Bars' bouncers walk a fine line

By Aaron M. Brim
The Daily Iowan

After two altercations occurred within one month of one another, each involving a bouncer, a patron, and a night in the hospital, the line between self-defense and unwarranted force remains a gray area, said Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Brotherton.

"They should use the same force as we do," Brotherton said. "There is no reason a bar employee should put his hands on a bar patron unless the patron becomes assaultive. In that case, they have the right to defend themselves."

In Iowa City, the altercations often occur as the bouncer attempts to remove clientele from the bar.

Last week, a UI graduate filed a lawsuit against the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., after he allegedly broke his leg in two places when he was tackled by a Union bouncer in November 2000. Bouncer Ben Ruley contended that the incident was self-defense, while bar patron Jonathan Sheib alleged that he was tackled from behind by Ruley.

No POW status for detainees

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

GUANTANAMO BAY NAVAL BASE, Cuba — Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld on Sunday ruled out any possibility of granting prisoner-of-war status to the suspected terrorists held in a makeshift prison on this U.S. Navy base.

"They are not POWs. They will not be determined to be POWs," Rumsfeld told reporters accompanying him on his first visit to the detention facility, a hot and dusty camp amid scrub brush and rock.

The Bush administration considers the captured fighters to be "unlawful combatants" and "detainees" rather than prisoners of war because, it contends, they don't represent a recognized government and their method of terror violates internationally accepted laws of warfare.

The distinction is significant because under the Geneva Conventions, written after World War II, a POW has certain legal rights that would govern the U.S. military's interrogations of the detainees and would require that they be released when the hostilities in Afghanistan are over.

If there is any ambiguity about whether a captive should be considered a prisoner of war, the Geneva Conventions say a special three-person military tribunal should be convened to decide.

Remembering what they dance for

By Peter Rugg
The Daily Iowan

Laura Gaston doesn't feel right when she watches her daughter's friends growing up. It's "too surreal" for her when she sees how big they're getting and thinks about her daughter, Alex, who died more than a year ago.

"My life stopped when she died," said Gaston of her 7-year-old. "You don't want to be here anymore. This isn't part of the plan."

Gaston will be the last speaker at Dance Marathon, a fundraising event for cancer victims to be held on Friday. This is her third year as a Dance Marathon family member.

When Alex was 5, her mother took her to the UI Hospitals and Clinics for a routine visit. During the examination, a lump was discovered on Alex's arm, and she was diagnosed with bone cancer.

"I never dreamed it was a tumor," Gaston said. "You just get smacked in the face with it, and you don't have time to feel sorry for yourself."

Only 15 days earlier, Alex's father, Calvin Gaston, had been diagnosed with cancer of the lymphatic system.

While Calvin Gaston eventually beat his illness with chemotherapy treatments — he is now in remission — his daughter's condition worsened.

After Laura Gaston watched her daughter's hair fall out because of chemotherapy, Alex slipped and broke her arm at the tumor. The arm was amputated on Sept. 27, 1998.

"The first time she saw her reflection in a window at the UIHC, she just said, 'I look disgusting,'" Laura Gaston said. "But she adapted to it so quickly. If people said anything or stared, they were usually adults. Adults were worse than children. Chil-

Using a rocket to trip the lights

By Rebecca Sutlive

Iowa City, we may have lift-off. A UI physics and astronomy associate professor, Craig Kletzing, is not complaining about the sub-zero temperatures in Fairbanks, Alaska. He has much bigger things to think about, such as launching a sub-orbital rocket more than 500 miles into space to study the aurora borealis.

Kletzing
UI professor

The Rocket Auroral Correlator Experiment is a cooperative venture among the UI, NASA, and Dartmouth College. Kletzing, a UI colleague, and a team of 30-40 NASA and Dartmouth scientists will launch a rocket into space that will study interactions between waves and particles in the aurora borealis during a 15-minute flight.

Although Kletzing has studied the aurora borealis — or northern lights — for nearly two decades, he said the scientific community will probably never fully understand the phenomenon in his lifetime.

Auroral displays appear as curtains, or waves, of brightly colored lights streaming from the sky; they are caused by electrons accelerating along Earth's magnetic-field lines into the upper atmosphere. There, electrons collide with gas atoms to give off displays of light.

Visions of disaster in wake of 9/11

By Gian Sachdev and Anwar Williams
The Daily Iowan

Shredded books and legal banter became Margaret Whiting's "voice and vision" during a weekend conference designed to remind Iowa City about the effects of Sept. 11. Torn pages from law volumes encased mangled book spines to complete her work "Peace Forbids All Force."

"They [book spines] represent the extreme judgments people make during war based on the notion of good and evil," she said. "This dichotomous thinking may help us justify our violence, but violence will lead to even more people thinking of us as evil."

On Jan. 25 and 26, the "Infinite Respect Enduring Dignity: Voices and Visions on the September Attacks" conference transformed the UI Theatre Building into a public forum for local artists, area scholars, and community poets to voluntarily perform or display their interpretation of the terrorist attacks.

"We were frustrated this fall by the often-unreflected rhetoric of a country headed for war, followed by the often-detached reporting of bombings, threats, and maneuvers," said Merrie Snell, the director of the Project on Rhetoric of Inquiry and the conference co-director with Susan Zickmund, an assistant research scientist in internal medicine.

Snell said they worked to integrate arts into inter-disciplinary discussions.

UI art Professor Margaret Stratton showcased her black-and-white photograph collection of New York firehouses and the remaining shell of the World Trade Center towers — the product of an Oct. 6 visit to the site.

"The firehouses were where the people were," she said. "They were the places where life still existed."

On Jan. 25, Sasha Waters, an assistant professor in cinema and comparative literature, presented an audio documentary of phone conversations with her father, who worked across the street from Ground Zero.

At the UI, she said, she felt miles away from the tragedy her father was experiencing, and she used the tapes to gain an element of control and connection.

"Initially, I wanted to talk to him about his evacuation from work, but we ended up arguing about war and his reversal of thinking from the '60s," Waters said. Now, she says, he favors the war in Afghanistan.

Some religious leaders spoke in a panel discussion about civil liberties on the second day of the conference.

"It is a sad state when the FBI infringes on the civil liberties that the terrorists try to take away," said Rabbi Jeffrey Portman. "They almost do the job of the terrorist by taking them away. There has to be a better way."

A conflict between national security and civil and human rights was a common theme.

Bill Ossey of Cedar Rapids, the president of Midamar Corp., is part of a family that was instrumental in constructing North America's first Islamic Mosque.

He started his speech with the Muslim greeting "As-Salaam-Alaikum," telling the crowd, "Peace be with you."

He told the crowd that his son's apartment was raided by the FBI, who interrogated him for background checks.

Later, he said, he felt helpless listening to his son's account, who caught the attention of the FBI when he ordered 25 gallons of hydrogen peroxide for a biochemistry research project.

"It was a hard thing to listen to," Ossey said. "It's like we've gone back 30 years."

Karzai seeks U.S. help for peace

By George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When Hamid Karzai, Afghanistan's interim leader, meets President Bush today, he is expected to seek a continuing U.S. commitment to help restore the peace in his violence-torn country, Afghan officials say.

Karzai arrived here Sunday afternoon, the first Afghan leader to visit Washington in 39 years.

Before leaving for the United States, Karzai told Afghan television that he would use the trip to push for the expansion of a multinational peacekeeping force from the capital, Kabul, into the rest of Afghanistan.

Afghan officials believe troops are needed in the countryside to deal with regional warlords and armed gangs. They also have indicated they want American troops to participate. "This is the determination of the Afghan people," Karzai said.

The Bush administration has resisted U.S. involvement in the 2,500-person British-led international security-assistance force operating in Kabul. Thousands more troops are expected.

Karzai, 44, attended a prayer service at a mosque in suburban Virginia in the afternoon; he planned an evening address at Georgetown University.

Several hundred Afghan Americans at the mosque were brought up to date on the situation in Afghanistan by Karzai, who spoke in one of the main languages of Afghanistan.

The predominantly male audience applauded frequently during his 25-minute presentation.

No translation was provided. The Bush administration is undecided on how long U.S. troops, currently numbering approximately 4,000, should remain in Afghanistan.

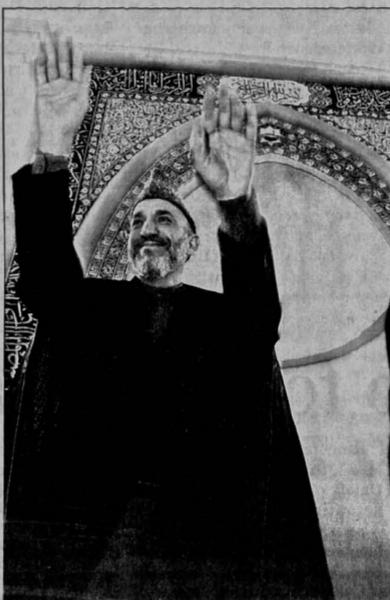

Afghan Foreign Minister Abdullah said in an interview Jan. 25 he believes that U.S. and international forces should remain in Afghanistan beyond the six-month life of the interim government.

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said last week that American troops will remain in Afghanistan at least until the summer. The interim government will step down in June to be replaced by a government selected by a national council.

The American military focus in Afghanistan has been on hunting down remnants of the Taliban regime, which was deposed in November, and the Al Qaeda terrorist group, headed by Osama bin Laden.

Vice President Dick Cheney said Sunday he believes bin Laden, who has been blamed for the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks in New York and Washington, is still alive.

"We haven't seen him, obviously, in the flesh recently, and he's been very quiet," Cheney told "Fox News Sunday." "He hasn't released any videos or made any public pronouncements. But I think, if he were dead, there'd be more indications of it than we've seen."

NATION BRIEF

Bush aims for center on welfare

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will ask Congress to set aside at least $100 million for experimental programs aimed at getting single welfare mothers to marry, but he is resisting conservative pressure to require that states push marriage in their welfare programs.

Staking a moderate position on welfare, the Bush administration is also rejecting arguments for cutting overall welfare funding, echoing liberals who say there is still much to do despite a massive drop in the welfare rolls.

Beyond that, the administration is considering relaxing the strict work rules adopted in 1996 to allow for limited education and training. And officials are contemplating new money for experiments aimed at helping former recipients, most of whom are still in poverty, get higher-paying jobs.

For the most part, Bush and his advisers believe the landmark welfare overhaul adopted in 1996 is working well, and the administration wants to make changes only on the margins when Congress renews the law this year.

Cheney still mum on energy panel

By Marcy Gordon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Vice President Dick Cheney on Sunday defended President Bush's right to refuse to identify the executives of the White House met with in formulating the administration's energy policy.

Amid the Enron scandal, Congress' investigative arm will soon decide whether to sue to force the White House to turn over documents on the meetings last year with representatives of energy companies. They included the now-collapsed Enron Corp., a Houston-based company with deep ties to Bush.

Cheney acknowledged that the dispute "probably will get resolved in court." Last week, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer had left open the possibility of a compromise.

"The ball is in the White House's court," Comptroller General David Walker, who heads the General Accounting Office, said in a telephone interview.

The White House said recently that representatives of Enron, an energy trader that was the seventh-largest U.S. corporation, met six times on energy issues last year with Cheney or his aides. Thousands of employees, and big and small investors nationwide, lost fortunes in Enron's plunging stock as the company spiraled into the biggest bankruptcy in U.S. history on Dec. 2.

