Israeli army battles into Bethlehem

By Laura King
Associated Press

RAMALLAH, West Bank — Israeli forces moved into Bethlehem early today after attacking Palestinian security headquarters near Ramallah with tanks and machine guns, Palestinians said, signaling further intensification of an offensive that the Israelis assert is aimed at stamping out terrorism.

Tanks entered Bethlehem from two directions, witnesses said, heading toward the center of town, where the Church of the Nativity marks the traditional birthplace of Jesus. Witnesses heard exchanges of gunfire a few hundred yards from the church. The Israeli military refused to comment.

Earlier, the Israelis attacked the headquarters of Palestinian Preventive Security outside Ramallah, firing tank shells and machine guns, Palestinian officials said. They said Palestinian security chief Jibril Rajoub had given orders to the 400 men inside to resist.

Palestinian officials said that Israeli soldiers used 60 Palestinian civilians as human shields in front of the tanks before the assault. Army spokesman Olivier Rafowicz "categorically denied" the charges. Israel banned reporters from the scene, and there was no independent confirmation.

Since the latest Israeli offensive began March 29 with an assault on Yasser Arafat's compound in Ramallah, Israeli forces have arrested approximately 700 suspected militants, said military spokesman Brig. Gen. Ron Kitrey.

Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres told MSNBC that Israel does not plan to occupy the Palestinian areas. "We are in the territories for three or four weeks. We don't intend to occupy the places," he said, adding that

Giving sight for sore eyes

A single beam of light and the surgeon's attention focus on his meticulous stitching of an eye that, in a few hours, will be able to look back.

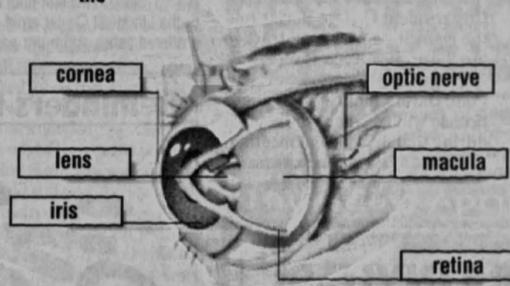

Eye surgeon John Sutphin can't dwell on the importance of each precise movement as he returns vision to a 73-year-old woman.

"You have to entirely focus," said the UI clinical professor of ophthalmology. "You can't think about results during the surgery."

Sutphin is one of three doctors at the UI Hospitals and Clinics who grant sight to those whose vision has been clouded or nearly destroyed by disease. Each year, the surgeons transplant up to 150 corneas — the transparent tissue at the front of the eye that acts as its "window," focusing light to the retina at the back of the eye.

The transplant will allow Elinor Severson to see clearly for the first time in four months in her strong right eye. A disease that renders her eyes chronically dry, the cause of corneal thinning and clouding, has caused the Fort

Before her latest surgery, on March 28, both of Severson's grayish-blue irises were obscured by an opaque infection, and her sight was restricted to gradations of light in her right eye and limited movement in her left.

"It's like rubbing Vaseline in your eyes and stumbling around," Severson said of her condition. "It's frightening

Stitching the cornea onto Severson's eye marks the last step in an intricate statewide cornea-donor system of microscopes, phone calls, surgical scissors, and bus rides that most likely started miles away and days before surgery.

Unlike other organ trans-

White says new victim-impact law unnecessary

By Jennifer Sturm
The Daily Iowan

A new law requiring convicted criminals to hear impact statements from their victims' families is unnecessary, Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said Monday.

Last week, Gov. Tom Vilsack signed the bill, which was spawned by the conclusion of the Jonathan Memmer double-murder trial. Memmer, convicted last fall of murdering two women in a Van Buren Street apartment, was allowed to leave the courtroom at his sentencing before his victims' families could tell him how much harm he had caused them.

Lawmakers quickly acted to close a loophole allowing defendants to ask judges, permission to leave during so-called victim-impact statements, which are seen as an important part of the healing process. The Memmer case marks the only time in Iowa the defendant has left before the statements.

White, who prosecuted the Memmer case, said legislators never understood why Memmer was allowed to exit. Instead, they rushed to pass the law without knowing the facts, he said.

"Judge [David] Remley allowed Memmer's request to leave because he has more information than what was made public," said White, who would not disclose details because Memmer's verdict is being appealed. Remley was unavailable for comment.

White had warned legislators through several e-mails that "the language was not achieving their goal," he said.

Still, Memmer's request was a foot in the door for other defendants, and in most cases a judge will order a defendant to remain present because of the bill, said Rep. Patrick Shey, R-Cedar Rapids, who lobbied for the bill. The law requires defendants to be present when a written, oral, video, or audio victim-impact statement is given.

Typically, judges have the inherent power to make a defendant leave the courtroom if they are disorderly or unruly on a case-by-case basis. White said he is pleased with an amendment that notes the new law does not take away such power.

But the bill philosophically changes the meaning of the statements from being aimed at influencing a judge's sentencing to blasting the criminals. "Now, it is really for the victim's family to give the defendant a

Herbold, Blizek take up UISG reins

By Vess Mitev
The Daily Iowan

A year of tough challenges lies ahead said the new leaders of the UI Student Government, who were sworn in on Monday night.

New UISG President Nick Herbold and Vice President Matt Blizek say looming state budget cuts, a push to get more student input in city government, and the challenge of maintaining a safe and clean campus environment are the most pressing issues they will face.

In his inaugural address, Herbold said he hoped to expand campus recycling, cut the costs of textbooks, bring back a campus TV station, and create permanent cultural centers.

"My biggest challenge will be to achieve the vision of the campus I have," he said after his inaugural address. "It is going to take a constant effort."

First tasks include creating more objective standards for using

Airport receives federal grant

The Eastern Iowa Airport last week received half the money it sought from a federal grant, slightly relieving the costs of added security measures implemented at the facility since Sept. 11.

Officials at the airport, located near Cedar Rapids, say the $293,120 grant — half of the requested $586,240 — will be used to help cover the additional $620,000 in security costs they expect annually.

The grant will be used to pay for "people costs," which is one of the largest of the airport's expenses since Sept. 11, said Pam Hinman, the airport's marketing manager. These costs include the hiring of more security personnel, overtime pay for full-time security employees, and a contract with Per Mar Security Services of Davenport, she said. Per Mar is conducting searches of all vehicles entering the airport's short-term parking lot.

The reimbursement comes from $175 million appropriation in the Department of Defense's budget, Hinman said. It was set aside to offer financial assistance to the nearly 500 airports nationwide spending more money on security, she said.

Airport officials are pleased with the reimbursement, and they will continue to seek money from federal grants, Hinman said.

"I think we knew we weren't going to get 100 percent of our request out of the appropriation," she said.

Each small airport that applied for federal assistance were granted half of its request, Hinman said.

With the lights still dimmed following a show of photographs chronicling his experience in New York City on Sept. 11, volunteer firefighter Michael Weinstock asked a crowd of hundreds in Macbride Auditorium on Monday night to imagine themselves in a small firehouse in Great Neck, N.Y. — where he gave a eulogy for a close friend and firefighter who died during terrorist attacks.

Weinstock, a UI alumnus, recited a portion of the eulogy he gave for high-school friend Jonathan Ielpi, 29, who was found in the south tower of the World Trade Center three months after the attacks.

Ielpi had a great sense of humor, said Weinstock, who choked up as he pledged to remain active in the lives of Ielpi's two children.

"Whenever Jon walked into the room, it was fun," he said.

Attending synagogues is now a negative experience for Weinstock because of the numerous funerals he has attended.

"My spirituality is a work in progress," he said during the question-and-answer session.

Both President Bush and Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, D-N.Y., spoke one-on-one with Weinstock in the days following the attacks; Rodham Clinton called him a "hero." Those encounters were captured on film and displayed after Weinstock shared his experience in New York.

When two planes ripped into the trade centers, Weinstock, who lives in Brooklyn, spent his first day of vacation at the site assisting rescuers.

He recalls a police officer stopping the ambulance he rode to the towers, telling them the area was a crime scene and "to do what you could."

"What he meant was that there were bodies all over the ground and to please try not to run over them as we drove in," Weinstock said, who works as an assistant district attorney in the Domestic Violence Bureau in Brooklyn.

Weinstock helped the wounded in a conference room nearby when news came that both towers had been hit, immediately leading him to think the country was at war. He then prevented a police officer from leading civilians from the towers into the unknown beyond, potentially into harm's path.

"We did not know what was going on outside," Weinstock said. "The officer ... said, 'This is a nice old building. We are going to wait by these elevators for 45 minutes.'"

Five minutes later, the first tower collapsed as the group remained safe in a nearby building.

"I was fortunate to be there at that time," said Weinstock, who was outside when both towers fell. "Those people would have been outside when the towers fell."

Weinstock's presentation was sponsored by the UI Lecture Committee and UI religion Professor Jay Holstein.

"I know you have knowledge of the attacks from newspapers and television," Weinstock said. "I'm here trying to bridge that gap."

City Council may postpone projects

By Mike McWilliams
The Daily Iowan

Funding for future capital-improvement projects will have to be reduced or postponed to support the sale of more than $29 million in bonds for projects in fiscal year 2002, city officials said.

Cuts of $4.8 million for capital projects in 2004 — when the city would start payment on $18.4 million in bonds for the Iowa City Public Library expansion — and $7.2 million in 2006 would be necessary, said City Manager Steve Atkins.

The problem stems from a policy that limits the amount of assessed taxable value collected from property taxes, which help pay for the bonds, to not exceed 25 percent. Compounding the situation is the expansion of the Public Library, 123 S. Linn St.

"The bottom line is, the extremely large debt of the library project is going to push us over 25 percent," Atkins told the Iowa City City Council during its informal work session Monday.

The percentage is projected to increase beyond 26 percent by fiscal year 2004 if no reductions are made.

Amendments to the capital improvement plan can be made until the city approves a bond sale for a specific project, said Councilor Steven Kanner.

Atkins suggested that the council continue to pay off the library bonds in 20 years but pay the remaining $10.7 million — earmarked for city service improvements to streets, parks, and sewers, among others — in a 10-year loan plan.

The move would help maintain the city's credit rating and help it obtain low-interest rates on bonds, he said. However, Kanner questioned the proposal, saying a 10-year plan could mean higher payments, thus raising taxes and creating a burden on people who now use the services.

"I think it makes sense for people who use it in the future to help pay for it," Kanner said. "If these things are going to last 20 years, I think we should spread it out."

Councilor Connie Champion, who has said maintaining the city's credit rating is the most important part of the budget, expressed interest in Atkins' proposal.

The council will vote whether to proceed with advertising the sale of the $29 million bonds at tonight's formal meeting.

In other council action, Mason City resident George Barlas told the council he had a contract to purchase the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., from owner Kip Pohl. Barlas' request for a liquor license will go before the council during tonight's formal meeting.

Falon Jovon Metcalf, 19, of Douds, Iowa, was charged Monday with aiding and abetting possession of precursors to manufacture methamphetamine. Police allege that Metcalf acted as a lookout for her brother, Matthew Boughton, who stole multiple boxes of cold medicine used in the manufacture of methamphetamine from Cub Foods, 855 Highway 1 W.

William Howard Barzee Jr., 36, address unknown, was charged March 29 with reckless use of fire. Police found Barzee asleep in the first-floor bathroom of the Lindquist Center amid a floor of scattered ashes and burnt paper, court records said. A small portion of the floor was scorched, and officers discovered burnt matches, police said.

Richard Eugene Hayes, 35, of West Liberty was formally charged Monday with third-degree theft. On Nov. 28, 2001, Hayes allegedly used checks from his closed UI Community Credit Union account to pay $864 to Wal-Mart, 1001 Highway 1 W., court records said.

