UI may waive tuition for TAs

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

The UI will finally implement a "very expensive" policy to waive tuition for more than 2,000 graduate teaching and research assistants despite its budget troubles, the newly hired UI Graduate College dean predicted Thursday.

John Keller, who was selected as the dean this week, said the plan would strengthen the university's graduate program by making it eligible for more federal grant money and more attractive in recruiting prospective students. While pleased the idea will be back on the table come fall, some graduate students said the plan sounds similar to one their union rejected during negotiations for its last contract.

Under Keller's proposition, tuition for the approximately 2,300 graduate assistants would be uniformly waived. Their salaries would initially be reduced by the cost of tuition. In future years, tuition would no longer play a role in their salaries, Keller said.

Keller said he is unsure how the UI — the only institution in the Big Ten without such a program — would allocate the millions of dollars needed to fund the policy. He said it would likely come from the general fund, grants, and/or contracts.

Negotiations for the UI's next two-year collective bargaining contract with the graduate-student union will begin in the fall. Members of the union, the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students, have consistently called for tuition remission.

"I think the university is committed to making something happen this year," Keller said. "What the plan will look like, I'm not exactly sure."

UI President Mary Sue Coleman said that while the school is facing an "extreme financial situation," she is open to ideas. She said the situation is especially uncertain because state officials are anticipating revenue will fall short of projections, and more cuts will be necessary.

"Our ability to predict is really hard right now, but that doesn't

Ex-tattoo parlor owner charged in Hall Mall fire

By Vess Mitev
The Daily Iowan

The former owner of an Iowa City tattoo parlor was charged Thursday with arson and burglary against neighboring businesses.

Robert Eugene Lee, 50, was arrested and charged with second-degree arson and second-degree burglary in an April 16 fire that caused $20,000 in damages to the Hall Mall, 114 E. College St. Both class C felonies carry a prison term of up to 10 years.

Lee, who owned the Electric Head Tattoo and Body Piercing Shop before it closed in February, allegedly admitted to forcing his way into the locked building, spreading an inflammable substance, and using a match to light the blaze, said Iowa City police.

"Mr. Lee became a suspect quite quickly," said Iowa City police investigator D.J. Steva.

Police obtained a search warrant for Lee's shoes and allegedly found a positive match for tread marks at the scene of the fire, Steva said.

Lee also allegedly admitted to taking merchandise and cash from several of the businesses.

Some of Lee's former employees described him as a "great guy who would give you the shirt off his back." He opened the parlor in February 1995 with the goal of monopolizing the Iowa City tattoo and body-piercing industry, they said.

Employees and managers at several Hall Mall businesses said they were "shocked" to

City Council will consider Etc. sanctions

By Choyon Manjrekar
The Daily Iowan

One year after denying Etc. its liquor license, a split Iowa City City Council will discuss whether to sanction the bar in connection with a fiery stunt that injured nine UI students.

At issue is whether the council should dole out the penalties or have a state agency take up the matter.

In a memo sent to city councilors Thursday, city attorneys said penalties against the establishment could include a fine of up to $1,000 for each criminal charge and suspension or revocation of its liquor license. As part of the alcohol ordinance passed last year, the council gave itself the authority to impose such sanctions on bars as a way to make them more accountable.

The council also has the option to forward the matter to the state Alcoholic Beverages Division. Councilors will discuss the matter at a work session on May 6, their first meeting since the April 18 incident.

Earlier this week, Etc. bar manager Troy Kline allegedly admitted to lighting the fire using Everclear and adding more liquor when the flames started to die, court records said.

Kline, 26, was charged with a reckless use of fire, a serious misdemeanor. The city also charged the bar with a simple misdemeanor for RAMALLAH, West Bank — Blowing kisses to children and flashing V-for-victory signs, Yasser Arafat toured his battle-scarred West Bank capital Thursday, vacated hours earlier by the Israeli troops and tanks that confined the Palestinian leader to his office for more than a month.

"These children will fly our flag over Palestine," the Palestinian leader vowed as cheering children waved tiny plastic Palestinian banners.

Even as the siege of Arafat's headquarters ended, the standoff at the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem, one of Christianity's holiest shrines, appeared to harden. During a 12-hour span, two shootouts and a fire broke out in the compound, though not in the fourth-century basilica itself, triggering angry accusations and counter-charges by Israel and the Palestinians.

In Washington, President Bush renewed his description of Israel's hold on the West Bank as an "occupation" and said it must yield to Palestinian statehood. Bush also set tough terms for a Palestinian state, saying it must be democratic and not based on a foundation of terror and corruption.

Secretary of State Colin Powell, after meeting with U.N., European and Russian officials, announced that they had agreed to hold an international conference early this summer to try to advance the peace efforts.

KRUI house ready to sign off; station readies move

By Lyndsay Gross
The Daily Iowan

From broadcasts in an El Camino to the rooftop of Slater Residence Hall, alumni from the university's broadcasting station have charted the campus airways in their 50-year endeavor to bring radio to the UI.

Approximately 80 KRUI alumni will gather in Iowa City Saturday to see their building before it is torn down. Their station will move to an unspecified location this summer, to be announced next week. UI officials said the move is necessary because the old building is poorly equipped and too expensive to keep up.

The station's move in 1996 was tumultuous, said KRUI alumni John Barker. Upon moving into the location in 1996, Barker said, it was hard to visualize the two-story house as a radio station.

"I thought for sure it was going to topple the place over," he said about the broadcasting equipment people crammed in the house.

KRUI alumni Emily Villhauer said she is disappointed that the building on Grand Avenue Court has to go.

"Over the four years it became home," Villhauer said. "I think it was a nice location because it was separate from other offices. It was easier for us because we were on our own."

Radio broadcasting began at the UI in 1952. The station, KWAD as it was called then, only served the Quadrangle Residence Hall, where it was located.

After changing the call letters to KRUI in 1976, funds went dry and the station shut down. In 1980, a struggling KRUI re-emerged, gaining funding from UI Student Government and the Associated Residence Halls.

Furloughs in future for 45 workers

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

During the next three weeks, 45 local employees for the Department of Human Services will be forced to take furloughs as part of a statewide cost-saving measure. Iowa City's Senior Center might also have to charge a fee for its members for the first time next year, the Johnson County Board of Supervisors was also told Thursday as the effect of budget cuts continued to mount. Human-services representatives said employees of field, office, and child-support staffs in Johnson County must take a total of two-and-one-half days of unpaid leave, on May 10, 17, and 24. The move will affect 5,000 employees across the state and will save $700,000. The furloughs will not affect such services as the department's child-abuse hotline, officials said. Some department employees have protested the move, filing grievances to earn compensation for their unpaid days. Bill Austin, the president of United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of American Local 893, said it's likely the workers will receive compensation eventually — even if it takes months. "The process is so time-consuming that I'm sure the offices will be closed those days," said Austin, who filed a grievance April 12. "I'm optimistic, though, that we'll get the money the state is supposed to pay us. It's just unfortunate that the state is balancing its budget on workers' backs." Human services provides food stamps, financial and medical assistance, and treatment services for children, families, and the elderly or disabled — aid many families need, said Marc Baty, the department's service-area manager. about children in need," he said. "What does this say about that expression?" Meanwhile, Iowa City residents who join the Senior Center, 28 S. Linn St., would have to pay $10 annually, while rates for Johnson County and state residents would reach $15 and $25, respectively, said Al Monsanto, one of the center's commissioners. Implementing the fees would cover half of the center's $45,000 deficit, he said. The rest would come from proposed cuts that would reduce the support necessary to air programs on public-access television and lower the cost of fulfilling the center's basic needs, he said. The center, which has 2,500 members, will also rely more heavily on work-study students for technical support, combine two maintenance positions, and postpone the installation of an advanced elevator fire alarm system until at least next year. The current alarm system works properly, but it does not tell authorities such useful information as where the fire is, Monsanto said. "We're really getting down to the basics here," he said. Public Safety to give Taser demonstration

UI Public Safety will demonstrate its new M26 air Tasers today. Officers began carrying the non-lethal weapons late last month. A press conference open to the public will be held at the Oakdale Hall Auditorium on the Oakdale Campus at 1:30 p.m. A Public Safety officer will fire two prongs from a Taser into an aluminum-foil target, showing the electricity the weapons generate, said Duane Papke, the Public Safety assistant director. Public Safety officials will also distribute handouts about the Tasers and training process, which began April 22. Thirty of the department's 31 officers began carrying the Tasers on April 29 after a two-and-a-half year campaign to arm the force. Officers have not used the Tasers yet, Papke said. The Tasers, costing $400 each, shoot two small darts up to 21 feet and deliver 50,000 volts of electricity, resulting immediate loss of neuromuscular control. The UI is the only campus in the Big Ten that does not allow its officers to carry lethal weapons. — by Paula Mavroudis

City may take over wetland regulation

By Tony Robinson
The Daily Iowan

City officials may soon regulate some Iowa City wetlands after the Planning and Zoning Commission unanimously voted to extend the city's control to land previously under federal control. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers had protected all Iowa wetlands from development until a 2001 Supreme Court case prohibited it from regulating "isolated" wetlands — those not connected to a navigable waterway. Iowa City city councilors have expressed an interest in controlling "isolated" wetlands in the area, and they directed the planning panel to amend the city's Sensitive Areas Ordinance, the policy now governing wetlands. The measure will be passed to the council, which could act on the matter as soon as May 7, its next formal meeting. Since the court case, three projects have affected Iowa City wetlands: offices in the North Airport Subdivision, a sewer system at the corner of Gilbert and Southgate streets, and the extension of Scott Boulevard, which is still underway. If approved, developing firms must get approval from city officials to build on wetlands. Becky Soglin of Iowa Wetlands In Need voiced strong support for the amendments because wetlands generate vegetation, filter water, and help control floods. "We had these regulations before the lawsuit — so it is only right that we put them back into play," she said. Soglin's group was formed in response to the suit that stripped the federal government of the right to regulate isolated wetlands. Iowa Environmental Council board member David Riley echoed Soglin, saying 90 percent of Iowa City's original wetlands have been destroyed. "We can't afford to keep destroying them," he said. "When they're gone, they're gone." While planning-panel members said they are only trying to replace regulations that had previously been in place, at least one amendment drew criticism from audience members. The Corps of Engineers formerly regulated land larger than one-tenth of an acre, while the new amendments do not cover one-tenth through one-half of an acre. One Iowa City resident said owners could dodge regulation by splitting up the land into equal parts and still develop wetlands. "I'm disappointed with this gap in the ordinance," Robynn Shrader said. "The whole point of adopting a new one is to make it as strong as the one we've had for so many years." E-mail DI reporter Tony Robinson at: tony-robinson@uiowa.edu

Vilsack: Another special session nearly certain

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Tom Vilsack said Thursday that he's almost certain to summon the Legislature back into a second special session because the state's budget crunch has grown well beyond projections. Vilsack said he won't make a final decision until after a panel of budget experts issues a new forecast of state tax collections on May 7, but he's meeting with key lawmakers to discuss a possible agenda. "I think we can work something out if people are reasonable," the governor said. Tax revenues are running well below projections, and tax refunds are much larger than expected — as much as $100 million more — requiring additional cuts to a budget that already has been cut and cut again. While Vilsack has some authority to shift money among various funds, he conceded that he will need legislative approval to plug a hole that big. "I think it's probably likely that the magnitude of the problem will be greater than what I can, as governor with the powers given me by the Legislature, can do alone," the governor said. Vilsack is under enormous time pressure because shortfalls are now looming for the current year's budget, as well as the budget for the year beginning in July.

The panel of budget forecasters will meet May 7 to issue new projections on how much the state will collect this year and next year. The 2003 budget plan drafted by the Republican-led Legislature is currently sitting on the governor's desk, and he has until May 12 to make a decision on what to do with that $4.6 billion spending plan. He declined to discuss details of his discussions with legislative leaders, saying specific steps can't be considered until all sides know precisely how large the shortfall will be. "It's pretty difficult to talk about specific options until you know the scope of the challenge," Vilsack said. The sour economy has given the governor and lawmakers budget headaches all year. They've been forced to repeatedly cut spending as forecasters underestimated the effect the recession was having on the state's budget. The latest surprise came when state officials started processing tax returns. They

Priest charged in rape

By Robert O'Neill
Associated Press

BOSTON — One of the most notorious figures in the sex-abuse scandal engulfing the Roman Catholic Church was arrested Thursday on charges he repeatedly raped a young boy, sometimes in a church confessional, during the 1980s.

The Rev. Paul Shanley, 71, who has advocated sex between men and boys, voluntarily surrendered at an apartment in San Diego on three counts of raping a child in Massachusetts.

Neither Middlesex County District Attorney Martha Coakley nor the victim's attorney gave his name, but a source close to the case identified him as Paul Busa, 24, a former Air Force policeman.

Busa went public with allegations last month in Colorado, where he was stationed, saying that he had repressed all memory of the abuse until hearing about a childhood friend who accused Shanley of molesting him.

Shanley was arrested early Thursday at an apartment complex for senior and disabled citizens that overlooks San Diego's Balboa Park.

He had kept such a low profile since the molestation allegations surfaced in March that the manager of the complex thought Shanley had moved out of the unit he shared with another man. No one answered the apartment's buzzer Thursday, and telephone calls went unanswered.

Shanley's Boston attorney, Frank Mondano, did not return repeated calls seeking comment Thursday.

Until recently, prosecutors believed Shanley may have fled the country. Coakley said her office acted quickly to arrest him after television reporters found him last week in San Diego. An extradition hearing was scheduled for today.

In a civil lawsuit against the archdiocese, Busa said Shanley began abusing him in 1983, when he was 6, and continued through 1989.

Shanley took the boy involved in the criminal charges out of religion classes almost weekly and brought him to a bathroom, the rectory, or the confessional at St. Jean Parish in Newton to abuse him, Coakley said.

2 die after dorm-window fall

By Steve Bailey
Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — A college student and a man he was wrestling with died early Thursday after they fell out a third-story window at a University of Kentucky dormitory, a school spokeswoman said.

Jeffrey Pfetzer, a 19-year-old University of Kentucky freshman from Villa Hills, was pronounced dead at the scene. Matthew Rzepka, 22, of Bowling Green, who was visiting his brother at the 23-story Kirwan Tower, died later at the University of Kentucky Hospital.

"The two males were apparently wrestling in an open area of the third-floor of the dormitory," spokeswoman Mary Margaret Collier said. "They smacked against a plate-glass window, the window gave out, and the two fell three stories to the ground."

