had a good weekend," the coach said. Mocco's other wins came over Matt Daddino of Hofstra by technical fall, 25-10, and a decision over Matt Feast of Pennsylvania.

Juergens, who improved his record to 11-1, outscored Princeton's John Knorring, 19-1, for the tech fall at 133. He beat Hofstra's Frank Hoeffner, 15-5, and defeated Pennsylvania's Jeff Eveleth, 8-1.

Juergens "wrestled well," Zalesky said, and continued the dominance at 133, replacing his brother Eric, a two-time national champion at the weight.

Smith (184) was another Hawkeye wrestler who went 3-0 for the weekend. Smith conquered Anthony DeBartolo of Princeton by technical fall in 3:39 and Ralph Everett of Hofstra by decision. Smith added a pin against Pennsylvania's Marcus Schontube to improve his record to 11-1.

Other Hawkeye wins came from junior Luke Moffitt (141), who recorded a first-period fall in 1:27 over Princeton's Juan Ventura, a top returning letterman for the Tigers. Moffitt's other victory was over Kyle Bernholz of Pennsylvania.

Hawkeye Matt Anderson notched a pair of wins for the Hawkeyes at 157, defeating Albert Pendleton (Princeton) and Paul Siemon (Hofstra) by major decision.

Trey Clark and Ryan Fulsaa earned three victories at 197 for the Hawkeyes. Clark won two and Fulsaa one.

Returning All-American Ben Shirk struggled in his first two matches, losing by the narrow margins of 7-6 and 11-8, before picking up a win over Princeton's Jon Bunt, 3-2.

The Hawkeyes have a week to prepare for one of college wrestling's most telling matchups.

Iowa will travel to Iowa State on Dec. 9 to face Cael Sanderson and a team that boasts a 7-0 dual record, including a 34-3 win over a Hofstra team that Iowa defeated, 25-15.

"This will be an interesting meet," Zalesky said. "You never know what to expect with new faces in the lineup."

National title opponents down to final game in BCS standings

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Some college-football fans prefer the season to end in an orderly fashion. Others enjoy complete chaos.

Three breathtaking two-point games involving the nation's top teams, though, has fans pondering the same question: How will the national-title chase play out after the final big game of the regular season Saturday?

The options are limited:

• If No. 2 Tennessee (10-1) beats No. 21 LSU (8-3) in the Southeastern Conference title game, the Volunteers will play No. 1 Miami (11-0) in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 3. There could be no argument with the Bowl Championship Series standings, which determine who plays for a national title.

The Vols knocked Florida out of title contention with a 34-32 win on Saturday, while the Hurricanes beat Virginia Tech 26-24. The Gators and Hokies both missed 2-point conversions in the fourth quarter that would have tied the score.

• If LSU wins, don't be surprised if No. 4 Nebraska (11-1) sneaks into second place over No. 3 Oregon (10-1) in the final BCS standings and winds up playing Miami.

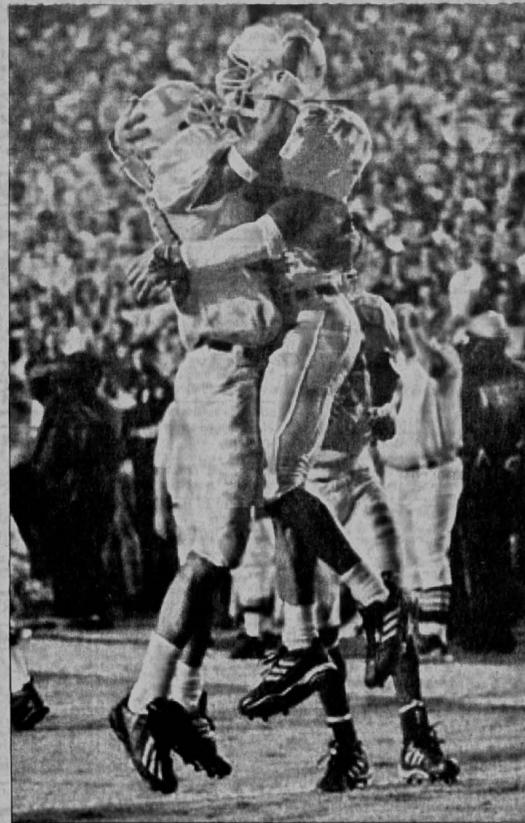

Should the Huskers get in, it would be the BCS' worst nightmare and party time for those who love college football controversy.

How does a team that can't win its own division, much less a conference title, play for a national title over a league champion?

Nebraska was beaten by Colorado, 62-36, two weeks ago, and the Buffs (10-2) won the Big 12 title Dec. 1 with a 39-37 win over Texas.

In fact, if the Huskers play in Pasadena, they would do so over three one-loss conference champions (Maryland, Oregon and Illinois). Oregon beat Oregon State 17-14 on Dec. 1 to win the Pac-10 outright, while Maryland (10-1) is the ACC winner and Illinois (10-1) the Big Ten champion.

Should Tennessee fall, the AP media and the coaches' polls are likely to rank Miami first and Oregon second next week, creating a scenario similar to last season. Miami was No. 2 in the AP's final regular-season poll, but No. 3 Florida State was the team that got to play Oklahoma for the national title. The BCS standings are based on a formula that incorporates the AP media and coaches' polls, eight computer polls, strength of schedule, won-lost record, and bonus points for wins over top teams.

Scott Audette/Associated Press

In the AP media poll on Sunday, Miami was a unanimous No. 1, with Tennessee second, Oregon third, Colorado fourth and Nebraska fifth. In the USA Today/ESPN coaches poll, it was Miami, Tennessee, Oregon, Nebraska, and Colorado.

When the BCS standings are released today, Miami and Tennessee will be first and second, with the battle for third too close to call between Oregon and Nebraska. Florida and Texas, second and third last week, will drop out of contention.

Last week, the Huskers were fourth in the BCS standing, ahead of the Ducks by .39 points.

"My feeling is if LSU beats Tennessee, then Nebraska will edge out Oregon and play Miami," predicts Jerry Palm, who has his own Web site that monitors the BCS standings. "It's really close, but Nebraska already is ahead of Oregon in the BCS. By beating Oregon State by three points, Oregon didn't help itself much."

"And Colorado, with two losses, has too much ground to make up. That extra loss really hurts them."

A Tennessee win on Saturday, and the BCS games should be: Rose: Miami vs. Tennessee Sugar: Nebraska vs. Illinois Orange: Florida vs. Maryland

Fiesta: Oregon vs. Colorado If LSU wins, this is what the big bowls could look like: Rose: Miami vs. Nebraska Sugar: LSU vs. Illinois Orange: Florida vs. Maryland

Fiesta: Oregon vs. Colorado For those who want to order, start singing "Rocky Top."

For all the others, the chant should be, "Go, Tigers!"
