Hanukkah candles burn on UI campus

By Sean Thompson
The Daily Iowan

The current Israeli-Palestinian conflict has added greater significance to the start of Hanukkah, as Jewish students celebrate the holiday that originates from a battle fought more than 2,000 years ago.

The violence in Israel, the Jewish homeland, has escalated with six bombings in the past nine days. The conflict between Israelis and Palestinians has provided some Jewish students with a better understanding of the eight-day celebration that started at sundown Sunday with the lighting of the menorah.

"For some people, [Hanukkah] has great significance, and because of what is going on over there, it can become that much more powerful," said UI senior Zack Peine, the student-board president of the UI Aliber/Hillel Jewish Student Center.

Hanukkah, Hebrew for "dedication," originates from a battle between a small group of Jews, known as the Maccabees, and the Syrian rulers of Israel. The Maccabees risked their lives by refusing to deny their faith and triumphed in defeating their enemies. A menorah is lighted in celebration of the Maccabees' menorah, which burned for eight days on one day's worth of oil.

An extra menorah was lighted at the Hillel Center Sunday for nine Israeli

Tape proves bin Laden's guilt, U.S. says

By Scott Lindlaw
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Osama bin Laden says in a videotape he was pleasantly surprised by the extent of damage from the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, U.S. officials disclosed Sunday. The tape also suggests that some hijackers did not know they were going to die.

Vice President Dick Cheney confirmed the tape's existence, and officials who spoke on the condition of anonymity described the contents. It was obtained by Americans in Afghanistan, though the officials declined to say how.

Cheney said it provides clear proof the leader of the Al Qaeda network was behind the attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon, which killed approximately 3,300 people.

"He does in fact display significant knowledge of what happened, and there's no doubt about his responsibility for the attack on Sept. 11," Cheney said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

The tape shows bin Laden being interviewed or meeting with a cleric. He speaks in Arabic and discusses the terrorist attacks, said Cheney, who said he had seen parts of the tape.

Bin Laden appeared relaxed on the tape, Air Force Gen.

Police receive 2nd sex-assault report

By Mike Dhar
The Daily Iowan

A man sexually assaulted a woman in downtown Iowa City on the evening of Dec. 7, police said.

According to police records, the assault occurred at approximately 9 p.m. Police said they have named a suspect in the assault, one of two reported last week.

On Dec. 2, an unidentified man forced an Iowa City woman to have intercourse in an alley near the Pedestrian Mall.

Police said they haven't identified any links between the two incidents.

"At this point, I don't know if the two are related," said Iowa City police Lt. Dan Sellers.

No injuries were reported in the Dec. 7 incident, but the woman was taken to an Iowa City hospital for an examination at her request, Sellers said.

The suspect will likely be charged with third-degree sexual assault because the sex act was done against the woman's will, Sellers said. Police said the incident was not a rape but would not give more specific information about the assault.

Police used information obtained from interviews with the woman to name a suspect, Sellers said. The woman knew the suspect's first name because they engaged in conversation before the assault, according to police records.

No arrests have been made in connection with the incident, but police expect to file charges later this week, Sellers said.

The woman reported the assault to police at 10:04 p.m. from an Iowa City residence after walking away from the crime scene, according to police records. However, police would not say if the woman was an Iowa City resident.

Police don't commonly receive reports of sexual assaults in downtown Iowa City, Sellers said. Many such crimes go unreported, he said.

Both women reported the assaults soon after they occurred,

Ames owners claim smoking-ban harm

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

At least two Ames restaurants have reported a decrease in revenue since a smoking ban was implemented there four months ago, a move the Iowa City Council might follow pending votes Tuesday and Jan. 8.

Sales have dropped 10 percent at Aunt Maude's and 40 percent at Studio Cafe, said the restaurants' managers.

"It's ridiculous," said Pat Breen, the manager of Aunt Maude's. "It's not about cigarettes. We all know cigarettes are bad. It's about whether the city has the right to tell businesses what to do."

On Tuesday, the Iowa City Council is scheduled to cast the second of three votes needed to adopt an ordinance that would ban smoking in restaurants earning at least 50 percent of their revenue from food sales.

The Ames ban applies to establishments that earn at least 10 percent of their revenue from food sales and includes a red light-green light policy that allows smoking in restaurants between 8:30 p.m. and 6 a.m.

Although Ames Mayor Ted Tedesco said he has only heard two complaints, Studio Cafe manager John Chapman said the business' future is uncertain.

"We're in danger of closing down every month," Chapman said.

Iowa City Councilor Mike O'Donnell voted against the ordinance Nov. 27, saying it could harm businesses financially. Iowa City could see the same problems as Ames, he said.

U.S. bombers pound Afghan hills and caves

By Chris Tomlinson
Associated Press

TORA BORA, Afghanistan — American bombers pounded the hills and caves of Tora Bora on Sunday, trying to soften Al Qaeda defenses for a ground assault by Afghan tribesmen. Pakistani forces moved to seal off escape routes on their side of the border.

In the south, rival tribal leaders worked out differences over the administration of Kandahar, the Taliban's former stronghold, with the former governor returning to his old office. The agreement reduces fears of factional fighting now that the Taliban has gone.

The bombing around this village beneath the spectacular, snow-covered White Mountains in eastern Afghanistan is aimed at rooting out Osama bin Laden's Al Qaeda fighters, who, the United States believes, are holed up around cave hide-outs near the Pakistan border.

A commander of the anti-Taliban forces in Tora Bora said he was certain bin Laden himself was among them, and Vice President Dick Cheney said Sunday that intelligence reports indicate bin Laden is in the area. Others speculate the elusive terror suspect may be hiding north of Kandahar.

"They were eager to send young men on suicide missions, but they appear to be holding up in caves," Cheney said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

B-52 bombers made repeated passes over the Tora Bora area throughout the day, and huge plumes of smoke rose from the barren hills and ridges. Hundreds of anti-Taliban fighters watched from several miles away as dust filled mountain valleys.

Their commander, Mohammed Zaman, said bombs alone will not

On Chilean journey, UI group to explore volcano

By Lauren Smiley
The Daily Iowan

UI senior Nick Mertes won't inform his mother that, in January, he and three others from the UI will visit a volcano in Chile that erupted 70 years ago.

"I told her it's been a thousand years since it last erupted," he said. "I won't tell her it was in the '30s until I get back."

Mertes will accompany Andrew Wulff, a visiting assistant professor of geology, UI senior Kristin Guthrie, and a UI graduate on an expedition to collect rock samples from the external layers of the volcano Cerro Azul, in the Descabezo Grande range of the Andes. By studying the geochemistry of the lava, the intensity and direction of past eruptions can be assessed and even lend clues to future eruptions.

"We can use the geochemistry to tell not only when it will erupt, but if it will be a quiet or violent eruption," Wulff said. "If we can get data from these volcanos, then we can go to Mount St. Helens and tell how it evolved."

Wulff, in his third year as a UI professor, refers to geologic sites in the Appalachian Mountains,

UI students celebrate Kwanzaa

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

Members of the UI Black Student Union joined in an early holiday celebration Sunday to remember what many say has been lost in the holiday bustle — cultural unity.

Black students listened to poetry and songs about African-American struggles — from slavery to the civil-rights movements — in the IMU's Wheelroom. Delta Sigma Theta sorority members paraded across the stage in traditional women's attire from Ghana, surrounded by green, red, and black balloons — the symbolic colors of Kwanzaa.

Approximately 35 people attended the hour-long celebration — a increase from the turnout of previous years due to interest in African culture, said Black Student Union President Gia Mason.

"It's not in the numbers who come," she said. "It's in the celebration of unity."

Bette Mayes, an educational adviser with the Academic Advising Center who has worked extensively with Delta Sigma Theta, a black sorority, said she has practiced Kwanzaa since it was founded in 1966.

"It's about living," said Mayes, Sunday's keynote speaker. "One thing I've learned in my 53 years on this planet is that you don't put things off. Kwanzaa is a time to look at ourselves and see how we've contributed to this country."

Mayes thanked blacks who have helped establish modern society, saying black minds have contributed to such inventions as the modern stoplight and elevator.

"We can do anything," she said. "I'm very proud of the young people today who follow their dreams, who do what they want to do."

But Mayes reminded the audience that "we still are in a struggle" to fight intolerance.

Black students make up the third-largest minority group at the UI, with 677 enrolled this fall. That accounts for approximately 2.3 percent of the UI's total student body.

UI senior Dara Hickman, who attended the celebration to learn about her African heritage, said the celebration renewed within her a sense of unity among all cultures and self-motivation. "None of my family has ever really celebrated it," Hickman said. "It's a way for people to identify with their culture and others. The only way we all can keep from beating each other down is by following the seven principles of Kwanzaa."

The seven principles are unity, self-determination, collective work with responsibility, cooperative economics, purpose, creativity, and faith. Each should play a role in the community, Mayes said.

Kwanzaa, a seven-day celebration of African culture that begins Dec. 26, was founded in 1966 by Dr. Maulana Ron Karega, a professor and the chairman of the Department of Black Studies at California State University. Kwanzaa is neither religious nor political and does not act as a substitute for Christmas, Mason said.

Iowa woman leads Sept. 11 quilt drive

Associated Press

VARINA, Iowa — An idea that took root in rural Pocahontas County has grown into a national project: providing quilts to the families that lost loved ones in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks in New York.

The woman behind the idea is Betty Nielsen, and on Wednesday she will accompany a donated semi truck filled with more than 1,100 quilts and begin delivering them to the victims' families.

Nielsen, 48, of Varina, came up with the idea less than six weeks ago. At the time, she knew it would be an almost impossible feat, but with the help of friends, church members, and other volunteers, she has made a serious dent in her goal of giving more than 4,000 quilts away for Christmas.

"We don't have much time left," she said.

The quilts have arrived from nearly every state in America. One came from Guatemala; another was sent from Canada. A church group in Fort Dodge contributed 57. A couple from Minnesota sent 14. Schoolchildren in California, Georgia, and Pennsylvania were among the dozens of groups to contribute.

Pat Archer of Albert City, the first person Nielsen persuaded to join the Freedom Quilt Project, will join her on her trip to New York.

"I think it would be awesome to actually hand these over to the families, to actually see their reaction, and give them a hug if that's what they need," she said.

Nielsen knows she won't reach her goal by Christmas, but, she said, she's not going to quit. She plans to extend the project beyond the holidays, although not at the same frenetic pace.

72-year-old mother becomes a sister

By Barb Arland-Fye
Quad-City Times

DAVENPORT — Maxine Connaway has waited more than half a century to hear God's call to become a Roman Catholic nun.

Her time finally has come, she believes, and, at age 72, she is one of the oldest women in the nation entering a Catholic religious community.

On Dec. 8, Connaway became a novice with the Congregation of Humility of Mary in Davenport, embarking upon a spiritual journey she has yearned for since she was a teenager.

"It still brings tears to my eyes. It's so awesome. I thought, 'After all these years ... to be given this grace and this blessing,'" she said.

During an interview with Sister Jude Fitzpatrick, the Sisters of Humility president, Connaway said she looked up and asked God, "What took you so long?"

The average age for women to enter a Catholic religious community is the mid-30s, said Sister Mary Bendyna, a senior research associate with the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate at Georgetown University.

However, the center has detected a trend toward "sister moms," widowed or divorced women who enter religious life after raising families, she said.

Connaway is the oldest novice Bendyna could recall, but she said there might be others who have entered at around that age.

Connaway said she was about 16 when she asked a priest about becoming a nun.

"He laughed at me," she recalled. "I thought maybe I wasn't good enough ... I thought maybe you had to be a saint."

Connaway moved on with life, working as a legal secretary while raising three sons on her own after her marriage ended.

She never lost faith.

In the late 1970s, with her sons grown, she considered religious life again, but "it didn't seem to be the right time," she said.

As she approached retirement, her life came to a crossroads. Her still unfulfilled desire to serve God led to a radical decision.

"When I turned 62, I gave away everything I owned and took off because I wanted to work for the Lord," she said.

At first, she thought God was calling her to do volunteer work in Ireland, but her journey was a disappointment. She then began volunteering as a rural parish worker in Cadet, Mo., near the home of one of her sons.

