UIHC sued over paralysis

By Vess Mitev
The Daily Iowan

Parents contending that their daughter was paralyzed because of negligence in the UI Hospitals and Clinics' radiation treatment department filed a lawsuit against the state and hospital Thursday in Johnson County District Court.

According to the lawsuit, Anne Osterholz, then 8, suffered from acute lymphocytic leukemia and came to the UIHC in 1995 to receive treatment for a relapse. She was originally treated for the disease at the UIHC from 1991 to 1993.

The lawsuit, which seeks an unspecified monetary sum, cited negligence on behalf of UIHC radiation techniques that left the girl wheel-chair bound, experiencing "permanent brain and spinal cord damage, severe mental anguish, pain, suffering, and loss of enjoyment of life."

The Osterholz family declined to comment, saying they had yet to speak formally with their lawyers. The law firm representing the family, Hayes Lorenzen Lawyers PLC, 125 S. Dubuque St. Iowa City, also refused to comment on the matter.

According to the lawsuit, doctors found a perfect bone-marrow match in Anne's sister, so her family decided to proceed with radiation treatment targeting her cranium and spine in preparation for a transplant.

Paraplegia set in overnight a year after the 1995 transplant. Anne was still receiving steroid treatment to supplement her recovery at the time. The family researched their daughter's health problems for two years, when a medical professional called in 1998 and said her

Lobbying too late; cuts pass

By Gigi Wood

DES MOINES — Legislators told UI Student Government members they were too late when they arrived at the State Capitol in Des Moines Thursday to fight a 1 percent state budget cut and furloughs for state workers.

Members of the UI entourage were told legislators had already decided to endorse the cut, which would cost the university approximately $5 million, according to Doug True, the vice president for Finance.

"It's unfortunate when legislators tell us it's a waste of our time," said UI sophomore Mayrose Wegmann, the president of UI Democrats. "But it's not a wasted trip. It's good to maintain a presence because we pay our tuition."

The Senate voted, 26-20, Thursday to approve an amendment to the original budget proposal that allows state agencies to determine whether to implement furloughs. The vote was passed after UISG members spent the day educating legislators about the effect of budget cuts on state universities.

Gov. Tom Vilsack will have three days to sign or veto the bill once he receives it.

"Instead of a furlough, we're going to allow UI department heads to decide what to cut, whether it's equipment, or conventions and trips, or laying people off," said Rep. Mary Mascher, D-Iowa City, who sits on the House Appropriations Committee, which approved the cut.

The original proposal would have forced state workers to take one day off a month to save the state $12 million this fiscal year and $52 million next year.

University officials have said furloughs would be difficult to implement because the school's employees are not all paid solely with state funds.

"This is a major step forward," True said. "Cutting the budget is bad enough."

High court nixes convictions in NY police brutality

By Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In a stunning turn in one of the nation's most shocking police-brutality scandals, a federal appeals court Thursday threw out the convictions of three of the four white officers sent to prison in the torture of Haitian immigrant Abner Louima.

A three-judge panel of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled unanimously that Charles Schwarz's lawyer did not defend him adequately and that the jury was tainted by news reports when it convicted him of violating Louima's civil rights by holding him down during the 1997 assault in a police station bathroom.

The court also said there was insufficient evidence to sustain the obstruction-of-justice convictions of Schwarz, 36, and Officers Thomas Wiese, 38, and Thomas Bruder, 35. Wiese and Bruder had been accused of lying to cover up Schwarz's role.

The ruling did not affect the guilty plea of the main attacker, Justin Volpe, 37, who admitted he sodomized the handcuffed Louima with a broken broomstick in a fit of rage. Volpe is serving 30 years.

Civil-rights leaders and Louima supporters expressed outrage over the ruling, which reopens an explosive case that inflamed racial tensions and touched off street protests.

The Rev. Al Sharpton called the decision "a shocking display of how the judicial system continues to fail to protect citizens from police abuse."

Louima, at his home in Miami, had no comment.

Restaurants take one last deep breath

By Nathan Kron

After months of contentious debate from both sides, an ordinance goes into effect today banning smoking in Iowa City restaurants that generate more than 50 percent of their revenue from in-house food sales.

While public-health advocates applaud the move, saying customers and workers will be able to breathe easier, some local restaurant owners are worried it will harm business and are looking for ways around the law. Coralville business owners, meanwhile, are waiting to see if smokers head their direction.

Customers took their last puffs in dozens of Iowa City restaurants Thursday night, but 44 have been granted exemptions from the ban for at least the next year. Some are changing their business practices so that alcohol sales will make up more than 50 percent of income, which will make them exempt by next year.

The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., for instance, is dropping high-price menu items such as steak dinners, increasing week-night drink specials, and cutting back kitchen hours. The Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S.

Gilbert St., has also removed high-priced items from its menu and plans to promote alcohol specials to boost alcohol sales above 50 percent of its total revenue. Both restaurants have been granted a temporary exemption.

The ordinance, which the Iowa City City Council approved in January, will become tougher in two years,

New charges from all over surface against 'DeWitts'

Kmart corporation reported a six-figure monetary loss to the sextet arrested on multiple forgery counts in Coralville, helping police identify store locations in eight states that were allegedly victimized by the suspects.

The multi-state investigation, which already involves police in Florida, Indiana, and Mississippi, now stretches to Illinois, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Missouri, North Carolina, Ohio, and West Virginia.

"These ... states are the new ones we know of so far," said Coralville police Lt. Ron Wenman. "But we expect there are more."

As a result, the six suspects arrested Sunday each face five new counts of conspiracy to commit forgery in addition to previous charges in Coralville that include forgery, falsifying identifications, and assaults.

Coralville police learned of the suspects' connection to the discount stores after a Kmart regional representative in Des Moines contacted them, Wenman said. The representative, whom investigators would not name, told police he recognized the six members of the alleged "DeWitt" family in Iowa media and called police.

The representative gave police a list of stores that reported having "bogus" checks with names matching aliases found on documents at in the Ramada Westfield Inn, I-80 and Highway 965, where the defendants were arrested, Wenman said. By late afternoon Thursday, he said, the list had connected police to store locations stretching across half of the United States.

Local Kmart representatives refused to comment on the matter.

Since Coralville police arrested the members of the "DeWitt" family at the inn, the story has sparked national efforts to determine who they really are and the nature of their charges.

The males in the DeWitt family allege that they are the Rev. Robert Eugene Sr., a.k.a. Shannon Banks, 55; Robert Eugene Jr., a.k.a. Robert Banks, 29; Mark Eugene, a.k.a. Mark Banks, 28; and Timothy Eugene, a.k.a. Timothy Banks, 26. The females say they are Ruby Esther, a.k.a. Elizabeth Banks, 55; and Esther Joy, a.k.a. Esther Banks, 23.

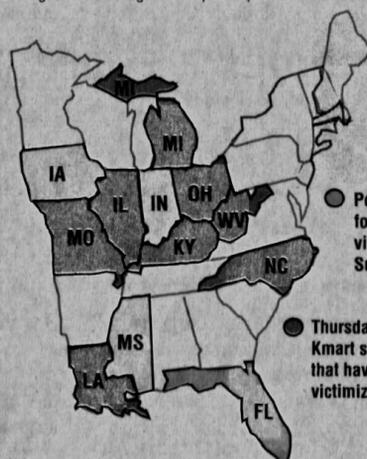

Detectives, however, question the validity of the names and dates of birth, as a national search has uncovered zero matches. Further, the suspects have refused to provide Social Security numbers, police said.

Along with alleged stolen property, checkbooks, and credit cards, police said they also uncovered evidence suggesting the group was engaged in making fake IDs.

Second government agency cites Enviro Safe in fire

By Tony Robinson and Lauren Smiley
The Daily Iowan

Two government agencies have cited the company allegedly responsible for the fire that demolished the Old Capitol's golden dome, but Enviro Safe Air denies all allegations and will fight them in court, its attorney said.

This week, the Iowa Occupational Safety and Health Administration cited the company for 16 violations on the Old Capitol project, including using propane torches and heat guns during asbestos removal — which fire officials deemed to be the cause of the Nov. 20, 2001 blaze. The South-Dakota-based company faces up to $65,000 in penalties from the safety agency for the violations on the Old Capitol project. The citations and monetary penalties are "extreme," said G. Daniel Gildemeister, a Sioux City attorney who represents the company.

"All of these allegations are defensible, and [Enviro Safe Air] is denying responsibility for all of it," he said Thursday.

Enviro Safe Air appealed the alleged violations Thursday, meaning that a judge will decide on their merit. A court date has yet to be determined.

Mary Bryant, administrator for the safety agency, said the citations were "for service violations and repeated violations." The 13-page citation is one of 400 to 500 the agency issues each year, she said. The company had been cited by the department for another job in 2000.

The state Department of Natural Resources issued the company a "notice of violation" in December 2001 for failing to follow federal environmental guidelines by not keeping asbestos adequately moist. The DNR is still considering whether to issue a fine.

UI employees supervising the asbestos-removal have also been reprimanded as a result of the fire that caused an excess of $5 million in damages. Doug True, the vice president for Finance, told the state of Iowa Board of Regents that university employees failed to notify supervisors about two letters warning of Enviro Safe Air's allegedly unsafe work practices.

Officials would not comment on how many university employees faced disciplinary action or their specific punishments because they are personnel records.

University officials are waiting to file an insurance claim with Enviro Air Safe until all interior-damage is assessed. Cedar Rapids-based O.P.N. Architects has been contracted to build the new dome; no start date has been set.

State law requires that university projects be awarded to the lowest qualified bidder as long as it is deemed to be qualified. The university doesn't believe Enviro Safe is competent enough for

Alleged Enviro Safe violations

Officials from the Iowa Occupational Safety and Health Administration fined Enviro Safe for violations that allegedly caused the Old Capitol fire. Allegations include:

- Instructing workers to use heat to remove material containing asbestos, which can dry the fibers and create a health risk.
- Improperly using open flame torches to remove lead-based paint.
- Failing to properly train those removing lead-based paint.
- Failing to establish a fire-alarm system.

Search still on for grad-college dean

By Rebecca Sutlive
The Daily Iowan

Two years and two failed out-of-state candidates later, the UI Graduate College's search for a new dean has turned its focus inward, narrowing it down to two UI faculty members.

John Keller, the associate dean for the college between 1998 and 2000, met with student and faculty groups Thursday as part of a two-day interviewing process. Keller is a professor in the College of Dentistry, and he has acted as interim dean since former Graduate Dean Leslie Sims resigned in 2000. John Nelson, the second candidate, is a professor of political science and director of the Project on Rhetoric of Inquiry.