Miguel Angel Salcedo, 30, 207 Myrtle Ave., was charged Monday with assault causing injury. On March 30, police allege, Salcedo struck a man in the head with a beer bottle at the Union Bar, 121 E. College St. The man required medical treatment for injuries sustained to his head, police records said.

James Glenn Morris, 39, 1131 Third St. Apt. 3, was charged Monday with possession of a stolen vehicle. After a routine traffic stop, officers allegedly discovered that the green 1998 Mercury Mystique Morris was driving was reported stolen, police said.

Court to rule on 3-strikes

By Anne Gearan
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court said Monday it will review whether some three-strikes-and-out sentencing laws result in unconstitutionally harsh prison terms, such as up to life behind bars for shoplifting videotapes from Kmart.

The court agreed to hear appeals involving two California thieves sentenced to terms ranging from 25 years to life for small-time crimes that might otherwise have meant just a few months in jail.

The Supreme Court will consider whether long sentences were unconstitutionally cruel or unusual punishment for a heroin addict who shoplifted videotapes worth $153 and an AIDS patient who shoved three golf clubs down his pants leg and tried to walk out of a pro shop.

The court's eventual ruling could be limited to the way the law is applied in California, or the justices could make a more general statement about how far states may go in using similar laws to win very long prison terms for relatively minor crimes.

Twenty-six states and the federal government have some version of a three-strikes law, which typically allows a life prison-term or something close to it for a criminal convicted of a third felony.

Critics say the laws are too harsh and inflexible in general and particularly so in California, which has the nation's strictest three-strikes law. It requires a sentence of 25 years to life in prison for any felony conviction if the criminal was previously convicted of two serious or violent felonies.

"If an individual is charged with growing a single marijuana plant, and he has on his record two qualifying prior convictions, he's dog meat," said Jerome Mullins, a San Jose, Calif., criminal-defense lawyer who has had several clients prosecuted under the state three-strikes law.

"He's looking at 25 to life for growing a plant."

Crimes that might otherwise be considered misdemeanors may also be considered felonies, meaning that a shoplifting charge such as the one Leandro Andrade faced can trigger the three-strikes provision.

Andrade was convicted of twice stuffing videotapes down his pants at Southern California Kmart stores in 1995.

He had previous burglary convictions, making him eligible for extra punishment under California's three-strikes law.

"No other state in the country has such a sentencing scheme where misdemeanor conduct can be the basis for an indeterminate life sentence," said Andrade's lawyer, Erwin Chemerinsky, a professor at the University of Southern California Law School.

Bush gives Governors Island to New York

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will transfer Governors Island to New York state for a nominal fee, preventing the historic island off the southern tip of Manhattan from being sold to the highest bidder. City and state officials envision an education training center there.

"I looked at the law, looked at the circumstances, and decided this morning this is the right thing for the U.S. government, and it's the right thing for the people of New York," Bush said in an Oval Office announcement, with New York Gov. George Pataki and Mayor Michael Bloomberg at his side.

"I think it's going to make the life of the city that has been tragically affected by killers and murderers better. And I think it will enhance the quality of education," Bush said.

Bloomberg said the move will allow New York to move part of City University of New York to the island, where it will help train teachers and ultimately shrink class sizes.

"You could not make a bigger impact on America going forward than by this gesture," he said.

"On behalf of the people of New York, thank you," said Pataki, who twice mistakenly called it Ellis Island before correcting himself. "This is great news for New York."

The move caps years of confusion over the status of the 172-acre former military base.

In 1995, President Clinton was flying over New York Harbor when he made an offer to his seatmate, then-Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y. He would transfer the island to New York for $1 if state and city officials would come up with a plan that would include public access.

Otherwise the island was to be put on the auction block and sold at fair market value, now estimated at between $300 million and $500 million. But delays and squabbling prevented the deal from being completed.

No link between Lindh, agent

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Prosecutors acknowledged Monday they do not have evidence that John Walker Lindh killed Americans in Afghanistan. But a federal judge said that would not be necessary to prove Lindh joined a conspiracy to murder Americans as a Taliban fighter.

When District Judge T.S. Ellis III asked whether the government's case included alleged attempts by Lindh to kill American citizens, Assistant U.S. Attorney David Kelly replied, "At the moment, I am not aware of it."

Another prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney John Davis, added that "there's no allegation of personal involvement" by Lindh in the killing of Johnny Micheal Spann, a CIA agent who was slain during a prison uprising in Afghanistan at which Lindh was present.

Ellis said that as the government framed the broad conspiracy case, "you are not required to show that he shot at Americans." Later, the judge denied a defense motion for more details on the charges, saying, "I don't read the indictment as pointing to a specific murder" but rather as one of Lindh allegedly joining a broad conspiracy by Al Qaeda and the Taliban to kill Americans around the world.

During the hearing on defense motions for numerous government documents and interviews, however, the judge repeatedly admonished prosecutors to give Lindh's lawyers any information they turn up that is favorable to the defendant.

Kelly said Lindh did allegedly join forces with Al Qaeda and the Taliban, making preparations "for an expected onslaught" by U.S. forces after the Sept. 11 attacks.

Lindh is charged with conspiring to murder U.S. nationals, providing support and services to foreign terrorist organizations, and using firearms and destructive devices during crimes of violence. Three of the 10 charges carry a maximum life sentence; the other seven have prison terms of up to 90 years. He was brought back to the United States by military escort on Jan. 23; he has been kept in jail since then.

UI extends its early retirement deadline

By Peter Rugg
The Daily Iowan

In a move aimed at saving the university money in a year fraught with budget cuts, UI officials are pushing back the deadline by four months for an early retirement program in hopes more people will apply.

Approximately 420 out of the 1,000 eligible university employees have applied for the Early Retirement Incentive Program, which now has a June 30 deadline.

"If people retire, their positions might not be refilled, freeing up the salary, and if the position is filled, it's usually with a newer person who starts out with lower salary and benefit costs," said Richard Saunders, the Human Resources assistant director for benefits.

The program, which went into effect in 1997, applies to university employees at least 57 years old who have 15 years of service. Approved candidates receive a paid life-insurance policy of $3,000-$4,000, which is equal to what they would receive if they retire at 65, retirement contributions for five years or until they are eligible for Social Security, and health and dental insurance until they are eligible for Medicare.

The program and its benefits will also expire on the same date as the application deadline.

"I do think the deadline expansion will attract a few more people but not a substantial number," Saunders said. "We wanted to make sure that people saw it and didn't ignore it, especially if they were busy thinking about all the budget issues."

However, other university officials and employees say hiring new personnel might end up costing more in the long run.

"It really doesn't save us money because our staffing is so lean right now," said Linda Maxson, the dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. "Anyone who leaves would have to be replaced. It'd be a loss of talented people."

The cost associated with the hiring and training process as well as salary would balance any savings, said Maxson, who is doubtful the extended deadline will attract many more applicants.

"I think most people who wanted this applied when they thought the deadline was February," she said.

While acknowledging that the program might have some possible drawbacks, Saunders said departments could still save money if they chose to restructure themselves.

"When you replace an individual, you can train the replacement in a new direction you want the department to go, or you can spread the work around with other people," he said. "But productivity might be lower, and it does take the replacements a while to get their feet wet."

Hiring new employees at a lower salary could backfire on the university, said UI Staff Council representative Cheryl Reardon, adding that the UI must persuade them to stay if it hopes to avoid additional costs.

"If you bring them in at a low salary, they might start looking somewhere else, and then you have to go through the whole process again in two years," she said.

UIHC doctors transplant corneas with help from statewide donor system

EYE SURGERY

bank must receive consent from the deceased's family — donor cards or organ-donor status on a license can be overridden if relatives refuse consent.

Statewide-trained eye removers, "enucleators," first carefully cut the six muscles and the optic-nerve holding the eye; they must remove it within four hours of the donor's death. They then fill the space with a prosthetic to preserve the rounded appearance.

The eye is packaged and relayed across the state in up to eight Iowa State Patrol cars to the Iowa Lions Eye Bank — the only one in the state — where a technician will cut out the cornea. After further inspections and checks on the donor's medical and social background, the cornea is delivered to its destination by taxi, Greyhound bus, or commercial airplane in a jar of pink antibiotic fluid. The process costs $1,650.

The eyes are sent across the state, nation, and as far away as Saudi Arabia. In 2001, the bank provided 840 corneas for transplant; the number in 1996 was 450, Mason said.

Under the scalpel

Wide awake under local anesthetics and wearing a blue sterile cloth that exposes only her right eye, Severson is ready for her fifth new cornea so she can once again tell a spade from a heart while playing poker with her friends.

"Dr. Sutphin knows what he's doing," she said. "I'm very optimistic."

Sutphin said Severson's multiple transplants are very unusual because only 12 percent of patients suffer rejection and only one out of three of those transplants actually fail.

"If she had none of them, she would be blind at this point," he said.

Sutphin places a circular tool on the clouded portion of Severson's cornea, methodically counting off eight turns to cut the cornea from the eye. A metal ring sutured around her iris in four places retains the eye's shape after the cut, and Sutphin squeezes a clear jelly-like substance that is derived from turkey combs into the space left by the missing cornea so that the flexible tissue does not collapse.

