Arafat, Israel OK to end siege

By Susan Severeid
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel and the Palestinians approved a U.S. plan Sunday that would free Yasser Arafat from his besieged West Bank headquarters and place six men wanted by Israel in a Palestinian jail under the watchful eyes of American and British guards.

Israel's Cabinet adopted President Bush's proposal in a 17-9 vote. Senior Arafat aides said the Palestinian leader also accepted the plan, which ultimately would free him from the sights of Israeli snipers crouched in the buildings around him. Arafat's compound has been under a monthlong Israeli siege; he has not been able to travel freely since December 2001.

"We expect the siege imposed on President Arafat's office to be lifted the day after tomorrow," said Palestinian Information Minister Yasser Abed Rabbo. He said "technical details" would be discussed today with British experts.

Accepting the plan, according to an Israeli Cabinet minister, was important to avoid anger-ing the United States over another Cabinet decision: Ministers decided to bar for now a U.N. fact-finding mission from investigating allegations surrounding Israeli army actions in the Jenin refugee camp.

After a hastily called U.N. Security Council meeting to consider the latest delay, members strongly supported Secretary-General Kofi Annan's efforts to immediately send the team with full cooperation of Israel and the Palestinian Authority. Annan hoped Israel would reverse its decision today.

U.N. Undersecretary-General

Kieran Prendergast told the Security Council meeting late Sunday that the Israeli Cabinet would meet on the matter today. Prendergast said the secretary-general hoped "that the Israeli Cabinet will take a positive decision [this] morning. His priority is to get the fact-finding team on the ground as soon as possible." However, no special Cabinet session was officially scheduled for today.

UI donor for gifted dies at 88

Those who knew her say the late Jacqueline Blank's life added up to more than just a name on another UI building. The Des Moines philanthropist, with her trademark sense of humor and large-rimmed glasses, took an active role in the institutions that don her name.

With her husband of 66 years, Myron "Mike" Blank, "Jackie" Blank donated $10 million over the last 20 years to a now-cutting edge UI talented and gifted education center. She died April 26 in her sleep of a heart ailment. She was 88.

Blank

"I thought she was absolutely charming," said UI President Mary Sue Coleman, who attended Jackie Blank's

"packed" funeral Sunday.

A native of Kansas City, Mo., and an alumna of the University of Michigan, Jackie Blank had little connection with the UI or the state of Iowa before moving to Des Moines, where her husband launched Central States Theatre Corp. There, they raised three children.

The Blanks funded a UI-hosted, $32,000 conference for 17 Des Moines-area teachers on how to effectively challenge gifted students in the summer of

Vilsack defends English-only law

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

A modest Gov. Tom Vilsack on April 27 tried to clarify what he considers misunderstandings about the English-only bill he signed, saying it in no way discriminates against minorities. A crowd of hundreds of stern-faced Latinos gathered in the IMU were not all convinced — a reaction Vilsack expected.

"I stand before you today as someone who is humbled by the fact that he was given an opportunity to speak," Vilsack said. "I don't expect anyone in this room to accept this explanation."

The governor's speech came at the day-long "Strengthening and Valuing Latino Communities in Iowa" conference, which drew hundreds of Latinos, state lawmakers, and others to discuss the dynamics and demographics of the growing minority group.

The English-only bill, which will go into effect July 1, requires all state documents to be printed in English, with several exceptions.

Because few materials are printed in languages other than English, the bill is largely symbolic, with supporters saying it will unify the state and encourage immigrants to learn the language. Critics, though, say it's a slap in the face to the growing Latino population, and they contend that Vilsack abandoned his political base when he signed the bill into law.

In making his decision, Vilsack said, he divided the state into three groups — Iowans who believe the bill is a negative symbol of Iowa's stance toward minorities, those who are neutral on the issue, Jim Kharbush is bringing a long-time Tiffin legend to Iowa City.

Although he can't promise the Lark Supper Club will be open for Mother's Day, he's hoping renovation at its new location, 1069 Highway 1 W. in Iowa City, will be complete by graduation in mid-May.

"It's been a tradition in Iowa for over 50 years, and I wanted it to be back," he said of the move into the former Red Lobster location. "I felt I owed it to the whole county to bring it back on the map."

Kharbush has owned the renowned Tiffin steakhouse since 1999; it collapsed in an accidental fire in December 2000 that caused $732,000 in damages. He and his wife, Kris Kharbush, both of Iowa City, have been working since February to revamp the new location with fresh paint, lighting, furniture, and a 3,000-square foot addition. The restaurant also has party rooms, a stage for speakers and comedians, and a balcony — which were features in the Tiffin location.

"We tried to duplicate what it was before," Jim Kharbush said.

That includes the menu, which will contain the same dishes as before, including steak, onion rings, and more, he said.

What's in a name? Grad student knows

By Vess Mitev

Osama Saba shares two things with Osama bin Laden: a first name and a birthplace in the Middle East. The similarities between the 32-year-old graduate student known for his sense of humor and Al Qaeda's leader end there.

Since Sept. 11, the biomedical-engineering Ph.D. candidate has grappled with the three syllables he shares with the most-wanted man in the world.

In the days immediately after the terrorist attacks, his inbox contained threatening e-mails advising him to go back to his native Palestine. One writer said he needed to be "there when the bombs start falling." Then came pauses from an airline agent while she verified his ticket and seat number. Later, he met dirty looks and mutters in the airplane. His name silenced an entire conference hall last fall when a friend jokingly greeted him by yelling out "Osama" for everyone to hear.

"Definitely — being named Osama is not something that you can hide," said Saba, speaking slowly as if measuring his words. "The whole situation, with my Middle Eastern features and my name, I felt scared."

Saba said he has felt threatened and uneasy, especially after two of his friends — of Mideastern descent — were kicked off a plane. He stayed at the UI, relying on the support of friends and co-workers who offered him their homes in case he didn't feel safe at his own residence.

Phone calls and more e-mails poured in after the attack, this time with words of encouragement. As the days passed and suspicion seemed to disappear, Saba said he began to relax and appreciate the companionship.

"We worry about him a lot, because he's in precarious positions a lot of times," said Christopher Piker, a UI computer-systems administrator. "We try to give him mutual support."

Saba said the anecdotes have outweighed the threats as co-workers and friends joke about his name. A co-worker recently e-mailed Saba the newspaper headline "Osama's Lab Captured" with the note: "Oh no — they finally found your lab," referring to the facility in which Saba works.

"To be honest, I am glad his name is Osama," said Jered Sieren, who has worked with Saba for approximately two years. "When I hear the name, I don't think of Osama bin Laden the terrorist, I think of Osama Saba the jokester."

On another occasion, while placing an order on the phone with company representatives, Saba was asked if he was "the Osama."

"Of course, I said yes, and we both laughed," Saba said.

Now, Saba said, his primary worry remains with his family back in Ramallah, whom he left five years ago to come to the UI. The bombardment of the region by Israeli forces has made it difficult to reach them by phone or e-mail, he said.

Trustee wants officials out

Associated Press

FORT DODGE, Iowa — A member of the Board of Trustees at Iowa Central Community College wants two top administrators replaced.

H. Jean Lehman of Eagle Grove said she no longer had confidence in either school President Robert Paxton or Vice President Thomas Beneke in the aftermath of an academic-transcript scandal at the Fort Dodge community college.

"I have lost trust in most things they say and do," she said last week. "I think that the damage to our school's reputation is so severe that I don't see how it can be remedied or repaired with the present administration."

Lehman is the only member of the nine-member elected board to publicly oppose the school's top administrators since Beneke and two other college officials pleaded guilty to charges regarding transcript fraud at the school.

She said she decided to speak out because she thought the scandal had tarnished a school that otherwise was respected and improving.

However, Paxton's and Beneke's jobs appear to be safe.

Mark Crimmins, the board president, said the majority of the Iowa Central trustees wanted to put the events of the past 20 months behind them. He also noted that criminal charges against Paxton had been dropped.

"It is over," Crimmins said. "And as a board, we want to move on with what we need to do to take care of the college and make sure the college continues to grow and improve. That is my focus."

Crimmins declined to comment on any matters relating to the employment of Paxton and Beneke, as well as Athletics Director Dennis Pilcher and head football coach Kevin Twait.

Crimmins said that any sanctions imposed on the employees would be kept secret at their request.

Beneke, Pilcher, and Twait recently pleaded guilty to charges of record tampering — an aggravated misdemeanor — as part of a plea agreement with state prosecutors. They had also been charged with felonious misconduct in office and falsifying a public document, which also is a felony. Most charges were dropped during pretrial motions.

Beneke and Twait pleaded guilty of falsifying a transcript for former football player B.J. Van Briesen, who had been declared ineligible for competition by the National Junior College Athletics Association.

Pilcher pleaded guilty of providing a false grade to help Fort Dodge professional golfer Corey Braunschweig obtain a coaching certificate to become an assistant golf coach at the local high school.

The three men were given deferred judgments after agreeing to accept the loss of two weeks' pay and to perform community service. They also received one year of court probation and one year of administrative probation at the college.

Dems cool hot budget rhetoric

By Mike Glover

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The deal has yet to be sealed, but the smart money is betting that Gov. Tom Vilsack finds some way not to call lawmakers back for yet another special session to wrestle with the budget.

There wouldn't seem to be a lot in it for him to go through another nasty fight with majority Republicans with little prospect of getting much from them. The only caveat is not much has made a lot of sense during the latest round of budget battling.

The GOP-controlled Legislature cut spending by about $135 million more than the governor wanted and then ended its regular session.

Even before lawmakers dropped the final gavel, the governor issued a statement saying he would call them back for a special session to approve a budget more to his liking, and he suggested a $60

Lawmakers came back, held news conferences bashing the governor, delivered hours of predictably partisan speeches, and then adjourned without doing anything.

That means the initial budget lawmakers approved is still on its way to the governor's desk. He has until May 12 to decide what to do with it.

During the one-day special session, Democratic lawmakers confidently warned their GOP counterparts that the governor was firm, that he'd pull them back again, and hold their feet to the fire.

In the ensuing days, however, the rhetoric has cooled as some very cold political realities have become clear.

The last thing Vilsack, who is on the ballot this year, needs is a summer long hissing match with a Republican Legislature. When governors and Legislatures get into those sorts of running battles, it makes both sides look petty and mean-spirited.

Governors, however, have a name and a face while legislators are a nameless sea of faces, and it's tough for voters to assign blame to a specific politician.

By and large, approval ratings for both sides go down, but those ratings fall for the institution of the Legislature. When voters disapprove of a governor, they disapprove of a specific politician.

Cardinal: Abusive-priest policy to come this June

By Ken Maguire
Associated Press

BOSTON — Cardinal Bernard Law said Sunday that expectations for reform following the recent summit of cardinals were too high, iterating that the creation of a national policy on sexually abusive priests would have to wait until a Catholic bishops' conference.

"As a group of cardinal archbishops, we were able to say that there were certain things that we felt we would like to bring to that June meeting," Law told the congregation at the beginning of Mass at Boston's Cathedral of the Holy Cross. "We were not there to make decisions."

Cardinals across the country are reporting back after a two-day gathering in Rome, where they agreed that they would recommend a process to defrock any priest who has become "notorious and is guilty of the serial, predatory sexual abuse of minors."

During the short statement, Law did not address calls for his resignation. But he referred to himself and his fellow priests as "wounded healers."

"These are not easy days to serve in the pastoral role that is mine," Law said during the special Mass dedicated to hope and healing.

"All of us are wounded healers," he said. "And when we remember that, we are able to be the people that we should be ... When we are not that, we degenerate into anger and division. And that's not who we are. That's not who God calls us to be."

Law also called for a special day of prayer about the sexual-abuse crisis, to be held during the Pentecost celebrations, which will start May 10.

Appearing on morning news shows Sunday, U.S. cardinals who attended the Vatican meeting last week indicated there still was no agreement on whether clergymen accused of sexual abuse should be expelled from the priesthood.