The committee decided this fall to turn its search inward because existing faculty would possess more knowledge of the budgetary constraints facing administrators, said Susan Birrell, the chairwoman of the search committee.

Committee members hope to make a recommendation for the position to Provost Jon Whitmore by the end of the semester.

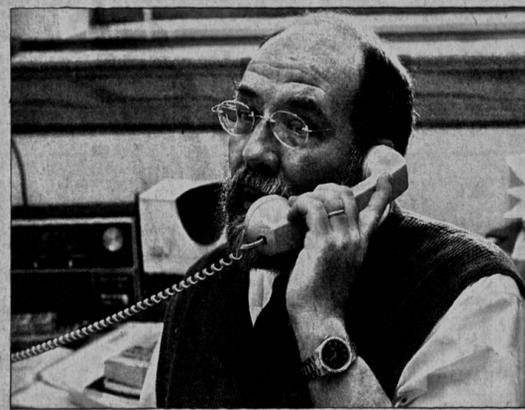

Keller fielded questions from members of the Graduate Student Senate Thursday. He talked of the importance of creating a new "image" for the Graduate College, focused on the school as a whole rather than autonomous departments.

"The Graduate College should be more than an academic program," he said. "It should be an organization that takes a day-to-day role in the development of students."

Graduate Student Senate members voiced a desire for a tuition-reimbursement program in which graduate assistants would receive a discounted tuition in addition to a stipend for their work. The UI's is the only Big Ten graduate school that does not offer some form of tuition remission, said Kyle Gassiot, the president of the Graduate Student Senate. Although it was discussed last spring, members of COGS and university officials disagreed on conditions for the tuition aid and stipends, pushing the issue off the table.

Nelson will go through the same two-day interview next week. In tight times, he said, it's important for the Graduate College to draw on existing faculty and resources to maintain a creative momentum. Enhancing the writing of students and devising new courses are both important in attracting high quality graduate students, Nelson said.

Birrell said that when the search began in 2000, the committee placed nationwide advertisements for the position. Approximately 45 applications were received, only a few from UI faculty members.

The pool was narrowed to two external candidates—a faculty member from University of California, Los Angeles, and one from Washington State University. After extensive on-campus interviewing last Spring, both candidates were ruled out by consensus of the committee, Birrell said.

Council votes to reimburse developer

By Mike McWilliams
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City City Council has voted to reimburse a local development firm $40,000 in legal fees the company accrued during a legal battle with the city.

The council's 5-2 vote to award the settlement to the Southgate Development Co. adds to the $19,000 legal bill that illegal votes cast by two councilors have already cost the city.

The settlement stems from votes by Irvin Pfab and Steven Kanner in April 2001 that stopped Southgate from constructing three apartment buildings in the Weber-Harlocke neighborhood. The two also voted against the settlement late Wednesday night.

Despite the $59,000 cost, Pfab and Kanner say they don't regret voting against rezoning the four acres in the neighborhood because they felt their votes were in the public interest. Several area residents strongly opposed the apartment buildings, citing excessive traffic and limited access for emergency vehicles.

"I think my vote was right," Pfab said. "If the elected City Council doesn't represent the city, who does?"

"I think the people who voted for the settlement are costing the city," Kanner said. "I think we could've gotten a much better settlement."

Kanner and Pfab's dissension postponed the project because a supermajority of five "yes" votes is required to approve such zoning matters. Mayor Ernie Lehman abstained because he owns property in the area.

In December 2001, a district judge deemed the dissenting votes illegal because Southgate's request met the city zoning code. The council passed the request during another vote in early January, after paying $19,000 to attorney David Brown for representing the city during the litigation.

Lehman said the settlement was reasonable because Southgate could have taken the city to court and requested a "considerably larger sum of money" if councilors declined to grant the offer, he said.

He criticized Kanner's and Pfab's original votes because they ignored advice from the city legal staff, who warned councilors they were legally obliged to grant the request.

"It's very disappointing when our own employees give us advice, and we don't choose to accept it," Lehman said.

Southgate construction manager Glenn Siders said the firm expects to obtain the necessary building permits from the city soon and could start construction on the three apartment buildings as early as next week.

Also late Wednesday, the council voted, 6-1, to adopt the city's $142 million budget for fiscal year 2003.

Kanner, who voted against the adopting the budget, said he feels the city should devote more money to economic development. He said the city is building too many roads and parking ramps and proposed delaying the $2.6 million Mormon Trek Boulevard to a later year, a move that was defeated.

The budget includes cutting money for improvements on the 40-year-old Iowa City Civic Center from $50,000 to $25,000 and postponing a $745,000 airport runway extension until 2005.

Student Election Board fines Herbold/Blizek

By Jennifer Sturm
The Daily Iowan

The Student Election Board unanimously voted to issue its first fine of the UI Student Government presidential election Thursday night.

The board sanctioned the Nick Herbold/Matt Blizek ticket after nine campaign signs were found on a bulletin board near a computer lab in Schaeffer Hall Wednesday afternoon. Members said the ticket committed a "level-one offense" by placing the signs near a restricted campaigning area and fined Herbold's ticket $50.

"The decision was sound and just," said board Chairman

Chris Loftus. "It's not a big deal. We are just trying to make the playing field fair."

Herbold said it was unfortunate that his ticket was fined and that it would not appeal the ruling.

"We're not trying to run a bad campaign," he said. "We are just trying to keep the voters informed."

Both tickets received a "freebie" from Loftus earlier in the week after two small campaigning violations appeared Sunday and Monday. The first violation occurred when Herbold/Blizek campaigners handed out unapproved material, and the second occurred when signs advertising presidential candidate Eric Parker's campaign showed up in the women's restroom in Schaeffer Hall near a computer lab.

"I told both tickets I understood their first mistakes were accidental," Loftus said. "I made it clear we would have to punish them the next time they had a violation."

The Election Board implemented specific rules and fines for any campaign violations this year, following multiple violations made during last year's UISG campaign. Rules were separated into three classes ranging from using unapproved campaign material to tampering with other candidates' campaign material. Candidates can be charged a maximum of $800 for campaign violations, and candidates face disqualification if they break too many rules, Election Board members said.

A slate fined during the election can appeal through the Student Judicial Court.

Last year, UISG President Nick Klenske and Vice President Dan Rossi received numerous fines for allegations ranging from illegal sign use to handing out unapproved campaign material. The system the Election Board has set up for fines this year seems to be working well, Rossi said.

"Campaigning is a stressful two weeks," he said. "It's hard to know who has your signs and if they know the rules. However, I think the rules are very important."

Supervisors to borrow millions from banks

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously Thursday to borrow $8.4 million from local banks to pay for county building repairs and health-care improvements.

The move allows the county to reach into its tax increment financing funds, and it will save taxpayers over $400,000 within a year.

The county can't access tax increment financing funds — revenues contained within a designated economic area — unless the board borrows money through banks, said Supervisor Terrence Neuzil.

"We're trying to be creative in coming up with ways to find money," he said. "We just want a way to get money without taxing taxpayers, when it comes down to it."

The board will enter into the loan agreement to pay for such projects as jail, courthouse, and administrative-building improvements.

In other business, members agreed to sign an application for a 50-50 grant, which would obligate the county to match funds raised by the Iowa Emergency Management Department in acquiring new global positioning technology.

The satellite-guided global positioning system, commonly known as GPS, would allow county maintenance and emergency officials to pinpoint the location of homes, driveways, and utilities.

Man pleads not guilty in kidnap/homicide

Richard D. Dodd, 45, who is accused of sexually assaulting and murdering a Coralville woman 22 years ago, pleaded not guilty Wednesday to the charges of first-degree murder and kidnapping.

Dodd entered the plea in Johnson County District Court. Once trial dates are set, he will be removed from the Iowa State Penitentiary, where he is serving a life-sentence for the kidnapping and rape of a 10-year-old Des Moines girl.

Dodd is accused of kidnapping, assaulting, and slaying Vicki Klotzbach, a Coralville woman who was abducted Oct. 21, 1981, while taking a stroll after work. An Iowa State Patrol plane spotted Klotzbach's body near Coralville in a field north of Interstate 80 on Oct. 23. Her hands were bound and her eyes were concealed with tape. She had been sexually assaulted and shot once in the back of the head.

The homicide case, the first in Coralville's history at the time, stretched for nearly 15 years as investigators ran into obstacles linking evidence to Dodd. In 1996, police said they linked the defendant to the alleged crime with DNA sample-matching.

Ryan Davis Bull, 25, of North Liberty was charged Wednesday with two counts of assault causing injury. Two males told police they were assaulted in Tiffin, Iowa, by a man witnesses allegedly identified as Bull. One man told police he was struck in the head with a pool cue, causing lacerations and swelling. Police said the second man told officers that he was punched in the face, resulting in pain and swelling.

HERPES STUDY

Healthy women age 18 to 65 with frequently recurring genital herpes are invited to participate in a one year study. In this study we will be comparing an inactive substance (placebo) to an investigational gel to see if we can prevent or delay recurrences. Participants must agree to use a medically acceptable form of birth control during participation in the study.

Compensation provided.

Within two weeks of its opening, there was live music. In its first year, big names such as the Gin Blossoms took the stage. Now, nine years later, the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., continues to bring national touring bands to Iowa City.

Entering the bar, people glow from black lights that reflect off black-and-white photos lining a brick hallway. Tonic, Urge Overkill, Collective Soul, and the Ben Folds Five, among 20-some others, all look down on patrons — a reminder of the many famous names that have graced the Union stage.

Walking towards the back to the stage, the bar is much different from a normal night. The speakers blast Ted Nugent and KISS. It's dark — there are no black lights, big screen TVs, or disco balls — except for the eight lone stage lights and a fish tank emanating blue light.

Union concert nights don't draw the usual dance-club crowd. Patrons trade in their halter tops and muscle shirts for spiked leather jackets and hooded sweatshirts. There are Mohawks and mullets, college kids and middle-age rockers.

"If you have a place that Nashville Pussy perform at the Union Bar Wednesday night. The group opened for Reverend Horton Heat.

attracts all different kinds of people, that's what you want," he said.

Audience members fill the back bar from the front of the 4-foot-high stage back to the stairs, their heads bobbing to the rhythm. Dancing platforms become bleacher seats.

It only made sense to owner Jim Pohl to incorporate live music in the bar because of the size and shape of the club. On show nights, the place can hold around 700 fans. It holds more people than other local venues, but it also offers a chance to see the band close-up.

While Pohl says the Union is relatively new at providing live music regularly, with shows about every two weeks, he believes people and bands are starting to pay more attention to the Union as a music venue. One reason being the diversity of musical acts the bar has hosted.

"I think we do everything," he said, citing hip-hop group Jurassic 5 as an example. "We're hitting a lot of types of music."