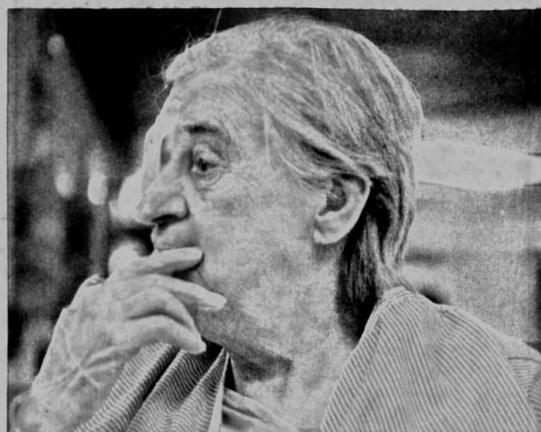

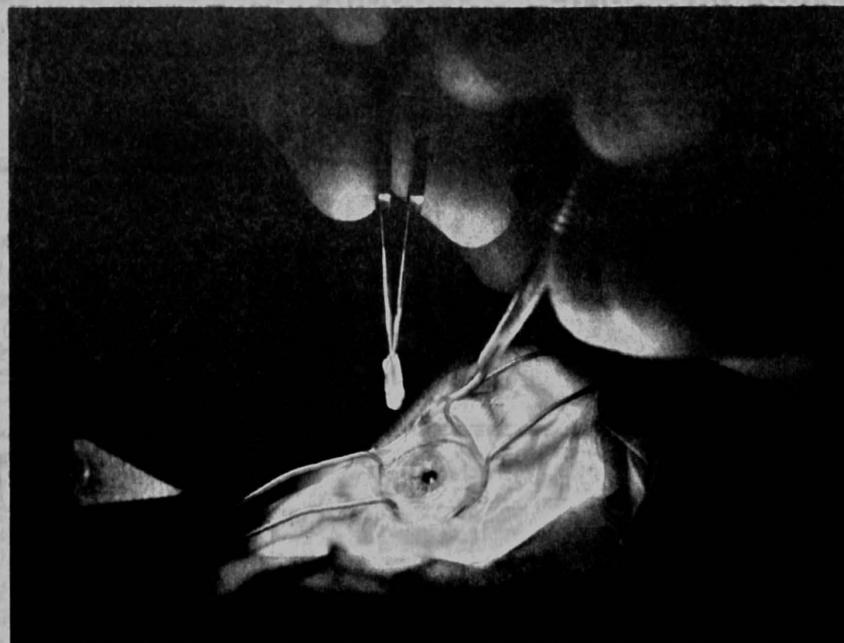

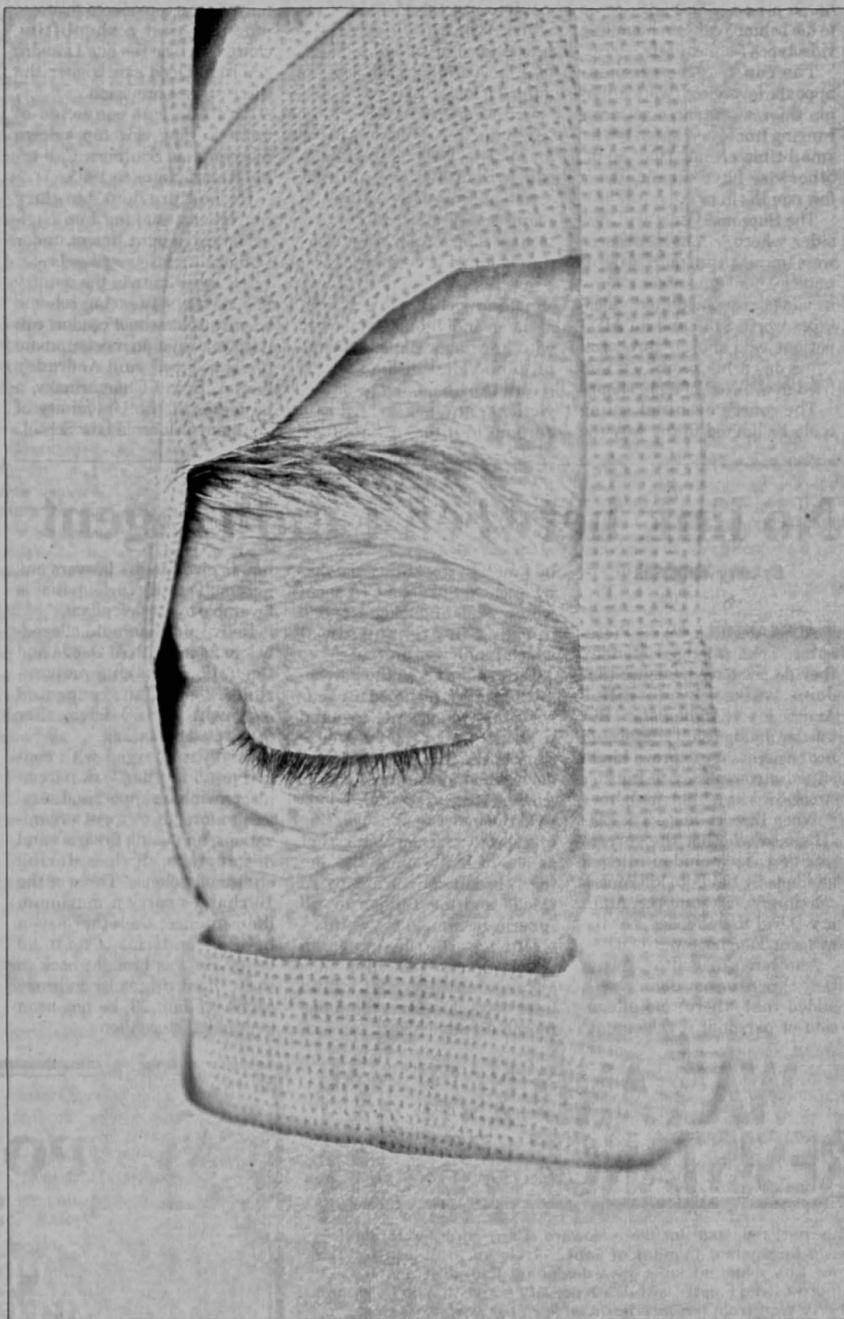

Once he lowers the new cornea onto the eye with tweezers, he starts the hour-long process of sewing 20 stitches.

"You can see already that it's clear," he said. "The hard part is keeping it clear. It's a long process."

Severson will fight rejection by dropping steroids into her eye. And her immunosuppression pills are slowing her disease. On Sunday, she was back at her daughter's house, seeing the faces of her children for the first time in months.

"I can see the best that I have in four months," she said. "It's an Easter miracle."

Photo Story

by Scott Morgan

UIHC patient Elinor Severson has cloth placed around her eye in preparation for a cornea transplant.

Severson waits for her daughter after having the transplant. Doctors removed the bandages several hours after the surgery to check on the eye and to see if she had recovered enough to remove them permanently.

UI sophomore Erin Johnson holds the cornea from a donor eye to be used in a transplant.

Doctors clean up Severson's face after removing cloth and plastic covering her during the transplant. Severson was awake and alert throughout the surgery but she could neither feel nor see anything in the eye doctors were operating on.

Doctors remove the diseased cornea from Severson's eye during the two-hour surgery. A donor cornea was then sewn into place with 20 stitches evenly spaced around the cornea.

Israel continues incursion

ISRAEL

Israel does not intend to dismantle the Palestinian Authority or harm Arafat.

On Monday, Israeli troops backed by armor pounded a Ramallah building with anti-aircraft guns, briefly pushing into Bethlehem and sending the deafening echo of tank shells through Palestinian streets.

Spurred by a wave of bloody suicide attacks that claimed more than 40 lives in five days, Israeli leaders said the military drive was meant to smash a Palestinian terrorist infrastructure. Palestinians, for their part, said Israel's tactics amounted to a campaign of state terror against the civilian population.

Later Monday, Palestinians opened fire on an Israeli car in the West Bank, wounding three members of a family. Israeli soldiers fired back, killing one of the gunmen, the military said.

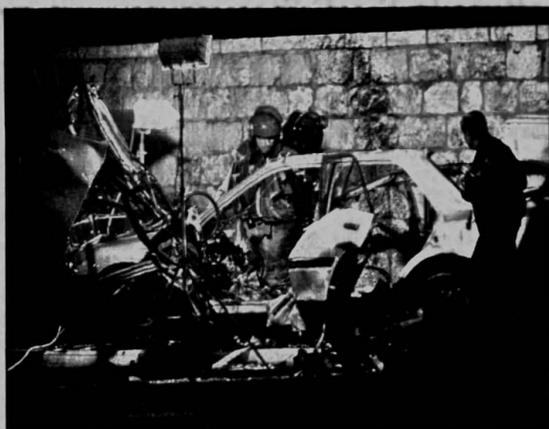

On another front, Hezbollah guerrillas in Lebanon fired two rockets at Israel, the military said. The rockets exploded harmlessly in fields. Sheik Hassan Nasrallah, the leader of the Lebanese Hezbollah guerrillas, has called for helping the Palestinians in their struggle against Israel.

Troops searching for Palestinian militants and weapons caches carried out house-to-house searches and engaged in running battles with gunmen. In the center of Ramallah, soldiers used vehicle-mounted anti-aircraft guns to pulverize the facade of a building where Palestinian gunmen were holed up, sending chunks of masonry plunging into the street.

Israeli forces also moved into the northern Palestinian towns of Qalqilya and Tulkarem on Sunday night and Monday.

As Israeli forces advanced, Palestinian militants were killing Palestinians suspected of collaborating with Israel. Ten bodies were found in the West Bank, including seven taken by militants from a temporary jail and shot in the streets of Tulkarem.

In the sixth Palestinian attack in six days, a car bomb exploded near downtown Jerusalem, killing the driver and a policeman. Police said the policeman stopped the car, and the driver, a Palestinian, set off the bomb. The Al Aqsa Brigades, a militia linked to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement, claimed responsibility.

Sporadic gunfire rang out after dark in Ramallah, a few miles to the north, where a tight curfew and continued fighting have turned a busy commercial center into a ghost town. The boom of tank shells was heard after night fell. Eight Israeli soldiers were injured — two seriously — in Ramallah and another in Qalqilya, a military source said. The bodies of two Palestinian police were found in a park in the city's center, Palestinian military intelligence said.

Among the fugitives being hotly pursued by Israeli forces in Ramallah was Palestinian militia leader Marwan Barghouti, a senior Israeli security source said, speaking on the condition of anonymity. Israeli officials have said Barghouti was involved in numerous deadly attacks on civilians.

President Bush called on Arafat to put a stop to anti-Israeli attacks. "There will never be peace so long as there is terror, and all of us must fight terror," Bush said.

piece of their mind," he said.

That's fine with Jeff Sullivan, the cousin of Maria Lehner, who was murdered by Memmer.

"The whole ideal of a victim-impact statement is to confront the subject about what the crime has done to us," he said. "When Memmer left, it prohibited our closure. It was like our family was victimized again."

The victim-impact statement is not influential if the family cannot speak to the convicted, Sullivan said.

"The judge has decided already what the sentencing will be; there is no point for a family member to speak to just the judge and not the guilty party," he said, although his family members spoke to the judge after Memmer exited.

Memmer was convicted of murdering Lehner, 27, and Laura Watson-Dalton, 29. The victims were found in a South problems," Blizek said. "That means fighting legislators from forcing more budget cuts on us."

Van Buren Street apartment on March 19, 1999, following a fire Memmer allegedly set to obscure the crimes. Memmer is serving two life sentences.

Outgoing UISG President Nick Klenske spoke of the need to challenge not only university administrators, but the city and state as well in his farewell address.

"I challenge you to let the president of the student body sit next to you in an administrative meeting as a peer," he said, looking at UI President Mary Sue Coleman. "The UI can hear very little of the students' voice ... unless we challenge each other to become a community."