Over the next decade, she felt called to other ministries in Colorado and Oregon, where she worked as a groundskeeper for 15 months.

Two years ago, she came to Davenport to serve in the Sisters of Humility Seeds of Hope Program.

"I have never felt more accepted or more warmly encouraged by anyone in my life than by the Sisters of Humility," she said.

The sisters, impressed by her spirituality, dedication, and work ethic, asked her to become an associate of their community and later invited her to consider joining them as a vowed member. Her sons, ages 47, 48, and 50, have come to appreciate her decision to accept.

"What is unique about Maxine's situation is her whole journey into this vocation," Fitzpatrick said.

Afghan exiles talk of return

By Richard Lewis
Associated Press

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Some wealthy and well-educated Afghans who have lived outside their country for years say they are prepared to abandon their prosperous lives in the West and return to rebuild their country.

While they're unsure what awaits them, they say, it's their duty, a calling of sorts to get their battered country back on its feet.

Fatima Gailani, the politically active daughter of a leading Afghan religious elder, says she wants to return permanently and spearhead a commission to drum up aid for illiteracy and women's rights causes.

"I need to go back," she said. "I can't explain it. It's some kind of need."

Her husband, Anwar Ahady, a professor at Providence College, dreams of being prime minister. But the head of the exiled Afghan Social Democratic Party, he said he'd be content winning a seat in a future Parliament.

Ishaq Shahryar wants to build "model villages," planned communities of prefabricated homes, Internet-wired schools, and medical centers, powered in part by solar energy. The 65-year-old Los Angeles businessman said he wants to form joint ventures of Western firms, such as his solar-panel company, providing the materials and expertise, and Afghans supplying the labor.

"It would be a great sense of achievement," Shahryar said by telephone from Bonn, Germany, where he attended U.N.-sponsored talks on forming a new government in Afghanistan. "This is a phenomenal opportunity that few people have. Here's a country that's destroyed and ground into the dirt. To go back and rebuild it, my God, what a sense of opportunity."

John Schoeberlein, the director of the Forum for Central Asian Studies at Harvard University, said Afghanistan will need all the well-educated help it can get, especially those with connections to the West, in building democratic institutions from scratch.

But he warned that the elites will need to persuade freedom fighters on the ground that their expertise is needed.

"I think it's a struggle," Schoeberlein said. "They have their work cut out for them."

There are approximately 100,000 Afghans living in the United States and some 300,000 living elsewhere in the West, mostly in Great Britain, Germany, Canada, and Australia.

Opinions differ as to how many will go back. Those who took lesser jobs when they emigrated are seen as good bets to return. Others, such as doctors, lawyers, or engineers, may assess what's needed before deciding to what extent to involve themselves.

Ahady and Gailani have known for some time they wanted to return to the country they fled under separate circumstances in 1978.

"Although we are well-established in the West, though we have comfortable lives, we still wanted to go back to Afghanistan, have our future in the country," the 47-year-old Gailani said.

Gailani's father is Pir Syed Ahmad Gailani, a Sufi cleric and a close adviser to Mohammad Zahir Shah, Afghanistan's 87-year-old exiled king whom the West sees as a unifying figure until elections are held.

In Bonn, she was a member of an exile delegation allied with the king that negotiated the interim administration.

Ahady, 51, rejected the pact, including the offer of two Cabinet positions, saying it gave too much power to the Northern Alliance. So, he said, he'll help some other way.

Shahryar left his homeland in 1956 on a government scholarship to study physical chemistry in the United States. He graduated from the University of California, Santa Clara, and is forging a career supplying solar panels for U.S. space shuttles and satellites.

He said he intends to move back once he and his wife, Hafizah, are sure their children can obtain a comparable education as in the United States.

"Eventually, I'd love to live and retire in Afghanistan," Shahryar said. "As much as I love America, this is my country, and I want to be there."

Amr Nabil/Associated Press

Osama Elfar, 30, right, hugs his father, Mohamed, upon the son's arrival at Cairo airport on Dec. 5. Elfar, an Egyptian, was detained in a Missouri jail for 10 weeks while American authorities questioned him to see if he had any connection to the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

For some detainees, Kafka comes to life

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press

They were rounded up at work and at home.

Some were alone, others were in groups, and soon all became part of the biggest dragnet in U.S. history.

Since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, nearly 1,200 people have been arrested or detained, according to federal officials, who say almost half are accused of violating immigration laws.

Some of those held had something in common with the hijackers — attending flight school, for instance. But many others have no such link. Nearly all are from the Mideast.

The detentions and other hard-nosed steps designed to wage war on terrorism have come under fire by several civil-liberties groups, which filed suit last week, accusing the Justice Department of withholding basic information — including the names and locations of many people being held.

"There is this incredible veil of secrecy that is shrouding the arrest and detention process," declared Lucas Guttentag, the head of the American Civil Liberties Union's immigration-rights project.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service says it must move cautiously before releasing detainees. And others say federal officials are simply enforcing the law.

"I did not hide" Osama Elfar expected FBI agents to come looking for him.

And they did. On Sept. 24, they came to question the 30-year-old Egyptian at Trans States Airlines in St. Louis, where he worked as a mechanic after attending a flight school in Florida five years earlier.

Because the hijackers were Arab and several had taken flight lessons in Florida, "it was very obvious to me I would be investigated," he says. "I did not hide. I was waiting for them to clear myself. I said,

"Anything you want, I can do."

Authorities searched his apartment and seized his phone bills and computer. He passed a lie-detector test on Oct. 5, said J. Justin Meehan, his lawyer.

Soon afterward, Meehan says, he received oral assurances from the local FBI and U.S. attorney that Elfar was no longer an investigative target. Both offices declined to comment.

Elfar was in the country illegally — he had entered in 1996 on a student visa to attend Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University. He left school the next year; he has worked as a mechanic since 1998.

Elfar suspects a coworker reported him to authorities, asserting that he had said he admired Osama bin Laden. He denies making any such comment.

In late October, an immigration judge granted Elfar a voluntary departure, meaning he could apply later to return to the United States. When the Nov. 23 deadline for his departure passed, he began a hunger strike to protest.

Meehan filed a motion to force the government to say why Elfar was being held. After meeting with a federal judge and the U.S. attorney, the lawyer was soon notified that Elfar would be freed.

After 10 weeks of detention, Elfar headed home to Egypt on Dec. 4.

Elfar's cooperation didn't help him, Meehan said; he was released because of a growing media spotlight.

"This was a nightmare experience," Meehan said. "It was like walking through a Kafka novel."

Despite his ordeal, Elfar has fond memories of this country. "I still admire the American people," he says. "But staying here for Middle Eastern men will be very hard."

Under the U.S. justice system, "I thought everyone has equal rights no matter their sex or color or religion," he says. "I do not believe that anymore."

Some see inequality in 9-11 benevolence

By Tara Burghart
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Some relatives of the civilian victims of the Sept. 11 attacks fear that the nation's admiration for firefighters, police, and other uniformed rescue workers has created a hierarchy in the distribution of charity.

They also fear their voices have not been heard nearly as clearly as the uniformed victims' families on issues ranging from the recovery of remains to the establishment of a memorial at the site of the World Trade Center.

Even the memories of the civilian victims, some say, have not been treated with the same level of respect by the media and politicians.

"They had to help each other, and be their own heroes, and have courage and bravery," said Mary Ellen Salamone, whose husband, John, worked for the bond firm Cantor Fitzgerald. He was trapped on a floor above where one hijacked plane hit. "We never got to know that, because those stories died with the people who died in the attacks."

Theresa Riccardelli is trying — unsuccessfully, so far — to qualify for aid from the Twin Towers Fund, which has raised $113 million for the families of the uniformed officers killed in the terrorist attacks. Approximately 410 firefighters, police officers, and other uniformed officers died.

"What it comes down to, in essence, is what he was wearing," said Riccardelli, whose husband, Francis, was a non-uniformed supervisor of elevators and stairwells for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, the owner of the towers.

Survivors have told her that he and several coworkers stayed behind to help others get to safety.

In all, $1.3 billion has been collected in aid available to families of both civilian and uniformed victims. In addition to the Twin Towers Fund, charities devoted to uniformed personnel have collected more than $180 million.

But because the charities set up for uniformed personnel have a more limited focus and a smaller number of families to help, they have distributed their money more quickly than general funds such as one run by the Red Cross.

The New York City Firefighters 9-11 Disaster Relief Fund has raised approximately $90 million. So far, it has given out lump sum payments of $45,000 each to the families of the 343 firefighters killed, according to Tom LaMacchia, the treasurer of the Uniformed Firefighters Association of Greater New York.

The New York State Fraternal Order of Police Foundation raised $3 million in its WTC Police Disaster Fund, and it is distributing $25,000 checks each to the families of 72 New York, Port Authority, court, and federal officers killed in the attacks.

By contrast, the Red Cross gave out grants averaging $18,000 in its first round of assistance, said spokeswoman Nancy Retherford.

LaMacchia said he was amazed by the generosity shown to rescue workers. Now, he hopes the financial focus will turn to families of the non-uniformed victims.

"I could never put a dollar amount on anybody's son or husband, but I do think we have been taken care of," LaMacchia said. "In the end, I think it will be a lot more equal than it looks now."

soldiers missing in action, each candle representing a soldier thought by some to be captured by Palestinians.

A short description of one soldier will be read every night prior to lighting the menorahs. "I pause to think how fortunate we are that we can get together and [celebrate Hanukkah] freely; it's a blessing," said UI senior Scott Kupferschmidt, a Hillel member.

The clash overseas prompted some students, such as UI graduate student and Hillel member Shannon Welch, to take time from celebrating to reflect on the conflict that could have turned deadlier Sunday when a suicide bomber detonated explosives at a bus stop in the Israeli capitol of Haifa, injuring 29.

"With everything that's going on over there, it seems like it's a time to remember," Welch said.

Peine said it is important for Jewish students to have a place like the Hillel Center where they can meet and celebrate with others, because most students are unable to be with family.

"It's a lovely thing," Welch said of the center. "It's nice to have a center where we can celebrate together; otherwise, the Jewish community seems smaller."

Board representative Jill Opad said the Hillel Center helps freshmen like herself who can't be with family during Hanukkah for the first time in their lives.

"It's pretty cool because a lot of freshmen haven't been away from family during Hanukkah," Opad said. "If you can't be with family, you can be with friends."

police said. Their prompt reports have aided police investigations, Sellers said.

"The sooner we can find out about a crime, the better," he said. "The memory is usually clearer, and we get firsthand information."

Potential evidence, including hair follicles and clothing fibers left by the assailant, can be lost when victims of sexual assaults wait to report a crime, said Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Brotherton.

The suspect in the Dec. 7 assault faces a minimum of a $500 fine and a maximum of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine if charged with third-degree sexual assault, a Class C felony.

southern Italy, and Hawaii as his "offices." He has studied the Descabezado Grande range annually since 1993, although this will be his first trip in three years.

Only two geologists have ever examined the remote portion of the volcano the UI group will study, Wulff said.

No roads go within 15.5 miles of the active volcano complex. Wulff and the students will hike on a river of gnarled lava frozen mid-wave through a dense Chilean rain forest to the active volcanic range. No detailed maps exist, and only 25 people have gone there before.

Wulff said the volcano's last eruption in the 1930s — like yesterday on the geologic time-scale — marked the largest in Latin American history. He estimated it would blow again in the next two decades.

"We're not interested in doing Indiana Jones, cavalier stuff," he said. "The point is to give the students a new experience and give their courses some context."

The students will pay about $300 for the $1,200 trip to Chile, which is funded by department grants and money donated by Wulff. Their preparation has been extensive.

Both of the UI undergraduates took Spanish classes to communicate with three Chilean geologists who will accompany them.

They also have run and biked to get into the physical condition needed for a hike down a volcano while carrying large amounts of rock in their backpacks.

The students will endure the nuisance of 100 small earthquakes a day on the flanks of the volcano. The peaks are prime specimens for study of their evolution because the layers of past eruptions usually hidden by volcanic ash are exposed, Wulff said.

"They're a great place to study because they're being uplifted right now, which leaves a lot of uncovered structures," he said.