Soul Asylum, Lords of Acid, Better Than Ezra, The Samples, Boy George, Wilco, Son Volt, the Bloodhound Gang, and Sebadoh have all made appearances on the Union stage.

"I come here for the bands," said Egon Ozer, a fan at the recent Reverend Horton Heat show.

A good venue to play between Chicago and Minneapolis, the Union has historically been a place where many big bands have started, said Anthony Crissie, a UI graduate and concert promoter who works for JAM Productions in Chicago and often books shows with the Union.

Crissie credits Jeff Semones and Joey Muran as responsible for bringing in some of the club's largest shows in the early '90s.

Bands are now more willing to make a stop in Iowa, Pohl said. Artists have begun to recognize that in Iowa City, there are people here that appreciate live music.

Upcoming shows at the Union include the Big Wu, Galactic, and the Disco Biscuits.

Not your grandma's string quartet

By Carlos Ortega-Amparan
The Daily Iowan

Kronos' rule on earth, before his son Zeus' reign, is long remembered as the Golden Age of mankind, when people lived as gods and their hearts were free from grief. The Kronos Quartet brings out the same passion for life in its music.

The Kronos Quartet (David Harrington, violin, John Sherba, violin, Hank Dutt, viola, and Jennifer Culp, cello) has spent a little more than two decades proving that there is more to the string-quartet repertoire than Brahms. The group has redefined the way Western musicians look at international music, and on Saturday, it will perform its newest composition, Nuevo, at Hancher Auditorium.

In the early '70s, Harrington returned to Seattle after a brief stint in a Canadian orchestra and after listening to George Crumb's musical response to the Vietnam War, Black Angels, he decided to play a similar style of music. He commissioned Ken Benshoof with a bag of doughnuts, and the Kronos Quartet began with its first performance at North Seattle Community College before an audience of family and friends.

More than 25 years later, Harrington has continued to seek out composers from the assortment of musical originators in the global community, such as Sudanese composer Hamza el Din for Kronos' Pieces of Africa. In the piece, he constructed an adventurous session of African composition merged with jazz and blues influences.

One year later, Kronos took an even more experimental turn, performing on Mexican rock group Café Tacuba's 1999 album, Reves / Yosoy. Always on the fringe of musical experience, with a collection of musical genres from around the world, Kronos's latest endeavor, Nuevo, takes off from the arrangements of Juan Garcia Esquivel and Silvestre Revueltas, handled mostly by composer Osvaldo Golijov.

Revueltas (1899-1940) exploited the diverse cultures in Mexico, and his compositions reflected the various expressions of folklore, the same assortment writer André Breton described in his writings during his first visit to Mexico. Five hundred years of clashing of contrasting values, languages, customs, and colors have generated a kaleidoscope of mutated expression in Mexico. Revueltas' pieces are personal discourses on his political and social beliefs, sharing the sensibility of Cubists yet stringently adhering to no specific group or label, choosing solitude — his musical motifs reflect his conflicting imagery of his inner and outer worlds.

Esquivel (1918-2002) and his "space-age pop" had success in the United States in the '50s and '60s with his extravagant approach to the Jet-Set style of music inherent during those years. Esquivel's dizzying glissandos have been featured in the U.S. films The Big Lebowski and Four Rooms as well as having been sampled on more than 100 different TV shows, but his most enduring piece is the three-second ornamental fanfare that accompanies the Universal Studios emblem at the end of its productions. The combustible lifestyle of Esquivel allowed him to rub elbows at the pinnacle of his career with trendy artists of the time; Frank Sinatra would often drop in to listen to his recording sessions.

The Kronos Quartet has been showered with accolades and awards around the world, some for Black Angels, the same piece that inspired Harrington to start Kronos — as well as the 1989 Grammy Award for Reich: Different Trains.

The Nuevo interpretive arrangement will be a world premiere, co-commissioned by Hancher, continuing its long history of presenting to audiences mesmerizing compositions from around the world.

Letters to the Editor

A model of conduct

Amanda Mittlestadt's column about rapists and sportsmen (DI, Feb. 25) makes sense. It takes on an added twist when read in the context of the "Doonesbury" strip in the DI that day. I think Mittlestadt is correct about heady athletes who try to get away with abusive conduct. It's the criminal mentality to which I object most, though their arrogance would be enough to turn off even the most loyal fan. Aggrandizement of athletes is way out-of-whack. Rape should never be considered a sport nor an excusable manifestation of athletic prowess. Violent crimes are intolerable.

When I was a college athlete 30 years ago, I participated in two demanding intercollegiate sports each of my four years as an undergrad: one contact sport (water polo) and one noncontact sport (swimming). Unfortunately, neither still exists as a varsity sport at the Pac 10 university I attended. Both were dropped because they were not regarded as "revenue sports."

In college athletics today, men's sports such as water polo and swimming remain in decline, as do other minor sports such as gymnastics, tennis, wrestling, and cross-country. Although there has always been some debate about whether golf is actually a sport or a game, it, too, seems to be on the chopping block. Some blame Title IX, but that's only one part of the picture.

The coaches of "revenue sports" (football and basketball) need to produce, but in some cases they've lost control of certain athletes or never even had it. Coaches have an unenviable task. They must capably and consistently manage the most athletic talent they can sign, yet put up with a minority of unsocialized and uncivilized players who are needed, and therefore tolerated, as team members. Not all are college material.

This is not to characterize all football and basketball players as thugs. Obviously, they're not. But by the same token, they're not always in excellent company. Student athletes who find themselves accused of violent crimes like rape are seldom members of a team other than football or basketball. Those two major sports account for a disproportionately high share of offenders and defendants. In a sense, "revenue sports" seem to impede a college education.

The minor sports, by contrast, boast the highest GPAs and graduation rates per capita, despite the fact that these sports tend to have far more foreign athletes who come to the United States from countries that do not teach English as their first language. Some new arrivals get thrown into their college courses knowing little English, but in a few months are doing better than many of their American classmates. These very same student athletes also manage to stay out of trouble with the law while they are residing in the United States. In fact, most who stay in the United States prove to be exemplary in all walks of life.

This might lead one to wonder why football and basketball coaches do not assign their players to live among model student athletes in the hope that whatever good behavior is to be found might rub off. And an unexpected benefit of saving minor sports would be to preserve an acceptable level of conduct among all student athletes.

Quoteworthy

The UI is pretty much screwed for the rest of the year.
 — UI Student Government Vice President Dan Rossi, on another $3 million that must be cut from the university's budget this fiscal year.

'PT Posse' a joke

After reviewing both UISG presidential candidates' platforms and watching the debates, I'm frustrated at the lack of seriousness and originality of the Parker/Trotzig's platform. Since when is instituting a naked day on campus more important than stopping tuition increases, which is at the end of the platform under "Other issues." Tuition increase is not an "other" issue, and any party who believes it is would not be representing the student body accurately.

It is when issues become more serious, and the "PT Posse" doesn't have any serious issues on its agenda, that the members bring up points that Herbold/Blizek and the Giant Sloth Party have been campaigning for all along. When a party changes its platform in the middle of an election, it obviously didn't know what it was doing in the first place. Issues about student involvement on City Council were added to the Parker/Trotzig platform after Herbold and Blizek brought them up. Herbold and Blizek know what they stand for, and they knew from the start.

Nick Herbold and Matt Blizek don't just "care" about the issues on the table; they are actively working to make student voices heard. Parker/Trotzig talks about Hawkeye pride but don't even have enough pride of their own to write about issues without comparing the UI with other schools. What if my idea of college doesn't include "beer bands and pep rallies"? Anyone with any Hawkeye pride at all would realize that the "Everything College Should Be" campaign is a joke. Vote for the ticket that will actually get things done.

Amendment 14.E gives students more control over activity funds

UI Student Government elections for the 2002-03 school year will be held March 4 and 5. The ballots will not only list the names of the candidates but also an amendment to the UISG Constitution on which students are asked to vote.

Amendment 14.E is a proposal for the university to allow leftover student-activity fees to remain in the hands of the UISG instead of being controlled by Phillip Jones, the vice president for Student Services, who currently oversees the fees.

UISG President Nick Klenske said there is an estimated $300,000 that Jones has control over, and accountability for that money is not yet evident. For example, many students are upset that Jones spent $15,000 to purchase Planet X tickets last year. Jones, however, insisted that although he could have used the reverted fees to purchase the tickets, he did not. Jones did not reveal where the money came for to purchase the Planet X tickets.

Currently, each student pays approximately $17.50 a semester for mandatory student activity fees. The money then becomes part of UISG's budget and is sent to Student Government to be allocated to student organizations. At the end of the fiscal year, all funds that were not used are reverted, but the funds do not end up where they started. This rerouting is similar to placing money into an Iowa State Bank but then told to go to Hills Bank to retrieve it. It sounds absurd, but that is apparently what is happening.

Klenske said the UI is the state's only public university in which excess fees are routed elsewhere. The UISG previously offered a compromise to Jones under which reverted fees would return to UISG, and the body would then seek permission from the Office of Student Services before spending it. However, UISG was told the compromise was against university policy and that the student government could not control the money. UISG has yet to find that university policy. Jones has said all spending decisions are ultimately made by the administration.

According to Jones, student-activity fees become part of a contingency fund for student-life activities and affairs once the fiscal year is over and UISG is handed a new budget for the next year. The contingency fund helps to pay the Bijou's rent, and it reserves money for unexpected occurrences within student organizations.

Voting for 14.E means that you have recommended that the university administration allow UISG oversight of the contingency fund. The amendment's goal is to have the administration specifically address how student-activity fees work, how and when they are used, and where UISG Constitution dictates they end up if not in the hands of student government. The proposed amendment also wants to create a system of checks and balances so that if UISG cannot oversee the fund, it and the students at least know when and how the fund is being used.

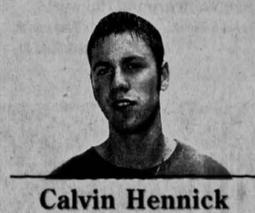

So when voting next week, take time to consider 14.E. Although it will only be considered as a recommendation to the administration, it will at least let the university know that you want to be considered and that you want UISG to control the funds allocated to it.

Are you a tool? Take the quiz and find out!

A couple of weeks ago, I was talking to my friend Tom, and I called someone a tool. "Cal," he said, "What exactly do you mean by 'tool'?" I found that it wasn't an easy word to define. "There are different types of tools," I told him. "Like if you're a giant poser, then of course you're a tool. But also, if you think you're better than everyone else, you're also a tool. Or if there's just plain nothing cool about your personality, then you're a tool as well." For me, it's easy. I meet someone, and within five minutes, I know whether or not I think they're a tool. But for people like Tom, and anyone else who lacks this ability, I have devised a little quiz. It's sort of like the ones in Cosmo, except that those are all written by some huge tool with a cushy internship.

