Nuisance measures draw sharp criticism

By Peter Rugg
The Daily Iowan

UI students and local residents packed the Iowa City Civic Center on Tuesday, overwhelmingly opposing the proposals of the Neighborhood Housing Relations Task Force during a public forum.

The turnout of more than 50 students, some camping outside with a couch and empty kegs, was described by task-force member Hillary Sale as the most student involvement she'd ever seen.

With few exceptions, university students and residents called the proposals "ridiculous" and "unenforceable," and many felt students were unfairly targeted. Out of a list of 30 proposed ordinances, those most often questioned were the proposals to require permits for parties of more than 30 people and permits in order to purchase for kegs, banning sofas on porches, and withholding grades and diplomas for university students with unpaid city fines.

Former City Councilor Carol deProsse said she was surprised that some of the proposals were even considered.

"When I was here, we never would've touched anything like this," said the Loan Tree resident. "Students today are no worse than they were 30 years ago."

Iowa City resident Paul Carlson, 65, echoed that sentiment.

"I think we need to face up to the fact that we don't like students," he said to the group. "Why don't we just adopt a Sun-down Ordinance. They were

Etc. stunt draws charges

By Tony Robinson
The Daily Iowan

The general manager of Etc. was charged Tuesday with reckless use of fire after he admitted to igniting alcohol in an April 18 stunt that burned at least nine patrons, local authorities said. The move has sparked more of the bar's employees to come forward with their own accounts of the incident as additional charges are being considered, officials said.

Troy David Kline, 304 Fourth Ave. No. 3, Coralville, made his initial appearance in Johnson County court Tuesday on the serious misdemeanor charge; he was released on his own recognizance. He could face up to one year in jail and a $1,500 fine.

The 26-year-old pleaded not guilty on behalf of the bar's managing company, Downtown Etc. LLC, for using an open-flame device in a drinking establishment. Bar-owner Kip Pohl faces a maximum penalty of a $500 fine for the simple misdemeanor. Kline declined comment, and Pohl was unavailable for comment on Tuesday.

Court records said Kline told authorities that the night of the stunt, he poured Everclear — a 190-proof grain alcohol — into the bar well and set it on fire. He then poured more alcohol into the bar well when the fire began to "fizzle out." Witnesses said the additional alcohol flared, burning at least nine people. Although police reports indicate that Pohl told employees not to ignite alcohol on the bar, some witnesses have told the DI that Kline lit the bar's well on fire on more than one occasion.

Contradicting previous media reports and some eyewitness accounts, police said no bar patrons spit a shot of hard liquor into the fire.

Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake said new information could lead to more criminal charges as the investigation continues. Police have interviewed more than 30 witnesses, including some Etc. employees who contacted authorities Tuesday.

"Whenever you arrest someone, more people come forward with their stories," Winkelhake said.

Bar overcrowding going unchecked in Iowa City

By Lyndsay Gross
The Daily Iowan

It's a Friday night at a popular Iowa City bar. Throngs of patrons, in a sea of sweat and spilt beer, seem to move as single entity. Every motion is labored during peak hours.

Iowa City Fire Department officials and the mayor said they know, at times, Iowa City bars violate fire codes by surpassing occupancy limits, but no citations have been issued in the last two years.

Bars are only investigated for overcrowding when a complaint is filed with the Fire Department, said Fire Marshal Roger Jensen.

Firefighters have investigated approximately six complaints in the last two years, including at least one at the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., though no charges were ever filed, Jensen said.

Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman said councilors will discuss the possibility of exerting greater pressure on the department to more vigilantly investigate overcrowding.

Largest group yet leaves Bethlehem's Church of Nativity

By Steve Weizman

BETHLEHEM, West Bank — Twenty-six Palestinian civilians and police emerged one by one Tuesday from the Church of the Nativity, the largest group to leave one of Christianity's holiest shrines since the monthlong standoff began between Israel's army and a group of armed militants inside.

Israel, meanwhile, defied the United Nations and blocked an inquiry into fighting at the Jenin refugee camp, where, Palestinians contend, Israeli soldiers conducted a massacre of civilians in eight days of house-to-house fighting.

U.N. diplomats said Secretary-General Kofi Annan was leaning toward disbanding the mission. Annan said he had done everything possible to meet Israeli demands to modify the mission.

In the West Bank town of Jericho, U.S. and British security experts toured the local prison Tuesday in another step in a U.S.-backed deal designed to release Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat from months of Israeli confinement.

John Keller selected to be Grad College's new dean

By Eric Droze
The Daily Iowan

Following a two-year search, UI officials selected John Keller to be the new Graduate College dean, a decision that may produce lower tuition for some UI graduate students.

Keller, who has been serving as the Graduate College interim dean, was selected after search-committee members narrowed a nationwide search to consider only candidates at the UI. They announced Keller's selection today; he was vying for the spot against John Nelson, a UI political science professor and the director of the Project on Rhetoric of Inquiry.

"I am looking forward to taking on the new position and all of the challenges that go along with it," Keller said.

His primary goals include creating a policy that would lower tuition for UI graduate assistants, a practice that most other graduate schools follow, he said.

The policy, called a tuition-reimbursement program, will be discussed at the beginning of next year. The university's financial situation has prohibited past implementation of the program.

"Tuition remission is very attractive to students whom we would try to recruit," Keller said. "I am confident something will be worked out next year with this issue; I would be very disappointed if it doesn't."

Susan Birrell, the chairwoman of the health, leisure, and sports studies department, led a search committee that sent advertisements nationwide for the position. The committee initially received 45 applications, but it directed the search internally to save money.

Keller was unanimously recommended to UI Provost Jon Whitmore.

"The committee was looking for a candidate who was intellectual, one who worked well with people, and one who will work well with a large variety of constituents," said Connie Brothers, a member of the search committee and a program associate for the Writers' Workshop.

Whitmore said Keller was the top choice because of his previous administrative experience in the Graduate College. "We were looking for someone who has had graduate teaching experience, as well as someone who would be likely to play a leadership role in promoting quality graduate education," Whitmore said.

Keller joined the College of Dentistry in 1988; in 1991, he was promoted to full professor.

Faculty Senate discusses UI's budget-cut plans

The Faculty Senate discussed a report prepared by the 24-member budget-policy advisory committee and presented to UI President Mary Sue Coleman in January regarding the strategies the university ought to take to cope with budget cuts.

The committee said faculty should play an active role. One way to do this would be to award departments that saved the most money or garnered revenue, said law Professor Jonathan Carlson. Another suggestion was to have each department report what it is spending its money on to study spending trends in order to assess the situation, he said.

The group also approved an amendment to the UI smoking policy that would designate one entrance to every university building as a non-smoking area.

Sexual assault reported in dorm

By Paula Mavroudis
The Daily Iowan

UI Public Safety is investigating a report of sexual assault in a residence hall Monday night, the fourth incident of sexual abuse reported to law enforcement this week.

A female UI student reported she was assaulted by an acquaintance who entered her residence hall around Monday, Public Safety officials said.

No charges will be filed until the investigation is completed, said Duane Papke, the associate director of Public Safety.

The name of the residence hall where the incident occurred will not be released in order to protect the identity of the victim, Papke said.

Students in the dorms should not be concerned about their safety because the woman knew the suspect, he said.

"I don't feel that the rest of the campus is in danger," Papke said. A criminal-incident report from Public Safety shows that the number of reported sexual assaults on campus doubled from three in 2000 to six in 2001.

Public Safety officers responded to one other sexual assault this week, and Iowa City police are investigating two incidents reported this weekend.

The incident investigated by Public Safety, filed on April 26, involves an October 2001 incident in Hawkeye Apartments. There is no indication that the most recent reported incident and the past one are connected, Papke said.

Iowa City police are looking into two cases, calling one a sexual-abuse investigation, and the other a similar incident. The incidents occurred in separate apartments in the same Dubuque Street apartment building, police said.

Officials said they are increasing patrol of the Dubuque Street area, said Sgt. Bill Campbell.

Sexual-abuse investigations vary in duration, Campbell said.

"On some of these cases, we never find anything," he said.

Police responded to the first complaint following a report of an intruder entering the apartment and engaging in sexual contact with the victim early Sunday morning. The suspect allegedly left after the victim spoke to him, according to police records.

He is described as a white male, 6 feet tall, medium build, about 25 years old, and with a goatee or some other type of facial hair. He was last seen wearing jeans and a dark-colored shirt.

The investigation of the second complaint from the same Dubuque Street building, which also occurred over the weekend, has not progressed, nor have the police spoken with the woman.

Iowa Agency pushes for statewide ban on all-you-can-drink specials

By Shelbi Thomas
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa agency that regulates alcohol agreed to ask state lawmakers to create a policy requiring a statewide ban on all-you-can-drink specials in efforts to combat excessive and underage drinking.

The Iowa Alcoholic Beverages Commission approved the recommendation Tuesday, which will be given to state legislators to consider during the 2003 session. It includes a number of measures to regulate drinking, including increasing penalties for minors by issuing higher fines, tickets, and driver's license suspensions.

"All the recommendations give local enforcement more tools to combat high-risk drinking in the college community," said Lynn Walding, the administrator for the Iowa Alcoholic Beverages Division. Local officials support the commission's proposal, saying a statewide ban on all-you-can-drink specials would "level the playing field" for Iowa City bars, where a similar ban already exists as part of an alcohol ordinance passed August 2001.

"An all-encompassing statewide ban makes enforcement more consistent and prevents moving around to adjacent localities, depending on which [alcohol] ordinance is more lenient," said

Andrew Matthews, and assistant Iowa City attorney.

The Iowa City ordinance prohibits some drink specials and limits the number of drinks that can be purchased by one person at one time.

The recommendations, with the exception of the proposal for a statewide ban on all-you-can-drink liquor promotions, were passed unanimously by the commission.

Gayle Collins was the only one of the five commissioners not to approve the all-you-can-drink proposal because she felt that if current laws were enforced better, it would not be needed, Walding said.

Rep. Todd Taylor, D-Cedar Rapids, said he would prefer local ordinances over a statewide measure because the problems are generally isolated in larger cities and college towns. Local ordinances would give control to officials who are more familiar with the issues in the town, he said.

"I applaud the idea of having a plan to address the underage and excessive drinking problems because those are two things that need to be universally addressed, but I'd like to see these limits develop at a local level first," he said.

Carolyn Cavitt, the Stepping Up Project interim director, said the group has not yet met to discuss the commission's recommendations, but she expects it to be addressed at its next executive meeting, in mid-May. "Our coalition always stated there's no silver bullet to solve the serious excessive and underage drinking problems we have in Iowa City," she said. "The committee has certainly recognized there is a problem and found several different directions that could help."