The students will join 20 international geologists when they present their individual research projects at the Geological Society of America conference in Kentucky in April.

Guthrie said it is rare for universities to permit undergraduates to do extensive field research. "It's unique. This is actually a master's-level project," she said. "That I'm doing something that contributes to the scientific community at this point is very exciting."

Officials say videotape shows bin Laden guilty

BIN LADEN TAPE

Richard Myers, said on CBS' "Face the Nation." Myers is the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

President Bush ignored reporters' questions about the tape as he returned to the White House from Camp David early Sunday morning.

On the tape, bin Laden recalls listening in to news shows hours before the attacks, waiting to hear reports about the destruction, a U.S. official said. Bin Laden also says that after the first plane struck, he told those who were with him that more destruction was coming.

The Al Qaeda leader

expressed surprise and pleasure at the amount of damage done to the World Trade Center, the official said. Another government official said bin Laden indicates on the tape that he had expected the twin towers only to collapse down to the level of where the planes struck the buildings.

Bin Laden's comments show he had specific advance knowledge of the time, method, and location of the attacks, the officials said.

A third official said Sunday that the tape suggests the ring-leaders of the attacks did not tell all the hijackers that their mission would end in death.

U.S. officials declined to say how the United States obtained the tape, which one described as amateurish and apparently made with a handheld video camera. The Washington Post, which first reported the existence of the video, said it was discovered during the search of a private home in Jalalabad.

Bin Laden has not publicly taken responsibility for the attacks, though he has praised them. U.S. officials have said they intercepted communications tying bin Laden or associates to the attacks, but they have refused to release any materials, citing intelligence concerns.

British and Pakistani government officials have said the Bush administration provided them with evidence they say shows bin Laden's role in the attacks.

Ames restaurants claim harm

SMOKING

"It's a definite possibility," O'Donnell said. "It's not an objective of the council to put people out of business."

Sales at larger establishments in Ames, such as Perkins Restaurant and Applebee's Neighborhood Grill & Bar, have remained unchanged, employees said.

Seven Ames restaurants filed a lawsuit against the city in September, contending that the ban was inconsistent with state law, which allows smoking in public places. Phillip Morris, the world's largest tobacco company, financially supported the establishments in the suit.

District Judge Carl Baker ruled in favor of Ames a month later, saying the ban coincides with Iowa law.

Ames provided free classes outlining the ordinance for restaurant employees before the ban took effect Aug. 1. Tedesco said he would advise Iowa City to do the same.

"I think a cooperative-education program like that is very important," he said.

If it approves the smoking ban, the Iowa City City Council will revise the measure in two years to include restaurants earning at least 35 percent of their revenue from food sales.

Some councilors asserted that the provisional change would allow the ban to eventually reach all food establishments. The ordinance passed, 4-3, in its first vote Nov. 27, with Mayor voting against the ban.

dislodge the Al Qaeda fighters. He said the ground assault will be difficult, as the Arabs have had years to build up their defenses and restock their caves with weapons and food. He said bin Laden "has not escaped, and we will do everything possible to make sure he doesn't."

From the other side of the front line, a 27-year-old Tunisian, Abu Abdullah, contended that weeks of U.S. bombing have had little effect, killing only two people and slightly injuring eight.

Contacted by radio from Pakistan, Abdullah said 84 Arab fighters — mostly from Iraq, Tunisia, Algeria, and Egypt — were hiding in the mountains. A few had wives and children there, he said. He asserted that the fighters had no links to bin Laden and scoffed at the idea that the world's most wanted man was among them.

Relieving ResNet's congestion

On Nov. 8, I sent an e-mail to students in the Residence Halls concerning congestion of their computer network (ResNet). The purpose of that memo was to share information so students could make good decisions about their ResNet use. The decision to send the memo resulted from conversations, with students about this issue. During those conversations students often said they didn't have all the facts. In that same spirit, I'd like to share some facts about using file-sharing programs on ResNet.

There are two facets of file-sharing programs that present potential problems. The first is the congestion resulting from the amount of bandwidth used by these programs, and the second concerns the issue of sharing copyrighted materials.

Facts about network congestion

The current congestion is not caused by the students in the Residence Halls downloading files. The congestion is caused by people outside of the university downloading from ResNet computers.

Many students don't know they are allowing others to download from their computers. Additionally, most students don't know downloading is happening even when they aren't logged on to the programs. As long as your computer is on and connected to the network, others can potentially download files from your computer. The university monitors the amount of Internet traffic, where it is going, and what type it is. Although we've been monitoring ResNet traffic since it started, we don't routinely look at an individual's traffic. We only look at the overall characteristics of the traffic. It's like we are standing on a highway overpass watching the cars go by below. We count how many cars, which way they are going, and what color they are. But we don't know who is inside them. Data packets going through our network are measured similarly. We measure how much traffic, which way it is going, and what kind it is. Most network service providers do this and use the information to keep the network running optimally.

Our measures show most ResNet traffic is destined for off-campus requesters (more than 99 percent) and is associated with KaZaA/Morpheus programs. The cost of freeing up the congestion by adding more bandwidth is estimated to be around $1 million or about $200 per year, per student. Given the rate of growth in ResNet outbound traffic, another $400 per student would be required next year. This is not likely to happen.

Facts about copyrighted material

When students install programs such as BearShare or KaZaA, they are (often unknowingly) sharing those files with anyone on the Internet unless steps are taken to change the program's configuration.

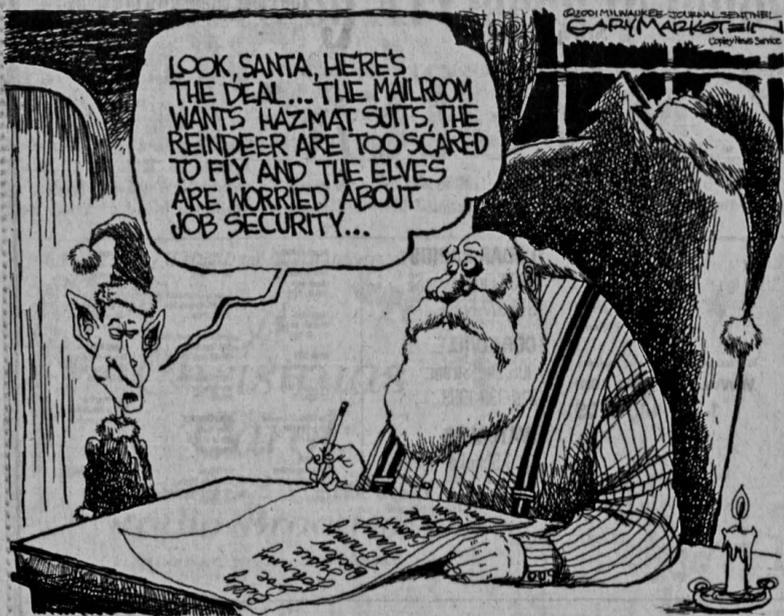

Because students offer these files to anyone on the Internet, the files and the act of sharing them are not private.

The corporations that hold the copyrights are actively searching those publicly accessible files to find illegally shared material.

The corporations have recently (in the last couple of weeks) started to increase the number of official complaints they make to universities across the country. These are legal complaints under the Digital Millennium Copyright Act, which requires us to respond in very specific ways.

So, from my vantage point, there are two likely scenarios. One is that students continue their current behavior and live with a congested network and the risk of action from copyright holders. The other is that they reduce or eliminate the ability of others off-campus to share their files. The choice is really up to each individual. The whole purpose of the memo (and this guest opinion) is to provide students as much information as we can so they can make the decision that is best for them.

Steve Fleagle,
director of UI Telecommunications and Networking

On the Spot

Is it right for the U.S. government to ask universities for information about international students?

"I think it should remain private, because that's just fascism."

Paul Chang
UI sophomore

"No, meddling in their lives is reactionary and racist. It diverts from the matter at hand and just causes paranoia."

Kelly McKay
UI senior

"I think it's wrong. The school shouldn't give out that sort of information. It seems to violate their civil liberties."

Sarah Wright
UI graduate student

"I think it's prejudiced against them, because they have nothing to do with what's going on."

Jenny Bleyhl
UI sophomore

"It's wrong to do it only based on ethnicity. There should be probable cause or very strong evidence that someone has ill intent."

Timothy Chadwick
Iowa City resident

Quoteworthy

It's ridiculous. It's not about cigarettes. We all know cigarettes are bad. It's about whether the city has the right to tell businesses what to do.

— Pat Breen,

the manager of Aunt Maude's restaurant in Ames. Some restaurants have reported a decrease in profits since the city implemented a smoking ban four months ago.

Guest Opinion

The view on the other side

In an Oct. 23 guest opinion, Omar Akbar wrote: "Many Americans have been satisfied with a cursory and reductive understanding of Islam's cultures and people." In one sense, Akbar is correct. Many people here in Iowa City are poorly informed about what actually goes on in the Middle East. Most Americans have no idea what is being said about America and Israel in the state-controlled media services in most Islamic states. We are listening to what they say to us instead of listening to what they say to each other. If we go to the Middle East Media and Research Institute Online (which directly translates Middle East news services into English), we can hear what Arab journalists and editors say to each other in their own language. While we often hear (in English) that many Muslims resent the "oppression of the Palestinian people by Israeli occupiers," the spin in Arabic is different. The Egyptian news service, Al Ahram, wrote (one year ago):

"The bestial drive to knead Passover matzohs with the blood of non-Jews is [confirmed] in the records of the Palestinian police where there were many recorded cases of the bodies of Arab children who had disappeared being found, torn to pieces without a single drop of blood. The most reasonable explanation is that the blood was taken to be kneaded into the dough of extremist Jews to be used in matzohs to be devoured during Passover." This is not some obscure pamphlet; Al Ahram is the primary state-run

Egyptian news service.

What of the fabled 72 virgins awaiting suicide bombers? In Salon Magazine, Nov. 7, Assad Abu Khalil writes (in English): "Tantalizing accounts of virgins in heaven awaiting the bombers have been circulating, and stories about the sexual motives of the suicide bombers have filled the Western and Israeli presses. It is falsely assumed that Islamic promises of sexual delights in paradise explain the odd willingness of young men to commit suicidal acts of violence."

Oh, really? In reporting the death of a Palestinian suicide bomber last August, a reporter for a Palestinian news service wrote (in Arabic) that "Wail" (who killed 21 Israelis in the "Sbarro" bombing last summer) had gone to his "wedding day," to join the "black-eyed."

"This is part of the Islamic belief," says Hamas leader Isma'il Abu Shanab (in Arabic), "Anyone who dies a martyr's death has a reward. If the martyr dreams of the black-eyed, he'll get her." According to deputy director of Al-Azhar's Center for Islamic Studies (in Arabic): "Most of the 'black-eyed' were first created in paradise, but some of them are women from this world, [who] are obedient Muslims who observe the words of Allah: 'We created them especially, and have made them virgins, loving, and equal in age.' ... when the women of this world are old and worn out, Allah [re]creates them after their old age into virgins who are amiable to their husbands..."

Going back to English, I have a flier from the Iowa City Mosque that asks: "What about Muslim Women? — Under Islamic Law, women have always had the right to own property, receive an education... Men and women are to be respected equally." Which version do you believe? The "equal-partner" thesis purveyed for Western consumption, or the Arabic version of compliant sex toys waiting as a reward for those who murder Jews and Americans?

How does a society get by when the richest 2 percent of the men get 30 wives? What becomes of the 30 poor, unemployed young men, left with no hope of a wife, walking around perpetually erect, who have grown up suckling racism and hatred through their mothers' milk? They are promised an eternity of hot sex in paradise if they "die a martyr's death." Just read the Arabic-language news services.

On Oct. 17, Muhammad Al Game'a, the imam of the Islamic Cultural Center in New York discussed the atrocity of Sept. 11 with a journalist: "The Jews were behind these ugly acts, while we, the Arabs, were innocent ... You see, these people [the Jews] are all the time, everywhere, disseminating corruption, heresy, homosexuality, alcoholism, and drugs ..." Al Game'a had hitherto been considered a "moderate Muslim." He has since fled to Egypt. It is true that Americans, by and large, are sadly ignorant of the what some of these people actually think about Americans and Jews. Let's hope we all get wise, and fast.