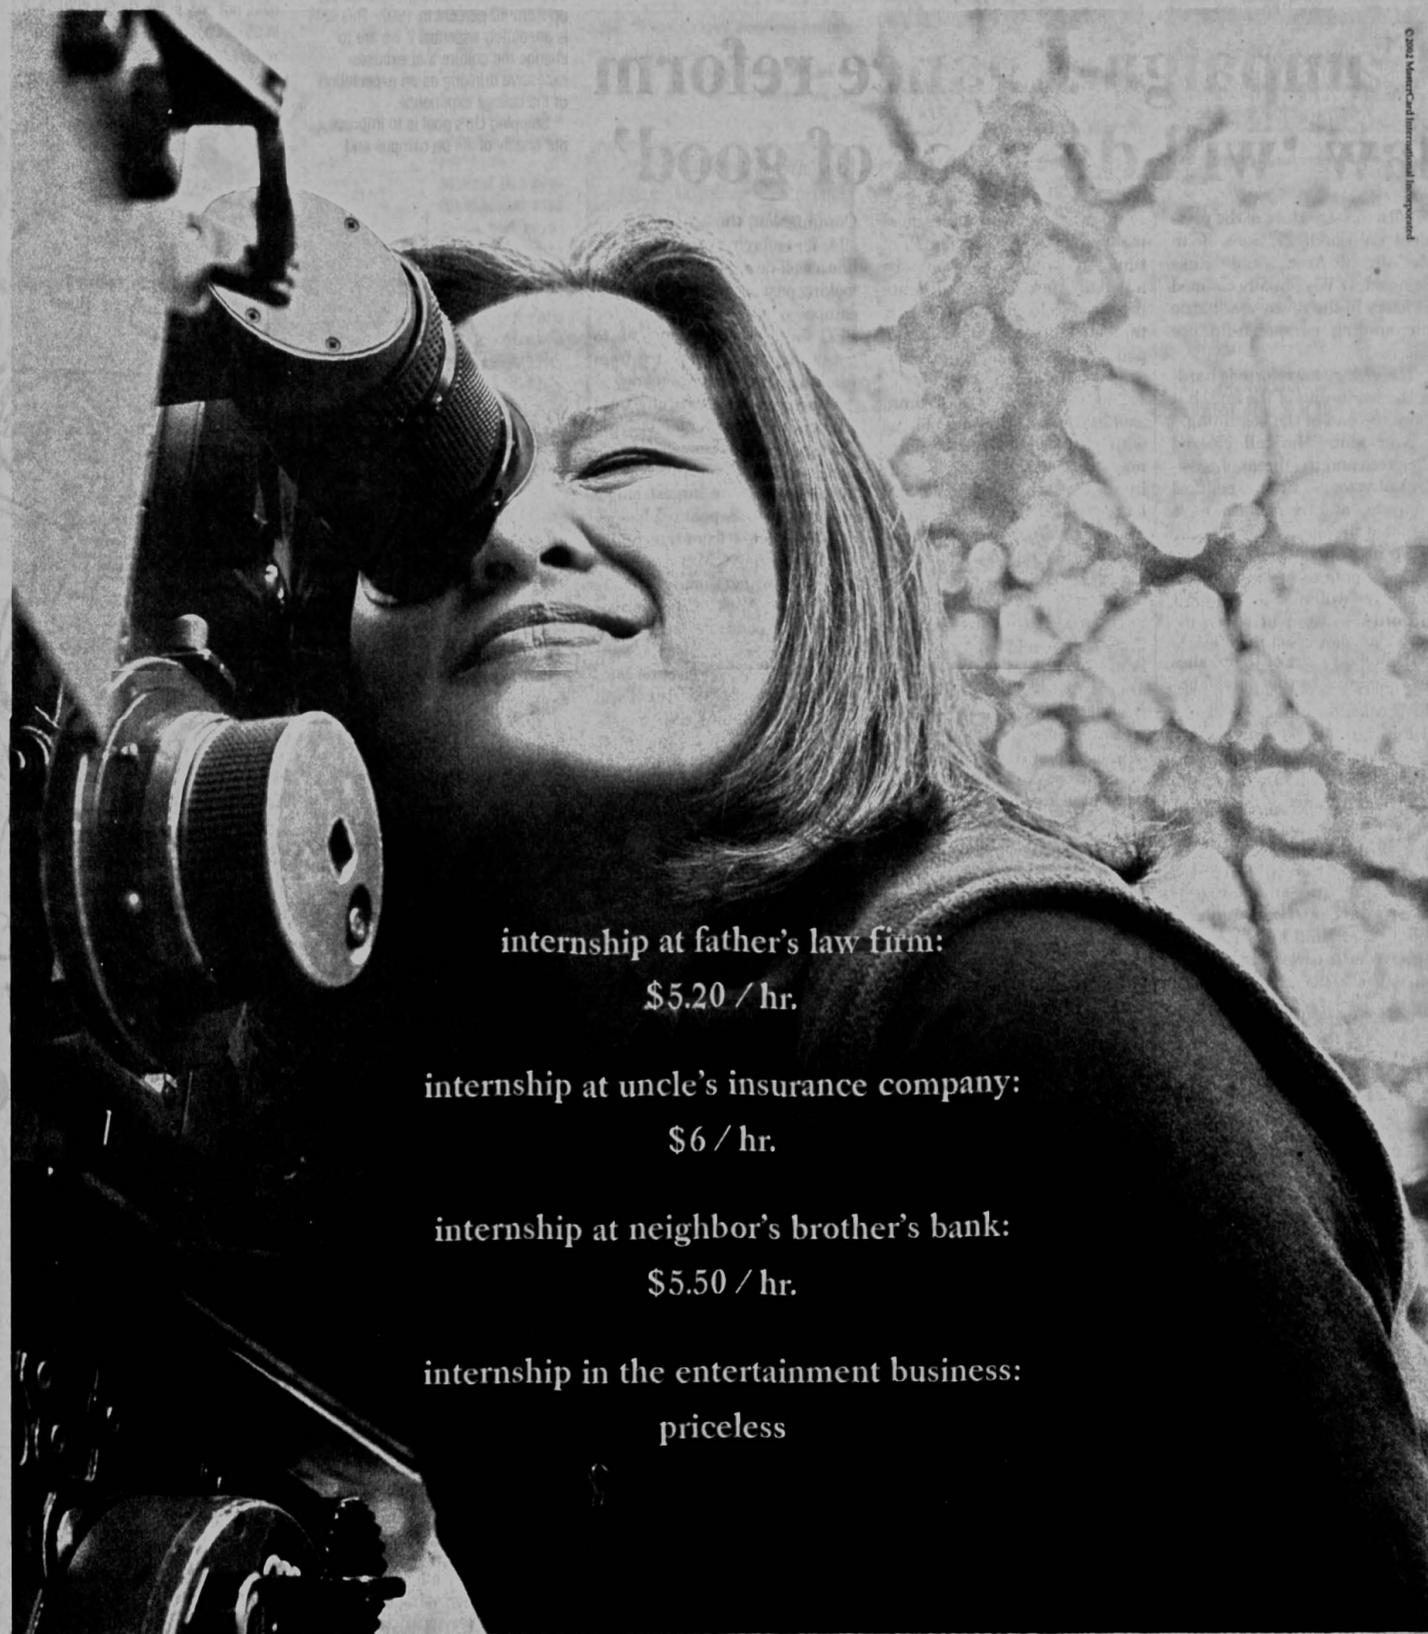

In response, Coleman said university decisions will be made with a "primary commitment" to students, although staff and faculty will feel the effects of budget cuts as well.

Herbold stressed the importance of a student voice in city government, vowing that a UISG member will be at every City Council meeting. On the ticket's urgent agenda is mobilizing student participation at the upcoming city public forum on ordinances that would require permits for keg parties and ban furniture from porches, Blizek said.

Some UISG senators who were also sworn in for the new term said the new ticket has high expectations to fulfill in succeeding Klenske and outgoing UISG Vice President Dan Rossi.

"They are going to be a hard act to follow," said Sen. Tyler Lightcap. "They [Herbold-Blizek] need to come up with a creative structure to student government and reach out to a diverse student body."

Stepping up to respond to study

Thanks to the DI for its continuing coverage of the issue of high-risk drinking, including the most recent Harvard statistics on excessive drinking by college students.

With all due respect to the Harvard researchers, members of the Stepping Up Coalition believe that the most important statistic is not the "binge-drinking" rate but the percentage of students harmed by people who drink too much. The latest Harvard statistics are a forceful reminder that work remains to be done. Unfortunately, we have not seen a decrease in the percentage of our students who say excessive drinkers have interrupted their sleep and studies, physically and sexually assaulted them, damaged their property, and put them at risk by driving drunk.

One bright spot is that more students are telling other students that they should drink less or stop drinking altogether. The percent who said they have done this at least once was 60 percent in the most recent survey, up from 40 percent in 1997. This shift is absolutely essential if we are to change the culture that excuses excessive drinking as an expectation of the college experience.

Stepping Up's goal is to improve our quality of life on campus and throughout the community. We believe this can be achieved while balancing the rights of adults who drink responsibly with everyone's right to a safe and healthy environment in which to live, work, study, and have fun.

Sarah Hansen
Stepping Up executive committee member

Church cover-up a disgrace

The cover-up of scandals in the United States and elsewhere is present within many churches, not just the Catholic Church, and it affects all who claim to be "Christian," thereby influencing religions throughout the whole world. There are many who say they love God, but in reality, they are spiritually lukewarm, for they do not truly practice their faith.

Our country needs more than "flag waving" to restore it to its former greatness — it needs a "spiritual awakening" so that people of all faiths will again come to realize the needs of their fellow countrymen and offer their time and talents to help the less fortunate, not only in the United States but in other countries as well. Only then will we have true peace within ourselves and also contribute to bringing a just peace to our troubled world.

Vincent Bemowski
Menasha, Wis., resident

Let the guns blaze

The Bush administration must end its attempts at appeasement and compromise and allow Israel to destroy Yasser Arafat and all other Palestinian terrorist groups.

President Bush's too-often-repeated calls for a cease-fire in response to Palestinian terrorist attacks, such as the recent slaughter of 22 civilians at a Seder, are useless against groups who have demonstrated time and again that their only language is empty promises and suicide bombings.

American eagerness for "negotiations" with murderers has broadcast to the world that we are moral cowards. If the enemies of freedom attacking Israel have no reason to believe that the United States has broken with its paper-tiger past, we will be their next target.

Israel is now our frontline of defense against terrorism. If we want to stop the next Sept. 11 before it begins, the Bush administration must send a new message to the Arafats, Osama bin Laden, and Saddam Husseins of the world — by showing uncompromising moral support for Israel's right to freedom and self-defense and by demanding justice for Arafat. We should not have a double standard — bin Laden and Arafat are the same, and justice requires they be treated the same.

America must make war, not peace, in its war against terrorism.

executive director, Ayn Rand Institute

Campaign-finance reform law 'will do a lot of good'

With the signature of the president on March 27, Sens. John McCaig, R-Ariz., and Russ Feingold, D-Wis., finally claimed a victory in the seven-year battle surrounding campaign-finance reform.

The victory for reform is hardly the beginning of the end, but more the end of the beginning.

Ever since the bill cleared Congress and the threat of presidential veto, politicians, political analysts, and academics have disputed the significance, effects, and constitutionality of the bill.

Proponents commend the bill, saying it will plug the largest loopholes in campaign laws — loopholes that essentially made Swiss cheese of the old laws. Adversaries say that the bill stifles the democratic system of government, favors powerful incumbents, and is unconstitutional.

Despite the controversy, the campaign-finance bill that McCain and Feingold fought so hard to pass is needed in an election system dominated by the dollar.

Something needs to be done in the system that heavily favors those who are rich, those who have the richest friends, and those who can raise the most money in the shortest period of time. And while this bill may be a small step in the ultimate process of reform, it is an important step in ensuring that the political system of the United States is accessible to all.

Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn, said it best: "I have problems with parts of this bill — parts may be unconstitutional — but in all, this bill will do an awful lot of good." With his "Yea" vote, Thompson represented that though this bill falls far from perfect, it is a step in the right direction.

The next battle for campaign-finance reform lies in the courts. Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., and the National Rifle Association have filed separate lawsuits in federal court challenging the bill's constitutionality. Smith expects the courts to determine the fate of the bill's provisions sometime next year.

Something needs to be done in the election process to allow for truly representative democracy. But where the exact problem lies is as controversial as the bill itself.

The Federal Election

Commission, the agency responsible for enforcing campaign laws, has a well-deserved reputation for looking past or refusing to enforce campaign laws. Critics blame the FEC for allowing campaigns to get out of control and turn from issues and credibility to money.

Others blame politicians and political parties for emphasizing the significance of money in campaigns. The Democratic Party just received the largest single donation in U.S. political history — $7 million — from the creator of the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles. Sen. Jon Corzine, D-N.J., and New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg each spent more than $60 million of their own money on their election campaigns, and President Bush will be in Cedar Rapids next month, campaigning for Iowa Rep. Greg Ganske at a $250-a-plate meal, double that to include a picture with the president.

Old habits are hard to break, especially when someone's job is at stake, but Congress and the president chose the commendable and correct decision in allowing campaign-finance reform to pass its first hurdle in what appears to be a very long race.

Looks like our options for dinner will be limited . . . again.

A perfect knowledge of flying cockroaches

In a perfect world, we'd have no need for cynics and critics.

Imagine. Everything would be peace, bliss, and equality. Almost as if somebody like the Buddha or Jesus or Mohammed had actually existed and human beings had actually paid attention — not just that lip-service kind that everyone's so well-honed at, which is really a whole lot more like paying attention CliffsNotes-style.

And everyone would live happily ever after, just like in a Microsoft commercial.

Sounds kinda dull, actually.

Especially the part about living in a Microsoft commercial. Luckily, we have King George, Stealth President Cheney, Johnny Reb Ashcroft, and the rest of the King's band of merry boy warriors, not to mention Ariel Sharon, the Israeli version of Osama bin Laden, Yasser Arafat, the Palestinian version of Al Gore mucking his way through the Florida swamp, and the U.S. Supreme Court, so we don't have to worry all that much about residing in a perfect world.