Speaking on "Fox News Sunday," Cardinal Theodore McCarrick of Washington said he supported ousting any priest accused in the future, but, he added, the cardinals were divided about whether the policies should apply to past allegations.

Cardinal Francis George of Chicago, who appeared on several shows, said there still needs to be some discussion on the "one strike and you're out" approach. On NBC's "Meet the Press," he said "mandated sentences" may not be the answer and that cardinals needed some discretion.

The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, at its June meeting in Dallas, is expected to vote on whether to approve a national policy that will be binding on every diocese.

Cardinal Edward Szoka, the past leader of the Detroit archdiocese, argued Sunday that pedophilia is no more prevalent among priests than it is in any other profession. Szoka, who now works at the Vatican and attended last week's summit, was the commencement speaker at Sacred Heart Seminary in Detroit.

"We don't deny the problem of pedophilia. We deeply regret it. We are ashamed of it, and we will do whatever is necessary to correct it," said Szoka, 74. "But we do reject the attempts to discredit the priesthood and the Catholic Church."

The sex-abuse scandal began enveloping the church in January after revelations that the Archdiocese of Boston had shuttled now-defrocked priest John Geoghan from parish to parish despite repeated allegations that he was a pedophile.

Casino rumble kills three

By Ben Fox
Associated Press

LAUGHLIN, Nev. — Thousands of bikers rumbled out of town Sunday as investigators sorted out the details of a casino brawl between rival motorcycle gangs that left three people dead.

Dozens of extra police patrolled the streets to guard against possible gang retaliation at one of the nation's largest motorcycle festivals.

"It's just a mass exodus," said Sgt. Chuck Jones of the Las Vegas police, who have taken jurisdiction over this casino town 80 miles southeast of Las Vegas. "If you go on the highway right now, it's just motorcycle after motorcycle as far as you can see."

Gamblers ran for cover April 27 as 60 to 70 people fought inside Harrah's hotel-casino. Police said gunfire erupted when an argument between the rival Mongols and Hells Angels gangs escalated.

"Blow by blow, stab by stab, and shot by shot, we know exactly what happened in that casino," said Las Vegas police Lt. Vince Cannito after watching casino surveillance tapes.

"If there is any other event that precipitated what happened in there, we may never know," he said.

All three of the dead were gang members involved in the fight, police said.

Calvin Schaffer, 33, a member of the Hells Angels, was arrested April 27 on suspicion of murder, Cannito said.

After interviewing more than 500 people, police said they arrested three to four people on outstanding warrants unconnected to the shooting, adding that more arrests are possible.

Police said they arrived at the casino two minutes after the casino erupted in gunfire. John Davidson, 39, ducked beneath a blackjack table during the melee.

"There were shell casings landing right by us," he said. "I had to pull the dealer down. She was screaming."

SWAT teams and law-enforcement officers from across Arizona and Nevada were called in, and authorities warned of the danger of further violence.

Officers said the surveillance tapes clearly show as many as two members of the Mongols gang surrounded by several members of the Hells Angels as a fist fight breaks out and quickly escalates.

The tape shows one of the Mongols being shot.

"One of the Hells Angels guys pulls out a gun and pops him in the head, and after that, it's just pandemonium," Jones said.

It was not immediately known if that victim was among those killed.

Western Arizona Regional Medical Center in Bullhead City treated seven fight victims. Three were in fair condition with gunshot wounds, and one was in good condition with chest pains. Three were released.

University Medical Center in Las Vegas was treating five patients, all with gunshot or stab wounds. A 47-year-old man was in critical condition, three men were in serious condition, and one was in fair condition.

Investigators were also doing ballistics tests on shell casings found near a body along Interstate 40 and trying to determine if the killing of the motorcyclist was connected to the casino shooting. Cannito said police believe the attack occurred about 1:30 a.m. — 45 minutes before the shooting at Harrah's.

Motorcycle enthusiasts spent the final night of the 20th annual Laughlin River Run cruising the main strip, listening to live music, and gambling in the town's nine casinos.

Police kept a close watch on the revelry.

Approximately 30 people were arrested for mostly minor violations such as disorderly conduct and intoxication under a special order issued by the county sheriff designed to preserve order in emergencies, Jones said.

Police also impounded roughly 100 motorcycles parked around Harrah's. Armed with warrants, they searched the bikes and confiscated weapons, including guns, knives, and hammers, along with narcotics. No more details on those discoveries were released.

Iraq can wait, Daschle says

By Philip Brasher
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate leaders said Sunday there is broad support for toppling Saddam Hussein but that it is too early to take military action against Iraq.

"We've got to win the war on terror; we've got to stabilize Afghanistan. We have to do all that we can to ensure that we succeed there before we take on another mission," said Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D.

A senior Bush administration official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said any attack on Iraq probably would wait until next year but that President Bush has yet to sign off on the time, scope, or manner of such a campaign.

Daschle said on ABC's "This Week" that there is "strong bipartisan support" and "probably world support" for ousting Saddam.

Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said the United States needs to first bolster opposition to Saddam among Iraqis inside and outside that country. "There's a lot more we could be doing," he said on "Fox News Sunday."

The New York Times reported Sunday that the administration is developing plans for a major air and ground war that would involve 70,000 to 250,000 troops.

Private analysts have said that at least 100,000 troops might be needed to attack Saddam, who could shield his troops among civilians and retaliate against U.S. forces with chemical weapons.

The newspaper said the administration has decided that a coup probably would not succeed and that a proxy battle using local Iraqi forces — which was the U.S. strategy in Afghanistan — would not bring down Saddam.

Saudi Arabian Foreign Minister Prince Saud al-Faisal, who has been in Mideast peace talks with U.S. officials for several days, was asked about the Times story at a news conference in Houston. What he has heard from the Bush administration is, "There was no plan for that," al-Faisal said.

The administration faces the question of where to base U.S. forces in the region for an attack on Iraq, given the likelihood that Saudi Arabia would deny the use of its territory.

The Saudi foreign minister said military action against Iraq would not be justified if Saddam allows U.N. weapons inspectors to return.

"The military operation, the reason for it, is to ensure that Iraq doesn't have weapons of mass destruction. The best way to ensure that is to have inspectors," al-Faisal said on ABC.

Iraq contends that it has dismantled all such weapons.

U.S. forces used Saudi territory as a base for the 1991 Gulf War, but Saudi Arabia did not allow attacks on Afghanistan to be launched from its land.

Since Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, the number of U.S. military personnel in the Gulf region and Central Asia has increased from fewer than 25,000 to nearly 80,000.

In Kuwait, which neighbors Iraq, the number of American troops has nearly doubled, from 5,500 to approximately 10,500. In Saudi Arabia, weapons and other gear have been pulled out of long-term storage. Some computer and communications equipment have been moved to a previously secret base in Qatar.

The dicey art of prying

By Ron Kampeas
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As interrogation techniques go, the recommended opener from a 1963 CIA manual — “My little man, you are not of much concern to us” — has gone the way of trench coats and truncheons.

Since then, the agency and others who try to pry information from suspects have evolved a battery of sophisticated psychological techniques to wear their prisoners down.

Such tricks, within certain bounds that U.S. authorities say do not cross the line of the legal definition of torture — “severe pain” — might be used by interrogators whose questions have been faced by captured Al Qaeda fighters trained to be silent or to lie.

The CIA has said it would never subject detainees to the company of rats and cockroaches, for example, or even threaten to do so. But agency manuals from the 1960s through the 1980s discuss the value of endless, meandering chats about whatever gives a captive the creepy crawlies.

Other insights from the manuals:

- A panel of interrogators may subject the suspect to a shouted string of nonsensical questions to create a “surreal” environment in which a “real” question finally provides relief.
- If the suspect is a low-level operative, his interrogators could subject him to hours and days of sophisticated queries he would not know how to answer, wearing away his confidence, then suddenly spring an easy question he would be eager to answer.

- For more sophisticated captives, another method is to wear down confidence by rewarding noncooperation with better conditions and friendliness at first. The confused captive wonders what help he might be inadvertently providing to elicit such favored treatment.
- Simulating newscasts reporting major losses for the enemy could wear down a captive’s morale, inducing a “why not tell all” attitude.

These techniques are not contentious but human-rights groups and intelligence operatives diverge on what happens when “hands off” does not work. The CIA swore off torture after a training manual with a chapter on its “proper use” was leaked in 1984. Subsequent manuals discussed “coercive techniques” aimed at inducing “discomfort” but not pain.

CIA spokesmen would not discuss the manuals. Some suggestions fall short of physical abuse: Agents are told they might manipulate perceptions of time by fiddling with clocks, serving food at odd times, waking the captive at odd hours, and keeping lights on 24 hours a day.

Human-rights groups say techniques aimed at inducing breakdowns are contrary to laws banning cruel and unusual punishment.

“You’re basically not allowed to use anything to overcome the person’s free will,” said Jamie Fellner of Human Rights Watch.

Even dicier are areas described as discomfort — but not pain — in 1988 Senate testimony by the top CIA operative, recently declassified by the independent National Security Archive.

Dick Stolz described techniques such as forcing a captive to sit on a stool or stand at attention for long periods. He could be denied sleep, or he could be placed in a soundproof room, and his environment could be subject to temperature changes.

Agents from other countries who have been granted similar leeway have stood prisoners for hours in front of blasts of cold, kept them outside in desert conditions all day and night, and plied them with coffee, talk, and white noise to keep them awake.

You’re basically not allowed to use anything to overcome the person’s free will.

Friendly postman was a terrorist, gov’t charges

By Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

NEW YORK — For years, Ahmed Abdel Sattar seemed a friendly, mild-mannered postman — who happened to know a lot of terrorists. Now the government says there was a reason for that: He was a terrorist, too.

Sattar is being held without bail on charges of helping a blind Egyptian cleric deliver a message of hate across the world from behind bars. But while the charges are new, Sattar is a familiar face to government investigators.

Nearly a decade ago, the government suspected Sattar used his postal job to track down the home address of an FBI terrorism investigator. In recent years, the government now alleges, he exchanged phone calls with a “who’s who” of Egyptian extremists to coordinate terrorist directives.

All of this is beyond belief to Sattar’s wife and friends, who say the 42-year-old father of four has led a law-abiding life in Staten Island. Any associations Sattar had with people the government considers extremists, they say, were a reflection of his Muslim beliefs and an assertion of his constitutional rights.

“I know my husband better than anybody. All the stuff they said is not true,” said his American-born wife, Lisa.

“My phone has been ringing nonstop with people who are prepared to come forward on behalf of my client,” said his lawyer, Kenneth Paul. Among those friends, he said, are a pediatrician, a university professor, a real-estate executive, and a retired city-housing official.

In an indictment filed this month, authorities allege Sattar delivered messages from the federal prison cell of Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman. The blind cleric, a leader of the Egyptian-based Islamic Group terrorist organization, is serving a life term on charges of conspiring to blow up New York landmarks in 1993.

Sattar is accused of relaying directives from Abdel-Rahman’s Minnesota prison cell, under the guise of serving as an interpreter for the sheik’s lawyers.

One of those lawyers, Lynne Stewart, and two others have also been charged, and Abdel-Rahman has been moved to an undisclosed federal prison.

All four defendants were charged with conspiring to provide material support and resources to the terrorist organization. If convicted, they could face five to 20 years in prison on each count.

The government says the jailhouse messages included an edict “mandating the bloodshed of Israelis everywhere.” Prosecutor Joseph Bianco said court-ordered telephone wiretaps found Sattar talking with “a virtual who’s who of the Islamic Group’s top leadership.”

Sattar’s relationship with the sheik dates back a decade. He helped Abdel-Rahman speak publicly after his 1993 arrest, and he attended the sheik’s 1995 trial on off-days from work.

U.S. remains insulated from Argentine economic fallout

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States largely has avoided the fallout from Argentina’s financial collapse — but that could change if the crisis in South America’s second biggest economy worsens.

The worry is that a serious recession and Argentina’s plunging currency could spill over to neighbors still trying to emerge from last year’s global slowdown — and eventually reach the United States.