She said she didn't know if alcohol played a factor in the accident, which happened around 2:30 a.m. The window was a sealed, double-pane window, roughly 3 feet wide and 8 feet tall. It was covered with plywood after the accident.

Kim Fesmire, an 18-year-old freshman from Paducah, said she was sleeping in her fourth-floor room when she was awakened by the commotion.

It was chaos — people yelling, and screaming, and crying ... just running everywhere.

— Kim Fesmire,
University of Kentucky freshman

"It was chaos — people yelling, and screaming, and crying ... just running everywhere," she said.

Both of the men died of blunt force trauma to the head, according to coroner's reports. Rzepka had been a student at Western Kentucky University until the summer of 2001.

Lindsey Cooper, an 18-year-old freshman from Dayton, Ohio, was studying for a biology exam in her 17th-floor dorm room at the time and said other students were drifting in from the library.

"Then this just happened out of nowhere. It's awful," she said.

A steady stream of students poured out of the dorm Thursday morning with boxes, lamps, televisions, and radios in tow to go home for the summer. Many wiped away streams of tears as they comforted each other.

University of Kentucky President Lee Todd and his wife went to the scene before 3 a.m. to comfort witnesses.

"As a parent, you dread that phone call at 2:30 in the morning like I got," Todd said. "Your heart just goes out to those two families."

At Ohio's Denison University, a 17-year-old girl fell to her death from a fourth-floor dormitory window early on April 27. Alcohol was ruled out as a factor in her death, investigators said.

Anne Thomson of Lake Forest, Ill., had been visiting her sister at the school and stayed awake for about 24 hours. Investigators speculated that Thomson was fatigued and had gotten up in the night to go to the bathroom and mistook the fourth-floor hallway window for her bed.

The window sill and bed were the same height, and a heating unit in front of the open window was about the same height as a step used to get into her bed, said Bruce Myers, a Licking County deputy sheriff.

The college of approximately 2,000 students is in Granville, 35 miles east of Columbus.

Paid internships drying up this summer, students find

By Martha Irvine
Associated Press

Last summer, Tracey Lomrantz was a paid intern for a New York law firm. This year, with a stack of rejections from journalism internships on her desk, she figures she'll wait tables.

"It's really frustrating," says Lomrantz, a junior at Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa.

Other young people know the feeling. College students who once had their pick of summer work that offered both professional experience and a paycheck are finding this year's market the toughest they've ever faced.

Some are turning to more traditional summer jobs, which is making it harder for high-school students to get seasonal work at all.

Many companies have cut summer internships. And those who've kept them say they're getting an unprecedented number of applications — even for unpaid positions.

At HWH Public Relations agency in New York, for example, 200 college students — twice last year's number — applied for this summer's unpaid internship at the firm.

In a climate where some college graduates are still looking for jobs or accepting positions that once went to students, experts say an undergrad might need to apply with 20 companies to get one offer — and forgo a wage.

"This is not the summer to get rich. This is the summer to get experience," says Steven Rothberg, the president and founder of CollegeRecruiter.com, a Minneapolis-based jobs Web site for college students.

Officials at AboutJobs.com — which runs such sites as SummerJobs.com and ResortJobs.com — also say site traffic has risen 7 percent in a year when the company has cut back on advertising.

The trend is having a trickle-down effect on high-school students.

Joshua Ginsburg, a 17-year-old high school student from Houston, applied this spring for jobs at several sporting-goods chains and music stores but didn't land a thing.

He's decided to make the most of his misfortune — volunteering his time teaching computer skills to disadvantaged kids and writing a book about "teen stress from the male perspective."

The flooded market is sending an overflow of college-age applicants to some traditional summer employers that, in recent years, have been crying for workers.

Sue Merrill, the director of the Kampus Kampers camp in Boca Raton, Fla., says she's never been able to fill her counselor positions as quickly as she has this year.

Not everyone has been so lucky. In New Jersey, restaurateur Karen Parziale still reports a dearth of students, especially teens, willing to work as wait staff. It's "a desperate situation," she says.

"They would rather spend their summers at the beach tanning," says Parziale, who runs the Riverside Cafe & Restaurant with her brother in Manasquan, N.J.

Court: Nike broke advertising laws

By Karen Gaudette
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The California Supreme Court ruled that Nike Inc. can be sued by a man who contends that the company broke advertising laws with an ad campaign that defended the wages, treatment, and safety conditions of workers at overseas factories.

In a split decision Thursday, the court overturned a lower court ruling that said Nike's efforts to quell accusations of worker mistreatment did not constitute commercial speech.

"Our holding, based on decisions of the United States Supreme Court, in no way prohibits any business enterprise from speaking out on issues of public importance or from vigorously defending its own labor practices," the court wrote. "It means only that when a business enterprise, to promote and defend its sales and profits, makes factual representations about its own products or its own operations, it must speak truthfully."

Nike attorney David Brown said he may ask the U.S. Supreme Court to review the case. "We're greatly disappointed with it because we feel that Nike's position is legally the correct one," Brown said.

The highly publicized lawsuit claims Nike's 1996-97 campaign in defense of its wages, treatment of workers, and health and safety conditions at Asian plants run by contractors was misleading.

The lawsuit says Nike falsely stated that it guarantees a "living wage" to all workers, that its workers in Southeast Asia make twice the local minimum wage and are protected from corporal punishment, and that it complies with government rules on wages, hours, and health and safety conditions.

NATION BRIEF

Motorcycle gangs embroiled in turf war

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The deadly gun and knife fight in a Nevada casino last weekend was just the latest battle in an increasingly bloody turf war in which several motorcycle gangs across the country have all lined up against the Hells Angels.

The bloodshed among the outlaw bikers began several months ago with the breakdown of a truce that had largely held for about a decade. At stake are turf and the drug trade that comes with it.

Law-enforcement experts said they not sure exactly what set off the round of violence, but it has put the Pagans, Bandidos, Sons, Outlaws, Vagos, and Mongols on the same side.

"You have the Hells Angels basically going up against virtually every other motorcycle club," said Tim McKinley, a motorcycle-gang expert with the FBI in San Francisco.

The rising tensions over the past few months had led Sonny Barger, the legendary founder of the Angels, to organize a "peace powwow" in the Arizona desert that was supposed to take place after the gathering of motorcycle enthusiasts in Laughlin, Nev., last weekend, Arizona police said.

But the peace conference was scuttled by the brawl between the Hells Angels and the Mongols inside Harrah's Casino. Three bikers — two Hells Angels and a Mongol — died in the crowded casino, and a Hells Angel was shot to death as he rode away from Laughlin.

Barger, who lives near Phoenix, has declined telephone and e-mail requests for comment.

House passes subsidy-laden farm bill

By Philip Brasher
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House overwhelmingly approved an election-year farm bill Thursday that will pour billions of dollars in subsidies into Midwestern and Southern states that are political battlegrounds for lawmakers in both parties.

The bill, which would boost subsidies by 70 percent, marks a reversal of the 1996 Freedom to Farm law that was supposed to wean farmers from government subsidies.

The Senate is expected to pass the measure next week and send it to President Bush for his signature.

Shortly before the House's 280-141 vote, Bush said the bill was not everything he wanted but will "help ensure the immediate and long-term viability of our farm economy."

"We all know that Freedom to Farm didn't work," said Rep. Jo Ann Emerson, R-Mo. "While no farmer wants to depend on the government for anything, it is critical that we provide a safety net to our producers."

The bill, which has broad support among major farm groups, would authorize $180 billion in spending over the next 10 years, a $73.5 billion increase over existing programs.

It fattens subsidies for grain and cotton farmers, who have traditionally dominated programs, and provides new payments for everything from milk and lentils to honey and wool.

An 80 percent increase in land-conservation programs will benefit livestock farms and fruit and vegetable growers who historically have received little federal cash.

"We're going back to a strong government presence in agriculture," said Luther Tweeten, an agricultural economist at Ohio State University. "It certainly gives some security to farmers. It comes at a very high cost to taxpayers and to the national economy, however."

The political implications were huge. Several major farm states probably will have close Senate races this fall, including Arkansas, Georgia, Iowa, Minnesota, and South Dakota.

Bush will need to retain the solid support he received in 2000 across the Plains and South if he seeks re-election in 2004.

Another beneficiary: Sen. James Jeffords, I-Vt., who wanted the new dairy subsidies to replace a New England price-setting system that expired last year. Senate Democrats owe their majority status to Jeffords' switch from the GOP in 2001.

"Throw in an important election season, and it makes it very difficult" to stop big subsidies, said Rep. Ron Kind, D-Wis. "It's been a bad process, and it's resulted in bad policy."

Economists say the subsidies are likely to encourage overproduction of crops and inflate land rents, which raises costs for farmers who do not own their own land. Bush's support for the bill represented a switch from his administration's earlier criticism of farm subsidies, which the legislation continues and expands.

The bill's increased subsidies have angered foreign competitors. The European Union said

Charles Rex Arbogast/Associated Press
John Grab, a family farmer near Freeburg, Ill., walks through his crop of winter wheat Thursday. The House overwhelmingly approved an election-year farm bill Thursday that will pour billions of dollars in subsidies into Midwestern and Southern states.

Thursday it was considering a challenge of the payments before the World Trade Organization. Under WTO limits, certain U.S. farm subsidies cannot exceed $19.1 billion annually. The bill authorizes the Agriculture Department to adjust subsidies to stay within the cap.

"The United States is increasing trade-distorting support for [American] farmers that will harm developing countries. This is what we are fiercely opposed to," EU spokesman Gregor Kreuzhuber.

Canada's agriculture minister, Lyle Vanclief, said the higher subsidies will be a "serious blow to the U.S.' credibility" during the next round of world trade negotiations.

Man commits suicide after sparking wildfire

Associated Press

MAYHILL, N.M. — A man who started a wildfire in the Sacramento Mountains that has burned more than 9,500 acres and destroyed at least 20 structures committed suicide because he couldn't live with what happened, a sheriff said Thursday.

The man wrote a suicide note and then shot himself in the head Wednesday night at his home near Mayhill, Otero County Sheriff John Lee said.

"He felt that he couldn't live with what happened," Lee said.

The sheriff did not release the contents of the letter, but he said the man, who he identified as William Myers, didn't know whether it was a cigarette or a spark from his vehicle that started the fire on Tuesday.

"He did know he caused it," Lee said.

Lee said authorities had questioned Myers about the fire several times but didn't have enough evidence to arrest him.

The fire burned a swath through the southern New Mexico mountains on Wednesday, jumping from 800 acres to 9,500 acres in a day as winds gusted up to 60 mph.

Hundreds of residents around Mayhill were urged to leave Wednesday afternoon, but some decided to stay, said Joe Garcia, a spokesman for the Lincoln National Forest. The governor's office declared a state of emergency Thursday morning.

"Now we have another tragedy on top of a tragedy," Lt. Gov. Walter Bradley said. "The fact is, we know this gentleman. He lived in Will's Canyon. He was a very honorable and honest man, and he just felt he could not face his family and friends with what happened."

Crews were sent to New Mexico from a largely contained blaze in southern Arizona that charred 36,000 acres of dry grass and oak brush.

Rick Hartigan of the U.S. Forest Service said windy conditions and erratic fire movement made Wednesday "a horrendous day," as the New Mexico fire ballooned. Slurry planes were grounded because of the wind.

Forestry officials said the 20 structures that burned were west of Mayhill, a town of approximately 250 people 100 miles north of El Paso, Texas. They said at least two were homes.

Rumsfeld guns down gun

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said Thursday he intends to cancel an $11 billion program to develop a new artillery gun for the Army, a move that revealed tensions between Rumsfeld and Army Secretary Thomas White, who has fought to save the program.

Without mentioning names, Rumsfeld said he was looking into reports that Army officials had gone behind his back to Congress in hopes of building political pressure to rescue the project.

"I have a minimum of high regard for that kind of behavior," Rumsfeld told reporters.

Rumsfeld's comment about behind-the-scenes maneuvering over the future of the artillery project, called Crusader, suggested he felt his authority as the Pentagon's top civilian official was being challenged.

It also raised questions about White's future. He is under political pressure as a result of his contacts with Enron Corp. officials during the company's collapse last year. White had headed Enron Energy Services, a subsidiary, before he became Army secretary.

Loren Thompson, a defense expert at the Lexington Institute, a think tank, said the flap over Crusader may well be the final straw for White, a decorated Vietnam veteran.

"Mr. White has finally found a matter of principle on which to depart," Thompson said in an interview.

Col. Tom Begines, an Army spokesman, said he had no comment on the matter.

The conflict over Crusader is part of a wider battle Rumsfeld has waged with the Army and other services since he took office last year and pledged to transform the military to meet 21st century challenges.

In a related development, the Pentagon's top weapons buyer said there no longer is any question of canceling the Air Force's F-22 new-generation stealth fighter. Pete Aldridge, the undersecretary of Defense for acquisition, said the only question is whether the Pentagon will buy all 339 planes the Air Force says it needs. Some in the Pentagon believe fewer than 200 are needed.

Democrats: Students need federal aid after state cuts

By Greg Toppo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — States are cutting higher education budgets even as rising college costs strain poor and middle-class families, congressional Democrats said Thursday in urging President Bush to increase federal help.

The slow economic recovery has led states to trim higher-education budgets and raise tuition, putting college out of reach for thousands of low- and middle-income students, according to a report issued by the Democrats.

A separate report, released Wednesday by a California think tank, said tuition at public colleges and universities is taking a bigger bite out of many families' paychecks, outpacing financial aid and state support.

"This administration is leaving college students and children behind," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., referring to Bush's "Leave no child behind" education plan.

States plan to cut $5.5 billion from higher education over two years, Democrats said, with 30 already making midyear cuts. Shrinking budgets, coupled with increasing tuition and federal aid that does not keep pace with rising costs, could close the doors to college for 110,000 students, they said.

The Bush administration's student-aid budget would serve 375,000 fewer low-income students, with no increase in funds for several aid programs, Democrats said.

"You can talk about education all you want, but you have to pay for it," said Sen. Jack Reed, D-R.I.

Stacy Valentin, a senior at Western Washington State University, said she carries $17,000 in debt. "It's essential for Congress to fund more grants over loans," she said.

Democrats say Bush's 2003 budget has "shortchanged" the Pell grant program, making the maximum grant approximately $3,900 rather than $4,000.

They blamed Bush's $1.35 trillion, 10-year tax cut, which he wants to expand in his 2003 budget.

