Bomb suspect captured, charged

By Scott Sonner
Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — A 21-year-old college student was charged Tuesday in connection with the five-state string of mailbox pipe bombs after he was arrested on a windswept highway following a manhunt that stretched across half the country.

Luke J. Helder of Pine Island, Minn., was captured after dropping a gun out his car window, the FBI said. A bomb squad was called to check the vehicle for explosives.

Helder was stopped more than 1,500 miles from the Illinois communities where some of the first bombs and their telltale anti-government notes were found. The terrorism spree alarmed thousands of rural Americans and raised fresh concern about the safety of the mail in the wake of last fall's deadly anthrax outbreak.

Residents in several states were asked to leave open their roadside mailboxes to give nervous letter carriers a clear look inside.

After Helder's license plate and car description were broadcast nationwide Tuesday, a motorist on Interstate 80 spotted Helder's westbound vehicle and tipped off authorities. He was pulled over after a 40-mile chase that reached 100 mph.

Helder

"The FBI contacted him on his cell phone and started negotiations with him, and asked us to back off," said Major Rick Bradley of the Nevada Highway Patrol. "Then he slowed down."

FBI agent Terry Hulse said Helder telephoned his parents during the chase and was patched through to an FBI negotiator. He said Helder stayed on the phone with the FBI after pulling over

Helder loved Cobain, hated government

By Vess Mitev
The Daily Iowan

The 21-year-old college student arrested in connection with a string of mailbox pipe bombings is a guitar player who idolizes Kurt Cobain and a singer in a band whose lyrics angrily rail against the government, corporations, and authority in general.

A native of Pine Island, Minn., Luke John Helder is an art major with a focus on industrial design at the University of Wisconsin, Stout, said John Enger, a spokesman for the school. Helder is a junior with a clean record, he said.

Helder plays guitar and sings as one of three members of Apathy, an unsigned 2-year-old hardcore rock/grunge band out of Rochester, Minn. A huge Nirvana fan, he worshipped lead singer Cobain, who committed suicide in 1995.

Firefighters sniff arson

By Gian Sachdev
The Daily Iowan

While responding to a blaze at 5:30 a.m. on April 16, Iowa City firefighter Brian Greer thought any unidentified onlooker near the Hall Mall could be the arsonist, and he made sure to check for other clues that could help unravel the mystery behind the fire.

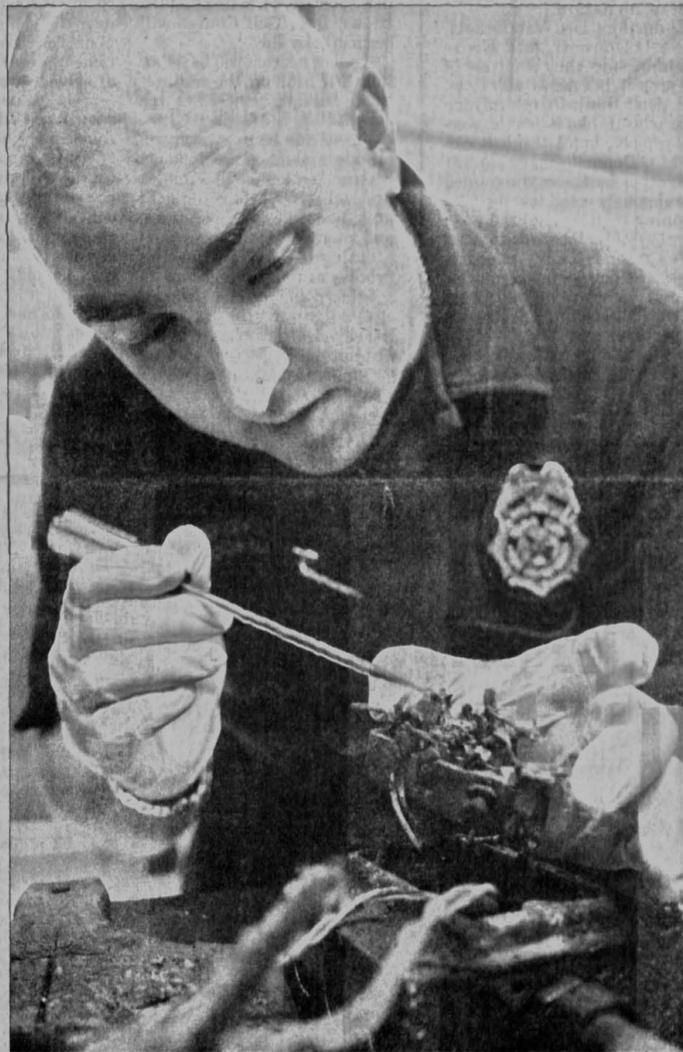

Two ongoing investigations, a string of recent arson-related incidents, and a statistical jump in local and national incendiary fires last year is forcing Greer and others to demonstrate their increasing roles as part firefighter, part detective.

Iowa City's 22 suspicious/incendiary fires last year are the most recorded in five years, the Fire Department reports. Nationally, officials record a 4.2 percent increase in deliberately set fires. The figures are prompting new batches of local firefighters to attend "arson school" at Des Moines Law Enforcement Academy, hoping to return as a hybrid of firefighter and arson specialist, Greer said.

"If you've been in an investigation before, you always try to make a mental note of what seems out of place," he said. "In the Hall Mall, we did a second walk-through after the fire was controlled and found more evidence."

Iowa City firefighters head into National Arson Awareness Week knowing some of that effort is paying off. Last week, police used evidence preserved by fire officials to charge Robert Eugene Lee, 50, with second-degree arson and second-degree burglary in the April 16 fire, which caused $20,000 in damages to businesses below the Hall Mall, including College Street Billiards Club & Deli. The blaze originated in a tattoo parlor called Subculture.

"At the end of a big or suspicious fire, shift investigators will change uniform from firefighter to fire investigator," said Fire Chief Andrew Rocca. "Our first job is to control the blaze, but our second job is identify and preserve the work of the arsonist or arsonists."

Iowa faces $400 million hammer

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Tom Vilsack and legislative leaders were warned Tuesday they face a shortfall of up to $219 million in this year's state budget because of a persistently weak economy.

They also face a shortfall of more than $200 million in next year's budget.

"It's like getting hit in the head with a $400 million hammer," said House Majority Leader Chris Rants, R-Sioux City.

The day began when a panel of budget forecasters slashed $167.6 million from its projection of how much the state will have to spend this year.

When that figure is plugged into the state's budget, that triggers other budget problems, causing a shortfall of up to $203 million.

In a private meeting, the governor then warned lawmakers that unexpectedly high spending on health programs such as Medicaid makes the problem even worse, and the resulting shortfall is $219 million.

"It surprised all of us," said

Senate Majority Leader Stewart Iverson, R-Dows. "We realize we have a budget problem, and we are going to solve it. Everything is on the table."

"Iowa is in a much better position than many other states," Vilsack said. "We still have reserve funds."

He said Tuesday's session was "cordial and constructive," and he hoped to bargain a deal that would allow a special session before end of the month.

"Candidly, the options are limited," the governor said.

Legislative leaders said bargaining with the governor will continue today as they search for a combination of steps they can take to cover the budget shortfalls.

"It's going to require some very difficult decisions," said Rants. He said lawmakers and the governor likely will bargain a package that includes spending cuts, dipping into cash reserves, and transferring money from funds set up for other purposes.

"There aren't going to be any tax increases," said Rants, who said lawmakers were taken aback at the size of the budget problem they face.

Panel members recall revelries

By Paula Mavroudis
The Daily Iowan

Some members of a city task force geared toward bettering neighborhood relations said they reveled in their youths by dragging kegs of beer into the forest and campaigning door-to-door for their right to vote.

They're the same members who are proposing ordinances that would withhold diplomas or grades from UI students with outstanding city fines, require permits to purchase a keg or hold parties of more than 30 individuals, and ban indoor furniture from porches.

Coralville resident Sally Cline, a member of the Neighborhood Housing Relations Task Force, said that while she was a student at the University of Northern Iowa, she attended parties called "woodsies" in which she and her friends would take a keg into wooded areas.

"We had a lot of fun at those, taking a keg out into the woods," the former long-time Iowa City resident said with a laugh. "I always lived in fear of getting caught, though." However, the greater freedom enjoyed by students today dictates the need for more regulations, she said.

Task-force members have said their efforts aim to end irresponsible behavior in general — even though the proposals have drawn the most criticism from students. The task force will meet today at 3:30 p.m. at the Civic Center to review concerns raised at a public forum held last week.

Cline and task-force member Jerry Hansen both said they were politically active youths who marched in protest against war.

"I remember going all over town knocking on doors to fight for the 18-year-old right to vote," Hansen said. "I never chained myself to doors, but I was politically aware during college."

Some task-force members refused to comment, criticizing media coverage of the issue; other members were unavailable for comment. Members include Iowa City residents Ann Freerks, Mike Carberry, Nick Klenske — the one

Suicide bomber slays 16

By Jason Keyser

RISHON LETZION, Israel — A pool hall popular with Israeli teenagers became the latest Palestinian target Tuesday when a suicide bomber set off nail-studded explosives and killed 16 people. It was the first such attack in more than three weeks and the first since the Israeli army began pulling out of the West Bank's main cities.

The dead included the bomber; at least 60 people were wounded, authorities said.

Haim Cohen, a police commander, said the attacker walked straight into the Sheffield pool hall in this city of 100,000, 10 miles south of Tel Aviv. "He entered all of a sudden into the hall, and then he exploded," Cohen said.