Speaking of the Supreme Court, did you notice what the wise ones did last week? In a Virginia death-penalty case, the justices upheld the conviction of a man whose lawyer was also the attorney for the victim in the case. Not only was this barrister double-timing, he kept very quiet about also being the victim's lawyer.

Five Supreme Court justices could find no conflict of interest here.

Right. And black is white, and purple is yellow, and

Down Under in Australia, you have to wear these special boots with spikes on the soles to keep you from falling off the face of the Earth.

If there was no conflict of interest, why did the attorney keep his double duty a secret?

If you remember the Jonathan Memmer murder trial, you'll recall that Memmer's original attorneys quit the case because of a potential conflict of interest: They had in the past represented some of the prosecution's witnesses. Not the victims, just some of the witnesses.

Apparently, the rules are different in Virginia. And in the Supreme Court.

The other brilliant thing the court did was to uphold, unanimously, the eviction of families from public housing if even one member of the family is arrested on drug charges.

In the case that the court ruled on last week, one of the people involved was a grandmother who regularly searched her granddaughter's room for drugs. Her granddaughter, who is mentally disabled, was arrested for possession four blocks away from the housing project.

Yep, that's right. Four blocks away. You see, under the government's zero-tolerance policy, the drug use need not occur on the public-housing property. If you happen to live in, say, Oakland public housing, and your brother, who lives with you, is busted in New York City, you can be evicted. It doesn't matter if you didn't know he was a crack head, believing that he was merely schizophrenic.

According to the Supreme Court, anyway.

Yes, I know; we're deeply involved in the war on drugs (which seems to be going about as well as Sharon's war on the Palestinian people). And to win this war on drugs we must have zero-tolerance and other draconian policies, such as defoliating large sections of Colombia (which seems to be going about as well as defoliating large sections of Vietnam).

But evicting grandmothers?

Who's in charge here? Mickey Mouse? The Gestapo? Ariel Sharon?

Or is that being redundant?

There's only one glimmer of light that you can see in the court's eviction decision.

Down in Florida, the home of Vote Lite, Jeb Bush lives in public housing. And his daughter was recently busted on a drug charge.

So I guess this means that Florida could evict him.

Not that it ever would. Florida never gets anything right.

That's why King George is in the White House, and Jeb Bush is in the governor's mansion, and cockroaches fly.

Talk about a non-perfect world.

Marching to the beat of Blast!

By Kelly Matlock
The Daily Iowan

Jim Mason was always marching to the beat of a different drum. In 1993, the Cedar Rapids native and then-director of the Star of Indiana Drum Corps took it upon himself to gather his musical expertise and performing and directing experience to create what is now called Blast!, the extravagant spectacle that will take the Hancher Auditorium stage today through April 7.

From the time he first picked up a saxophone and bugle at the age of 7, Mason's childhood was full of experimenting with instruments, performing in bands, composing music, and choreographing. Years later, after placing among the top 10 at the prestigious Drum Corps International World Championships and competing against other organizations worldwide, Mason took the Star of Indiana Drum Corps and evolved it into a theatrical production like none before.

The show has been a great sensation in London, Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Washington, D.C., and on Broadway. The 54-person ensemble comprises three sections: brass, percussion, and visual. The visual aesthetics are incorporated into the performance in a way that Mason says is all about mood.

"You really don't realize how music and color are tied together," he said. "Music sets your mood the same way color does."

Because of this, the show has been divided into what he called a "journey of colors"—an expression of the symbolic value of color. The first act begins with cool hues such as blue (representing loss) and green (for nature), followed by more vibrant colors in the second act, which are highly interactive with such intense energy to encourage audience participation, Mason said.

Noted as a celebration of music and movement, Blast! is enhanced by the spinning and tossing of unusual props along with traditional sabers and colorful flags in perfect synchronization, as well as other choreographed dance and drills. The physical and musical demands rock 'n' roll, and techno-pop.

"The demographics are everyone," Mason said. "They say music is the universal language, and it truly is."

He has seen both families with small children and elderly grandmothers attend the performances and come out rejuvenated. This is not a surprise to those who are aware of the show's 2001 Tony Award for Best Theatrical Event and 2001 Emmy Award for Best Choreography.

While Blast! has been well-received on both sides of the Atlantic, Mason says the show is never the same.

"It thrives on its environment, and I am all the time addressing little nuances to keep it fresh," he said.

Blast! continues to delight critics and audiences with "music is interpreted in a Fantasia-esque manner," Mason said. "Performers become actors and animators."

ARTS BRIEFS

Jazz is in the house

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The first of 100 "jazz house" historic plaques has been placed on a home in New Orleans, launching an ambitious project to designate long-ignored landmarks in the city's music history.

The Preservation Resource Center and the New Orleans Jazz Commission placed the first plaque where Armand Piron, the leader of a popular society band, teacher, and music publisher, lived from 1912-15.

In 1915, Piron joined composer Clarence Williams to found Piron and Williams, the first black music publishing company in New Orleans.

Approximately 40 people gathered for a ceremony last week as historians, city officials, and homeowner Marie Henry praised the jazz-house program.

Jackie Harris, the executive director of the New Orleans Music and Entertainment Commission, called the effort "an example of what can happen when all of us work together to protect our architecture as well as our cultural history."

Annie Avery, the executive director of the African-American Historic Preservation division of the Preservation Resource Center, said research had been completed for five jazz houses to receive plaques as soon as arrangements can be made with owners. Buildings include homes once occupied by Kid Ory, Jelly Roll Morton, George Lewis, Nick LaRocca, and John Robichaux.

Preservationists said the recognition program was long overdue.

A journal named Tennessee

MONROE, La. (AP) — A literary journal examining Tennessee Williams' works and life is being reborn in North Louisiana.

A professor at the University of Louisiana, Monroe, has decided to use her endowment to edit and publish the Tennessee Williams Literary Journal, last published in New Orleans in 1999.

"It is an honor to undertake this task," said Janet Haedicke, who holds the Tommy and Mary Barham Endowed Professorship in English.

The journal's last edition was published by Kenneth Holditch, who organized the Tennessee Williams literary festival in New Orleans.

The job became too much when he had to pay for publication out of personal funds, Haedicke said recently.

Haedicke said Williams, the author of, among other plays, A Streetcar Named Desire, The Glass Menagerie, and Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, is too important a literary figure to let the journal pass into oblivion.

"Representing the South the way he does, he represents what the South is to the country," she said.

As a man who's devoted his life to the pursuit of knowledge, Dean Hashimoto wasn't going to pick a retirement plan without first doing his homework. That's why he chose an IRA from us, the people with over 80 years' experience managing portfolios for the world's sharpest minds. After discovering that our IRAs offer a variety of investment choices and low expenses, he decided to add one to his resume. A wise choice, by a very wise man.

ARTS BRIEF

Reid-ing between the lines

NEW YORK (AP) — Tara Reid concedes that gossip items are part of the game.

The almost daily coverage of her social life in the tabloids has included her engagement and subsequent breakup last year with Carson Daly, the host of MTV's "Total Request Live" video-countdown show.

She also testified before a grand jury hearing the case against her friend Elizabeth "Lizzie" Grubman, who was accused of intentionally backing her sport utility vehicle into a crowd of people outside a trendy Hamptons nightclub.

"Everyone is forgetting that I've done 15 movies," says Reid, who co-starred in both American Pie movies and Josie and the Pussycats.

She also has her own production company, Hi Happy Films.

"People take quotes when I say 'work hard, party hard' and just print 'party hard,'" the 26-year-old actress said. "But the one thing I care about more than anything is my work ethic."

Reid would also like the reports to be accurate.

"Make sure I was at least in the country," she says.

In her new movie, National Lampoon's Van Wilder, she plays Gwen Pearson, the ace reporter on Coolidge College's school newspaper. She is asked to write a profile of popular — and perennial — student Van Wilder, played by Ryan Reynolds.

A native of New Jersey, Reid and her three siblings, Tommy, Patrick, and Colleen, now live in Los Angeles.

horoscopes

Tuesday, April 2, 2002 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Today is a great day to travel, investigate, or just nose around. Get involved in projects that will enable you to visit other locations. You need a change of scenery.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Money may slip through your fingers today. Don't spend too much on a luxury item. Your financial state is not stable enough to take a risk when someone you care about tries to borrow money. Say no.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emotional matters may come to a head, but don't be dismayed. You'll have all the answers, and you will be prepared to sort through any differences. Your sharp mind and pleasing manner will be hard to beat.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Pull out all the stops and focus on getting ahead today. You will have a big heart and want to help those around you, but first take care of your own duties. Your speed and accuracy will count for a lot today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take control and make all your plans personally. If you do everything yourself, you will be sure to get the results you are looking for. Travel or involvement in a convention should be considered.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may need to put in some long hours in order to sort through the mess you left at home. Check over your personal papers and make whatever changes are required. If you are careful today, it will pay off later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You will discover something interesting about your family background today if you talk to relatives or family friends. Talk to someone who can shed some light on your past as well as your future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spend time with people who you find interesting, enlightening, and challenging. Your talents will be recognized today if you aren't too shy to unveil your abilities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You'll be the center of attention if you get out and mingle. Your ability to charm everyone you meet will result in all sorts of new opportunities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't be silly and overreact to a situation going on around you. Focus on whatever project will bring you the best returns, and don't even entertain the thought of getting into a useless debate with someone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your involvement in helping others will bring you great satisfaction. Social activity will be favorable, providing it presents a worthy challenge that will get your heart racing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may want to think about your future a little before you commit to something that may not be the best for you. Read, research, and take your time; don't let anyone bully you into making a snap decision.

Maryland reigns

Gary Williams wins first national title in 24 years

By Jim O'Connell
 Associated Press

ATLANTA — Maryland didn't play like Maryland until it mattered. Now the Terrapins are national champions.

With All-American guard Juan Dixon snapping out of a scoring drought just in time, Maryland ended Indiana's magical tournament run with a 64-52 victory Monday night.

This was the Terrapins' first appearance in a national championship game, and the senior-laden lineup came through over the final 9:42, pulling away from the Hoosiers to become the fourth-straight No. 1 seed and eighth in the last 10 years to win it all.

Coach Gary Williams brought his alma mater from the depths of probation 13 years ago to the pinnacle of college basketball. The man considered among the most intense in the game was able to celebrate with his team, which featured four players who had started at least 100 games in their careers.

"We had to really grind it," Williams said. "It took us a good 25 minutes before we really ran our offense."

Dixon had scored at least 27 points in four of the first five tournament games, including 33 in the semifinal win over fellow top seed Kansas. He started the title game at that pace, scoring 11 points in the opening 10 minutes. He didn't score again for 20 minutes.

When he hit a 3-pointer with 9:42 to play, it gave Maryland (32-4) the lead for good at 45-44, and the Terrapins made sure even a small lead was safe this time.

"I was trying to be patient," he said. "I was trying to let the game come to me. I hit a big shot."

Dixon finished with 18 points, and he and fellow senior Lonny Baxter combined for all the points in the 9-2 run that Dixon started with the 3 and Baxter ended with a dunk that made it 51-46 with 7:22 to play.

Indiana (25-12), which upset top-seeded Duke, then shocked second-seeded Oklahoma in the semifinals, just couldn't come up with another stunner.