1. At the time of this reading, what is your declared major?
 a) Open.
 b) Philosophy.
 c) Film.
 d) Health, Leisure, and Sports Studies.
 2. Currently, you are employed as:
 a) something menial but respectable, like a manual laborer or research assistant. Just something to put some cash in your pocket.
 b) something low-level but seemingly important, like a bouncer or a bartender.
 c) a writer who makes minimum wage and only works three hours every two weeks (a.k.a. DI columnist).
 d) men's basketball head coach.
 3. Your room is decorated with:
 a) something personal, like quotes that you like or postcards from friends.
 b) something that shows off your own ability (or lack thereof) in a given field, such as your own art work or poetry.

 c) pictures of yourself.
 d) more than three Dave Matthews posters.
 4. You live in:
 a) a residence hall or apartment.
 b) a fraternity or sorority.
 c) a house that your parents are renting for you.
 d) an actual Craftsman toolbox.
 5. What did you get your girlfriend for Valentine's Day?
 a) Girlfriend? What Girlfriend?
 b) Something thoughtful, like a book or CD.
 c) The typical cliché: candy and flowers.
 d) You broke up with her so you didn't have to buy her anything.
 6. Where do you envision yourself when you're 30?
 a) Working at a job you will love, like teaching.
 b) Wearing a suit to work (worse if you have a cubicle).
 c) Dating a college student.
 d) In Washington, D.C., as a senator.
 7. Describe yourself.
 a) Laid-back, quiet, nice, hardworking.
 b) Ambitious, assertive, opinionated.
 c) Intelligent, artsy, alternative, defying-the-mainstream-any-way-you-can.
 d) Existentialist.
 8. How many times per day, on average, do you say the word "dude"?

 a) 1.
 b) 2.
 c) 3.
 d) 748.
 9. What political party do you belong to?
 a) None. You prefer not to associate with extremist groups.
 b) Democrat.
 c) Republican.
 d) Green Party.
 10. You went out last night and had a great time. How do you spend the next day?
 a) Drinking some coffee, sobering up, and getting some homework done.
 b) Looking for your pants.
 c) Repeatedly asking your friends if they noticed that one girl checking you out.
 d) You still haven't stopped drinking.
 All right. Now it's time for the scoring. a) = one point. b) = two points. c) = three points. d) = four points.
 10-20: Congratulations!

You're not a tool. People view you as someone who they can hang out with and talk to without making fun of you later. They appreciate your honesty, as well as the fact that you don't listen to Britney Spears.
 21-30: You could use a little work, buddy. Don't worry, though; all's not lost. Stop shopping at Abercrombie, and there could be hope for you yet. But cut out the Spanish in everyday conversation, all right?
 31-40: You are a completely useless human being. There is not even one redeeming quality to your personality. Nobody likes you, except for you, and you like you a lot. There really isn't much hope, but at least use a little less gel in your hair, if only for the sake of the rest of us.

Calvin Hennick is a DI columnist. He scored a 19 on the tool test.

Enraged Hindu rioters attack Muslims; 58 killed

By Ashok Sharma
Associated Press

AHMADABAD, India — Angry Hindus set fire to homes in a Muslim neighborhood Thursday and then kept firefighters away for hours, dragging out one former lawmaker and burning him alive. At least 58 people died in revenge attacks triggered by a Muslim assault on a train.

Police in western Gujarat state appeared outnumbered or unwilling to act to quell what appeared to be the worst rioting to hit the country in nearly a decade.

The officers stood in bunches, watching as groups of Hindus, wielding iron rods and cans of gasoline or kerosene, roamed Ahmadabad, attacking Muslims in their homes, shops, and vehicles.

The government promised to send the army to Ahmadabad, the region's main city, to end the rampage. But there were fears the violence would spread today, when Hindu nationalists called for a nationwide strike.

In Thursday's worst attack, 38 people — including 12 children — died when some 2,000 Hindus set fire to six homes in an affluent Muslim neighborhood.

Manish Swarup/Associated Press

Hindus burn vehicles and debris in the streets of Ahmadabad, India, on Thursday, one day after a Muslim mob attacked a train, killing 58.

Some trapped residents made frantic telephone calls to police and firefighters. But police said they arrived two hours later and firefighters were delayed by more than six hours because of blockades by rioters.

A former lawmaker, Ehsan Jefri, fired at the rioters when they tried to enter his house, but he was dragged out and burned alive.

Elsewhere in Ahmadabad, rioters pulled a Muslim truck driver out of his vehicle and killed him at a roadblock, police said. Other Hindus made bonfires with goods looted from shops, and 20 men tore down a small mosque.

J.S. Bandukwala, a Muslim and human-rights activist, said his house was attacked by Hindus who "lobbed burning rags and pelted stones"; his Hindu neighbors took him to safety.

In a few instances, police opened fire on rioters, killing two and wounding six in Ahmadabad and two other towns, police said.

NATION BRIEF

Bush mouthpiece blames Clinton for Mideast violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration on Thursday accused former President Clinton of triggering violence in the Middle East with his failed peacemaking effort, then withdrew the assertion as a regrettable mistake.

"No United States president, including President Clinton, is to blame for violence in the Middle East," an abashed White House Press Secretary Ari Fleischer said as he tried to quiet the storm he touched off earlier.

The former president's office, meanwhile, issued an angry statement saying the White House spokesman's initial remarks were unfortunate.

Peppered for a year by critical comments that the Bush administration was not playing an active peacemaking role in contrast to Clinton's hands-on approach, Fleischer noted that the 17-month Palestinian uprising broke out during Clinton's presidency.

He rejected the notion that Bush's policies have been ineffective.

Asked about the Clinton administration's dogged peace effort, Fleischer said: "Actually, I think if you go back to when the violence began, you can make the case that in an attempt to shoot the moon and get nothing, more violence resulted; that as a result of an attempt to push the parties beyond where they were willing to go, that it led to expectations that were raised to such a high level that it turned into violence."

Israel storms Palestinian refugee camps, killing 11

By Ibrahim Hazboun
Associated Press

BALATA REFUGEE CAMP, West Bank — The Israeli military attacked two West Bank refugee camps with helicopter gunships, tanks, and paratroopers Thursday in a high-stakes attempt to break strongholds of Palestinian militants. An Israeli soldier and 11 Palestinians were killed — pushing the Palestinian toll past 1,000 in 17 months of fighting.

It was the first time Israeli troops have stormed refugee camps in the current Mideast conflict.

The fierce, sustained gun battles began before dawn and carried on past sundown in the camps, on the edge of Nablus and the fringes of Jenin, Palestinian towns less than 20 miles apart. A 12th Palestinian was shot dead near the southern edge of Jerusalem in heavy exchanges of fire between Israeli troops and Palestinian gunmen in adjacent towns and villages.

By Thursday night, large numbers of Israeli troops had taken over several buildings and houses, and were going house-to-house in the Balata camp, though there was no sign Palestinian militiamen were prepared to surrender. Altogether, almost 100 Palestinians were injured, hospitals and Palestinian officials said.

"The camp is effectively under [Israeli military] control," said Israeli Col. Avi Cohavi, the head of the paratrooper brigade carrying out the operation. "It's completely surrounded, and we are in commanding positions."

Israeli troops have repeatedly entered Palestinian towns and villages in the current fighting, but Thursday marked the first time large contingents of soldiers entered the camps, where militants have taken refuge amid densely packed houses that line narrow streets, making them inaccessible to Israeli tanks and other armored vehicles.

The fighting came a day after Saudi Arabia presented its new peace initiative at the United Nations. Under the proposal, the Arab world would make peace with Israel in exchange for an Israeli withdrawal from the territories it occupied in the 1967 Mideast war.

But the daily bloodletting has undermined repeated international attempts to arrange a ceasefire, and the scope of the Israeli action suggested Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's government was intent on delivering a major blow to Palestinian militants.

the next few days deciding how to distribute the cuts and learning from deans what cuts can be made, he said.

"We're getting experienced at this after the cuts in November and July," True said.

Faculty Senate President Amitav Bhattacharjee said he welcomed the news of the amendment.

"We have said all along the furlough was a bad idea," he said. "We would much rather have control over what we cut rather than the [original] furlough."

Iowa lawmakers also agreed to use $44 million in rainy-day funds, which will primarily benefit K-12 education.

"We won a little bit today," said UISG President Nick Klenske. "A couple of months ago, they weren't going to use the rainy-day funds."

UISG was joined by students from Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa to persuade legislators to soften the budget cut's blow.

"If the water gets any deeper, we're drowning," said ISU student government President Andy Tofilon. "Why would college students stay in a state that disrespects them?"

UISG members will return to Des Moines in two weeks to fight against cuts in the fiscal year 2003 budget.

"The UI is pretty much screwed for the rest of the year," said UISG Vice President Dan Rossi. "Now, we're just going to focus on next year."

UIHC sued over girl's paralysis paralysis was due to errors in radiation therapy that led to necrosis, or gradual decay, of Anne's spinal cord.

The lawsuit named as defendants several former and current UIHC employees, including Nita Lee, Myrl Holida, and John Weiler, as well as other residents and nurses who provided care for Anne.

"This isn't the first time the UIHC has been sued for something like this," said UIHC spokesman Tom Moore, adding that while he was unaware of the lawsuit, hospital policy prevented him from commenting further on the matter.

Radiation, which kills healthy cells as well as damaged ones, has many side effects, including hair loss, nausea, vomiting, and mouth sores, but experts say that paralysis rarely occurs as a result of radiation.

"It's like asking, 'Could you get killed driving a car?'" said Edmund Franken, Jr., the chairman of the UI Radiology Department. "The answer is, yes, but it depends on so many factors that it's only theoretical."

Convictions overturned in case

The appeals court entered a judgment of acquittal for all three officers on the obstruction charges, effectively bringing an end to the case against Wiese and Bruder. The two men had been given five-year prison sentences but have been free on bail during their appeal.

However, the court ordered a new trial on the civil-rights charges for Schwarz, who is serving 15 years behind bars in Oklahoma.

U.S. Attorney Alan Vinegrad

said that he was disappointed by the ruling but that his office is prepared to retry Schwarz.

The Police Department had no comment.

Louima had been arrested in a melee outside a Brooklyn nightclub. According to testimony, Volpe was enraged because he believed Louima had punched him from behind. Louima was brutalized in the bathroom and spent two months in the hospital with a ruptured bladder and colon.