Suicide bombings had been happening every few days until Israel consolidated its West Bank offensive. But there have been none since April 12, when a

Shimek faces student fluctuations

A significant obstacle for the staff at Shimek Elementary school each year is the fluctuation in the number of students, said members who spoke to the Iowa City School Board during a public meeting Tuesday.

Shimek staff members and Principal Charlie Towers told the School Board that population fluctuations sometimes mean teachers are reassigned to a different school just a week before classes begin. This is because the number of full-time-equivalent teachers assigned to each of the district's 17 elementary schools is based on the number of students attending the school and the students' grade levels.

The district maintains a ratio of approximately 19 students per full-time-equivalent teacher for kindergartners and first-graders. For third through sixth-graders, the ratio is 24 students per teacher.

Fluctuations in student population affect Shimek more directly, Towers said. With 251 students this year, changes in enrollment have a bigger effect on the school.

Fifty sixth-graders are leaving the school at the end of this school year, while Shimek is projecting that only 36 kindergartners will enter next year, lowering the school's enrollment by 14 students.

With current enrollment, the school qualifies for just under 11 teachers under the district's formula, leaving some concerned they will be understaffed.

Towers said grade-sharing helps deal with the population fluctuations by using teachers to teach more than one grade each year.

North Side plan OK'd

By Mike McWilliams
The Daily Iowan

Heeding input from area business owners and residents, a split Iowa City City Council voted to seek bids for the North Side Marketplace streetscape project that will clean up the streets near the downtown.

The first phase of the project, which could begin as early as next month, was estimated to cost $440,000. The council voted, 4-3, in support of the project. It will add benches, trash cans, bike racks, and street lighting, and remove sickly trees on Linn and Jefferson streets west of Gilbert Street.

"I think the neighborhood will be strengthened by the project and make the neighborhood feel like a part of the downtown," said Doug Alberhasky, the owner of John's Grocery Inc., 401 E. Market St.

He said poor street landscaping and lighting could deter customers from frequenting the area.

"If Iowa City lost the Hamburg (Inn) or John's, our town and a piece of our history would be lost and turned into Anytown, U.S.A. — otherwise known as Coralville," Alberhasky said.

The project, originally scheduled for construction last year, was delayed by the council until this year because of budget problems and incomplete engineering plans, said City Manager Steve Atkins.

In the summer of 2003, the second phase will add improvements to Bloomington and Gilbert streets. It will also add crosswalks to intersections at Linn, Market, Gilbert, Jefferson, and Dubuque streets.

Councilor Steven Kanner, who voted for the project, said he has spent some time in the North Side and enjoyed walking through the neighborhoods. He said he didn't think the streets presented a significant pedestrian hazard.

Councilors Dee Vanderhoef, Mike O'Donnell, and Ernie Lehman said they approve of the project, but not at this time.

"I don't think there's anyone here who thinks it isn't a worthy project, but I think it can wait," O'Donnell said.

In other business, the council unanimously voted to approve a rezoning request required for a development located on 18.2 acres near Hickory Heights Park. The development calls for 20 new homes to be built west of Scott Boulevard near North Dodge Street.

Coralville pushes ahead with Brown Deer expansion project

By Anwar Williams
The Daily Iowan

Coralville officials announced Tuesday that construction on a new maintenance building for the Brown Deer Golf Course will begin in early July.

A public hearing will be set for May 14. Bids on the maintenance-building project are due June 20.

A new club house, which will include a maintenance building, is estimated to cost $2.1 million and will offer a bar-and-grill area, beverage-cart operations, and catering.

Officials also are in the process of researching how to select food and catering services. Bids will go up for the catering in the city-owned clubhouse in the near future.

Construction on the golf course's Oakdale tunnel, which will provide a walkway and golf cart transportation to the course, will begin June 17, officials said.

Despite criticism over the possibilities of property depreciation near the golf course, Coralville Councilor Dave Jacoby said, "citizens' concerns are decreasing as the people are now seeing that property value will increase as a result of living near a golf course."

"This expansion onto the golf course will give the city a full economic package along with the convention center and Coralridge Mall that will make the city more complete and attractive," he said.

David and Susan McCurry also informed the council they will donate a portion of their land near the golf course for the expansion and will also provide a mone-etary donation for the project. The couple will attempt to adjust property boundary lines on the donated property. The documentation concerning these gifts will be completed and presented to the city at a later date.

"We're excited about it all, and we're looking forward to expanding our golf course from nine holes to an 18-hole golf course," said Steve McIeran, the course's assistant golf pro.

Complete construction on the course will be completed in June 2003.

Councilors will do a Drive to Work Show on KCJJ radio from 9-9:30 a.m. every Thursday starting May 16, and they will accept calls asking about the Brown Deer expansion project.

Coralville asking for fast track in city-plan lawsuit

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

Lawyers defending Coralville in a lawsuit that challenges the city's plans to fund a $63 million hotel/convention center asked a judge Tuesday to accelerate the trial process, saying the project can't move forward until the case is closed.

The city plans to issue up to $33 million in bonds to help pay for the project, which will displace several businesses and homeowners at its location, near the Interstate 80/First Avenue interchange. The city cannot issue bonds while the lawsuit, filed by two Coralville business owners, is pending.

The plaintiffs say the financing for the project, set for completion in late 2004, will push the city past its legal debt limit. "All we're asking for ... is this matter take some priority with the court and be put on the fast track," attorney Kirke

Quinn told Judge Douglas Russell during an afternoon pre-trial conference that attracted approximately 30 people, nearly all opposing the project.

Russell did not immediately rule on the matter Tuesday.

Quinn said both sides would benefit from an earlier decision. He said the case is based entirely on legal definitions, so fact-finding will be minimal.

Attorney Bruce Nestor, who represents Karen Fults and Wayne Siems, the owners of Iowa City Excavating & Grading Inc., 717 E. Second Ave. in Coralville, countered Quinn's request for expedition. He said some issues included in the lawsuit have not yet been defined.

He said he could compromise by scheduling a status hearing in June — one month earlier than usual procedure — but there is no reason to speed the process further.

"[Fults and Siems] are entitled to the same timeline procedures any other plaintiff is entitled to," Nestor said.

The suit also challenges the city's plans to merge two neighboring Tax Increment Finance districts and use the tax money generated from the merged district to help fund the project. Those opposing the merger said the move would rob more than $4 million from public schools and local governments.

Charlotte Williams, who lives in her home at 713 Edgewater Drive, said she planned to pass her house on to her family. She said she's upset that it might be condemned by the city for the conference center.

"I plan to die there," she said. "I just think this is so unfair."

William and Marie Aldman, neighbors of Williams, said they spend nearly $600 every year on their yards.

"Our homes are not slums," William Aldman said. "They're beautiful homes."

New group peddles notion of free-bikes

By Sara Faiwell
The Daily Iowan

UI students may have the opportunity to pedal their way to class next year free of cost instead of fighting traffic or cramming into a Cambus.

A group of UI students says it intends to take unwanted bikes and loan them out to students and Iowa City residents as early as next fall. The group, Free Ride Bicycle Association, is awaiting approval from UI Student Government to mobilize as a university-recognized group. Association members say they will purchase used bikes or obtain them from the Iowa City police's batch of confiscated and vandalized bicycles.

"This will be better for the community," said UI sophomore Woodson Spring, who formed the association with five of his friends. "It will improve the parking situation, and it is better for the environment."

A similar program at the University of Montana, Cruiser Cop, loans bicycles to students for up to two days at a time, free of cost. All 50 of its bikes — equipped with baskets, headlights, and fenders — can be obtained like a library book, said Jennifer McDonald, an assistant director of the office of transportation at the University of Montana. The program loans out approximately 40 bikes a week during good weather, she said.

"I would recommend this to all universities," McDonald said. "It is very popular here, and we haven't had any problems."

Users of the Montana service have not reported any injuries in the program's two years, she said. All students are required to fill out a liability form before they rent a bike, agreeing not to sue if they sustain injuries.

Spring said plans for the UI program will be completed this summer. The association is considering either loaning bikes on a membership-only basis or to all patrons with identification.

UISG money will fund the program at a yet-to-be-determined cost, said UISG President Nick Herbold. But the main expenses, repairing bikes, will be performed by Spring's group.

"We need to make the campus more bike-friendly in general," Herbold said. "It is a great idea."

CITY BRIEF

Three charged after fracas on S. Clinton

Police arrested a Chicago man early Tuesday morning, alleging that he assaulted three others using a knife on the 600 block of South Clinton Street.

Maurice D. Pennington, 20, was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and possession of marijuana without a valid prescription after police responded to a report of a fight at 3:25 a.m. Tuesday. Two others were also arrested in connection with the assault.

Three victims sustained superficial cuts to the hands, face, and neck, according to police records. Two of the injured, Ruben Aguiro of Iowa, and Catherine Silvers of Coralville, were taken to the UI Hospitals and Clinics emergency room and later released. The third victim, Tiffany Rae Tang, 624 S. Clinton St., refused treatment.

At the scene, officers observed a black SUV driving away from the area hit a parked vehicle and stop. The driver of the SUV, Lara Estelle Cornick, 19, listed in police records as a rural Iowa City resident, was arrested for OWI. Passenger Jerrell Ramon Moore, 19, of Cedar Rapids, was charged with assault and injury.

Police allege that Pennington, who was also in the vehicle, fit the description of the assailant with the knife. They allegedly found a knife on the sidewalk 20 feet from the SUV.

Police also allegedly found 3.5 grams of marijuana in Pennington's right shoe. He allegedly told authorities he had smoked marijuana earlier in the day.