President Bush renews 'compassionate' rhetoric

By Sandra Sobleraj
Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — President Bush, on a campaign to win over California and assert his moderate credentials, reprised his "compassionate conservative" theme Tuesday and spoke of his concern for Americans left behind in the economic rebound.

Bush wrapped up two days — and $4.5 million in fund raising — in California, trying to help conservative Bill Simon's uphill challenge to Democratic Gov. Gray Davis.

The president also tended to his own political image as he courted the California voters who rejected him in 2000 by more than 1 million ballots.

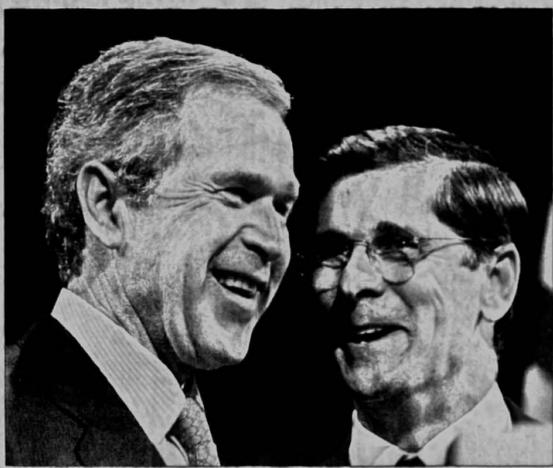

In his nearly year and a half in office, Bush has bolstered his conservative record by championing tax cuts, increases in Defense spending, business-friendly regulation, and an energy policy palatable to oil companies. He also rolled back some environmental regulations and choked off funds to family-planning groups allied with abortion rights.

But as Bush now looks to the November elections, which will decide control of Congress, and lays the groundwork for a 2004 re-election campaign, what he presented to Californians on Tuesday was another side of his agenda.

"America doesn't need more big government," Bush said inside a Silicon Valley-area convention hall.

"Yet we cannot have an indifferent government, either. We are a generous and caring people. We don't believe in a sink-or-swim society. The policies of our government must heed the universal call of all faiths to love a neighbor as we would want to be loved ourselves."

He condemned bigotry and hatred, making a comment about France, where several synagogues have been recently attacked and where ultra-rightist Jean-Marie Le Pen, accused of anti-Semitic statements, seeks to unseat President Jacques Chirac in the May 5 national election.

"We reject the ancient evil of anti-Semitism, whether it is practiced by the killers of Daniel Pearl or by those who burn synagogues in France," Bush said.

Pearl, a Wall Street Journal reporter, was kidnapped and murdered in Pakistan.

Bush used the word "compassion" 16 times in the 37-minute speech, his most formal and comprehensive of recent weeks.

The speech gathered Bush's entire agenda — foreign policy, free trade, health care, education, welfare overhaul, and more — under a single theme.

"I call my philosophy and approach compassionate conservatism. It is compassionate to actively help our fellow citizens in need. It is conservative to insist on responsibility and on results," Bush said.

He tailored his remarks at Parkside Hall, and later at the fund-raiser, to emphasize his concern for workers here who were hit especially hard by the recession and tumult in the technology sector.

The recession is over, Bush said, "yet this vital region reminds us that a lot of work remains to be done."

"I understand people are hurting here in the Silicon Valley ... So long as people can't find work, I'm worried," he said.

This trip, on the heels of a long weekend at his Texas ranch, was as much about helping Simon as testing the California waters before the time comes to decide on making a serious bid for the state in 2004.

Bush also sought to strengthen his coattails for Republican congressional candidates hoping to ride the president's post-Sept. 11 popularity to victory in November. With Bush so focused on the war against terrorism, Democrats have laid claim to domestic issues and cast Bush as an extreme conservative.

FBI links charity to Al Qaeda

By Mike Robinson
Associated Press

CHICAGO — An Islamic charity and its director were charged with perjury Tuesday and accused by the FBI of supporting terrorists who tried to obtain nuclear weapons for Osama bin Laden and plotted to assassinate the pope.

Federal agents said the Benevolence International Foundation had links to bin Laden going back decades and moved sizable amounts of cash for his Al Qaeda terrorist network during the 1990s.

As recently as 2000, the FBI said, the foundation forwarded $685,000 to Islamic guerillas trained by bin Laden's group to fight Russians in Chechnya.

The FBI also said that members of Al Qaeda have held positions within the charity and that a man who tried to obtain uranium for bin Laden even listed the charity's Illinois address as his home.

"This complaint alleges Benevolence International Foundation was supporting violence secretly," U.S. Attorney Patrick Fitzgerald said.

Enaam Arnaout, the head of the suburban Palos Hills-based charity, was arrested at his home Tuesday and described by authorities as a trusted acquaintance of bin Laden. The 39-year-old Syrian-born naturalized American was ordered held for a hearing May 7.

"I am confident that Mr. Arnaout is not engaged in terrorist activities, nor has he supported such activities knowingly or directly," said his attorney, Stephen Levy. He suggested his client would be "more than helpful" if federal officials grant Arnaout immunity from prosecution.

An attorney for the charity, Matthew Piers, did not return a call.

The foundation is one of two Chicago-area Islamic charities whose assets were frozen Dec. 14, 2001, on suspicion of supporting terrorism. Federal agents also raided their offices that day. The co-founder of Global Relief Foundation, the other organization, is being held on an immigration charge.

Both groups have sued the government, denying they have anything to do with terrorism and asking that their assets be released. Arnaout and Benevolence International were charged Tuesday with lying under oath in that case when they said the foundation doesn't fund terrorism or military activity.

Federal investigators have been watching Benevolence International for years. An FBI affidavit said a search of the group's trash in 1999 turned up a clipping from a Seattle newspaper focusing on the danger of a smallpox epidemic.

Brochures for Benevolence International describe it as a humanitarian organization "dedicated to helping those afflicted by wars and natural disasters" in Afghanistan and other countries. IRS reports show that it received $3.3 million in contributions for the year ending April 2000.

The FBI affidavit said the charity was founded in the 1980s by Saudi sheik Adil Abdul Galil Batargy, a bin Laden associate, and that control of the group was later given to Arnaout.

According to the affidavit, Benevolence International had links to people involved in the 1993 World Trade Center bombing, a plot to bomb U.S. airlines, and a plan to assassinate Pope John Paul II during his 1995 visit to the Philippines.

The affidavit does not accuse Arnaout or the charity of involvement in the alleged plots. But it says they lied about their ties to terrorists who were involved.

Commencements to reflect 9/11

By Arlene Levinson
Associated Press

Shenaz Abreo knew she and her fellow seniors couldn't donate the typical fountain or benches as their parting gift to Northwest Missouri State University — not after Sept. 11.

Instead, they enlisted schoolmates to fill a wall in the student union with a variety of artwork and written pieces titled "Triumph Through Tragedy."

"That everything can end in a split second — it scared a lot of the students," said Abreo, the class president.

As college-graduation season gets into full swing, many other schools are also revamping commencement traditions to reflect a school year like no other.

Full-semester courses were just hitting their stride on most campuses when the terrorists struck. Soon, college life included blood drives and prayer vigils, forums on terrorism, and crowded courses on Islam.

Now, as the year winds down, the attacks are being remembered in the choice of commencement speakers, class gifts, and patriotic flourishes.

Sandra Apgar, an assistant professor of sociology at Sinclair Community College in Dayton, Ohio, was picked to address her school's graduates June 15 after she spent her three-week December break in New York, counseling grieving families as a Red Cross volunteer.

"It was difficult to figure out what to say," she admitted. But she thought of the families, what aiding them gave back to her, and found her theme: life lessons about faithfulness, gratitude, and living in the moment.

Among other speakers: Leslie Robertson, the trade center's structural engineer, will address graduates of the College of Engineering at Penn State University. Former New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani will speak at Syracuse University's graduation.

For the first time in memory, the University of Georgia commencement will open with ROTC cadets presenting the Stars and Stripes (and the state flag) and the singing of the national anthem.

Graduating seniors are giving Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania three flags — the American, state, and university standards — and three flagpoles in memory of those killed Sept. 11.

Some memorials will celebrate the lives of those who perished that day.

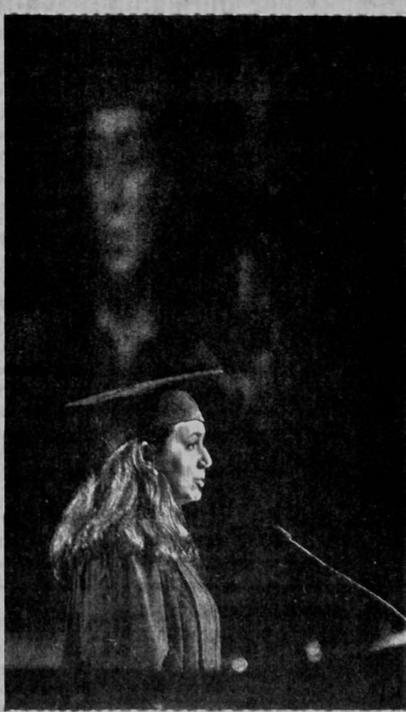

University of Bridgeport student Kiran Gopu was to receive his master's degree in computer science this spring; the 25-year-old Indian citizen died in the towers, where he had just begun an internship. On May 12, the Connecticut school will bestow his degree posthumously.

Two honorary doctorates also will be given posthumously to the Rev. Mychal Judge, the Roman Catholic chaplain to the New York Fire Department, who was killed by falling debris. The Franciscan priest will be honored by his alma mater, St. Bonaventure University in Olean, N.Y., and by Siena College in Loudonville, N.Y., where he once worked.

No school felt the attacks' impact more than the Borough of Manhattan Community College. One of its buildings, now closed, sits beside what was 7 World Trade Center. The destruction tore corners off the newly renovated college building and displaced thousands of students.

Classes were suspended for three weeks while city officials turned the main campus, just a few blocks north of the devastation, into an emergency command center. Rescue crews worked, ate, slept, and showered at the school, which lost six students in the trade center.

House panel snubs Andersen request

By Marcy Gordon

WASHINGTON — A House committee investigating the Enron affair is refusing to give Arthur Andersen documents related to interviews of Andersen's chief Enron auditor.

The House Energy and Commerce Committee is citing constitutional grounds in its refusal to comply with a subpoena from Andersen. The accounting firm is scheduled to face trial May 6 on a criminal obstruction charge for destroying documents related to the Enron case. The subpoena was delivered April 25 to the Office of General Counsel of the House.

In demanding documents that lawmakers are loath to turn over, embattled Andersen may be trying to buy time in the criminal trial, some analysts suggested.