The attack touched off a federal investigation that cracked the vaunted "blue wall of silence" that was said to protect rogue officers in the Police Department. In addition to the four men sent to prison, two other officers were placed on probation for misleading investigators.

Schwarz's wife, Andra, said the family is looking forward to having him home. "It's like a dream," she said. He could be freed on bail as early as next week, his lawyer said.

"It's a sweet day when you can show the government was wrong, and it was wrong from the beginning," said Stuart London, Bruder's lawyer.

Joseph Tacopina, Wiese's attorney, said his client wants to "resume his normal life and possibly return to the force."

when it will prohibit lighting up in all establishments earning more than 35 percent of their revenue from food.

"I think it is just stupid," said Pam Dempster, whose husband, Keith Dempster, owns the Mill. "I don't feel it's the right for the City Council to dictate how we should run our business."

Meanwhile, some Coralville establishments are preparing to absorb smokers turned away from Iowa City restaurants.

"We think we'll have more demand from smokers than before," said Kim Hardy, a manager at Applebee's Neighborhood Grill & Bar, 200 12th Ave.

The restaurant may place another server in its smoking area to cope with the expected influx, she said.

Another Coralville establishment, Country Kitchen, 900 First Ave., has reported a jump in calls from patrons asking if the restaurant will continue to permit smoking. It expects business to increase as well.

Despite some fears that the ordinance will harm business, Iowa City Chamber of Commerce President Pat Guard said he does not anticipate that patrons will migrate westward. "Both communities have their own clientele," he said.

John Solow, a UI associate professor of economics who has reviewed data from around the nation on how smoking bans have affected businesses, said one lesson is clear from all studies: bans cause "no discernible effect on restaurant business" on the whole.

Whether individual businesses will be affected is an open question, said Solow, who cautioned that the effects of the ordinance will not be clear for at least two years.

Seth Dudley, the general manager of Gringo's, 115 E. College St., said he hopes to offset losing customers who smoke by gaining patrons who want a smoke-free environment.

Along with the alleged health benefits, seating customers will be easier because the restaurant won't have to separate smoking and non-smoking patrons, he said.

The Ground Round, 830 S.

I don't feel it's the right for the City Council to dictate how we should run our business.

— Pam Dempster, wife of Mill owner, Keith

Riverside Drive, is "generally opposed" to the ordinance and is expecting a 5-10 percent decrease in late-night business based on figures from other franchises forced to comply with a smoking ban, said kitchen manager Brian Hills.

Iowa City police will not institute additional patrols to enforce the ordinance, but they will respond to complaints, said Lt. Dan Sellers, adding that he expects "begrudging cooperation" with the ban. The fine for smoking will be $25, and restaurants who fail to post notification of the ban are subject to a $100 penalty for the first offense.

Repeat attempt

Iowa begins quest for second-straight Big Ten Tournament title

By Jeremy Shapiro
 The Daily Iowan

Two teams playing the best basketball of their seasons will collide in what should be an emotionally charged quarterfinal game of the women's Big Ten Tournament in Indianapolis.

Iowa, the No. 4 seed, opens defense of its 2001 tournament championship Friday at 11 a.m. against a fired-up Indiana squad. The fifth-seeded Hoosiers are trying to play their way into the NCAA field, avenge a stinging loss to Iowa in last year's tournament, and win for a coach who was injured in a car accident three weeks ago.

Iowa is 19-7, finishing the year 10-6 in the Big Ten and winning four of its last five, including three straight on the road. After an up-and-down first half in conference play, the Hawkeyes are finally playing consistently. The team's free-throw shooting has improved, the rebounding has increased, and the defense has steadied itself. The team also shows signs of believing it can win the tournament — again.

"The whole team is coming together more the past five games," said coach Lisa Bluder. "We are playing with confidence. We went 5-3 on the road and are coming off two good road victories at Wisconsin and Penn State."

Indiana finished the conference season 8-8, but it has been playing with a lot of heart since head coach Kathi Bennett was involved in a car accident Feb. 8 that broke the second vertebra in her neck. Bennett helped prepare for the next three games, but she didn't return to the sideline until the season finale. Since the accident, the Hoosiers are 3-1, including a stunning

Duke downed by Cavaliers, 87-84

By Hank Kurz Jr.
 Associated Press

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Virginia, desperate for a win to keep its NCAA Tournament hopes alive, wiped out a 12-point deficit over the final seven minutes and beat No. 3 Duke, 87-84, Thursday night, giving the Atlantic Coast Conference title to Maryland.

The Cavaliers (17-9, 7-8) entered the game having lost seven of their previous nine. It seemed another loss was about to come as Duke (25-3, 12-3) took a 77-65 lead.

But Virginia, which was ranked No. 4 in the country on Dec. 31 but had fallen out of the Top 25 this week, then held the Blue Devils scoreless for more than 6 1/2 minutes as part of the game-closing 21-7 run.

Maryland (14-1) won the league title outright for the first time since 1980. The second-ranked Terrapins finished in a four-way tie for first in 1995.

Duke had won the last five ACC titles, the first four of the streak all outright.

Keith Jenifer's floater over the final seven minutes and beat No. 3 Duke, 87-84, Thursday night, giving the Atlantic Coast Conference title to Maryland.

He was fouled as he converted his own miss, but he missed the free throw that would have given him a second three-point play in the final 15 seconds.

Roger Mason Jr. rebounded the miss for the Cavaliers, and his free throws made it 87-84. When the ball was knocked away from Williams heading up court, Mason grabbed it, was fouled, and missed both free

IOWA MEN'S BASKETBALL Searching for first Big Ten road win

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's basketball team will play for more than pride in East Lansing, Mich., on Saturday; the Hawkeyes will be attempting to avoid a dubious distinction.

The 16-13 Hawkeyes find themselves with a final opportunity to grab a Big Ten road victory when they meet Michigan State at 3:30 p.m. for both teams' Big Ten regular-season finale.

Iowa has not gone winless on the road during conference play since the 1989-90 season, when the Hawkeyes finished 4-14 in league play. That stands to change if the Hawkeyes can not muster a victory over the 18-10 Spartans.

Standing in the way will be a Michigan State team that has vastly improved in both health and chemistry since losing to Iowa, 75-71, in Iowa City on Jan. 22.

"They're about as close as they can get as far as having a full team," Iowa coach Steve Alford said.

Four of the Spartans' top players, including leading scorer Marcus Taylor, have battled injuries and illness throughout the

MEN'S AND WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Iowa expects big crowd for senior day

By Jeremy Shapiro
 The Daily Iowan

The men's and women's gymnastics teams are hoping to use Carver-Hawkeye Arena to their advantage and knock off Illinois on Saturday.

One gymnastics meet a year is held at Carver, and it usually draws the largest crowd of the season. The gymnasts are hoping to feed off a festive crowd on senior day — both programs could use a victory. The meet begins at 7 p.m.

The men are ranked No. 4 in the country following a 212-208.250 win over No. 6 Michigan. That was a strong performance, yet Iowa may need more to fend off a No. 2 Illinois squad that is averaging 214.100 points per meet.

"I anticipate the Fighting Illini will give us the competition we expected from Michigan, and more," said men's coach Tom Dunn. "It's fitting that it's senior night because the seniors will be instrumental in our upset bid."

This will mark the final home meet for Shane de Freitas, Don Jackson, Andy Thornton, Brian Christie, and Steve Davis — a period that went by way too fast, Jackson said.

"I'm mostly in disbelief that it's here already," he said. "Four years has just flown by. It gives me an added sense of enthusiasm; I don't want to end my home career on a bad note."

If the Hawkeyes need more motivation, they could look back to Jan. 12 at the Windy City Invitational. Iowa won that event with Illinois placing second. However, Jackson overheard some trash talk from the Illini squad. Apparently some members couldn't believe they had lost to "lowly" Iowa.

Since then, Illinois has won the UCLA Invitational and a quad meet at UC-Santa Barbara last weekend. Sophomores Scott Wetterling and Bob Rogers are rated 1-2 in the country on horizontal bars.

"We will need more than a 212 to beat Illinois," Jackson said. "Some of the guys have been sick this week, so I'm not sure who will compete. If we can put it all together as a team, we can get a big team score."

The No. 20 women are in a slightly different position. They have yet to have a flawless meet, always having someone fall during one or more of the events. If they put together a flawless meet, they have a chance at climbing in the rankings and finishing high in the Big Ten race.

Michigan pummels Illinois in tourney

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jennifer Smith scored 24 points and grabbed nine rebounds, and Alayne Ingram added 17 points as Michigan beat Illinois, 83-63, Thursday in the first round of the Big Ten Tournament.

The Wolverines (17-11) will play No. 7 Purdue, the tournament's top seed, at 2:30 p.m. today. The Boilermakers earned a first-round bye.

Michigan opened the game on a 21-9 run, with Smith scoring eight of those points. She scored 14 in the first half on 4-7 shooting.

Michigan led, 39-38, at the half and opened the second half with an 11-0 run.

Illinois center Iveta Maccauskaite, the Big Ten's fifth-leading scorer, bounced back from a slow start to lead a second-half surge. She scored 13 of her 19 points in the second half as the Illini (14-13) pulled to 62-51 with 6:50 left in the game.

Michigan would score the next six points to seal the victory.

LeeAnn Bies, who sat out most of the first half with foul trouble, scored 14, and Tabitha Pool added 10 for Michigan.

Dawn Vana scored 10 points, and Cindy Dallas had 11 rebounds for Illinois, which shot only 31 percent.

Michigan's Jennifer Smith, right, is fouled by Illinois guard Shavonna Hunter as she shoots in the first half of an opening round game of the Women's Big Ten Tournament in Indianapolis Thursday.

Ohio St. 89, Mich. St. 82
INDIANAPOLIS — Courtney Coleman scored 27 points, Lauren Shenk added 25, and Tomeka Brown 17 as Ohio State beat Michigan State, 89-82, in double overtime Thursday in the first round of the Big Ten Tournament.
 Ohio State (14-14) will play Penn State, the tournament's second seed, today in the quarterfinals.

Shenk put the Buckeyes ahead for good in the second overtime with a free throw that made it 78-77. The Buckeyes scored seven of the first nine points in the second overtime before Michigan State cut it to 82-80 following a Kristin Haynie 3-pointer.
 Shenk sealed the win when she answered with a 3 with 45 seconds left in the game. Shenk went 5-10 from 3-point range.

Buckeyes would settle for a shared title

By Rusty Miller
 Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — It doesn't matter how many teams have their names on the trophy. A championship's a championship, Ohio State coach Jim O'Brien said.

Trying to shed the disappointment of blowing their first shot at clinching a share of the Big Ten title, the 18th-ranked Buckeyes travel to Michigan on Saturday for their final opportunity at getting a piece of their second title in three years.