The nonpartisan Congressional Budget office estimates that Bush's 2003 budget would shrink the maximum Pell grant $100. Because of inflation, it already buys about half as much as it did in 1979.

But the White House's Office of Management and Budget blamed Congress for not putting enough money into the Pell program to offset the $4,000 maximum.

"It was Congress that shorted the Pell grant program by $1.3 billion," said OMB spokesman Trent Duffy. "It bounced a check to 4.5 million low-income students."

Dave Schnitger, a spokesman for Rep. John Boehner, R-Ohio, the Republican leader of the House education committee, called the Democrats' report "an entirely disingenuous effort... to disguise the fact that they don't have an education budget of their own, and they're not willing to step up and make the tough choices necessary to lead."

Education Secretary Rod Paige said Bush is committed to keep college affordable by funding Pell grants, tax credits, and new tax deductions for interest paid on college loans. He said the administration is also making more students eligible for the grants.

Small rally ends Le Pen campaign

By Mort Rosenblum
Associated Press

MARSEILLE, France — Rain dampened Jean-Marie Le Pen's parade on Thursday, and the extreme-right presidential candidate found barely 3,000 supporters at what was supposed to be a triumphant rally to close his campaign.

"Paris is the heart of France, but Marseille is the heart of the National Front," he told the small, cheering crowd, thanking them for carrying him to an upset victory in the election's first round.

In a long speech, delivered without notes as he paced by a huge French flag in a half-filled sports arena, Le Pen attacked President Jacques Chirac for what he said was corruption and failing to address rising crime in France.

Le Pen came to this ancient Mediterranean city for a final flourish before the election. He upset Prime Minister Lionel Jospin in the first round and now faces Chirac in Sunday's runoff.

Meanwhile, Chirac held a final campaign rally in suburban Paris, where he praised the "democratic élan" of more than a million anti-Le Pen protesters who marched across France a day earlier.

"We wondered about the vigor of our democratic ideal. How we were wrong!" Chirac yelled to a crowd of approximately 20,000 people in the northern suburb of Villepinte.

Chirac was critical of the far right, saying it had "betrayed" France in the past and insisting that its leaders have been "definitively disqualified from speaking on behalf of France."

In Marseille, Le Pen got a massive round of applause when he predicted there will be an "extraordinary surprise" on May 5. He said his information indicated he could already expect at least 40 percent of the vote, "and it's only Thursday."

A poll published earlier today in the daily Le Figaro indicated that Chirac would win 79 percent of the vote and Le Pen would receive 21 percent. The survey of 1,012 registered voters was conducted April 30-May 2 by the Ipsos polling agency. No margin of error was given.

Notorious prison releases Taliban

By Niko Price
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Newly freed from Afghanistan's most notorious prison, gaunt and bewildered Taliban inmates spoke Thursday of being packed 50 to 60 in cells meant for five and starvation rations that sometimes led to death.

Hundreds of inmates — heads shaved for lice and ratty clothes hanging loosely from wasted bodies — wrapped themselves in thin shawls against the evening chill as they waited in the Afghan capital of Kabul for buses to take them home.

"There are still small children being held there," said Nazar Mohammed, 22. "They should have been released before us."

The prisoners were all Taliban fighters arrested when the Northern Alliance swept through northern Afghanistan in November 2001. All said they had been forced to join the Taliban under threats to their families or of losing their land, shops, or houses.

The exact number of inmates released Wednesday from northern Shibergan prison was not clear. Caroline Douilliez, a spokeswoman for the International Red Cross, said 614 prisoners had been freed. A deputy of Gen. Abdul Rashid Dostum, who controls the prison, put the number at 560.

Despite the releases, the prison remains at three times capacity. Faizullah Zaki, a spokesman for Dostum, said 2,300 prisoners remained in Shibergan, including 800 foreigners, nearly all of them from Pakistan. Among those still held are boys as young as 14 or 15.

The bulk of the released prisoners — approximately 400 — arrived in Kabul in a convoy of buses they paid for with money from the International Committee of the Red Cross, which gave each inmate roughly $14 as he left the prison.

The convoy was held up for three hours at a military checkpoint on the outskirts of Kabul, the prisoners said, and they were forced to hand over the equivalent of about $1.40 each to guards before being allowed to continue on.

In addition, all of the prisoners interviewed said relatives had to bribe prison officials to win their release, most citing a figure of about $500.

Murad Sezer/Associated Press

Former Taliban fighters released from a notorious Afghan prison wait for transportation in Kabul, Afghanistan, on Thursday. Hundreds of Taliban inmates released from desperate conditions in Shibergan prison made their way home Thursday.

"It was like bargaining in the marketplace," said Hezmatullah, who traveled from southern Spinboldak to negotiate the release of his brother. "They started at about $660 and went down from there."

Their release came after a visit from a delegation from the southern city of Kandahar, which negotiated with Dostum's representatives, the prisoners said. Those freed said the delegation included Mohammed

Shah, the brother of Kandahar Gov. Gul Agha.

The prisoners told of atrocious conditions in Shibergan — and they appeared to be living proof of their contentions. All were painfully thin, their ribs protruding when they lifted their now-oversized tunics. Many had red eyes from infections, and some bore needle marks on their arms from intravenous feeding.

FBI tailed charity head for 3 weeks

By Mike Robinson
Associated Press

CHICAGO — The FBI placed the head of an Islamic charity suspected of ties to Osama bin Laden under round-the-clock surveillance for three weeks before arresting him just days before he was to fly to Saudi Arabia, officials said.

Enaam Arnaout, a Syrian-born American who was arrested in Chicago on Tuesday, could face even more trouble as federal agents sift through evidence from phone taps, trash bins, and a police raid on offices of his Benevolence International Foundation in Bosnia, authorities said.

In Bosnia on Thursday, a spokesman for NATO-led peacekeepers said the March 19 raid had unearthed "evidence of direct communication between Arnaout and Osama bin Laden."

Maj. Scott Lundy said the NATO forces, deployed in Bosnia to keep the peace, are "pleased to see that evidence collected ... led to Arnaout's arrest."

FBI agents had watched Benevolence International for years before Tuesday, when they made the Palos Hills-based organization the first charity charged in the terrorism investigation.

A 35-page FBI affidavit accompanying the complaint details alleged ties between both Arnaout and the foundation to bin Laden dating back to the early 1980s. It says the group has funneled substantial sums to his Al Qaeda network and to Chechen rebels whom Al Qaeda might have trained.

"Documents ... recovered in the search in Bosnia indicates correspondence between bin Laden on the one hand and Arnaout on the other hand," U.S. Attorney Patrick Fitzgerald said. "It obviously indicates a relationship between the two dating back to the 1980s."

The affidavit also shed fresh light on the 1993 World Trade Center bombing masterminded by Ramzi Yousef. It said documents in possession of bin Laden's brother-in-law, Mohamed Jamal Khalifa, when he was stopped in San Francisco in 1994 later were found to tie him to Yousef.

Khalifa was detained while traveling with Mohamed Bayazid, one of two men accused of trying to obtain nuclear-weapons materials on behalf of Al Qaeda in an incident in 1994 in the Sudan. The affidavit said Bayazid obtained an Illinois driver's license listing his address as that of Benevolence International in Palos Hills.

The affidavit says that following the March 19 Bosnian raid, Arnaout phoned the head of the Benevolence International chapter in Bosnia and asked him not to provide the police with information.

Jubilant crowds greet Arafat

Palestinian allegations that Israeli troops carried out a massacre at the West Bank refugee camp of Jenin, the scene of furious fighting last month.

But the report by U.S.-based Human Rights Watch, which spent a week gathering testimony at the camp, said many civilians were killed "willfully and unlawfully" and that other serious abuses, some of which could be war crimes, were documented.

The group and others have confirmed 52 deaths in the camp, including those of 22 civilians. Israel says the death toll was likely in the dozens, with most of them gunmen and other combatants.

Danny Ayalon, the foreign-policy adviser to Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, said the report showed there was no truth to the charges of a massacre. "I flatly reject the war crimes charge," he added. "With in the reality there, the [military] did everything to be reasonable."

Hebron, Israeli jeeps and an armored personnel entered a Palestinian neighborhood and arrested Mohammed Berwish, a top leader of the militant Islamic Jihad, Palestinians said. The Israeli military confirmed the arrest.

The 72-year-old Arafat — confined with several dozen aides to a few fetid rooms since March 29, when Israeli tanks punched through the perimeter wall of his compound in the West Bank town of Ramallah — emerged at midmorning, steadied by his men and blinking in the bright spring sunshine. A waiting crowd erupted in cries of "Allahu Akbar!" — "God is great!"

During the weeks the Palestinian leader spent under effective house arrest, Israeli troops and armor launched the biggest military operation in the West Bank since the 1967 Middle East War, taking over more than half a dozen Palestinian cities, towns, and refugee camps in what Sharon described as a concerted effort to smash a Palestinian terrorist infrastructure.

mean I'm not willing to listen," she said.

Some said Keller's proposition sounds like the same plan COGS turned down the last time it discussed the issue with officials. That proposal would have cost the university approximately $5 million.

"We don't see any reason to do that if we're not getting a benefit from it," said COGS President Lise VanderVoort, who added that some students who pay less in tuition might even lose salary under the plan. She said it's not fair for the university to receive benefits if the students aren't as well.

The policy would make the university eligible for millions of dollars in grant money, said Michael Marchman, a former COGS negotiator.

"The question is whether the university can come up with a proposal acceptable to our membership," he said. "I think it's great, and I hope we can work towards it."

hear he is allegedly responsible.

"You hear the word 'betrayal,' but until this happened I didn't know what it really meant," said Bill Francis, who worked with Lee for two years. "This really hurts."

Francis, who now works for

Atomic Body Piercing, one of the businesses burglarized by Lee, said the motive may have been retaliation, adding that Lee was on good terms with most of the business owners.

Police refused to speculate what reasons Lee had.

According to several Hall Mall employees, Lee's financial situation had worsened considerably in the months before he went out of business.

"I came to work one day, and he said, 'Grab what's yours and get out,'" Francis said. "His personal financial obligations were affecting the business."

Davey Jones, a tattoo artist for Subculture, the Hall Mall business that sustained the brunt of the damage, said he knows Lee as a friend and a boss.

"I hope he gets some psychiatric help... I'm shocked that he would do something like that," Jones said.

Lee, who is married with one child, is being held in the Johnson County Jail on $30,000 bail. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for May 13.

violating the fire code. Kline and the establishment pleaded not guilty.

Mayor Ernie Lehman said Thursday, he favors forwarding the case to state officials, saying any local decision would be appealed to them regardless. Councilor Irvin Pfab said he "definitely" wants to take a look at suspending or revoking the establishment's license. Other councilors were unavailable for comment Thursday.

State officials have been notified of the case, and they are willing to take "appropriate action," said a memo from City Attorney Eleanor Dilkes and Assistant City Attorney Andrew Matthews. The memo stopped short of recommending local or state action, but it noted that it has been council policy to forward violations to the state.

"As you know, any administrative sanction imposed by the council may be appealed to the [alcohol division]," the memo said.

The May 6 meeting will come one year after the council voted 4-3 to deny the bar a liquor license. A majority of the council cited flaws with the moral character of owner Kip Pohl as well as his son, Jim Pohl, whose Union Bar had its liquor license suspended for 21 days for running bikini contests in which contestants exposed themselves and minors were sold alcohol.

The bar, 121 E. College St., was also fined $2,000.

At that meeting, Pfab told Kip Pohl: "In the Bible it says, 'You shall know a tree by the fruit it bears,' and the incidents you're involved in don't speak of a moral character."

A few months later, a state administrative judge granted a liquor license after the establishment appealed, saying Kip Pohl met the moral qualifications.

College attendance is a family, not court, decision

When students reach their junior year in high school, many ponder the question of whether to attend college. After making the decision to attend college, the next logical question is, who will pay for it?

Some of us who attend the UI are here because are parents have been gracious enough to pay for our education. Some of us are here because of a scholarship, whether academic or athletic. Still others of us are here on student loans. It is obvious that there are many different ways in which students pay for their college education.

Last week, the DI reported on a decision made by the Iowa Court of Appeals that said parents who have never been married can be forced to pay for their children's education. Previously, parents who were divorced were forced to pay for their child's higher education.

This new decision is absurd.

How did this even become an issue in the first place? Debbie Johnson and Michael Louis had a child out of wedlock. Child support was paid up until the child's 18th birthday, at which point attending college was brought up. Whatever caused this to reach to the appeals court, the outcome is extremely clear. Both Johnson and Louis will now each be forced to pay for one-third of their child's college education, leaving the last third to be paid by the child.

How can someone be forced to pay for another adult's education? Once you reach the age of 18, you are considered an adult in every aspect of the law, except for the purchase and consumption of alcohol. It should not matter whether the parents got married or got a divorce; the child is now an adult, and if the parents cannot afford college or choose not to pay for their child's education, that is their choice. This is not a decision to be made by other people. What is going to happen next? Are we now going to force all parents to pay for their child's education if they chose to go to college?

This decision makes the choice of whether a person goes to college. This is not the court's decision to be made. The parents, along with the child who wants to attend college, should make the decision.

The past law and the appeals court's decision should be eliminated. Each situation and each family are different, but this still does not give the state the right to make laws that force families of adults to pay for something that they possibly afford.

Letters to the Editor

Petland cares

I am writing in response to Shannon Miller's Letter to the Editor (DI, April 30). I am an employee at the Iowa City Petland store, and I would like to inform the community about who we are and what we stand for.

Petland is a locally owned and family-operated franchise, not just some national chain store. Petland does not get its puppies from puppy mills. We get them through a company that has a system of checks and balances to make sure that the pets it purchases are not mistreated in any way.

Petland has also been asking local breeders to supply us with all kinds of pets, including puppies. No matter where our pets come from, we have a local veterinarian check all animals that come into our store to ensure that they are healthy and happy. We also have a wonderful program called Adopt-A-Pet for which we take in unwanted litters of kittens and puppies and find good homes for them. We are aiming to have about 50 percent of our pets come from these unwanted litters within the next year. All of these pets will be neutered, as will their parents. If you have any questions, we would love to answer them for you, and we encourage everyone to come see for themselves how much we care about our animals and our customers.

Fires, swimsuits, and Roofies, oh my!

I am writing concerning the Ledge that appeared in the April 30 DI, written by Sarah Toton and Micah Wedemeyer. I am usually a fan of the Ledge and look forward to reading it daily. Often it can be rude and offensive, but it is to be read with a grain of salt. However, this Ledge column crossed that line to become offensive, rude, and appalling. I am surprised that it was even allowed to appear in the DI; the DI generally has much higher standards than this.