"We're going to fight it," Ken Johnson, a spokesman for committee Chairman Rep. Billy Tauzin, R-La., said Tuesday. "This information clearly is protected by the Constitution's speech-and-debate clause."

Under the Constitution, that clause gives members of Congress, and sometimes members of their staffs, immunity in some circumstances from legal processes, such as responding to questions.

Andersen "has an uphill battle to get this resolved before its trial," said Mark Tushnet, a professor of constitutional law at Georgetown University.

The accounting firm may want to leave "its options open while it tries to negotiate a solution with prosecutors," Tushnet suggested.

The episode recalled a move by tobacco company Brown & Williamson in 1994 to force Rep.

Henry Waxman, D-Calif., to hand over confidential documents that Waxman's subcommittee obtained in its investigation of the tobacco industry.

Brown & Williamson's case was argued in court, and lost, by Kenneth Starr, who later became the Whitewater independent counsel.

Michael Gerhardt, who teaches law at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., agreed that "the odds are hugely in favor" of the House committee.

The agreement under which the Andersen auditor, David Duncan, spoke to the committee investigators cannot be violated by a private party, Gerhardt said.

Duncan has pleaded guilty to ordering the shredding of Enron documents and has agreed to cooperate with prosecutors.

The subpoena requests all documents related to the committee investigators' dealings with Duncan, including notes and reports of interviews with him, correspondence, and related documents, Johnson said. At a public committee hearing in January, Duncan invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination and refused to answer questions.

Johnson said there was no "smoking gun" in the interview material from Duncan and that "the idea that we're holding something back is ridiculous."

Rep. Jim Greenwood, R-Pa., the chairman of the panel's investigative subcommittee, said at the January hearing that Duncan had told the investigators he destroyed some of his own Enron documents "in an effort to comply with Andersen's document retention and destruction policies."

Musharraf closes in on 5-year extension

By Kathy Gannon
 Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Gen. Pervez Musharraf moved toward winning five more years as Pakistan's president in a nationwide referendum Tuesday, although the apparent low voter turnout could weaken his authority in cracking down on Islamic extremism.

Musharraf, who came to power in a bloodless 1999 coup, hoped for a high turnout that would lend him a stamp of legitimacy, but Pakistani voters seemed largely to ignore the referendum. Opposition political parties criticized the referendum as unconstitutional, but they lost their legal effort to prevent Tuesday's vote. Then they called for a voter boycott.

Still, few people expected Musharraf to lose. Final results from the 87,000 polling stations around the country — some of them in prisons and gas stations — were not expected before today.

Information Minister Nisar Memon predicted a voter turnout of approximately 30 percent, down from the 38 percent in the 1997 general elections. More than 60 million people were eligible to vote.

"Most of the polling stations in the province remained deserted throughout the day," Maulana Fazle ur-Rehman, a prominent pro-Taliban cleric in the deeply conservative southwestern Baluchistan province, said in a statement.

Very early returns showed Musharraf advancing toward an overwhelming victory.

With 429,780 votes counted from 708 polling stations six hours after polls closed Tuesday night, 345,427 ballots supported extending Musharraf's term. Only 9,774 opposed it. The rest were ruled invalid.

Before the referendum, the government-run Election Commission relaxed voting rules and even did away with registration lists.

There were reports of irregularities, with people voting more than once and only the flimsiest of identification shown to cast a ballot. Voters were supposed to show drivers' licenses and other photo identification, but officials at one polling station accepted a handwritten note from a woman with only her name written on it.

Elsewhere, a man voted a second time after saying he washed the ink mark off his thumb that referendum organizers said was indelible.

The referendum was seen as an attempt by Musharraf to cement his grip ahead of the October parliamentary elections. Opposition parties and Islamic groups challenged the referendum on grounds that the president normally is elected by Parliament, but the Pakistan Supreme Court declared the referendum legal.

Farrakhan remains banned in Britain

LONDON (AP) — The government won a legal battle Tuesday allowing it to continue barring Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan from Britain on the grounds that his political views are a threat to public order.

Three judges sitting in the Court of Appeal upheld the decision to bar the Chicago-based activist, saying the government had properly balanced the importance of freedom of speech against the risk of disorder.

Home Secretary David Blunkett, in welcoming the decision, said Farrakhan's presence was "not conducive to good public order."

The court said that Farrakhan would not be allowed to appeal its decision to the House of Lords, which is Britain's highest court. But supporters of the black activist, who has been barred from the country since 1986, said they were still considering an appeal.

The ban was imposed first by the government of then Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher because of Farrakhan's negative statements about Jews. Successive governments have argued that they were entitled to continue the ban because of fears that Farrakhan's presence could lead to public disorder.

In 1998, the government maintained the ban after Nation of Islam members disrupted a London inquiry into the racially motivated killing of black teenager Stephen Lawrence.

But lawyers for Farrakhan then challenged the ban, and argued it was "an unlawful and disproportionate interference" with his right to communicate freely with his followers in Britain and contravened the European Convention of Human Rights, which is now enshrined in British law.

Last year, High Court Justice Michael Turner ruled in Farrakhan's favor, saying the government had failed to establish "objective justification" for excluding the activist.

The government said it had good reasons to bar him and appealed. Monica Carss-Frisk, a lawyer representing the government, said at a hearing last month that Farrakhan was "well-known for expressing anti-Semitic and racially divisive views, particularly at a time of political unrest in the Middle East."

Ruling in favor of the government Tuesday, the three judges said that since Turner's decision, "the events of Sept. 11 had intervened."

They said the government ban took into account tensions in the Middle East and the risk of public disorder prompted by a visit by Farrakhan.

Telephone calls to Nation of Islam spokesman Richard Muhammed, in Chicago, for comment on the court's decision were not immediately returned.

Firefight kills 4 Al Qaeda

By Todd Pitman
 Associated Press

BAGRAM, Afghanistan — Firefights between troops led by U.S. Special Forces and suspected Al Qaeda terrorists left up to four of the suspects dead, a U.S. general said Tuesday, detailing attacks in an eastern region where allied leaders say pockets of Al Qaeda fighters are holed up.

No allied soldiers were hurt. Maj. Gen. Franklin Hagenbeck said that while the hunt for Al Qaeda and Taliban fighters has weakened the enemy, it still had the ability to launch "low-level" terror attacks such as suicide and car bombings.

Hagenbeck, the commander of allied troops in Afghanistan, said the clashes occurred approximately one mile from the Pakistan border, northeast of the city of Khost, where coalition forces have been stepping up the hunt for Taliban and Al Qaeda fighters.

In recent days, the U.S. has gained a toehold across the border into Pakistan's lawless tribal lands, where a small American force is assisting Pakistani troops in their search for fugitives.

In the first of the two attacks,

Australian military officials said its troops shot some attackers Monday after coming under mortar and rocket-propelled grenade fire.

"Our soldiers returned fire, killing or wounding two of the terrorists," said Brig. Gen. Mike Hannan, a spokesman for the Australian military in Canberra.

Hagenbeck said the bodies of the two suspected Al Qaeda gunmen were dragged away by fellow fighters.

In the second attack, Hagenbeck said two others were killed before dawn Tuesday. Australian troops were also involved in that firefight, U.S. officials said.

"We knew how they would react once the sun went down last night. So we were ready for that, and we killed two ... as they were coming back through the area," Hagenbeck told reporters at Bagram air base, north of Kabul.

It wasn't clear why the attackers were identified as Al Qaeda suspects rather than Taliban.

U.S. military spokesman Maj. Bryan Hilferty said coalition Special Forces had been staking out the area near the Pakistani border for two days when allied troops came under fire on Monday morning.

Hilferty said a 200-man quick-reaction force — two infantry companies from the 101st Airborne Division — were flown in by helicopter two hours later and found mortars, grenades, and machine-gun ammunition in a sweep of buildings and nearby caves. He said the surviving fighters appeared to be part of a larger group that had fled into surrounding mountains.

The clashes occurred in the same eastern region where the last major battles against the Taliban and Al Qaeda were fought in March during Operation Anaconda — the largest U.S.-led ground offensive in Afghanistan.

Hagenbeck acknowledged that the hunt for terrorist suspects had become more difficult because Al Qaeda and Taliban concentrations had dispersed since March.

"I think that they still do have a command-and-control structure in place," he said. "All the reports that I get from a variety of intelligence sources tells me that they have the ability to conduct low-level terrorist activities."

Arafat outlasts Sharon again

By Laura King
 Associated Press

RAMALLAH, West Bank — "So," the young Israeli soldier said from atop his dusty armored personnel carrier, jutting his chin in the direction of Yasser Arafat's shell-cratered, tank-ringed headquarters. "When he comes out of there, is he the loser or the winner?"

The answer is probably both.

The 72-year-old Palestinian leader — quintessential survivor of plots and plane crashes, intrigue and infighting, assassination attempts and physical frailties — seems to have made it through yet another crisis, outlasting Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's bid to render him politically marginal and diplomatically disenfranchised.

Arafat can expect a joyous welcome when he emerges from his battered compound in the West Bank town of Ramallah, where he has been largely confined by Israel since January and kept captive in just a few rooms for more than a month. Under a U.S.-brokered deal whose final details were being worked out Tuesday, that was expected to happen within days, or even sooner.

"When we see him again, we will not be able to contain our happiness," said shop-owner Abu Imad, a stooped 75-year-old in a traditional snowy Arab headdress who served tiny cups of strong coffee to visitors while a tank revved its engines barely 50 yards away.

But once Arafat has made his triumphal reappearance, basking in Palestinian popular support that pollsters say has soared during his confinement, he will face an array of long-festering problems — and a host of new woes.

Arafat won't have to venture far from his half-wrecked compound to see the destruction wrought during an intense Israeli military campaign against militants in the West Bank that coincided with his confinement. Much of it is on display in Ramallah, the West Bank seat of Arafat's Palestinian Authority.

In all corners of the city, the trappings of government — ministries, office complexes, parking lots full of shiny official vehicles, security installations — were badly damaged during the Israeli incursion.

Government workers who have been able to return to their offices in the week since Israeli troops staged a partial pullback from Ramallah have found wrecked computers, scattered documents, blasted-open doors, and ruined furnishings.

A changed landscape awaits Arafat elsewhere in the West Bank, most notably in the biblical town of Bethlehem, where the Palestinian leader once cheerily presided over Christmas Eve festivities in Manger Square, in the Old City, or casbah, in the northern town of Nablus, battered by fierce house-to-house fighting, and in the devastated center of the Jenin refugee camp, focus of what is likely to be a drawn-out fight between Israel and the United Nations over efforts to determine what exactly happened there.