The Justice Department is pursuing a criminal investigation of Enron and its longtime auditor, the accounting firm Arthur Andersen. The Securities and Exchange Commission has been investigating since Oct. 31. Eleven congressional committees have also opened inquiries.

Asked whether anything in the energy plan was included specifically for Enron or at its urging, Cheney replied: "I can't say. I'm sure it supported many parts of it... I can't say a particular proposal came from it."

Cheney also defended the conduct of Army Secretary Thomas White, a former vice chairman of Enron's energy-services division, which reportedly was one of the units used to conceal the company's losses.

White has "always conducted himself in an ethically fine manner," Cheney said. "There's no evidence to indicate anybody did anything wrong in the administration."

Cheney's statements on two Sunday talk shows raised accusations by some Democrats of White House stonewalling and the prospect of a battle over presidential privilege reminiscent of the Clinton administration's bitter Whitewater disputes with Republican lawmakers.

Terrorism key in Bush's State of Union

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush will stand before Congress on Tuesday with his popularity at heroically high levels, his performance as a wartime commander in chief softening Americans' concerns about the weak economy.

But his advisers fear the grace period won't last — that voters will eventually grow impatient with Bush — unless he builds on his success in Afghanistan with a State of the Union address that offers a bold blueprint for the next stage of his presidency. They say Bush will use Tuesday's prime-time address to:

- Outline the post-Afghanistan phase of the war against terrorism. Warning that America's enemies infest every corner of the globe, he will promise to do "whatever it takes" to win the war, according to a summary of the address given to key Republicans.

- Reassure the public that Washington is doing everything possible to prevent a terrorist strike.

- Promise more jobs and a fat-tened domestic agenda. With the Enron bankruptcy becoming a political problem, Bush intends to promote pension protections and more financial disclosures by companies. Aides debated whether the Enron scandal also merited a presidential slap at corporate irresponsibility.

- Unveil plans to tap the burst of community spirit inspired by the Sept. 11 attacks. He is expected to propose more money for the national-service program started by President Clinton and seek an expansion of neighborhood-watch programs.

- "We'll work to create jobs and renew the strength of our economy. We'll protect our people in every way necessary, and we will carry on the campaign against global terror until we achieve our goal: the peace that comes from victory," Bush said in his weekly radio address, which previewed Tuesday's speech.

Aides are lining up VIPs to sit in the State of the Union audience as symbols of Bush's desire to make national security the overarching theme of his administration. The guests could include new Afghan leader Hamid Karzai, U.S. soldiers, and emergency-service workers, aides said.

Figuring out 'appropriate force' in local bars

To help protect themselves from such lawsuits, many bars have liability insurance covering lawsuits filed against bouncers who sustain injuries or injure patrons.

In another bar altercation, UI student Chad Schmidt allegedly stabbed Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., bouncer James Reid in October 2000 after the bouncer attempted to remove Schmidt from the bar. Reid suffered multiple puncture wounds to his abdomen, chest, and back.

Schmidt, who was charged with assault, was arrested by police, who determined that the stabbing was merely incidental due to a brush of contact between Reid and Schmidt.

Some bouncers say force is not required on the job.

Standing under 6 feet tall, Fieldhouse Bar & Restaurant, 111 E. College St., security head

Brian Driscoll said there are alternatives to using force when managing troublesome patrons.

"Size doesn't matter," he said. "I haven't had to put anyone on the ground yet this year. You have got to have the right demeanor. We call the movie Roadhouse our training video. I get what I want with my eyes and my words, and that's usually sufficient."

Iowa City police Officer Al Mebus visits local bars twice a year, beginning his presentation with the definition and appropriate use of the term "force." He also stops by local bars regularly to speak to security staffs about differences between self-defense and assault.

"The security staff is held to the same accountability as everyone else, but we have to understand that they have a slightly different responsibility than everyone else," Mebus said.

He said he compares self-defense to a football game.

"There is a neutral zone and a line of scrimmage, and when you're on defense, you're just protecting the neutral zone," Mebus said. "So yes, you can defend yourself. But once you missed your window of opportunity and the fellow is backing away from you, and you go hit him — now you're playing offense, and you're risking jail time."

Two years ago, a measure that would permit cities to require training for bouncers was rejected by state lawmakers. The measure was spurred by an altercation in a Des Moines bar where a young black man was killed by two bouncers.

Mebus said bar employees often call police when an altercation ensues, a move that transfers liability to supervising officers.

"Now, we're making the calls, and we're liable," he said.

Rumsfeld says no to POW status

Rumsfeld said that is irrelevant at Guantanamo Bay.

"There is no ambiguity in this case," he said.

Vice President Dick Cheney said Sunday that officials agree the detainees aren't prisoners of war. But administration lawyers are debating whether the Geneva Conventions, which have provisions that deal with unlawful combatants, apply in this case.

"These are the worst of a very bad lot," Cheney told Fox News Sunday. "They are very dangerous. They are devoted to killing millions of Americans, innocent Americans, if they can, and they are perfectly prepared to die in the effort. And they need to be detained, treated very cautiously, so that our people are not at risk."

The detainee issue is likely to come up today at the regularly scheduled National Security Council meeting, which President Bush attends, a senior administration official said.

Rumsfeld and Gen. Richard Myers, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, traveled to the detention facility, known as "Camp X-Ray," by plane, boat, and bus, accompanied by four senators: Democrats Dianne Feinstein of California and Daniel Inouye of Hawaii and Republicans Ted Stevens of Alaska and Kay Bailey Hutchison of Texas.

They came to get a firsthand look at the facilities and procedures used in handling the 158 prisoners being detained in 8-foot-by-8-foot, open air cells.

Feinstein and the other senators told reporters after touring the camp that they agreed with the Bush administration's handling of the prisoners and saw nothing to suggest mistreatment.

Inouye, in fact, said they are being treated "in some ways better than we treat our people." Feinstein said she once worked at a California prison, and she has visited many others around the world. To those abroad who have suggested the Guantanamo Bay prisoners have been treated improperly she said, "Take another look."

dren are usually just curious."

After the amputation, Alex complained of "phantom pains" from the amputated arm. She described it as a tingling sensation, as if her arm had fallen asleep, said her mother.

Although Alex was an initially shy girl, Laura Gaston said, she was very secure in herself and outgoing, and she soon began educating people about cancer. She became involved with, and was crowned princess of, Relay for Life, a fund-raiser for cancer treatment, as well as with various other organizations.

She learned to write with her left hand and attended kindergarten when her health allowed, otherwise being tutored at home. She was devoted to her two dogs, cat, hamsters, and fish, and she planned to be a veterinarian someday.

"She loved animals very much," said her grandmother, Pat Bennet. "You couldn't even kill a bug around the house without her telling you not to do it."

Alex also became an honorary member of the Alpha Phi sorority, which sponsored her for the UI Dance Marathon. She missed the 1999 fund-raiser because of health problems, but she attended in 2000.

"She was so active," said UI graduate Sarah Abdo, the Alpha Phi chapter adviser. "She stayed up all night and danced with everyone. Meeting her was one of the high points of college."

Alex underwent several medical procedures between 1999 and 2000, including a surgery in which 11 tumors were removed from her lung. In April 2000, she entered remission, but a month later, a tumor was discovered on her bronchus. After her mother arranged for her to receive communion and baptism, Alex died at home on July 24, 2000.

"She knew what was happening, and she told me whom she wanted to give her toys to," said Laura Gaston. "The night she was dying, she wasn't scared. I was moving her pillow to make her more comfortable, and she looked up and said, 'Mommy, can I have my pillow back?' Those were her last words, but you could still hear that independence in her voice."

After Alex's death, Laura Gaston said, it was a struggle to find her place in society again. She is now clinical coordinator for UI Community Homecare, and she said she is still amazed by the children she's met who have cancer.

Afflicted children are some of the wisest people she's met, Bennet said.

"They go through hell, and they don't complain — they keep smiling," she said.

Prof's rocket to take aim at northern lights

ROCKETS

The project is unique because the rocket's payload, or data-collecting devices, are designed to take measurements 10 to 30 times faster than satellites. NASA provided the rocket, and more half of the payload's instruments were designed and built at the UI by Kletzing, UI assistant research scientist Scott Bounds, and UI graduate research assistant Jason Martin-Hiner.

Bounds, who is also in Alaska, said that although he's doing the work he loves, making the trip was a big decision.

"I'm torn about being up here working on this rocket," he said. "I really want to see this one launched, but my wife is at home 31 weeks pregnant with twins."

Hopefully, Bounds' sacrifice will pay off.

The window of opportunity to launch the rocket will open Feb. 2. As the principle investigator, Kletzing will decide when the conditions are right during the 16-day window for the launch. If conditions don't cooperate, the launch will be canceled, and Kletzing will return to Alaska in March for another try.

"Mostly, we try not to think about that option," he said. "It's fairly rare [to postpone a launch], but after all the investment, it would be silly to launch the rocket into less-than-optimal conditions."

Kletzing and co-investigator Jim LaBelle, a Dartmouth professor of physics and astronomy, wrote the proposal to NASA for the experiment in the summer of 1998 and received funding for the project that December. NASA funded approximately $410,000 of the project's cost.

Kletzing said he is confident the experiment will reveal some unexpected data on the workings of the northern lights, which most frequently coincide with periods of greatest sunspot activity and with magnetic storms (disturbances of the ionosphere that interfere with long-distance radio communication).

"There's an awful lot of what nature has to offer up for us to understand," Kletzing said. "Life would be kind of boring if you had it all explained."

LAS VEGAS — Nightfall comes to the dingy street corner, and the flickering lights of the 7-Eleven keep watch over a prayer group trying to bring the divine to a carnal city.

Jon Philips, who has been drunk for 45 days, wanders up and staggers into their prayer circle. He drops to his knees, and the men and women of the Christian Motorcyclist Association encircle him, their Harleys parked nearby.

"I got a headache that's going to last for the rest of my life," he says, a tear slipping down his cheek. "Bring us a brighter day," someone prays.

The man's story — a gambler and a drunk who can't bring himself to leave Las Vegas — is one of many in a city that sells fantasies of easy money and 24-hour fun. Beyond all the neon and glitz lies their more desperate reality.

"This is the hardest town in America to live in," says Hal Rothman, a history professor at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. "There's no net to catch you."

Gambling-addiction programs are few, and lines are long at the city's missions. The homeless population has nearly doubled to 12,000 since 1999.

For many, Las Vegas is the American dream — affordable housing, no state income tax, and well-paying jobs that don't require much education. Only three states have fewer college graduates, but the average household income of $42,177 is the 19th highest in the nation.

Valet car attendants can easily bring in $50,000; card dealers on the Strip can make much more.

Those odds bring people to the gambling city in droves. From 1990 to 2000, the area's population ballooned 62 percent, the largest for any U.S. metropolitan area. Today, 1.3 million people live in southern Nevada.

To tourists, Las Vegas is a glamorous getaway of pricey restaurants, expensive shows, and fancy megaresorts and casinos.

But the glittering city of dreams also attracts the desperate, people who couldn't make it anywhere else and come here as a last resort. Many are troubled, unrealistic, with more dreams than skills.