Police did not release information on what caused the dispute. — by Peter Rugg

Girl's disappearance may hurt Jeb Bush politically

By Brendan Farrington
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — The disappearance of a 5-year-old girl while in state custody has led to political finger-pointing in Florida, where Gov. Jeb Bush is seeking re-election four years after taking office on a promise to fix the child-welfare system.

The Democratic Party has blamed the Republican governor in recent days after it was disclosed that it took the state Department of Children & Families 15 months just to realize little Rilya Wilson was missing.

Rilya, whose name was an acronym for "Remember I Love You Always," was last seen in January 2001.

Her caseworker allegedly lied about visits with the girl during the months she was missing. A woman who has identified herself as the girl's grandmother has said she thought Rilya was in the state's care.

Detectives are treating Rilya's disappearance as a possible homicide. Investigators are awaiting DNA results from police in Kansas City, Mo., to see if a girl who was found beheaded there in April 2001 and was nicknamed "Precious Doe" was Rilya.

"There's enough blame to go around for everybody for starters," Bush said Tuesday. "Rather than kind of point the finger back and forth, I think the appropriate thing is to determine whether there's a systemic problem and hope and pray that this child is found."

But Democrats said Bush is fair game when it comes to criticizing problems in the department.

"Gov. Bush in 1998 made it a political issue when he ran on this issue and promised to do better," said state Democratic Party spokesman Ryan Banfill. "This tragedy has shown that the Bush administration still has a long way to go to do better."

Even before officially announcing he would run for governor in 1998, President Bush's brother said protecting children from abuse and neglect was "the most pressing problem in Florida."

Bush has boasted that he has followed through on his promise by nearly doubling the child-welfare budget since taking office, raising it from $167 million to $318.1 million this year.

Last week, Bush said the child-welfare system was in "complete disarray" when he took office. The Democrats took the comment to mean Bush was blaming the late Gov. Lawton Chiles, a Democrat, and they fired back.

"We did not intend to turn this into a political issue until Jeb Bush decided to play the political blame game and shamefully point the finger at Lawton Chiles," Democratic Party Chairman Bob Poe said. "Jeb Bush has been governor for nearly four years, and he knows better. This is his watch and his record, and he should be accountable for it."

While the Democratic Party has openly attacked Bush, the leading Democratic candidates for governor have been more careful about what they say, perhaps to avoid looking as if they are exploiting a potential tragedy for political gain.

During a speech this week, former Attorney General Janet Reno spoke of the need to protect children from abuse without specifically mentioning the case.

When asked about it afterward, she said, "Instead of trying to cast blame, I'm saying, let's sit down together, Republicans and Democrats, and focus on one of the most difficult issues that we face in Florida — how we protect our children from abuse and neglect."

Kennedy cousin's trial opens in 1975 homicide

Douglas Healey/Associated Press

John Moxley departs from the Norwalk, Conn., court Tuesday after giving a brief statement to the media and answering questions about Michael Skakel's homicide trial. John Moxley's sister, Martha Moxley, was killed in 1975 in Greenwich, Conn. Skakel, now 41, is accused of beating Martha Moxley to death with a golf club when the defendant and victim were 15-year-old neighbors.

By John Christoffersen
Associated Press

NORWALK, Conn. — In a case that could open a window onto a world of wealth and influence, Kennedy cousin Michael Skakel went on trial Tuesday in the 1975 slaying of a teenage neighbor, with prosecutors saying he admitted to the crime in the 27 years since.

Skakel, 41, is accused of beating Martha Moxley to death with a golf club in the rich community of Greenwich when both were 15.

In opening statements, prosecutor Jonathan Benedict told the jury it will hear from several witnesses who talked with Skakel about the killing, which occurred on Mischief Night, the night before Halloween.

"Some people can't keep a secret; as it turns out, he's been talking about his night of mischief since at least the spring of 1978," Benedict said. He said the evidence will include both explicit and partial admissions.

"Some of these partial admissions may seem inconsistent and ambiguous," but taken together, they will show Skakel committed the crime, he said.

The defense warned the jury not to get caught up in the emotions of the case and said the physical evidence against Skakel was "zilch."

"You'll see they have a lot of pieces of a jigsaw puzzle," defense attorney Michael Sherman said. "But the problem is, the jigsaw pieces don't fit."

The case went unsolved for years, giving rise to suspicions that wealth, privilege, and the Kennedy connection had somehow protected Skakel. But the slaying regained attention after several books were written about it.

The prosecutor told the jury that it will hear evidence that the Skakel family made a "concerted effort" to hide Skakel's guilt from police. Skakel is the nephew of Ethel Kennedy, the widow of Robert F. Kennedy.

The passage of time has done much to cloud the high-profile case. Two key witnesses have died, and investigators have grown old and retired. There are no eyewitnesses to the killing and limited forensic evidence.

Skakel, who has grown from a pudgy teen with drug problems into a divorced father and recovering alcoholic, did not comment as he entered court Tuesday. None of his Kennedy relatives showed up for the first day of testimony.

The case took a long and twisting path to reach the courtroom, with Skakel arrested two years ago after an investigation by a judge acting as a one-man grand jury. Skakel's lawyers had argued that he should be tried as a juvenile, which could have meant no punishment at all if he had been convicted, because he is too old to be sent to a juvenile prison.

The case was transferred instead to adult court. If convicted, Skakel could get life in prison.

WASHINGTON — Workers across the country could be shortchanged by almost $200 million a year because hundreds of companies have switched from traditional pension plans to arrangements targeted at a younger, more mobile workforce, the Labor Department says.

Almost a quarter of the companies converting to the new cash-balance plans were found to be underpaying people who left before normal retirement age. The Labor Department inspector general's office estimated that the amounts underpaid ranged up to $55,629.

The findings released Tuesday provided fresh grist for critics of cash-balance plans, who contend they are unfair to older workers because retirement benefits are frequently less than had been promised under the traditional plans. The conversions have affected an estimated 8 million workers and involve $334 billion in pension assets.

"The time has come for the Feds to step up to the plate and start enforcing the age-discrimination laws to protect the pensions of American workers," said Rep. Bernie Sanders, I-Vt. "Workers should not have their pensions reduced just because they are older."

Under a traditional defined benefit plan, workers accrue most of their benefits toward the end of their careers. Benefits are usually based on a worker's years with the company and on their average salaries in later years — when they presumably make the most money.

Cash-balance plans are more front-loaded: The company pays a fixed percentage of the employee's annual salary into retirement each year, and workers build up money evenly throughout their careers. These plans are also easily moved from one job to another.

The new plans drew heavy criticism in 1999 and 2000, when several major companies, notably IBM Corp., converted to them. Companies defended the moves as crucial to retaining any worker pensions and rejected claims of age discrimination; efforts failed in Congress to require detailed disclosure of the effect that conversion has on individual workers.

The Labor Department inspector general's analysis of 60 companies that converted to cash-balance plans found that all of them adequately protected benefits from traditional plans. But in 13 cases, or 22 percent, workers who left before normal retirement age didn't get benefits to which they were legally entitled.

Case against priest rests on recovered memories

By Denise Lavoie
Associated Press

BOSTON — Paul Busa says he was reading a newspaper article about a priest accused of molesting a child at Busa's old parish when, suddenly, the memories of more than a decade earlier came flooding back.

Memories of being led from catechism classes to church bathrooms and confessionals, where, he says, he was abused by that same priest nearly every week for seven years, from age 6 to 13.

Those so-called recovered-memory allegations — which now form the basis of child-rape charges against the Rev. Paul Shanley — represent a highly controversial type of evidence that many courts view skeptically because of fundamental questions about its reliability.

The concept of memories being repressed and later recovered is widely accepted by psychiatrists. But there has been a string of lurid cases in which recovered memories turned out to be false memories that may have been planted or suggested by the patient's therapist.

"It makes it more difficult to corroborate the victim's testimony because the defense is naturally going to say, 'Why didn't you say anything before?' and 'What do you mean you didn't remember?'" said Paul Martinek, editor of Lawyers Weekly USA, a national newspaper for lawyers.

One of the most well-known cases of recovered memory involved false accusations of abuse against the late Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago.

Steven Cook filed a lawsuit in 1993, accusing Bernardin and another priest of molesting him in the 1970s while he was a student. Cook recanted four months later, saying his allegations were false memories that took shape during therapy. Bernardin, who maintained his innocence, died of cancer three years after the accusations surfaced.

Martinek said courts in approximately 10 states have clearly addressed whether experts may testify about the validity of recovered memories in criminal cases. Half of those states allow expert testimony as long as there is corroborating evidence. The other five states do not allow such testimony, he said. In Massachusetts, case law is ambiguous, he said.

Busa, 24, said he remembered in February that Shanley took him out of his religious-instruction class at St. John Parish in Newton, pulled down his pants, fondled him, and later raped him.

"In the beginning, I questioned myself a lot," Busa said in a recent interview. "I thought, 'Was I making this up?' The way my body was reacting, I knew it had happened. I had no control over my body. Christ, I'm anxious all the time."

Busa has said he suffers severe anxiety attacks, nausea, sleep disturbances, and other symptoms. He quit his job as an Air Force security officer in Colorado, and he is now receiving psychiatric treatment.

Shanley — who has become one of the most notorious figures in the Boston sex scandal because he openly advocated sex between men and boys — pleaded not guilty Monday and was ordered held on $750,000 cash bail.

Mailbox pipe bombs spark letter carriers' worries

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Letter carriers are reacting to the mailbox pipe bombs with anger, determination, and nervousness.