More worrying for Arafat, the adulation that greets him may prove to be a brief honeymoon. Before Israel penned him up in his headquarters, many Palestinians were deeply dissatisfied with his leadership, angered by the cronyism, corruption, and ineffectiveness that plagued his government long before the outbreak of fighting between Israel and the Palestinians 19 months ago.

A Catholic condemnation

I was appalled at the article "Church's real work on sex abuse pushed to June," (DI, April 26). It brought up the awareness of abusive priests and what Catholic leaders plan to do about the crisis. Reading the words "abusive" and "priests" connected together in the same sentence was disturbing enough, but to read that the priests' futures were uncertain was mind-boggling. There should be a "national standard" for all sexual offenders, and no matter what role they play in society, they should all be prosecuted under the same law.

The role of a priest should consist of love, sacrifice, caring, and concern for the salvation of people. A priest should not be allowed to participate in sexual activity deemed improper or harmful. Sexual abuse is a crime, and not even "holy" priests should get away with it. From the March 24 article of PR Newswire, "a Catholic clergyman who sexually abused eight teenage boys ... hopes to start a movement of abusive priests who will speak out about their illnesses ... to stop others." Another priest, Father John Geoghan, is accused of molesting 130 boys. What has our society come to? Priests are speaking to other priests about being abusive, and we haven't even created a "national standard" as to how to take action!

When asked in the article, "Must all past and future allegations be referred to civil authorities?" — the answer should be OF COURSE! That's why we have personal-history records. If not everything is taken into account, then why do we have those records? [Abuse] is a situation that deals with the well-being of a child. Children should not be abused, and if they are, it's up to authorities to help gain back for the abused a sense of self-pride. Illness or not, an act of abuse should not be taken lightly. The aim should be to punish and rehabilitate the offenders so they will not commit the offenses again.

Global warming is heating up

In a recent study released by British and Swiss scientists, global warming is expected to cause the world's temperature to increase by the end of the 21st century more than originally expected, and under President Bush's Clear Skies Initiative, greenhouse gases will continue to increase.

Global warming, caused by emissions of carbon dioxide, methane, and other greenhouse gases from automobiles, factories, power plants, etc., becoming trapped in the Earth's atmosphere by the ozone layer, is expected to increase the global temperature anywhere from 0.5-2.3 degrees Fahrenheit within the next 20 to 30 years.

The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Control predicted last year that by the end of the century, the world's climate could rise by up to 10.4 degrees Fahrenheit; however, in the most recent report by the Hadley Center for Climate Prediction, the temperature could increase by as much as 12.4 degrees.

The year 2001 was the second hottest year on record — 0.94 degrees hotter than the average — coming in as the runner up to 1998. The kicker is that there is nothing we can do about it. According to the researchers, the damage has already been done. No matter how much biomass we burn or how many electric cars we drive, the greenhouse gases are already trapped, and they aren't going anywhere. So what's wrong with global warming? This last winter was pleasantly warm, and the tropical temperatures are actually increasing farmers' crop yield.

While we are feeling the positive effects now, as the climate continues to change, there will be an increase in floods and droughts. The sea levels are rising, causing the decline of maple forests and destroying alpine meadows in the Rockies. The populations of mosquitoes, ticks, rats, and other disease carriers are increasing. And because of poor air quality, the risk of developing asthma or lung cancer is on the rise.

And what is Bush doing about this? First of all, he backed out of the Kyoto Protocol last year, which called for the United States to reduce greenhouse-gas emissions 5.2 percent by 2012. This sounds like a fair request for the nation that spews out 25 percent of the world's greenhouse gases.

However, China and India were exempt, and big businesses would lose money, so we wanted no part of it.

Instead, Bush unveiled his Clear Skies Initiative, which politely asks polluters to voluntarily reduce emissions in exchange for tax incentives. Bush said he would like to cut greenhouse-gas emission intensity by 18 percent in the next 10 years. This sounds nice, but it means that the greenhouse-gas emissions created by the United States will continue to increase rather than decrease.

This plan has been criticized by U.S. and global leaders for being too lenient. Critics say the answer to global warming in the next century is to conserve energy and make higher fuel efficiency ion vehicles, but after heavy lobbying by the auto industry, Bush was convinced that it wasn't a very good idea.

The plan sounds reminiscent of the Rio Treaty signed by Bush Senior in 1992. U.S. emissions are already 13.6 percent higher than the treaty targeted for. In Junior's plan, he seems to ask, why stop there?

Homophobia runs rampant in the Catholic Church

Be still, my heart. That's what I whispered to my friends as we watched Father Rush and Deacon Mike celebrate the Mass. My seventh-grade year at parochial school, complete with miserably nasty classmates, dramatically improved when Deacon Mike entered the religion classroom. He livened up my life with his youth and energy. And, yeah, he was a hottie who made my pubescent heart turn somersaults.

I can't count the times I cornered Deacon Mike for a private conversation. But no matter how clear Deacon Mike found my crushed-out attention, no matter how much power he had over me as both an official in the church and the focus of my young lust, not once did he take advantage of his position even to hint at a sensual or sexual relationship.

If only all priests in the Catholic Church — and, as any therapist could tell you, all adults with positions of power and unlimited access to children and subordinate adults — could say the same thing.

And if only Catholic Church officials could deal with the current sexual-abuse crisis in an adult way. Instead, some officials have decided that, instead of confronting their faults and the crime — yes, it is a crime, and one whopper of a mortal sin — of shuffling known abusers from one parish to another, they can just blame gay men.

In the April 27 New York Times, Frank Rich explained that those officials blame the U.S. sexual morals and homosexuality "to avoid accountability for a plague of abuse that is documented at least as far back as 1950, that spans the globe from Ireland to

Suzi Steffen

OUT, HERE, LISTENING ALL THE TIME

Africa to Australia, and that is not caused by (or exclusive to) any sexual orientation."

Indeed, the Human Rights Campaign calls the Church's comments about banning gay priests "cynical," and I can't see it any other way. Last year, the National Catholic Reporter ran a cover story about rampant sexual abuse of nuns by priests in 23 countries, on five continents. The NCR article (available online at http://www.nat-cath.com/NCR_Online/archi ves/031601/031601a.htm) states that "priests at times demand sex in exchange for favors" and that priests have even gotten nuns pregnant, then forced them to have abortions. I guess the whole celibacy thing — not to mention official church doctrine on abortions — doesn't count for certain priests.

In case you missed it, nuns are female. So in response to this horrendous report, did the church suggest banning all heterosexual priests? I hardly think so. Yet now, when reports of the sexual abuse of children fly across the airwaves, the Vatican and U.S. Catholic officials blame gay men. Why is this? Except for rampant homophobia, I couldn't tell you.

Study after study (which you can find at <http://hrc.grassroots.com/family/soandchildabusefact/>) show such statistics as "a child's risk of being molested by his or her relative's heterosexual partner is 100 times greater than by someone identified as a homosexual."

Dr. Nathaniel McConaghy, the author of a review of the literature on sexual abuse of children, further notes that an adult male (like, say, an abusive priest) who abuses young boys "is typically not sexually interested in older men or women." Another study explains that calling child molesters gay or straight "is meaningless" because "they are attracted to children, not to men or women."

So the Catholic church finds itself in a monumental crisis. Every paper, from USA Today to the LA Times to the paper that broke the abuse stories, the Boston Globe, runs stories about the anger of lay Catholics over the absurd responses of church officials to reports of abuse. What do officials do to heal the rift and stop abusers? Scapegoat gay men.

That won't help the nuns and other women, not to mention the children (male and female) who, instead of having a gentle mentor like Deacon Mike, found in their spiritual adviser a monster and in their church a deceitful, criminal structure.

The church must stop obfuscating the issue, stop the absurd end-runs around justice, and face up to these crimes. Banning gay men won't do a damn thing to protect innocent parishioners, not a thing except spread more lies. Along with millions of Catholics across the world, I think the church has lied enough.

Suzi Steffen is a DI columnist.

Foxtrotting the hotel

By Dan Maloney
The Daily Iowan

Reinventing yourself is the name of the game, right guys?

The idea of an artist rehashing the same song structures and styles album after album leaves little room for long-term longevity or praise in the music business. Just ask N'Sync or Britney. One year, $50,000, a crafty marketing Webstream, and a new label (Nonesuch) later, Wilco has released its fourth album, Yankee Hotel Foxtrot, in which the group paints a pop-musical landscape of maturity.

With the album, Wilco restructures the face of pop music, drawing from influences of various musical styles such as electronic dance music, pop ballads, country, and even hip-hop beats. The band is moving forward after losing longtime members Jay Bennett and Ken Coomer, and it has not lost a beat with replacements Leroy Bach and Glenn Kotche.

The story behind the release of Yankee Hotel Foxtrot, an 18-month project, is almost Byzantine. The album was rejected by Wilco's former label, Reprise, so the group bought the master for a meager $50,000 and sold it to Nonesuch, a subdivision of corporate powerhouse AOL Time Warner — which also owns Reprise. It doesn't take a genius to figure out this ironic payroll mess.

Yankee Hotel Foxtrot establishes itself as nothing short of superb in the opening seconds of the first track, "I am trying to break your heart." Lead songwriter Jeff Tweedy sings like it's last call on payday, intoning over fields of echoing static landscapes and providing the listener with a challenging game of listening between the lines (for best results, use high quality headphones in order to differentiate the multi-sonic sounds).

Tweedy casually fades in and out of the song like a long-lost lover fading in and out of love. Throughout the album, Tweedy plays with problems in communication and long-distance relationships. (For instance, the album title is a reference to a phonetic alphabet used in military radio communications.) The idea of long-distance relationships challenged by bad communication coincides with the use of chimes, vibes, and pianos entering and fading out like misunderstood signals from a lover over a short-wave radio.

Most of the sonic experimentation on the record can rightfully be attributed to the contributions of indie-rocker Jim O'Rourke, who engineered and mixed Foxtrot. O'Rourke, who has been linked to highly acclaimed indie bands Sonic Youth and Stereolab, tinkered with his production techniques of unique dissonant and fractured sounds to enrich songs that would otherwise seem as vague as a blank, white canvas.

Picking up where Wilco left off on its previous album, Summer Teeth, which provided the beginning stages of the group's jaunt into the pop realm, Foxtrot clearly pulls further away from Wilco's typical earthy/country vibes and moves into an experimental mesh of musical styles.

The first single, "Heavy Metal Drummer," starts with a hip-hop beat that segues into bouncy radio-friendly song, calling to mind work that Pavement provided in the early '90s. The subject matter covers Tweedy's affinity with early hard-rock bands. "I miss the innocence I've known/playing Kiss covers/beautiful and stoned."