Mike Jamison is among them. Inside a hot sweaty gym, miles from the neon lights, Jamison trains for his next boxing match. He's in poor shape and isn't prepared, but he's been promised $1,000 if he fights in a small venue at an off-Strip casino.

Pakistani group abducts U.S. reporter

By Richard Pyle
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A group claiming to have seized a Wall Street Journal reporter missing in Pakistan said he was being held in "inhuman conditions" comparable with those of suspected terrorists in U.S. custody, the newspaper reported Sunday.

An e-mail from "The National Movement for the Restoration of Pakistani Sovereignty" accused reporter Daniel Pearl of being a CIA officer posing as a journalist, the Journal reported Sunday on its Web site.

The newspaper said the e-mail was accompanied by four photographs of Pearl, with one showing him with a gun to his head, and it demanded better treatment for fighters being held by the United States at Guantanamo Bay Naval Base, Cuba.

In Pakistan, police sources speaking on the condition they not be identified told the Associated Press they believe Pearl was kidnapped by Harkat ul-Mujahideen, which has close ties to Al Qaeda and is on the U.S. government's list of terrorist organizations. A number of Harkat fighters were known to have been killed in Afghanistan during the bombing campaign.

Pearl, 38, a reporter based in Bombay, India, has been missing since Jan. 23, when he went to visit a source near Karachi, Pakistan, for a story about terrorism, the newspaper said.

Steven Goldstein, a vice president of Dow Jones & Co., the Journal's owner, said the newspaper "has not had any direct contact with the group" that claimed to hold Pearl, and he didn't have any knowledge of the police sources' report on possible kidnappers.

He said the photographs appear to be legitimate but that they would not be distributed.

Both the newspaper and the CIA denied that Pearl worked for the agency.

"Although we don't normally discuss such matters, Daniel Pearl does not now nor has he ever worked for the CIA," agency spokeswoman Anya Guilsher told the AP on Sunday.

Guilsher would not comment on the group named in the e-mail or its demands.

The Journal quoted the e-mail as saying Pearl was being held "in very inhuman circumstances quite similar in fact to the way Pakistanis and nationals of other sovereign countries are being kept in Cuba by the American Army. If the Americans keep our countrymen in better conditions, than we will better the conditions of Mr. Pearl and all other Americans that we capture."

Goldstein said the group had made a mistaken assumption.

"As a private citizen employed by an independent newspaper, neither Mr. Pearl, nor we, can change the policies of the United States or Pakistan," Goldstein said.

The e-mail said Pakistanis being held at Guantanamo must be given access to lawyers and their families and "must be returned to Pakistan, and they will be tried in a Pakistani court."

Thanks for the courage

Thank you for having the courage to include the advertising supplement "Life is full of surprises" in the Jan. 24 DI. Recently, some campus newspapers have been accused of rejecting advertisements that did not reflect the political agenda of their editors (e.g., the slavery-reparations debate scandal engineered by David Horowitz). By not censoring this advertisement, you are allowing alternative voices to be heard.

Thanks again.

Solving the smoking conundrum

I have an idea that will solve the smoking-in-bars problem. Well, at least I think it will.

First off, I should say that to describe me as a non-smoker would be an understatement. I'm a smoke despiser, and I can't stand the stuff. I had to go through half a year of voice therapy last year because being in the bars too much caused a condition called vocal nodules. This is usually a problem reserved for cheerleaders and singers. I don't cheer, and I sure can't sing (ask my roommate; I'm terrible). Three nights a week, I screamed over the music to talk to my friends and breathed in second-hand cigarette smoke. After six months, I had almost no voice at all. My medical bills from the entire ordeal have come to more than $5,000. So that's why I hate the smoke.

But I still love to go out with my friends. I respect other people's right to smoke, especially when they're out on the town having a few drinks. Quite a few of my friends smoke, most only when they're drinking, so I understand their position. So — this is what I propose to solve the problem of secondhand smoke, and maybe the City Council will like the idea.

Here it is: I only go to bars that have good ventilation. That counts out any bar with low ceilings. But there are quite a few bars that have great ventilation, and the smoke isn't nearly as much of a problem — the Summit, the Airliner and It's Brother's, just to name a few.

So, if the City Council wants to avoid health concerns of workers in the bars without violating civil rights of smokers, it should just require a certain amount of sufficient ventilation. There we go. Problem solved. The workers are healthy (or healthier than they were before), the smokers are happy killing themselves slowly, and the City Council is happy, too.

Coloring in history

Following Sept. 11, certain images will be forever burned in our minds. Such wanton destruction and carnage would be impossible to comprehend without the all-too-real photographs. However, while every image shows great loss, a precious few also show the hope and determination that have brought our nation closer together following this tragedy. One photo in particular has become famous because of its inescapable link to hope and determination from half a century ago. Three New York firefighters, surrounded by rubble and devastation, struggle to raise an American flag, closely paralleling the actions of six soldiers on Iwo Jima during World War II. This photo clearly expresses why terrorists could never destroy the spirit for which America stands.

To immortalize this image in three dimensions, New York City developer Forest City Ratner commissioned a bronze statue of the famous photo. However, in order to more accurately represent the ethnic diversity of the New York Fire Department, the statue was to be composed of one white man, one black man, and one Latino man, rather than the three

If we were to adjust our records of this event to reflect what we wished had happened, we would be rewriting history and cheapening the sacrifice that so many have made at such a high cost.

white men who are actually in the photo. While this may have been a well-intentioned attempt at political correctness, historical accuracy is too high a price to pay for being PC.

It would be nice if all historical events fit themselves nicely into the prevailing social opinion of the time. For example, for the many centuries when women were considered the intellectual inferiors of men, it would have been nice if there had been no women literati. A lack thereof would have fit perfectly with the prevailing opinion. However, as we all know, there were many women struggling against great odds and producing works far superior to many of their male colleagues. If, as they seemed intent on doing in New York, someone had decided that these works should be "adjusted" to fit social opinion, we would have never known of the great contributions these women made.

The situation in New York is exactly the same. An event of vast historic significance has occurred, and we must preserve it in all its horrific glory for posterity. While it would be nice to present the most likable face we can to future generations, we owe it to the victims and the survivors to tell the truth. If we were to adjust our records of this event to reflect what we wished had happened, we would be rewriting history and cheapening the sacrifice that so many have made at such a high cost.

Recently, Forest City Ratner came to realize this. The monument design in question was scuttled in favor of a yet-to-be designed proposal. While it's unfortunate that the threat of litigation was necessary before the firm bowed to public pressure, Forest City Ratner should be commended for acknowledging the value to those involved of keeping our historical memories accurate.

Basing our education on faith in a time of terror

The Dec. 8 issue of The Economist contained two separate articles addressing the subject of religion and education in Britain. Dec. 4 saw the second reading of a new education bill in the British Parliament, which, among other things, sought to set up more church-run schools around the country. Of England's 25,000 schools, roughly 7,000 are faith-based, with the Church of England running most such schools. However, the church is finding opposition in minority faiths (Hindus, Muslims, and Jews) that have only 11 faith-based schools in England but seek parity with Christian faith and funding.

One article argues that "7,000 state-funded religious school[s] ... is 7,000 too many." From parents to members of Parliament, this bill is stirring up controversy. Perhaps British Prime Minister Tony Blair is truly seeking to better the nation's education system by promoting selectivity in schools. Faith-based schools are allowed to choose which children are admitted to their institutions, sometimes requiring parents to produce a letter attesting to their religious devotion and accepting only those students who seem to share their beliefs. Other state schools must accept any and all students within their areas. This practice, therefore, only succeeds in increasing the disparity between religions, rather than providing a better education to all.

Blair seems to have forgotten that it is not the job of the state to promote beliefs to its citizens. Throughout history, leaders who have tried this have been faced with opposition. Most notably, perhaps, the Pilgrims left England for America in 1620 because they disagreed with the religious doctrines that James I sought to impose on them. And today, the people of Britain are speaking out against a leader who seeks to discriminate among faiths in a state-funded education system.

Amanda Mittlestadt

MIDDLE GROUND

Similarly, President Bush has met with opposition to his own faith-based initiative. On Jan. 29, 2001, in just the second week of his administration, Bush announced the formation of the White House Office of Faith-based and Community Initiatives, which would ensure that government dealings with private groups were "fair and supportive." Bush also proposed that funding be made available to level the playing field between faith-based groups and non-religious organizations, noting that religious programs have helped to mentor troubled children and mend broken homes.

What he failed to mention, however, is that many people find that these same problems can be alleviated in secular programs. The Constitution clearly enshrines a separation of church and state in the First Amendment. If the government funds these groups, even in an effort to make them more available to the public, this separation will be breached. Furthermore, the very basis of operation for religious and community groups is that people donate their time and money because they want to, not because they have to. But if Bush chooses to subsidize such groups with government funding, the pretense of charity will disappear; everyone will donate with tax dollars.

Nevertheless, Bush still has a few backers in Congress. Before they reconvened on Jan. 23, Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Pa., and Sen. Joe Lieberman, D-Conn., expressed their desire to revive the stalled faith-based initiative. While the House passed the Bush plan last July, Democrats in the Senate recognized the controversy in the bill. Republicans have included provisions that would allow religious groups to ignore local anti-discrimination laws, both in hiring and in providing their services to the community. Consequently, the initiative was abandoned in the Senate. Lieberman spokesman Dan Gerstein said that unless the Republicans and Bush were willing to make concessions, it was unclear whether the Senate would even hold a vote on the initiative this year.

Since Sept. 11, the focus of the Bush administration has been eradicating terrorism. But in Bush's final radio address of 2001, he still managed to address his desire to "mobilize faith-based institutions" in 2002. Bush is still pushing his plan, and bipartisan support remains in Congress. The dedication to seeing this initiative succeed is admirable, but it is an initiative that is no longer necessary. On Jan. 30, 2001, Bush told people at The Fishing School in Washington, D.C., "Those of us in public life oftentimes are honored to be able to see the best of America, to be able to find true strength, the true heart of the country." But we have already seen the best of America, and we have seen the true heart of the American people, and we didn't need a government-enforced union between church and state to make it happen. Sept. 11 proved that, even without the support of religious groups, Americans can support each other. What we need now, especially in this time of war, is a leader whose efforts are focused on fighting and winning. We need a leader who is strong, not compassionate. This country has already shown its compassion, and Bush's proposal now proves not only redundant but ultimately unnecessary.

Count should've remained locked up

Look for the continuing story of LOVE IS STRONG AS DEATH, by David Wenzel, in this week's 80 hours.

Film: The Count of Monte Cristo
Director: Kevin Reynolds
Writer: Jay Wolpert
Starring: Jim Caviezel, Guy Pearce, Richard Harris, and Dagmara Dominczyk
Length: 115 minutes

Jim Caviezel stars as Edmond Dantes, a man who plans to get revenge after his wrongful imprisonment due to his onetime friend Fernand Mondego (Guy Pearce), in The Count of Monte Cristo.

If a distinction can be drawn between "films" and "movies," The Count of Monte Cristo would serve as a textbook example of the latter. Director Kevin Reynolds' treatment of Alexander Dumas' epic novel coasts along on the strength of Dumas' irresistible story line, devoid of filmic flourishes and intent on pure entertainment.