Raymond Tinnin
UI law student

A child's Christmas wishes

Dear Santa Claus, I guess I don't have to tell you my name, 'cause my mom said you already know every boy and girl in the whole entire world. My mom also told me that you know if I've been good or bad during the year. Well, I know you think your list is true, but I swear, that one time when I pushed my little brother and he fell down the stairs, I really was running away from a monster.

Anyway, I was wondering if you could bring me a few toys on Christmas Eve. I really want a pink Barbie convertible for all my Barbies to ride in. Also, if you could bring me an Easy-Bake Oven, I could make breakfast in bed for my mom on the weekends when I don't have school. Most of all, though, I want a PlayStation 2. I know this doesn't seem like something a little girl would want, but I really want to make my brother jealous. He asked for one too, but he wipes his boogers on the wall and he doesn't deserve one.

I also wanted to ask if you could bring some things for my mom. She works really hard while me and my brother are at school 'cause my daddy isn't around any more. He left a year ago to work in a different city. My mommy is sad but says she has to keep working so my brother and me can keep going to school and get good jobs some day. So I was wondering if you could bring her a new pair of shoes. But make sure they're comfortable, 'cause mom always says her feet hurt at the end of the day. And I don't know if there is such a thing, but if you could find a magic dishwasher that could do the dishes after dinner, I know my mom would like one of those, too.

Amanda Mittlestadt

Also, could you maybe stop by my daddy's house on your way and bring him here so I could see him on Christmas morning? That would be the best surprise ever, Santa! There were some other things I wanted to talk to you about too. Now, I'm not quite sure you can do anything about these problems, but I thought I'd ask you anyway, 'cause you never know.

So I wanted to know if you could do anything about all the stuff that's on TV. I know I'm only 7 years old, but do those TV guys actually think I still want to watch Barney? And if I don't, then I have to watch really adult shows like "ER" or "Ally McBeal." There's nothing for kids that isn't a cartoon or a show with a bunch of silly songs. I want something that's fun and educational. So if you could maybe talk to the people at PBS and ABC and tell them to run stuff that isn't really for kids but not really for adults either, that would be cool.

Someone needs to do something about our schools, too. I thought that since you're in every city on the same night this month, maybe you could leave a note on all the principals' desks or something. First, there are a lot of rules about what we can't wear to school — and I'm only in second grade! They don't want any kids wearing shirts with naughty words on them, so they don't let us wear shirts with any words on them. But I don't think this rule really applies to second-graders. I just wanna wear my favorite shirt, but I can't 'cause it says 'NSync on it. That's not a naughty word!

But more important, I want somebody to do something about the teachers. It's not that they're bad teachers — I love all my teachers. But because they don't get paid enough, they worry about money all the time instead of kids. So I was thinking, if they got paid a little more ('cause they deserve it), then I could learn a lot more in school.

Also, Santa, I know my mom said you know every boy and girl in the world, but I was wondering if the children in Afghanistan celebrated Christmas, too. I've been watching some of the news, and I think they're a different religion than us. If they don't celebrate Christmas, could you take them some presents anyway? I feel bad for them, 'cause they don't have very much, even without the war.

I hope all the reindeer are doing well. Have a safe trip around the world. Thanks, Santa.

Merry Christmas,

Production of The Music Man draws unhappy demonstrators

By Jacque Stolz
 Special to The Daily Iowan

Although Iowa native Meredith Willson wrote a song about "Trouble in River City" for his classic The Music Man, he probably never imagined that a certain production of the play would bring so much trouble to Iowa City.

Around 30 local union members and union sympathizers picketed in front of Hancher Auditorium's main entrance before the musical's opening show on Dec. 4. Demonstrators quietly carried signs, usually only speaking to ask patrons to take a flier explaining their two grievances: most of the performers in this particular production are not unionized, and the belief that Hancher subcontracted work that should have gone to permanent, union-member employees.

Actors Equity Association, the union for professional stage actors and managers, called for a boycott of the traveling production of The Music Man earlier this fall when the theater company producing the show opted not to negotiate a contract with the union. Big League Theatrical performances of The Music Man in Des Moines and Cleveland have already been transformed into picket lines.

Actors Equity has issues with the New York-based company's production of The Music Man because of the recent successful Broadway revival of the musical. According to an Actors Equity press release, many shows featuring non-union actors tour each year, but these are usually shows that have already toured off-Broadway for many years under union contracts.

Equity officials have expressed concern for the rights of actors who perform in The Music Man with no union representation. They claim that while theater patrons are charged "Broadway prices," the actors are paid from one-third to one-half of the minimum salary that union actors receive, with no insurance or pensions.

"I don't think it's clear-cut in this world that every American must select a union and give a portion of their pay to that union," said Dan Sher, the executive producer of Big League Theatricals. "As far as salaries, our actors are well-paid and well-compensated for living expenses. They are employed for one year straight, and they pay no money for housing."

Demonstrators quietly carried signs, usually only speaking to ask patrons to take a flier explaining their two grievances: most of the performers in this particular production are not unionized, and the belief that Hancher subcontracted work that should have gone to permanent, union-member employees.

Hancher was interested in welcoming an Equity-supported version of The Music Man, but that tour was canceled when its producers decided that it wouldn't be economically feasible. Rather than have no touring production of the musical, Willson's estate granted Big League Theatricals permission to produce a non-union version.

Hancher typically shows cases both Equity and non-Equity shows every year. "Quality is always a big concern for us," said Charles Swanson, Hancher's director of administration. "We have done business with Big League Theatricals for a long time, and they have brought wonderful, non-Equity shows to us before."

"It's very important to support actors in every sense of the word," Swanson said when asked if he had concerns for non-unionized actors. "Actors Equity represents some of the actors in America, but there are a lot of people who are not members of the Actors Equity."

One Iowa City resident attending the show Dec. 4 knows firsthand about supporting non-Equity performers.

"My daughter is a singer in New York, and she would be very happy to work as a non-Equity performer," said Jan Denehy after walking through the picketers. "I can see both sides of it. Actors need decent salaries, but they also need work. It's a hard issue."

But many of the protesters on hand Tuesday night were present to publicize an entirely different local issue.

The protest in front of Hancher was organized by the local chapter of the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees. AFSCME Local 12 members believe that Hancher has been acting in direct violation of contract, subcontracting work that should have gone to two machinists laid off in August. University officials say otherwise.

"There is not really an issue here," said Kevin Ward, the director of labor relations within the university, "because there was not work available for these people. There is no part-time engineer research and design work at Hancher, and [there] has not been since May of this year."

Local AFSCME members feel differently about the matter, and say they've got the signs to prove it.

"That's the third story they've given us," said protest-organizer David Manuel after being told of Ward's official comment on the matter. "We know that they subcontracted the work out, which is a violation."

Many theater patrons were taken off-guard by the protesters. Comments on the picket ran from support to disgust to apathy.

"I don't think much of them," said Iowa City resident Wayne Balmer.

"It's sort of out of place at an event like this," said his wife, Noralee.

Some ticket holders, however, said they supported the unions.

"I'm sorry I already bought my ticket," said Niles Ross, a Cedar Rapids man wearing a green ribbon to show support for the demonstrators. "This is terrible."

"I had two people tell me that they don't cross picket lines, and they left," said Charles Hays, a member of the local chapter of the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students (COGS).

Hays and members from many local union groups picketed Dec. 4 to protest the issues at hand and to demonstrate union solidarity.

The protesters began to dissipate as show time rolled around, and the last few stragglers ran by. There was a feeling of accomplishment in that grievances had been aired.

"It was a nice little turn-out on a nice night," said Manuel. "This is about what we expected."

Coincidental mysteries of life and love

Film: The Princess and the Warrior
Director: Tom Tykwer
Writer: Tykwer
Starring: Franka Potente and Benno Furrmann
Length: 130 minutes
Rated: R

German filmmaker Tom Tykwer's superb breakthrough film, Run Lola Run, combined thumping techno music, flashy editing, and a fractured, frenetic storyline to overload the senses. Tykwer's followup, The Princess and the Warrior, doesn't try to assault the senses so much as it endeavors to engage them — to compel its characters, and, by extension, the audience, to connect with the sights, sounds, and smells that surround them.

Consider the crucial scene near the beginning. Sissi, a nurse at a mental hospital played by the dazzling star of Run Lola Run, Franka Potente, is hit by a truck while crossing the street. When she awakes after briefly being knocked unconscious, the first thing she notices is the silence. "Actually, I always liked silence," her voice-over explains. "But not this silence. Something was missing. My... breath. Help!"

Miraculously, Sissi's plea is answered by a former soldier named Bodo (Benno Furrmann). I won't explain exactly how he saves her life because that would spoil some of the suspense. Suffice it to say that anyone who has seen Atom Egoyan's brilliant film The Sweet Hereafter, or read Russell Banks' novel, will have some idea where the scene is going.

But even more intriguing than Bodo's heroics is Tykwer's attention to detail and his heightened awareness of the senses. When Bodo leaves her for a moment, Sissi notices that her bottom itches. "I thought maybe I'd never be able to scratch myself again," she laments. The sound of

At night she dreams of her rescuer. She successfully seeks him out. We learn that he and his brother are planning to rob a bank and leave for Australia. We also discover that Bodo has been dealing with his own emotional problems since his wife's death. He doesn't want Sissi in his life, but the two are brought together to redeem each other through a confluence of chance and circumstance, a series of coincidences that raises many of the same questions about fate and destiny that Tykwer examined previously in Run Lola Run, handled here with the sensitivity of a Paul Auster novel. Tykwer draws the film's conclusion out a bit too long, tacking on what is probably an unnecessary plot revelation about a crime that had been committed in the mental hospital. But whether he's bombarding us with style, or subtly provoking our senses, The Princess and the Warrior solidifies Tykwer's status as one of today's pre-eminent European filmmakers, who with each film extracts meaning from the simple mysteries of everyday life and fate and love.

WRESTLING, MEN'S BASKETBALL TEAMS WIN IN AMES

They came, they saw

Mike Zadick leads Iowa to its 28th consecutive win over the Cyclones

Ali Noller
 The Daily Iowan

Mike Zadick knew it would be important for him to set a high standard for Iowa in its intense intrastate rivalry match against Iowa State on Sunday.

What he didn't know was that he would wrestle in the last match and that it would prove to be the final triumph in Iowa's 28th-consecutive victory over the Iowa State Cyclones, 21-16.

"I felt extremely confident heading into the match," Zadick said. "I like to start [the match] out, but I was satisfied with the draw and I didn't think about the pressure."

Iowa coach Jim Zalesky agreed that it was only appropriate that the final match would come down to top-ranked Zadick and Iowa State's fifth-ranked Billy Maldonado, the only pair that had previously met on the mat in an Iowa-Iowa State dual. Zadick's win marked his fifth over Maldonado and his seventh victory of the season.

"It felt really good to be back on the mat," Zadick said, having been sidelined for the past few weeks because of a rib injury.

Senior 133-pounder Marc Juergens also played a pivotal role in the victory, dominating the mat in the final period for a 4-1 win over sixth-ranked Zach Roberson. After a scoreless first period, Roberson escaped with 1:57 to go in the second period for his only point. Juergens then escaped with 1:45 to go in the final period, and scored a takedown to seal his 12th victory of the season and three team points for the Hawkeyes.

"Marc hasn't been in there [the varsity lineup] before this year," Zalesky said. "But he took a tough match, in a split second, and gave himself a chance to earn some confidence on the mat."

Juergens has been waiting patiently in line for a starting position as an Iowa wrestler for the past four years behind his three-time All-American brother, Eric. This was a breakthrough match that allowed him to show his own dominance on the mat.

"I just tried to wrestle my match and stay in control," Juergens said.

The 157-pound weight was chosen as the opening match in the randomly selected weight draw preceding the meet, bringing Matt Anderson up as the first Hawkeye competitor against ISU's Matt Veach.

Anderson, ranked 13th, notched a 3-0 victory over sophomore Matt Veach for the Iowa lead, 3-0. Cory Connell came next at 165, suffering a pin in his varsity debut match against top-ranked Joe Heskett. Connell, who has wrestled at 149 or 157 this season, stepped up for senior Ben Shirk, who is out with a hamstring and shoulder injury.