“The global economy remains very fragile with troubles in Argentina, Japan mired in a decade-long recession, and Germany struggling,” said Mark Zandi of Economy.com. “If something goes badly wrong, it could quickly spread to our economy.”

Even so, America’s relative insulation from the crisis so far has been striking.

The U.S. economy also survived the last serious currency turmoil, the Asian crisis in 1997-98, even though American investors had a number of nerve-racking moments, especially after Russia defaulted on $40 billion in government debt in August 1998.

That default caused the near-collapse of a giant American investment fund, Long Term Capital Management, and sent stock prices skidding until the Federal Reserve interceded with interest-rate cuts.

Argentina’s decision in December to halt payment on much of its $141 billion in foreign debt — the biggest government default in history — has caused modest ripples so far in the U.S. economy.

American banks with large exposures to Argentina, led by FleetBoston Financial Corp., have written off bad loans. General Motors, Verizon, McDonald’s, Coca-Cola, and other companies have taken some hits. Their losses, however, are small compared with the profit squeeze all U.S. companies endured in last year’s U.S. recession.

Unlike the Asian crisis, Argentina’s troubles took a long time to develop, giving foreign investors warning and leading analysts to play down the chance of a sudden jolt to Wall Street even if the crisis drags on.

“Any real contagion effect like what happened in the Asian crisis would have already occurred,” said David Wyss, the chief economist at Standard & Poor’s in New York. “But that doesn’t mean there can’t still be economic impacts felt in the United States.”

Wyss and other analysts said the bigger threat was to trade rather than the flow of investment.

Argentina’s $3.9 billion in purchases accounted for less than one-half of 1 percent of total U.S. exports last year. But U.S. sales to the rest of Latin America could suffer if Argentina’s slowdown depresses growth in the region. Brazil, South America’s biggest economy, does nearly one-third of its trade with Argentina.

“The Latin American economies, like the rest of the world, are trying to recover from the global recession, and Argentina’s troubles will be a significant limitation on growth,” said Sung Won Sohn, the chief economist at Wells Fargo in Minneapolis.

Many analysts also are worried about the political effect from the financial turmoil in a region that the past decade has moved to embrace democracy and free-market capitalism.

“The Argentine people are suffering, and they are blaming foreign banks, the IMF (International Monetary Fund), and the U.S. government,” Zandi said. “The whole process of political reform could be undermined.”

ans cooperate fully with the fact-finding team "without any hindrance or conditions."

Arab nations were meeting to decide whether to press for a vote or delay action until after today's Israeli Cabinet meeting.

In another development, dozens of Israeli tanks and armored vehicles entered the West Bank city of Hebron early today, witnesses said.

The incursion came from the north, south, and west, and it was accompanied by attack helicopters firing machine guns.

One Palestinian, a member of the security forces, was killed, and at least 15 people were wounded by Israeli gunfire, mostly from the helicopters, Palestinians said.

Israeli military sources, speaking on the condition of anonymity, confirmed that a military operation was underway, but they would give no further details. Israel Radio said the object of the incursion was to arrest militants, not to occupy the city, but residents said it was the largest military operation in Hebron in months.

It was not clear if the incursion marked a full invasion of the city, the only main West Bank population center that escaped Israel's large-scale military push that began March 29. Israeli troops also bypassed the desert oasis town of Jericho during their sweep.

Hours before the incursion, Bush heralded "a hopeful day" after brokering the deal to end the siege of Arafat in Ramallah.

Bush renewed his demand that all parties in the conflict — the Israelis, Palestinians, and Arab neighbors — meet their "responsibilities" to help end the conflict, but he imposed special demands on Arafat.

"Chairman Arafat should now seize this opportunity to act decisively in word and in deed against terror directed at Israeli citizens," Bush said. "He hasn't earned my respect. He must earn my respect by leading."

Bush's compromise plan would allow Arafat to travel in the Palestinian territories. Until the deal, Israel had said it would not allow Arafat out of his shell-shattered West Bank compound until it had custody of the six wanted men inside with him. Five of the six were wanted in connection with the October 2001 assassination of Israeli Tourism Minister Rehavam Zeevi. The sixth was accused of trafficking arms from Iran to the Palestinian territories.

Bush's proposal, according to Israeli officials, would have Israel standing by its "legitimate demand" that the six wanted men be handed over to Israel. But as long as British jailers and American representatives ensure they remain imprisoned, they apparently could stay in an isolated jail in Palestinian territory.

1981. Twenty years and millions of dollars later, that gathering spawned the Connie Belin and Jacqueline N. Blank International Center for Gifted Education and Talent Development, a program in the Lindquist Center that has reached 40,000 children from elementary school through college.

"Everyone felt better about the world after they met Jackie," said Nick Colangelo, the Belin-Blank Center's director. "She has constantly been a driving force and soul behind the center. It wasn't something she just gave money to and didn't stay close to."

Jackie Blank always inquired about the kids enrolled in the program during frequent conversations, he said.

"She'd always say, 'How can we reach kids from small towns? How can we reach kids from poverty backgrounds? How can we do better?'" Colangelo said.

She believed the UI was the only university in Iowa with the commitment to gifted students. The center is scheduled to move into a $14 million complex, the Blank Honors Center, next to Daum Residence Hall in 2003. The Blanks contributed $5 million to the project, which will house both the center and the UI Honors Program. It will be the first of its kind in the nation to serve gifted students from kindergarten through college.

Shovel in hand, Jackie Blank attended the groundbreaking in July 2001.

"She turned a spade or two of dirt," said Michael New, the president of the UI Foundation, for which Jackie Blank served as a board member in 1995. "She was an elegant person."

The Blanks also contributed to the Blank Park Zoo and Blank Children's Hospital in Des Moines. Jackie Blank, who served as the first female president of the Des Moines Art Center Board, is survived by her husband, one of their children, eight grandchildren, and 10 great-grandchildren.

however, said they wish the restaurant would have stayed put.

"I really think it's bad for Tiffin because that was the main staple," said Tiffin resident Brian McCubbin, who dined at the restaurant "whenever he could" during the past 10 years. He said he's not sure if he'll travel to Iowa City to eat at the restaurant, which served "deluxe" prime ribs and onion rings "to die for."

Customers would sometimes walk two or three blocks to the restaurant's previous 300-seat location because only approximately 50 parking spots were available, Jim Kharbush said.

But lack of parking at its old site off of Highway 6 is one reason he found the Iowa City location attractive, Jim Kharbush said. Also, the Iowa City community, especially the UI Hospitals and Clinics and UI athletics, has always been supportive of the business, he said.

"Now, we're even closer to them," Jim Kharbush said.

Rebuilding was always the Kharbushes' intention, and it comes after an extensive search of locations in both Iowa City and Coralville.

The restaurant, once voted best steakhouse in Iowa by Midwest Living magazine and in the Big Ten by sports writers, will continue to live up to its fame, Jim Kharbush said.

Vilsack defends English-only law and a "much larger" group that felt threatened by migrant workers taking jobs in Iowa's unstable economy.

"After I signed the bill, it occurred to me I had a very difficult job — a job of educating this group who feel this is a symbol of intolerance about the bill's meaning," he said. "People I talked to this afternoon are worried this bill will prevent them from speaking Spanish, and that is simply not true."

But some small-business owners have already begun telling their employees not to speak Spanish on the job, said Veronica Gonzalez, a commissioner with the Iowa Division of Latino Affairs. Business owners either misunderstand the law or are using it to discriminate against some workers, she said.

"To me, it has a strong symbolic meaning of intolerance," said Ed Cervantes, a commissioner with the Latino-affairs division. "I think the governor alienated a lot of Latinos by passing it, but it also took a big man to get up there and address the issue."

Others said Vilsack has still not explained the bill's purpose to minorities. Gill Sierra, an official with the League of United Latin American Citizens, the largest U.S. organization representing Latino Americans, contended it only serves to please Iowa's white majority.

"We have a Pottowattamie County, Sioux City, Des Moines, and Dubuque, and we aren't changing those names," Sierra said. "What does [the bill] do then? It just makes 98 percent of the state happy."

At the beginning of the speech, most crowd members gave Vilsack a standing ovation. When he stepped from the podium, only half of the room rose to applaud him.

Iowa's Latino population rose from approximately 32,000 to 82,000 between 1990 and 2000, according to the latest Census. Latinos make up 2.8 percent of the state's population — a figure substantially lower than the nation's 9 percent average, but one that has grown by 156 percent since 1990.

The conference also featured keynote speaker Anthony

Romero, the executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union, who spoke about the importance of minorities questioning government imprisonment of immigrants and minorities.

"We must always remind ourselves the Constitution says, 'We the people,' and not 'We the government,'" said Romero, the first Latino and openly gay man to lead the ACLU. "We, as Latinos who defend civil liberties — civil rights — know that freedom is meaningless unless supported by civic responsibility."

Proposed city ordinances unworkable, undesirable

How many times have people achieved the impossible? How many times have the critics been proven wrong? Forty years ago, John F. Kennedy promised to put a man on the moon by the end of the 1960s. Most people thought he was crazy and said it could not be done. However, against all odds, on July 20, 1969, the Eagle landed, and the seemingly impossible took place.

Here in Iowa City, our own version of the impossible is about to be realized. Some months back, rumors began surfacing of new laws essentially designed to track and punish unruly students. These ordinances included statutes regarding the registration of beer kegs, limits on the number of people allowed at parties, and restrictions on the type of furniture one may place on her or his porch. Upon hearing these rumors, most rational people immediately said, "The city government cannot be that stupid. These ordinances will never pass. It's impossible." However, despite the seemingly obvious absurdity of such laws, the Neighborhood Housing Relations Task Force has gone ahead and drafted the proposal, thereby bringing the impossible one step closer to reality.

Perhaps the task force cannot see the foolishness of its new ordinances as easily as the rest of Iowa City. For example, forcing purchasers of beer kegs to register with the city is offensive and invasive. Why should the city government know or care who is drinking what in the privacy of their own homes? As long as the purchasers are over the legal age, then the law has been enforced to the limit.

What would the city do with the information, anyway? Would it send police to the keg purchaser's place of residence to make sure that no one under the legal age is drinking from it? If this is the idea, then why stop at beer kegs? Perhaps purchasers of pornography should register with the city as well. As long as we are registering vices, go ahead and add cigarettes and pain killers to the list.

The most outrageous proposal even skates the edge of unconstitutionality. The First Amendment of the Bill of Rights guarantees people the right to peaceable assembly. This right covers massive assemblies such as the Million Man March, but it is also applicable to small assemblies, such as a Super Bowl party. The task force wants to regulate this basic civil liberty by requiring citizens to apply for a permit if they plan to host parties with more than 30 people. It is a common tactic of oppressive governments to regulate social gatherings in order to prevent organized dissent. Apparently, the task force has forgotten that we live in a democracy, not a fascist regime.

While landing a man on the moon was a testament to human ingenuity and perseverance, supporting these new ordinances is a testament to human stupidity and imbecility. Fortunately, there is still a chance that the new laws can be avoided. At 6 p.m. on Tuesday, a public forum to discuss the proposal will be held at the Civic Center, 410 E. Washington St. If you truly value your civil rights, then it is your duty to attend and express your concerns. Otherwise, do not be surprised when the proposals become laws, and the impossible becomes reality.

Letters to the Editor

Police should fight crime, not students

I am writing in regards to the article "Panel Ready to Fight 'Nuisance'" (DI, April 22). One of the proposals "encourages police officers to ticket more frequently and warn less often." Having lived in Iowa City for the past four years, I feel that the police department has already exhibited an exemplary effort in ticketing students. I once received a public intoxication ticket, as the police officer explained to me, for having my toes on the "public" sidewalk after an Iowa football game. I walked away with $405 in tickets that afternoon.