Reynolds' craftsmanship is so conventional, it's virtually invisible. What's left to be enjoyed is the engaging story of French sailor Edmond Dantes (Jim Caviezel), who is falsely denounced as a traitor by none other than his closest friend, the jealous Fernand Mondego. In prison, a fellow captive (Richard Harris) reveals the location of the lost treasure of Monte Cristo and aids Edmond in his escape. With the discovery of the treasure, Edmond takes on the identity of the Count of Monte Cristo and begins an elaborate plot to exact revenge on those responsible for his imprisonment. Even with by-the-book direction of such a salient story line, acting, the one thing that can still trip up the movie, does. Most guilty is Guy Pearce as the villainous Fernand. Pearce gives the character sufficient slimminess, but more often than not, he goes too far. He curls his lip and snarls so often that it seems almost like a facial tick rather than a way of speaking. In his worst moods, his words are so thick and drawn out you'd swear he's speaking through a filter of molasses.

Luis Guzman, who plays Edmond's trusted servant Jacopo, is a wonderful, if limited, character actor who has made a career out of playing comedic men in such films as Scarface, Boogie Nights, and Out of Sight. Unfortunately, his slang-laden, animated delivery doesn't quite fit in 17th-century France. It's hard to blame Guzman for being such a naturally funny guy, but too often his lines and facial expressions produce awkward chuckles. Note especially his inexplicable close-up during a stand-off between Edmond and Fernand, where his raised eyebrow and ironic expression shatter all tension the scene had succeeded in building.

Despite the film's uneven tone, it's impossible not to get caught up in Edmond's quest for revenge. Caviezel makes an elegant leading man, but it's his harried, desperate stretch as a prisoner that is the best portion of the film. Despite the monotonous setting, Caviezel's rapport with the jovial Harris allows their characters' mentor-protégé relationship to outshine the vengeful trickery and swordplay that dominate the latter half of the movie.

If you're sick of the award-grubbing that goes hand-in-hand with the holiday movie season, The Count of Monte Cristo is the perfect antidote. Decidedly flawed, but in an innocent, shrug-your-shoulders sort of way, Count, if nothing else, is just good, harmless fun.

Palestinian bomber strikes Jerusalem; 2 killed

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — A Palestinian woman on Sunday became the first female to launch a bomb attack against Israel, killing herself and an 81-year-old Israeli man and wounding at least a dozen people on a busy Jerusalem street.

Israeli police said they were not sure if the woman intended to kill herself or if the bomb exploded prematurely as she walked along Jaffa Street, the main commercial strip in West Jerusalem.

In Lebanon, the Al-Manar television station run by the militant Hezbollah movement said the bomber was Shinaz Amuri, a female student at Al-Najah University in the West Bank town of Nablus.

Israel accused Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat of "encouraging terrorism" and said it was prepared to respond to the bombing — the third major attack in an Israeli city in a week.

Vice President Dick Cheney said Arafat must "make a 100 percent good-faith effort to put an end to terrorism."

The blast next to a shoe shop blew out shop windows, set a store on fire, and left victims sprawled on the pavement amid shards of glass, pieces of fruit, shoes, and storefront mannequins.

"It sounded like half the street exploded," said Hama Gidon, a clothing-store worker who was slightly injured. "All the mannequins went flying, and I did, too. People were falling; glass was flying everywhere."

More than 100 people were treated on the spot or taken to hospitals, though most suffered only from shock. Three people were seriously hurt, and nine had moderate injuries, officials said.

Mark Sokolow, who survived the World Trade Center attack on Sept. 11, his wife, Rina, and daughters Jamie and Lauren all suffered minor injuries in the bombing.

"I heard a loud whoosh, like a bang, and I kind of saw things flying around a little bit, and then I realized I was able to get up and walk around," he told Israeli television.

Sokolow said he was on the 38th floor of the World Trade Center's south tower on Sept. 11 when a hijacked airliner hit the north tower. His office was evacuated, and he escaped before the south tower was hit.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for Sunday's attack, but Israel said it held Arafat ultimately responsible.

Arafat is "encouraging terrorism; he's sending [attackers] to Jerusalem," said Raanan Gissin, a spokesman for Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon. "We will continue to systematically dismantle the terrorist infrastructure."

The Palestinian leadership, meanwhile, "strongly condemned the suicide attack" and called on President Bush to send Mideast envoy Anthony Zinni back to the region. However, Bush has been sharply critical of Arafat, and Cheney suggested on "Fox News Sunday" that Zinni will not return soon.

"At this stage, we need to see some positive signs that his return would do some good. And that means we've got to see some positive results out of Arafat," Cheney said.

Arafat must "make a 100 percent good-faith effort to put an end to terrorism," he said. "So far, he hasn't done that."

Secret warriors prowl Afghanistan

By Ellen Knickmeyer
Associated Press

KANDAHAR, Afghanistan — They are the secret warriors in America's hidden war: CIA and Special Operations forces who ride into battle on pickup trucks, dune buggies, and helicopters.

As the U.S.-led campaign evolves from a seen-on-TV bombing campaign to a cave-by-cave hunt for Al Qaeda and Taliban holdouts, covert U.S. agents and troops are increasingly fighting the key battles.

But the Pentagon keeps details of this war secret. Only rarely — as with a Special Forces raid on Taliban forces this week — is some light shed on their operations. Even conventional U.S. forces also on the ground in Afghanistan are kept in the dark.

Troops from conventional units stationed at the airport here refer to the Special Forces as "the alphabet guys" — bearded warriors hidden behind sunglasses. Official military statements rarely mention them.

The "alphabet guys" tag apparently originated because many of the troops are linked to the CIA.

In Kandahar, Afghan provincial official Khalid Pashtun half-apologized this week for his gunmen's threats to shoot news photographers — at the behest, the gunmen said, of camera-hostile Special Forces whom the reporters were trailing. "We need them more than we need you," Pashtun told journalists. "What can we do? Which would you choose?"

No U.S. soldier relayed the threat directly to any of the reporters, and it was impossible to tell whether Pashtun embellished the instructions. However, the incident shows the close contact between Special Forces and Afghan allies and the lengths to which both go to keep operations secret.

Covert U.S. forces, including the Army Green Berets or Special Forces, are known as Special Operations forces and are drawn from all three armed services. They are spearheading operations against what Afghan leaders say are hundreds of fugitive Taliban and Al Qaeda fighters.

Army Special Forces led one of the largest such operations on Jan. 23, flying by helicopter to raid what the Pentagon says appeared to be Taliban military compounds in the north. The Pentagon reported approximately 15 enemy fighters killed and 27 captured. One American soldier was wounded.

Patriots, Rams Super Bowl bound

By Bill Barnard
Associated Press

The New England Patriots will be clear underdogs again when they make their third appearance in a New Orleans Super Bowl.

One early line for the Feb. 3 game between St. Louis and the Patriots has the Rams listed as 14½-point favorites, which would be the third-largest spread in Super Bowl history.

The Patriots also were double-digit underdogs in their two previous trips to the Super Bowl, by 10 points against Chicago in 1986 and by 14 against Green Bay in 1998. New England lost 46-10 to the Bears and, 35-21, to the Packers.

Certain to be one of the continuing story lines for Super Bowl week will be the status of New England quarterback Tom Brady, who twisted his left leg in the second quarter. He watched from the sideline in the second half as Drew Bledsoe led the Patriots to a 24-17 victory over favored Pittsburgh.

"We'll take a look at Tom's situation, and we'll make an evaluation there," Patriots coach Bill Belichick said. "We'll talk about it and make the decision later in the week."

Brady took over for the injured Bledsoe in the second week of the season and carried

Purdue not only had the No. 1 ranking in the conference on the line, the Boilermakers also had their pride to defend when the Iowa women's basketball team traveled to West Lafayette, Ind., on Sunday.

The Hawkeyes had nabbed three-straight games from the national runner-ups, most recently on Jan. 6, when Iowa came out on top, 90-75. But on Sunday, Purdue wielded the combination of its home-court advantage and exceptional play to overcome Iowa, 82-68.

The Boilermakers were smothering, rejecting passes into the post and free looks at the hoop en route to their 23rd consecutive conference victory at Mackey Arena.

"Going into the game, we tried to stress this to them," Iowa assistant coach Michael Morgan said. "We knew this was going to be a hostile place to play. I credit Purdue for its defensive storm. We weren't sharp or ready to attack. Our level of intensity didn't match theirs."

Before the game, Iowa coach Lisa Bluder said it would be essential for her Hawkeyes to outlast an anticipated fiery start from their arch foes for five minutes. Iowa did manage to trade baskets for the first five

The Iowa wrestling team's obliteration of Northwestern on Sunday was a lesson in control, said coach Jim Zalesky.

"When you have the opportunity to completely dominate your opponent, it's a great way to build up confidence in the team," he said.

And the Hawkeyes did just that, pummeling the Wildcats in a 40-6 rout. The Big Ten victory was the second for the Hawkeyes this weekend, after defeating No. 2 Ohio State on Jan. 25 in Columbus, 21-16.

Northwestern was out-muscled in eight of 10 matches, with the Hawkeyes putting bonus points on the board early and often as 3,458 fans watched Iowa claim five technical falls and two pins.

"Coach really enforced in us this week to go out and score a lot of points," junior Matt Anderson said. "He said that we've got to be ready for everybody, because everybody gets up for us, so we need to go all out."

Cliff Moore got things started for Iowa at 133 with a technical fall in 4:40. Northwestern rebounded with a decision at 141, but the Hawkeyes answered with a pin from Luke Moffitt at 149.

Moffitt was up 6-4 going into the final minute of the match but said he was weak from cutting weight Sunday morning to make 141.

"I knew it was close, but I didn't feel very good," he said. "My legs felt really heavy, and in the third period, he shot in on my legs. I just tried to create an attack and keep fighting."

Moffitt was stepping up a weight to fill in for Mike Zadick, who will compete in an All-Star tournament at Hofstra

IOWA MEN'S HOOPS Hawkeyes' streak peters out at one

By Dan Gelston
Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Purdue is starting to play the way coach Gene Keady thought it would in the preseason. Just don't expect him to talk too much about it.

Willie Deane scored 20 points and Maynard Lewis added 16 as Purdue survived a late run to beat Iowa, 73-68, Jan. 26.

"I think we coaches made a mistake in thinking how great we were going to be," Keady said. "These are such good kids that I went out and told everybody how good we were going to be and it backfired. We kind of overestimated their limitations."

The Boilermakers (11-11, 3-5 Big Ten) shot close to 60 percent over the first 30 minutes and opened up a 17-point lead early in the second half.

They then went in an offensive tailspin, going nearly seven minutes without a basket as Iowa (14-8, 3-5) went on a 13-2 run.

A Reggie Evans put-back on Iowa's fourth attempt at the basket made it 65-60, and Ryan Hogan's jumper just inside the 3-point line cut the gap to 66-62 with two minutes remaining.

Purdue's John Allison converted a 3-point play, but Luke Recker, who led Iowa with 20 points, answered with a 3-pointer to pull within four points.

Rodney Smith made two free throws, extending the lead to six. Deane could have sealed the win, but he missed two free throws.

Recker followed with a 3-pointer from the baseline with 18 seconds left, but the Hawkeyes wouldn't get closer.

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS Iowa falls to Cyclones, again

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Victory No. 17 came way too easy for the Iowa State women's gymnastics team.