"When you go up against Heskett, you have to be healthy," Zalesky said of deciding to go with Connell at 165 instead of the injured Shirk. Connell's loss gave ISU the lead, 6-3.

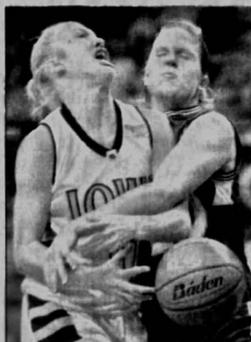

Iowa's Tyler Nixt earned a 10-4 decision over sophomore Nick Passolano, tying up the team scores at 6, followed by a decision by eighth-ranked Jessman Smith at 174 over ISU's 11th-ranked Austen

Hawks dominate home tourney

By Roseanna Smith
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's basketball team not only hosted the Gazette Hawkeye Challenge on Dec. 7-8, it dominated in every measurable way, winning the championship, 76-65, over Kent State.

Senior guard Lindsey Meder was the tournament's MVP, scoring a season-high 28 points against the Golden Flashes. She also had nine assists and zero turnovers in the game.

Hawkeye senior Jerica Watson and sophomore Jennie Lillis were voted to the all-tournament team as well. Watson had a career high with seven blocks, breaking the Carver-Hawkeye Arena record of six set in 1994 by Cathy Marx. Watson tied Tangela Smith's individual-season record set in 1995. Lillis scored 10 points and had five assists.

Kate Miller and Christi Shibata from Kent State and Deanna Jackson from the University of Alabama, Birmingham, were also named to the all-tournament team.

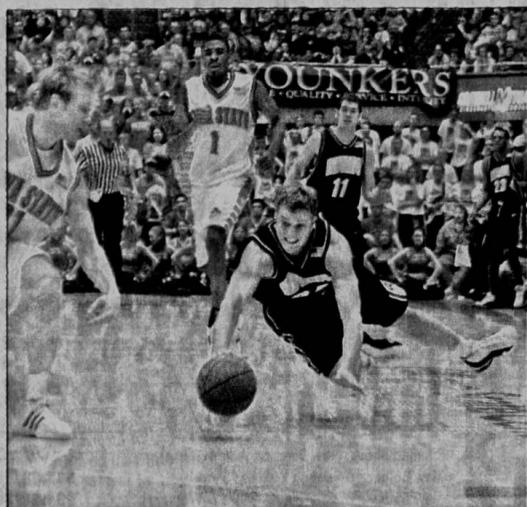

"It's a great honor," Meder said. "It's a fun tournament to play in and as my last tournament here, I wanted it to be a special one. I'm proud of the way we played tonight."

Iowa took command of the game from the outset, leading in the second half by as many as 15 points. But it was defensive intensity through the weekend that most impressed Iowa coach Lisa Bluder.

"Our defense was good; we forced turnovers and set the tone early," she said.

Watson had five of her seven blocks in the first half, and the

Hawks find hunger again

Iowa thoroughly dominates Iowa State, 78-53

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

AMES — Following the Dec. 4 loss to Northern Iowa, Iowa basketball coach Steve Alford did not allow the team bus to stop for food on the way home from Cedar Falls. Four days later, the Hawkeyes were clearly still famished.

A hungry Iowa team dominated rival Iowa State, 78-53, on the road, equaling the Cyclones' worst defeat ever in Hilton Coliseum. The victory also put the team back in Alford's good graces, ensuring there would be a post-game meal.

"He's pretty happy right now," guard Luke Recker said of Alford. "We like to keep Coach Alford happy."

Led by Reggie Evans' 24 points and 17 rebounds, the No. 12 Hawkeyes let ISU feel much of the frustration that resulted from their 78-76 loss to the Panthers. Iowa improved to 7-3 for the year and showed everyone who saw the game, including Alford, just what it is able to do as a team.

"We've got to take this game and build from it," Alford said. "That's a little bit of what this team can do if we keep working. We need this."

Iowa pounded the Cyclones on the boards, pulling down 47 rebounds to just 24 for Iowa State. It also held the Cyclones to 35 percent shooting on the game, including 0-8 from beyond the 3-point arc. It was far from the ideal showing Iowa State coach Larry Eustachy had hoped for from his team.

"We needed to play a perfect game just to be in it [tonight], and we weren't even close to being perfect," he said.

After Pierre Pierce matched a jumper by Tyray Pearson to open scoring, Iowa never relinquished the lead except for a 5-5 tie. After flirting with double-digit leads on numerous occasions, a pair of free throws by Evans at the 1:33 mark

Cyclone devouring just what the Hawkeyes needed

When I was about 6 years old, my mom charged me a whole dollar for putting too much Parmesan cheese on my spaghetti. I just couldn't get enough of the grated goodness. Come to think of it, maybe someone should have fined the Iowa men's basketball team for putting too much of a hurt on Iowa State over the weekend.

Nah, the big victory was just what the Hawkeyes needed.

The Hawkeyes poured

Tyler Lechtenberg

pounds of grated Parmesan all over the Cyclones by focusing on the details and trouncing

ing their in-state rivals by 25 points on Dec. 8. Rebounds, free throws, taken charges, and strong Hawkeye execution on both ends of the floor left ISU coach Larry Eustachy's hand helplessly grasping for a rabbit to pull out of his "Hilton magic" hat.

For the first time since the opening week of the season, Iowa maintained a solid level of play for 40 minutes, as a 12-point halftime lead more than doubled for the final tally. Increased passing, more precise cutting, and a drop in the number of forced shots kept Iowa in control and the Hilton Coliseum crowd out of the game.

Sure, Iowa State made some runs at Iowa, but with a patient attitude the Hawkeyes were able to nail the big baskets when they needed them most. Never panicking, the Hawkeyes turned an Iowa State second-half rally into a game-breaking run of their own to put the game out of reach at 61-43.

Iowa's defense, especially in the second half, was some of the stiffest guarding Hawkeye fans have seen this season. Iowa forced the Cyclones into a paltry 28 percent shooting after halftime. Freshman Pierre Pierce and junior Chauncey Leslie shut down Iowa State's quick-recovering Jake Sullivan, who returned from an MCL injury just in time for the Iowa game.

Solid execution led to utter

NFL ROUNDUP

Rams too tough; Green Bay chills Bears

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Marshall Faulk scored two touchdowns, and Kurt Warner threw for two as the St. Louis Rams won a matchup of NFC West leaders Sunday, defeating the San Francisco 49ers, 27-14.

The victory, coupled with the Bears' loss at Green Bay, gave St. Louis the best record in the conference (10-2).

Faulk ran for a six-yard score in the first quarter, and his three-yard touchdown catch put the Rams ahead, 21-7, at the half en route to a season sweep of the 49ers (9-3). Faulk, who has scored five touchdowns the last two weeks, had 88 yards on 25 carries and five catches for 19 yards.

Warner was 26-for-42 for 294 yards and one interception, also hitting Ricky Proehl for a 15-yard score in the first quarter.

Packers 17, Bears 7

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Ahman Green ran for 125 yards and a touchdown, and Brett Favre got career victory No. 100 as Green Bay took over the top spot in the NFC Central.

Both teams are 9-3, but the Packers swept Chicago, which lost on the road for the first time since the season opener against Baltimore.

Green rushed 29 times and also had 49 yards on two receptions from Favre, who improved to 100-53 as a starter, including 16-4 against Chicago.

Favre finished 15-of-27 for 207 yards, with one touchdown pass and an interception. He went over 3,000 yards passing for the 10th-straight year, breaking the NFL mark he shared with Dan Marino.

Bucs 15, Lions 12

TAMPA, Fla. — Keyshawn Johnson caught a 13-yard touchdown pass with 45 seconds remaining, his first scoring reception of the season, and Tampa Bay kept Detroit on track for a winless season.

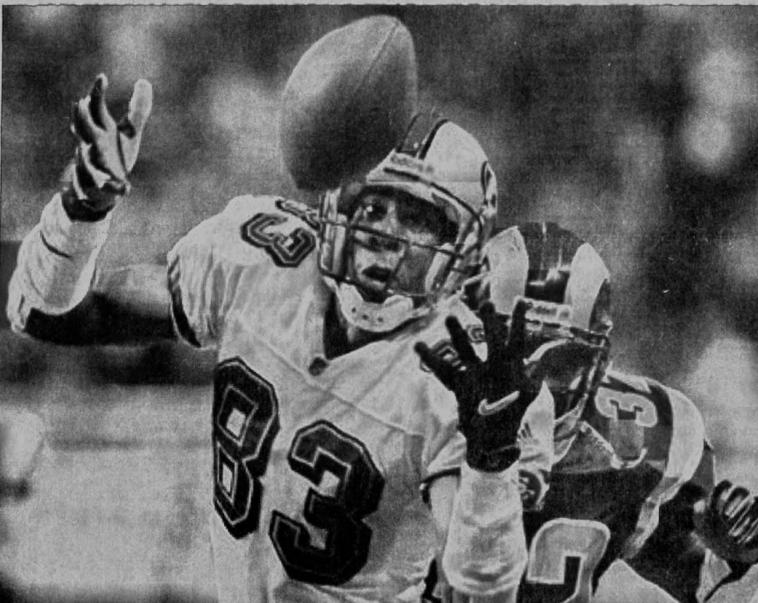

Johnson had 10 receptions for 101 yards, including a 15-yard catch on fourth-and-8 to keep the game-winning, 80-yard drive alive at the Detroit 13. His final catch gave him 93 for the season, a career high.

It was the third-straight win for Tampa Bay, heading into a tough stretch in which the Bucs (7-5) will face Chicago, New Orleans, Baltimore, and Philadelphia.

Eagles 24, Chargers 14

PHILADELPHIA — Donovan McNabb passed for 221 yards and two touchdowns, and Brian Dawkins returned a fumble 49 yards for a TD for Philadelphia against San Diego.

Doug Flutie threw for 307 yards and two TDs against the NFL's top-ranked pass defense but couldn't prevent the Chargers from losing their sixth-consecutive game after opening 5-2.

Cowboys 20, Giants 13

IRVING, Texas — Quincy Carter rallied Dallas from a 10-point deficit, throwing for a career-best 194 yards and running for a crucial first down.

The Cowboys (4-8) won their second-straight since the rookie quarterback returned to the lineup. The victory ended a three-game losing streak against New York.

The loss put the Giants (5-7) in serious jeopardy of not making the playoffs a year after reaching the Super Bowl.

New York scored on three of its first four possessions. Dallas found itself down, 13-3, without a first down and with Carter having minus-2 yards passing.

Saints 28, Falcons 10

ATLANTA — Deuce McAllister tossed a touchdown pass from his halfback position, then broke free for a 54-yard scoring run in the fourth quarter, lifting New Orleans over Atlanta.

Cheered on by thousands of gold-clad fans who turned the Georgia Dome into Superdome North, the Saints (7-5) came up with a critical victory in the NFC wild-card race. They reversed an Oct. 21 loss to the Falcons (6-6), who have dropped two in a row at home and are 2-5 at the Georgia Dome.

McAllister threw a 12-yard scoring pass to Willie Jackson, and the 54-yard run was McAllister's only carry of the day.

The Saints also sacked Falcons quarterback Chris Chandler nine times.

Bills 25, Panthers 24

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Brandon Spoon returned an interception 44 yards for a touchdown, and Travis Henry scored on a 1-yard plunge, rallying Buffalo from an 18-point deficit.

The Bills (2-10), who snapped a six-game losing streak, came back against a Carolina team (1-12) that has lost 12 straight, including nine in which the Panthers had the lead or were tied in the second half.

Trailing 24-6, the Bills' comeback began when Alex Van Pelt hit Peerless Price for a seven-yard touchdown with 1 second left in the first half. Spoon's interception return cut Carolina's lead to 24-19 in the third quarter, and Henry's dive with 7:51 remaining finished the rally.

Patriots 27, Browns 16

FOXBORO, Mass. — Antowain Smith ran for two touchdowns, and New England (8-5) forced four turnovers against Cleveland.

The Patriots, 7-2 in their last nine games, finish the season against two of the NFL's weakest teams, Buffalo and Carolina, on the road, and then Miami at home.