They have done so well that they haven't had time to crack some cases that may have easily been solved with a little extra effort. On July 4, three years ago, my roommate was attacked in our downtown apartment. After escaping her attacker, she ran naked for two blocks to Big Mike's Super Subs. The police were notified immediately. She gave them her statement with a vivid physical description and the details of the attack. We were told that an officer was about to question a man who had been running down the street, wet, when the officer received the call. The man was wet because he had just attacked my roommate in our shower. Two months later, she was finally called to the station to do a composite sketch of her attacker. For two months, the only thing she had been trying to forget is what her attacker looked like. Her attacker was never caught. In the next month, two other people I knew were attacked, one at knife-point in her apartment. Their attackers were never caught, either.

I think that we should encourage police officers to solve crime in Iowa City before encouraging them to seek out and ticket more people for throwing parties and walking home intoxicated.

Learn from Illinois

Beside the fact that we were all awed and greatly impressed with James Eaves-Johnson's tremendously high morals to not drink (DI, April 25), as it makes those who do "annoying," he did bring up the astute point that no matter what the City Council does, underage drinking will prevail in Iowa City. The introduction of a 21-only age limit will have serious repercussions, as both Nick Klenske and Johnson introduced in their guest opinions, in the forms of cheaper and more accessible alcohol at parties that will grow at an exponential rate, unsafe conditions that could foster rape or sexual assaults, increased drunk driving — the list goes on.

Instead of unwelcome penalties, such as the 21-bar issue or the keg ordinances, the City Council should work with students, namely UISG, to create a safer downtown environment for all. While it doesn't necessarily have to approve of underage drinking, it should recognize and accept that underage drinking is here to stay. For example, the University of Illinois has a liquor commission composed of students and city representatives focused on the safety of the students. Why couldn't the City Council create a committee of councilors and student representatives to work in conjunction toward a safer night atmosphere for Iowa City? One example could be a late-night bus system that picks students up from parties or bars takes them home.

Hopefully, none of us, especially the City Council, are naïve enough to believe underage drinking is going to magically disappear with a few ordinances. As a student representative in UISG, I know we would be more than receptive toward any gesture of City Council's to collaborate for the welfare of the students and community. Working with the students, instead of against us, will have a much more positive effect on Iowa City as a whole.

Students as 'nuisances': the hidden truth

They have been called "far-fetched," "asinine," and even "fascist." They are unfairly targeted at UI students, and there are a lot of them.

The 31 recommendations proposed by the Neighborhood Housing Relations task force seek to encourage "peaceful habitation" and rid Iowa City of its drug and gang activity. However, the proposals have angered many Iowa City residents and UI students, and rightly so. Several of the 31 "nuisance ordinances" are clearly aimed at Iowa City's student population.

3. Police should be strongly encouraged to cite more frequently and use warnings less frequently. The example cited by the task force is disorderly house complaints. If police respond to such a call and the house is indeed disorderly, the occupants should be ticketed and the landlords notified immediately.

Let's face it — most rental units in Iowa City are occupied by students. And most late-night complaints about unruly residents are about students. If the police choose only to warn the offenders and the "disorderliness" dissipates (i.e., "Party's over, guys. Go home."), the end result is the same: no more loud music, no more complaints.

4. Provide city ordinance to require people who have parties of over 30 people to apply for free permits. This proposal could prove useful if it was used correctly. But this is Iowa City. If police know the whereabouts of every 30-person party before they begin, you can bet that every party — peaceable or not — will be visited by the end of the night.

5. Adopt city ordinance/permit process for alcoholic beverage kegs. Come on — who buys the majority of kegs in Iowa City? And what is to keep the city from denying such a permit? If the permit is denied, is it then illegal to buy a product that is perfectly legal? The task force must be ready to answer these questions.

Amanda Mittlestadt

12. Amend city ordinances to include a couch ordinance that prohibits couches and other types of non-porch furniture on porches or in yards. I don't fully understand the couch-on-porch affair in college towns; lawn chairs, though more destructible, are much cheaper. That aside, this recommendation is obviously aimed at students. But who are the couches really bothering? Better one sturdy couch in place than a litter of lawn chairs all over the yard.

27. City staff should coordinate with university personnel to get the university to adopt regulations so that student grades/diplomas will be withheld if fines are not paid. This suggestion seems a little beyond the scope of a neighborhood task force. UI General Counsel Mark Schantz says this recommendation raises several legal questions and that he knows of no other universities with such agreements with cities. The punishment for unpaid fines should apply to all Iowa City residents; this proposal does not.

Not all of the group's recommendations are bad. 23. Housing inspection should draft a policy to require newspaper deliveries to be made to porches or the inside of multi-family units and be bound or bagged. There's nothing wrong with wanting to prevent newspapers from flying all over town. Over-occupancy issues do need to be addressed, and the group does a great job of laying out guidelines to potentially solve the problem.

One of the problems with these proposed ordinances lies with the number of recommendations made. Many of the task force's suggestions to alleged problems in Iowa City violate the basic rights of its residents. Some proposals seek to resolve petty "nuisances" that would be better dealt with in other ways. In trying to solve all problems, the task force may solve none of them.

The other significant problem with this set of proposals is its target group — students.

Students make up half the population of Iowa City, and indeed, are its very lifeblood. These "nuisance ordinances" may as well say, "We'd like it if the students loaded up all their things — along with their messes, music, and alcohol — and moved somewhere else." These proposals indirectly — and unfairly — pinpoint students as the cause of all of Iowa City's troubles.

Without hearing the voice of student opposition, many of these "far-fetched" proposed ordinances could advance to a City Council vote and become approved ordinances. A public forum on the proposals will be held Tuesday from 6-8 p.m. at the Civic Center, 410 E. Washington St. Make your voice heard. Protect your rights, not only as a UI student, but also as a resident of Iowa City.

Amanda Mittlestadt is the DI Assistant Opinions Editor.

Have you considered attending the public forum on the proposed nuisance ordinances Tuesday night? If you did go, what would you say?

As you probably know, the word "frail" can be used to describe someone who is physically weak.

What you probably don't know — like me before consulting a dictionary — is that a frail person can also be one who is "easily led into evil." It's this more foreboding definition that provides the basis for the religious-themed thriller Frailty, actor Bill Paxton's (Twister, A Simple Plan) promising directing debut.

FBI agent Wesley Doyle (Powers Boothe) is called into his office one late, stormy night to meet with a man named Fenton Meiks (Matthew McConaughey). Doyle is trying to catch a serial murderer known as the God's Hand Killer, and Fenton claims to know who it is — his younger brother, Adam, who just committed suicide. Fenton says he can take Doyle to some of the unfound bodies, which are buried a few hours away in the small Texas town where Fenton and Adam grew up.

As they creep along the highway in the quiet, pitch-black night, Fenton tells his story, which we see in a series of extended flashbacks. It's 1979. 12-year-old Fenton and 9-year-old Adam live a happy life with their auto-mechanic dad, played by Paxton. One night, Dad wakes his children to announce some startling news: God has spoken to him. He has been chosen, along with his boys, to seek out and destroy all of the evil demons walking among them. He's not actually murdering anyone, you see, because his hapless victims aren't real people — like I said, they're demons. While the younger Adam trusts his father and believes in their new calling — "You mean, we'll be like superheroes?" he eagerly asks — Fenton doesn't have as much faith.

Ironically, one of Frailty's most disturbing aspects is how reasonable screenwriter Brent Hanley and Paxton, as both director and star, portray Dad. He's not some crazed zealot like the mom in Brian De Palma's Carrie. In fact, up until he announces his new career as Daddy the Demon Slayer, he never seems to be even semi-religious. He's just a man who has found his purpose in life, one who is completely convinced that he is doing what is right — which is what makes him so terrifying. If you saw Carrie's hysterical mom on the street, you'd at least be able to avoid her. Dad Meiks could be your next-door neighbor or your mailman, and you'd never know that in his spare time he enjoyed chopping up "demons" and burying them in the rose garden.

Paxton's straightforward approach applies to his directing style as well. There are a few squirm-inducing scenes, but the violence is underplayed, with the most gruesome bits occurring off-screen. The real horror being exposed isn't external; it's the psychological toll that Dad's quest takes on his children — which leads us back to the film's ominously ambiguous title.

Who exactly is being so easily led into evil? Is it Fenton and Adam? Or is it Dad, despite claiming to do God's work? What about Agent Doyle, as he and the adult Fenton drive back to the site where all of the horror started?

Unfortunately, Frailty takes what should have remained ambiguous and tries to unravel it for us. I won't spoil anything except to say that the ending will either leave you reveling in the screenwriter's ingenuity or feeling a bit manipulated. For me, it was the latter. Furthermore, the supernatural overtones require a leap of faith that, like young Fenton, I'm just not willing to make.

Amid the cultural landscape of art, music, and literature in Iowa City lurks an underground of highly specialized and oftentimes irreverent independent publications called "zines."

They range from one specific theme or idea to a collage of the creators' interests, passions, and hobbies.

For recent UI graduate Bradley Adita, the zine is a way to exist as an artist. Thus, Adita has planned the second READ event, to be held at the IMU Gallery Space. The free, week-long exhibit of local zines, "Zines for All," will end on Tuesday with a zine-making party open to the community.

"I want to show how other people have used the media of zines to exist as artists," Adita said. "It's a way of existing for me, a way for people to experience my work."

After the success of last year's READ at the Art Building, Adita decided to make the event annual. In the fall, Adita learned that the IMU Office of Marketing was looking for artists interested in displaying their work. He sent a letter outlining his goals for the event and was given one of six spots.

"I demonstrated that this would not only be an art show but an event to bring people together," he explains.

Adita's own zine, A Day in the Air, along with other local zines, make up the exhibit, which began April 22. The zine-making party will allow members of the community to bring their own materials and make their own pages, which will be collectively published and distributed to contributors.

"Self-publishing is important," said Adita, who created his first zine in high school. "Putting out your work and publishing is important. You're your own authority."

ventions and effectively subverts a familiar premise — two enemies, forced to come together, won't necessarily learn to put aside their differences. With biting dialogue and surprising wit, Tanovic exposes this bitter conflict as nothing more than an absurd political game in which everyone loses, and everyone is to blame. (Sorry, no slow-motion firefights or dramatic shots of Owen Wilson running.) ★★★★★ out of ★★★★★
— by Adam Kempeaar

Adita's inspiration for READ was former Iowa City resident and friend Jaime Schweser. In late 1999, Adita received a call from fellow zine-maker Schweser to meet at the Tobacco Bowl with seven other friends. The plan was to put together a zine in one night. The end product was called Too Little, Too Late, which is included in the Gallery Space exhibit.

"Having this event is almost like playing a cover song. It's paying tribute to people who have done this and are still doing it. This event is a tribute to Jaime," he said.

Adita created A Day in the Air during his freshman year at the UI, and he has since published 13 issues that generally cover his passions of juggling and skating, among other interests. Each issue is its own definitive piece of personal art.

"Each one is a snapshot of who I am at the time," he says. "I'm not trying to make political statements. I'm creating a forum, engaging people in conversation." Similarly, the evolution of the zine follows a path of personal expression through shared interests. Seth Friedman, who revived the nearly extinct zine Factsheet Five in the early '90s, said the word "zine" comes from "fanzine," a term used to describe science-fiction magazines of the '30s and '40s.

These independent publications were devoted to original science-fiction stories. When readers wrote letters to discuss their views, innovative creators printed the writers' addresses so that direct discussion could take place among readers, Friedman said.

Soon after, many began to publish their own fanzines with the aid of advancing technology. In the 1960s, a time of "political unrest," thousands of independent publications appeared as a means of expression in the mass social movements occurring around the country.

Zines in the '70s and '80s focused on the newly emerging punk-music scene, as zines became even more accessible because of the availability of photocopy machines increased. Essentially, the punk philosophy is what ultimately captivated Adita and acted as the impetus to begin creating.

"Punk music is all about taking the reins and making your own music. The punk ethic is to do it yourself — you don't need an institution," he said. "This is where the DIY, or Do It Yourself, philosophy came from."

Throughout the '90s, the growth of the e-zine, virtual communities, and computer-generated imagery brought together thousands of zine creators from all over the country. Adita himself owns nearly 1,000 different publications.