The No. 9 Cyclones continued their dominance over Iowa after the Hawkeyes imploded on the balance beam and floor exercise in front of an enthusiastic crowd at the UI Field House on Jan. 26.

It was the 17th-straight time the Cyclones have beaten Iowa, and unlike last year, when Iowa was 0.3 of a point away from ending the streak, this one wasn't even as close as the final score of 195.250-193.175 indicated.

"It was embarrassing tonight," said coach Mike Lorenzen. "We gave the meet away. This is the worst meet of the year for us and one of the worst two or three since I've been here."

It was not what No. 22 Iowa had in mind for its home opener. Coming off a big win at No. 10 Michigan State, the GymHawks were confident that if they had a clean meet, they could beat their arch rivals and prove they were ready to be considered one of the best teams in the nation.

The meet started out in fine fashion. Alexis Maday's 9.9 and a hobbling Stephanie Gran's 9.85 on vault led Iowa to a tie with Iowa State after one event. The 48.775 on vault was Iowa's highest this season and gave the Hawkeyes a sense they could end the streak, Lorenzen said.

The uneven bars weren't so solid despite Maday finishing second. Iowa fell behind the Cyclones but were still very much in the meet heading to the beam, which had been the Hawks' strongest event this season.

Freshman Annie Rue fell on her handspring lay-out, step-out to begin the event. After a workman-like 9.8 from sophomore Nicole Wong, two more falls doomed Iowa. Even the normally reliable Maday fell victim to falling off the beam.

"I don't know what happened to the team on the beam," she said. "We lost our confidence, and the team spirit wasn't up on that event."

The confidence was obviously gone as Iowa looked sloppy on the floor, allowing the Cyclones to throw the first four places in that event.

"We started giving it away on bars and had an off night on beam," Lorenzen said. "The floor was just pitiful."

Although the Cyclones deserve credit for a well-played meet, Iowa regretted they couldn't have given the home fans a better showing, especially with both sets of bleachers full of fans.

"We didn't want it," Lorenzen said. "We will have to do some soul-searching to see what kind of team we want to be. Right now we don't belong in the top 25 or the postseason."

The loss hurts, as it could be viewed a setback for rebuilding the program into a national power. Yet, with several weeks to go, including a rematch in Ames on March 8, there is plenty of season left to correct the sloppy performances. Iowa will have a chance to rebound quickly when it hosts Southern Utah at 7 p.m. Saturday.

"We had an off night, but we have the ability to have a great meet. This next week will be an interesting test of character for the team," Lorenzen said.

A collapse then comeback for DiMarco

By Doug Ferguson
 Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Another record crowd at the Phoenix Open got the exciting finish they wanted. Chris DiMarco would have rather put them to sleep.

Especially the rowdy fan on No. 16.

DiMarco showed him up by making his birdie, and he showed plenty of grit Sunday by recovering from his stunning collapse for a one-stroke victory over hard-luck Kenny Perry and Japan's Kaname Yokoo.

John Daly had a meltdown, too, dropping five shots over seven holes, but he recovered with his second eagle of the round and tied for fourth, two strokes behind.

In a tournament that no one seemed to want to win, DiMarco got back in the game with an 8-iron from 171 yards that stopped not much more than 18 inches from the cup on the arena-like par-3 16th.

A tap-in?

Not after what Perry did on the 13th hole, a gimme that came back to haunt him. And not after the fan screamed out, "Noon!" as DiMarco stood over the putt.

That's a famous line in the movie Caddyshack, when everyone is shouting at Danny Noonan while he tries to make a 12-foot putt to win the caddie tournament.

Duffy Waldorf, of Canyon Country, Calif., hits out of the bunker on the ninth green during the third round of the Phoenix Open.

It gave me a little incentive to make the putt," DiMarco said. He did just that to draw even with Perry, then made a gesture with his thumb and told tournament officials to get the man off the TPC of Scottsdale. "I think he missed the ending," DiMarco said. That was the fan's loss. The Phoenix Open had a few more twists and turns.

DiMarco had to get up-and-down for par on the 332-yard 17th and was figuring how in the world he was going to hit the 18th fairway with his driver. He didn't have to, not after Perry three-putted from 30 feet for bogey on the 17th to fall one stroke behind. It finally ended with DiMarco two-putting from about 50 feet on the 18th and Perry's birdie putt burning the right edge of the cup. DiMarco closed with a 2-under 69 and finished at 267 for his third victory in as many seasons, putting him atop the PGA Tour money list and making him exempt for the U.S. Open. Perry had a 70, while Yokoo had a 7-under 64 to finish at 268. "I've won by six strokes, I birdied the 18th to force a play-off. This was one you had to hold on."

Football player dead in shooting

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — A college football player was killed and four students were wounded in a shootout outside a Catawba College residence, police said on Jan. 26. Darris Morris, 21, of Batesburg, S.C., died on Jan. 25. He was a two-time, all-conference linebacker in the South Atlantic Conference. The shooting was sparked by an argument among students at Catawba and Livingstone College at a campus party. The argument continued outside and at least one Livingstone student pulled a gun from a parked car and began firing, Salisbury Police Deputy Chief Mark Wilhelm said in a statement. Three others — two student-athletes from Catawba and one student from Livingstone — were wounded by gunfire shortly after 11 p.m., according to police. Another Livingstone student was injured during the shooting. Demetrius Phipps, 19, a sophomore on Catawba's basketball team from Newport News, Va., was treated for gunshot wounds in the hand and leg. Bradley McCrary, 20, a Catawba wide receiver from Lexington, N.C., was hospitalized with a shot in the leg. Two Livingstone students were treated for minor head injuries and released from a hospital. Six Livingstone students were charged with murder in Morris' death. They are: Ricardo Battle, 19, of Stone Mountain, Ga.; Terrence Austin, 19, of Atlanta; Morris Lee Brannon, 20, of Des Moines; Karl Anthony Wilson, 19, Atlanta; Corey Peterson of Salisbury; and Isaac Lamont Brazael, 19, of Battleboro. All were in a detention center with no bond allowed, Wilhelm said. Battle, led away from the magistrate's office to the jail Saturday, denied shooting anyone. "I got shot in the head for doing nothing," he said. The other five students did not comment after their court appearance Saturday. Catawba canceled a basketball game on Saturday. A memorial service was scheduled for Sunday on the Catawba campus. "I've been here for 18 years and this is the darkest day that I've seen at Catawba," school athletic director Dennis Davidson said.

Hawkeyes land in second

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

The No. 2 Iowa men's gymnastics team continued its stellar performances, finishing second out of eight teams at the Rocky Mountain Open on Jan. 25 at the Air Force Academy.

Don Jackson and Justin Leavitt's victories highlighted an encouraging performance by the Hawkeyes. Jackson won the pommel horse with a 9.4, and Leavitt took the horizontal bars with a career-best 9.3.

No. 1 Oklahoma lived up to its billing, winning the meet with a score of 214.325. Iowa scored 209.950, and a team of Olympic Training Center personnel finished at 206.150. No. 7 Nebraska finished fourth.

"Oklahoma was a long shot to beat, but we feel like we are the second-best team in the nation right now," Leavitt said.

The Hawkeyes beat everyone, including Oklahoma, on the floor event. The score of 35.750 was the Hawkeyes' season best. Cameron Schick finished second in the event and was third in the all-around competition. Meanwhile, senior Shane de Freitas took sixth in the all-around.

"We did pretty well, but there definitely is room for improvement," said Shawn Stone, who finished third on the floor exercise. "We need to be cleaning our routines. If we really hit, we have a chance to be No. 1, but Oklahoma is really good."

Leavitt beat out several Sooners and Huskers for the top score.

"I've been working on my bars routine for awhile now, and I hit it the other night," he said.

Iowa will travel next to Minneapolis to open its Big Ten season against No. 14 Minnesota on Saturday.

minutes, but thereafter, forward Shereka Wright led Purdue on a 5-0 run that quickly snowballed.

Hot shooting from Purdue from all over the floor teamed with stingy defense kept Iowa at an arm's length in the first half, but Purdue senior Kelly Komara headed a 6-0 run to close the period, putting the Boilermakers up, 48-33.

"They had great shooting," Morgan said. "We could never dig ourselves out of the hole. We needed to be more patient in the post and let the offense take its course."

In the second half, Purdue showed much of the same scoring flair in addition to forcing 19 turnovers and outrebounding the Hawkeyes, 43-26.

Iowa's Lindsey Meder came up with a few answers to get the Hawkeyes out of scoring jams, shooting five-of-10 from the 3-point line and ending with 25 points on the day. Kristi Faulkner was the only other Hawkeye in double-digits with 13.

Purdue had five players in double figures in the win, led by Noon and Komara, who each had 19 points. Wright chipped in 14.

"One of our strengths is 3-point shooting, and that's great for the next game," Morgan said. "We can go in confident. But we needed to have balance inside and outside, which is something we'll stress in our next practice. There are other obvious things we need to stress, too."

Iowa will return to action Thursday night against Michigan in Ann Arbor at 7 p.m.

University tonight.

Next up for the Hawkeyes was Anderson, whose 18-2 tech fall put Iowa up 16-3.

An Iowa loss at 165 would be the only other stumble the Hawkeyes would make, as Tyler Nixt and Jessman Smith each added technical falls, followed by a decision by Trey Clark over Brendan Curran at 197.

Clark, who has replaced Ryan Fulsas in the lineup because Fulsas suffered a possible season-ending knee injury, needs to build up confidence to match his ability, Zalesky said.

"It's like a light that is flickering on and off," Zalesky said. "He just needs some wins, to flip the switch all the way on. He has a lot of ability and talent, but he needs to convince himself that he is good."

A pin by Steve Mocco at heavyweight and a tech fall by Luke Eustice at 125 sealed the deal for the Hawkeyes, who improved their dual record to 12-2, 1-0 in the Big Ten.

In a more evenly matched outing Jan. 25 against Ohio State, Mocco powered past top-ranked Tommy Rowlands with a takedown in sudden victory to decide the meet. The Hawkeyes were up 18-16 with the highly anticipated showdown between Mocco and Rowlands on the line. Mocco's 3-1 decision was enough to solidify the Iowa victory, 21-16.

"Mocco came out strong and wrestled at a strong pace," Zalesky said of the freshman. "It's a big deal for him to come out and beat the top-ranked guy at his home."

In other key matchups, Zadick's major decision over Keaton Anderson kept his undefeated season intact and marked Zadick's first victory over Anderson, while Smith's match-ending technical fall kept the Hawkeyes in contention for the victory.

Iowa's next competition will be against top-ranked, and defending national champion, Minnesota, which returns eight All-Americans and is so far undefeated.

With Iowa's victory over the No. 2 Buckeyes, the showdown could feature the top two teams in the nation once new rankings are released this week.

"They have eight returning All-Americans; we have eight new guys in the lineup," Zalesky said. "But this kind of

Zadick to wrestle at NWCA All-Star meet

Senior Mike Zadick was noticeably absent from the Iowa roster in its Sunday matchup against Northwestern.

The undefeated 149-pounder, currently ranked No. 1 in the nation, will compete in the 36th annual NWCA All-Star Classic today at 6 p.m. Zadick was selected to travel to New York following the Hawkeyes' victory over Ohio State on Jan. 25 in Columbus, Ohio. He will face No. 2 Lock Haven's Jamarr Billman at Hofstra Arena in Hempstead, N.Y.