"I don't think having it by yourself or sharing it matters," O'Brien said Thursday. "If your hands are on it — if there are other hands on it — I don't think it really matters."

The Buckeyes lost at home to Michigan State, 81-76, on Tuesday night. At almost the same time, No. 25 Indiana — the other Big Ten co-leader coming into the week — was losing at Illinois, 70-62.

That created a four-way tie for the top spot that lasted 24 hours, until Wisconsin beat Michigan 74-54 Wednesday night to capture a piece of its first Big Ten men's basketball title in 55 years.

Now the Buckeyes (19-7, 10-5) want to join the Badgers — and possibly others — at the top.

O'Brien said there is no stigma to not winning the title outright. As an example, he cites Ohio State's 1999-00 co-championship with Michigan State.

"People referred to us as having won a Big Ten championship. Our guys got rings out of that. We consider ourselves as a team as champs of the Big Ten. Now, somebody else happened to be champs with us," O'Brien said. "But I don't think that's an issue whatsoever. We would be thrilled if we could get a part of this thing."

Michigan (10-16, 5-10) has little to gain except for spoiling the Buckeyes' big day. Between the heated rivals, that's still a large bit of incentive.

"They had one team celebrate on them in Wisconsin," Ohio State captain Brian Brown said. "Now, they're going to be ready. We beat them the last time, and now they don't want to be swept."

O'Brien said he expects Michigan to do its best to try to close out the regular season on a positive note.

"In general, they'll be playing to get some respect," he said.

Boban Savovic, Ohio State's senior swingman, said he expects Michigan to play as if it also were going for the title.

"We're going to have to pressure them a lot. The whole team will have to step up, especially on the road," Savovic said. "Michigan is a good team, but if we take care of our business, I think we can win the game."

Tyson to apply for license in Michigan

DETROIT (AP) — Mike Tyson is applying to have his Michigan boxing license reinstated in a possible attempt to fight heavyweight champion Lennox Lewis in Detroit.

Jerome Barney, the chairman and chief financial officer of Detroit-based All World International Network LLC, said Thursday that Tyson's application was expected to be delivered today to the state Athletic Board of Control.

Barney said he was confident he could win state approval and persuade Tyson and Lewis to hold a June fight at Joe Louis Arena.

Barney said Detroit's long history of boxing and the presence of downtown casinos make it an ideal place

Messier to have shoulder surgery

NEW YORK — New York Rangers captain Mark Messier will have arthroscopic shoulder surgery today; he will be sidelined for at least a month.

The decision to have surgery was put on hold for approximately one hour late Thursday afternoon after Messier, Rangers general manager Glen Sather, and team surgeon Dr. Andrew Feldman considered a final ultrasound treatment. But the team announced afterward that surgery will go on as planned.

In the past week, the 41-year-old captain has been mulling surgery on his aching left shoulder. He finally decided Thursday morning to have the operation after talking with the team's medical staff, coaches, and Sather.

"They'll take out some bone spurs and repair any torn fragments," Sather said at the team's morning skate. "But you don't know what they'll find in there. It's well known that the rehab could be anywhere from three weeks to six months."

Messier hopes to return to the team in time for a playoff run. The regular season has six weeks remaining, and New York entered Thursday night's game with a tenuous hold on the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

Sather said a quick recovery is not inevitable.

"No, you don't know that for sure," he said. "In three weeks we'll know better. We hope he'll be back in six. And if I know Mark, he'll be back then."

Lemieux out for season

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh Penguins star Mario Lemieux, his team fading fast from playoff contention, is expected to miss the rest of the season because of the painful hip injury that has bothered him since training camp.

Lemieux was advised Thursday by team physicians to rest and rehabilitate the injury, which slowed him substantially even as he helped Canada win the Olympic gold medal on Sunday.

Medical tests revealed chronic tendinitis in one of Lemieux's hip flexor muscles, as well as inflammation of the hip capsule. As a result, Lemieux was told that playing again this season could lead to further damage.

The 36-year-old Lemieux — a six-time NHL scoring champion and Hall of Famer — still plans to play next season.

"While I'm disappointed I can't be in the lineup, I am satisfied that I have identified the problem with my hip," Lemieux said Thursday. "The doctors have told me that this period of rest and rehabilitation is necessary so that I can make a full recovery and get back in the lineup next season."

On Tuesday, Lemieux said doctors had been unable to pinpoint the cause of the pain. He also confirmed he had several painkilling injections to keep him on the ice during the Olympics and estimated he was playing only at 50 to 60 percent capacity.

Lemieux also is believed to have gotten a shot before getting two assists in a 5-4 loss Wednesday night to Los Angeles, making him the seventh player in NHL history with 1,600 points.

The Penguins' owner-player initially injured the hip during training camp in late September. After skating in obvious pain for several weeks, he had arthroscopic surgery Oct. 29 to remove loose cartilage.

He resumed playing less than two weeks later but played only three games before sitting out the next two months after doctors advised he needed additional rest. Lemieux returned again Jan. 12 and later produced 13 points in four games during a six-game Penguins winning streak.

But Lemieux clearly seemed bothered again by the pain just before the Olympics, and he went without a goal in his final five games before the break. The pain worsened to the point Lemieux considered not playing in the Olympics.

But, after the Team Canada captain sat out one game to rest, he returned with his hip and groin heavily wrapped to score two goals in a key 3-3 tie against the Czech Republic on Feb. 18. He went on to play a key role as Canada won its final three games for its first Olympic gold medal in 50 years.

SPORTS BRIEF

Devers returns to track after hiatus

NEW YORK (AP) — The USA Track & Field Indoor Championships are back in a city that was their primary home for more than a century.

And Gail Devers is back in the indoor championships.

After sitting it out the last two years, Devers will run in the 60-meters in the national meet, at the Armory Track & Field Center on Friday and Saturday.

She's a two-time Olympic champion in the 100 (1992, 1996) and a three-time world champion in the 100-hurdles ('93, '95, '99).

How's that for versatility?

After a hiatus from sprinting, Devers is returning to the flat races this season to prepare for hurdling.

"I jumped back into the 60 this year so I could work on my speed for the hurdles. I've been concentrating on the hurdles only," she said. "Then I'll have to figure out how to negotiate my hurdles with my speed. I haven't been doing that the past few years, and I believe my hurdles have suffered."

It's a tough transition between the two disciplines.

When she sprinted at the Millrose Games on Feb. 1, finishing second to Chandra Sturup of Bahamas in the 60, Devers said, "My body was looking for a hurdle that wasn't there."

MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL
Madden gets nod;
Miller gets boot

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Boom! Just like that, John Madden is in, and Dennis Miller is out.

Madden is carrying his inimitable mix of enthusiasm, opinions, and analysis to "Monday Night Football," leaving Fox Sports and agreeing to a four-year, $20 million deal with ABC Sports to pair with Al Michaels in a two-man booth.

Miller — a comedian known for obscure references, not football smarts — leaves after two seasons and declining ratings. Dan Fouts and Eric Dickerson also were taken off ABC's prime-time NFL broadcasts, while Melissa Stark stays as a sideline reporter.

"I had this opportunity, and I wanted to do whatever it took to get it done," the 65-year-old Madden said Thursday. "This is where I want to finish."

Michaels, on "Monday Night Football" since 1986, is Madden's first new boothmate in more than two decades. Madden and Pat Summerall were paired at CBS in 1981, then moved to Fox in 1994, along the way becoming the signature voices of NFL games.

Madden had one year at $7.5 million left on his contract with Fox, but the network agreed to scrap that deal after Madden rejected a three-year, $15 million extension and asked permission to talk to ABC, an industry source told the Associated Press on the condition of anonymity.

Madden and ABC then hammered out a contract worth approximately $5 million per season, another source said, also on the condition of anonymity. It all happened in about six hours Wednesday.

"This is something that came very quickly. I'm numb, but even through the numbness I realize how lucky I am," Madden said.

"Every broadcaster would love an opportunity to be part of 'Monday Night Football.'"

He'll also work for ESPN, appearing on NFL studio shows and possibly "SportsCenter."

While with Fox and CBS, Madden was one of dozens of NFL announcers working each Sunday, and viewers didn't necessarily get his game in their market.

Now, Madden moves to the only game in town on Monday nights.

And ABC gets the strongest NFL color analyst it's ever had, along with the sort of buzz that Miller's hiring only initially generated and that "Monday Night Football" really hasn't held since the days of Howard Cosell, Don Meredith, and Frank Gifford.

Gable and Iowa elite paid tribute by Hall

By Ali Noller
The Daily Iowan

As Dan Gable stood in the shadows among a throng of wrestling fans at the Midlands Championships Dec. 29-30, 2001, in Evanston, Ill., he realized what an instrumental role he plays in the sport of wrestling.

Current Iowa coaches Jim Zalesky and Tom Brands were in the coaches' corner while Mike Zadick tangled with Montana State Northern's Bobby Mantle. Terry Brands and David Ray were in the coaching corner for Northern. The entire match was under the vigilant eye of Chuck Yagla, the referee.

To most, it seemed to be an ordinary match. But under closer scrutiny, Gable's influence is discernible.

Gable coached Zalesky to three national championships and led the Brands brothers to a combined five national titles at Iowa. Zadick is a current Iowa grappler and All-American. Ray wrestled under Gable, while Mantle transferred from Iowa after a season. Even Yagla wore the black and gold, earning two national titles in four years at Iowa. Gable's influence has spread farther than the exclusive confines of the Iowa wrestling room.

Gable's contributions to wrestling, both as an athlete and as the legendary coach of the Hawkeyes, will be recognized as he and 25 other exemplars of Iowa wrestling are inducted into the new Glen Brand Wrestling Hall of Fame of Iowa on Saturday through March 3 in Newton.

The Hall of Fame is part of the International Wrestling Institute and Museum, which opened its doors in September 1998. Of the 25 inductees, 11 wrestled at Iowa and 10 were coached by Gable. The list includes all 12 Iowa wrestlers who won four state championships in high school and 13 wrestlers who won either Olympic or World titles. The UI inductees amassed 18 individual national championship titles and 33 All-American honors.

and dedication to wrestling, and I probably have had influence on a lot of people's lives as a coach," Gable said.

When he is recognized for his gold medals at the 1971 Worlds and the 1972 Olympics during the March 3 ceremony, applause will likely be enduring for an athlete and coach who has become the figure associated with the sport of wrestling.

Tom Brands, who won gold at the 1993 Worlds and 1996 Olympics after winning three national titles at Iowa, said the Hall of Fame is a great thing for wrestling, especially in the state of Iowa.

"Wrestling under Gable, who was the best, prepared me and gave me a boost," Brands said of his college and Olympics success.

