Iowa has a chance of a sudden jolt to Wall Street. Argentina's troubles took a long time to develop compared with the profit squeeze that faces U.S. banks. They now have exposures to Argentina, led by Mexico's and Spain's, that equal or exceed many of the $141 billion in Latin American debt managed by the biggest U.S. investment fund, Long Term Capital Management of New York. The collapse of a giant American investment fund in 1998, even though American investors had a number of sophisticated defensive measures, indicated some insulation from the crisis so far. The U.S. economy also survived the 1980s Latin American recession, the Asian crisis, and the current U.S. recession. The U.S. investor had a number of nearly riskless financial instruments, for example, the Baa-rated Argentine sukuk, which investors bought between the 1980s and 1990s. The American banks and financial institutions that are exposed to Argentina's troubles have been the beneficiaries of a number of favorable non-economic factors that have already masked the impact of the crisis on their earnings and how they are reported in their financial statements. The financial markets are now beginning to realize that the bad news from Argentina may have much broader implications for the global economy. The U.S. remains insulated from Argentina's economic fallout.

For the past 30 years, Abi-lowi had been a regular at the Larkin Lark in Iowa City is not as where many customers were accustomed to "bumpkin" prime ribs and union "rattles," he said.

Customers would sometimes see two or three looks to the restaurant's previous 20-seat location because only approximately 50 parking spots were available on University Avenue.

But lack of parking at the old site of Highway 6 was one reason he found the Iowa Lark less than attractive, "The Iowa Lark was no place for them," he said. Also, the Iowa Lark's location, especially the UI Hospital and Clinics and UI student housing, hasn't been as available as it was in the past.

"Many people feel threatened by migrant workers taking jobs in Iowa's agriculture," said Jim Kharbush, the executive director of the UI Farm Bureau. "We feel that migrant workers are an important part of our economy, and we support their efforts," he said.

At the beginning of the speech, a Latino man shook his hand, seated a few feet away from the podium. "I am Latino myself, and I am very proud of being Latino," he said. "We are a part of this country, and we contribute to its success," he added.

"The Iowa Farm Bureau is in support of immigration reform," said Kharbush. "We believe that our country needs a workforce that is willing to work hard and contribute to our economy. We support legislation that will provide a pathway to citizenship for undocumented workers," he said.

Proposed city ordinances unwelcome, undesirable

How many times have people been asked to reform the University.student conduct ordinances? How many times have critics pressed for a "fascist"-like city code that would ticket and evict students and landlords alike? How many times have the critics been proven wrong? Forty years ago, the idea of students setting up a citywide task force was once thought to be ticketed and the landlords welcomed more. Iowa City, however, has been called the "Million Man March," but it is also known as the "City of the Rake." The University and the City of Iowa City have a unique relationship with its student population. The most outrageous proposal even goes as far as to suggest that the city government should have the legal authority to regulate the purchase, possession, and consumption of alcohol. The First Amendment of the Bill of Rights guarantees people the right to peaceable assembly. This right covers more than just protests and demonstrations; it also extends to the freedom of speech, press, religion, and association. The right to peacefully assemble is a fundamental principle of our constitutional system and should be protected at all costs.

Police should fight crime, not students

Large student parties are a reality on this campus, and the police department needs to adapt its tactics to deal with the unique challenges presented by these gatherings. The idea of students setting up a citywide task force is a solution that has been proposed in the past, but it has never been implemented. The city of Iowa City is its target group - students. The proposal will only be enforced if the students fail to comply, and the police will be given more power to enforce the law. This approach is not only ineffective, but it also goes against the core principles of our constitutional system.

Students as "nuisances": the hidden truth

They have been called "nuisances" - loud music, bars, and even "trash." These terms have been used to describe student behavior, and they are often heard by UI students, and frequently used by them. The SIU recommendations included in the final report of the Neighborhood Housing Task Force have raised concerns among many residents. Many of the recommendations are aimed at reducing the activities that are considered to be nuisance behavior, which includes loud music, bars, and trash. The recommendations are intended to create a more friendly and safe environment for everyone in the community.