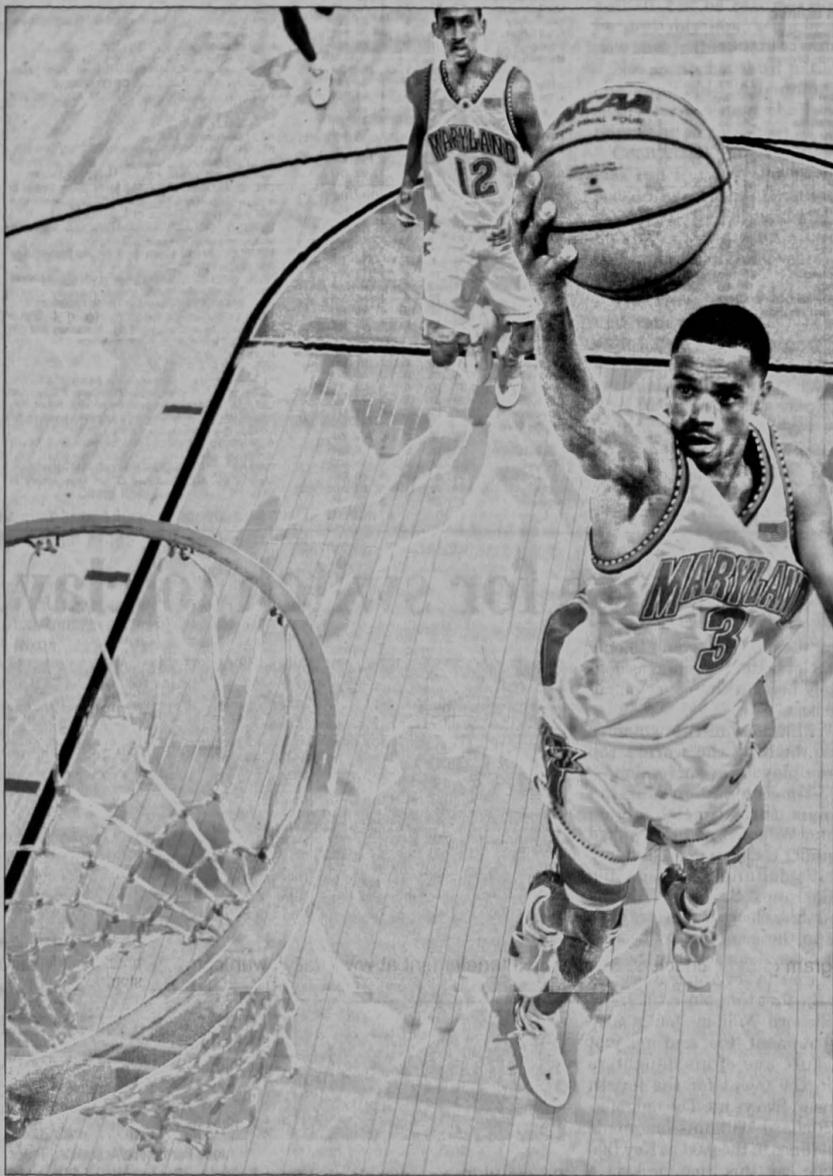

The team that had the country almost forgetting about Bob Knight, again used the 3-point shot as its main weapon.

The Hoosiers, who were 23-for-32 from behind the arc in the regional final against Kent State and Oklahoma, made eight of their first 12 Monday night. When goaltending was called on Jared Jeffries' lay-up with 9:53 left, Indiana had its only lead of the game, 44-42.

When Dixon and Baxter, who finished with 15 points and 14 rebounds, stepped up, the long shots stopped falling. Indiana made just two of its 11 shots from behind the arc, and

We had to really grind it. It took us a good 25 minutes before we ran our offense.

Majors return wackier than ever

Todd Brommelkamp

So baseball season has arrived, and on April Fools' Day nonetheless. Could there be a more appropriate as well as ironic day to begin play? (Labor Day comes to mind for one, but it's doubtful whether the players' union would sign off on starting in September.)

Major League Baseball, after all, has been nothing but a comedy of errors this past off-season. The biggest Hot Stove story turned out to be not a story at all, but talk. Talk of contracting two unnamed teams, better known to the rest of the world as the Twins and Expos.

The Twins were an logical target because Commissioner Bud Selig is pals with Minnesota owner Carl Pohlad, and Pohlad stood to make enough money to bankroll the Yankees because of the deal rather than if he sold to another owner. Makes perfect sense right? Never mind the fact Minnesota nearly won the A.L. Central last

NCAA celebrates 50th

By Hal Bock
 Associated Press

It's hard to imagine, but there was a time when the NCAA Tournament wasn't that big a deal, a time when they didn't even bother gathering the final four teams in one place for the semifinals and championship game.

The tournament was a more modest endeavor, eight teams at first, operated almost as an afterthought to the more glitzy NIT, which had all its games in New York's Madison Square Garden.

In 1951, the field doubled to 16 teams, and the next year it occurred to the NCAA that it might be a good idea to have four regions, with the winners advancing to the same city for a grand climax.

Fifty years later, the event has become a centerpiece of the sports year. The foundation was established in 1952 at the University of Washington's Edmundson Pavilion, where St. John's, Illinois, Kansas, and Santa Clara gathered for the first Final Four.

That was a more primitive time in college basketball. No shot clock. No 3-point shot. Narrow lanes. Perfect for a big man such as 6-foot-9 Clyde Lovellette of Kansas.

When Hall of Fame coach Phog Allen recruited Lovellette, his pitch was simple. He promised a national championship and a trip to the Olympics by the big man's senior year.

And he delivered. On both counts. Despite Allen's plan, the Jayhawks were not the favorites as the 1952 NCAA Tournament began. That designation belonged to defending champion

Are the Yankees the team to beat this season?

2002 will once again be the year of the Yankee. After falling in last season's World Series to the Diamondbacks, owner George Steinbrenner opened his wallet and reloaded his team with talent. He shelled out more than $171 million to top free agents, spending $120 million on first baseman Jason Giambi.

The only other Yankees to make this many changes to their roster after reaching the World Series was 1942-44, when they were stripped clean by World War II. However, all of the new players in 2002 have been brought here for one reason and have one goal: to win the World Series.

The additions of Giambi, third baseman Robin Ventura, outfielder Rondell White, and the reacquisition of pitcher David Wells, who tossed a perfect game for the Yanks in 1998, should punch the ticket for New York to return to the Fall Classic for the sixth time in seven years.

The pitching rotation will be the best in the American League, with Roger Clemens, Mike Mussina, Andy Pettitte, Wells, and Orlando Hernandez (better known as El Duque). The Yankees also have one of the most feared closers in baseball, Mariano Rivera.

Shortstop Derek Jeter, who played through leg injuries most of last year, will be healthy again this season. The addition of Giambi will help the Yankees improve their on-base percentage, which ranked 15th in baseball last year. Giambi is possibly the most patient power hitter in the game, and it showed last season, as he ranked third in the majors in batting average and second in on-base percentage.

In short, the Yankees are stacked, even more than they have been in the past, and they should easily roll into the World Series. The best team money can buy will not be upset, because they are much improved from last season's overachieving team that surprisingly reached the Series.

— Travis Brown

I hate New York.

I know that isn't exactly the most kosher thing to say these days, but it's true. And as a self-respecting baseball fan, that means I really hate the Yankees.

New York's American League club personifies everything that is wrong with baseball today. Once again, the Yankees have out-spent everyone in the game, and as a result, people are once again anointing them as champions of the world before they have even won a game.

Talk of October on Opening Day has always rubbed me the wrong way, but Bowie Kuhn be damned if I'm going to let someone hand rings to the Yankees already.

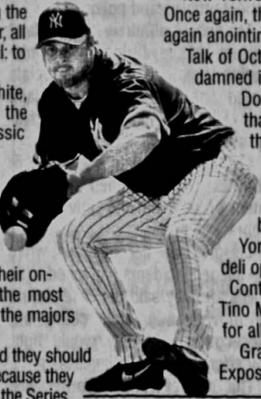

Does New York have a potentially dominating lineup? Yes. Is its pitching staff better than most? Without a doubt. Does this mean anything in the grand scheme of things? Not to me.

Jason Giambi looks good in pinstripes, but those other free agents to whom my colleague eagerly points aren't much to ogle. Robin Ventura's career peaked when he got pummeled by the timeworn Nolan Ryan. Rondell White will be on the bench by June, wrapped in linen and covered in ointment. And the Boomer's return to New York means little more than help at the back of the rotation and increased profits for deli operators and hot-dog vendors across the Bronx.

Contrast that with what the team lost in leadership and production from Paul O'Neill, Tino Martinez, Scott Brosius, and Jeff Nelson, and I'm not sure the new hires make up for all the things those old hands gave the team.

Granted, New York stands a much better chance of playing in October than do the Expos, but only time and 161 more games will be able to answer the question of who will win the World Series this season. Damn Yankees.

Top players on rise for switch to clay

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

KEY BISCAZYNE, Fla. — Andre Agassi, Roger Federer, and Serena Williams are on the rise as tennis makes the spring-time switch to clay.

Agassi showed he may be poised for a big year on clay by grinding out victories over Federer, Nicolas Lapentti, and Australian Open champion Thomas Johansson en route to winning the NASDAQ-100, his fifth title on the Key Biscayne hard courts.

"For me, I need to establish my game on the hard court, then go into the clay, working hard and willing to pay the price," Agassi said. "I certainly feel ready for that, and I think it's going to mean some good things."

Agassi's next tournament will be the U.S. men's clay-court championships in Houston beginning April 22, which will start his preparation for the French Open five weeks later.

Federer showed he also could become a Grand Slam contender this year. The 20-year-old Swiss beat No. 1 Lleyton Hewitt in the semifinals, and, after a slow start, gave Agassi a handful before losing (6-3, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4) in Sunday's final.

"He's got a great game, and he's still learning how to play," Agassi said. "He's going to only get a lot better. I see him as definitely being a threat for one of the best."

Williams won the women's title, beating the world's top three players in succession — two-time champion Martina Hingis, three-time champion Venus Williams, and top-ranked Jennifer Capriati in the final.

"It's definitely a pretty big milestone," Serena Williams said. She cleared a mental hurdle in the semifinal by besting her older sister for only the second time in seven meetings and for the first time since 1999.

Richard Williams had a good tournament, too, and not just because one of his daughters won the event for the fourth time in five years. The enigmatic Richard Williams has made headlines in the past at Key Biscayne, but this time, he kept a low profile, although he did tell Florida Tennis magazine he recently wrote 10 books, filmed two movies, and sold his bus company for $6 million.

In decline is the stock of Hingis and Pete Sampras.

Hingis endured another drubbing by the Williams sisters, losing to Serena (6-4, 6-0) in the quarterfinals. Their once-fierce rivalry has become so lopsided that when they met at the net afterward, Williams offered Hingis a consoling pat on the back.

Serena Williams has beaten Hingis three-consecutive times and seven times in a row on U.S. hard courts. Venus Williams has won five of her past seven matches against Hingis, including their most recent meeting at Key Biscayne last year.

Sampras' two-year slide reached another low when he lost to qualifier Fernando Gonzalez in the third round. That made it 24 tournaments in a row without a title for Sampras since he won a record seventh Wimbledon championship in July 2000.

"I suppose it's inevitable at some point," Agassi said. "Who's to say why? I don't know what he's feeling or what he's thinking when he's out there. But I'd say his movement is more off than anything."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Iowa softball on the road in Macomb, Ill.

Today: The Iowa softball team travels to Macomb, Ill., to face non-conference foe Western Illinois in a single game at 4 p.m. at Mary Ellen McKee Stadium.

On Iowa: Winners of five straight, the No. 19 Hawkeyes (18-12), appear to be coming back together after struggling during the first month of play. Pitchers Kristi Hanks and Lisa Birocci have been nearly untouchable lately, and the Hawkeyes are swinging the bats well at the plate.