Hawkeyes dropped to 0-4 on road

WOMEN

The Boilermakers made only 16 of 26 free throws and were outrebounded, 34-17.

The Hawkeyes, however, had 23 turnovers to Purdue's 13. Even during their 13-2 run they had six turnovers.

"I'm going to give Purdue some of that credit because I think they fought us defensively," Iowa coach Steve Alford said. "It seemed like we were trying to force passes. I think we stepped out of bounds three times. How do you step out of bounds? We had just crazy turnovers."

Iowa has lost four of its last five games and dropped to 0-4 on the road in the Big Ten.

"We've got some players realizing how difficult it is to play in this league," Alford said. "When you have a good year or a good game, the hardest thing to do is back that up the next game or next year. That's the way this league is."

Allison had 10 points for Purdue, which shot 50 percent.

Glen Worley added 11 points for Iowa.

Purdue, which beat Northwestern earlier this week, has won two straight games for the first time since Dec. 17 and 20.

"Our kids have fought back well and made some strides toward playing the game right," Keady said. "To have these two wins this week is huge for us.

Our confidence is much better. We're starting to do things that we've done in past years."

The Boilermakers also can point to these last two games as signs of their progress. They blew double-digit leads at home to Butler and Minnesota earlier this year. Against Northwestern, they let a 15-point lead slip away before coming back and Saturday they never let Iowa get ahead.

New England to be underdogs again

the Patriots to the AFC East title, then led a comeback from a 10-point deficit to an overtime victory in snowy Foxboro Stadium in the playoffs.

"Feeling good, feeling good," Brady said of his injury, "and that's all coach wants us to say about it."

The Rams and Patriots will meet for the second time this season. St. Louis won, 24-17, on Nov. 18, with Kurt Warner completing 30 of 42 passes for 401 yards and three touchdowns.

"We played them once," Warner said. "And we had a great game with them. They are a very talented team, a fun team to watch and play, and they do some different things. Belichick had a different scheme when we played them the first time, and I'm sure he will come up with something for us this time. It should be fun."

Rams coach Mike Martz also was impressed with Belichick in the first meeting.

Martz said the Patriots are "as well-rounded and well-coached in all three phases of the game as there is in the league. Belichick has done a great job of coaching that team. What a run he is on since we played them. It will be a terrific matchup."

After beating Philadelphia 29-24 in the NFC title game Sunday, the Rams will make their second Super Bowl appearance in three years. They beat Tennessee in 2000 after Warner's first MVP season.

He was almost as spectacular last season, but the Rams faltered because of a leaky defense that allowed 471 points, seventh-most in NFL history and the most ever by a playoff team. Besides replacing eight starters, St. Louis hired a new defensive coordinator, Lovie Smith, and a new defensive staff.

In the playoffs, the Rams intercepted six passes from Brett Favre last week, then enabled Warner and the offense to rally from a 17-13 halftime deficit Sunday by holding the Eagles three-and-out in their first three series in the second half.

Only two Super Bowls had bigger favorites than the Rams at 14½ points.

San Francisco was favored by 19 in 1995 against San Diego, and the 49ers won, 49-26. The New York Jets beat the Baltimore Colts 16-7 as 18-point underdogs in 1969.

Men's tennis team splits, 1-1

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

Northern Illinois didn't find Iowa City to be too hospitable, as the Hawkeyes dominated the Huskies, 6-1, on Sunday.

The Hawkeyes took an early 1-0 lead after winning all three doubles matches to claim the point and confidence.

On Jan. 25, they suffered through a tedious 4-3 loss to William and Mary.

Junior Stuart Waters and freshman Justin Gaard recorded their first win of the year with a 9-8 victory over Raymond van Wasbeek and Aaron Forsberg in the No. 1 position. Both No. 2 and No. 3 doubles pairs Jake Wilson and Hunters Skogman and Petar Mandic and Pete Rose improved to 2-0.

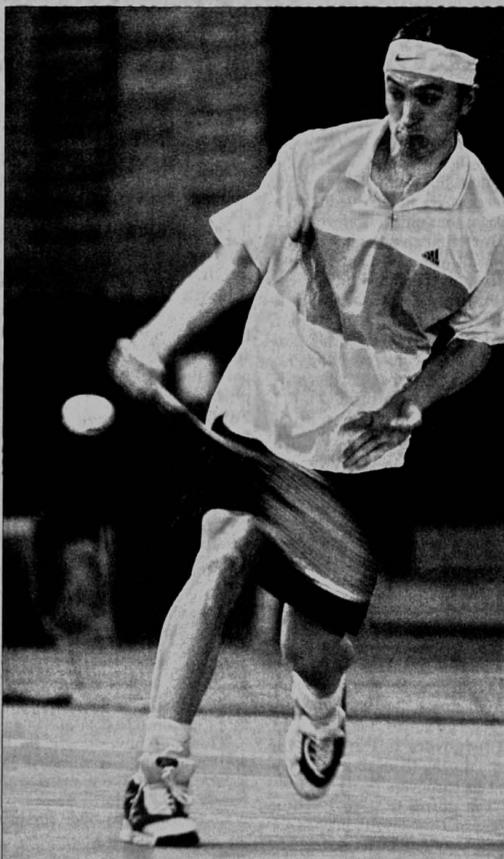

"I think the key was doubles today," Iowa coach Steve Houghton said. "We were down in all three matches and bounced back. I think that gave us some momentum going into singles."

In singles play, the Hawkeyes claimed five of six matches. In No. 2, Wilson played tough, losing a first set with Juan Pablo Barriga, 6-4, but coming back to win, 7-5, 6-1, in three.

"I just had to stick with him," Wilson said. "It was kind of like a chess match, where you learn their weaknesses and exploit them later in the match. I just had to fight hard and stay with it."

Waters downed van Wasbeek in straight sets (7-6, 7-5) to keep his perfect 2-0 record in singles. Gaard remained perfect as well, with a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Jon Perlman.

Houghton said No. 3 Mandic's performance against Erick Martinez (6-1, 6-4) was "the best tennis" he'd seen the senior play. Skogman also dominated No.

Abby Hansen/The Daily Iowan

Iowa senior Petar Mandic volleys during singles play against Northern Illinois on Sunday at the Recreation Building.

4 with a 6-2, 6-0 victory.

Iowa faced extremely tough competition on Jan. 25 in Minnesota against William and Mary. The Tribe defeated Iowa in four singles matches and one doubles match in the 4-3 victory.

Waters defeated Sean

Kellcher in three sets, (4-6, 6-4, 6-4), and Gaard defeated Zack Malmgren in four (4-6, 6-4, 7-6, 11-9).

Iowa has a week off before traveling to Lincoln, Neb., on Feb. 8 and Rice University on Feb. 10.

Women nab two victories

By Travis Brown
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swimming and diving team went into the weekend looking for two home wins against a pair of quality opponents. The Hawkeyes got their wish, as they rolled past Truman State, 157-105, on Jan. 25 and pulled out a close win over 20th-ranked Minnesota, 158-142, on Jan. 26.

Against Truman State, the Hawkeyes won nine of the 13 swimming events, even though several of the women were swimming off-events. Allison Lyle led Iowa, finishing first in the 100-breast (1:04.66), the 200-breast (2:19.77), and the 200-individual medley (2:06.93).

"The 100-breaststroke was a solid win for Allison Lyle," said coach Garland O'Keefe. "She had a really good night. We needed her to win a couple of events for us, and so she did. It's nice to have somebody you can count on like that."

Iowa opened its first home meet almost eight seconds ahead of the nearest competitor in the 400-medley relay. The team of Caitlin Girdley, Lyle, Melissa Loehndorf, and Erin Strub dominated with a time of 3:52.68.

Iowa's Christine Hooper led the 1,000-freestyle for almost the entire race until Truman State's Diana Betsworth came from behind to edge her by 0.01 of a second. Hooper finished in a time of 10:09.38.

Hawkeye Jennifer Skolaski also had a solid night, winning both the 200-free (1:52.93) and the 200-back (2:02.45) and finishing second in the 100-butterfly (0:57.39) to teammate Melissa Loehndorf (0:57.94). Skolaski's 2:02.45 in the 200-back set a Field House pool record.

"Jennifer Skolaski did well again," O'Keefe said. "She did very good for us in the 200-free. That's a solid win for her. She also set a pool record in the 200-backstroke. That was really exciting."

Conrad Schmidt/Daily Iowan

Iowa's Allison Lyle competes in the 100-yard breast stroke. She won the event with a time of 1:04.66.

Iowa started off the Minnesota meet with its diving squad. Newcomer Lisette Planken won both the 1-meter dive (278.48) and the 3-meter (300.98) in her first collegiate meet. Laura Maldonado finished third in the 1-meter (256.95), with Nancilea Underwood finishing fourth (256.35). In the 3-meter, Underwood finished second (289.88) and Maldonado third (283.50) to give Iowa the top three spots.

"The divers did fantastic," she said. "That really started us off on a good note. To have them go 1-2-3 and 1-3-4 on the other board is fantastic. It's really exciting that the diving jumped out that much. I'm really proud of them."

Running with the momentum the team gained in the diving, Iowa opened the swimming portion of the meet with a win in the 200-medley relay. Girdley, Lyle, Strub, and Katie Haeger narrowly defeated the Minnesota A in a time of 1:47.08.

After the relay, the Hawkeyes hit a drought, coming up winless in the next four events. Iowa finally broke out of its funk when Melissa Loehndorf chalked up a win in the 200-butterfly (0:57.44). Strub then posted a victory in the 50-free (0:24.37), and Haeger took second (0:24.49). After the break, Strub also won the 100-free (0:52.22), with Girdley (0:52.79) and Haeger (0:53.29) taking second and third respectively.

With three events remaining, Loehndorf took the team on her back and put Iowa in position to win the meet. She won both the 100-butterfly (0:57.44) and the 400-IM (4:27.89).

Iowa won the meet with a first-third finish in the 400-free relay, with Lyle anchoring the A team to the win (3:27.54) and Cochran anchoring the B team to a solid third place finish (3:30.60).

The pair of home wins improved Iowa's season record to 4-5 overall, 3-3 in the Big Ten. The team wraps up its regular season with a home meet against Kansas on Feb. 8. In that meet, Iowa will try to finish its regular season with a win and a 500-record.

"That will be another nail biter," O'Keefe said. "The Kansas meet is always a competitive meet for us. We've won the last two years, but it's always come close. We'll look to end on another high note."

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Only three able to compete in Hawkeye invitational

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team struggled over the weekend in competition, as only three players were eligible to play in the Hawkeyes' own invitational on Jan. 25-26.

Denitsa Alexandrova, Toni Neykova, and Pascale Veraverbeke did not compete in the weekend's contest because of NCAA eligibility issues, said Hawk coach Paul Wardlaw. The three would be back in the lineup for this weekend's duals, he said.

Against DePaul on Jan. 25, Jennifer Hodgman defeated

Rachel Dybas, 6-0, 6-3, and Steffi Hoch defeated Stephanie Matko, 6-1. Gloria Okino lost two matches to Natalie Matko and Megan Steward, both 8-2.

On Jan. 26, Hoch and Okino each prevailed in singles as well as in doubles. Hoch defeated Karin Westberg, 8-0, and Okino beat Tara Goedjen, 8-5.