"There's some fear, but I don't think it's intimidating. They're upset that whoever this is is hiding behind bombs. If he has differences with the government, he should stand up and make it known," said Dave Lundberg of the Des Moines chapter of the National Association of Letter Carriers.

"The carriers are worried about their customers," he said. "They don't want to see anyone get hurt."

Postmaster General John Potter told the agency's governing board on Tuesday: "Once again the Postal Service and our customers have been put in harm's way" by someone with a grudge.

Now it's bombs hidden in mailboxes.

Last fall it was anthrax. And that's in addition to the normal hassles of bad weather, driving hazards, and the 3,138 carriers injured by dogs last year.

Potter told the agency's governing board that 150 postal inspectors have been assigned to the bombings, and they are working closely with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, FBI, and local law enforcement.

Postal officials have asked residents in areas where bombs were found to leave their mailboxes open so letter carriers can see inside.

"With the boxes open, you feel a lot safer," mail carrier Doris Fehlhafer said outside Seward, Neb., near where a pipe bomb was found May 4.

Mike Matuzek, the Postal Service district manager for Nebraska and southwest Iowa, said the carriers are indignant that someone is trying to stop them from delivering the mail.

Drew Von Bergen, a spokesman for the letter-carriers union, said: "Obviously, letter carriers are concerned, and they're taking extra caution ... Nevertheless, they're out there doing the job, and they're not being deterred from delivering the mail."

Bill Vejvoda, a 25-year postal veteran delivering mail in Boys

Town, Neb., said he considers postal workers' chances of getting injured pretty slim. The key is using caution and common sense, he said.

NATION & WORLD

Indian children: We deserve better

By Beth Duff-Brown
Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — Nearly half the toddlers in India suffer from malnutrition. Almost half the girls can't read. And 22 percent of children have no access to safe drinking water.

Those are intolerable odds, say Nawaz Ali and Reena, two delegates to the U.N. Children's Summit that opens today in New York. As children from India, they speak with the voice of experience.

"I want to ask the leaders of the world what they will do for the children of the world," said Nawaz, a 17-year-old from the Indian-controlled part of Kashmir. He spoke May 3 before his departure from the Indian capital.

Delegates from more than 150 countries are meeting in New York to review the successes and failures of the past decade. Some 65 world leaders plan to attend.

This year's delegates also include more than 300 children — the first time that young people will attend a U.N. conference as full participants, making speeches and leading roundtable discussions.

Several will address the U.N. General Assembly. Nawaz hopes to be among them, as does Reena, a 12-year-old girl from the northern state of Uttar Pradesh who goes by one name.

"We have a right to better education. We have a right to better health care," she said. "And we have a right to fun. Few children in India have the chance to just play and enjoy themselves."

While their country is in turmoil, wracked by religious riots pitting Hindus against Muslims, Nawaz, a Muslim, and Reena, a Hindu, have joined hands to tell world leaders that the children of India deserve better.

Nawaz comes from the Kargil district of Indian-controlled Kashmir, where Islamic militants have been fighting for Kashmir's independence since 1989. India and Pakistan have gone to war twice over the Himalayan territory, which they both claim.

The children of his small mountain village, Scumbo, must hike down the mountain, often through deep snow, and trudge eight miles to get to school. With the Islamic insurgency, getting an education has become even more exhausting and precarious.

"I remember quiet days when children walked to school peacefully, without fear," said Nawaz. "Now, sometimes, when we hear the loud booms, we must run for our lives."

Both Nawaz and Reena said the right to education — particularly for girls who too often are forced to stay at home and help their mothers — will top their summit agenda.

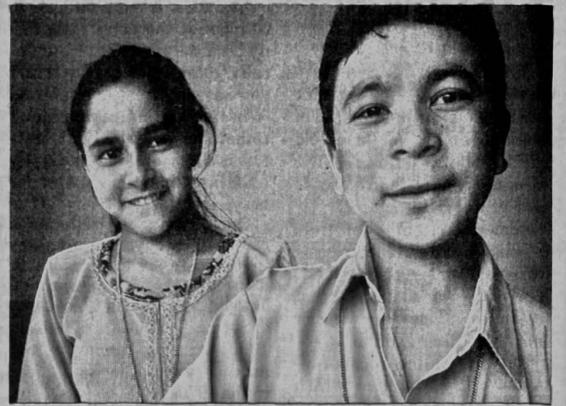

Since the first World Summit for Children in 1990, more children are in school, there are 3 million fewer child deaths per year, and polio has been nearly eradicated. India is one of the last holdouts, though fewer than 300 cases remain.

Yet 10 million of the world's 2 billion children still die each year from preventable causes, every 20th child is not in school, and some 300,000 are fighting in wars.

"The achievements of the world report card is a mixed picture," said Maria Calivis, a UNICEF representative in India. "On one hand, we have made significant progress in a number of areas, such as access to education, safe drinking water, immunization. But it falls short from actually meeting the promises that were made in 1990."

The summit, which had been scheduled for September 2001 but was postponed after the terrorist attacks, will establish 20 new goals for the next decade. They include a 50 percent reduction in the number of children out of school and cutting by one-third the mortality rate for children younger than 5.

In India, only half the children are fully immunized against polio, measles, tuberculosis, and other crippling or fatal diseases. The infant mortality rate is 70 out of 1,000 babies — 10 times higher than in the United States.

"I'm going to ask the world leaders why," said Reena. "I'm not afraid to tell them that a lot more must be done."

Pesticides found on organic food

By Philip Brasher
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Think organic fruits and vegetables are free of pesticides? Think again.

Almost one-fourth of the organic produce in grocery stores could contain traces of pesticides, including long-banned chemicals such as DDT, scientists say.

A Consumers Union-led study of government-collected data found pesticide residue on 23 percent of organic fruits and vegetables and on nearly 75 percent of conventionally grown produce.

The findings don't mean that any of the produce is unsafe. The residues are seldom even close to the limits set by the Environmental Protection Agency.

"Consumers who seek to reduce their exposure to pesticide residues can do so reliably by choosing organic produce," the scientists wrote. "However, none of the choices available on the market is completely free of pesticide residues."

The study is being published today in the journal Food Additives and Contaminants.

Much of the residues found in organic crops were of organochlorine pesticides, chemicals including DDT and chlordane that plants can soak up from the soil decades after the products were used. Other chemicals could have been applied to the crops improperly or drifted onto the organic fields from adjacent farms, the scientists said.

One sample of organic peaches contained 3.3 parts per million of the pesticide phosmet, suggesting the crop was sprayed shortly before harvest, the study said.

"You normally think that organic are the ones without the pesticides," said Vicki Kirkbride, an Arlington, Va., executive shopping Tuesday at a Fresh Fields supermarket. A sign in the store said organic foods were "grown without the use of synthetic pesticides, fungicides, or fertilizers."

"It's very difficult to keep the food from contamination ... but I still say organic is a good idea," said Rodrigo Hurtado, a Washington physician.

Although organic crops account for just 2 percent of U.S. fruit and vegetable acreage, the industry has been growing rapidly. Sales of organic foods reached $7.8 billion in 2000, a 20 percent increase from the year earlier, according to Packaged Facts, a market-research firm.

The study was based on sampling by the Agriculture Department and the state of California as well as by the scientists themselves. It did not take into account the many special pesticides that are approved for organic crops, including sulfur and bacteria sprays.

Those products are generally considered less toxic than pesticides used by conventional farms, and government inspectors do not test for them. However, one natural pesticide used by organic farmers, pyrethrum, may cause cancer, and another is linked to neurotoxic effects in rats. The study called for more research on those pesticides.

"Consumers need to recognize that organic production doesn't mean pesticide-free production," said Carl Winter, a food toxicologist at the University of California, Davis.

Student arrested for mailbox bombs

and volunteered to surrender if he was not harmed.

"He requested not to be tackled," Trooper Alan Davidson said. "He surrendered the gun and was taken into custody without incident."

Helder, who was expected to be jailed in Reno, was charged by federal prosecutors in Iowa with using an explosive to maliciously destroy property affecting interstate commerce and using a destructive device to commit a crime of violence. The charges carry penalties of up to life in prison and fines of $250,000.

Specifically, U.S. Attorney Charles W. Larson said Helder was responsible for the cuts and shrapnel wounds suffered May 3 by Delores Werling, 70, of Tip-ton, Iowa. Other charges were expected.

The capture came just eight hours after the FBI issued an all-points bulletin for Helder and said it wanted to question him about the 18 pipe bombs found since May 3. His father, at the family's home in Minnesota, also pleaded with Helder: "Please don't hurt anyone else ... You have the attention you wanted."

Six people — four letter carriers and two residents — were wounded by bombs left in mailboxes in Illinois and Iowa. Twelve other bombs found in Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, and Texas did not explode.

Most of the bombs were accompanied by anti-government propaganda warning that more "attention getters" were on the way.

Bomb suspect worshipped Nirvana

An Internet search turned up the band's Web site, featuring biographies of the trio and a picture of a long-haired Helder playing a black guitar.

"The top things I care about are my girlfriend, Sarah, and my band," reads his biography. "I party, play guitar, and talk online to everyone. That's my life."

Another search turned up the band's lyrics, which rant against everything from established religion to police to the U.S. government and war.

"If you can stand on your own, then you can stand alone," read the lyrics to a song called "Conformity."

Another song, "Filthy Greed Guilt," criticizes the distribution of wealth in the United States, similar to letters left along with some of the pipe bombs.