Tim Couch threw three interceptions for the Browns, 6-6 after going 5-27 the last two seasons.

New England's Tom Brady, despite allowing Corey Fuller's touchdown on a 49-yard interception return, was 19-of-28 for 218 yards and two touchdowns.

Bluder happy with Iowa's defense during tourney win

W. BASKETBALL

Hawkeyes made six steals and created 12 first-half turnovers for the Golden Flashes.

Iowa took a 35-27 lead into halftime, but Kent State mounted opposition with six early points from center Andrea Cszszar. The Golden Flashes shadowed the Hawkeyes closely through the second half, but each time the Hawks were able to maintain and extend their lead.

Freshman Jenna Armstrong scored back-to-back 3-pointers at 9:41 and 8:56, adding to a pair of free throws and a lay-up from Jennie Lillis to keep Iowa out front each time Kent State narrowed the Hawkeyes' advantage.

"They were within five or six, and we couldn't quite get over that hurdle," Bluder said. "I think that's the really big benefit of playing at home — when they get within five or six, the home crowd is really behind you and you're able to sustain the lead."

At 6-6, Cszszar created match-up problems down low for the Hawkeyes, but she sat out much of the second half with four fouls.

Golden Flashes coach Bob Lindsay said Watson in particular caused problems for his team down low.

"We struggled with Watson's athleticism," he said. "We don't have anyone who matches well against her. With foul trouble, Andrea is an excellent player who showed it, but she fouled out after 18 minutes."

Kent State's zone defense allowed Iowa to showcase its superior shooting from outside the arc. Meder went 5-10, and 18 of the Hawkeyes' 25 first-half points came from behind the 3-point line.

In the second half, Iowa tried to make more use of post play, an area, Bluder said, could have been used more throughout the game.

"We talked about getting the ball inside, and with the zone could have gotten it inside more," she said. "Our guards need to do a better job reading when the posts are open, because that's what makes our offense tick."

The Iowa offense was in its prime on Dec. 7 in the first round of the tournament, when the Hawkeyes routed the University of Texas Pan-American, 86-38.

In the opening six minutes, five of Iowa's six steals were converted for 10 points. Watson and Lillis each had two steals in the first half, three in the game. The Hawkeyes took a 54-21 advantage into halftime and went on a 10-0 run to open the second half. Kelli Kreuser added a point from the free-throw line at 16:25, before Iowa's next 11-0 run for a 74-22 lead.

Bluder was most happy with the defensive intensity but said the team's 24 turnovers were an issue that would have to be addressed.

"The glaring things were the turnovers, and most of those came when the game was not in doubt," she said. "We talk about playing like it's always a one-point game. That many turnovers is inexcusable."

All of the Hawkeyes came off the bench in the 48-point victory, and all but two averaged more than 10 minutes.

"It was nice. Our whole team got in there," Lillis said. "It was awesome to be able to do that."

Iowa, now at 6-2, travels next to Ames in search of its portion of intrastate pride and to avenge last year's 86-76 loss at home. Tip off is scheduled for Wednesday at 7 p.m.; the game will be televised on KCRG, Channel 9.

Hawkeyes take advantage of ISU's youth and inexperience

pushed Iowa to a 37-26 advantage. The Hawkeyes mounted a 12-point lead at the half, 40-28, behind 47 percent shooting, which included 5-7 from 3-point range.

An early second-half run by the Cyclones revitalized a crowd of 14,103, after a pair of free throws from Jake Sullivan and a basket by Omar Bynum pared the Iowa lead to just five points at 42-37. The Cyclones remained within striking distance before three-straight triples snuffed out any momentum Iowa State had found. Glen Worley hit a 3-point attempt at the 10:31 mark to pull up Iowa's lead, 51-41.

Following a pair of free throws by ISU's Shane Power, Ryan Hogan hit a 3 the next trip down the floor, and Chauncey Leslie connected from beyond the arc, giving the Hawkeyes a 57-43 lead. From that point on, the Hawkeyes out-scored Iowa State, 21-10, en route to a comfortable victory.

The Cyclones' youth and inexperience was a contributing factor in the loss, with sophomore Marcus Jefferson and freshman Jared Homan both fouling out in the second half of the contest.

"It was clearly a battle of 18, 19, and 20-year olds playing against guys 21, 22, and 23," Iowa State guard Shane Power said. "[Jared] Homan tried his butt off, but he's 19 going against 23-year-old [Evans]."

Power finished second for the Cyclones in scoring with 17, behind Pearson's 20 points.

"That's the name of the game — wear 'em out, foul 'em out," said Evans. "We took advantage of them."

domination on the boards, as Iowa out-rebounded the Cyclones, 47-24. This was not only attributed to the Hawkeyes' height advantage; ISU normally controls the boards, coming into the game with a plus-13.4 rebounding average over its opponents.

Iowa, led by the five seniors, just kept pouring it on, especially in the passion and guts categories. Duez Henderson took two charges in the first half. Luke Recker had four steals. Reggie Evans grabbed 17 rebounds. Neither Ryan Hogan nor Rod Thompson missed a shot. Overall, the Hawkeyes shot 83 percent from the free-throw line, their best performance since the season opener, and they forced two Cyclones to foul out.

But Recker's performance was perhaps most indicative of Iowa's attitude as a whole. The senior had been struggling with his shot coming into the game, shooting 31 percent on 3-pointers, but he canned three of four from behind the line by taking his shots when they came to him. Although nothing stood out on his stat line, Recker set the tone for his teammates by not forcing the issue on offense or taking bad shots.

The Hawkeyes had an outstanding game on Dec. 8, but can they keep it going for the rest of the season? The only answer to that question is a raise of the eyebrows, a shrug of the shoulders, and a big "Who knows?" Remember, this is a team that lost to Northern Iowa just four days earlier. But if Alford keeps his team focused on just that — the team — truckloads of Parmesan cheese are due in Iowa City for the Hawkeyes to bury their future opponents. My guess is these Hawkeyes won't be able to get enough of the taste of victory.

Alabama to play Iowa State in bowl

AMES (AP) — Iowa State finally has an opponent in the Independence Bowl, and it's the school that has played in more bowls than anyone.

Alabama accepted an invitation on Sunday to play Iowa State in the Dec. 27 game at Shreveport, La. It will be the 51st bowl appearance for the Crimson Tide, who stood 3-5 at one point, then won their final three regular-season games to become bowl-eligible.

"I don't think there will be any team as fired up about a bowl game as us," first-year coach Dennis Franchione said. "The kids have been as enthused, and almost feisty, as I've seen them."

Iowa State (7-4) accepted its invitation a week ago. It will be the sixth bowl trip for the Cyclones.

Alabama was chosen for the game ahead of Mississippi (7-4), which beat the Crimson Tide, 27-24. That was one of three close losses for Alabama, which lost to UCLA, 20-17, and to South Carolina, 37-36.

The Tide's other losses were to LSU and Tennessee.

Earlier, it appeared Alabama would play in the Music City Bowl and Arkansas would play Iowa State. But LSU's upset of Tennessee in the Southeastern Conference championship game changed the bowl picture for the SEC schools. Arkansas is going to the Cotton and Georgia to the Music City Bowl.

"Palmer was tired by the end of the match," Smith said. "So I kept on wrestling hard."

Sophomore Ryan Fulsaa fell to highly touted, three-time national champion Cael Sanderson, who earned career victory No. 133 by pinning Fulsaa in 1:41.

Freshman heavyweight Steve Mocco came up with a 9-5 decision over senior Mark Knauer, tying the score at 12-12.

"It's just not smart to go underneath a guy that weighs 270 pounds," ISU coach Bobby Douglas said of Knauer's strategy. "We have made technical

The victory improved Mocco's mark to 13-0 for the season, but Zalesky emphasized that there is still room for improvement for this freshman wrestler.

said. Ninth-ranked sophomore Luke Eustice decisioned Ty Malia, 8-3, followed by Juergen's decision that stretched the Hawkeye lead to 18-12. With only two matches remaining, an enthusiastic crowd saw ISU's Aaron Holker major-decision Luke Moffitt, closing the Iowa lead to 18-16 before Zadick's win.

Douglas, who has never defeated Iowa in his 10 years as the Cyclone's head coach, expressed his dismay with the loss.

"We've got to work a lot harder, or this streak [of Iowa dominance] is not going to stop," he said.

Betts and Sanders named 2001 Hawkeye co-MVPs

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Iowa took a small break from Alamo Bowl preparations to hand out its 2001 team awards at a banquet Dec. 8.

Senior running back Ladell Betts and sophomore cornerback Bob Sanders were co-recipients of the Roy J. Carver Most Valuable Player Award.

Betts, who was also a second-team All-Big Ten selection, rushed for 1,056 yards this year, surpassing the 1,000-yard plateau for two consecutive seasons. The Blue Springs, Mo., native is the first Hawkeye to lead the team in rushing for four-straight seasons. He is second on Iowa's all-time rushing chart with 3,682 yards. Sedrick Shaw leads the list with 4,156.

Betts also ranks third in career rushing-touchdowns, with 25, and 10th in career points, with 162.

Sanders has been around the Hawkeye football program for just two seasons and only has 18 career starts, but the 5-8, 194-pound hard-hitter from Erie, Pa., has already established himself as one of Iowa's most talented players, evidenced by his team-high 111 tackles and three interceptions this year.

Sanders was a first-team All-Big Ten selection and received the National Defensive Player of the Week award following his 25 tackles against Indiana on Oct. 20.

The Hayden Fry "Extra Heartbeat" Award was given to senior defensive end Aaron Kampman. The award, named after legendary former

Sanders Betts

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry, goes to the player who pushes a little harder on the practice and game field.

Along with Sanders and junior Eric Steinbach, Kampman, a Kesley, Iowa, native, also landed on the Big Ten's first team after posting a conference-best nine sacks. Kampman was the Hawkeyes' third leading tackler with 92 and ranks seventh on Iowa's all-time tackle charts with 338 stops.

Kampman was also given the Forest Evashevski Scholastic Achievement Award for his accomplishments in the classroom. He is an elementary-education major.

In addition to these four awards, a number of others were presented.

The 2001 Coaches' Appreciation Awards went to junior linemen Andy Lightfoot and Bruce Nelson on offense, senior tackle Jerry Montgomery and senior cornerback Matt Stockdale on defense, and junior Derek Pagel and senior Tim Dodge on special teams.

Sophomore place-kicker Nate Kaeding was named Special Teams Specialist of the Year, and senior Kahlil Hill was given the overall Special Teams Player of the Year award.

On Dec. 6, in Lake Buena

Vista, Fla., Hill was named the Mosi Tatupu Special Teams Player of the Year. Hill beat out nine other finalists, including Kansas State's Aaron Lockett, Nebraska's Keyou Craver, and Miami's Phillip Buchannon.

Hill averaged 11.9 yards on 19 punt returns and returned 12 kickoffs for an average of 26.1 yards.

The Hawkeye Hustle Awards went to sophomore tight end Dallas Clark and senior wide receiver Chris Oliver on offense. Defensively, the honors went to Sanders and senior linebacker Mike Dolezal. The special-teams recipients were junior Scott Boleyn and freshman Sean Considine.

Clark also received the 2001 Iron Hawk Award.

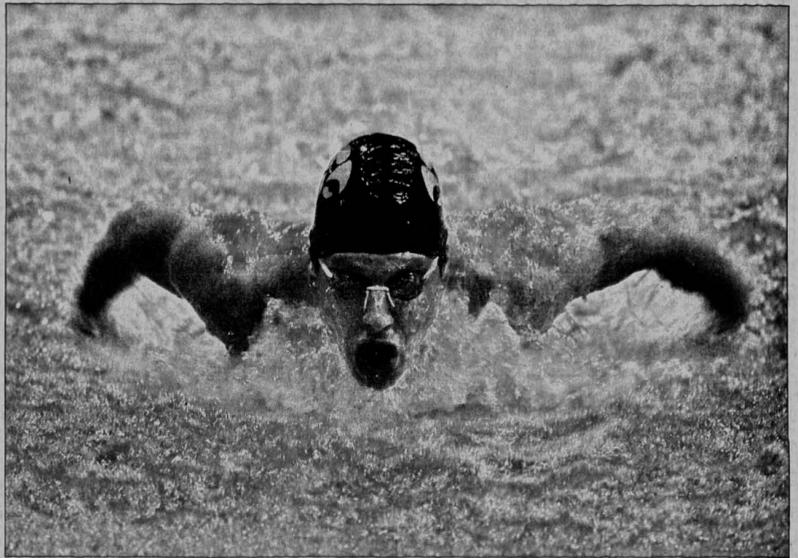

Freshman offensive lineman Ben Cronin and junior Will Lack were given the Team Leader Awards on offense, while sophomore lineman O.J. Payne and freshman defensive back Chad Greenway were recognized on defense.