All the tracks on Foxtrot are solid; not one should have been omitted. Standouts include "Radio Cure," in which a slow-moving acoustic guitar is complemented by more radio-transmission hiss and Moog sounds, and the track "Jesus, etc.," a Neil Young-esque song that expresses subtle hints of Wilco's early alt-country tunes. The song is beautifully arranged with a Rhodes piano and a looping violin that is delicately plucked and gracefully placed in the mix.

Other notables include the track "I'm the man who loves you," a cake-and-ice cream love song topped with a brass session and fuzzed-out guitar solo. Or even the album closer, "Reservations," an epic seven-minute tune that trails off like a runaway stream to space and perfectly closes a pivotal album.

Yankee Hotel Foxtrot is a modern day White Album, with solid songwriting and multi-instrumentalized songs, and the way Wilco constantly reinvents its sound keeps the listener guessing. I have to feel sorry for the sap at Reprise who listened to Foxtrot and decided it was too artsy to release — Foxtrot is well on its way to receiving wide and critical praise, and it should provide Wilco with a whole new fanbase. Wilco, like Radiohead, is not afraid to change things up, and Foxtrot proves to be just the right mix.

ARTS BRIEF

Springer & capital punishment

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Talk-show host Jerry Springer has agreed to star in a movie that will be shot this summer in the Tampa Bay area, the film's producer said.

Phillipe Martinez, the producer of Citizen Jury, said Monday the $12-million feature casts Springer as the producer of a courtroom reality TV series that tries capital-punishment cases. Christopher Lambert, best known for his roles in the Highlander movies, will play the show's host, a professor at fictional Tampa Law College, Martinez told the St. Petersburg Times.

Representatives for Springer at William Morris Agency did not return phone calls Monday from the St. Petersburg Times.

Principal photography for the movie is scheduled to start June 29 and continue for seven weeks, including a month in the Tampa Bay area filming outdoor scenes, Martinez said.

St. Petersburg-Clearwater Film Commissioner Jennifer Parramore confirmed Monday that some of the locations under discussion are the Channelside area of Tampa, the county courthouse in Clearwater, and private homes on both sides of the bay.

The race is on for gay channel

By David Bauder
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Animal lovers, soap-opera fans, and science-fiction aficionados all have their own cable channels.

Homosexual viewers have never had one devoted to their interests, but that's about to change. There's suddenly a race to reach that market.

Two Viacom outlets — MTV and Showtime — are collaborating on a plan for a new gay-oriented premium service. Meanwhile, Canada's existing Pridevision TV is looking to expand into the United States.

Showtime, whose successful "Queer as Folk" drama helped change the business climate, has scheduled homosexual-oriented movies and programs on its Showtime Two service on Wednesday nights. "Night Out on Sho Too Wednesdays" will begin on May 22.

Homosexual activists say it's about time.

"Despite the progress the gay community has made in the mainstream media, it is still underserved as a television audience," said Scott Seomin, a spokesman for the Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation.

MTV and Showtime's prospective gay channel has been talked about since 1994, but only recently have executives started outlining their plans to cable and satellite distributors.

Although Viacom still hasn't given the official go-ahead, "we wouldn't be going through all this if we didn't think the channel, as a consumer proposition, wasn't going to be a home run," said Gene Falk, the senior vice president of digital media programming at Showtime.

Their plans — even the channel's name — have been kept under wraps. But Falk said Viacom's other successful niche networks, like MTV and Nickelodeon, should hint at the mix of games, reality shows, talk shows, and movies that the channel will include.

John Levy, the chairman of Canada's Pridevision, believes his network has an advantage over Viacom.

"First of all, we exist," he said. "We have a commitment to do this thing on a full-time basis. We're not testing or doing a block of programming once or twice a week."

Etc. manager charged in fire stunt

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said he will meet with investigators periodically to suggest whether any additional charges should be filed against the 118 S. Dubuque St. bar or its workers.

The Iowa City City Council might decide as early as May 6 whether to pursue revoking Etc.'s alcohol license or pass it on to the Iowa Alcoholic Beverages Division. Both groups have jurisdiction over alcohol licenses.

Mayor Ernie Lehman said the council will wait for the investigation to be completed before taking action.

Kline has worked at two other downtown bars: the Sports Columnn, 12 S. Dubuque St., and the Union Bar, 121 E. College St. While working for Pohl, Kline managed Union employee Deanine Busche, who suffered the most severe injuries in the bar stunt. The 20-year-old UI junior remained hospitalized in Chicago on Tuesday with second-degree burns on her face and third-degree burns on her right arm.

The stunt has prompted two separate civil suits against the bar — one filed by UI junior Amy Shah, 20, of Palatine, Ill., and one by UI senior Chris Freed, 23, of West Des Moines. Both students will be represented by local attorney Tom Riley.

Police say two of the victims, who were treated at UI Hospitals and Clinics, have yet to be identified.

U.N. may disband Jenin investigation of Ramallah would be moved to the Jericho prison under U.S. and British supervision, paving the way for Arafat to leave his compound. Palestinian officials said the prisoner transfer could take place within 24 hours, but Israel said there was no agreed-upon timetable.

Yarden Vatikay, an adviser to Defense Minister Binyamin Ben-Eliezer, said Israel would not withdraw tanks from Arafat's compound until he received word from U.S. officials that the prisoners were in Jericho.

Late Tuesday, a 2-year-old girl was killed when Israeli tanks opened fire near the Gaza-Egypt border, witnesses and a Palestinian doctor said. Israeli military sources said militants set off an explosive and soldiers fired a tank shell, hitting one of the bombers.

Also Tuesday, Israeli tanks completed their pullout of the West Bank town of Hebron, the military said, after a two-day incursion launched in response to a deadly shooting attack on a nearby Jewish settlement. The military said 150 Palestinians were arrested, including 52 wanted men. Nine Palestinians were killed during the raid, including six civilians.

Before pulling out, soldiers arrested Loi Kafisha, a militia leader Israel charges with responsibility for several attacks. According to Israeli media, he was hiding in a local hospital and tried to escape disguised as a doctor.

In Jerusalem, Israel's security Cabinet decided Tuesday not to cooperate with a U.N. inquiry into events at the Jenin refugee camp, scene of fierce fighting April 3-11. The Israelis want the United Nations to agree to six demands, including the right to control the list of official Israeli witnesses, deny access to secret documents, and rebut non-government testimony.

Annan responded that he has already tried to address the Israeli concerns, leaving the fate of the mission in doubt. U.N. diplomats said Annan leaned "heavily" toward disbanding the team.

Israel and the Palestinians continued to trade charges over the Jenin battle. Palestinians charged that Israel massacred hundreds of civilians there. Israel hotly denies the charges of a massacre, saying that approximately 50 Palestinians died, most of them armed.

Meanwhile, the Physicians for Human Rights group charged Tuesday that Israel prevented medical aid from reaching victims of the fighting. It also called for a "politically neutral force to be quickly deployed at the Jenin camp to stop the haphazard removal of remains and personal property from the rubble."

Israel has denied charges that it deliberately held up medical teams; it said the fierce fighting often prevented the teams from entering the camp.

Palestinian Information Minister Yasser Abed Rabbo said Israel's decision to block the U.N. inquiry was "a clear indicator that the Israeli government committed war crimes in the Jenin refugee camp."

Officials suspect bars are overcrowded

OVERCROWDING

"[Bars exceeding occupancy limits] is something we have suspected on occasion," Lehman said.

Bar overcrowding has attracted increasing public attention and concern from students following a bar stunt at Etc. that burned at least nine patrons. Witnesses said the bar contained approximately 300 patrons, nearly double its occupancy limit of 178, though those accounts may have been exaggerated, Jensen said.

"I think that the bouncers should be more responsible because the limits are there for a reason," said UI sophomore Mariah Spencer.

Jensen said the current system of investigating overcrowding is effective. But constant bar monitoring would not be an effective use of resources, he said.

Leah Cohen, the owner of Bo-James, 118 E. Washington St., said her establishment doesn't exceed occupancy limits. She also said she opposes any potential changes in city policies affecting bars that would stem from an isolated incident at Etc.

"I don't think you regulate because of one case of bad management," she said. "I think it had to do with irresponsible staff and management."

Mike Porter, the owner of two local clubs, the Summit, 10 S. Clinton St., and One-Eyed Jakes, 18-20 S. Clinton St., also said he enforces occupancy limits.

"When the bar starts nearing capacity, we start slowing down how we're letting people in," he said, explaining that he implements a "one out, on in" policy.

Both bar owners said efforts should be made to improve illegal activities and bar problems downtown.

"I think the city councilors should come down and see what's going on so they aren't making blind decisions," Porter said. "I'd invite them to come to either of my establishments."

Nuisance proposals called 'ridiculous'

used to keep racial, ethnic, and religious minorities indoors after sundown, and I don't know why it couldn't work on students."

Several students told the group that the city should focus on enforcing existing ordinances to deal with problems. Others expressed concern that their legal rights would be violated and that they hadn't been fairly represented.

UI Student Government President Nick Herbold felt

there were less restrictive ways to handle problems.

"I would propose a handbook be given to tenants when they move in," he told the group. "Educate people instead of just restricting them."

Some people, however, lauded the task force for its efforts. Iowa City resident Karen Leigh said she could no longer live with destructive behavior.

"I've had both of my windows broken and my car windshield smashed with beer bottles," she said. "I'm not targeting students as the problem, but I support anything that will get this to stop."

UI student Scott Alvarado was also in favor of the proposals.

"I do think that some things, like the party ordinance, would be hard to enforce," he said. "But I think for students to say they're defending their right to drink is dumb because they don't consider who the behavior is affecting."

Task-force member Tim Walker said he was pleased by the turnout but felt the issues had been unfairly made into students versus residents.

"We never tried to go after students — this is about bad behavior by people in general,"

he said. "I will certainly support abandoning some of the things that were unanimously unpopular."

The group will meet again today to discuss the forum.

Sale thanked the students for coming at the end of the forum and asked them to stay involved in city government.

"Everyone is certainly entitled to her or his opinion," Sale said after the forum. "I would prefer to have constructive criticism."

WRESTLING

Grapplers to grace small screen

By Ali Noller
 The Daily Iowan

For wrestling fans inquisitive about what goes on behind the closed doors of the Dan Gable wrestling complex, their curiosity will be satisfied when ESPN airs "The Season," featuring the Hawkeye wrestling team in all its sweat and glory.

The two-part series will be broadcasted July 2 and July 9 at 8 p.m.

Dave Nagle, the programming director for ESPN, said that when a documentary on wrestling was mentioned, there was no question of which school to feature.

"Iowa is and has been synonymous with wrestling," Nagle said.

Iowa coach Jim Zalesky and That's part of [being filmed], opening yourself up to it. It's great to have this coverage for the sport of wrestling.