Adita hopes to create more interest in the zine subculture through READ while creating a forum for free speech through "the bubbling up of culture" that the zine promotes.

"When you make a zine, it's like paying tribute to past zines. It keeps the spirit of zine making alive," he said.

25 dead in Afghan fight German gun fan kills 17

By Kathy Gannon
Associated Press

GARDEZ, Afghanistan — Bitter feuding among warlords turned eastern Afghanistan into a war zone over the weekend, leaving as many as 25 people dead and furious residents accusing the interim regime of being weak and the United States of being uncaring.

Some say they are even praying for a return of the Taliban, whose heavy-handed rule sent most of the country's warlords into exile.

On Sunday, residents in Gardez began to emerge from shuttered dwellings to bury their dead killed in the previous day's rocket assault.

As many as 25 people died when soldiers loyal to warlord Bacha Khan Zardran fired a torrent of rockets into the city on April 27, said Gardez Gov. Taj Mohammed Wardak. Another 70 people were injured.

One man died because the hospital in Gardez couldn't find his blood type. Another two people died while being transferred to the capital Kabul, 120 miles away.

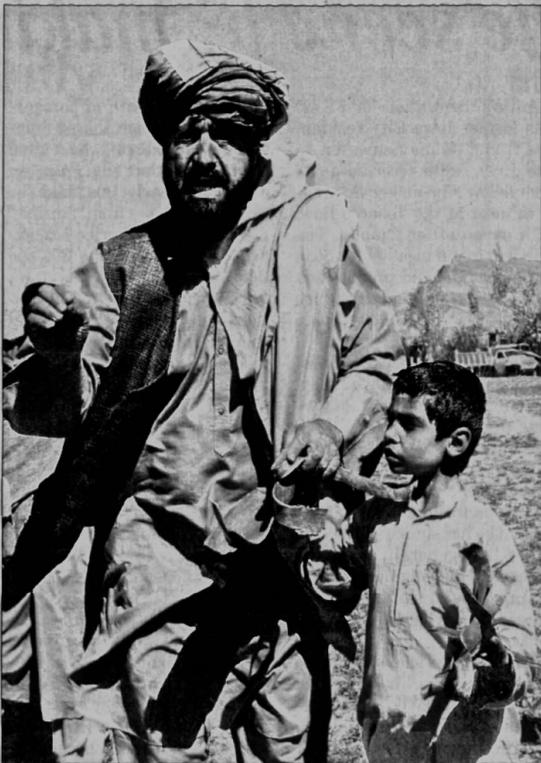

"A small child died because a piece of shrapnel ripped open her abdomen," said Dr. Naqibullah Irfan.

From their heavily guarded compound on the southern edge of the city, U.S. Special Forces brought blood and medicine to the hospital to help treat the wounded, Irfan said.

But people say it's not enough.

They want the Special Forces to use their military might to rein in the warlords. They say the U.S. response is quick and forceful when Americans are threatened but less so when residents come under fire.

"When one mortar is fired near the compound where the U.S. soldiers are, there are 20 planes in the sky right away, but when 800 rockets fall on the people of Gardez, nothing," said Moukan, a shopkeeper who uses only one name.

The U.S. military spokesman said Sunday that the U.S. forces deployed in Afghanistan are quietly doing what they can to halt factional fighting in the east of the country, but negotiating an end to local feuds is not their primary objective.

"Our mission here is to capture or kill Al Qaeda and senior Taliban," said Maj. Bryan Hilferty, the U.S. military spokesman. "Our secondary mission is to help to secure the country."

Hilferty said recent clashes between rival warlords in the east posed a threat to the country's fragile interim government, but halting fighting between warlords was largely the responsibility of the new authorities.

"Of course we are working with the Afghan interim administration to help it with security, to help it set up the Afghan army. But particular factional fighting? I don't think it's for us to get into," Hilferty said.

ERFURT, Germany — The teenage gun enthusiast who killed 16 people and himself at his former school enjoyed violent computer games and kept his parents in the dark about his humiliating expulsion from school, police said Sunday.

Adding new details to the troubling profile of Robert Steinhäuser, the 19-year-old behind one of the deadliest school shootings ever, investigators said that hours before his deadly rampage, he told his parents he was going to take a math exam. As he left the house, his mother wished him good luck.

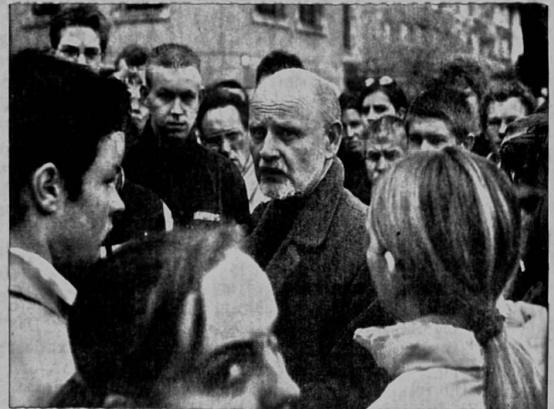

"The parents thought he was going to school every day and was successfully moving toward his high-school diploma," Police Chief Rainer Grube said.

Officials said Steinhäuser, an expert marksman, walked into the building just before 11 a.m., used a bathroom to change into all-black clothing and a ski mask, then fatally shot 13 teachers — more than a third of the faculty — two teenage students, and a policeman.

Police said he fired approximately 40 rounds before turning his 9 mm Glock pistol on himself inside the Johann Gutenberg Gymnasium.

Grube said authorities believe the killer had a Web site, and they were investigating a home page bearing his name and picture. But someone changed the page 12 hours after his death, Grube said, raising the possibility the current version is bogus.

In a search of Steinhäuser's home, police found comics filled with scenes of violence as well as a number of computer games that featured "intensive weapons use," Grube said. He said Steinhäuser's mother told police she had not noticed any

Palestinian cult of martyrs increasing

By Hamza Hendawi
Associated Press

JENIN REFUGEE CAMP, West Bank — Mohammed Badi, 13, says he wants to die young. "Life is not good here. I'll do an operation," the seventh-grader said in a matter-of-fact tone.

In today's Palestinian parlance, an "operation" means a suicide bombing or a gun attack that is certain to end with the assailant's death. In either case, an eternity in paradise is thought to await the bomber and the gunman.

There's no way to judge whether Badi really means to go through with it, but his words illustrate how the appeal of suicide attacks, once the domain of militant Muslim groups, is striking chords throughout Palestinian society and giving rise to a cult complete with rituals.

Secular Palestinians have blown themselves up in the nearly 60 attacks in 19 months. So have women. So have teenagers.

After each attack, candy is distributed in the streets, and women often greet the news with joyous shrieks. Attackers videotape their final words against a backdrop of assault rifles and banners with Koranic verses. Posters of the bombers and gunmen in Rambo-like poses are plastered on walls.

Palestinians say the bombings are a legitimate weapon in fighting for their independent state. Israel says they're intolerable acts of terror, and it hunted down militants in the West Bank this month in its largest military operation in 20 years.

Opinion polls indicate that more than 70 percent of Palestinians support suicide attacks, and experts say the high regard in which the "martyrs" are held in society is shaping the next generation.

"Martyrdom has become an ambition for our children," said Fadl Abu Hein, a psychology lecturer from Gaza. "If they had a proper education in a normal environment, they won't have looked for a value in death."

The militants say they get so many candidates that they have waiting lists. Priority goes to those with good knowledge of Israeli roads, cities, and landmarks — hence, many of the bombers turn out to have had jobs in Israel.

When zero hour approaches, would-be bombers offer a final prayer and listen to a sermon on martyrdom. They then set out with no goodbyes to family or friends.

Explosives strapped around their waist, they look for a spot where they can cause as many deaths and as much destruction as possible by blowing themselves up. Favorite targets: crowded buses, cafes, outdoor markets.

News of a bombing is announced from loudspeakers mounted on mosque minarets. Spontaneous marches set out to the bomber's house. The family later makes itself available at a youth center or social club for people to pay respects — not condolences.

Within hours, posters of the bomber go up on walls. Shadi Tbbasi's is typical. He killed 15 people in a Haifa restaurant March 31. He is posed holding a pistol and Koran against a backdrop of a dead Palestinian child and an image of Islam's gold-topped Dome of the Rock in Jerusalem.

Mother Nature pains Hawkeyes

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

The good news for the Iowa softball team is the No. 23 Hawkeyes didn't lose any ground in the Big Ten standings this weekend. The bad news is they weren't afforded the opportunity to gain much, either.

In the final weeks of the conference race, Iowa managed to play just one of its four scheduled games, a 5-2 victory over Wisconsin on April 26.

There's not really anything to do. You can't build in a rain date, because having classes on Monday makes that a tough day.

— Gayle Blevins,
 Iowa head coach

The other three, one against Wisconsin and a double-header with Minnesota Sunday, were canceled.

Rain washed away Iowa's chances of a sweep against the Badgers on April 27, when the skies opened up in the second inning with the Hawkeyes leading 4-0. Five innings are needed in order for a contest to be official. Mother Nature foiled Iowa's plans for a Big Ten push once more on Sunday as a combination of snow and a four-foot sink hole near first base forced cancellation of both contests. This after the team drove through a snowstorm for two hours on the way from Madison to Minneapolis. None of the three games will be

Hawkeyes scale Big Ten standings

By Jeremy Shapiro
 The Daily Iowan

A come-from-behind victory against one of the Big Ten's best pitchers raised the Iowa baseball team's win streak to seven before the Hawkeyes fell to Michigan State, 3-0, in the series finale. The streak was Iowa's longest in nine years.

Iowa won two out of three against the then-second place Spartans, including winning a Friday Big Ten game for the first time since 1999. Iowa pounded Michigan State, 14-3, on April 26, demonstrating that the Hawkeyes are no longer the league's designated pushover. The seven wins in eight games brought Iowa's record to 19-20 overall, 8-11 in Big Ten play. More importantly, it increased Iowa's chances of making the Big Ten Tournament for the first time since 1994. They moved up from ninth to eighth place, a half of a game back of Northwestern and Illinois who are tied for sixth. The top six teams make the tournament, and Northwestern will come to Iowa City on Friday.

"Winning seven of eight means we are doing good things," said Iowa coach Scott Broghamer. "We've had solid defense and good pitching, and when that happens, good things usually happen."

Iowa last won seven straight in 1993 during a stretch in late March. However, the Hawkeyes had not won four-consecutive Big Ten games since 1998.

Before the streak started, Iowa was dead last in the league in hitting. Michigan State was first, yet on April 26 it appeared to be the other way around.

The Hawkeyes slugged 10 hits and crossed the plate 14 times, drubbing each Spartan pitcher they faced. Ian Mattiace set the tone, homering on the second pitch of the game. He also scored two runs and stole a base. Kyle Thousand drove in four and hit his Big Ten-leading seventh triple. Reed Pawlek did a solid job on the mound, earning his third win.

Iowa's momentum was thwarted momentarily when its April 27 double-header was washed out, but the team was plenty fired up Sunday.

A Jeff Gremley sacrifice grounder scored Brad Carlson in the second, and Iowa led 1-0. Iowa pitcher Matt Hasz ran into trouble in the third, giving up three runs. With MSU ace Nick Bates mowing down Iowa batters, it looked like the win streak could end, but Hasz rebounded to keep MSU off the scoreboard the next two innings, setting up the Iowa rally.

"Matt did a good job in there bouncing back from that inning against the top hitting team," Broghamer said. "We can rely on him for four, five, or six innings."

Gremley walked and stole second to lead off the fifth. Groth drove him home on a sharp single to center making it 3-2 Michigan State. Mattiace beat out a high chopper for an infield hit. After an Andy Jansen pop out, Brad Carlson was intentionally walked to load the bases. The decision to pitch to Thousand instead did not pay off when he ripped a single, scoring Groth and Mattiace.