Senior quarterback Kyle McCann, along with Betts, Kampman, Stockdale, and Pagel were named the 2001 permanent captains, and these five players will serve as Iowa's captains in the Dec. 29 Alamo Bowl.

Tickets for the 2:30 p.m. game against Texas Tech in San Antonio are still available, and fans are encouraged to order the $30.50 tickets through the Athletics Department.

IOWA MEN'S SWIMMING

The Iowa men's swimming team had little trouble winning its first home dual meet of the season. It swept every event en route to a 200-85 victory over Northern Iowa at the Field House pool Dec. 7. The win improved Iowa's record to 1-2.

It was a complete team effort, but Marko Milenkovic stood out. He broke the Field House pool record set by coach John Davey in the 400-individual medley (3:56.01). The senior won the event by nearly 20 seconds.

"It was pretty good considering I swam three events before that," he said.

Milenkovic also placed first in both the 100-backstroke

(0:51.73) and the 200-backstroke (1:50.28). "My 100- and 200-backstroke times were my best this season," he said. "I'm progressing."

Milenkovic wasn't the only Hawkeye to dominate his events. Jay Buys won both the 50-freestyle (0:21.83) and the 100-free (0:47.51). Also winning in the freestyle events were Chris George in the 200-free

(1:44.37), Andrei Prada in the 500-free (4:42.00), and Cody Hackney in the 1,000-free (10:01.48).

Chris Brunson placed first in both the 100-breaststroke (0:57.42) and the 200-breast (2:08.27). Jason Snider took first in the 100-fly (0:50.56) and the 200-fly (1:52.15). Simon Chrisander won both the 1-meter (320.02) and 3-meter (346.12) dives.

"We were expecting to win," said Milenkovic. "Many of the guys were pretty ready to swim."

Iowa's next meet is a double dual meet, when Minnesota and Indiana come to Iowa City on Jan. 26.

MEN'S AND WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Hawks look good in scrimmage

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Gymnasts Alexis Maday and Shane de Freitas started this season where they left off last spring as both the men and women's gymnastics teams began promising seasons at the Black and Gold intrasquad scrimmage Dec. 8.

An overflow crowd packed the Field House North Gym to catch a free peek at what could be a terrific season for both programs. The gold team edged the black squad, 302.55 to 301.360, in a friendly competition. The men are ranked No. 7 in the country. The women's poll hasn't come out yet.

Maday didn't disappoint the large crowd. Despite missing most of practice with a torn triceps, the sophomore dazzled the celebrity judges, netting a perfect 10 on the floor exercise and a superb 9.975 on the balance beam.

The reigning Big Ten all-around and floor-exercise champion, Maday is taking on more difficult routines this season in a quest to be considered one of the best gymnasts in the country.

"She stepped up from right where she left off," said women's coach Mike Lorenzen. "She's going to take another step this year. She's even upgrading her routines, and she's performing with a lot of confidence."

Starting his final season, de Freitas won the still rings and tied junior Cameron Schick for the high-bar crown. Men's head coach Tom Dunn complimented his senior, who also is trying out new routines for the upcoming season.

Dunn said many of his athletes are working on various new twists, jumps, and flips. The men used professional judges so that their scores could predict those of the regular season.

"There are a lot of new moves," he said. "It's good to try it here rather than our first meet. Now, we can go back to practice and improve or take the moves out. We have plenty of time before the season starts in January."

Lorenzen also appreciated the chance to see his team perform in a competitive setting, particularly the women's highly touted freshman class, which received its first taste of a college meet.

Annie Rue lived up to her billing, nailing a 10 on uneven bars, a 9.83 on the floor exercise, and 9.8 on both vault and balance beam. Kelley Kello also performed well, with a 9.85 on beam followed by an exciting 9.83 on floor. Mindy Levitz was similarly mistake-free in all four events.

"All three didn't miss anything," Lorenzen said. "That's 12-for-12, which is exactly what we wanted."

Junior Janna Alexandrova scored a 10 on the balance beam. She is expected to be one of the best beam performers in the country. Sophomore Brandy Killian also put together a solid afternoon, tying for first in the vault and second on the beam.

On the men's side, senior Don Jackson captured the pommel-horse crown with an 8.9. Sophomore Antonio Cesar was second after earning All-American honors in that event last season.

Sophomore Mike Kelly's 8.95 was good enough for the floor-exercise crown, while senior Andy Thornton easily took the vault title with a strong 9.45. Sophomore Eric Block won the parallel bars with an 8.45.

"The routines were a little rough, but that is expected at this point," Dunn said. "We don't want to be at best until March and April."

In other news, the men signed an athlete for the 2003 season. Michael Reavis, a talented gymnast from Tallahassee, Fla., signed with Iowa last week. He has won numerous Florida titles while competing with Trousdell Gymnastics Center.

The Iowa women open play Jan. 13 at Nebraska. The men will compete in the Windy City Invitational Jan. 12 in Chicago.

Womens swimmers fall to Iowa State

By Travis Brown
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swimming and diving team traveled to Ames on Dec. 8 and came away with a tough 170.5-128.5 loss to Iowa State. The Cyclones, a much-improved team from last season, won despite finishing two spots behind the Hawks at the Minnesota Invitational on Nov. 23-25.

"We knew that it was going to be closer than at the Minnesota Invite but didn't expect them to do as well as they did," said coach Garland O'Keeffe. "We weren't prepared for how well they swam."

Iowa freshman Jennifer Skolaski was the star of the meet, winning all three of her events and setting a Beyer Hall pool record in the 200-meter backstroke in a time of 2:03.15.

"We swam really well; they just swam out of their minds," O'Keeffe said. "There were a lot of close races. Caitlin Girdley took second in the 100-back [0:57.72] with a lifetime-best time by half a second. Erin Strub took second in the 50- and 100-free with outstanding times. Allison Lyle held off in the 100-breast for the win. In the 200-breast, she got second, but it was an NCAA B cut and her fastest of the season."

Laura Maldonado won the 1-meter dive (262.58), and Nancilea Underwood topped her teammate in the three-meter dive (291.37).

"The divers dove really well,"

O'Keeffe said. "For them to dive that well in the middle of the season is really outstanding and a sign for good things to come in February and March."

Despite great individual performances, the Hawks as a whole came up just short. "The story of the meet was super-close races and great times that just weren't good enough for the win," O'Keeffe said.

The meet was the last of the semester for Iowa, which enters Winter Break with a record of 1-4. The team will travel to Hawaii on Jan. 3 for training and competition. The Hawks' next meet will be at Notre Dame on Jan. 18.

Crouch awarded Heisman

By Doug Alden
Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Eric Crouch expected the worst. Instead, the Nebraska quarterback is coming home with the Heisman Trophy and a chance to lead the Cornhuskers to a national title.

"It's something that I never thought could happen," Crouch said Sunday from New York. "It's been a real fun ride."

Crouch

The wild ride continued Dec. 8 and Sunday, with Nebraska sneaking back into the national-championship game.

LSU's 31-20 upset of then-No. 2 Tennessee in the Southeast Conference title game knocked the Volunteers from the Rose Bowl and jumbled the Bowl Championship Series for the third-straight week.

When the computers were done sorting out the poll averages, eight computer ratings, strength of schedule, wins and losses, and bonus points for big wins, Nebraska ended up second in Sunday's final BCS standings.

The Huskers (11-1) will play top-ranked Miami (11-0) for the national title Jan. 3 in the Rose Bowl.

"Coming out here and being able to win a Heisman Trophy and now playing in the national championship is like a dream come true. It really is," Crouch said after Sunday's BCS announcement.

Crouch's Heisman and title hopes looked bleak three weeks ago, when Colorado humbled Nebraska with a 62-36 win. But in the weeks that followed, none of the other contenders stood out.

Crouch, Florida's Rex Grossman, Joey Harrington of Oregon, and Miami's Ken Dorsey were the finalists, and nobody was quite sure of the front-runner.

Crouch said before he left for New York that he wasn't getting his hopes up. But after an hour-long introduction ceremony, Crouch finally was announced as the winner.

"The anticipation up to the announcement was just a feeling that's almost unexplainable," Crouch said. "Your heart's beating out of your chest, just waiting to hear the name that they call."

"When they called my name it was almost a sense of relief that it was all over with now and I had finally won."

Crouch joins Johnny Rodgers (1972) and Mike Rozier ('83) as the Cornhuskers' only Heisman winners.

Although the ceremony wasn't at the Downtown Athletic Club, which was damaged in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, pictures of previous winners were displayed in the banquet room. Rodgers and Rozier were among the former winners who attended Saturday.

"It means a great deal to me. It's a huge honor to be associated with the type of players that have received this award in the past," Crouch said. "You could feel the magnitude and how much it really meant just sitting in that room. The atmosphere was great."

Crouch, a 6-1, 200-pound senior from Omaha, edged Grossman in the voting with the lowest point total since 1962. There were 924 ballots sent to voters, but only 585 — or 63.3 percent — were counted. Heisman officials said the typical return rate is about 80 percent but would not say why so many ballots were missing this year.

Crouch, Nebraska's offensive centerpiece for the past three years, had his finest season this fall. He ran for 1,115 yards and 18 touchdowns, passed for 1,510 yards and seven TDs, and had a catch for a touchdown.

His 59 career rushing touchdowns are the most by a Division I-A quarterback.

BCS awards Nebraska chance at championship

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

With no playoff in place, college football almost always comes up with a wacky way to end the season. It came up with a doozy on Sunday.

Nebraska will play undefeated Miami in the Rose Bowl for the national championship on Jan. 3, thanks to an amazing series of upsets during the last two weeks that lifted the Huskers (11-1) in the final Bowl Championship Series standings.

Not even a last-game 62-36 loss to Colorado could keep Nebraska out of the BCS' title game.

Miami (11-0) finished first in the final standings, and the Huskers beat out the Buffaloes for second place by a scant five hundredths of a point.

"We think the formula is fair," BCS Chairman John Swofford said. "Controversy doesn't affect credibility."

Don't tell that to Colorado coach Gary Barnett, whose Buffaloes (10-2) will play Oregon (10-1) in the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 1.

"This sort of takes a little luster off my support for the BCS," Barnett said. "I think I put a lot of trust in the system working, and it did work. It just didn't work in our favor."

"How you're playing at this point — seems to me that should be thought of," he said.

Added Florida coach Steve Spurrier: "As we all know, college football is not the most fair thing without a playoff system."

Thanks to LSU's 31-20 upset of Tennessee in the Dec. 8 Southeastern Conference title game, Nebraska found itself packing for Pasadena in what turned into a glorious weekend for the Husker Nation. On Dec. 8, quarterback Eric Crouch won the Heisman Trophy.

We think the formula is fair. Controversy doesn't affect credibility.

— John Swofford, BCS chairman, media poll and the USA Today/ESPN coaches poll on Sunday but held a sizable edge over No. 2 Oregon and No. 3 Colorado in the computer portion of the BCS formula.

"Colorado and Oregon are great teams," Nebraska coach Frank Solich said. "Anytime you don't have two clear-cut, undefeated teams, you're going to have controversy."

The final margin was so close that if the Buffaloes had been one spot higher in any of the computer ratings, they would have been off to the Rose Bowl instead of the Huskers.

In the Rothman ratings, for example, Colorado would have moved up one place and into the Rose Bowl if it had beaten Oklahoma State by 17 points instead of 22-19 on Oct. 27.

"It's been an extraordinary year, with upsets and unexpected turns," Swofford said. "A great thing for college football. It's brought added interest to the BCS bowl games. Five teams had opportunities to win a game to put themselves into the national championship game. None were able to do so."