With the topic, "Bad Iowa City bar gimmicks," the Ledge listed three disgusting statements. The first was "lighting the bar on fire." I do not see the humor in this after nine people were severely injured in this bar stunt, with third-degree burns to their bodies and lives that will be changed forever.

This comment alone would not have spawned my disgust with this Ledge, but when another is "Run the first 'Swimsuit Contest' featuring area middle schoolers," I was shocked. This is tasteless and detestable to say the least. Using children in a swimsuit contest, where people are generally judged on their sex appeal and/or how they look in a swimsuit, is not amusing at all. It's alarming that Toton and Wedemeyer would think it to be, especially with all the recent events of child abuse and molestation occurring.

But the real clincher was the point, "Endorse the game 'Find the Roofie.'" I cannot believe that Toton, Wedemeyer, or their editors would find this point funny or acceptable to print. The use of the drug Rohypnol (Roofies) in alcohol drinks or alone is not funny at all, and to make light of this problem shows a great lack of sensitivity on the part of the writers. This is a powerful drug that is often used to rape people, as it blocks their memory for a period of time. The use of Roofies is a serious problem, even on this campus, and it should not be taken lightly or made fun of. It is more than a "Bad Bar Gimmick" as the Ledge suggests; it is illegal and just plain wrong. Using Roofies or "Find the Roofie" is in very poor taste and pokes fun at a very serious problem where there is no room for humor.

I suggest the future writers of the Ledge, as well as the editors, take a closer look at the kind of things they are allowing to be printed and what is considered funny.

The Utah Jell-O Rivalry: Day 816

Those of you who keep up with the news are probably aware that it has been two years, two months, and 25 days since Des Moines officially overtook pesky Salt Lake City as the No. 1 city in the United States (in Jell-O consumption per capita, that is). However, Salt Lake City reclaimed its title last year and continues strong as No. 1, leaving Des Moines with no claim to fame. Has anybody else been following this story?

In the past, Salt Lake City has spared no expense to rub its victory in Des Moines' face. The Utah Senate named Jell-O the official snack of Utah (as I understand it, this office ranks just behind lieutenant governor in both power and prestige). Also, a week in February has been dedicated to the dessert, and it is celebrated annually. How arrogant is Salt Lake City anyway? First it gets the Winter Olympics and now this.

The Jell-O resolution in Utah was sponsored by Sen. Leonard Blackham. And I quote, "I chose Jell-O because of what it stands for: wholesomeness and family values. This is fun in the right sense of recognizing something that's a vehicle for some important values." Wow. I didn't realize that the Mormon belief system could be so accurately represented by a pan full of colored jiggly matter.

I resent Blackham's assertion that this is "fun in the right sense." This is no fun at all for the thousands of Des Moines families who may never have their own snack food to represent their ideals. It is wrong for Utah to monopolize the fame that naturally comes along with mass Jell-O consumption. And when did this become about Utah, anyway? I thought that Salt Lake City was the Jell-O champion. When did this become a statewide issue? Perhaps Iowa as a whole consumes more Jell-O per capita than Utah. After all, the Burge dining hall has to bring up the statewide average.

Calvin Hennick

A DIFFERENT SLANT

Personally, I would like to know what sort of counting system was used in this Jell-O eating contest. I come from the Des Moines area, and no one has ever asked me how much Jell-O I consume on average. I assume, therefore, that this title was bestowed on Salt Lake City based on the amount of Jell-O sold there, not eaten. How are we to know that these people actually ate all of the Jell-O they bought. Isn't it possible — just possible — that the Utahans were so jealous, so enraged as a result of Des Moines stripping them of their title that they went out and bought hoards of Jell-O with no intention of ever eating it, just to win back the championship? It seems likely.

Another possibility comes to mind. Surely Salt Lake City has a higher tourist population than Des Moines does. Wouldn't it be safe to assume that these tourists come into town empty-handed but leave with truckloads of Jell-O? Picture it. You're all alone in a strange new city. You're hungry, but your hotel room has no stove, oven, or microwave. All you have is a faucet, an empty fridge, and a pan you brought from home. What do you do? Buy Jell-O, of course. It's easy, fun, and oh-so-yummy. In fact, some of these tourists may be from Des Moines, decent people unwittingly contributing to their own downfall.

Utah isn't happy with just "Jell-O Week" and official snack designation. The state even produced a green gelatin pin for the 2002 Winter Olympics. Wait a second! Now it all makes sense. OK, as a responsible journalist, it would be unethical for me to accuse Jell-O of falsely awarding its championship to Salt Lake City in exchange for free Olympic advertising. I have no proof, but I don't think that the skating judges were the only scandal at the last Olympics.

A brutal twist of the knife came last year when Jell-O spokesman Bill Cosby became an honorary citizen of Utah at a joint session of the Utah House and Senate. Jell-O even handed out free samples in the Capitol rotunda. Talk about corporate influence in politics. How many congressmen may be swayed to the Jell-O agenda once bribed with these "samples?"

Utah's insults can no longer be ignored. After two years of gelatinous repression, we Iowans must rally behind our capital and buy some friggin' jigglers. Perhaps then, Cosby will grace us with his pudding-pop presence.

Lisa Lopes remembered

By Kyle Wingfield
Associated Press

LITHONIA, Ga. — Lisa "Left Eye" Lopes of the Grammy-winning trio TLC was remembered for her funky raps, her vivacious personality, and her sometimes turbulent attitude at her funeral on Thursday.

The service for the self-anointed "crazy" member of the female R&B group took place a week after her death in a Honduras car crash.

Thousands of fans joined family and celebrity friends at the funeral, which seemed more like a concert at times; gospel duo Mary Mary was among those who sang, backed by a 150-member choir.

Among the mourners were Tionne "T-Boz" Watkins and Rozonda "Chilli" Thomas, the surviving members of the multi-platinum-selling group, and Janet Jackson, Whitney Houston, and Bobby Brown.

Lopes' white casket was engraved with a rap she recited on TLC's No. 1 smash "Waterfalls." It read, "Dreams are hopeless aspirations, in hopes of coming true, believe in yourself, the rest is up to me and you."

"I know in this situation it's difficult to rejoice at the passing of someone we loved," said the Rev. Eddie Long, the pastor of the New Birth Missionary Baptist Church in suburban Atlanta. "But it would be a mockery of her life if we did not celebrate life."

Lopes died April 25 when the SUV she was driving rolled off a highway in Honduras, her favorite vacation spot. She would have turned 31 this month.

Best known for her deftly crafted rhymes, Lopes also was the most energetic member of the trio — and the most volatile. At times, she had public spats with the two other women.

But she was at her most infamous when she pleaded guilty to arson in a 1994 fire that destroyed the million-dollar mansion of former Atlanta Falcons receiver Andre Rison, her boyfriend at the time.

Rison was among hundreds who attended a private memorial service Wednesday night in Decatur, another Atlanta suburb.

"She was my heart," Rison told WSB-TV after leaving the service. "We're going to let her fly with wings like angels do. She's truly and definitely an angel."

The Frogs haven't stopped being offensive, ridiculous, and really interesting for the last 20-plus years. Bringing 6-foot bat wings, possibly some pyrotechnics, and more than two decades of accumulated anti-pop ambivalence, the Frogs will perform at Gabe's tonight.

A collision of content, form, and intent, the Frogs can honestly piss people off. Formed by brothers Jimmy and Dennis Flemion in the early '80s, the Milwaukee duo launched a barrage of graphically sexual and seemingly homophobic songs at a variety of Wisconsin coffeehouses while also tirelessly home-recording them.

Breakout album It's Only Right and Natural (1989) was steeped high in the band's straight-faced Gay Supremacy Movement rhetoric. Featuring such songs as "Homos" and "These are the Finest Queen question surrounding the Frogs is whether the band is just a couple of annoying and mean fucks from Milwaukee, a duo using confrontation as some sort of artistic intent, or a brave couple of guys making a cutting statement against intolerance with bitter satire.

Extremely caustic lyrically, the Frogs has always taken a delight in contrasting these outrageous songs against pleasant folk-chord progressions and soothing vocals.

But with moderate and unmean-spirited friends in the likes of Billy Corgan (who produced 2001's Hopscotch Lollipop Sunday Surprise under the name Johnny Goat) and Pearl Jam (the Frogs cover "Rearviewmirror" on the B-side of the "Immortality" single) the band's role is hard to figure out.

Taken as faux-pop social criticism or as confrontational performance theater, a Frogs show is definitely a polarizing event. However, it is also as open to artistic interpretation as the band's albums and, for better or worse, will definitely be a spectacle.

Somehow making voodoo dull

By Tracy Nemitz
The Daily Iowan

To write a deeply intriguing detective novel is one of the most difficult challenges an author can face. It is no small task to create an original detective as Jonathan Lethem crafted in Motherless Brooklyn or to transform the entire genre like Dashiell Hammett.

Between the time when detective novels took off as a literary genre up to the current day, the mystery novel has unfortunately become formulaic.

The Nancy Drew series or Mary Higgins Clark novels might offer readers a certain degree of entertainment, but it is often the case with such books that if you read one, you have read them all.

Wendi Lee's newest novel, Habeas Campus, falls into the latter category.

Habeas Campus is the fifth novel based on detective Angela Matelli. A Boston native and ex-Marine turned private detective, Matelli is called to investigate a case at Hartmore College, a private Vermont school.

Her client, Dr. Don Cannon, is a prestigious anthropology professor specializing in Haiti and voodoo.

Cannon has recently been surrounded by a series of strange occurrences that began with the mysterious death of his student, Amy Garrett. A model of health, Garrett simply passed away in her sleep with no apparent cause. Or is she really dead?

Nights after Garrett's death, Cannon was convinced that he saw her walking around campus in a zombie-like state. Following that evening, Cannon received a series of voodoo threats including a chicken heart nailed to his office door and a voodoo doll dressed in his likeness.

Cannon hires Matelli to go undercover as a student and investigate the nature of Garrett's death and the foreboding threats. Along the way, Matelli becomes deeply immersed in the mystical world of ancient voodoo practices of soul snatching and zombie slavery.

Did someone make Garrett a zombie? And for what reason? Can Matelli get to the bottom of the case before Cannon becomes the next victim?

While the premise is intriguing, the overpowering mysticism associated with voodoo offers a world of possibilities for Lee to weave into her story, and she fails to take full advantage of them. Her expositions on Haitian culture and voodoo terms are force-fed to the reader. More often than not, the flow of the story is disrupted as a character will break from impending action to explain a Haitian custom or term to Matelli.

And in the end, when the evil voodoo practitioner is revealed, one can't help but mutter, "Yeah, right."

Despite the narrative flaws, Lee's sense of humor and her strong-willed, sharp-tongued sleuth provide a light-hearted narrative.

Habeas Campus is no Maltese Falcon or The Big Sleep. But if you're searching for an easy read on a Saturday afternoon, Lee's novel will get the job done.

Musharraf promises crackdown

By Paul Geitner
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Gen. Pervez Musharraf promised a new crackdown on terrorism and called for an end to national divisions following fraud allegations about a referendum endorsing him for five more years as president.

"In the days to come, a new campaign on terrorism will be announced," Musharraf said in a nationally televised speech Thursday, adding that Pakistanis want "an end to sectarianism and extremism."

Musharraf's supporters had hoped Tuesday's referendum would strengthen the president, who turned the country away from support of Afghanistan's Taliban militia to join the U.S.-led coalition against terror. Earlier this year, he announced a crackdown on Islamic extremists at home. Musharraf also seeks constitutional reforms, including a bigger role for the military in the government.

"We should forget the tensions of the past and look toward the future in the interest of Pakistan," Musharraf said in the 10-minute speech. In keeping with the low-key tone of his comments, he wore a sober gray suit instead of his general's uniform.

But analysts predicted worsening polarization Thursday as opposition politicians, charging the voting was fraudulent, pledged to keep up their fight to unseat him.

"We will use every possible lawful tactic to force this government out of power," said Liaquat Baluch, a senior leader of the country's main hard-line religious group, the Jamaat-e-Islami, or the Islamic Party.

Two bombs that went off Thursday in Karachi — while apparently unrelated to Tuesday's disputed referendum — underlined the challenges facing Musharraf as he tries to curb violence and extremism in this poor South Asian Islamic nation.

A 12-year-old boy was killed and six members of his family wounded in the early morning blasts, which came as a one-day strike began in the port city. The ethnic-based Muttahida Qami Movement, or United National Movement, had called the strike to protest the killings of two prominent members last week.

The movement also had joined the Alliance for Restoration of Democracy, representing Pakistan's main political parties, in calling for a boycott of the referendum.

The government, however, said the turnout was more than 50 percent, higher than past elections and beyond even its own expectations. Almost 98 percent of voters supported Musharraf, the Election Commission said.

Commission head Irshad Hasan Khan, a retired chief justice, rejected charges of fraud, saying he and his team of judges visited many polling stations across the country and found that the polling was done fairly.

But rival politicians and the independent Human Rights Commission of Pakistan called the figures inflated, accusing the government of stuffing ballot boxes and allowing people to cast multiple ballots.

"His controversial victory has deepened the political crisis," Baluch said. "We have lost faith in the government and the independence of the Election Commission."

Leaders of the political alliance, which includes the Islamic Party as well as the parties of ousted prime ministers Benazir Bhutto and Nazir Sharif, called an emergency meeting for Saturday in the capital, Islamabad, to plan their next step, said Nawabzada Nasrullah Khan, the chief of the alliance.

Musharraf, Pakistan's top general, seized power in a coup in 1999. The Supreme Court gave him three years to introduce reforms, root out corruption, and return the country to democracy — a deadline that expires in October.

But Musharraf, saying his work is not finished, called the referendum to seek a mandate for another five years.

Siege at Church of Nativity a month old

By Ibrahim Hazboun
Associated Press

BETHLEHEM, West Bank — As the standoff at the Church of the Nativity reached the one-month mark Thursday, Israeli troops opened fire on three armed Palestinians who emerged from the holy site, killing one and wounding two and prompting return fire from inside.

The siege in Bethlehem is the last major Israeli-Palestinian impasse that remained unresolved after a month of incursions, sieges, and standoffs in the West Bank. Some 200 people remain holed up there, including 30 Palestinians wanted by Israel.