"I think he's just trying to make a statement about the way our government is run," Helder's father, Cameron, said in a statement.

Cameron Helder was not accepting any phone calls Tuesday, trying to keep the line open for his son to call back, said FBI agent Paul McCabe, who answered the phone at the family's home. In the statement, the elder Helder said his son is not dangerous and pleaded with him to contact the family.

"Luke, you need to talk to someone ... you have the attention you wanted" read the statement, referring to attached notes that called the pipe bombs "attention getters."

David Watson, a UI professor of psychology, said Helder's apparent strong family ties and popularity present a paradox when searching for a motive.

"You would expect someone who was a misfit, a social out-cast," he said. The threats included with the pipe bombs criticized the U.S. government.

"It could be called a paranoid reality, where the distrust of the people around you grows increasingly," Watson said.

Forest Bash, a senior at Wisconsin-Stout, said he didn't know Helder personally but had heard of his band. He said he was shocked the suspect attended his school.

"Our world's pretty crazy, but it's even more scary when it's in your own backyard," he said.

The school of 8,000 was notified by the FBI after federal agents contacted Menomonie, Wis., police, Enger said. An e-mail alerting staff and students was sent out immediately.

Helder's three roommates were brought in for questioning by the FBI, Enger said. He said the university isn't considering any action against them, pending the completion of a federal investigation.

Helder will now be subject to the justice system that he so despised. In the song "False Patriot," Helder sang, "You say you believe in the justice system, but who is to say what is just and fair?"

Palestinians, and the Palestinian resistance has proved that it is capable of reaching the enemy everywhere."

Since Israeli-Palestinian violence erupted in September 2000, there have been nearly 60 suicide bombings. An attack on March 27 that killed 28 people set off Israel's large-scale military operation two days later, aimed at uprooting what Israel called "terrorist infrastructure."

In a strong statement with a rare choice of words, Yasser Arafat's Palestinian Authority called suicide bombings "terrorist crimes." It said it would "take firm and strict measures against those who are involved in this operation and will not be light-handed in punishing those who have caused great harm to our cause."

Public-opinion polls have shown that many Palestinians believe suicide bombings are a legitimate weapon.

David Baker, an official at Sharon's office, blamed the Palestinian Authority. Speaking to the Associated Press, he said, "It is clear that the Palestinian Authority has not given up its terror actions and has not given up its murderous path."

Firefighters hone arson-detection skills

In April's Hall Mall fire, the first crew of firefighters to enter the location immediately recognized the signs of arson and carefully extinguished the blaze without ruining any incriminating evidence, Rocca said. By maintaining Lee's shoe impressions, firefighters helped police link him to the crime, Rocca said.

Coralville firefighters took similar measures April 21, when an early-morning blaze consumed Long Johns Silvers, Highway 6 West. The efforts helped detectives later uncover the presence of inflammable accelerates used to start the fire and broken glass thought to be additional evidence of a robbery. Authorities are still investigating the incident; so far, no suspects have been named.

Detectives are probing another arson that occurred at the Iowa City girl's softball concession stand, 2501 S. Gilbert St. on March 30. Authorities say one or more arsonists caused the small structure to burn for nearly 15 minutes before firefighters brought the heavy smoke and flames under control.

Investigators are still working to gather suspects for the blaze, which caused an estimated $100,000 in damages.

Behind the scenes, more efforts are being done to enhance firefighters' abilities in arson-related cases.

A recent push to qualify firefighters as peace officers capable of arrests and trial testimony is increasing their capabilities and role in investigations, said Iowa City Fire Marshal Roger Jensen.

Because of this expertise in fire and law enforcement, Jensen was subpoenaed to testify during last fall's double-murder trial in which Jonathan Memmer was found guilty of killing two women in a South Van Buren Street apartment. He allegedly set the fire to obscure the mutilated bodies of the victims.

At the end of the trial, Jensen was called back by prosecutors to rebut the testimony of an independent arson expert.

"Having the proper credentials really helped out a lot in my rebuttal testimony," he said. "Being a certified fire investigator, I think, made the jury trust me more."

Arson fires burn unlike any other blaze, said fire Capt. Larry Kahler. The typical "V-shape" pattern of accidental fires, in which flames burn up and out of a room, is altered with the use of inflammable liquid, he said. Incendiary material will often splash, causing a the fire to "crawl in an unnatural motion."

"This gives us the 'how it happened,'" Jensen said. "The next step for firefighters and police is to then work to identify the 'why' and the 'who.'"

"These ordinances are designed to improve the community," he said. "There are problems with the city that we need to address, but I think that many of the proposals are not going to fly."

UISG President Nick Herbold said he has not had much contact with task-force members, but he will attend today's meet-

Ode to the five o'clock news

It feels like Grenada, this war on A I Qaeda, our commander in chief at the bow.

With Ashcroft like Goering, this war won't be boring, so all will lose rights, for right now.

Please don't feel ashamed if your skin's a bit stained; we'll treat you like guests in our state.

But keep from our buildings your rag-headed children, or mind you, we'll hook you like bait.

We're good to our friends — just ask the Israelis. We give them the guns off our back.

In kind, they kill thousands, who dare to cry foul when we try to be rid of Iraq.

But it's no great secret: it's all done in jest, so please don't deprive us of spoil.

Ask not for redemption from Allah's detention, but please give us more of your oil.

If all goes as planned, you'll soon have more land. Just think, no more battles to fight.

It may look like sand to the common man, but it all looks so lovely at night.

Be peaceful, young fools, among you mongrels, who'd crash giant planes into towers.

Your jihad will achieve, not quite what you believe, but it will make the ratings for an hour.

When all's said and done, bin Laden's no son. I see no great halo above him.

His eyes are not likely to fit through a needle, or camel that is, for redemption.

Keep your hand on your chest and your feet towards the flag; this might be our finest hour.

When you hear the blood screams from the souls in Jenin, just remember — even victory tastes sour.

Behind the hours: the real story

After the Kellie Doyle's pellucid report on the change in credit hours required for most CLAS degrees (DI, April 30), I was disappointed to read an editorial on the subject that made things murky again — going even so far as not to identify the college about which you were editorializing. Unless readers actually read the DI's own article — a proposition on which the editorial casts doubt — it's not clear they know that engineering and nursing degrees remain at 128 or that business degrees have been at 120 for many years.

Given space limitations, it may be less useful to speculate on what the editorial board doesn't know than on how the college has misinformed students. It is simply not true that "students will not have as many opportunities to pursue classes not related to their major." As the original report made clear, most CLAS graduates take more than the required hours to graduate now. If in the fall 2002 semester or thereafter, a student wishes to pursue additional study in the college that has by far the most double-majors, that offers upwards of 50 minors or certificates, she or he will be equally welcome to do so. The only student affected by the changes is the CLAS student who has completed her or his course of study in fewer than 120 hours. The board wants to compel that student to take four more hours, her or his plans notwithstanding.

The board claims that the university is making up budget shortfalls by burdening undergraduates — but isn't reducing the number of required hours a bad way to do that? The board also claim that this change in hours was caused by the large incoming class — even though it was passed by the faculty in the fall, before we had any reliable estimate of matriculation, and even though the courses that first year students need and that seniors take are not quite the same courses.

The board's pose is dramatic, but the fact is that Iowa has not done like those in the University of California system, which has taken measures to put a ceiling on the number of credit hours an undergraduate student may take, or even to charge, as universities across the country are now doing, the full cost of classes after any certain limit of credit hours exceeded. Indeed, at a time when tuition is rising, the UI is making it possible for those students who can complete the course of study they wish in 120 hours to graduate — without having to pay tuition for those additional four hours.

The fact is, even with the recent tuition increase, we offer by far the most affordable Big Ten quality education (you remember, the Big Ten institutions such as Michigan and Illinois and Minnesota and Wisconsin, the ones you originally reported as requiring only 120 semester hours for a liberal-arts degree?). More students, both in state and out of state, are finding this attractive. Applications are up; the value of an Iowa degree seems more compelling for more qualified students. That, it seems to me, is a story, an amazing one given the budgetary circumstances that we've had to overcome.

But it's a story that at least the DI editorial board, if not prospective students from across the country, is missing.

Moving against Saddam

For more than 10 years, a rat has been hiding in the attic of America, and no matter how many traps we set out, he just won't take the cheese.

Saddam Hussein has been a virtual recluse, hiding out in Iraq, using body doubles, and keeping foreign inspectors from entering Iraq's factories. After George H.W. Bush failed to dethrone Saddam in the Gulf War, George W. has made it his mission to finish what his father started.

There is no question that Saddam is an evil man, capable of cruelties beyond comprehension. From murdering his son-in-laws to using chemical warfare on innocent women and children in his own country, the world hasn't birthed a man of greater barbarity since Adolf Hitler. For the sake of humanity, the man needs to go.

And according to President Bush, "We're taking him out."

Perhaps George shouldn't brandish his Colt .45s just yet. It has been reported the U.S. military plans to deploy anywhere from 75,000 to 250,000 soldiers to wage war on Iraq by next January.

Before the United States deploys troops to Iraq, we need to make sure that our efforts are supported by other nations.

This initial report could be just a test to see if Saddam will flinch or to see what countries will back us. However, it is not just an idle threat.

So far, America is going this one alone. The administration has said that while no Middle Eastern nation has publicly supported the mission, Saudi Arabia, Jordan, and Egypt will help. Yet one Arab official declared a war would be "ridiculous," and all of these countries profit through trade with Iraq. Within the last decade, six coups have been attempted on Saddam from within his own military ranks, and all failed miserably.