Brands will be joined by his twin brother, Terry, who was a gold medalist at the 1993 and 1995 Worlds. While Tom will be in attendance at the March 3 1 p.m. induction, Terry will be coaching his team at the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Championships.

A second pair of twins, the Banachs, will be inducted into the Hall for their gold medals at the 1984 Olympics. Ed and Lou Banach combined for five national titles at Iowa.

Other Hawkeye inductees include Randy Lewis (1984 Olympics), Chris Campbell (1981 Worlds), and Terry McCann (1960 Olympics).

Four Iowa high-school wrestlers who won four state titles and continued their careers at Iowa will be inducted in a ceremony Saturday at 1 p.m. Jeff Kerber, Greb Randall, Jeff McGinness, and Eric Juergens garnered 13 All-America honors wearing black and gold.

The induction ceremonies will be open to the public for the regular admission charge of $3 for adults, $2 for students. "This is a very exciting day in the history of Iowa wrestling," said Rod Brown, the associate director of the museum. "It is a great way to recognize accomplishments made by wrestlers with Iowa ties."

Women's tennis set for Big Ten debut

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

On a winning streak and with a nationally ranked player, the women's tennis team finally seems on course to open the Big Ten season this weekend.

After suffering lineup troubles because of ineligibility and injury early in the nonconference season, the Hawkeyes once again are at full-strength. Iowa will host Purdue at 11 a.m. on Saturday and Indiana at 10 a.m. on March 3 at the Recreation Building.

Hawk coach Paul Wardlaw said both teams will provide a significant challenge.

"Purdue has one of the better teams in the last four years," he said. "They play very aggressively and have solid doubles. We'll have our hands full with them, as we've beaten them the last three years."

The Boilermakers rank No. 65 and are 2-4 in dual competition after last week's victory over Western Michigan.

Indiana ranks No. 28 and stands at the top of the conference with a 9-1 overall record. The Hoosiers beat Indiana State last weekend with the help of Amanda Field and Karie Schluker. Both the No. 1 and 2 doubles pairs (No. 1 Schluker and Linda Tran and No. 2 Field and Igna Radel) are also ranked in the top 50.

Wardlaw said the Iowa pairs worked this week especially to prepare for the strength of both opponents' doubles play.

"Our doubles need to get better," he said. "That will be key because we're playing well in singles, we just need to get off to a better start with doubles. We've got a challenge [this weekend]; the doubles point will be crucial."

Sophomore Cassie Hass may prove instrumental this weekend after rejoining the lineup last week. Hass sat out most of the beginning of the season recovering from knee surgery, and she was ranked No. 80 in the latest Omni Hotels Collegiate Tennis Rankings.

"I don't know when the last Iowa player was ranked in the top 100," Wardlaw said. "That's a deep milestone for Cassie, and the good news is that she's still working her way back up to full strength."

Last weekend, Deni Alexandrova and Steffi Hoch held perfect 2-0 records in the Hawkeyes' split against Notre Dame and Virginia Tech. Alexandrova also recorded two victories in doubles with partner Toni Neykova, including a 9-8 upset of No. 29 Lindsey Green and Becky Varnum of Notre Dame.

"Deni is playing the best singles she's played since she's been at Iowa," Wardlaw said. "Steffi is also playing well. Toni needs to work on finishing her matches, and a lot of that is controlling her impulse to end early. Last weekend, our top four played extremely well on both days."

Iowa men oust Drake

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

Utilizing wins in the top four singles lineup, the Iowa men's tennis team iced intrastate rival Drake Wednesday night, 4-3. The Hawkeyes improved to 5-2 in the nonconference season.

"Overall, I'm really pleased," Iowa coach Steve Houghton said. "Drake had a good crowd there and was really fired up. Most of our guys played really well, and Drake is a good team. It's always been this type of close match."

Early in the match, Hunter Skogman and Jake Wilson defeated Kirk Schuler and Matt McClure in No. 2 doubles, 8-4. Stuart Waters and Justin Gaard were defeated at No. 1 by Aaron and Bryan Endress-Fox, 9-8 (6-3 tiebreaker). When Pete Rose and Petar Mandic lost in No. 3 doubles, the Bulldogs took a 1-0 early advantage. Wednesday's doubles loss was only the second this season for the Hawkeyes.

"We responded really well to losing the doubles point; before, I wasn't too sure how we'd react to that situation," Houghton said. "On one hand, it's good we have that confidence, but in general, we need to have that doubles match. We had leads in both No. 1 and 3 and eventually lost, but as we go on, we can't afford to do that."

The Hawkeyes' answer came as Waters won in No. 1 singles, trouncing Bryan Endress-Fox handily 6-3, 6-1 followed by Wilson's 6-1, 6-3 victory over Jack Francowitz. Mandic defeated Aaron Endress-Fox 6-3, 6-2 to improve Iowa's overall team score to 3-2 before Gaard added another win at No. 4 singles.

Gaard was bumped up in the lineup for the second-straight contest, as Skogman continues to recover from his injuries. Down in the first set, 5-2, Gaard rebounded with 7-5 and 7-6 victories before winning a 6-1 tiebreaker.

"Part of it is that players develop year-to-year, which is something you can't assume will happen. Last night, those guys really gave me a reminder of how much they improved."

The Hawkeyes will need to carry their versatility and consistency into Saturday's dual against 4-5 Illinois State.

"We'll have to play better than we did at recent matches, because they've basically returned everyone," Houghton said. "Last year, we beat them 4-3, and it was very close, and that was when we had [all-American] Tyler [Cleveland] at No. 1." Saturday's meet begins at 5 p.m. at the Recreation Center.

E-mail/DI reporter Roseanna Smith at: roseanna-smith@uiowa.edu

IOWA BRIEF

Field hockey pair sign

Two prep field-hockey players announced intentions on Tuesday to join Iowa coach Tracey Griesbaum's program.

Shelby Roche of Escondido, Calif., and Debbie Birrell of Shelbyville, Ky., will join the Hawkeyes for the 2002 season, which will begin in September.

Roche, a defender, was a two-time All-California Interscholastic Federation pick and was Avocado League Player of the Year last season. Roche was San Pasqual Defensive Player of the Year both her junior and senior seasons.

"Shelby brings a lot of energy and heart to the team," Griesbaum said. "She's hard working and won't miss a beat jumping to the college level."

Birrell, a native of Zimbabwe, spent the last two seasons playing midfielder and forward for Kentucky County Day High School, leading her squad in both goals and assists.

Iowa finished the 2001 season 13-5, reaching the championship of the Big Ten Tournament before falling to Ohio State.

GymHawks expect seniors to lead team

GYMNASTICS

"I'm optimistic one of these nights we will put it together and have a miss-free meet," said women's coach Mike Lorenzen. "This is a make or break time for us. Either we hit or we won't, but I have a feeling we are ready to hit."

Illinois comes in with a 4-7 record, 1-2 in the Big Ten. The Illini's season high score is 194, a mark Iowa has eclipsed three times.

Perhaps a boisterous crowd will help the 3-4 GymHawks hit their rhythm. In the past, the team has had a habit of feeding off the crowd's energy.

"It's always fun at Carver, especially a co-ed meet with getting the guys' support," said junior Janna Alexandrova. "It will be exciting with the seniors' last home experience."

Team leaders Corynne Cooper and Michele Ford will perform their last home meet. Cooper is the final gymnast left from the previous coaching staff recruits. She has become a mainstay on floor and vault, and Lorenzen spoke highly of the leadership role she has taken with the team outside the gym. Ford has blossomed into a huge asset for the team, learning new events and upgrading for better scores.

BIG TENS

upset over Minnesota that put them on the NCAA bubble.

"They are playing with emotion, and this is more of a home court game for them," Bluder said. "The players are ready to expect their emotion. We need to match their intensity, especially on defense."

Senior guard Lindsey Meder said the team is ready to counter Indiana's inspiration with plenty intensity of its own.

"We just need to be prepared for it," she said. "They are playing with a lot of momentum and playing for their coach. We play very well on the road. I'm not bothered the game is almost a home one for them."

The Hoosiers have been led by 6-5 senior center Jill Chapman, who averages 16 points and nine rebounds per game. Chapman joined Meder as a first team All-Big Ten selection. Indiana guards Heather Cassidy and Tara Jones have also stepped up their level of play during the team's winning streak.

"Chapman will give us problems," Bluder said. "She's a great 6-5 player, and she shoots a good percentage. Jones has picked up her play lately; she's hit 45 percent of her 3-point shots. They now have some 3-point weapons."

By finishing fourth in the third-highest rated conference in the nation, Bluder believes the Hawkeyes will definitely be in the NCAA Tournament, but playing well in Indianapolis could mean getting a better seed.

"It's the same as last year. We probably started as a seven and played our way into a four," she said. "If we win the tournament again, there is a slim possibility we would host [the first-round game]."

Last year, Iowa started its run to the championship with an incredible come-from-behind victory in the quarterfinals round over the Hoosiers. The Hawkeyes overcame an 18-point halftime deficit to defeat the Hoosiers, sending them on a magical run that did not end until the second round of the NCAA Tournament.

Will history repeat itself?

"By winning last year, we have the experience of doing it," Bluder said. "Many of the other teams there have not won it. They don't know what's like. We do."

majority of the conference slate, including during the previous meeting in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Of the four, which also includes top rebounder Adam Ballinger, Taylor is by far the most dangerous, Alford said.

"I think Taylor has been about as good as anyone in our league the last three weeks," Alford said. "He's really done a nice job of putting that team on his shoulder."

The sophomore scored 32 points in the Spartans' 81-76 victory over Big Ten-leading Ohio State Tuesday, and he has played a key role in the team's second half rejuvenation. Michigan State has won five of its last six games heading into the last week of the season, making it a dangerous team to face at this point.

Making matters worse for the Hawkeyes is the questionable status of the Big Ten's leading rebounder, Reggie Evans. Evans was bothered by an injury to his right thigh which he received prior to Iowa's 76-56 win against Michigan. Alford held Evans out of practice Monday afternoon and said the injury was "coming along slowly." Walking with a heavy limp, Evans admitted he was not completely healthy when he spoke to reporters on Wednesday.

"It's not 100 percent but its feeling better," he said. "But it's not like what I would like it to be right now."

With or without Evans, Alford believes the key to sweeping the Spartans will come in Iowa's transition game and the ability to get easy baskets. Iowa and Michigan State rank atop the conference in rebounding, so getting second opportunities on the offensive glass and taking care of each possession will also play large roles in determining the outcome on Saturday.

"We beat them here last time, so we know we can beat them," guard Luke Recker said. "As funny as it sounds, we still control our own destiny."