The city's mayor predicted the standoff would soon be over, resolved in the same fashion as the standoff at Yasser Arafat's compound in Ramallah. The Palestinian leader left his headquarters early Thursday for the first time in four months after agreeing to allow six Palestinians wanted by Israel to be transferred to a Palestinian jail under the supervision of the United States and Britain.

Arafat is "deeply interested in solving the problem, and I am sure that very soon this crisis at the Church of the Nativity will be solved in line with the principles of what happened in Ramallah," said Bethlehem Mayor Hanna Nasser, who is part of the Palestinian team negotiating with the Israeli army. "I think everybody will buy this."

In a development in Bethlehem on Thursday, 10 Western activists dashed across Manger Square and entered the church, delivering food to those inside. The Israeli army detained 13 others who served as a decoy, the activists said from a mobile phone inside.

With Israel's exit from Arafat's compound and the rest of Ramallah, troops are now gone from all Palestinian cities in the West Bank that they invaded at the beginning of last month — except Bethlehem. While approximately 75 Palestinians and a few clergymen have trickled out of the church over the past month, negotiations remain deadlocked.

In the latest of several gun battles, Israeli troops fired Thursday on three armed Palestinians who emerged from the besieged church and walked into Manger Square. One was killed, while the two others staggered back into the shrine, the army said. The Palestinians fired back, and shooting went on for about 15 minutes.

The body of the dead man, one of the wounded Palestinians, and a third man who had fallen sick during the standoff were later evacuated from the shrine.

That shootout came only hours after a fire broke out in the compound during another gun battle, this one in the middle of the night. The flames damaged several rooms and offices, but not the fourth-century basilica itself.

Seattle Mariners' Mike Cameron connects for his third home run of the game against the Chicago White Sox on Thursday in Chicago. Bret Boone and Cameron made major-league history in the first inning by hitting back-to-back homers twice.

Cameron slams on history's door

By Nancy Armour
 Associated Press

CHICAGO — Mike Cameron hit four home runs and came close to a record-setting fifth Thursday night, leading the Seattle Mariners over the Chicago White Sox, 15-4.

Cameron, until now known for leaping catches and being part of the trade for Ken Griffey Jr., became only the 13th player in major-league history to homer four times in a game. In the ninth inning, Cameron lined an opposite-field drive that had the Comiskey Park crowd thinking he'd done it. But right fielder Jeff Liefer made a running, backhanded catch at the front of the warning track.

"I'm going to cherish it forever," Cameron said. "I'm going to enjoy this day to the utmost. This is the best day of my baseball career."

Cameron connected in his first four at-bats, doing it in just five innings. He got two more chances to be the first player in the 132-year history of big league ball to homer five times in a game.

Iowa prepares for meet under lights

By Tyler Lechtenberg
 The Daily Iowan

Here comes the Twilight Invitational, but the sun is definitely not setting on the Iowa track and field teams' seasons.

As the track and field schedule begins its kick to the finish, the Hawkeyes will get their only outdoor chance to perform in front of a home crowd at the Musco Twilight Invitational IV in Iowa City. Field events and preliminaries will begin at 4 p.m. Saturday, with an opening ceremony taking place at 6 p.m. at the Francis X. Cretzmeyer Track.

Under the lights, fans will be treated to an outstanding display of some of the region's best athletes, Iowa men's coach Larry Wiecek said.

"One of the purposes of this meet is to show off track and field as a spectator sport," he said. "It's a chance for people to come out on a Saturday night and be entertained as they would at a football or basketball game."

Former UNI standout and world-class hurdler Joey Woody and Missouri shot putter Christian Cantwell, one of the world's elite throwers, will headline the 11-team field, which includes Iowa State, Northern Iowa, Minnesota, and Kansas.

As a team-scored meet, the Twilight Invitational acts as an outstanding tune-up for the Big Ten championships on May 17-19. Team-scored meets are a rare breed in the current national track and field scene, and the Hawkeye coaches plan to take advantage of this chance to get an overall team evaluation.

"Certainly, if you're having a home-scored meet, you want to win the meet," Iowa women's coach James Grant said. "We won last year, and certainly we want to defend the Twilight, but we also want to focus on individuals who aspire to make the NCAAs."

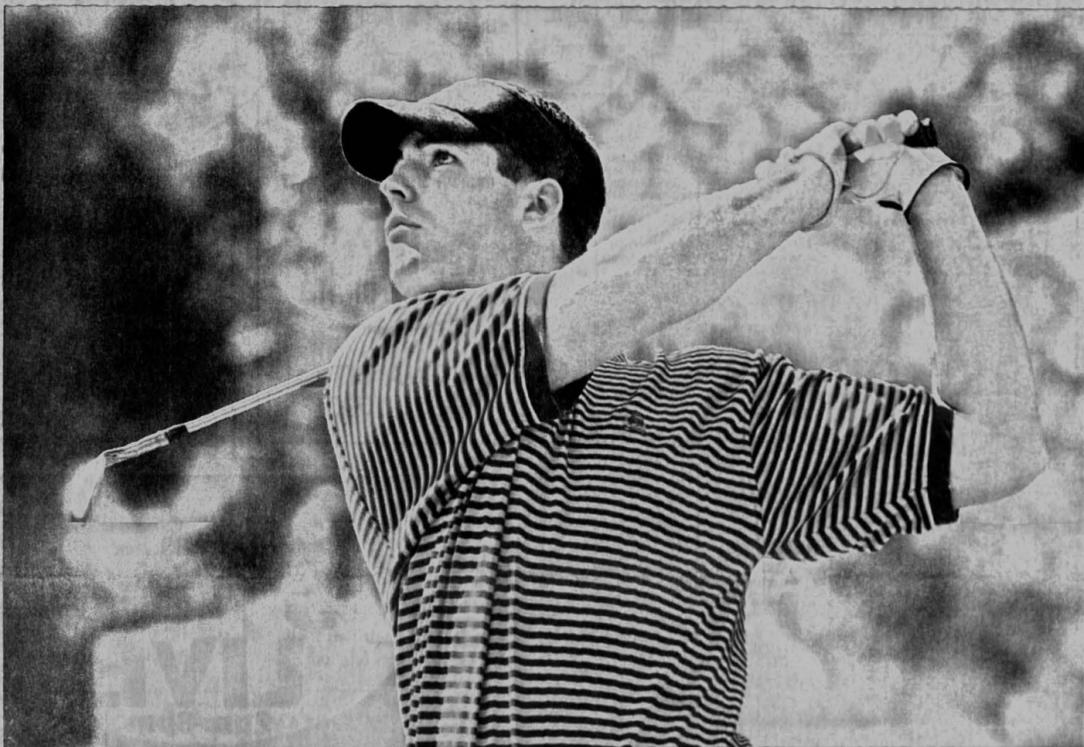

Scored meets especially help the women's team, Grant said, because it gives the Hawkeyes a different type of competition.

"It seems as if when we aren't in scored meets, our team goes to sleep," he said.

With each of the Iowa women's last two competitions shortened by weather, the Hawkeyes can't afford the slow start they've seen in some of

BIG TEN CHAMPIONSHIPS

Iowa's Aaron Kruger practices on the driving range at Finkbine Golf Course on Monday in preparation for the Big Ten championships.

Linking confidence

By Travis Brown
 The Daily Iowan

Only once in a great while does a Big Ten golf team get a chance to host the conference meet — once every 10 years, in fact.

That's why Iowa coach Terry Anderson and his linksmen are so thrilled to be the host of this year's Big Ten championships, held today through May 5 at Finkbine.

"I think it's great that we rotate it around," he said. "I know there are other conferences that always play on neutral sites. I think the fact that we play at a university's course is unique and very special."

Not only are the Hawkeyes happy to be hosting the tournament, they are confident that they can win it. They only have to look back 10 years to the last time Iowa hosted the Big Ten championships for inspiration; in 1992 the Hawkeyes won their first and only Big Ten title. Anderson was on hand in 1992 — however, not as a coach — and he is hoping for a repeat performance.

What: Big Ten Tournament
When: Today at 8 a.m., Saturday 9 a.m., Sunday 8 a.m.
Where: Finkbine Golf Course

Improved play as of late has given the Hawkeyes another reason to be confident. The Hawkeyes have recovered confidence lost in their disappointing fall season and are playing their best golf at just the right time. They placed fifth at the First Energy Intercollegiate on April 20-21 and tied for seventh place at the Bruce Fossum Spartan Invitational on April 27-28.

The third reason that the golfers have a confident attitude is because they have the home-course advantage. The knowledge of the proper placement of shots and the slopes of the greens should come in very handy. Junior Bo Anderson felt that the familiarity of the course would be a definite advantage.

"You shouldn't feel uncomfortable about playing here," he said. "It's just a matter of keeping your focus and just going through the repetitions. There are no tricks to it after playing it this many times. It should only be to our advantage."

Pugilism show debuts in Iowa City

By Donovan Burba
 The Daily Iowan

The bell rings, the crowd roars, and two fighters come out of their corners to slug it out in the ring. It is a scene that most associate with such places as Las Vegas, Atlantic City, and Philadelphia, not Iowa City. But this Saturday's first-ever Iowa City Amateur Boxing Show might change that perception just a little bit.

The show, to be held at the Robert A. Lee Recreation Center, 220 S. Gilbert St., is hosted by the Iowa City/Coralville Boxing Club, the city's first and thus far only officially recognized boxing club.

The club was founded in late 2000 by Jeff Nehring and Adam Pollack, a UI College of Law graduate. Pollack had trained under Nehring in college, and he says starting the club was simply a case of filling the boxing vacuum in the area.

"There was a void there, and we came in and filled it," Pollack said. "Pretty much every other city in Iowa had one, so it seemed natural to start one here, too."

Initially, the club had just a handful of pugilistic hopefuls, but now Pollack and Nehring train, to varying degrees, a few dozen. Rather than actively recruiting, the club posts fliers at various gyms in the area, banking on the appeal of a sport that emphasizes strength,

Stronger Hawkeyes take on Big Tens

By Ali Noller
 The Daily Iowan

After capping the regular season with a dismal outing on the Coralville Reservoir, the Hawkeye rowing team is ready to look ahead to a bigger challenge — namely, the Big Ten championships in East Lansing, Mich.

Iowa will take on elite competition from seven Big Ten schools on Lake Ovid at Sleepy Hollow State Park, starting at 9 a.m. Saturday and concluding with the varsity 8 grand final at 3:45 p.m.

Iowa coach Mandi Kowal said that her rowers are ready to take on the best in the Big Ten after making a few alterations in the boats.

"We've shifted things a little bit and made some lineup changes," she said. "Each boat has goals for the Big Tens, and after making some switches from seat races, we have seen results on our speeds."

After winning only two of 10 head-to-head races on its home waters against Michigan State and Minnesota, Kowal said the team is eager to race again.

"Our goals for the regatta are to place higher than last year's finish [fifth] and position ourselves well," she said. "Our performances at the next two regattas will determine whether we will race at the NCAA championships."

The Hawkeyes' strongest competition will probably come from a strong Michigan squad,

The rowing team practices on April 17; they travel to Big Ten Championships this weekend in Michigan.

which boasts the third-ranked varsity 8 boat in the nation. Ohio State, currently ranked fifth in the Collegiate Rowing coaches poll, will also provide a challenge for Iowa.

Iowa's varsity 8 is 1-2 against Big Ten competition this spring, with its victory coming over Wisconsin in Madison on April 6. One of the most disappointing races this season was the Hawkeyes' loss to the Gophers by less than one second.

The varsity 8 will be the most important race of the day because it holds the most weight in scoring and points allotted. The winner earns 63 team points, while the second gets 42. The varsity 4 gets 21.

In addition to the varsity contenders, the novice squads have the opportunity to tally points for the Hawkeyes. Kowal said that this year's especially strong novice crew will prove to be advantageous for the Hawkeyes.

The Iowa coach said the team has established the bare minimum requirements for a strong showing, but she encouraged the team to exceed the goals set forth.

"Our team is stronger than last year, and we have figured out where we need to score points," she said. "I am looking forward to see how we handle these exciting and competitive situations."

Cedar Falls standout commits to Iowa

CEDAR FALLS (AP) — Cedar Falls coach Pat Mitchell has seen several of his football players sign with Iowa. None, however, made that decision as early as Jonathan Zanders.

Zanders, a defensive back, wide receiver, and kick returner, has committed to Iowa for the signing period that starts in February 2003, Mitchell said Thursday.

A 6-2, 184-pounder, Zanders visited Iowa on the weekend of the Hawkeyes' spring game, April 20, and came away impressed.

"He walked in there and just loved the campus, loved the facilities, loved the coaches," Mitchell said. "I think they liked him. It was just one of those deals where everything fits."

Zanders is Iowa's second early commitment for the next signing period. Linebacker Mike Klinkenborg of Rock Rapids Central Lyon committed last month.

SPORTS BRIEFS

During his junior season last fall, Zanders rarely left the field. He caught 16 passes for 419 yards, a 26.2-yard average, and nine of those catches went for touchdowns. He averaged 21.6 yards on 21 punt returns, two of which he ran back for touchdowns, and 27.8 yards on 14 kickoff returns.

On defense, Zanders made 73 tackles, recovered two fumbles, intercepted a pass, and broke up 11 passes.

"He plays a lot bigger and a lot faster than he actually is," Mitchell said. "He's a real hitter. This guy will blister you."

Mitchell already has seen Matt Purdy, Mike Flagg, Bruce Kittle, Bill Bradley, and Bill Weires go on from his teams to play at Iowa.

"They all had great experiences down there," Mitchell said. "We're looking forward to having another one."

Regular season ends with Illini, Wildcats

This weekend: The regular season culminates for the Iowa softball team when it travels to Evanston, Ill., for a pair of games with Northwestern. The Hawkeyes and Wildcats are set to tangle this afternoon at 1 p.m. and Saturday at noon at Northwestern's Drysdale Field.

On Iowa: The Hawkeyes improved to 33-16 on the year with a dramatic come-from-behind victory over Creighton at Pearl Field Wednesday. Trailing 3-1 in the bottom of the seventh with the bases loaded, Alicia Gerlach cleared the base paths with a double to left center that provided No. 22 Iowa with a 4-3 win. Rain washed away the second game of the double-header, but Iowa coach Gayle Blevins declared her team had found its "second wind" with its never-say-die approach. The Hawkeyes are 10-4 in the Big Ten.

On Northwestern: The Wildcats are 22-16 overall and 10-7 in the Big Ten, and they will be playing for their postseason lives against the Hawkeyes. Northwestern must win one game this weekend to assure itself a spot in the six-team Big Ten tournament. Northwestern can still make the field with an 0-2 showing, but it would need to rely on help from Ohio State and Wisconsin.