Nick Jensen made sure the 4-3 lead would stand up, pitching two innings for his fifth save. He needed a brilliant defensive play by Groth on a grounder with two on and two out to end the game.

In the finale, Spartan hurler Tim Day threw a gem, allowing no runs on three hits. The Spartans scored one in the second and two in the fourth to salvage the last game and improve to 10-8 in the conference.

"He kept us off balance and changed speed well," Broghamer said. "We didn't get the key hit, and that was the difference in the ball game."

The Hawkeyes will host Northern Iowa on Wednesday before welcoming the Wildcats in a crucial four-game series.

Lakers sweep

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Shaquille O'Neal was bottled up, and Kobe Bryant didn't have an open shot, so it was up to Robert Horry to win it for the Los Angeles Lakers.

Horry made a 3-pointer with 2.1 seconds left to cap a furious last-minute comeback, and the Lakers completed a three-game sweep of the Portland Trail Blazers with a 92-91 victory Sunday.

The Blazers, who have lost seven-straight playoff games to the Lakers dating to Game 7 of the 2000 Western Conference finals, appeared to have the game won after Rasheed Wallace made one of two free throws to give Portland a 90-86 lead with 17.1 seconds left.

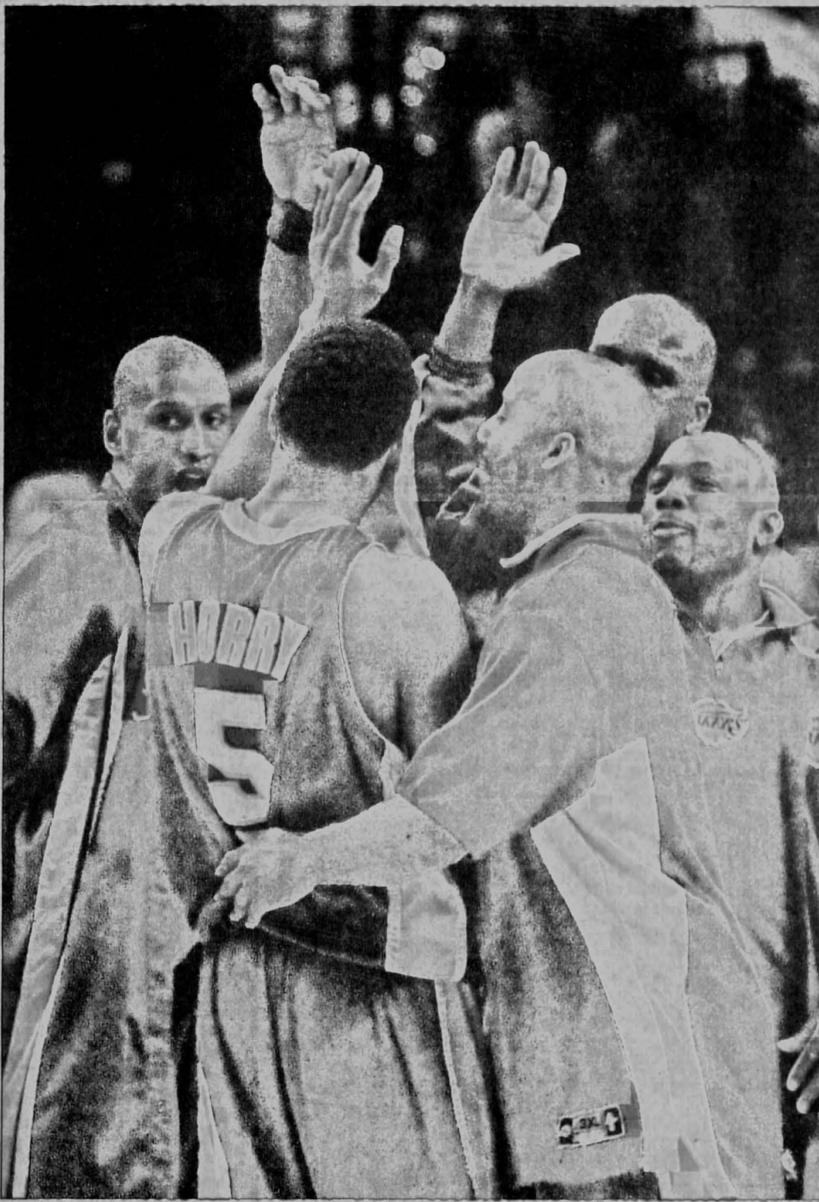

Despite a horrendous second half, the Lakers had some tricks left in their bag. Bryant immediately made a 3-pointer with 12.7 seconds to go, and Portland's Scottie Pippen shot 1-2 from the line after he was fouled.

Rick Fox inbounded the ball to Bryant, who was guarded by the self-proclaimed "Kobe Stopper," Ruben Patterson. Bryant went right and flung the ball to Horry, who was waiting in the corner off to Bryant's right. Pippen was late in getting a hand up, and Horry swished the jumper.

The Blazers had one last chance, but Pippen's inbound pass went over Wallace's head, and Horry rebounded with 0.9 seconds left.

Portland was in the game not only because the Lakers shot 41 percent in the second half but because the Blazers played terrific defense on O'Neal for a change.

He finished with 21 points, but he went into the fourth shooting just 1-5 from the field. He was 4-6 in the final period. O'Neal actually did

Weather shortens Iowa's competition

By Tyler Lechtenberg
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's track and field team wasn't going to risk it.

Because of adverse weather conditions that heightened the possibility of injury at the Drake Relays, the Hawkeyes cut short their stay at the three-day event when they opted not to run on the final day of competition.

Iowa coach James Grant said the team reached a consensus to prevent any possible injuries — but that didn't make it any easier.

"The athletes and I were extremely disappointed," he said. "They certainly wanted to run, but they felt that the wise thing to do was not to run."

The cold, wind, and rain, as well as some nagging hamstring soreness, combined to make any competition futile on April 27 if the Hawkeyes wanted to be ready for the Big Ten championships on May 17, Grant said.

"Conditions were such that we thought it was detrimental to having the athletes competing," he said. "We have the conference meet coming up, and if anyone got hurt we would need time to recover."

The Hawkeyes did compete

Hawkeye sprinters shine at Drake relays

By Tyler Lechtenberg
 The Daily Iowan

While braving some of the worst weather in the history of the Drake Relays, the Iowa men's track and field team still managed to post some quality performances in Des Moines over the weekend.

Senior sprinter Tim Dodge and junior Russell Peterson headlined the weekend for the Hawkeyes. Dodge finished fifth in the 100-meter dash at 10.67 on April 27, a day after he tied his personal best in the event at 10.49 in the preliminaries.

Dodge notches personal best

"He's just running awesome," Iowa coach Larry Wiecek said. "He's really on top of his game."

Dodge ran the second leg on the second-place 400-meter relay team with Juan Coleman, Peterson, and Zack Digney. The foursome finished in 40.23, just behind Georgia in 40.07.

"I think that team has a lot of potential to go under 40 seconds and contend for the Big Ten championship," Wiecek said.

Guerrero knocks ball, Cardinals out

MONTREAL — Vladimir Guerrero had his second multi-homer game of the season and 15th of his career. Guerrero and Lee Stevens hit consecutive homers off Matt Morris (4-2) in a four-run fourth inning, and Guerrero homered again in the fifth.
 Tbo Ohka (3-2), who gave up the winning run in the 11th inning on April 26, allowed two runs and seven hits in 7 1/2 innings, matching the longest outing of his career. He struck out a career-high seven and walked none.
Yankees 4, Mariners 3
SEATTLE — In their first trip West this season, the New York Yankees repeated their success from last year's playoffs.
 Rookie Nick Johnson's two-out RBI double in the ninth inning broke a tie and gave the Yankees a 4-3 victory over the Seattle Mariners on Sunday.
Athletics 10, White Sox 0
OAKLAND, Calif. — Tim Hudson (3-2) allowed three hits in eight innings, and Billy Koch pitched a 1-2-3 ninth as Oakland completed a three-game sweep.
 Eric Chavez homered and had four RBIs, and the A's took advantage of three errors to score four unearned runs in winning their season-high fourth straight. Oakland outscored Chicago 32-5 in the series and extended its winning streak against the White Sox to 10.
Tigers 5, Twins 4
DETROIT — Bobby Higginson singled home the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth as Detroit completed its first series sweep in 34 tries since last July.

 Minnesota trailed 4-1 before Corey Koskie's two-run homer off Jose Paniagua in the eighth and Cristian Guzman's RBI grounder in the ninth.
Orioles 13, Royals 0
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Scott Erickson (3-2) pitched a four-hitter for his first shutout since Sept. 7, 1999, and Baltimore completed its first three-game sweep since September 2000.
 Marty Cordova tied a career-high with four hits while scoring three runs and driving in two. Geronimo Gil had three hits and three RBIs, including a two-run double in the eighth, and Tony Batista hit a two-run double, giving him 11 RBIs in the series.
Dodgers 5-4, Cubs 4-1
CHICAGO — Kazuhisa Ishii became the first Los Angeles rookie to win his first five decisions since Fernando Valenzuela in 1981, beating the Chicago Cubs, 5-4, Sunday in the opener of a double-header.
 Ishii (5-0), in his first year from Japan, allowed one run and three hits in seven innings, striking out eight.
D'backs 5, Marlins 4
MIAMI — Curt Schilling (5-1) nung four runs and six hits.
 Steve Finley, Damian Miller, and Mark Grace hit consecutive two-out solo home runs against rookie Josh Beckett (0-2) in the sixth as Arizona rallied from a 3-2 deficit.

The weekend of the hitless wonders

By Mike Fitzpatrick
 Associated Press
 From Fenway Park to Wrigley Field, at Shea Stadium and in Seattle, fans all around the majors were captivated this weekend by the high drama of low-hit pitching.
 With one no-hitter and a spate of near misses, it seemed as if every few minutes the TV broadcast of one game was interrupted to cut to another for a no-hit update.
 Not even Nolan Ryan, who tossed a record seven no-hitters in his brilliant 27-year career, could have imagined this.
 "I can't figure it. I mean, if you had Pedro Martinez, and Roger Clemens, and Randy Johnson, and Greg Maddux all pitching on the same day, then maybe you could explain it," said Hall of Famer Tom Seaver, who threw a no-hitter for the Cincinnati Reds. He is now an analyst on New York Mets' telecasts.

 "When you look at the trend in baseball the last few years, the way hitting and scoring and offense are up, what's happening this weekend is an aberration," Seaver said. "But I like to see it."
 Pitchers are always ahead of the hitters in April, the old saying goes. Still, this was a little extreme.
 In a remarkable two-day span, five starters held opponents hitless into at least the seventh inning, although only Boston's Derek Lowe finished the job.

 "I was rooting for him. Good for him," said Florida's A.J. Burnett, who pitched a no-hitter last year and watched the final three outs of Lowe's no-no in the Marlins' clubhouse. "It's an awesome feeling."
 And these masterpieces on the mound weren't crafted by such All-Star aces as Clemens or Johnson, although both The Rocket and The Big Unit won easily April 26.
 "No, the top performances were turned in by No. 3 starters such as Odalis Perez and Pedro Astacio. They came from a converted closer, a spot starter, and the often-erratic left arm of Shawn Estes.
 Lowe, a bust out of the bullpen last season, pitched Fenway's first no-hitter since 1965 and the first in the majors this season, leading the Red Sox over the Tampa Bay Devil Rays, 10-0, on April 27.

 "I'm such a huge golf guy. I was thinking Tiger Woods in the Masters — finish the deal," Lowe said. "That's what I kept telling myself — you've got to finish it."
 In the end, he was the only guy who did.
 Perez and Estes flirted with perfection on April 26. Astacio shut down Milwaukee for 6 1/2 innings on April 27. And Yankees lefty Ted Lilly took perhaps the most unlikely gem into the eighth against Seattle on April 27.

N.Y., Toronto move to seven

By Ursula Reel
Associated Press

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — In simple white lettering on a black screen above the ice, the video monitor implored the New York Islanders to win "For Kenny and Michael."