On Western: The Westerwinds reached the NCAA regional in Iowa City last season en route to a 33-21 finish. Coach Kathy Veroni's squad has won two of its last three games against the Hawkeyes, including the two schools' last meeting in Macomb.

Dennis the Menace: Outfielder Liz Dennis has led the charge for Iowa's offensive resurgence. The senior from Des Moines has slugged 13 doubles so far this season, leaving her just five shy of the single-season mark of 18 set by Kim Davis in 1993 and equaled by teammate Alicia Gerlach last season.

Iowa's key: Coach Gayle Blevins was pleased with the performance of Hanks and Birocci in Iowa's recent victories over Indiana and Wisconsin-Green Bay. Today's starter will have to buckle down early against a Western lineup loaded with patient hitters.

Coach's comment: "A lot of it is confidence," Blevins said of the team's success at the plate. "Confidence makes a world of difference, especially when you haven't had any for a while."

Beathard will serve as adviser to Falcons' new owner

ATLANTA (AP) — Former NFL general manager Bobby Beathard joined the Atlanta Falcons on Monday as a senior adviser to new owner Arthur Blank.

"We are privileged to have Bobby working with us for the season," Blank said. "Bobby's deep football knowledge and experience, his personality, and his courage of conviction will provide an added dimension and perspective for the club. Coach [Dan] Reeves, and me. I look forward to working with him."

Beathard served as the general manager with Washington and San Diego and director of player personnel for Miami.

In his role as senior adviser, Beathard will advise and counsel on organizational structure, philosophy, systems, and execution of football operations in the areas of college and pro player evaluation, athletic training and equipment, medical programs, information systems, and salary-cap management.

He also will work with football operations and coaching personnel on player assessment.

Blank said bringing Beathard on board does not change the team's plan to continue its search for a general manager.

Michigan governor says reputation won't be hurt by scandal

LANSING, Mich. — Gov. John Engler said Monday he doesn't think the recent indictment of a former Michigan booster for loaning players money will hurt the university's overall reputation.

According to the federal indictment, former Michigan booster Ed Martin, a retired Ford Motor Co. electrician, loaned more than $600,000 to players to help conceal profits from gambling operations at Detroit-area auto plants.

Martin, 68, and his wife were arrested March 21 on charges of running an illegal gambling business, conspiracy, and money laundering. They pleaded not guilty; each was released on a $10,000 bond.

After signing the higher-education budget for the upcoming fiscal year on Monday, Engler said he thinks the scandal is confined to the school's Athletics Department and won't affect the rest of the university.

"The University of Michigan is so strong and so highly regarded that it's going to recover from this," said Engler, a Michigan State University alumnus.

Engler also said he thinks the university has done a lot to put the situation in the past, including hiring Athletics Director Bill Martin. Bill Martin is no relation to Ed Martin.

Nebraska recruit pleads innocent to sexual-assault charges

OMAHA, Neb. — Nebraska football recruit Mark LeFlore pleaded not guilty March 29 to charges of sexual assault.

Three female students have accused LeFlore, an 18-year-old wide receiver, of kissing them or touching them in a sexual manner.

He was ticketed on suspicion of three counts of third-degree sexual assault.

LeFlore was suspended from Omaha Central High School in January after the girls talked to school officials and police.

The school withdrew its complaint against LeFlore during an administrative hearing. School officials would not say why the complaint was withdrawn, citing student privacy laws.

LeFlore returned to class Feb. 5. The next day, he signed a letter of intent to play with the University of Nebraska.

LeFlore was 17 years old when the alleged incidents happened.

His attorney said the case should be moved to juvenile court, but prosecutors said they would fight any effort to transfer the case.

The misdemeanor charges are punishable by up to one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Cubs fall to Reds on opening day

CINCINNATI (AP) — The last season opener at Cinergy Field ended with a joyous huddle by the home team.

Aaron Boone hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning Monday, giving the Cincinnati Reds a 5-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs and a pulsating start to their last season at the former Riverfront Stadium.

A 32-year-old ballpark that has been the setting for so many historic moments — Hank Aaron tying Babe Ruth, Pete Rose smacking hit 4,192 — got a dramatic start on its last go-round.

Right fielder Juan Encarnacion misjudged a fly ball, helping the Cubs rally for two runs to tie it in the eighth. The crowd of 41,913 and the hard-hatted construction workers building the new ballpark were hugging when the home team pulled it out in the ninth.

Jeff Fassero, who has such good control that he hit only two batters in the last two seasons, plunked three in only 1½ innings to help the Reds pull it out.

Orioles 10, Yankees 3

BALTIMORE — If the Baltimore Orioles had played like this the past few years, Cal Ripken might have stuck around this season.

With the retired Ripken watching from a luxury suite, Tony Batista jolted Roger Clemens with a grand slam, and Scott Erickson won his first outing in 20 months as the Orioles opened Monday with a 10-3 victory over the New York Yankees.

Clemens, coming off his record sixth Cy Young Award, gave up eight runs, walked five, and threw two wild pitches — all after he tried to field a hard grounder with his bare hand. Clemens was taken to a hospital for precautionary X-rays.

Jason Giambi, the centerpiece in the transformation of the four-time defending AL champions, went 1-for-4 with a walk as the Yankees started their 100th season.

Blue Jays 12, Red Sox 11

BOSTON — Darrin Fletcher hit a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning, and the Toronto Blue Jays, after blowing a big lead against Pedro Martinez on opening day, rallied to beat the Boston Red Sox, 12-11, Monday.

Poor pitching, shaky defense, and an inability to steal bases or stop the opponent from doing it ruined the day for new Red Sox owner John Henry and new manager Grady Little.

After one of Martinez's worst performances, Boston rallied from a 7-1 deficit for an 11-8 lead after four innings as Jose Offerman, Trot Nixon, Jason Varitek, and Tony Clark homered.

Twins 8, Royals 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The team that refused to go away needed only one swing to go deep. And the Minnesota Twins didn't stop there.

Jacque Jones homered on the second pitch of the game, then hit a go-ahead three-run shot in the seventh inning as the Twins connected five times Monday in a season-opening 8-6 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

David Ortiz, Brian Buchanan, and Torii Hunter also homered for the Twins, who survived Major League Baseball's attempt to eliminate them when a Minnesota judge issued an injunction that forced the team to honor its lease at the Metrodome.

White Sox 6, Mariners 5

SEATTLE — The Seattle Mariners will not go wire-to-wire in the AL West this season.

The Mariners, who led the entire way en route to a record-tying 116 wins last season, fell short in their opener Monday when Mike Cameron flied out with the bases loaded to end a 6-5 loss to Chicago White Sox.

Seattle rallied for four runs in the eighth to make it 6-5, then threatened in the ninth against Keith Foulke.

Mark McLemore and Ichiro Suzuki led off with singles and moved up on Jeff Cirillo's sacrifice. But Bret Boone grounded back to Foulke, and, after Edgar Martinez was intentionally walked, Cameron hit a routine fly ball.

Mark Buehrle (1-0) pitched six innings for the win. He gave up two hits, including a home run by Cameron.

Arizona 2, San Diego 0

PHOENIX — Randy Johnson started this season the way he ended the last one — as an imposing winner.

The Big Unit threw a six-hitter as the Arizona Diamondbacks opened defense of their World Series championship by beating the San Diego Padres, 2-0, on Monday.

With a fastball that topped out at 100, the 38-year-old left-hander struck out eight and walked one to beat San Diego's Kevin Jarvis. Mark Grace homered, and Danny Bautista doubled in a run.

When Johnson last left the mound at Bank One Ballpark on Nov. 4, he had come out of the bullpen to get the final four outs in Game 7 of the World Series against the New York Yankees. Then he watched from the dugout as Arizona rallied with two runs in the ninth to win, 3-2.

Auriemma tries to improve perfection

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — He's brash and successful, cocky yet charismatic. The son of Italian immigrants, there's an edge to his personality honed from growing up in Philadelphia.

Geno Auriemma will tell you he hasn't lost any friends while leading Connecticut on its journey to the top in women's basketball, but he readily admits he probably hasn't made any new ones, either.

Now, with his third national championship, Auriemma is ready for his next challenge: improving on perfection.

Connecticut completed a flawless run through the 2001-02 season by beating Oklahoma, 82-70, at the Alamodome on Sunday night to win its second national title in three years and third since 1995.

The Huskies finished 39-0 and won most of their games with such ease that Auriemma's only problem was making sure his players didn't get bored. Their average victory margin of 35.4 points was the highest in NCAA history.

Seven years after finishing 35-0, Connecticut has become the only school that has gone unbeaten twice. So what's the hang-up?

Graduation, that's what. Seniors Sue Bird, Swin Cash, Asjha Jones, and Tamika Williams accounted for 65 points in the championship game and 34 of 44 rebounds. That's a lot to replace, but Auriemma isn't seeking any sympathy, and he wouldn't get any if he was.

This is Connecticut, after all, and no one — not even six-time national champion Tennessee — has won more games over the last eight years.

"Do I think I could put together a team like this ever again?" Auriemma said. "If I said no, then I should get out of coaching. The goal of every coach is every year to try to put together a team like this."

"And as soon as these guys leave and I get back from doing what I have to do, I'm going to start trying to put together another team that's better than this one."

He'll start with sophomore Diana Taurasi, a free spirit who plays with a flair that Auriemma finds delightful at times and maddening at others. Still, he says, Taurasi has a chance to become the best college player ever.

Because of all the blowouts, reserves Jessica Moore, Ashley Battle, and Maria Conlon all got valuable playing time. And his recruiting class is regarded as the best in the nation.

Ann Strother of Littleton, Colo., received the Naismith Award as the nation's top high-school player. The Huskies' other recruits all were high school All-Americans: Willnett Crockett of Harbor City, Calif., Barbara Turner of Cleveland, and Nicole Wolf of Walpole, Mass.

If that's not enough, Connecticut might sign 6-7 Gillian Goring of Waterloo this month.

"It will be challenging, a lot of responsibility on D's shoulders," Auriemma said, referring to Taurasi. "It's going to be harder on D, but D's going to handle it. Can she get us back here? I don't know. I guess that's what will be fun next year about playing."

So who will make it to the Final Four when it moves to Atlanta's Georgia Dome next season?

Oklahoma will have even heavier losses than Connecticut, with five seniors leaving, including two-time All-American Stacey Dales. But the two teams that lost in the national semifinals, Duke and Tennessee, will be loaded.

Duke returns All-American Alana Beard, 6-4 Iciss Tillis, and guard Monique Curry. Tennessee had an outstanding freshman class and loses only center Michelle Snow.

Others potential top 10 teams include Kansas State, Texas, Georgia, Vanderbilt, Louisiana State, and Louisiana Tech. Texas Tech will be formidable if Plenette Pierson returns from her suspension.

Oh yes, don't forget Connecticut, which is 272-17 over the last eight years with five Final Four appearances and those three titles.

"It's not like we're starting over," Auriemma said. "It's just that from where we are this year to where we're going to be is a big, big, big, big, big difference."

Nebraska coaches required to reveal sources of outside income over $1,000

By Scott Bauer
Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Nebraska women's basketball coach Paul Sanderford gets a $3,075 country-club membership courtesy of the university.

That tidbit is among the information contained in reports Sanderford and Nebraska coaching colleagues Frank Solich and Barry Collier filed with the state.

For the first time, coaches of football and men's and women's basketball at Nebraska were required to file a statement of financial interests with the state. The deadline was Monday.

The reports show all sources of outside income of more than $1,000, including stocks, bonds, and gifts of more than $100.

The exact dollar amount received is not required to be reported on the form with the state Accountability and Disclosure Commission.

Solich reported the most sources of income outside his base salary of $283,500.

The 21 income sources listed by Solich included a dozen TV sponsorships with the likes of Valentino's Pizza restaurants and Furniture Mart of Omaha.