— Joe Williams,
 Iowa assistant coach

his wrestlers allowed full-access to the ESPN crew, a first in the history of college wrestling. Zalesky said that at first, it was bothersome to have the cameras rolling at all times, but the wrestlers and coaches eventually got used to it.

"You want them to see the good times, but there are some bad times too, that we had to get used to [having cameras around]," Zalesky said.

The Hawkeye coach said that there was only one instance when he restricted full access — when the Hawkeyes lost a close dual to Oklahoma State in Carver Hawkeye Arena on Jan. 11.

"There were just some things that we needed to talk about as a team — just as a team," he said.

Assistant coach Joe Williams also said that at certain times, he felt the cameras shouldn't have been rolling.

"When a guy lost a match, maybe the cameras shouldn't have been there," Williams said, "But that's part of it, opening yourself up to it. It's great to have this coverage for the sport of wrestling."

Luke Eustice, Iowa's 125-pound runner-up at the NCAA championships, said ESPN did a good job of hanging back after particularly brutal matches.

"After you won or lost, they would follow you all the way [back to the wrestling room]," Eustice said. "Part of it is getting your reaction right after a match, but they did a pretty good job of letting you cool off

Confidence oozes from Iowa squad

By Jeremy Shapiro
 The Daily Iowan

Two days before perhaps the most important series of the year, the Hawkeyes are making sure to concentrate on beating Northern Iowa and retaining the title of best team in the state.

UNI visits today at 6 p.m. for the back end of a home-and-home series. Iowa conquered the Panthers, 6-4, on April 24 in Waterloo. A win tonight would mean a perfect record against Iowa foes this season and would exceed last season's win total of 19. Also, it would keep the momentum going into the Northwestern series on Friday.

The Panthers (20-20) rank a little higher in terms of significance than most nonconference opponents. Because Iowa State eliminated its program last season, the Panthers are the only other Division I team left.

"Our team gets up for UNI a little more than other games," said center fielder Kyle Thousand. "They gave us a tight game last week, and while we are contending for the Big Ten right now, we can't look past UNI."

Having played each other just one week ago could help both teams.

"They are a tough team, and they hit the ball around a lot," said Iowa second baseman Chris Groth. "We know they will do that again. They have a lot of good hitters in their lineup."

Iowa (19-20) will use Chris Maliszewski (2-2, 4.04 ERA) on the hill to try to quiet the Panther bats. Maliszewski has come out of the bullpen most of the season but Iowa coach Scott Broghamer has elected to start him recently after some good outings. UNI will start Josh Habel (4-3, 4.34 ERA).

Groth attributes the Hawkeyes winning seven of eight games to a confident atmosphere within the team that has developed over the past two weeks.

"We know we still have a long way to go, but we feel we can beat anyone," he said. "We know we can beat teams with our A game."

Getting the Hawkeyes to play their A game hasn't always been easy, but Groth said they are getting closer to

TRACK AND FIELD

Throwing the ranks

Three weightmen lead a young Hawkeye program to promise

By Tyler Lechtenberg • The Daily Iowan

Iowa assistant track-and-field coach Scott Cappos has built a throws program that just might be sturdier than a weightman's upper body.

With the departure of three school-record holders after the 2001 season, it appeared the Hawkeye throwing corps may suffer a bit of a letdown in 2002.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Led primarily by a host of young talent, the Iowa weightmen are as strong as ever. "There's a lot of pride, especially with the group of guys we have," senior Jim Costello said. "I think overall, we definitely have the best throwing squad in the Big Ten by far."

Costello, Bill Neumann, and Ken Kemeny have already garnered one automatic NCAA qualification, two provisional qualifications, and a school record among the three of them. But a very talented second tier of throwers behind them shows off the team's depth, which distinguishes Iowa from the majority of its competition.

When Cappos came to Iowa in 1997, no Hawkeye thrower had placed in the top eight at the conference meet for 10 years. Last year alone, 11 Hawkeye weightmen placed in the top 10 and combined to rack up 56 points at the Big Ten outdoor meet, 27 points ahead of the next group of throwers, from Purdue.

At this year's conference meet, the Hawkeyes will again look to obtain double and triple scorers in each throwing event, which is something that has become a source of team pride.

"You just don't see other Big Ten schools doing that," Neumann said.

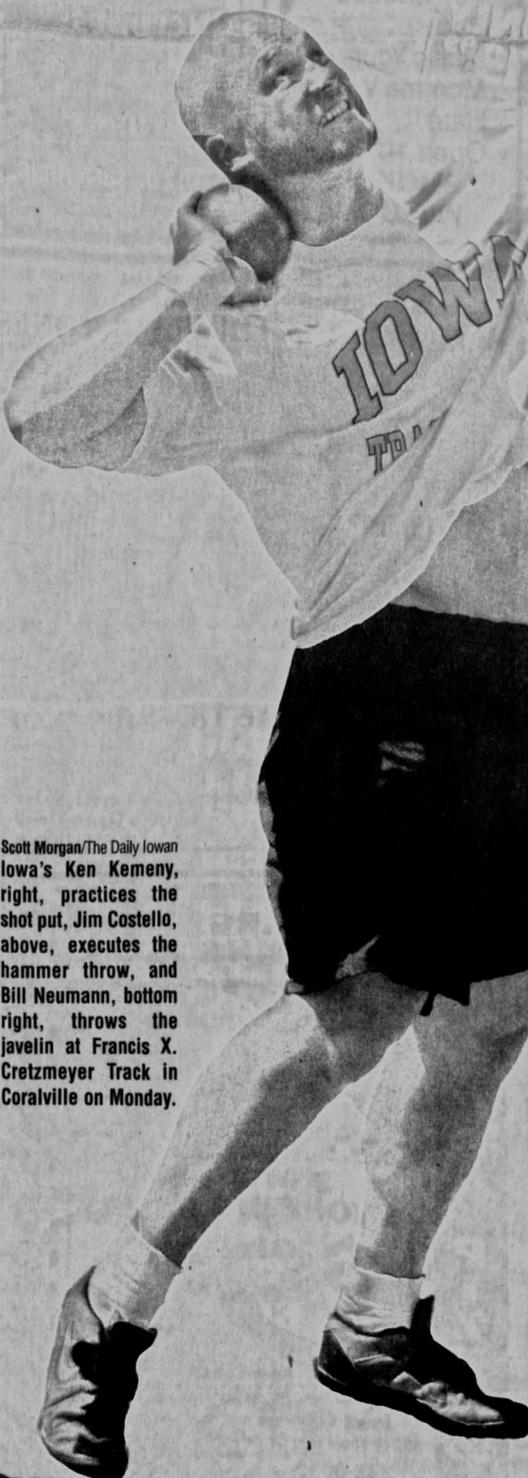

Neumann did something most people won't see very often at the Sea Ray Relays on April 11, when he shattered the previous school mark in the javelin by nearly 17 feet. The throw of 244-5 surpassed all of the sophomore's season goals and automatically qualified him for the NCAA meet in the process.

"It felt really clean," Neumann said. "I can tell it's a good throw when nothing in my body hurts."

Costello and Kemeny each have provisionally qualified for the NCAA meet, Costello with a throw of 212-7 in the hammer and Kemeny with a throw of 59-7 in the shot put.

Behind the team's three national qualifiers, the drop-off is less than noticeable. Junior Brad Daufeldt, a pair of redshirt freshmen — Andy Banse and Chris Voller — and true freshman walk-on Joel Storm give the group's coach

SOFTBALL

Hawkeyes close out home season

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa softball team will play its final home date of the season today and bid farewell to five valuable members of its senior class in the process.

The No. 23 Hawkeyes host Creighton at 4 p.m. at Pearl Field in what will be the team's final nonconference date of the season. Most likely it will also mark the final time Liz Dennis, Alicia Gerlach, Lori Leon, Amber Morrow, and Kristi Hanks take the diamond in their home whites.

offense for Iowa as the team's designated hitter, while Morrow has returned to the lineup after a fractured wrist sidelined her for most of the season.

Hanks chasing records

But it is Hanks the Hawkeyes have relied upon most heavily for the last four seasons. The All-American hurler from Sante Fe, Texas, has accumulated 96 victories and 788 strikeouts during her tenure as a starting pitcher. She is just four wins shy of Debbie Bilbao's career-leading victory mark of 99, and 21 strikeouts off Karen Jackson's school record of 809.

All five players are starters for coach Gayle Blevins, and they have played key roles in helping the Hawkeyes to a 32-16 record this year. Dennis has played both right field and third base this year, and she set a single-season record for doubles with 19 so far. Gerlach is Iowa's reigning home-run leader, with 28 clouts to her name. Leon has been a valuable contributor on

The five seniors will be looking to leave Pearl Field with fond memories of a doubleheader sweep today, but the Bluejays will be no pushover. Creighton owns an impressive 19-5 lead in the all-time series between the schools, including a 1-0 victory during the team's last meeting in 2000. Blevins said she knows Creighton will

Angels pummel Indians, 21-2

CLEVELAND (AP) — Ramon Ortiz got all the runs he could ever need and Troy Glaus had five RBIs Tuesday night as the Anaheim Angels rolled to their fifth-straight win, 21-2, over the reeling Cleveland Indians.

It was the most runs scored by the Angels in 23 years, and the most ever against the Indians at Jacobs Field.

Scott Spiezio added three RBIs and Glaus went 4-for-5 with a homer for the Angels, who led 9-1 after the seventh inning and then piled on with a 10-run eighth.

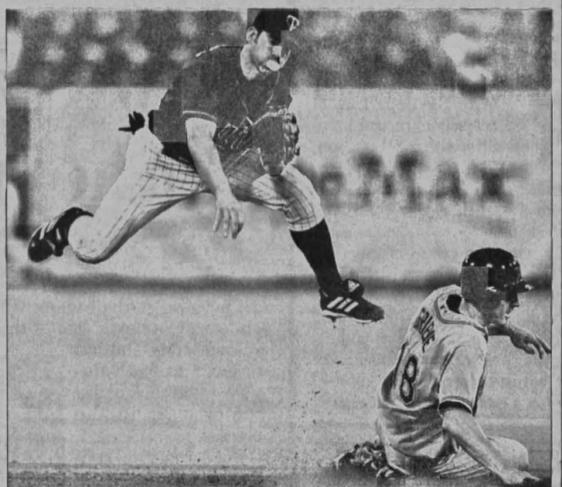

Twins 6, Devil Rays 3
MINNEAPOLIS — Torii Hunter hit his ninth home run, and Kyle Lohse pitched seven strong innings as the Minnesota Twins beat the Tampa Bay Devil Rays, 6-3, Tuesday night.