Arab allies are also wary that the U.S. will leave the country in shambles, without a stable government and with battles for power among ethnic groups.

And then there are the reports that Saddam has been building up nuclear and chemical warfare arsenals. If we attack, what will stop him from nuking or chemically assaulting America, or Israel, or any other ally?

Also, the United States is going into this war unprovoked. Saddam's only recent infractions have been keeping inspectors out of Iraqi factories and offering a $25,000 reward for the families of Palestinian suicide bombers. And as Colin Powell has been pushing for U.N. sanctions against Iraq, Saddam has been working on an agreement with the United Nations to allow inspectors back in. This could be a setup to make the United States look like a bully.

Does Saddam need to go? Certainly. Are we the ones to do it? Yes, but we can't afford to do it alone, and our plan needs to be infallible.

A mother's example: living the world through love

Time it was, I had a dream, and you're the dream come true.

When my mom began working after college, she owned a degree in interior design, an old car, and a conscience. Selling light fixtures and matching furniture patterns to curtains wasn't fulfilling the conscience part, the part that knew she had a calling in life beyond pleasing the large-haired and large-hatted well-to-do of South Texas.

John F. Kennedy gave his call: "Ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country." Then he started the Peace Corps. Mom's family, horrified, protested when she blithely signed up the second year of the corps and got her assignment to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. She and the other women of her group learned intensive Portuguese, ran miles each day, and gave up their comfortable lives for what they felt was service to humankind.

They lived in the favella of Rio for two years — the poorest part, where my mom got to help de-worm little kids and teach hygiene classes to women living under immense stress. Her group survived Rio during the assassination of JFK, during a violent military coup in Brazil, through the general exhaustion of anyone living in poverty. They traveled throughout South America, met diplomats and thieves, danced on the beach at Carnival, and mourned when they had to leave.

She came home, worked, and dreamed of having children. She met my dad at a party. Several years later, she fulfilled her dream with me, then my sister, and finally, my much younger brother.

I'll take you to the

mountains; I'll take you to the sea. I'll show you how my life became a miracle to me. You'll fly away, but take my hand until that day.

Mom never wanted us to cling; she wanted to show us the world. She shone with her joy for traveling and learning new things, and her passion for justice. Even after I was diagnosed with diabetes at age 6, Mom never held me back but encouraged me to go into the world and do whatever I wanted. As I prepare to leave the home I've known for seven years, Mom's influence couldn't be clearer.

My brother and sister benefited from the same philosophy. Cathy, who lived for a year in Ecuador after high school, recently moved to Poland to teach and earn a master's degree. Mike runs about eight zillion local, regional, and national activities through his college and travels the world with music as his calling.

In the fall of 1996, Mom called as I walked in the door and said, "I have something to tell you: I've been diagnosed with colon cancer."

She got through the surgery, the chemotherapy and radiation, nausea and near-fatal low-potassium scares. Mike, still in high school, helped with the house. Mom stuck through it all, working full-time, caring for an AFS student from Costa Rica, helping the young Japanese exchange teacher who lived at our house.

Last year, my mother picked up her life, took off from the city where she'd lived since the Peace Corps, and moved to Guam to serve the families and children of the Air Force.

And if they ask how far love goes, when my job's done, you'll be the one who knows.

I know love crosses highways and forests and oceans. I know love that lasts long beyond bitterness, anger, and grief. I know love that crackles through airwaves and love that embraces those I've never met. I know love that means caring for the planet itself — as Iris Murdoch says in the movie Iris, love that courses even through rocks. I know love can be action, and I know love comes from stillness and solitude.

I know that mothers can be real or symbolic; that love comes from relatives and mentors and spiritual leaders and friends. I know real love has a conscience, because my mother embodies that love. So, a bit early, to my mom, Happy Mothers' Day. Thanks for my independence, my passion, and my heart. Thanks for being the one who knows.

23 Al Qaeda bodies exhumed

By Todd Pitman
Associated Press

BAGRAM, Afghanistan — Canadian troops and U.S. Army forensic specialists excavated 23 elaborate graves they said held the bodies of Al Qaeda fighters — believed to be Osama bin Laden's bodyguards — who died in the bombing of the Tora Bora region.

The graves, dug into a large, terraced hill, were decorated with headstones, mounds of white pebbles, flags, and brightly colored ribbons, said Capt. Philip Nicholson, one of approximately 400 Canadian soldiers who returned to base Tuesday after a four-day mission in eastern Afghanistan.

He said there was no indication that the Al Qaeda leader was in one of the graves. Forensics experts from the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Department collected DNA samples from the corpses unearthed at Ali Khayle, approximately 60 miles south-east of the capital, Kabul, said U.S. military spokesman Maj. Bryan Hilferty.

Canadian Lt. Col. Pat Stogran said DNA samples had been taken from two other bodies found on a nearby mountain ridge. He said the samples would be handed over to American experts.

Bin Laden was thought to have been at Tora Bora in December 2001 during an intense U.S. bombing campaign that was backed by Afghan ground troops and U.S. Special Forces. It's not known if bin Laden died there or escaped.

"Certainly, there was the possibility that bin Laden was among them — that's why we proceeded with the excavation," Nicholson said.

Chinese air crash kills 112

By John Leicester
Associated Press

BEIJING — Its cabin lights darkened, a Chinese airliner carrying 112 people reported a fire on board and plunged into the sea off northeastern China late Tuesday, witnesses and official media said. Rescuers trolled murky waters for survivors, but they expected none.

More than 60 bodies had been retrieved by this morning, the government-run Xinhua News Agency said. There was no indication that anyone survived; among the debris found on the water, Xinhua said, was a charred food-service pushcart broken in half.

China Northern Airlines Flight 6136 from Beijing to the northeastern city of Dalian went down in the bay just shy of its destination, Xinhua said. It was the second accident in a month involving a Chinese passenger jet and a blow to China's efforts to improve airline safety.

Eight foreigners were reported aboard, including passengers from Japan and South Korea, Xinhua said. An official at China Northern Airlines who refused to give her name said 90 percent of the passengers were Chinese.

Dozens of rescue boats and volunteer fishermen, bathed in ghostly floodlights, converged at the crash site just off Dalian, a busy port 280 miles east of Beijing. Xinhua said the plane went into Dalian Bay about 9:40 p.m. after the captain reported a fire in the cabin.

"We sent every boat we could find," said a Dalian port authority official who gave only his surname, Liu. "When they heard the news, fishermen set off in their boats."

Darkness hindered early rescue efforts. Dalian's two biggest hospitals said they were on standby but had received no survivors or bodies. One Chinese Web site, Photocome.com, posted photos of bodies being pulled from the water.

"There is little possibility of anyone surviving in the accident," Xinhua said.

Xinhua said most of those aboard were residents of Dalian, which faces the sea on three sides.

The accident came at the end of China's weeklong labor-day holiday, a time when millions of Chinese travel within the country, suggesting many aboard were returning home for the resumption of business this morning.

The plane was an MD-82 airliner, Xinhua said — one of 24 such aircraft in what China Northern says is an 82-plane fleet. It was carrying 103 passengers and nine crew.

An emergency-services officer at the airport, who said he had just returned from the crash site, said the plane had broken into pieces, which were floating on the water.

"It disintegrated," the officer said. He refused to give his name or other details. Police reported they had begun DNA testing to identify victims.

Liu Jiqing, a loader at Dalian Port who was working Tuesday night, told Xinhua he saw the aircraft "making several circles before plunging into the sea." Liu, who reported the crash to his dispatcher, said the plane had no lights on as it plummeted.

There is little possibility of any people surviving in the accident

Iowa comes up empty-handed

By Jeremy Shapiro
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa could not slow down Wisconsin-Milwaukee's hot play as the Panthers used big innings in both sides of a double-header to overpower the Hawkeyes, 8-6 and 7-3, on Tuesday evening.

The Panthers won their 12th straight and looked every bit like an NCAA Tournament team. They took the lead early and put Iowa in a hole it could not climb out of. The Hawkeyes fell to 21-24 overall and did not get the momentum they were looking for heading into a critical four-game series at Minnesota starting Friday.

The Hawkeyes had difficulty scoring runners in game one, and while in game two they did a much better job getting runners home, they had many fewer runners to begin with. They only managed three hits.

"We didn't take advantage with guys on base and get the key hit, and they did," said Iowa coach Scott Broghamer. "We are team that needs to execute our opportunities no matter whom we play."

Juggling NFL, amateur track

Iowa sprinter Tim Dodge, a former walk-on to both the Iowa track and football teams, has a lot on his plate in the next month. Dodge will continue to prepare for the Big Ten track and field championships coming up on May 17-19, where he hopes to set the track aflame as he did at the Iowa Musco Twilight IV on May 4.

There, he won the 200-meter dash, 400-meter relay, and placed second in the 1,600-meter relay. He ranks either first or second in the conference in the 100 and 200 as well as the 400 and 1,600-meter relays. However, track isn't the only thing on Dodge's mind. The Britt, Iowa, native recently signed a free-agent contract with the Tennessee Titans of the NFL, and he will attend the team's second mini-camp within the month. Dodge talked with DI sportswriter Tyler Lechtenberg about his goals for the upcoming Big Ten meet, his source of strength over the past five years, and the possibility of playing with fire.

DI: How did you feel about your performance at the Twilight meet last weekend?

Dodge: I felt good. All week, I thought I was going to go and be playing football, so I was kind of preparing for that. So maybe I was a little unprepared, but I felt good with how things went — some guys stepped up and ran really well. In both relays, we had some alternate guys running, and I think they did really well.