Solich also reported income from two radio shows and four speaking engagements.

All three coaches had contracts with Adidas and Wilson Sporting Goods, and all three advertised for Pacific Realty in Omaha.

Men's basketball coach Collier reported eight sources of income outside his $210,000 base salary from the university.

Those included speaking at the Faith Regional Health Services Foundation in Norfolk and for advertising with Valentino's Pizza restaurants and the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Alumni Association.

He also reported earning more than $1,000 for his radio talk show.

Sanderford, who earns $146,200 as head women's basketball coach, reported seven sources of income other than his salary.

That included advertising for furniture store Ernie's in Ceresco and, like Collier and Solich, a radio show.

Sanderford also reported income from running a summer basketball camp.

Collier didn't report owning any stocks or bonds.

Solich reported owning 14, including Level 3 Communications.

Hawkeyes compete against Mt. Saint Claire

Today, Iowa will host Mount Saint Claire, from Clinton, Iowa, at 4 p.m. at Duane Banks Stadium. Admission is free. Iowa and the Mounties have played twice in the past, with each team winning once.

Last weekend: The Hawkeye offense sputtered as Iowa dropped three out of four to Michigan. The team was held without a run the first two games, and it could only manage one in the finale. The good news was a 7-4 victory Sunday in which the Hawkeyes put up six runs early to chase out the Michigan starter.

Mighty Mattiace: Iowa senior Ian Mattiace leads the team in batting average (.375) and RBIs with 14, and he is tied for the lead in home runs with Adam Carlson. The third baseman went 5-15 last week at the plate, and he has consistently come up with the big hit throughout the first month of the season.

No steal for you: Iowa leads the Big Ten in throwing out potential base stealers. Many of the 10 pegs were made by starting catcher Brad Husz. Conversely, the Hawkeyes have stolen 38 bases, fourth in the conference.

On Mount Saint Claire: The Mounties are 4-6 this season. They have yet to play a Division I school. They swept University of Dubuque in late March, winning 3-2 and 4-0.

Pirates' Giles out with strained muscle

NEW YORK (AP) — Pittsburgh star Brian Giles missed the Pirates' season opener against the New York Mets after straining a muscle in his right side during batting practice.

"I was taking a swing and felt something grab on the side," Giles said. "I came out and had [the trainer] rub it out, but it never loosened up."

Giles was replaced in left field by Armando Rios, who went 1-2 in Pittsburgh's 6-2 loss. Giles, who missed four games in 1999 with a similar injury, is day-to-day.

"I think I caught it in time so it's not a three- to four-week thing," he said. "It's a marathon, not a sprint, so we have to be careful."

The Pirates are starting the season without their best hitter on a team that is coming off a 100-loss season — its ninth-straight losing campaign.

GOLF BRIEF

Sorenstam on tear with back-to-back wins

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — The best player wears red on Sunday, and that no longer applies only to Tiger Woods.

Is anyone in golf more dominant right now than Annika Sorenstam?

The 31-year-old Swede became the first back-to-back winner of the Kraft Nabisco Championship, where she was the only player to break par all four rounds on a difficult Dinah Shore tournament course at Mission Hills.

It was her 33rd career victory and 10th in her last 26 tournaments. And it sounds as though Sorenstam is just warming up.

"I want to see how good I can be and how good I can play," she said. "That's what drives me every day. Just because I had a great year last year doesn't mean I'm happy with that. Victories like this push me more, and make me want to see what else I can win."

The LPGA's emphasis on "Five Points of Celebrity" made no mention of its top players wearing shiny red shoes for the final round of the first major championship.

Sorenstam broke out the ruby slippers on a whim, a gutsy move to make a fashion statement on such an important day — tied for the lead with chief rival Karrie Webb and Liselotte Neumann, whom Sorenstam idolized as a teen.

Kentucky. But the Wildcats ran into a St. John's team bent on revenge.

During the regular season, St. John's had played at Kentucky. It should have been no big deal except that coach Frank McGuire's team included the school's first black player, Solly Walker.

This was years before the civil-rights movement and desegregation. Kentucky coach Adolph Rupp called McGuire and asked him to leave Walker at home.

McGuire would have none of that. When St. John's arrived in Lexington, Ky., Walker was with the team. Fully aware of the racial climate, he maintained a low profile.

"There were problems because of the times," Walker said. "St. John's cleared away most of the obstacles and put a blanket around me. There was nothing they could do about the verbalization."

Kentucky ripped St. John's, 81-40. "It was one of those games when we hit rock bottom," Walker said. "It wasn't what they were doing, it was what we were doing. No one was able to put the ball in the basket."

McGuire swore that if the teams met again, the result would be reversed.

Sure enough, when the 1952 NCAA Tournament field was announced, Kentucky and St. John's were in the same bracket, set to play in Raleigh, N.C. It would be another trip South for McGuire and Walker.

Again, the atmosphere was antagonistic. When their train reached town, Walker was barred from dining with the team, so McGuire ate with him in the kitchen. The players, angered by the slight, played inspired basketball, defeating North Carolina State on its home court, 60-49. Kentucky, meanwhile walloped Penn State, 82-54. McGuire would get his chance to get even.

At halftime, St. John's led by six points, and McGuire's team listened intently as, next door, Rupp screamed at his Kentucky team. The tirade did no good. St. John's got 32 points by Bob "Zeke" Zawoluk and won, 64-57. That sent McGuire's team west with a stopover in Chicago, where Illinois and Kansas both boarded the same plane. The Illini had beaten Dayton, 80-61, and Duquesne, 74-68, and their size frightened McGuire, who thought St. John's would be overmatched in the semifinal.

Instead, Zawoluk scored 24 points, and St. John's edged Illinois, 61-59. Now, it was on to the championship game against Kansas.

The Jayhawks' road to the title began in Kansas City, with victories over Texas Christian, 68-64, and St. Louis, 74-55. Lovellette, who had averaged 28.4 points per game that season, set a tournament record with 44 points against the Billikens and began thinking again of Allen's recruiting promise.

In the semifinals, Kansas faced Santa Clara, which had defeated UCLA, 68-59, and Wyoming, 56-53. The night before the game, Lovellette was invited by a friend to dine on a Coast Guard cutter anchored in Puget Sound. When a dense fog set in, he was unable to return to shore until the next morning. Lovellette was hardly disturbed. He scored 33 points, and the Jayhawks prevailed, again by 74-55.

Now it would be St. John's and Kansas with the national championship at stake, the game billed as the city slickers against the country boys.

Again, Lovellette dominated inside with 33 points and 17 rebounds, and Kansas won the championship, 80-63. The Jayhawks' big man became the only player to ever lead the nation in scoring and go on to win the NCAA title in the same year.

Within days, Lovellette and seven Kansas teammates were chosen for the United States Olympic team that would win the gold medal at Helsinki, Finland.

Allen's recruiting pitch had come true.

season and has a history, albeit a brief one, of success. (Not much unlike the Milwaukee Brewers, whom Selig — ahem — formerly owned.)

The Expos were a different story. With contraction talk ground to a halt, Montreal owner Jeffrey Loria took matters in to his own hands, purchasing another franchise, the Florida Marlins, and sending everything South — literally. From taking coaches to computers, Loria made Art Modell look like a novice, leaving Montreal with nothing more than its affable and bilingual mascot Youppi. Of course, this story had a happy ending when the commissioner's office raced to the rescue, essentially taking over the Expos and assuring the public the integrity of the franchise will remain intact. At least until the Expos unexpectedly remain in the pennant race by the All-Star break and management decides to send star outfielder Vladimir Guerrero to the Yankees for a bath and Don Zimmer.

Texas also grabbed headlines just one year after throwing $250 million at shortstop Alex Rodriguez. Rangers' owner Tom Hicks opened his wallet and his heart for such cuddly, warm-and-fuzzy players as John Rocker and Carl Everett. Rocker's unbelievably enlightened view of the world made him a fine fit for the Lone Star State, which has previously embraced both Bobby Knight and the electric chair with great vigor. Everett is best known for his WWF-like head-butting of umpire Ron Kulpa two seasons ago and his Odd Couple relationship with former manager Jimmy Williams. Remaining in Texas, the Houston Astros decided it would be in their best interest to change the name of their year-old home park from Enron Field to anything-but-Enron Field. Kmart was reportedly in line to pick up the tab before Houston decided Astros Field was a suitable moniker.

Let's not forget the spending. Slugger Jason Giambi said New York felt like a natural fit for him, and no doubt, if his wallet could talk, it would say the same thing about his new $120 million contract. But legitimate stars weren't the only ones raking dollars in hand over fist with the fervor of an exotic dancer; middle relievers and hitters who consider reaching the Mendoza Line a career year also received pay increases. Teams of course did the logical thing and raised ticket prices.

And now here we are one day removed from the season opener, and there appears to be no sign baseball will stop its hilarious high jinks soon. Dominating pitchers Roger Clemens and Pedro Martinez got shelled like peanuts, the unsinkable Yankees sunk to lowly Baltimore while the never-say-die Twins won, and Bud Selig is still the over-commissioner for life. All that remains to be answered is who the joke will be on come October. Let the games begin.

its dream of being the first No. 5 seed to win a national championship and match Kansas in 1988 for the most losses by a champion started to fade.

Kyle Hornsby led Indiana with 14 points, and Dane Fife added 11. Jeffries, the Big Ten's Player of the Year, finished with eight points on 4-11 shooting. The Hoosiers finished 20-58 from the field (34.5 percent), the first time in the tournament they shot below 50 percent.

The Terrapins, who won 19 of their last 20 games, again were big on the boards, finishing with a 42-31 rebound advantage.

Maryland was among the country's highest scoring teams at 85 points per game, but its third-lowest total of the season was good enough to make it the 33rd school to win the national championship and the second straight from the Atlantic Coast Conference. Duke won last season.

The loss was the first for Indiana in six national-championship game appearances. The last three titles — 1976, 1981, and 1987 — were won under Knight, who was fired two years ago for violating a zero-tolerance policy. Mike Davis, one of his assistants, was selected to succeed him, and in just his second season, he almost won it all.

Dixon didn't miss a shot in the first half, going 4-4 from the field and 2-2 from the free-throw line. His last shot came with 10:02 left, and the baseline jumper gave the Terrapins a 21-11 lead.

Indiana's first 14 points came on four 3-pointers, two by Tom Coverdale, and two free throws. The Hoosiers couldn't get a shot off in the paint and had to settle for outside shots.

After Drew Nicholas made two free throws to give Maryland a 25-16 lead with 7:59 left, the Terrapins missed eight-straight shots, but Indiana was unable to take advantage of the cold spell and only trimmed two points off the lead.

Coverdale's drive at the buzzer brought the Hoosiers within 31-25.

Few withdraws as candidate for job

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Gonzaga basketball coach Mark Few withdrew as a candidate for the coaching job at Washington on Monday.

Few, whose 81-20 record is the best of any third-year coach in Division I men's basketball history, said he decided Gonzaga is "the best place for my family and staff."

"We have built something very special and unique at Gonzaga University," Few said in a statement released by the school. "I love my players, past and present, and appreciate their support during this process."

"I look forward to our future together."

Few has led Gonzaga to the NCAA Tournament in each of his three seasons. This season, Gonzaga went 29-4 and was beaten by Wyoming in the first round of the tournament.

Washington is looking for a coach to replace Bob Bender, asked to resign last week after three-consecutive losing seasons.

On Sunday, Missouri coach Quin Snyder took himself out of consideration for the Washington job.

Washington Athletics Director Barbara Hedges has not commented publicly on her search for a coach, but she received permission to talk with Snyder, Few, and Saint Louis' Lorenzo Romar, who played for the Huskies.