Tampa Bay's Greg Vaughn, hitless in 33 at-bats, went 0-for-4 to drop his batting average to .099, the lowest among major-league regulars. Vaughn struck out twice.

White Sox 8, Mariners 4
CHICAGO — The Seattle Mariners finally hit a bump on the road.

Magglio Ordonez hit a two-run homer as the Chicago White Sox beat the Mariners, 8-4, Tuesday night, ending Seattle's 10-game road winning streak to start the season.

Managers faced harsh April

By Hal Bock
 Associated Press

In the precarious business of managing a baseball team, April really did turn out to be the cruelest month.

When the Kansas City Royals fired Tony Muser after Monday night's game — a 4-0 victory over Detroit — he became the fourth manager to go down in the season's first month, twice as many as ever before.

Usually owners exhibit at least a little more patience with their teams. The baseball season, after all, is a marathon, not a sprint. Two years ago, every manager made it through the season intact, the first time that had happened since 1942.

But all that changed this year with Muser joining Colorado's Buddy Bell, Milwaukee's Davey Lopes, and Detroit's Phil Garner as dugout casualties before the calendar reached May.

And that doesn't include Boston's Joe Kerrigan, who never made it out of spring training, fired as soon as the sale of the Red Sox was completed.

Muser was matter-of-fact about his dismissal.

"Everybody understands the circumstances, the mood of our fans," he said. "They need a change. It's just a part of this business. Managers are hired to be fired. I understand it, and life goes on. The most important thing is the success of the organization."

Each of the fired managers had three things in common. They had been on the job for a while, their teams were struggling, and home attendance had dropped.

The first two are significant. The third might be fatal.

"The real point is attendance," said Chuck Tanner, who managed both Garner and Muser during their playing careers. "They always look at that."

Bottom-line, baseball craves customers, and the four teams that fired managers have seen average attendance slip — nearly 2,000 a game in Detroit, almost 8,000 a game in Milwaukee.

Then there are salaries. Colorado had the highest opening-day payroll of the four at almost $57 million. That's 19th highest in the majors, less than half the $126 million George Steinbrenner pays the New York Yankees.

"I understand," Tanner said. "Kansas City, Detroit, Milwaukee, Minnesota — they want to win the World Series just like New York. New York wins with $100 million payroll. They want to win with a $50 million payroll. It can't happen."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Braves' Surhoff to miss rest of season

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves outfielder-first baseman B.J. Surhoff will have surgery on his right knee and miss the remainder of the season.

The Braves said Tuesday that additional tests confirmed that Surhoff had a torn ligament. The left-handed hitter had undergone an MRI on Sunday.

Surgery is expected within two weeks, the Braves said.

Surhoff injured the knee when he ran into the right-field wall April 27 in the ninth inning of a 6-3 loss to the Houston Astros.

Surhoff was placed on the disabled list. He did not accompany the team to Milwaukee for a three-game series beginning Tuesday, instead returning to his home in Baltimore.

Surhoff, who had a seven-game hitting streak, was batting .293 with no homers and nine RBIs in 25 games.

To replace Surhoff on the roster, the Braves purchased the contract of outfielder Darren Bragg from Triple-A Richmond where he was hitting .293 with one home run and eight RBIs in 22 games.

Bragg, 32, was signed as a free agent April 2 after his release by the New York Mets. He also played with Seattle, Boston, St. Louis, Colorado, and the New York Yankees and has a .258 average with 39 home runs and 227 RBIs in 656 major-league games.

Royster to stay as Brewers manager

MILWAUKEE — Jerry Royster moved into the manager's office at Miller Park on Tuesday, something he had refused to do until the "interim" tag was removed from his title.

"Now, I'm the manager. I have to sit in there. The guys need me in there," Royster said after general manager Dean Taylor put him in charge of the Milwaukee Brewers for the rest of the season.

"I even parked in the manager's parking spot. I did everything. I'm the manager."

Royster, 49, was promoted from bench coach to interim manager after Davey Lopes was ousted April 18, and the Brewers won his first four games before dropping six straight on the road.

He beat out five other candidates for the full-time job, including four members of his coaching staff and Bob Melvin, the bench coach for the Arizona Diamondbacks.

No Magic; Charlotte wins

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Baron Davis' second-straight triple-double meant the Hornets will get to play another playoff round in Charlotte.

Davis had 28 points, and Charlotte beat the Orlando Magic, 102-85, Tuesday night to win the first-round playoff series in four games. He added 11 rebounds and 10 assists.

For the best-of-five series, Davis averaged 27.5 points, 9.3 assists, and nine rebounds for the Hornets, who are awaiting league approval to relocate to New Orleans for next season.

Jamal Magliore added 19 points, nine in the fourth quarter, for the Hornets before being ejected with 5:46 remaining after he struck Tracy McGrady in the head for a flagrant foul. David Wesley of the Hornets had nine of his 18 points in the first quarter.

The Hornets will play the winner of the New Jersey-Indiana series in the Eastern Conference semifinals. The Nets and Pacers played Game 4 of their series later Tuesday night.

McGrady, who had guaranteed an Orlando win in Game 4, led the Magic with 35 points and six assists. He hurt his chronically balky back a few minutes into the game but returned a minute later.

Golden trio reigns at Derby

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — They are the training trifecta, three names horseplayers can't ignore if they're serious about picking the Kentucky Derby winner.

D. Wayne Lukas, Bob Baffert, and Nick Zito might not have the right horse in their barn every year — it just seems that way. The three have a total of eight Derby victories in the last 14 years, including three times in which the winner nearly went on to win the Triple Crown.

This year they almost got shut out. That hasn't happened to all three of them in the same year since Baffert joined Lukas and Zito on the Derby trail in 1996.

But in the final weeks leading up to Saturday's $1 million race, funny things happened on the way to Churchill Downs:

- Baffert's in with War Emblem after Prince Ahmed Salman of Saudi Arabia bought the Illinois Derby winner for him on April 11.

- Lukas is in because his last hope — Proud Citizen — won the Lexington Stakes on April 20. Naturally, he took a poke at Baffert: "And we didn't have to go buy one."

- Zito probably will be out officially today, the day of the draw, because neither Crimson Hero nor Straight Gin earned enough money to qualify for an expected full 20-horse field.

"Who would have thought this?" Zito said. "The prince buys a horse for Baffert, Wayne wins in the eleventh hour, and I'm waiting on the fence, without much chance. What happened just shows how hard it is to keep coming back to this race."

These guys are good but not the best threesome ever. From 1935-1952, Ben A. Jones, "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons, and Max Hirsch combined for 11 Derby wins, with four capturing the Triple Crown. Jones saddled Triple Crown winners Whirlaway (1941) and Citation (1948), Fitzsimmons had Omaha (1935), and Hirsch had Assault (1946). Fitzsimmons also had Gallant Fox in 1930. The past two years, there's been a slight dropoff for Lukas, Baffert, and Zito — no Derby wins, and Lukas' record streak of 20 years with at least one starter ended in 2001.

Baffert, though, rebounded nicely in '01 when Point Given — his beaten Derby favorite — won the Preakness and Belmont Stakes and Horse of the Year honors.

Neither Baffert nor Lukas will be among the favorites in the 1 1/4-mile Derby, but who cares? Lukas won with 31-1 shot Charismatic in '99 and 24-1 shot Thunder Gulch in '95. Baffert won with 8-1 choice Real Quiet in '98.

Both are cautiously optimistic.

"We had to have everything fall exactly into place," Lukas said of Proud Citizen, his record 39th Derby starter, who was seventh in the Santa Anita Derby before the Lexington. "But if I don't screw him up in the next few days, we're going to be tough."

BASKETBALL BRIEFS

West, 63, is entrusted with putting new life into the franchise with the worst winning percentage (.229) in NBA history.

During his time with the Lakers, they won seven NBA championships, one when he was a player. West declined to discuss his contract with the Grizzlies, who moved to Memphis from Vancouver last year.

Duncan to miss Game 4 after father dies

SAN ANTONIO — Tim Duncan will miss Game 4 of the Spurs' playoff series against the SuperSonics because of the death of his father, leaving the team without both of its formidable 7-footers.

David Robinson will not be in uniform for the third-straight playoff game after straining his lower back late in the regular season.

Duncan left Monday's practice early after hearing that his father, William, had been hospitalized after a long illness. The elder Duncan died later that day in North Carolina.

San Antonio coach Gregg Popovich said Tuesday that his star forward "will rejoin the team as soon as he can, but he will not be in Seattle for [today's] game."

If Seattle wins Game 4, the best-of-five series would be settled Friday at the Alamodome.

Grizzlies hire West as president of operations

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Boredom and a chance to build another winning team brought Jerry West to the Memphis Grizzlies.

After four decades with the Los Angeles Lakers as a player, coach, and executive, West joined the Grizzlies on Tuesday as president of basketball operations under a multi-year contract reportedly worth $5 million a season.

"I need to work. I'm not good when I sit around all the time," said West, who retired as Lakers general manager in August 2000 and became a consultant for the team.

HOCKEY BRIEFS

empty-netter with 40 seconds left. Toronto's Curtis Joseph made 31 saves, with several spectacular stops in the waning moments.

Alexei Yashin and Kip Miller scored for the Islanders, who lost captain Michael Peca (torn knee ligaments) and defenseman Kenny Jonsson (concussion) in Game 5 on controversial body checks.

New York, making its first playoff appearance in eight years, lost the first two games in Toronto before winning back-to-back games on Long Island. The Maple Leafs won the fifth game in Toronto, during which Roberts checked Jonsson from behind into the glass, and Tucker injured Peca with a hip check.

Emotionally charged by those incidents, the Islanders won a fight-filled Game 6.

There was no fighting and far less violence in Game 7, as players didn't want to cost their team the series with a dumb penalty.

Flyers fire Barber

VOORHEES, N.J. — Bill Barber lost the team and then his job.

Barber was fired by the Philadelphia Flyers on Tuesday, one day after players blamed the coach for a first-round collapse in the playoffs for the second-straight year.

"We just felt that there was no way of being able to heal the wounds that had developed between the coach and the players," general manager Bob Clarke said. "They felt Billy needed to be calmer behind the bench, and they needed a system put into place that they can all follow."

Assistant coaches Mike Stothers and E.J. McGuire also were fired. Clarke said Barber would be offered another job in the organization.

"It's tough when you're a coach and lose respect from your players, and sometimes those things come out on the ice," forward Simon Gagne said.

Maple Leafs coast through first round

TORONTO (AP) — The Toronto Maple Leafs weren't about to be eliminated at home, not even with some of their best players on the sidelines.