DI: How much adrenaline do you get from the fans at home?

Dodge: I think most of the adrenaline comes after the race. The nerves come before the race whether there's a crowd there or not, but once you cross the finish line, and if you've won, it's kind of like football — it's your chance to celebrate.

DI: You've been running really well the last two or three meets. What has been clicking?

Dodge: One thing that's helped me is I didn't have spring football this year, so I'm ahead of schedule compared with years in the past. I think I'm starting to peak a little earlier so I'm running better at the meets, but I think my best is yet to come. I'll go to work this next week and then at the Big Ten meet.

DI: How do you feel heading into Big Tens?

Dodge: I think we'll do really well. I think, team-wise, we can surprise a lot of people, and I think we can pull out some first-place finishes in a lot of events.

DI: What expectations do you have for yourself?

Dodge: The highest goals I can think of — I'd like to win everything. I'm going to try to win the 100, 200, 4 x 1, and 4 x 4. I think it's a realistic goal to think we can come away with four gold medals.

DI: You ran track for five years, you played football for five years. Which did you like more?

Dodge: I would have to say equal.

DI: Ah, always the diplomat.

Dodge: Yeah, I guess. As far as track goes, the best thing about it is that everyone gets equal opportunity — there's always been a lane open for me. There are no politics involved — it's who crosses the finish line first, and that's it. With football, sometimes other things come into who gets to play.

DI: Coming in as a walk-on, did you ever expect that you'd be signed to an NFL contract?

Dodge: Well, you always have dreams of that. When I came here, my dream was to be a part of the Iowa football team. Then I attained that, and once you start reaching some of your goals, you start setting new ones.

DI: What do you think has helped you the most to get to where you are right now?

Dodge: I'd have to say two things: first, my personal relationship with Jesus Christ, and second, the determination to never give up and never quit.

DI: Have you always been a devout Christian?

Dodge: My dad is a pastor, so I've grown up with it being a big part of my life. Then once you get to college, it's your own choice and not your parents' choice. My experiences at college and the ups and downs of sports have brought me closer to the Lord in the last five years.

DI: What's your attitude going into mini-camp?

Hawks bank on Hanks

Todd Brommelkamp

When asked what she expected to see from Iowa's Kristi Hanks during the opening game of the 2002 Big Ten softball tournament Thursday, Illinois coach Terri Sullivan wasted little time in focusing on the dominating pitcher's track record.

"We're still going to show up and take our best cuts," said Sullivan, who has been on the losing end of Hanks' wrath for three seasons with the Illini.

You can't blame Sullivan for feeling more than a bit of trepidation when it comes to facing Iowa's senior ace. And you can't fault her game plan either; every time Hanks steps in the pitching circle, her opponents can merely take their cuts and hope to make contact. More often than not, they fail.

Hanks will not only attempt to hurl her team to its second-consecutive Big Ten Tournament title this weekend but also possibly rewrite the Iowa record books in the process. She will take Michigan's Alumni Field just seven strikeouts shy of Karen Jackson's school record of 809 punchouts and two victories short of overtaking Debbie Bil-

Evans back to bleeding black and gold

By Jeremy Shapiro
 The Daily Iowan

Still shell-shocked by Iowa State's decision to cut its baseball program and the death of his father, Tim Evans has survived and prospered through a turbulent year to now coach the team he grew up cheering for.

He bled black and gold as a kid growing up in Cedar Rapids, and he now is helping Iowa hitters to achieve their best. Evans signed on as Iowa's hitting instructor and outfield coach prior to this season. He brought with him four years of minor-league playing experience with the Houston Astros organization, six years as a college coach, and a healthy work ethic dedicated to helping hitters reach new heights.

Now, with the offense heating up and Iowa in the midst of an intense conference race for the sixth and final spot in the Big Ten Tournament, Evans is

It still baffles me. [Baseball] was the oldest program there. One hundred and nine years of tradition does not need to be messed with.

— Tim Evans,

former ISU assistant, current Iowa hitting instructor and outfield coach more than content with how things turned out.

"Going to coach at Iowa State was not an easy decision," he said. "I always bled black and gold. This is how it was all supposed to work out."

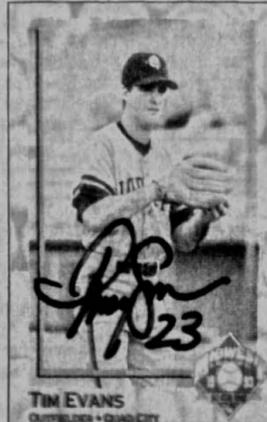

After five years coaching junior-college power Kirkwood Community College and in the middle of his first year with the Cyclones, Evans woke up one morning and found his job and ballclub no longer existed. The news that Iowa State's administration decided to cut baseball along with men's swimming for budgetary reasons was a shock and a decision Evans felt was ludicrous.

"I thought it was a joke when I found out," he said. "We had just won two of three from Oklahoma State and were feeling good, then they came and told us. How could they take this opportunity away from the kids of Iowa? To take any sport away, let alone baseball, is a crime."

Evans believes Iowa State will someday rethink its decision and revive the program, once again giving high-school ballplayers a third in-state option.

"It still baffles me. It was the oldest program there," he said.

From the collection of Todd Brommelkamp
 Tim Evans was a Midwest League All Star in 1993 as a member of the Quad City River Bandits.

Ortiz catapults Giants past Mets, 5-1

By Ben Walker
 The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Russ Ortiz pitched shutout ball into the seventh inning and hit a two-run double that sent the San Francisco Giants over the New York Mets, 5-1, Tuesday night in a matchup of division leaders.

David Bell also drove in two runs, and Tim Worrell added timely relief as the Giants won for the seventh time in eight games.

Barry Bonds, who's rarely done well at Shea Stadium, went 0-for-3 after homering against Cincinnati in each of his previous two games. He drew two more walks to boost his major league-leading total to 42 in 29 games.

Cubs 8, Cardinals 0

CHICAGO — Kerry Wood struck out nine in his first complete game in a year, and Alex Gonzalez drove in four runs as the Chicago Cubs roughed up recently activated Bud Smith and the St. Louis Cardinals, 8-0, on Tuesday night.

Gonzalez, who hit a game-winning homer in the ninth Monday night, was one RBI shy of his career high. Fred McGriff drove in a pair of runs for the Cubs, who have their first three-game winning streak this season.

Yankees 5, Devil Rays 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Alfonso Soriano drove in two runs, and the New York Yankees beat Tampa Bay, 5-2, on Tuesday night to send the Devil Rays to their 12th straight loss — the longest slide in the major leagues since 1997.

While Tampa set a team record for consecutive defeats, the Yankees snapped a three-game slide of their own behind the pitching of Mike Mussina (4-2) and Mariano Rivera, who pitched a hitless ninth to earn the 224th save of his career and tie the team record set by Dave Righetti.

Orioles 4, Indians 3

BALTIMORE — Jerry Hairston had a season-high three hits and scored the winning run on a grounder by Jeff Conine in the 10th as Baltimore beat Cleveland.

Jorge Julio (2-0) pitched two perfect innings for the Orioles, who trailed 3-1 in the eighth before rallying against reliever Paul Shuey. Baltimore improved to 3-0 in extra innings and 3-12 when trailing after seven.

Royals 4, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Paul Byrd pitched seven shutout innings to lead Kansas City to its first win under interim manager John Mizerock.

Mizerock is 1-6 since taking over for Tony Muser, who was fired April 29. The Royals got just their second win since April 24 and improved to 9-21, no longer the worst record in the majors.

Marlins 12, Padres 4

MIAMI — Ryan Dempster, winless in 11 starts since Sept. 2, was staked to a 10-run lead and led the Marlins over the San Diego Padres, 12-4, Tuesday to become Florida's career leader in wins.

DODGE

Dodge: I keep relating it to when I came down here — I had no idea what to expect. I just have to remember to trust God, and keep the same attitude, and work hard, and hopefully, it will work out.

DI: What if it doesn't, then what will you do?

Dodge: I'd like to pursue playing somewhere else, whether it's in NFL Europe, Canada, or somewhere else, I don't know. If football fails, then I'll look into running track; I've spoken to some agents already about possibly running. After that, I've always had an interest in being a fireman. Maybe I can see if I can be the first guy in the house [laughs].

DI: What is it that attracts you to being a firefighter?

Dodge: I like the adventure and the risk. It would be a chance to stay active and be somewhat heroic in what I do. I've worked with the Fire Department here in Iowa City, and I really enjoy that. And plus, chicks dig firemen.

Stats, honors not important

bao's career mark of 99 victories. Throw in that Hanks will likely fall just short of Jackson's career innings-pitched total of 942.1, and you've got one impressive track record.

Impressive stuff, right? Not if you're Hanks' coach.

"We don't ever really talk about stats, or honors, or records, or any stuff like that," Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said. "We've had a lot of fine pitchers through the years, and Kristi's our most recent example of that."

By making those comments, Blevins is paying no disrespect to her star hurler. More like giving her a spectacular compliment by adding her name to a string of names that includes Terri McFarland, Jackson, and Bilbao. Not so coincidentally, the list is in chronological order, starting with McFarland in 1989 and ending with Bilbao, whose final season was 1998 — one year prior to the arrival of Hanks. Blevins thinks maybe some day freshman Lisa Birocci will follow Hanks on that list, but the veteran coach never looks past a game on her schedule, let alone three full seasons.