First-year coach Kate Drohan would like nothing more than to get her team in the tournament without relying on outside help in the form of losses by the Buckeyes and Badgers.

Tourney time: With the end of Big Ten regular-season play this weekend, teams are beginning to turn their attention to the conference tournament, which will begin May 9. If things hold out the way they are now, tourney teams will be booking rooms in Columbus, Ohio, for the three-day event. The Buckeyes are currently a top the league with a 15-3 record, the deciding factor in who hosts the tournament. Six teams will make the field, with the Buckeyes, Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin, Northwestern, and Minnesota occupying the top six slots heading into this weekend.

Nets squeak by pesky Pacers

By Tom Canavan
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Another playoff miracle by Reggie Miller, a banked-in 3-pointer at the buzzer in regulation, couldn't stop Jason Kidd from leading the New Jersey Nets out of the first round for the first time in 18 years.

Kidd scored 20 of his career-playoff best 31 points in the fourth quarter and two overtimes and the Nets eliminated Miller and the Pacers, 120-109, Thursday night in the deciding Game 5 of their first-round series.

Miller was at his best under pressure, hitting from 35 feet to force overtime and tying the game again on a two-handed dunk with 3.1 seconds left in the first overtime. But he went 0-4 in the second overtime — all on 3-point shots.

It marked only the second time since the Nets joined the NBA in 1976-77 that they have made it out of the first round. The only other time was in 1984 against Philadelphia.

"To do that for this franchise means a lot to me and my team-

Committee suggests Hornets move

NEW ORLEANS — The Charlotte Hornets' proposed move to New Orleans was unanimously supported by the NBA's Relocation Committee on Thursday.

Owners of the league's 29 teams will decide May 10 whether the team can move, with 15 votes needed for final approval.

Announced in New York, the recommendation came as Hornets officials in New Orleans reached an agreement in principle with state officials on a 10-year contract for the NBA team to play in the New Orleans Arena.

The arena was built next to the Louisiana Superdome in the 1990s in hopes of attracting an NBA team.

Miller finished with 31 points, and Ron Mercer had 20 in only the third series-deciding playoff game in NBA history to go to double-overtime.

Miller's miraculous 3-pointer that barely beat the buzzer — replays showed 0.1 seconds remaining when the ball left his hand — almost ended the greatest season in Nets history.

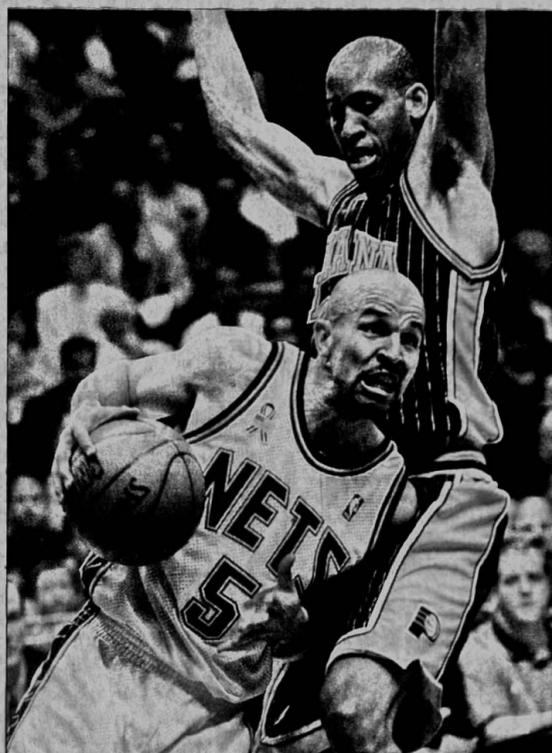

Kidd wouldn't let it die. Even though his jumper at the end of the first overtime went in and out, Kidd set a three-point play by Kerry Kittles and then added a jumper with 3:07 left to give the Nets a lead they never lost.

"We just left it all on the court," Martin said. "It was Game 5; we wanted to take it. Kidd stepped up and showed why he's MVP."

Mercer scored for Indiana to make it 112-109 with 2:45 left, but the Pacers went scoreless the rest of the way.

The Nets seemingly had the series locked up after Kevin Ollie missed a drive down the lane with five seconds to play and New Jersey ahead 96-93.

Richard Jefferson got the rebound and needed to make just one of two free throws to ice the game.

Stackhouse carries Detroit to next round

By Larry Lage
Associated Press

DETROIT — Jerry Stackhouse didn't score a lot. He just did when it counted.

Stackhouse had only five points, but his first field goal with 1:43 left put Detroit ahead to stay as the Pistons eliminated the Toronto Raptors with a 85-82 win Thursday night in Game 5.

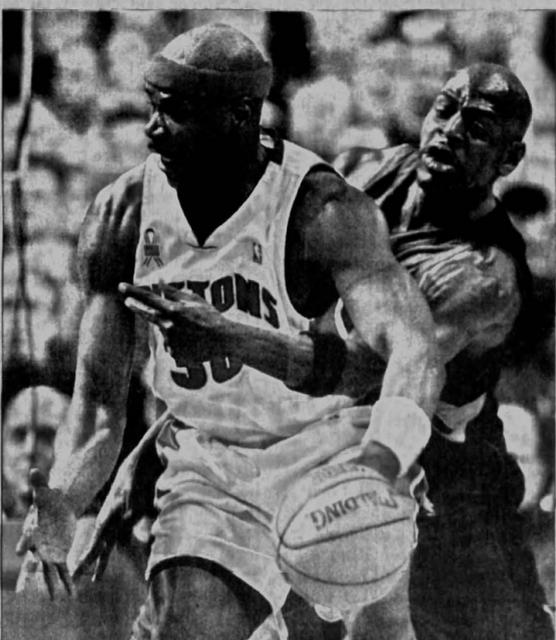

The Pistons are in the second round of the NBA playoffs for the first time since 1991, and Stackhouse advances for the first time in his seven-year career.

The Raptors had a chance to become just the seventh team to overcome a 2-0 deficit to win a best-of-five series. But they made only one basket in the final 2½ minutes, and Chris Childs forced up a terrible shot with seven seconds left on Toronto's final possession.

Stackhouse's shot from just inside the free throw line after he missed his first eight put Detroit ahead 81-79. Stackhouse, Detroit's leading scorer, didn't score until making a free throw with 9:38 left in the third quarter. He finished 1 for 10 from the field and 3-for-5 at the line.

Former Raptor Corliss Williamson, scored a career playoff-high 23 points, and his basket with 26.5 seconds left put the Pistons ahead, 83-79.

Toronto's Dell Curry made a 3-pointer with 11.1 seconds left to pull the Raptors to 84-83. Stackhouse made a free throw, and Childs raced upcourt and launched a running 3-pointer while being closely guarded by Chucky Atkins. The shot bounced hard off the backboard, and the Raptors were so stunned by it that they didn't even bother to foul and stop the clock.

'Tiger' Sorenstam rules the links

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

STOCKBRIDGE, Ga. — In some respects, Annika Sorenstam is no Tiger Woods. Hey, she doesn't even have a career Grand Slam yet.

Then again, Woods never shot 59. And, even with another Masters victory, he hasn't dominated his tour the way Sorenstam is ruling the LPGA this year.

The Swedish sensation has won twice, finished second twice, and relishes the comparisons with Woods.

"I don't mind," she said. "I just wish they'd call him 'The Annika Sorenstam of the PGA Tour' sometimes, too."

The 31-year-old Sorenstam returns to the course after a three-week layoff, ready to defend her title at the Chick-fil-A Charity Championship and keep up her run of success. "I had lots of time to do other things," she said, looking refreshed at Eagles Landing Country Club in suburban Atlanta. "Now, I'm focusing my energy on this week and the upcoming tournaments."

That doesn't bode well for the rest of the field. Much like Woods, Sorenstam is the favorite every time she tees it up.

She has victories in the Nabisco Championship, the LPGA's first major, and the Takefujii Classic. She was runner-up at the Ping Banner Health and the Office Depot Championship. She was seventh in her other event, the Welch's-Circle K Championship.

Sorenstam has won $563,330, nearly twice as much as the next player on the

O'Leary redux: Résumé flunks Collen

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A day after being hired, Tom Collen quit as women's basketball coach at Vanderbilt on Thursday because of inaccuracies on his résumé.

Vanderbilt gave the former Colorado State coach a choice — resign or be fired — after a newspaper published a portion of the résumé that incorrectly claimed he had earned two master's degrees.

"It was a deal breaker," Vanderbilt Athletics Director Todd Turner said.

The case comes five months after George O'Leary, the former football coach at Georgia Tech, lost his job at Notre Dame within a week of his hiring. He falsely claimed on his résumé that he had a master's degree in education and had earned three letters as a New Hampshire football player. He attended New Hampshire only two years and didn't play in any games.

On Monday, Vanderbilt checked Collen's bio on Colorado State's Web site, which credited him with the two degrees. When the university asked for verification, Collen sent transcripts and diplomas showing one master's degree with a dual major.

But the school didn't see a copy of his résumé then and hired him Wednesday. When it became clear Thursday that the mistake was on the résumé — not just on the Web site — Vanderbilt changed its mind.

No more charges filed against Colorado

BOULDER, Colo. — Prosecutors said Thursday they will not file any more charges stemming from a party for university football recruits at which a woman alleged she was gang-raped.

Four University of Colorado football players face felony charges for allegedly providing alcohol and marijuana to potential recruits at the Dec. 7, 2001, off-campus party.

If others were prosecuted, they could not testify against the four players, who face the most serious charges that could come out of the party, city officials said in a written statement.

Authorities last week decided against pursuing rape charges, citing difficulties in prosecuting acquaintance-rape cases.

HBO, Showtime set for pay-per-view

NEW YORK — The Mike Tyson-Lennox Lewis heavyweight title fight will be available on pay-per-view in approximately 50 million homes at a recommended price of $54.95 — both record highs.

HBO and Showtime wrapped up distribution deals with cable and satellite systems this week, they said Thursday. The June 8 fight at the Memphis Pyramid will be the first boxing match jointly distributed and marketed by the two cable networks.

Showtime has a contract with Tyson; HBO has a deal with Lewis.

Tyson is ranked No. 1 by the WBC, and the fight will be a mandatory defense for Lewis, who regained the WBC and IBF titles by knocking out Hasim Rahman in the fourth round in November.

"We have our predictions, and we certainly feel that this can do in excess of a million pay-per-view buys," Showtime Senior Vice President Donovan Gordon said.

Kentucky Derby on the horizon

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Mystery surrounds the foreign-based horses running in the Kentucky Derby. They haven't even raced in the United States this year.

Still, that's no reason to count them out.

Irish-based Johannesburg and his stablemate, Castle Gandolfo, and Sheikh Mohammed's Essence of Dubai are considered as likely to win as any of the 3-year-olds in Saturday's 20-horse field.

"We may not know anything about them, but I don't have any doubt they will be fit," said Hall of Fame trainer D. Wayne Lukas, who'll try to win his fifth Derby with long-shot Proud Citizen.

"You can't throw them out," said John Toffan, owner of 5-1 co-second choice Came Home.

"They know what they're doing over there," said Ken McPeck, who trains 9-2 favorite Harlan's Holiday. He has Essence of Dubai and 2-year-old champion Johannesburg on his short list of possible winners.

"They will win it. It's just a matter of time," said Bob Baffert, who has two Derby runners with long-shots War Emblem and Danthebluegrassman.

Johannesburg is a co-third choice at 6-1, Essence of Dubai is 15-1, and Castle Gandolfo, making his American debut, is 20-1.

Lukas concludes: "They're the X factor in here — big time."

And that's part of the mystique: Can a foreign-based horse that doesn't go through the traditional American prep races win the Derby?

Sheik Mohammed's Godolphin Racing is determined to win by sending horses over from Dubai.

The Irish-based Coolmore partnership of Michael Tabor and John Magnier is trying the same thing.

"The sheik's biggest goal is to win the race coming from Dubai," said Tom Albertrani, Godolphin's assistant to trainer Saeed bin Suroor. "I think that would be a great accomplishment for him because it's against the odds, and he likes that challenge."

This is the fourth year of the plan, with China Visit's sixth-place finish in 2000 being Godolphin's best effort.

Tabor, an Englishman who made millions running betting parlors, won the 1995 Derby with Thunder Gulch, but the horse trained and raced exclusively in the United States.

This is the first time Coolmore is sending Irish-based runners to the Derby.

"I hope this is the first of many years that we will have runners," said Tabor in a recent conference call from his home in Monte Carlo. "Winning with Thunder Gulch whetted my appetite."

Johannesburg, who won the Breeders' Cup Juvenile in October 2001 in his only U.S. race, has been hidden away in Lexington after shipping in Tuesday night. The son of Hennessey was the 2-year-old champion after winning all seven starts in 2001. In his only race this year, he was second behind a 4-year-old filly in a seven-furlong stakes races at The Curragh on April 7.

Castle Gandolfo, with five career starts in England, France, and Ireland, also is at Keeneland. Neither colt will arrive at Churchill Downs until Derby day.

They won't be lacking for experienced riders, though. Gary

Ed Reinke/Associated Press

Kentucky Derby entrant Essence of Dubai, left, ridden by exercise rider Lee Roebuck is schooled in the paddock by assistant trainer Tom Albertrani at Churchill Downs on Thursday in Louisville, Ky.

Stevens will be aboard Johannesburg, and Jerry Bailey has the call on Castle Gandolfo. Both are Hall of Famers.

Essence of Dubai will be ridden by David Flores. He replaces regular rider Frankie Dettori, who will be aboard Naheef in Saturday's 2000 Guineas at Newmarket.

While Coolmore is just beginning its Derby quest, Godolphin continues tweaking its plan. This year, it set up two Derby preps in Dubai, with the UAE Derby contested over the Kentucky Derby distance of 1 1/4 miles. Essence of Dubai, naturally, won both.

Also, the Godolphin 2-year-olds purchased for enormous sums at American horse sales now train and race in California under Eoin Harty. They are sent back to Dubai after their 2-year-old campaigns, and Suroor takes over to prepare them for their 3-year-old campaigns.

Essence of Dubai, a $2.3 million buy, has looked impressive in his Churchill Downs workouts the last two weeks. He appears to be Godolphin's strongest Derby contender yet.

"Every year, we think this is the right horse to take to America," Suroor said. "But so far we are unlucky ... This year, we saw Essence of Dubai. He is a tough horse. He has the class and can get the distance. I hope this time we bring the right horse."