Iowa's fate remains unclear as the team looks forward to the start of the Big Ten Tournament on March 7. A victory over the Spartans would give Iowa a two-game winning streak heading in to the tourney. Despite sitting in ninth place in the conference, Alford said he feels the Big Ten is as wide open as ever, and he feels that with momentum, Iowa could do well in Indianapolis.

IOWA BRIEF

Iowa to increase prices on football, basketball tickets

IOWA CITY (AP) — The UI's Board in Control of Athletics on Thursday increased ticket prices for next season's football and men's basketball games.

The football team will play seven home games next year with general public season tickets costing $196 each. That's $4 more per game than 2001 football tickets. If individual game tickets are available, they will be $40 for the Iowa State game, $32 per ticket for the Purdue, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Northwestern games and $28 per ticket for the Akron and Utah State games.

Season tickets for men's basketball will cost $320 for the 16-game home schedule next season. This is an increase of $2 per game. If available, reserved seat single-game tickets will cost $26 each, an increase of $4 from the current season.

throws, but Williams' halfcourt heave missed badly.

Carlos Boozer scored a career-high 33 points for Duke but didn't get a shot off over the last 8:47, or after his lay-up gave Duke a 74-59 lead.

Mason had 22 points for Virginia, and Adam Hall had 21, 12 in the closing run.

Mason and Hall each made two free throws to give the Cavaliers an 82-77 lead. Williams made two free throws for the Blue Devils with 27 seconds left, and Mason's free throw made it 84-79 with 27 seconds left.

Williams then was fouled on a drive and made the free throw to get the lead down to 84-82, and Hall missed the second of two free throws with 21 seconds left. That gave Williams a chance to get Duke even, but he missed the free throw with the crowd jeering at an incredible decibel level.

Mike Dunleavy added 15 points for Duke on 6-17 shooting, and Williams had 14 points on 4-13 shooting.

A year ago, the Cavaliers ended a 12-game losing streak against Duke, and the Blue Devils' 24-game road winning streak, with a 91-89 victory.

Hall was big in that one, too, banking in a teammate's miss with 0.9 seconds left to give Virginia the victory. As he had last year, he celebrated Thursday night by leading cheers from atop the press table.

Iowa bats ready for action

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Spring is synonymous with hope, especially in baseball jargon, as March ushers in a new season. For the Iowa baseball team, March brings hope that this is the year things turn around.

It hasn't been pretty the past few years for Hawkeye fans. Battling to stay out of the Big Ten cellar and less than stellar records have been the norm. However, the squad has gained experience and confidence in those rough times, and it may have all the tools in place to make a dramatic turn around in the 2002 season.

The season will begin today with a game against Belmont University in Nashville, Tenn. The Hawkeyes stay in town, but switch opponents Saturday, facing Vanderbilt and battling David Lipscomb College on March 3.

"We have a good mix of older kids and younger players," said coach Scott Broghamer, who is entering his fifth year at Iowa. "We want to get better every day. The Big Ten is wide open, and we believe we can be competitive. The chemistry is real good on this team."

An immediate advantage for this season is the team has been able to practice some outside during February, as the weather at times has cooperated.

This current group of players has also never really had a chance to compete for a Big Ten title. That may change this year as the team has a solid defense and some respectable offensive firepower. However, any success will likely begin with pitching.

Broghamer

Junior Reed Pawelk is four saves shy of the school record of 22. He will forgo that role to try his luck as a starter. Pawelk was named to the all-American freshman team after notching a team-record 12 saves in 1999. He went 0-2 with a 4.50 ERA and six saves last season.

Ryan Mentkowski returns for his sophomore season. The lefty went 1-2 with a 4.67 ERA a year ago, and his 3-to-1 strikeout-to-walk ratio was tops on staff. Juniors Nick Jensen and Steve Sharpe could provide some quality starts as well. Jensen led the team with four wins a year ago, and Sharpe's 30 strikeouts led returning pitchers.

Senior Dyson Miguel could anchor the bullpen now that Pawelk has joined the starters.

"We have four or five good starters and some quality depth," Broghamer said. "They will be able to hopefully put the ball down in the zone to get grounders for our defense."

The corners of the infield are stable, with third basemen Ian Mattice, who led the team with nine homers and 24 RBIs, and first basemen Brad Carlson. A career .320 hitter, Carlson has an outside chance at becoming Iowa's all-time home-run leader with 14 more.

The middle infield is a question mark. Freshman Jeff Gremley is slated to handle shortstop duties, replacing the departed Kurt Vitense, and there is a three-way race for second base.

Seniors Lance Guyer and Jim Reid could join Cappellano in the outfield. Reid hit .338 last year to top the team. Sophomore transfer Kyle Thousand adds speed.

Junior Brad Husz will likely be behind the plate. He has started 35 games in his two years here.

"Lots of kids will have an opportunity to play," Broghamer said. "Whoever gets it done on the field will stay on the field. Still, everyone on the team will do something to contribute."

Last chance for Iowa track teams at ISU

This weekend: In their last chance to qualify for the NCAA championships, the Iowa men's and women's indoor track and field teams will compete at the Cyclone National Track and Field Qualifier in Ames at noon today in the Lied Recreation Center.

On the Iowa men: Iowa already has two events qualified for the national meet, senior Jim Costello in the weight throw and the 1,600-meter relay team, and Iowa men's coach Larry Wiecezorek wants to improve both of those events as well as get a couple more provisional qualifiers in Ames. Senior miler Adam Thomas needs to shave three seconds off his personal best to reach the 4:05.20 provisional time, and sophomore sprinter Juan Coleman must take 0.15 seconds off his previous best of 47.40 in the 400-meter dash to provisionally qualify. Wiecezorek said he plans to use this meet as both an NCAA qualifier and a springboard into the outdoor season by racking up some qualifying times — even if the time doesn't end up making the final cut for the national meet.

Coach's comment: "If you can get those provisional marks, then you're going to be one of the big players at the Big Ten [outdoor] meet," Wiecezorek said. "One of our goals is to definitely get those provisional times."

On the Iowa women: The Hawkeyes finished ninth in last week's Big Ten championships, where two school records were broken: junior pole vaulter Jessie Strand's 11-6½ vault and a 3:45.33 time by Aisha Hume, Nicole Charles, Atalie Barber, and Kristin Knight in the 1,600-meter relay. Charles had the highest individual placing for Iowa last week, garnering fourth place in the 400-meter dash in a time of 55.59. The distance medley of Barber, Charles, Sophia Chow, and Sarah Arens finished in 11:55.49, good enough for another fourth place finish.

Coach's comment: "This week is a good chance for us to improve all our performances," James Grant said. "It's important to do well these last few weeks of the indoor season in order to get a nice start on things in the outdoor schedule."

Swimming teams host NCAA Last Chance

The men's and women's swimming teams will host the Iowa Senior Championships today through March 3 at the Field House pool. The meet is sanctioned by USA Swimming and will include club teams from around Iowa. Preliminaries will start at 6 p.m. today, 10 a.m. on Saturday and March 3. Finals will begin at 6 p.m. today and Saturday.

The meet is an NCAA Last Chance Meet, meaning that this will be the final opportunity for Iowa's swimmers to meet NCAA-qualifying times and earn a trip to the NCAA championships in late March.

The main goal for the weekend is to swim as fast as possible in order to get a time worthy of qualifying for the NCAA championships. However, the swimmers will also compete in other events.

"Some women will swim off events," said women's coach Garland O'Keeffe. "We've got a couple people who are going to try to swim a little faster to get in the meet."

Jennifer Skolaski and Allison Lyle have already qualified for the NCAA meet, swimming 4 times at the Big Ten championships last weekend.

The men will compete in the event on March 3 only, upon their return from the Big Ten championships in Bloomington, Ind.

After the first day of competition at the Big Ten championships in Bloomington, Ind., the men's swimming and diving team is in ninth place. They scored 68 points on the meet's first day but are just two points behind 21st-ranked Purdue. No. 6 Minnesota leads the meet with 197 points, with No. 10 Michigan in second.

The ray of sunshine in Iowa's gloomy day came in diving. In the 1-meter dive, sophomore Timo Klami placed second (339.10), and senior Simon Chrisander finished sixth (315.09). The Hawkeyes were in last place entering the event but used the points from diving to improve.

In the 1-meter preliminary, Chrisander finished second and Klami third. Junior Roberto Gutierrez finished 11th and just missed the finals.

The meet will continue through Saturday, with preliminaries starting at noon and finals at 7 p.m.

horoscopes

Friday, March 1, 2002 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your emotions are close to the surface. Relationships are on your mind, and the opportunity to do something special with someone you care about is present. Make your plans early and prepare to have a most enjoyable time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Sometimes it's to your benefit to walk away. You may have to be pushed in order to do so, but you have so much ahead of you, let go and be optimistic about your future.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't be afraid to believe in yourself and your talent. If you are willing to go the extra mile, you will discover that the reception you receive will be phenomenal.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone you live with or whom you are close to may disappoint you today. Try to be patient and give her or him a chance to make it up to you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): This is a great day for romance and partnerships. Don't hesitate to take your present relationship to the next level. If you are still looking for love, be sure to attend events that will bring you in contact with interesting people.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Focus on your work and let the people around you know how serious you are about getting ahead. Your ambitious nature will give you a competitive edge. Don't hold back.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make plans to get out and do something special with someone you enjoy spending time with. You won't have to spend a lot of money in order to make this a day to remember.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There is a deal to be made, so don't waste time pondering over whether you should be getting involved. A partnership can be formed if you attend a financial seminar. Changes at home will be to your benefit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are in a powerful position today. New partnerships can be formed if you are forthright with your plans. Don't be afraid to accept a little praise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What you see and what you get will be two different things today. Don't let your emotions get the better of you. Not everyone will be on your side.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Put your ideas into motion. Be gracious and accept whatever is being offered. Your hard work and dedication to something you truly believe in will be rewarded.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The weekend may be here, but that doesn't mean that you should slack off. If you put in an added push, you will surpass any competition that you might meet along the way.

Signs you're not going to pass philosophy this semester

- When arriving late, you resort to arguments on the true meaning of tardiness.
- You decide to call the professor "King Know it All."
- Eating Play-doh hasn't worked yet, but reading his book is really hard.
- Bill and Ted seem more radical than ever.
- You openly call class participation, "class retardation" and won't back down.
- All you know is the Buddha was one bad ass mo' fo'.
- Plato appears in your dreams, often persuading you to wet the bed.

quote of the day

I would have remembered mine.

— Sen. John Breaux, D-La.,

after former Enron CEO Jeffrey Skilling said he could not recall the size of his bonus in 2000. Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said Skilling's bonus was $5.6 million.