Alexander Mogilny scored twice as the Maple Leafs beat the New York Islanders, 4-2, Tuesday night to win their Eastern Conference quarterfinal playoff series, 4-3.

Toronto won all four home games despite missing captain Mats Sundin (broken left wrist) for most of the series. The Leafs also were without Shayne Corson, who was suspended for Game 7.

The Maple Leafs now meet provincial rival Ottawa, which eliminated Philadelphia in five games. The series will begin here Thursday night.

Mogilny gave Toronto a 2-1 lead in the second period and scored his fourth goal of the playoffs on an ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will easily upset someone today if you are insensitive to her or his needs. Work quietly behind the scenes for best results. Deal with legal matters or problems that concern government agencies.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel and romance should be a top priority. If you are in a relationship, plan something special; if you aren't, get out and meet new people. Travel will lead you to an interesting connection.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Dealing with other people's money or possessions will be conducive to greater cash flow but also put you in a position that is demanding. Keep in mind that if you offer your help, you must give it your all.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Talk to family members about your future concerns. An investment opportunity could turn into a moneymaker. Get involved with sports activity that will be conducive to helping children.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): No matter what you are involved in today, you will reap the rewards if you are dedicated and hardworking. Don't let your personal life interfere with your productivity, or you may miss an opportunity of a lifetime.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You will be entertaining and engaging, and an opportunity to have a romantic encounter will develop through travel or educational pursuits. Don't overreact to comments made by your peers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may want to keep a low profile today. Avoid getting into a debate with a friend or relative. You will be a little touchy and should refrain from discussing personal matters.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your finesse and charm will draw others to your side today. The more you do to help others, the more you will get in return. This is your chance to drum up the support you need.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financial opportunities are present. The more you do to help others, the better your chances are to move into a leadership position. You should clear up domestic duties that are unfinished.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will get angry with yourself regarding a financial matter that concerns joint accounts or outrageous contributions. Don't overspend; keep your money in a safe place.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will have some ingenious ideas when it comes to business. Someone may try to take credit for the work you have done. Direct your energy into a moneymaking venture or professional accomplishments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Educational pursuits will bring you the knowledge necessary to obtain the professional position of your choice. Business trips will be lucrative. Believe in yourself and go after your dreams.

Polite ways to tell that know-it-all kid in class to shut up

- Wow, if you can talk this much now, you'll be jabbering non-stop when you're old.
- Can't go on ... your voice ... causing ... brain hemorrhage ...
- Didn't you realize that the prof was asking a rhetorical question? Don't answer that.
- Wha? ... I saw your hand go up, and I just totally spaced out — must be a conditioned response.
- You should stop trying to make others love you and start loving yourself.
- You're smart in a thinky way, just not in a talky way.
- Now, I don't know for sure, but I think our instructor hates you.
- Are you sure you're not hopped up on goofballs?
- I am now stupider after listening to your incessant ramble.

quote of the day

Every now and then the president will say, "Do I have your mother yet?" and I say, "No, sir, not yet."

— White House spokesman Ari Fleischer, joking with Jay Leno on "The Tonight Show" about his parents, both staunch Democrats, who, he said, were horrified to learn their son would be working for President Bush.

Senior bids farewell at home

Tyler Stith, the only senior on the UI men's golf team, is fired up for this weekend as Iowa hosts the Big Ten championships from Friday through May 5. One of Stith's goals is to win a Big Ten title as an individual. Despite a shaky season, Stith is confident of winning, and with the tournament held at Finkbine, he has every reason to be.

FACE 2 FACE with Tyler Stith

DI reporter Travis Brown spoke with Stith at Finkbine as the golfer from Mount Pleasant, Iowa, fine tuned his game. Stith touched on his position on the team, this weekend, and his hole-in-one deficiency.

DI: What is it like to be the lone senior on this year's squad? Do you feel more pressure to step up and lead the team?

Stith: To be honest with you, I really don't feel any more pressure because of the group of guys I'm with right now. We all came in together the same year. I feel like the responsibility of leadership has been kind of divided among the four of us, being Bo Anderson, Mike Tapper, Aaron Krueger, and myself.

DI: Why did you transfer to Iowa from Iowa State after attending school there for one year?

Stith: Iowa State just wasn't a very good fit for me. The circumstances when I signed my letter of intent weren't what I thought they were going to be when I got there. I grew up a Hawkeye. I grew up close to Iowa City, so Iowa's always been a perfect fit for me.

DI: Do you think your team can win the Big Ten championship this weekend?

Stith: Yeah, I really do. Everybody seems to be playing a lot better the last couple of weeks. We've been slowly progressing and playing better each week, and I don't see any reason that we can't.

DI: Do you think that you personally can rebound from a roller coaster of a year to contend for an individual title?

Stith: I have a very short, selective memory. So what happened last weekend is already behind me. I try to take something positive away from it, and I realized I wasn't as close to being where I wanted to be as I would have liked.

DI: With this most likely being your final collegiate meet and the Big Ten championships being played on Iowa's home course, do you feel that your whole career as a golfer has led up to this weekend?

Stith: I think right now by far it's the most important tournament I've had to play in my life up to this point. If we do what we have to do this weekend, then it won't be our last tournament.

DI: Will you be disappointed when your collegiate golf career comes to an end?

Stith: I'm trying not to think about it right now because I know I'm going to be sad when it's all over because my experience here has been great with all my teammates. They're all my best friends, my roommates, and I'm definitely going to miss them next year.

DI: What are your plans after graduating?

Stith: I have a summer class remaining that I have to take to graduate. I kind of did that by design to give myself a little more time to think about what I want to do because it's kind of up in the air right now.

DI: Coach Anderson said that you may continue your education by going to graduate school, possibly at Michigan State. Is this something you are going to pursue?

Stith: I've thought about grad school. Michigan State is just one of the places where I've been looking. That's definitely a possibility.

DI: I also heard that you are friends with the golf coach at Michigan State and may help the team if you go there. Is that something you may do?

Stith: Yeah, the coach at Michigan State is a good friend of mine and a good friend of my family. We've talked about it, and we'll just have to see how it works out.

DI: What is the greatest round of golf you've ever played and why?

Stith: I'd have to say last summer at the Ottumwa Amateur. I was one shot behind going in to the last round, and I shot 63 to win by six or seven shots. It was the best round from the standpoint that it was the lowest round I've ever shot, and I won the tournament.

DI: Have you ever had a hole-in-one?

Stith: I've never had a hole-in-one, believe it or not. I've been close a lot but I've never had one. Maybe this next shot here I'll knock it in for you.

(He nearly does it on the next hole, a par-3, and says "I almost got it in.")

DI: What do you do for fun when you're not on the golf course?

Stith: I guess it's about all I do more or less when it's nice out, play golf. Hang out with my roommates, we play basketball a lot. This summer we'll go to the beach and spend time there. Pretty much just golf. There's no place I'd rather be when it's nice out.

a stacked cupboard to choose from during this season and well into the future.

With such an abundance of talent in other sports, egos might clash or run wild. That's not a factor with throwers, however. The weight men consistently support and cheer for their teammates as well as the throwers from other schools.

"Throwers tend to be a real friendly group of guys," Costello said. "There's usually not much tension among throwers — we usually get along really well."

All the throwers said part of the camaraderie may come from participating in a sport that sits a little bit outside of the limelight.

It would be nice to be in a sport that gets more press, but at the same time, it creates a sort of brotherhood within the group.

same time, it creates a sort of brotherhood within the group," Kemeny said. "If there were more money involved, I doubt whether that would be the case."

The brotherhood within the group at Iowa is especially strong; Kemeny, Costello, and Neumann live together, and all of the throwers interact consistently outside of the throwing ring.

"As a group, they're just a lot of fun to be around," Cappos said. "It's a fun group, but it's a very hard-working group as well."

Cappos' informal, low-pressure coaching style, combined with a focus on technique, gives his throwers the perfect mixture for success — and has turned Iowa City into a must-see on every elite high-school thrower's recruiting checklist.

"All the top throwers are looking to Iowa as a top program," Cappos said. "It's a lot easier to recruit them."

Iowa's throwers will be on display at Saturday's Iowa Musco Twilight Invitational, beginning at 4 p.m. at Francis X. Cretzmeier Track in Iowa City.

and collect your thoughts."

And while they got plenty of footage of Iowa practices and competition, in addition to a fight or two, the ESPN crew also got up close and personal with each wrestler.

The crew visited each wrestler at his home and took time to interview most of the wrestlers' parents.

Viewers of the two-hour documentary may be surprised to find that Luke Moffitt plays the guitar in a band, and Eustice likes to write poetry in his spare time.

This in-depth coverage will provide a closer look at the sport of wrestling than ever before but not without the approval of the Iowa coaching staff.

"Jimmy [Zalesky] and the coaching staff get the final say in what goes," Eustice said.

Despite capping the season with a disappointing fourth-place finish at the NCAA meet, Zalesky said that this year was as good as any to feature the Hawkeye wrestling program.

"No matter what year it is, we didn't do anything different [with training]," he said. "Whether we have a championship team or not, we brought a lot of guys along. It was an adjustment for the coaches and the athletes, but we always set our goals at the top."

ESPN's "The Season" has also followed Cal Ripken in his final baseball season and Tiger Woods in his outing at the U.S. Open.

Thousand proves offensive threat playing it every time out.

Thousand, who was named Big Ten Player of the Week on Monday, also thought the team has a renewed sense of confidence.

"Even with the loss to Michigan State, we are still going to come out and play with that confidence," he said. "The loss won't affect that."

Thousand himself has been on a tear during the past eight games. He has hit his first three homers of the year and has driven in 12 runs. Twice, teams intentionally walked Brad Carlson to get to Thousand with the bases loaded. Both times he got a hit.

"I take it as a challenge," Thousand said. "Brad is a good hitter, so I see where it's coming from. I just got a couple of pitches to hit and made the best of my opportunity."

Weather haunts Hawkeyes' finale

brings its best game to Iowa City.

Coach Brent Vigness' Bluejays are 23-25 this season and, like the Hawkeyes, are looking to make a season-ending push toward post-season play. Firstbaseman DeAnn Kaster was named Missouri Valley Conference Player of the Week for her performance last week after hitting .533 and leading the Bluejays to a 3-1 record. It marked the third-consecutive week a member of the Bluejays received the honor from the conference.

While Creighton is Iowa's foremost concern heading into today's games, the weather will also be on Iowa's mind. The Hawkeyes have had little luck with Mother Nature of late, losing three games to the elements last weekend. Rain is in the forecast for today, but Blevins rarely loses a home date to the elements. The Hawkeyes have canceled just one home game this year because of rain, shortening their April 21 double-header with Michigan to just one game.