They did. Kip Miller and Mariusz Czerkawski scored 38 seconds apart early in the third period as the Islanders — playing without their steadiest defenseman and captain — tied their first-round series with the Toronto Maple Leafs with a 5-3 victory Sunday night.

Game 7 will be Tuesday night in Toronto.

Questionable hits by the Maple Leafs in Game 5 left Kenny Jonsson sidelined indefinitely with a concussion and Michael Peca out at least six months with a torn ligament in his knee.

After Czerkawski's second goal of the game gave the Islanders a 5-2 lead at 3:49, the rowdy Nassau Coliseum crowd chanted, "Michael Peca! Michael Peca!"

Miller, who spent the first half of the season in the AHL, scored at 3:11 of the third for his third goal of the series. He then assisted on Czerkawski's goal.

Adrian Aucoin and Alexei Yashin also scored for the Islanders, who had the worst record in the league last season.

Wade Belak, Jonas Hoglund and Gary Roberts scored for Toronto, which remained without Mats Sundin (broken wrist) and Mikael Renberg (hamstring/pelvis).

Islanders goalie Chris Osgood turned in a strong game, stopping 31 shots.

Curtis Joseph alternated between brilliant and baffling for Toronto. He made spectacular stops in difficult situations but also faltered. He couldn't be blamed much for Czerkawski's second goal — he had been tackled behind the net by teammate Bryan McCabe. Joseph came out of net to clear the puck but got in the way of the racing McCabe. Czerkawski whipped the puck into an open net.

Joseph finished with 29 saves. Roberts scored a power-play goal at 6:41 of the third to close the gap to 5-3.

Aucoin gave the Isles a 3-2 lead at 1:35 of the second period off a picture-perfect power-play set up. At the point, Yashin slid the puck across to Roman Hamrlik, who batted the puck to the ice with his glove and sent it down to Shawn Bates at the left post. Bates' shot hit the far post but caromed out to an unmanned Aucoin, who flipped it into the open net.

Capriati-less Fed Cup squad embarrassed by Austrians

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Kicking Jennifer Capriati off the Fed Cup team cost the United States a chance at the title and led to an embarrassing first-round defeat to Austria.

The Americans, winners of a record 17 titles, were eliminated Sunday when Barbara Schwartz upset Fed Cup rookie Meghann Shaughnessy, the fill-in at No. 1 singles following Capriati's ouster for breaking a team rule prohibiting her from practicing on her own.

"They were obviously the underdogs here, and a lot of things went their way from the beginning with Capriati," Shaughnessy said. "I'm disappointed it came to this; there's no reason why we shouldn't have had four people here with the same goal in mind."

Schwartz, ranked 75th in the world, followed her April 27 victory over Monica Seles with a 4-6, 7-6 (7), 9-7 win over Shaughnessy to give Austria its clinching third win in the best-of-five match.

After beating Shaughnessy with a crosscourt backhand that dropped out of Shaughnessy's reach, Schwartz threw her arms in the air and screamed as her teammates ran onto the court to hug her.

She then grabbed an Austrian flag and ran around the court as Shaughnessy packed up her things and walked off, waving slightly to the capacity crowd at the Old Providence Racquet Club.

"For us, when we came here, little Austria, it was the big United States, the No. 1 nation and such great players," Schwartz said. "It's unbelievable for us to win here. I don't even find the right words."

Austria snapped a seven-match losing streak to the United States in Fed Cup play; the Americans were eliminated in the first round for the first time since 1997.

In other first-round play, No. 3 Kim Clijsters pulled out of Belgium's match against Australia because of a shoulder injury, but Justin Henin won in straight sets to lead the defending champions to a 3-1 victory.

Slovakia won the final doubles match and beat Switzerland 3-2, and Croatia also needed a victory in the last doubles match to defeat the Czech Republic, 3-2. Italy shut out Sweden, 5-0, Germany slipped past Russia, 3-2, France edged Argentina 3-2, and Spain overcame a first-match loss to beat Hungary 4-1.

The United States won consecutive titles in 1999 and 2000 but withdrew from competition last year because of security concerns following the Sept. 11 attacks.

Title eludes Sampras on clay

By Michael A. Lutz
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Andy Roddick outslugged Pete Sampras to successfully defend his title in the U.S. Men's Clay Court Championship, rolling to a 7-6 (9), 6-3 victory Sunday.

The 19-year-old Roddick had 13 aces to 12 for Sampras, who was trying to win a tournament for the first time since his seventh Wimbledon title in 2000. Sampras is winless in 25 events.

"Obviously, it's so much fun to play against someone who was one of my heroes growing up," Roddick said. "It's fun when you can come out and hit some balls."

Most of the action took place in the first set, as both players refused to give in on their serves. Sampras fought off four set points before he missed a volley charging in behind his serve at the fifth break point.

"I wasn't getting down in the first set because I was hitting my shots," Roddick said.

Roddick, who lost only one set in five matches in the tournament, is 2-0 against Sampras, including a 7-6, 6-3 victory last year.

Sampras slowed in the second set, and Roddick broke Sampras in the eighth game of the second set when Sampras hit a forehand into the net.

Roddick boosted his career record in Houston to 12-0 and won it at the first match point when Sampras' backhand service return was long. Sampras had a break point in the game but then made two-straight errors to bring the match to the final point.

Sampras was upbeat despite the loss. He threw his racket in mock anger in the sixth game of the second set when former President George Bush entered the stadium, holding up play briefly.

"When I saw President Bush, I knew I was in trouble," Sampras said, joking. "No, Andy really played a great first set. I had a couple of chances to squeak it out, but Andy was great."

Roddick won the Clay Court title a year ago and led the United States Davis Cup team to a quarterfinals victory over Spain three weeks ago.

L.A. haunts Avs into game 7

By John Marshall

DENVER — Not again. That's what the Colorado Avalanche are thinking after blowing two chances to close out the Los Angeles Kings for the second year in a row.

"It's kind of a shame," Colorado forward Dan Hinote said Sunday. "Obviously, we've dug ourselves in a hole, but we've been here before, and we know what it takes to come out and play our game."

Colorado had a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series, but Los Angeles has won the last two games to force a Game 7 tonight in Denver.

It's nearly identical to the Western Conference semifinals last year, when the Kings rallied from a 3-1 deficit before losing to the Avalanche, 5-1, in Game 7.

Only 16 of 186 teams have advanced after trailing 3-1, including Los Angeles against Edmonton in 1989, but the Kings have the momentum, and they are confident after coming so close last year.

"They have a great team, but we felt we could beat them last year — even more so this year," Kings defenseman Mathieu Schneider said. "Last year, we were trying to slay a giant. This year, we feel like we're on equal ground."

This year's series started off

Last year, we were trying to slay a giant. This year, we feel like we're on equal ground.

— Mathieu Schneider, Kings defenseman with plenty of open ice and even more scoring — 15 goals in the first two games — but it has tightened up considerably over the past three games.

As the teams have become more familiar with each other, the checking has been tighter, the scoring chances fewer, and the hits more punishing.

The increased intensity also has led to some frayed nerves.

The Avalanche have repeatedly complained about the rough treatment of Peter Forsberg, saying the Kings have intentionally tried to hurt their star forward after he missed the regular season because of injuries.

The Kings took exception to a hit by Colorado's Brad Larsen on defenseman Andreas Lilja in the final seconds of Game 6, which Los Angeles won, 3-1.

Larsen's hit led to a heated exchange between Kings coach Andy Murray and Colorado's Bob Hartley on the bench, and the two traded barbs after the game. Hartley made a reference to Murray being 4-6 — he's really 5-10 — and Murray questioned Hartley's reputation.

Both coaches had cooled by Sunday, but neither was about to back down.

"He [Hartley] doesn't have to answer to me," Murray said. "He does have a Stanley Cup ring, and he can hold it up to me at any time he wants and say, 'You don't have one of these.' And he's right."

"But sometimes there are core values that are more important than anything. I will never compromise my values for the sake of winning. If that's what it takes, I'll do something else."

Hartley said his remarks were made in the heat of the moment, but he also doesn't think Larsen did anything wrong.

"I didn't know what he was accusing us of because I thought Brad Larsen had high-sticked someone, or slashed someone, or crosschecked," Hartley said. "Nothing on the tape shows me we did anything stupid out there. We're in the playoffs, so everyone is expected to play hard. The Kings play hard, and so do we."

If the Avalanche are to repeat the outcome of last year's series, they will have to find a way to generate some offense against Los Angeles goalie Felix Potvin.

French federation chief comes out fighting on eve of hearing

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — The French federation chief at the center of the Olympic skating scandal case said Sunday he was the victim of a plot and threatened to go to court if he's not cleared.

"We will go to the end to defend our rights and the reputation of our federation," French skating chief Didier Gailhaguet said in an interview with the Associated Press.

He refused to rule out appealing the case to the European Court of Human Rights.

Gailhaguet's statements came on the eve of a two-day hearing at which the International Skating Union hopes to finally bury the judging controversy in pairs that galvanized the Salt Lake City Games.

French judge Marie-Reine Le Gougne was suspended for alleged misconduct after briefly saying she had been pressured by Gailhaguet to throw her vote to the victorious Russian pair.

She has since recanted that statement and is taking an approach similar to the federation chiefs.

Le Gougne argued that her admission came under emotional distress and that she voted for the Russians in good conscience. She said she is a "scapegoat" and is threatening to take the case to the Court for Arbitration of Sport.

Gailhaguet, who also is an skating-union council member, said he was the target of a plot within the world federation led by British and North American factions.

"If you want to kill a dog, you say it has rabies," he said. "But watch out, the dog can turn into a wolf. I will not be done in by Anglo-Saxon lobbying."

McLaren suspended; Zednik out of hospital

BOSTON — The NHL suspended Boston defenseman Kyle McLaren on Sunday for rest of the Bruins' playoff series against Montreal for the hit that sent Richard Zednik to the hospital.

"McLaren delivered a dangerous blow to the head of his opponent and caused significant injuries to the opposing player," said Colin Campbell, the league's executive vice president and director of hockey operations. "Mr. McLaren clearly must be held accountable for his actions in this regard."

Campbell, who met with McLaren on April 27, said he did not think the hit was a deliberate attempt to injure, and he added that he took into account McLaren's reputation as a clean player.

"The player is not a dirty player," Bruins general manager Mike O'Connell said Saturday.

Bruins President Harry Sinden said Sunday the team did not agree with the suspension but "accepts and respects" it and considers the matter closed.

McLaren was given a match penalty and suspended indefinitely after hitting Zednik with 1:18 left in the Bruins' 5-2 victory on April 25 that evened the best-of-seven series at two games apiece. After the game, Canadiens coach Michel Therrien accused McLaren of a cheap shot and vowed revenge.

NASCAR

Johnson victorious in NAPA

By Mike Harris
Associated Press

FONTANA, Calif. — Jimmie Johnson, one of NASCAR's suddenly omnipresent young guns, parlayed a gas-only pit stop into his first Winston Cup victory Sunday in the NAPA Auto Parts 500.

The 26-year-old Johnson held off 23-year-old Kurt Busch, who got his first Cup win last month in Bristol, Tenn., by approximately six car-lengths on the 2-mile oval at California Speedway.

"We knew it would be close," said Johnson, who won in only his 13th start. "These guys just let me do my job, and we got it done. This is so cool."

It appeared Busch had the best car on the track in the first half of the 250-lap race, building a lead of 15 seconds before a caution flag on lap 141 took him back to the other contenders.

After that, it a see-saw battle among Busch, former series champion Dale Jarrett, Ricky Rudd, and Johnson.

Those four were battling, with Jarrett out front, when Kevin Harvick and Dale Earnhardt Jr., two more of the 20-something stars, wrecked in the fourth turn on lap 229, bringing out the fifth and final caution flag.

The left rear tire on Harvick's car blew as he raced through turn three at high speed. As the car began to veer down the banked track, Earnhardt's car slammed hard into the driver side, sending both into the concrete wall.