After Nebraska lost to Colorado on Nov. 23, Oklahoma blew its title chance with a 16-13 loss to Oklahoma State the next day. On Dec. 1, Tennessee knocked Florida out of contention, 34-32, and later that night Texas was eliminated by Colorado, 39-27. On Dec. 8, it was LSU's turn to throw the BCS into chaos.

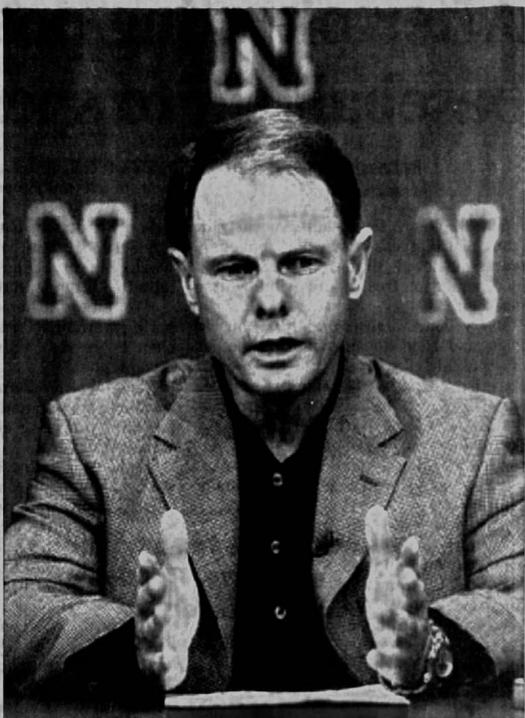

Even though the Vols (10-2) were knocked down to the Citrus Bowl against Michigan, coach Phillip Fulmer is OK with the current setup.

"If you're not going to have a playoff, this is a real good system," Fulmer said. "They'll continue to tweak it to be as good as it can be. We've been beneficiaries of the system, winning it in 1998 and putting ourselves back in the picture in 1999. I see it as a plus — if you're not going to have a playoff."

The BCS standings were devised by SEC Commissioner Roy Kramer in 1998 in hopes of ensuring that the top two teams play for a national title. The rankings use a formula that incorporates the AP media and the coaches' polls, eight computers, strength of schedule, won-lost record, and bonus points for big wins.

Nebraska will go to the Rose Bowl as an at-large team, the first time that's happened in the BCS's four-year history. The winner of that game is automatically crowned the coaches' champion.

But there's also a possibility of split national champions with the Fiesta Bowl winner claiming the No. 1 ranking in the final AP poll.

William Lauer/Associated Press
Nebraska head football coach Frank Solich speaks during a news conference Dec. 9 in Lincoln, Neb.

AP voters will turn in their ballots immediately after the Rose Bowl, and all teams are eligible for the title.

"I think controversy comes into play when the final BCS standing differs from the AP poll and the coaches' poll," Swofford said.

The Ducks and Buffaloes seem to have legitimate gripes about being left out of the Rose.

Oregon won the Pac-10 title and finished No. 2 in the polls, part of the BCS' complex method for determining its top teams.

Colorado took the Big 12 with a 39-37 upset of Texas on Dec. 1, a week after beating Nebraska, and finished No. 3 in the polls.

Notre Dame hires O'Leary as head coach

By Tom Coyne
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — George O'Leary was introduced Sunday as the new coach at Notre Dame, promising to make the storied football program one of the nation's best again.

The former Georgia Tech coach replaces Bob Davie, who was fired a week ago. The Irish lost six or more games three times under Davie, whose 35-25 record gave him the third-worst winning percentage in Irish history.

O'Leary, who led Georgia Tech to five-straight bowl games, said he considered the Notre Dame job one of the two best in sports. The other is manager of the New York Yankees.

"My job is twofold, to graduate our athletes and to win a lot of football games," the gruff, no-nonsense coach said. "I'm coming to Notre Dame to win games and win a lot of them. That's what it is all about."

The 55-year-old O'Leary was introduced to a cheering crowd of several hundred people in the Joyce Center one week after Davie was fired in the same building. Hundreds of T-shirts that said "By George, It's O'Leary" were handed out to fans as the school's pep band played the Notre Dame fight song.

The Irish, who haven't finished in the Top 10 since 1993 and last won a national championship in 1988, hope that O'Leary can get Notre Dame quickly back among college football's elite programs.

Athletics Director Kevin White said O'Leary met the standards he set in his search for a new coach — a proven winner who could return the Irish to prominence.

"He knows what championship football is about," White said.

Notre Dame president Edward Malloy met O'Leary on Dec. 8 in Atlanta, and the six-year deal was completed that night. No financial terms were disclosed.

There was a lot of speculation about who would get the job, but O'Leary's name was not prominently mentioned.

The popular choice around South Bend was Oakland Raiders coach Jon Gruden, but he pulled his name out of consideration on Dec. 6. The agent for Stanford coach Tyrone Willingham said Notre Dame had asked Stanford for permission to talk to Willingham. Oregon coach Mike Bellotti said Dec. 7 that he met with White but was not interested.

Joe Raymond/Associated Press

Others who said during the past week they were not interested included Oklahoma's Bob Stoops and Steve Mariucci of the San Francisco 49ers.

On Sunday morning, O'Leary summoned his coaches and players at Georgia Tech to a meeting at the school's athletics building and told them of his decision. O'Leary was 52-33 in seven seasons.

"Anyone who's a college coach, their goal is to become the Notre Dame coach," quarterback George Godsey said. "This job is something a lot of people covet."

Colorado aims for share of title

By John Mossman
Associated Press

DENVER — Passed over for the Rose Bowl, a bitterly disappointed Gary Barnett shifted to Plan B: Beat Oregon in the Fiesta Bowl and earn a share of the national championship.

"Let's go play Oregon and win it another way," the Colorado coach said Sunday. "That's how we'll do it. Sort of the way we've done it anyway."

Although Colorado (10-2) finished ahead of Nebraska (11-1) in both the Associated Press and USA Today/ESPN coaches polls and routed the Cornhuskers, 62-36, three weeks ago, it wasn't enough.

Nebraska barely edged Colorado for the No. 2 spot in the final Bowl Championship Series standings. Miami was first with 2.62 points, Nebraska second with 7.23 points, Colorado third at 7.28, and Oregon fourth with 8.67.

"It's hard to be gracious at this moment," Barnett said. "But we will obviously accept and be excited about playing Oregon in the Fiesta Bowl."

The final BCS ratings were announced during Colorado's annual Senior Banquet at a Denver hotel, creating an instant sense of emptiness among players, school officials, fans, and families.

"It's disappointing because we feel we are a better team than Nebraska," running back Bobby Purify said. "We feel we are better than most teams right now."

"They say the computer is right. We're just going to have to go out and play well against Oregon and prove to the nation how good we really are."

Colorado Athletics Director Dick Tharp said college football is "moving toward a better system. We're tweaking it yearly. We just can't change it this year, and five-hundredths of a point makes no sense to a 22-year-old senior."

Barnett, whose team lost to Fresno State and Texas, came back after Thanksgiving with resounding wins over Nebraska and Texas. He noted that Colorado beat five ranked opponents while the Huskers beat two.

"I think I put a lot of trust in the system working, and it did work," Barnett said. "It just didn't work in our favor. I probably should have lobbied a little bit for it. This sort of takes a little luster off my support for the BCS."

After pleading poverty, baseball set to spend

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

BOSTON — After pleading poverty in front of Congress last week, baseball teams gathered Sunday to spend some more money on free agents at the winter meetings.

Barry Bonds, Jason Giambi, Chan Ho Park, and Juan Gonzalez headed the list of available players. While this year's class isn't expected to produce the free-agent frenzy of last year's gathering in Dallas, the late ending of the World Series shortened baseball's business season, which should make for a hectic four days before general managers go home Thursday.

The New York Yankees and Mets didn't even wait for the meetings to get into a dealing mood, with the Yankees sending outfielder David Justice across town on Dec. 7 for third baseman Robin Ventura. And Oakland acquired closer Billy Koch from Toronto for a pair of minor leaguers.

But all was quiet Sunday.

"Nobody's looking to make a trade right now," Mets general manager Steve Phillips said. "People want to talk to everybody to know what's out there."

There were just five trades last year and only one of significance, a six-man swap that sent Brad Ausmus, Doug Brocail, and Nelson Cruz from Detroit to Houston for Roger Cedeno, Chris Holt, and Mitch Meluskey.

Alex Rodriguez and Manny Ramirez got most of the attention, with Texas giving the shortstop a record $252 million, 10-year contract and the Red Sox giving Ramirez a $160 million, eight-year deal. In all, owners committed $739.2 million to 25 players.

"This has to end sometime," Philadelphia Phillies manager Larry Bowa said. "The well's got to run dry. It seems it does for a little bit, but then it starts back up." Commissioner Bud Selig testified before the House Judiciary Committee Dec. 6 and said baseball was broke, blaming high salaries caused by free agency and salary arbitration.

While owners have sung that chorus repeatedly since the reserve clause was struck down in December 1975, many keep spending in an effort to win.

Scott Boras, who negotiated Rodriguez's deal last year, arrived Sunday to step up his peddling of Bonds. While Bonds hit a record 73 homers this year, he is 37, creating caution among teams faced with an expected asking price of $20 million or more annually for four or five years.

San Francisco, the outfielder's team since 1993, made Bonds an offer last week, but no other club has publicly admitted interest in the outfielder.

"We offered a home-team discount in spring training," Boras said. "We offered them a four-year contract at a very favorable number."

Park, another Boras client, is the top available pitcher, and he's expected to go to the pitching-challenged Texas Rangers.

Yankees' courting of Giambi goes on, with no indication of when the first baseman will decide whether to accept George Steinbrenner's money, probably $115 million to $120 million for seven years.

New York also was trying to complete a deal with left-hander Sterling Hitchcock, and was interested in free-agent outfielder Moises Alou and Florida outfielder Cliff Floyd.

Gonzalez, offered arbitration by Cleveland on Dec. 7, may have to wait until the market for Bonds develops in order to get the price he wants.

Reliever Jason Istringhausen, who is close to a $27 million, four-year contract with the Cardinals, was expected to go to St. Louis today for a physical that could lead to a finalized deal.

Among cheaper talent, left-hander Ron Villone was close to signing with the Boston Red Sox.

New Houston manager Jimmy Williams was back in Boston, where he was fired in August despite keeping the banged-up Red Sox in contention. His replacement as the Boston manager, Joe Kerrigan, said pitcher Pedro Martinez and shortstop Nomar Garciaparra were progressing well in their recoveries.

Kerrigan also said the Red Sox have approached former major-league managers Whitey Herzog and Felipe Alou about serving as bench coaches. Both had been offered the job as Red Sox manager in the past.

As for trade talk, Boras said Los Angeles outfielder Gary Sheffield wouldn't mind being dealt to Oakland. The Dodgers and Athletics held trade talks last week, even discussing a three-way deal with Toronto that never came to be.

Sheffield's contract has a list of 12 teams he can block trades to. "Oakland is not on his block list, so he's obviously willing to play there," Boras said.

This has to end sometime. The well's got to run dry. It seems it does for a little bit, but then it starts right back up.

— Larry Bowa, Philadelphia Phillies manager

quote of the day

Dear God, who cares about the Americans?

— Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, responding to a question during an interview on Israeli television about American pressure to crack down on Islamic militants suspected of attacks against Israel.

The Ledge

by Scott Morgan

Ways to fill space on your 15-page paper

- Write a list of demands and a ransom note telling your professor he'll never see his dog again if you don't get an A.
- Throw in a few quotes from your horoscope.
- Forget writing about behavioral disorders — just mutilate your paper as a visual representation of aggression.
- Instead of using Times New Roman and a 12-point font, write your paper with crayons.
- Spend at least two pages on a letter to Santa.
- Professors tend to nod off in the middle of a paper, so fill the body of the paper with forwarded e-mails.
- They'll never notice if you have two-inch margins.
- Staple the pages together on all corners by the time they get it open to read it, they'll be glad you only finished four pages.
- Drink a shot of Jack Daniel's every time you finish a paragraph.