Essence of Dubai, a dark bay son of Pulpit, has four wins in six starts and tops the graded stakes earning list with $1,518,000. At 2, he won his first start, came back two races later to win the Norfolk Stakes at Santa Anita, and ended the year with a disappointing 12th-place finish in the BC Juvenile.

SPORTS BRIEF

NCAA announces three new bowl games

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Three new bowl games — to be played in San Francisco, Honolulu, and Charlotte, N.C. — were certified by the NCAA on Thursday, bringing the number of Division I postseason football games to 28.

The decision to add the games came one week after a two-year moratorium limiting the maximum number of bowl games to 26.

The new bowl games will be the San Francisco Bowl, Hawaii Bowl, and Queen City Bowl. All three will be televised by ESPN.

Teams from the Mountain West Conference and Big East Conference will play in the San Francisco Bowl at Pacific Bell Park on Dec. 31. In the Hawaii Bowl, teams will compete from Conference USA and the Western Athletic Conference will meet in Aloha Stadium on Dec. 25.

A date has not been set for the Queen City Bowl, which will be held at Ericsson Stadium in Charlotte, between teams in the Big East and Atlantic Coast Conference.

Schools in the NCAA are not allowed to participate in postseason games that the NCAA has not certified. The process ensures that bowls meet specific standards for officiating, insurance, and the distribution of funds.

"We had several new bowl organizations that came to us very well prepared with conference and television commitments, as well as good facilities and support from their communities," said Tim Curley, the Penn State athletics director and chairman of the Football Certification Subcommittee. "We believe they will sponsor events that will be good experiences for student-athletes."

A tribute for those who will never be

By Jim Litke
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — This is for those guys who will be long shots their whole lives, who run beat-up horses at broken-down tracks and know all about slipping from elation to misery in one race.

"I'm 59," Wilson Brown said Thursday morning on the backstretch at Churchill Downs. "And you know how in a fleeting moment you say to yourself, 'Wouldn't that be something, kind of like flying to the moon or such,' only you don't ever get to see it?"

"That's what this is like." The 50-1 shot who carried Brown to his first Kentucky Derby is appropriately named It'sallinthechase.

As threatening gray clouds clustered overhead, the bay colt lounged in a nearby stall, and Brown's best friend, a fellow named Jerry Martin, stood behind him and nodded as tale after tale spilled out.

Most began somewhere in Oklahoma and all of them involved horses, but only a few ended happily. Spend enough time in the training racket, where even the best are lucky to win 20 percent of the time, and you learn to live with disappointment.

In that sense, Brown already holds a Ph.D. to go with his starched-white cowboy hat.

He rode barebacks in the rodeo and broke quarterhorses to run in out-of-the-way places such as Raton, N.M., and Hallett, Colo., before graduating to thoroughbreds and middle-level tracks such as Remington and Canterbury.

Until It'sallinthechase dropped into his lap, Brown had never worked a horse good enough to carry him this far on the first Saturday in May, and he never thought he would.

Still, he has yet to run across a horse that hasn't left its mark on him, sometimes literally.

"My neck — to this day, if I sleep wrong, I wake up remembering getting thrown by one of them or the other," he said.

Brown doesn't remember exactly when he knew that racing would be his calling, only that he woke up one morning on the ranch of a farmer whose land his family was working and saw four dozen horses grazing beyond a fence.

"I thought I'd died and gone to heaven," Brown said.

He'd already spent much of his childhood following the crops at harvest time back and forth across the Texas-Oklahoma panhandle, attending 13 schools before he was out of his teens. Reading about horses, dreaming about horses, and occasionally riding them, was as close to a consistent theme as his life allowed until he wound up in the Army at Fort Knox, near Louisville.

"I thought about coming over here to Churchill, but the Army isn't big on pleasure trips and it doesn't pay real well," he said.

Not long after he got out, Brown drifted back home to Cement, Okla., and he was training roping horses when a friend talked him into taking one over to a track called Apache Downs. There were no training facilities or grandstands to speak of, or even formal betting windows.

"Most of the betting was man to man, and your chances of getting paid were good," Brown said, laughing. "Provided you were big enough."

Bar Money Steed won that afternoon, and Brown was hooked. For the next few years, he packed his family into the car on Sundays and made a series of forays to hardscrabble tracks across western Oklahoma and Texas, where 20 races might be squeezed onto an afternoon's card.

"I always made sure I had a full tank of gas when I got there," Brown said. "Because all you might get is $100, $150 for winning a race. If you bought a few pitchers and ate lunch, you could wind up in the hole."

Bar Money Steed ran 56 races and finished first 48 times. Money was tight, but Brown believes it prepared him better than plenty of his contemporaries. Most important, he learned to spot talent in a heartbeat, a skill that came in handy for a beginner competing against trainers who could draw their contenders from a field of several dozen.

Maple Leafs advance

By John Wawrow
Associated Press

TORONTO — A rested Patrick Lalime was no match for the exhausted and battered Toronto Maple Leafs in the opener of the NHL Eastern Conference semifinals.

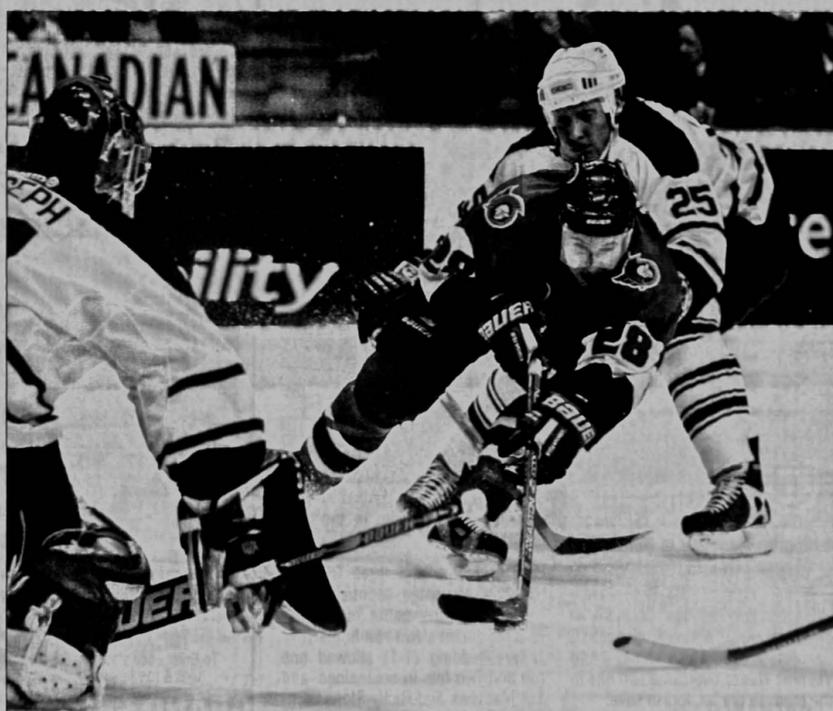

Despite being bowled over by Toronto's Tie Domi, Lalime stopped 27 shots as the Ottawa Senators easily beat the Maple Leafs, 5-0, on Thursday night.

Lalime became only the 14th goaltender to record four shutouts in one postseason after notching three in the first-round series against Philadelphia.

Martin Havlat, Radek Bonk, and Shane Hnidy each scored before the game was 12 minutes old, and the Senators broke numerous playoff hexes against the Maple Leafs in setting a franchise playoff record for most goals in a game.

Game 2 of the best-of-seven series will be Saturday at Toronto.

Todd White and Daniel Alfredsson, who added two assists, also scored for a Senators team still stinging from being eliminated by their Ontario provincial rivals in each of the last two postseasons. Ottawa also ended a six-game playoff losing streak against the Maple Leafs and won in Toronto for the first time in six postseason visits. It helped that the Senators, who won their fifth straight, were playing their first game in six days after eliminating Philadelphia in the first round.

Toronto had just one day off after eliminating the New York Islanders in a grueling and physical seven-game series. The Maple Leafs were also missing three regulars, including captain Mats Sundin (wrist), and they came out flat and then grew discouraged as the score mounted against them.

MLS blazes own path to World Cup

By Joseph White
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States has the only major soccer league on the planet that will keep playing right through the World Cup. The rest of the world just wouldn't understand.

American sports fans unfamiliar with soccer can't believe a big league would play six weeks of its season without its best players. The NFL, NBA, NHL, or Major League Baseball would never dream of it — imagine Derek Jeter missing more than a month of the Yankees' season to play in an international event.

And the NHL went into an hiatus during the Nagano and the Salt Lake City Olympics.

But the MLS, starting this weekend, is blazing its own path.

Major League Soccer begins a stretch of games without 12 marquee players who have just opened training with the U.S. national team for next month's tournament in Japan and South Korea.

"The world stops for the World Cup — except in the U.S.," said New Zealand national and D.C. United defender Ryan Nelsen, who doesn't exactly hail from a soccer-mad country.

The Chicago Fire will be the most affected, losing Chris Armas, DaMarcus Beasley, and Josh Wolff for at least seven games — one-fourth of the season — plus more should the United States advance past the first round. San Jose will miss two players, Jeff Agoos and Landon Donovan. No other team loses more than one.

Eleven members of the U.S. team play for European clubs.

No foreign MLS players are expected to be chosen by their countries for the World Cup.

Altogether, that might not sound like an overwhelming effect on MLS, but the league is still struggling to find its niche. Stars draw fans, and the loss of any recognizable name doesn't help.

"It is not ideal," league Deputy Commissioner Ivan Gazidis said. "We were faced with some difficult choices in terms of what we should do during this period. One of the things that is important to us is giving [coach] Bruce Arena and the U.S. national team every chance of success in the World Cup. With that in mind, we have been very cooperative in letting players go early so they can spend significant amounts of time together."

MLS did the same thing four years ago, with no repercussions.

"In 1998, we played through the World Cup in France and had quite a positive experience in terms of the profile and interest in soccer going up during that period," Gazidis said. "That reflected well in terms of our attendance and the interest in the league during that period. We were a little bit afraid that we would get lost in the noise of the World Cup. That was not our experience. We think we are doing the right thing."

Still, there's the principle of playing routine midseason games during the sport's grandest tournament. Around the world, countries that play their seasons during the Northern Hemisphere summer — including World Cup qualifiers Sweden and Russia — are taking a midseason break.

WOMEN'S GOLF WRAPUP

Future bright for senior-less linksters

By Donovan Burba
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team ended its season last weekend by finishing eighth at the Big Ten championships in Champaign, Ill. All things considered, it was a good note on which to end the season, because the Hawkeyes were picked to bring up the rear at the meet.

Both the spring and fall seasons were marked by inconsistency, as Iowa won both the Notre Dame Invitational (Sept. 29-30, 2001) and the University of Missouri-Kansas City Invitational (Oct. 22-23, 2001), but also finished 10th at two other fall tournaments. The highlight of the fall was freshman Liz Bennett's school record-tying second-round 69 score at the Lady Northern Invitational on Sept. 20-22, in Champaign, Ill. Bennett's score, which tied Lynn Tauke's 15-year old mark, vaulted her into 16th overall at the Lady Northern.

Iowa struggled out of the gate in the spring, placing 16th and 14th at Carolina's Collegiate Classic and the Texas A&M Invitational, respectively. It rebounded with a fifth-place showing at a very tough Mountain View Collegiate in Tucson, Ariz., impressing Hawk coach Diane Thomason.

"I am pleased that we were able to stay with Baylor and Arizona State," she said following the Mountain View. "Those are a couple of big-time programs." The Hawkeyes slipped to 10th again at the Indiana Invitational but rebounded to finish third at their own Hawkeye Invitational on April 13-14. The tournament, held at Finkbine, was the only chance the team got to play on its home links in competition.

Junior Heather Suhr was the team leader throughout the year, leading all Hawkeyes with a 78.4 average going into the Big Ten championships. Following Suhr were Laura Holmes (80.2), Maggie Gabelman (81.0), Bennett (81.8), Megan George (82.0), and Shannon Fleming (82.8). George took home the team's only individual tournament title, winning the UMKC Golf Classic by one stroke over teammate Suhr.

The team will return all its starters next year, making it one of the most-experienced squads on the links. That prospect has Thomason looking forward to next year.

"We're happy with our finish," she said. "And with a team with no seniors, the future looks bright."

Sosa homers twice; Cubs win, 6-1

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Sammy Sosa homered in consecutive at-bats, giving him four in two games, and the Chicago Cubs beat the San Diego Padres, 6-1, Thursday to end their season-high five-game losing streak.

Sosa took over the major-league lead with 12 homers, one ahead of Houston's Lance Berkman and Florida's Cliff Floyd. Sosa also moved into a tie with Jose Canseco for 22nd on the career list with 462, one more than Ken Griffey Jr.

Moises Alou and Alex Gonzalez also connected for the Cubs. All four homers came off Brett Tomko (2-2).

Rockies 7, Pirates 2

DENVER — John Thomson (4-2) didn't allow a hit until Armando Rios singled with one out in the seventh, and Colorado improved to 6-0 under new manager Clint Hurdle.

Colorado, on its longest winning streak since May 27 to June 2, 2000, set a team pitching record with 24 consecutive scoreless innings before Jason Kendall's RBI single in the seventh.

Kent Mercker and Denny Reyes combined for hitless relief, with Reyes striking out the side in the ninth.

Ron Villone (2-4) gave up all seven runs — five earned — and eight hits in 6½ innings. Pittsburgh has lost a season-high four straight and seven of nine.

Braves 3, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE — Henry Blanco, acquired from the Brewers on March 20 for Paul Bako and Jose Cabrera, homered off Mike DeJean (0-1) in the 10th inning.

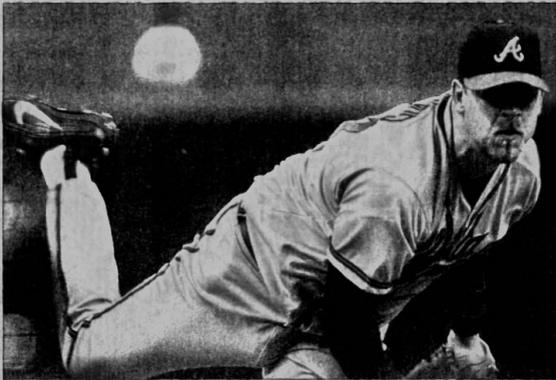

Darren Holmes (2-0) pitched the ninth and allowed one hit, and John Smoltz picked up his ninth save. Smoltz has not allowed a run in eight-consecutive games and 10 innings.