Okino was the lone singles winner against Drake's Cindy Skogerboe, 1-6, 7-6, 10-8. She and Hoch also defeated Skogerboe and Annali de Bruyn in doubles (8-6).

"Overall, I think we did fine for the first matches of the spring season," Wardlaw said.

"We definitely showed we have a little rust to work off. I'm pleased with Okino, who had a nice win after being down."

The Hawkeyes will compete next in dual competition, traveling to Nashville to play national runner-up Vanderbilt on Friday and Tulane on Saturday.

"When you play teams on paper that are better than you, you find out where you are and what you need to work on," Wardlaw said. "We need to get used to playing again and competing on that level, which is hard to simulate in practice."

MEN'S AND WOMEN'S TRACK

Hawkeyes successful on road

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's and women's track teams ventured outside the confines of Iowa City for the first time this season when they participated in the Minnesota Classic in Minneapolis on Jan. 26.

Scoring 41 points, the women's team took home fifth place in the eight-team meet. Ohio State and Minnesota placed first and second with 130 and 126 points, respectively. No team scores were kept in the men's meet.

"I thought we had a good meet," Iowa women's coach James Grant said. "We were up against some very good teams."

The distance medley provided the lone Hawkeye victory as Alatie Barber, Aisha Hume, Sophia Chow, and Sarah Arens out-ran the field in a winning time of 12:20.44. Hume, a sophomore from Oropouche, Trinidad and Tobago, also turned in a second-place finish in the 400-meter dash in 57.36 seconds, her best time this season.

Plenty of Hawkeyes had solid showings in the meet. Junior Eve Cullinan placed fourth in the high jump, junior Sarah Steffen took fifth in the 60-meter hurdles (8.6 seconds), sophomore Tamara Dixon placed fifth in the 60-meter dash and eighth in the 200-meter dash, and freshman Jen Gilson placed fifth in shot put and seventh in the weight throw.

"Ninety-five percent of the team improved their performances from the week before," Grant said. "When that happens, you can't ask for much more."

Led by senior thrower Jim Costello and sophomore sprinter Juan Coleman, the Iowa men turned in some strong individual performances for coach Larry Wiczorek.

Costello posted his best performance of the season in the weight throw, winning the event with a throw of 66 feet and one-half inch, good enough for top 10 in the nation. He also finished ninth in shot put with a toss of 38 feet 1.5 inches.

Meanwhile, Coleman's 22.01 seconds in the 200-meter dash earned him third place. The result is a little misleading however, as the two runners in front of Coleman were college graduates running unattached. Coleman also anchored the 1,600-meter relay team to a third-place finish with a sweltering

46.2 second split. "I don't know if we've ever had anybody run that kind of relay split on an indoor track," Wiczorek said. "We may have seen the emerging of a future star here at the UI."

Elsewhere in the sprints, redshirt freshman Ryan Strang provided the other official victory for the Hawkeyes with his 1:20.9 performance in the 600-meter dash. Freshman Matt O'Hollearn and sophomore Josh Tweedy finished fourth and fifth in the 600 with times of 1:23.52 and 1:25.00, respectively.

The Hawkeyes also received good showings out of their distance events, with freshman Matt Esche taking second place in the 3,000-meters and three top-10 finishes by Adam Thomas, Shuan Allen, and Eric McDermott in the mile.

Outside of Costello and Coleman, though, no area stands out as the heart of the Hawkeye lineup.

"I think we're still a team trying to find where our strength is going to be," Wiczorek said. "But I really came away feeling positive about the meet, that we got better."

MEN'S SWIMMING AND DIVING

Iowa sinks to No. 6, No. 22

By Travis Brown
The Daily Iowan

Facing two nationally ranked teams in a double dual, even in your home pool, is a tall order.

The men's swimming and diving team fell to both sixth-ranked Minnesota, 206-93, and 22nd-ranked Indiana, 169-130, on Jan. 26 at the Field House. Despite losing to both teams, Iowa coach John Davey was pleased with how his team performed.

"We swam really well," he said. "Obviously, we got beat by two teams that were in the top 25. We had a lot of lifetime bests today, which is pretty unusual for the middle of the season."

The Hawkeye swimmers were led by Marko Milenkovic and Jason Snider. Milenkovic won the 400-individual medley (3:58.28) despite battling illness.

"Usually, they get tired at the end of the meet, and I'm pretty solid with the 400-IM," Milenkovic said. "I'm pretty confident right now. I need to recover from a sickness I got in Hawaii. That's why my backstroke was pretty bad."

"He's been sick for about a week," Davey said. "He was really tough today to win the 400-IM. He was kind of cruising in toward the end so he could have been a little faster."

Snider finished second in the 200-butterfly (1:48.49) and fourth in the 100-fly (0:49.85) to complete a very good individual performance. Andrei Prada added fourth-place finishes in both the 200-free (1:41.51) and the 100-breast (2:03.62).

The divers had an excellent meet for the Hawkeyes, with Timo Klami leading the way.

Klami won the 1-meter (268.15), handing teammate Simon Chrisander his first loss in the one-meter this season. Chrisander finished second (266.20).

Klami finished second in the 3-meter (271.50), behind Indiana's Marc Carlton. Chrisander finished third (269.10), also his first loss in the event this season. Iowa's Alex Burns and Roberto Gutierrez also finished fourth and fifth, respectively.

Klami recently returned from injuries that have kept him out of competition thus far this season. Early in the season, he broke his elbow; later, he sprained his ankle. The double dual on Jan. 26 was his first meet this year.

"He's definitely going to help us," Davey said. "He's had his share of adversity this year, that's for sure. It's good to have him back."

The two losses dropped the Hawkeyes' overall record to 1-4 in dual meets, 0-4 in the Big Ten. They will next compete on Friday, when they travel to Missouri to take on the Tigers.

Sloppy Lakers don't put up fight

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — All in all, Phil Jackson wasn't exactly thrilled with the idea of coming back to Philadelphia in two weeks for the NBA All-Star game.

Thanks to the 76ers, he won't have to.

Allen Iverson, Derrick Coleman, and Dikembe Mutombo led Philadelphia to a 93-87 victory over Los Angeles on Sunday, preventing Jackson from earning the coaching spot for the Western Conference team.

Playing a sleep-deprived Lakers team that was starting a five-game road trip, the 76ers got 29 points from Iverson and strong all-around games from their big men in a rematch of last season's NBA Finals.

"This game meant a lot to us — the Lakers beat us so bad in the finals last year," Mutombo said. "If we see each other again, we have a chance to put up a good fight."

The loss left the Lakers with a record of 29-12, meaning Dallas Mavericks coach Don Nelson will guide the West when the All-Star game is held at the First Union Center on Feb. 10. The Mavericks are 32-12.

Before the game, Jackson discussed the possibility of coaching in the All-Star game for the fourth time. And while he wasn't openly cringing at the thought, it was clear he wasn't enamored of the idea.

Jackson said his best All-Star coaching memory was from when he was a coach in the CBA, adding that the NBA rule that determines the coaches based on their records two weeks before the game is not his favorite.

"I think baseball does it right. The teams that were in the World Series, they go. It's not like this crazy stuff," Jackson said before Sunday's game. "You don't know if you're going, it's the only break you have in the season for four days, and you can't even make plans to go to Cabo and get sun."

Jackson's postgame comments centered on a foul call against Shaquille O'Neal that sent Iverson to the line for a pair of free throws with 45 seconds left. Iverson, who scored 14 points in the fourth quarter, made both shots for an 87-84 lead after he came around a screen and slammed into the 7-footer.

"Why do you want to make a critical call like that at that time?" Jackson said.

Derek Fisher then missed a reverse layup with 35 seconds left, and the 76ers worked the clock down to 14.5 seconds before Mutombo hit a 12-foot jumper for an 89-84 lead.

"I knew that Shaq was not going to come out. He left me wide open," Mutombo said.

Coleman had 18 points and 12 rebounds, and Mutombo added 13 points and 18 rebounds for Philadelphia, which outscored Los Angeles 30-20 in the fourth quarter after trailing for much of the first three quarters.

Iverson failed to reach 30 for the first time in eight games. Matt Harpring added 14 points, and Eric Snow had 10 points and 10 assists as Philadelphia moved a game above .500 for the first time since Dec. 1.

O'Neal scored 26, and Kobe Bryant had 25 for the Lakers, who might have been thrown off by the noon EST starting time. Los Angeles played at home Jan. 25 night, and Jackson said the players had not yet adjusted to the time change.

"It's almost an impossible situation for these guys — play a game late Friday night, fly all day long," Jackson said. "These guys had to be up at 5:30, their time, this morning, and with most of them it's at least 1 or 2 a.m. before they go to sleep."

"That means their circadian rhythms are probably putting them in a deeper sleep at 4 in the morning, which means they may have gotten a few moments of REM sleep," Jackson added.

Iverson gave Philadelphia the lead for good by hitting a 10-foot jumper to make it 71-69 with 10:20 left in the fourth. Coleman grabbed an offensive rebound that led to a short corner jumper by Mutombo for an 83-79 lead with 3:22 left, and Iverson hit a wide-open jumper from the corner to make it 85-79 with 1:47 left.

"They really wanted to win that game, and they deserved it," Lakers forward Rick Fox said. "I wouldn't be surprised if we met them again in the finals."

Family and friends rally around wrestler

By Anwar Williams
The Daily Iowan

Although Iowa wrestler Ryan Heim's condition remains critical, he began breathing on his own Jan. 26, answering the prayers of his family and friends.

Ryan's father, Leo Heim, said he hopes his son will be off the respirator by today. "Things are going good. I am confident Ryan is going to pull through," Leo Heim said.

Ryan Heim was injured when his Chevrolet van was struck by a semi-truck on Interstate 80 last week as he, his father, and friends returned from a wrestling meet in Columbus, Ohio.

In 1998, Iowa senior wrestler Jeff Stewart was in a car accident that put him in a coma for 29 days.

Stewart, who has visited Ryan Heim three times, said he identifies with Heim's condition and knows that, although it will take a long time, he is confident Heim will recover.

"I had to learn how to sit up, walk, and eat all over again. Recovering was very, very slow going," Stewart said.

Stewart said his body would not do what it used to be able to do and that it's been tough to "pick up pride" and continue wrestling knowing he could have done better if he had not been in an accident. He began his Iowa wrestling career with a 14-3 record.

"You learn to value what you have and what you can lose in a blink of an eye," he said as he pointed out scars on his stomach and neck that are permanent markers of the accident he no longer can remember.

"Fighting carries over in life. [Ryan Heim] is a fighter on the mat and in life. That is why I'm 100 percent confident he'll survive," Stewart said.

When she heard of Ryan Heim's accident, Dianne Stewart said she immediately knew what his family was going through and that she had to make the trip from Minneapolis to visit him because she considers the Iowa wrestling team to be family.

"Not knowing is the hardest part. When you're in that position, you find yourself begging the Lord to make him live," she said.

Duke duo deals in double figures

By David Droschak
Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Jason Williams scored 27 points, Carlos Boozer added 25, and No. 1 Duke shot 68 percent in the second half to race past No. 7 Virginia, 94-81, Sunday night.

The Blue Devils (18-1, 6-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) won their sixth straight — all by double digits — since losing by one point to Florida State on Jan. 6.