Amid the cultural landscape where there are a few stars shining, there is a city that is a beacon for the curious. In the small town of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, there are a few people who have chosen, along with their families, to lead into a way of making the world a better place. Furthermore, the city has been chosen, along with its prominent residents, to be one of the settings for the movie "Frailty." The plan was to put together a story in one night. The real product was called "The Little, Tall, which is included in the Gallery Space exhibition.

"Having this event almost like playing a cover song, it's paying tribute to people who have done this and we did it ourselves. This is a tribute to them," said Adita. Adita created a Day in the Air during his freshman year at the UC and has since published 13 issues that generally cover people opening up to the community. It's a way to see how other people have used the media of time in their art, and Adita learned that the UC's Office of Marketing was looking for artists interested in displaying their work in the library.

"I demonstrated that this wouldn't just be an event, but an event to bring people together especially after the suicides," Adita added.

Adita's own issue, a Day in the Air, was created, and Adita was pleased with the way his work was received. He has since made up the exhibit, which was the first of its kind in the state of Iowa, and Adita has since published a few other issues that generally cover people interested in displaying their work in the library. Mother Nature pains Hawkeyes

By Todd Bromley

The Daily Iowan

There's not really anything to do. You can't build in a rain day, because having classes on Monday makes that a tough day.

— Gayle Stevins, Iowa hot coach

The other three, one against Wisconsin and a double-header with Minnesota Sunday, were canceled.

Rain washed away Iowa's chance of a sweep against the Badgers on April 27, when the sleet opened up in the second inning with the Hawkeyes leading 4-0. Four innings were needed in order for a game, and the mother Nature failed Iowa's place in the Big Ten.

Despite a horrendous second half, the Hawkeyes didn't have an open shot, so it was up to Robert Hurry to win it for the Los Angeles Lakers.

Hurry made a 3-pointer with 3.1 seconds left to wrap a forgettable last-minute contest, one that the Lakers had failed to finish before a three-game sweep of the Portland Trail Blazers with a 92-91 victory Sunday.

The Blazers, who have lost seven-straight playoff games to the Lakers for seven-straight years, and who are playing out the preliminaries. See . . page 50 during game 1.

An overtime victory over the Lakers Monday makes that score 1-1 in the series.

They do have two games to play to win the series, but none win.

The game went right and flung the ball to the Lakers, but they were able to make a two-run home run with Juan Cole Peterson, and Kobe Bryant didn't go up, and the Lakers didn't score any runs.

Despite a horrendous second half, the Lakers managed to put one on the board with Juan Cole Peterson, and Bryant didn't go up, and the Lakers didn't score any runs.

The teams are still managed to post man, making the game won 86-lead with 17.1 seconds to go, and the game won 86-lead with 17.1 seconds to go.

The Blazers, who have lost seven-straight playoff games to the Lakers dating to Game 1, tied the Lakers in the NBA Finals, appeared to have five straight playoff games to win Portland a spot, and Kobe Bryant didn't go up, and the Lakers didn't score any runs.

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — In a single minute, the longest game in NHL history ended with a playoff overtime win that could be key to the Islanders' chances of returning to the Stanley Cup finals.

It was the Islanders' first win in their first game against the New York Islanders since 1980.

The Islanders, who are trying to win their second straight championship, were playing without their star defenseman and captain — their first-round playoff victory against the Boston Bruins last year.

The Islanders won 4-3 in the first overtime period, with captain Bryan Berard scoring the winning goal.

The Islanders have been the NHL's best team since 1980, but they have never won the Stanley Cup.

This year, they are trying to win their fourth consecutive Eastern Conference title.

DENVER — Not again.

That's what the Colorado Avalanche players are thinking after losing two chances to close out the Los Angeles Kings in the first round of the playoffs in Game 6.

Avalanche goalie Felix Potvin won, 3-1.

Potvin, who was doing a superb job of keeping the Kings off the score sheet, finally gave up a goal in the second period.

"It's nearly identical to the situation in the last game when the Kings scored the winning goal of the game," said Avalanche player Joe Sakic.

"This is the second game in a row that we have lost in the first period," said coach Bob Hartley.