Atlanta's Gary Sheffield was 0-4 and is hitless in 28 at-bats.

Marlins 9, Cardinals 6

ST. LOUIS — Cliff Floyd hit his third home run in three days, and Ramon Castro hit a two-run homer off Dave Veres (2-3) that capped a comeback from a 6-0 deficit.

Floyd's 11th homer, a two-run drive in the fifth, and Floyd added an RBI single in the eighth. He is 11-22 in his last five games with four homers and 10 RBIs.

Florida right-hander Brad Penny left after two innings because of elbow soreness. Michael Tejera (1-0) pitched a scoreless sixth, and Vladimir Nunez overcame two hits in the ninth to get his fourth save.

Astros 8, Expos 2

HOUSTON — Craig Biggio hit the 30th leadoff homer of his career and had three hits and three RBIs as Houston prevented Montreal from sweeping a three-game series. Jeff Bagwell added a two-run homer.

Tim Redding (1-1) allowed one run and two hits in six innings, and T.J. Mathews and Ricky Stone completed the four-hitter.

Carl Pavano (2-3) gave up five runs, nine hits, and three walks in 5½ innings.

Hawkeyes in Big Ten Tournament hunt

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

The next four baseball games against Northwestern will go a long way in determining whether Iowa can make the Big Ten Tournament for the first time since 1994.

It's been eight long years since Iowa finished in the top six of the conference, which is what it needs to advance to the tournament. With the Hawkeyes merely half a game back of sixth-place Northwestern and Illinois, and with both of those teams coming to Iowa City, the Hawkeyes control their own postseason destiny.

The chance of a tournament berth has added newfound excitement. Usually by this point, Iowa is just playing out the string, pointing toward next year. Now, the team hopes Duane Banks Field is transformed into a frenzy to help Iowa overtake Northwestern in the standings.

Today's game against the Wildcats will start at 6 p.m.

with a double-header scheduled for Saturday at 4 p.m. The May 5 finale will begin at 1 p.m.

"It's in our heads now that we know there's a chance at the tournament," said second baseman Chris Groth. "We have three series left, and we will just have to keep playing good ball the rest of the way."

Center fielder Kyle Thousand, the Big Ten leader in triples, said reaching the tournament is a realistic goal. With Northwestern here this weekend and Illinois coming May 17-19, the team just needs to take care of the home-field advantage.

"The tournament is what we all are shooting for," he said. "It's definitely what we want to accomplish this season."

Iowa (19-20) has won seven of its past eight games, with a rainout canceling the remainder of a home game with UNI on Wednesday. School officials are discussing the possibility that game could be continued at a later date.

If the Hawkeyes continue their winning ways, they not only have a chance to make the tournament, but could climb to a No. 3 or 4 seed. They are 2½ games behind third-place Michigan State, a team they took two of three from last weekend.

Northwestern is 17-21 overall, 8-10 in league play. It ranks third in conference in pitching (4.62 ERA) but only ninth in hitting (.275 average). The Wildcats don't win many high-scoring ballgames, and they would love to keep Iowa off the scoreboard.

The Wildcats will likely start pitchers Zach Schara (3-2, 2.79 ERA) and Ryan Bos (2-5, 3.09 ERA) at some point during the series. The key for the Hawkeyes might be getting runs early and not falling behind. The Wildcats have a decent bullpen, so Iowa does not want to find itself in many come-from-behind situations.

Northwestern won two of three at Illinois last weekend, but dropped a 6-5 game at home to Wisconsin-Milwaukee on Tuesday, demonstrating its inconsistent tendencies. Ken Padgett is their main offensive threat, hitting .336 with 36 hits this season.

Conversely, Iowa has had a number of hot hitters the past few weeks. Ian Mattiace, Andy Jansen, and Thousand all are batting above .300, and Mattiace and Brad Carlson among the league leaders in slugging percentage at .603 and .597 respectively. Iowa is second in stolen bases as every hitter in the lineup is capable of swiping a bag or two.

The team is hoping for increased attendance. With nice weather and a recent winning spurt, the Hawkeyes want fans to come and make some noise.

Iowa coach Scott Broghamer is closing in on the 100-win plateau, with 98 wins coming into the series. Should Iowa win at least two, he will become only the fourth Hawkeye skipper to cross the centennial win mark, joining Duane Banks, Otto Vogel, and Dick Schultz.

BASEBALL BRIEFS

Watkins: Twins never showed him books

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Donald Watkins insists he has enough money to buy the Minnesota Twins, who say he hasn't proved it in the six months since he started his bid.

Watkins, bidding to become baseball's first controlling minority owner, said the Twins never allowed him to examine their financial records and didn't respond to his offer.

"Any interested party with adequate resources to consummate a transaction has and will be given the opportunity to meet with the owners' designee to discuss a transaction," Twins President Jerry Bell said in a letter dated Wednesday that he sent to a pair of state legislators. "To date, no such parties have come forward."

Watkins has said since December

2001 that he wants to buy the Twins and build a stadium with private financing. Team owner Carl Pohlad put the team up for sale Feb. 20 after Major League Baseball failed in its effort to eliminate it before this season.

"If Mr. Watkins were to reliably demonstrate his ability to secure $150 million in funds that are fully committed and readily accessible for the acquisition of the Minnesota Twins, I can unequivocally assure you that he would have every opportunity to become the owner of the team," Bell said.

Watkins said he made financial disclosures to Bell in February, and that the Twins never sought more detail.

Bradley may need surgery on left eye

eye while trying to make a catch and may need surgery.

Bradley was injured during Wednesday's game against the Anaheim Angels when a ball ricocheted off the outfield wall and hit him just below his left eye.

Indians assistant general manager Neal Huntington said Bradley fractured his orbital bone; he will be re-examined Saturday by Dr. James Conforto.

Huntington said Bradley will be out indefinitely, and he could need surgery.

"We don't know yet," Huntington said. "We don't have a time frame. After more tests, we'll have a better idea. But any time you're talking about a player's eye, sure, there is some concern."

Bradley was wearing red-tinted glasses before Thursday's game; he declined to speak with reporters before leaving Jacobs Field.

The Indians said the 24-year-old player has double vision, and tests showed that the iris in his eye was inflamed.

Cleveland placed Bradley on the 15-day disabled list and recalled utilityman Jobert Cabrera from Triple-A Buffalo. Cabrera has been in the minors while recovering from a gunshot wound to his buttocks.

Cabrera was shot this winter in a failed carjacking in his hometown of Cartagena, Colombia.

While lining up to catch Brad Fuller's drive in Wednesday night's loss to the Anaheim Angels, Bradley leaped against the padded wall in right-center and missed the ball, which bounced off and hit him near his left eye.

Bradley was hitting .266 in 23 games with the Indians, who acquired him in a trade last July 31 from the Montreal Expos.

GOLF

The Iowa golfers practice frequently at Finkbine, and all have stroke averages under or right at par. Shooting par or better every round is a key for Iowa to win the tournament.

"We've all had really good rounds here before in the past," said junior Mike Tapper, who shot this year's team low at Finkbine with a 65 in a qualifier last fall. "We all seem to be playing well here. I'm feeling pretty confident, and I'm sure everyone else is. I think everyone on our team is capable of doing that [shooting 65]. Maybe we'll have a couple of those this weekend."

Terry Anderson picks his team among the favorites to win the tournament. Others vying for the title are No. 21 Purdue, No. 23 Minnesota, No. 27 Michigan State, and three-time defending champion Northwestern.

"I'd call us a sleeper team," he said. "I'm picking us to win. I think the guys are picking themselves to win. The oddsmakers probably don't give us a chance. That's why

I kind of like our position because there's no pressure on us. No one except us and our fans are expecting us to win."

Terry Anderson also believes that any of his players can win a Big Ten title individually. Most will look for Bo Anderson to take the crown. He is the reigning Iowa State Amateur Champion, and he finished third at last year's Big Ten championships, held at the University of Illinois, after playing all four rounds under par.

"I think it was a good learning experience," Bo Anderson said. "I've been there, I know what it feels like to play well. I know what it feels like to be somewhat close to the top. I think it was definitely a good experience. I would definitely like to improve on that."

When the Hawkeyes tee off today at 8 a.m., they should have numerous fans cheering them on. The five golfers competing, Bo Anderson, Tapper, Tyler Stith, Aaron Krueger, and Kevin Johnson are from within 100 miles of Iowa City. Parents, family members, and friends of the golfers should be on hand for added support.

their meets earlier in the season, Grant said.

"I'm a little concerned about them maintaining their sharpness," he said. "But they have been training pretty well this week, so we'll see how sharp they are on Saturday."

The Iowa men, on the other hand, have the momentum of two strong weeks of competition pushing them into the home meet. Last week at the Drake Relays, Tim Dodge and Russell Peterson led the Hawkeyes with strong performances in the sprints.

Dodge tied a personal best in the 100-meter dash at 10.49, ran the second leg of the second-place 400-meter relay, and anchored the heat-winning 1,600-meter relay. Peterson also ran on the two relays, and notched an NCAA provisional qualification in the 400-hurdles in his first race of the outdoor season.

Wieczorek said he expects Dodge, Peterson, and the throwers to have their usual outstanding performances, but the key for the Hawkeyes this week lies in their depth.

"One of the things we really have to focus on this week is getting that next level of guy to really step up and move into being a Big Ten point scorer," he said.

However, the Hawkeyes will have to do it while nursing a few injuries. Sophomore sprinter Juan Coleman may sit out the meet with a sore hamstring, and senior distance runner Trent Corey may sit out as well. The Hawkeyes got a deeper blow when they found out redshirt freshman Andy Banse will miss the remainder of the season with a fracture in his hand.

Banse would have had the chance to compete in one of the strongest throwing fields in the nation. Behind Cantwell, a large number of elite throwers will compete on Saturday.

"This may be a case where somebody can get fourth or fifth here and get fifth or sixth at the NCAA meet," Iowa throws coach Scott Cappos said.

With a strong throws field and strong all-around talent for both men and women, Wieczorek plans for athletes, coaches, and spectators to see a unique athletic event this weekend.

"It's going to be a terrific meet," he said. "I think we create an extra special atmosphere when Musco brings in the lights."

stamina, and discipline. One such flier caught the eye of UI junior Beau Feuchter, who joined in August 2001.

"The Fighting Feuchter," as he is now known, admits that he gets some funny looks from people when they first hear about his rather unusual passion.

"People don't take it too seriously, and it's hard to take it seriously when no one knows about it," he said. "I was that way at first too, but once you see how the training goes and you go to the shows, it gets more serious."

Feuchter trains six days a week at Gold's Gym in Coralville, which provides the boxing club with a training area and limited equipment. Other than that, though, the club has to rely on the boxers and miscellaneous donations to purchase equipment. The most glaring need is a ring. The fighters currently use a mat on the floor for sparring, and Pollack hopes that Saturday's show will help pay for a proper ring.

While most parents would rather have their children playing Little League, the club tries to cater to more individualist attitudes.

"I think boxing offers more reward than team sports," Pollack said. "It's satisfying when you train as hard as we do, then get in the ring and do well. Yeah, you might get hit in the head, but it's still satisfying."

Safety is certainly an issue, and the boxers wear protective headgear and extra-padded gloves when they fight. The brutality that is common to big-time fighting is absent in the Iowa amateur programs, something that both Feuchter and Pollack stress.

"[My parents] were a little concerned," Feuchter said. "But once they saw what it was all about, that it was safe and we trained hard, they were happy about it."

"I'd rather have my kid boxing than playing football," Pollack added. "At least in boxing, you have regulated weight classes, and there aren't big guys hitting little guys, or bodies flying all over the place."

The Saturday show will feature clubs from all over Iowa and Illinois, including several Golden Gloves champions. Ron Williams of Muscatine is even ranked in the top 10 nationally. For his part, Feuchter, nicknamed "3-0 Beau" because of his undefeated record, hopes to become "4-0 Feuchter" with a victory. Regardless of the outcome, he knows he's better for having boxed.

"I was out of shape when I got into this," he said. "But now I can go hard the whole round. You really get your whole body into it, and it really gets you in shape."

Cameron, Boone slug two HRs each in 10-run first

In the seventh, Cameron was hit by a pitch from Mike Porzio in the back of the left thigh, drawing boos from the 12,891 mostly White Sox fans.

Cameron then flew out. "The wind wasn't going too well to right-center. I hit it well. I struck it as best as I could," he said. "I thought I had a basehit on that one."

Cameron began his historic night by joining Bret Boone as the first teammates ever to both hit two home runs in the same inning. They connected back-to-back twice in a 10-run first.

Mark Whiten was the last player to homer four times in a game, doing it on Sept. 7, 1993, for St. Louis in the second game of a double-header. Rocky Colavito was the last to do it in the AL, on June 10, 1959, for Cleveland.

Cameron hit a solo shot in the third inning and added another solo homer with two outs in the fifth. As his fourth shot soared toward center field, a loud, "Ohhhh" went up from the crowd. He rounded the bases with a big grin on his face and slapped hands with third-base coach Dave Myers.

Ruben Sierra, one of Cameron's closest friends on the team, greeted him with a big hug after he crossed home plate. And with the crowd giving him a standing ovation, he headed to the dugout as the rest of the Mariners came out to greet him.

The Ledge

by Bill Peniston
 Cool things to do when you're a superhero

- Fight evil: dispose of Osama bin Laden, Ted Turner, Republicans, the state of Minnesota, Yankee fans, etc.
- Turn into an angry green monster, chug a keg of beer, yell, "Hulk smashed!" Proceed to pay a visit to the Neighborhood Housing Relations Task Force.
- Use X-ray vision — it's easier than imagination.
- Join a team of misfit mutants who battle for a world that fears and hates them. Call yourselves the Iowa Men's Basketball Team.
- While at the bar, use telepathic mind reading to discover which girls want to have casual sex with you.
- While at a bar, use telepathic mind reading to discover no girls want to have casual sex with you.
- Become a nerdy, mild-mannered DI reporter to hide your secret powers.
- Ask Mary Sue if she wants to get high with you. After she agrees, take her flying.
- Heat-ray the hell out of Ames; put it out of its misery.

quote of the day

There is one group that wants everyone to bow down to it and lick its boots.

— a member of Nomads,

a motorcycle gang. A couple of months ago, a decade-long truce between rival motorcycle gangs was broken. Now, the Pagans, Bandidos, Sons, Outlaws, Vagos, and Mongols are joining together to fight the Hell's Angels.