Harvick was not injured, but Earnhardt came out on crutches; he was to have a sore right ankle evaluated at his home in North Carolina.

Jimmie Johnson celebrates in victory lane after winning the NASCAR NAPA 500 at the California Speedway in Fontana, Calif.

Most of the lead lap cars pitted, but Bill Elliott, who stayed on the track, was just ahead of Johnson for the restart on lap 237. Johnson's Hendrick Motorsports Chevrolet shot past Elliott's Dodge in the first turn and never trailed the rest of the way. Busch, driving a Ford, moved past both Elliott and Rudd and grabbed the runner-up spot on lap 247, but he couldn't catch Johnson, who crossed the finish line 0.620 seconds ahead.

MEN'S GOLF

Iowa turns in seventh place finish

By Travis Brown
The Daily Iowan

The true test of a team is how well it can overcome adversity.

Over the weekend, the men's golf team stood up to the most adversity it has faced all season and made the best of it. With its top player ill and poor weather making for unfavorable playing conditions, the Hawkeyes gave a tremendous effort and finished in a tie for seventh at the Bruce Fossum Spartan Invitational in East Lansing, Mich. Iowa finished with a three-round total of 909 (299-306-304).

Junior Bo Anderson started the tournament off hot, firing a one-under par 71 in the tournament's first round to put him in a tie for second place individually. However, soon his feverish pace gave way to a fever, and he finished the tournament with a pair of 79s to tie for 36th place.

Toledo won the Spartan Invitational with a score of 876, the third tournament it has won this spring. Big Ten teams Illinois, Michigan State, Minnesota, and Northwestern, which tied with Kent State, rounded out the top five. While finishing behind four of its conference foes, Iowa bested four Big Ten teams in the tournament.

"For the number of teams in the Big Ten that we beat or hung with, we had a great tournament," said Iowa coach Terry Anderson. "We were in the hunt. If Bo had been healthy, he would have had a great tournament."

The highest finishing Hawkeyes were juniors Aaron Krueger and Mike Tapper, each with a 54-hole score of 226, good for 23rd place.

"In today's [final] round, Aaron Krueger's 73 and Mike Tapper's 74 were great performances under the conditions we played in," Terry Anderson said.

Junior Kevin Johnson tied for 40th place with a 230, and senior Tyler Stith tied for 64th place.

"Stith was thinking ahead to next week," Anderson said. "But he's a gamer. He'll be ready to go. To be an individual Big Ten champion is one of his goals."

Terry Anderson is pleased with how the team is playing heading into next week's Big Ten match. Iowa will host the championships on Friday through May 5 at Finkbine Golf Course.

"We seem to be doing some gelling and some good things," he said. "We're looking forward to getting home, and hopefully, having some nice weather for the Big Ten championships, and for Bo Anderson to get healthy."

WOMEN'S GOLF BIG TEN TOURNAMENT

Hawkeyes surprise conference

By Donovan Burba
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team, picked to finish last, wrapped up its season over the weekend with a surprising eighth-place finish at the Big Ten championships at the Stone Creek Golf Course in Urbana, Ill. The Hawkeyes shot a four-round team score of 1,296 to tie with Penn State. Ohio State won the tournament with 1,220.

Individually, the Hawkeyes were led by freshman Megan George, whose 324 was good enough to put her in 34th. Fellow freshman Liz Bennett carded a 326 to place 38th. Rounding out the Hawkeyes were Heather Suhr (81-75-87-85 — 328, 42nd), Laura Holmes (85-76-83-87 — 331, 47th), Maggie Gableman (78-82-85-89 — 334, 53rd), and Shannon Fleming (79-82-89-86 — 336, 56th).

"I think it was a good team

I think it was a good team effort. We used a little bit of everybody.

event," Iowa coach Diane Thomason said. "We used a little bit of everybody — everyone chipped in when we needed her."

Ohio State's Mollie Fankhauser took home the tournament championship, shooting a 304 to defeat three other players by one stroke. Fankhauser turned in the best round of the weekend with a four-under-par 68 on April 26.

Iowa was in 10th place after the first two rounds of competition but rebounded nicely after the April 27 competition was postponed because of rain. While the Hawkeyes got better on Sunday, the weather showed less improvement.

"All the scores were high today [Sunday] because of the weather," Thomason said. "I felt like we beat a lot of good teams, it just doesn't look like it [because of the high scores]."

It was the last tournament of the spring for the Hawkeyes, who struggled through the early part of the season before finishing a strong third at their own invitational April 13-14. Iowa graduates no seniors this year, meaning that next year's squad will be more experienced across the board.

"This was probably the most difficult tournament of the year," Thomason said. "We're happy with our finish, and with a team with no seniors, the future looks bright."

WOMEN'S TENNIS BIG TEN TOURNAMENT

Revenge sweet for Neykova

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

Iowa senior tennis player Toni Neykova went to the Big Ten Tournament to settle a few scores, and she didn't leave empty-handed, though the Hawks were eliminated in the semifinals.

In the regular Big Ten season, Neykova lost just two matches — against Northwestern's Marine Piriou and Illinois' Jennifer McGaffigan. During the Hawks' 4-1 victory against the Illini on April 26, Neykova's match was abandoned before she could secure a victory over McGaffigan. Iowa was eliminated 4-2 on April 27, but not before Neykova upset Piriou in straight sets (6-2, 6-2).

"The bad part about the Illinois match was that we won too quickly," Iowa coach Paul Wardlaw said. "Toni didn't get a chance to avenge her loss. She'll have an excellent chance to be Big Ten Player of the Year because she's beaten everyone in the league except [McGaffigan]."

The Wildcats went on to win their fourth-straight Big Ten championship, 4-1, over Wisconsin.

Against the Hawkeyes, Northwestern took the doubles point and three of five singles contests from No. 5 seeded Iowa. In No. 3 doubles, sophomore Cassie Haas and freshman Gloria Okino won the Hawkeyes' only doubles match, 8-6, over Ruth Barnes and Andrea Yung.

"We really played a great match against them," Wardlaw said. "We lost the doubles point and were down, but the game was a lot closer than the score looked. It was really a matter of us pulling out third sets in two of the matches, so for awhile it looked do-able and it almost did get done."

Assisted by Neykova's victory in singles, the momentum briefly took a turn in Iowa's favor as Okino defeated Barnes in straight sets (6-4, 6-2).

Northwestern swept victories from Steffi Hoch, Deni Alexandrova, and Pascale Veraverbeke. Cassie Haas' No. 3 singles match was abandoned.

On April 26, the Hawkeyes advanced to the semifinal round with a 4-1 victory over Illinois, taking the doubles point and three of four singles matches from the No. 4 seeded Illini.

Neykova and Alexandrova downed Cynthia Goulet and McGaffigan at No. 1 doubles, 9-7, and Haas and Okino dominated Tiffany Eklov and Eldina Fazlic, 8-1. The No. 2 match was abandoned.

In singles, Haas downed Fazlic in straight sets (6-3, 6-4). In No. 4, Alexandrova defeated Choe, and Veraverbeke won in No. 5 over Goulet. Illinois' lone point came in No. 2, where Eklov defeated Hoch (7-5, 7-5). The Hawkeyes finished the season 9-13 overall and 5-5 in Big Ten play; they will wait for an announcement — expected on Thursday — for NCAA individual and team bids.

Dolezal, Dodge sign as free agents

Two more Iowa football players, Mike Dolezal and Tim Dodge, signed free agent contracts with NFL teams over the weekend, upping the number of this year's Hawkeye seniors with professional tryouts to 10.

Dolezal, a linebacker from Mahtomedi, Minn., signed with the Green Bay Packers on April 26. While lettering four years for the Hawkeyes, Dolezal racked up exactly 200 tackles, started the last six games of the 2001 season, and was a four-time member of the Big Ten All-Academic team. Dolezal will join Iowa defensive end Aaron Kampman as a new member of the Packers' roster.

Dodge, a wide receiver from Britt, Iowa, capped off a strong weekend at the Drake Relays by signing with the Tennessee Titans on April 27. Dodge switched between wideout and defensive back during his time with the Hawkeyes. In 2001, he caught nine passes for 112 yards after starting nine games at defensive back in 2000. Dodge also runs track for the Hawkeyes, where he has been an All-American and Big Ten champion on relay squads for the Hawkeyes.

"I didn't really care where I went," he said. "But Tennessee seemed to be the best place for me. It was looking to use me for special teams first, then as a wide receiver. My best chance at making a roster will be on special teams."

Ladell Betts, Kahli Hill, Jeremy Allen, Alonzo Cunningham, Kyle

McCann, Jerry Montgomery, and Derrick Pickens will join Dodge, Dolezal, and Kampman in NFL minicamps in the coming weeks.

"I relate it to being a walk-on at Iowa," Dodge said. "I started at the bottom and had to work my way up. As a free agent, it is like being at the bottom. I am starting that process all over again. I just have to work my way up."

Volunteers needed at Finkbine Big Tens

The UI is looking for volunteers to serve as a walking scorers at the Big Ten men's golf championship, Friday through May 5 at Finkbine.

Walking scorers will be required to walk the course with groups of golfers and to periodically report scores to the scoring system, which will provide online scores and results throughout the tournament. The tournament includes 36 holes of competition on Friday, and 18 holes on both Saturday and May 5.

Tee times are scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Friday, 9 a.m. on Saturday, and 8 a.m. on May 5. The scorers will be asked to report 30 minutes prior to tee times, and they will be expected to work a shift that will last from four to four and a half hours.

Each volunteer at the Big Ten championships will be rewarded with a free round of golf (cart not included) at Finkbine this summer.

Those interested in volunteering for any of the days should contact

Les Steenlage at (319) 335-9438.

Men's rowing ousted in unofficial Big Tens

The Iowa men's rowing team competed April 27 in the Un-official Big Ten championship regatta hosted by the Indianapolis Rowing Center.

The Hawkeyes were overpowered by No. 18-ranked Michigan, Purdue, and Ohio State by several boat lengths of open water in the novice 8+. Iowa overcame Notre Dame, one of the nonconference teams invited, in the final 250 meters for a fourth-place finish.

The novice 4+ event proved to stimulate the Hawkeyes. Iowa's A and B boats were running close throughout most of the 2000-meter race, with Ohio State keeping pace. With more than half the race down, the Buckeyes began moving on both Iowa boats.

Iowa A had a couple of boat-lengths lead when poor blade work almost cost it the gold. However, the crew quickly recovered and held off the two boats for the victory. Iowa B fought it out with Ohio State but lost in the final few strokes to bring home the bronze.

Iowa will take on St. Ambrose University in Des Moines this weekend in its final race of the year.

Waters selected to all-Big Ten team

Though the Iowa men's tennis team took an early exit over the weekend in the Big Ten Tournament, there was good news for junior Stuart Waters.

Waters was selected to the All-Big Ten team for the first time in his career. In his first season playing at the No. 1 position, Waters put up a career-best effort, posting a 14-8 record, 6-4 in Big Ten duals.

During the season, Waters was named Big Ten Player of the Week on April 3 after defeating Penn State's No. 68 Jamie Gresh and No. 20 Phil Metz of Ohio State. Waters was also subsequently ranked No. 95 nationally for the first time in his career and finished the season one position back at 96th.

The selection marks the 28th Iowa men's tennis player to be selected to the All-Big Ten team in the school's history. Bruce Nagel and Rod Kubat were the Hawkeyes' first inductees in 1973.

Also selected to the team from the Big Ten were: Illinois' Amer Delic, Phil Stolt, and Brian Wilson; Indiana's Milan Rakvica; Michigan's Henry Beam; Minnesota's Thomas Haug and Harsh Mankad; Ohio State's Metz and Jeremy Wurtzman; Penn State's Jamie Gresh; and Wisconsin's Danny Westerman.

quote of the day

It's not bad luck. It's bad pitching. There's a difference.

— Greg Maddux,

providing a brutally frank self-evaluation after the Atlanta Braves were routed by the Arizona Diamondbacks, 11-5.