Duke kept pace with No. 3 Maryland atop the ACC standings nearing the halfway point of the league season, while the Cavaliers (14-3, 4-3) fell into a fourth-place tie with Wake Forest. North Carolina State is third at 5-2.

Williams notched his 11th 20-point game of the season, while Boozer had six in a row as the Blue Devils improved to 18-4 in their last 22 matchups with Top Ten teams and snapped Virginia's five-game winning streak. The Cavaliers battled foul trouble all night and was led by Roger Mason Jr.'s 15 points.

The score was tied 42-42 at halftime, but Duke took control in the opening five minutes of the second half.

The Blue Devils went 7-of-9 from the field as Boozer had a fastbreak layup and a slam, while Dahntay Jones scored on two follow shots. A 3-pointer by Chris Duhon — his first points of the game — gave Duke its first double-digit lead, 59-48 with 15:13 left.

Virginia was within nine points three minutes later despite missing eight straight shots at one point. But Boozer had two dunks and a follow shot and Williams a fastbreak layup to run the score to 77-59 as the nation's top scoring team inched closer to yet another 20-win season under coach Mike Krzyzewski.

Virginia had four frontcourt players with three fouls each after 20 minutes, but the Cavaliers were able to forge the half-time tie with dominating inside play.

lege on Thursday night, but this time it didn't come as easily against a team it blew out by 42 in Cameron Indoor Stadium a year ago.

The Blue Devils went up by seven 6:41 before the half. However, the Cavaliers went on an 8-0 run to keep it close without Travis Watson, the ACC leader in double-doubles who sat out the final 11:11 with three fouls.

Virginia got a huge lift from freshman Jason Clark, who hit all five of his first-half shots and had a season-high 11 points over the final 6:56 of the period.

Johansson on top in Australia Open

By Phil Brown
Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Maybe this was fitting. In a tournament that set records for early exits by top stars, Thomas Johansson wound up as one unlikely Grand Slam champion.

The 26-year-old Swede was supposed to be a bit player at the Australian Open. Instead, he walks away with the title.

Johansson, seeded 16th, beat the more established Marat Safin 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 (4) Sunday in a final lasting nearly 3 hours.

"These two weeks have been the best two weeks of my life," he said. "Today was just a dream come true. It was unbelievable. I don't have the words to say how happy I am."

How unexpected was Johansson's triumph?

— In 24 previous Grand Slam tournaments, he never had advanced beyond the quarterfinals (1998, 2000 U.S. Opens).

— He came into the Australian Open with a total of six career titles since turning pro in 1994.

— In his final warmup event before the Australian Open, at Sydney, Johansson lost in the first round to Julien Boutter, who's not even ranked in the top 50.

The women offered far fewer surprises, with defending champion and No. 1 Jennifer Capriati meeting Martina Hingis in the final for the second straight year.

Capriati rebounded from 0-4 in the second set, saved a record four match points and then saw Hingis wilt in the 95-degree heat of the final set. Capriati won 4-6, 7-6 (7), 6-2 Saturday.

She now has won three of the last five Grand Slams tournaments. Hingis, meanwhile, has lost three straight Australian finals after winning three titles in a row. She has not won a major since the 1999 Australian Open.

Johansson made a point last week of acknowledging that he's not the most dynamic personality in the game.

"Look at me, I'm not that interesting," he after his quarterfinal win over countryman Jonas Bjorkman. "If you color your hair red and you act a little bit different, then you're interesting."

Johansson finished 2001 ranked 18th — making him Sweden's top player — after winning two tournaments. Still, he knew he wasn't about to draw crowds.

"I'm playing tennis pretty good," he said. "But as a person

I'm not really fancy." And so, all in all, Johansson was an all-too-appropriate champion of the 2002 Australian Open.

This was a tournament in which the top five seeded men were eliminated halfway through the second round, something that had never happened before at a Grand Slam event.

Johansson faced only two seeded players — No. 21 Younes El Aynaoui and No. 26 Jiri Novak — on his way to the final.

In Johansson's half of the draw, No. 2 Gustavo Kuerten lost in the first round, No. 4 Yevgeny Kafelnikov and No. 5 Sebastien Grosjean lost in the second round, and No. 6 Tim Henman lost in the fourth round.

The field was further depleted with No. 1 Lleyton Hewitt, weakened by chicken pox, losing in the first round, and defending champion Andre Agassi dropping out on the eve of the tournament with a wrist injury.

But none of that matters to Johansson. He did what he had to, and the title belongs to him, after outlasting 2000 U.S. Open champion Safin, a Russian seeded ninth.

Street attempts to repeat

By Rob Gloster
Associated Press

It turns out Picabo Street still has a chance — albeit a slim one — of defending her super-G Olympic gold medal.

Street, the only American to win an Alpine skiing medal at the 1998 Nagano Olympics, will officially find out today whether she'll be on the U.S. super-G team at the Feb. 8-24 Salt Lake City Games.

Street had such poor super-G results during the World Cup season that she failed to clinch an automatic berth on the U.S. team in that event. The rosters for the U.S. men's and women's ski teams will be announced today.

She already is assured of a spot on the U.S. squad for the Olympic downhill, her best race and the event in which she won a silver medal in the 1994 Games.

Even though Street said her 33rd-place finish in a race Jan. 25 in Italy was "my last super-G," there's still a remote possibility she'll leapfrog a pair of U.S. skiers with better results and be selected to the squad.

Kirsten Clark, Caroline Lalive, and Jonna Mendes all clinched spots on the U.S. team for the super-G by finishing in the top 10 of a World Cup race this season.

Based on U.S. Ski and Snowboard Association guidelines, the top contenders for the fourth U.S. spot in super-G would be Katie Monahan, who has two top-20 finishes this season, and Julia Mancuso, whose 22nd-place finish Jan. 25 is better than anything Street has managed.

But USSA rules state that three skiers will be picked for each event based on objective criteria such as competition results and that "coaches' discretion must be limited to no more than 25 percent of total named team."

That means the fourth spot could be based on more subjective criteria, such as Street's position as the defending champion and the obvious interest fans — not to mention broadcaster NBC — would have in her skiing in two events in Salt Lake City.

Street, who has struggled on the slopes since ripping up her right knee and shattering her left thigh in a World Cup race in 1998, said Jan. 25 that downhill "is more natural for me."

She has two top-10 finishes in World Cup downhills this season.

"There are certain risks that you have to take in super-G that I'm just not ready to take," she said.

But U.S. team selectors also know that Street cannot be counted out of any race. She won her super-G gold medal in 1998 just 14 months after tearing ligaments in her left knee and only a couple of weeks after suffering a concussion in another skiing accident.

Already assured of a spot in the Olympics is Kristina Koznick, a Minnesotan who trains independently of the U.S. team. She will be the U.S. women's skiing squad's top medal contender.

Koznick has a win and a pair of second-place finishes in World Cup slaloms this season and stands a good chance at a medal in that event. Her victory — actually a tie for first place — came eight days ago in Germany.

"I think after what happened to us on Sept. 11, every American will be cheering for me," she said. "I'm trying to plan it so I can peak for the Olympics going home in February. I think I'm right on track."

Bode Miller has been the top technical skier in the world this World Cup season, and his selection to lead the U.S. men into the Olympics will come as no surprise.

Miller has three slalom wins and a giant slalom victory on the World Cup circuit, and he is the only legitimate Olympic medal contender for the men in Alpine skiing.

horoscopes

Monday, January 28, 2002 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You won't have any trouble getting others to listen to your well-thought out plans. Social activity, competitive sports, and any form of entertaining will put you into the spotlight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't let the petty little comments made by others upset you. Relax and think about yourself for a change. You aren't in any position to make changes today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your talkative nature will ensure that you establish good friendships and partnerships today. If you tell it like it is, you will get the kind of reception you're looking for.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Money matters will be your prime concern today. End of the month bills will probably end up costing you more than you anticipated. Set a strict budget for yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Refrain from taking things too personally. If you overreact, you may not like the reaction you get in return. Overindulgence will lead to regrets.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take it easy today. You need to rejuvenate. Put yourself first for a change, and you will be able to get yourself back on course.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The more you help others, the better you will feel about yourself. The more you interact with others, the better your chance will be to meet someone who can influence your life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Organize your responsibilities so that you don't disappoint anyone, including yourself. You should look into making some changes to your home that will help lighten your workload.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will be eager to learn everything you can in order to better understand your future direction. You will not want to waste time today, so make solid plans and follow through with them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You owe it to yourself and to your family to take care of unfinished business. You have a good sense when it comes to legalities and financial matters, so help those in your family who have a problem dealing with such issues.

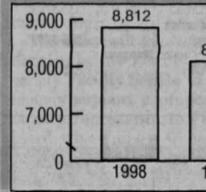

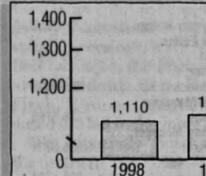

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't push the ones you love today. It is best to keep a low profile and do your own thing. Be open to what others want to pursue and keep a positive frame of mind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Put some time aside to take care of personal matters. It's time you looked into some new hobbies that will get you thinking and help you develop your creative talents.

Poor economy equals a grad school

By Jessica Brady
The Daily Iowan

Many recent college graduates are putting off their careers and going to graduate school because of a poor job market making admission in some programs more competitive, University officials say.

Officials at both the University of Law and Graduate College pointed to increases of rejected increases in applications this year in response to a slowing economy.

"If people can find good jobs coming out of college, they said Tim Hagle, a UI assistant professor of political science who is also a pre-law advisor. "Otherwise, they turn to education in order to increase their chances [for a better job] the future."

The rush of applications make getting into law school more competitive this year. Patricia Cain, the UI law school's admissions coordinator, said 180 students were accepted at the law school from a pool ranging from 1,400 to 1,500 applicants, an overall increase of approximately 200 from that of years, Cain said.

At the Graduate College where officials estimate there will be a 15 percent increase in applications, there is no word on how many students were admitted, so it is not as

Supreme decision

By John Moiseid
The Daily Iowan

A U.S. Supreme Court decision last week increased momentum of an Iowa Civil Liberties Union lawsuit seeking to have convicted sexual predator receive equitable treatment, said legal director Randall Wilson.

The ICLU is suing the state, charging that the civil liberties of Oakdale-facility detainees in the predator program are violated. The Supreme Court ruling requires states to provide that convicted sexual predator cannot control their dangerous behavior as a condition for commitment after serving prison sentences.

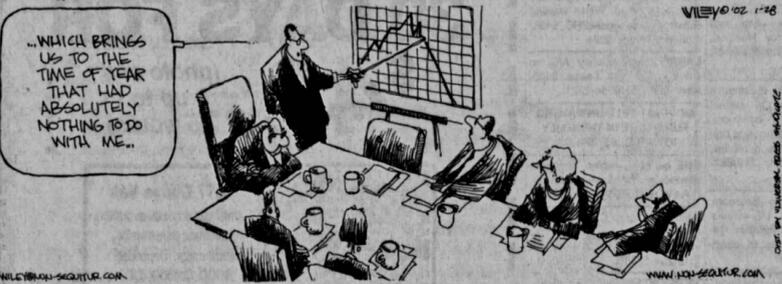

Courts now need to fund address sexual-predator and establish clear parameters for treatment and protection of people in the program, Wilson said.

The Supreme Court issued the decision on Jan. 22, striking out a Kansas Supreme Court ruling in favor of a