Besides her blazing fastball, Hanks brings experience to the diamond this weekend, and that's something Blevins hopes will rub off on such players as Birocci. Hanks is among the rare breed of athletes who seem to be at their best when the pressure is on. And records aside, the pressure will be on this weekend as the Hawkeyes, who finished 12-4 in the Big Ten, will look to hit their stride in Ann Arbor before heading to a likely NCAA regional assignment.

Though Hanks appears far from the form that saw her post a season-record 39 wins last season (her 1.62 ERA is the highest its been since posting a 1.97 mark her freshman campaign), opponents shouldn't count her out just yet. Especially not heading in to the Big Ten Tournament in which her career numbers are infallible. As a sophomore in 2000, Hanks posted a tournament-record 0.00 ERA, and she has allowed just two earned runs the previous two seasons.

Her numbers this year prove even when Hanks is more than hittable, she's more than hard to beat. And it comes as little surprise that even during an off-year, opponents cringe at the prospect of staring down the 5-9 flame thrower.

"I don't know if I can say we're looking forward to it," Sullivan said.

No, the only thing Sullivan and her counterparts are looking forward to in Ann Arbor this weekend will be seeing Hanks throw her final Big Ten pitch.

Iowa frustrated with slump

The team clearly was frustrated by its less-than-stellar play. After winning seven of eight earlier, they have sputtered to drop four of six.

"We will take with us this bad feeling of losing," said Chris Groth. "We don't like it. We must put this game behind us, and not dwell on it, and get ready for the big series in Minnesota."

In the opener, Wisconsin-Milwaukee got off to a strong start, scoring runs in the second and third off Hawkeye freshman Jeff Maitland. The Panthers broke things open in the fifth, when five runs crossed the plate. Nick Jensen came in to try limit the damage but the 7-0 lead was too much to overcome.

"We can't give a pretty good team four- or five-run innings," Broghamer said.

The Hawkeyes started to get the offense rolling against Panther starter Geoff Lefebber in the bottom of the fifth, when a pair of sacrifice flies scored Ian Mattiace and Andy Jansen. A Brian Bucklin two-run homer after Chris Groth scored on a wild pitcher earlier in the inning cut the Panther lead to 8-5 and gave Iowa hope going into the final frame.

With two outs, Jeff Gremely's RBI single pulled the Hawkeyes to within two. Gremley represented the tying run at first, but Brad Husz could not keep the inning going, committing the final out.

Injuries to pitchers and saving their main starters for the weekend forced the Hawkeyes to start Rob Gorzelanny for the first time this season. After a solid first inning, he struggled, and the Panthers scored two in the second and four more in the fourth.

"Losing [Ryan] Mentkowski and [Steve] Sharpe to injuries means others have to step up," Broghamer said. "And with using those pitchers on the weekend means some midweek opportunities to other guys. It's their time to step up."

Mattiace scored two runs, and Groth had another good hitting game in the nightcap, but Iowa never really was in it. On a more positive note, Groth has improved his batting average in the past three weeks from .150 to .301.

"I can't point to a specific reason why," he said. "I started slow and just hung in there."

SPORTS BRIEF

score last year to knock the United States out in the semifinal round.

Daniel LaCouture of the Pittsburgh Penguins scored for the United States in the third period.

Finland will play either the three-time defending champion Czech Republic or Russia in the semifinals.

The Americans carried the play in the first period and had better scoring chances, but they ran into bad luck in the second.

With Finland's Jere Karalahti off for slashing, Derian Hatcher fired a shot from the point that hit defenseman

Tom Koivisto and bounced off the crossbar with about five minutes gone.

Rintanen took the first penalty shot at 12:47 after teammate Niklas Hagman was brought down when he skated in alone and was tripped in front of the net. But Miller stopped Rintanen's attempt, making a nice save with his right pad.

Rintanen avenged his miss just 1:03 later, firing his own rebound past Miller.

Finland took a 2-0 lead at 15:21 when Jokinen fired a slap shot from the right circle past a helpless Miller.

Cyclone demise bittersweet

The silver lining behind the Cyclone debacle was Evans got to spend much more time with his dad. Instead of his usual recruiting duties, he took seven months off to care for his dad while he was sick. His father died in December 2001.

"The only positive to [ISU's] dropping baseball was spending from May to December with my dad," he said.

When the hitting-instructor job at Iowa opened up after Elvis Dominguez left to coach Eastern Kentucky, Evans jumped at the opportunity. He already knew Hawkeye seniors Ian Mattiace and Brad Carlson, and sophomore Kyle Thousand had also been exiled from Iowa State.

Thus he immediately began to try to instill the same classic sense of work ethic, which he was known for back in his playing days, in the Iowa players.

"I love helping kids reach their goals," he said. "That is the most exciting thing to me about coaching. The only tough thing is them not achieving their goals as quickly as I'd like."

Evans realizes Iowa hitting might take some time to turn around. The Hawkeyes were last in the Big Ten in many batting categories last season, and the offense got off to a slow start in 2002 before picking up in a stretch during which Iowa won nine of 12 games.

Still, there is work to be done, something Evans readily admits. Iowa's talented freshman trio of Andy Cox, Nate Yoho, and Jeff Gremley all have potential to be tremendous hitters, yet each has a way to go.

Evans

"The freshmen have come in, and it's an eye-opener how much work they need to become great hitters," he said. "Being a coach, to see their progress and maturity is always exciting."

After two years playing at Kirkwood, Evans transferred to Southern Arkansas, where he played in the NAIA World Series his senior season. Going undrafted, he signed a free-agent deal with the Astros and gradually worked his way up the minor-league ladder, eventually reaching AAA Tucson. He briefly appeared in the major leagues as a replacement player during spring training of the 1995 strike, although he doesn't count that as really making the big leagues.

Evans had an inkling during his minor-league days he would be heading into coaching. Once, when he was with the Jackson Generals in Double A, current Philadelphia Phillies star Bobby Abreu came to him looking for hitting advice.

"He wanted to know what he was doing wrong at the plate," Evans said. "Deep down, I was thinking this is a real compliment from him asking me for advice. Last year, he had the third-highest average in the National League."

One highlight of his time in the minors was a 1993 road game in Cedar Rapids, where he played in the stadium where he had sold Coca-Cola and popcorn from ages 12 to 16. He fondly recalls homering against the Kernels in front of friends and family.

Now, Evans' new goal is to help Iowa reach postseason play for the first time in eight years. Even with a Friday trip to Minnesota, to which Iowa has lost 23-straight games, Evans is confident the Hawkeyes will make the Big Ten Tournament.

"This team set out to be in the postseason," he said. "We will have to play our best baseball the last two weeks. I know we are ready to do that."

Nets sail past Hornets

The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Jason Kidd didn't much resemble an MVP, which didn't really matter with Lucious Harris playing as well as any sixth man in the league.

Harris shot 10-11 and scored 24 points Tuesday night as the New Jersey Nets overcame foul trouble and a subpar performance from Kidd to defeat Charlotte, 102-88, for a 2-0 lead over the Hornets in their best-of-seven series.

Harris had his own personal 6-0 run after the Hornets pulled within three points with 5½ minutes left, leading to a chant of "Lu-cious Har-ris" that was many times louder than the defiant "M-V-P" chants Kidd heard before player introductions.

New Jersey pulled away from there, closing the game with a 16-5 run.

The Nets, who have felt all year that no one gives them the proper respect, entered this game feeling more snubbed than ever after Kidd failed to win the MVP award and Byron Scott lost out to Rick Carlisle in voting for coach of the Year.

"I have a sense that one thing we are going to use for motivation tonight is that we are still not getting any respect," Scott said.

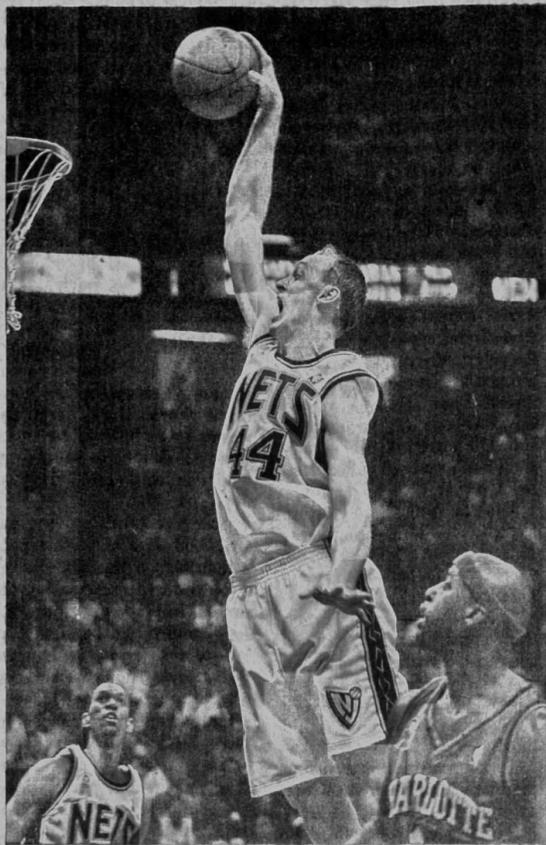

They didn't get any from the referees, who put their big men into foul trouble early, but they likely earned it from the Hornets by playing a scrappier game and getting a big boost from their reserves.

Keith Van Horn added 20 points and 11 rebounds, while Richard Jefferson came off the bench to score 10. Harris reached 20 points for the fourth time this season and the first time in 41 games.

Kidd missed nine consecutive shots at one point and finished 5-18 from the field with 11 points, six assists, and three rebounds. Charlotte point guard Baron Davis had the gaudier stat line with 21 points, seven assists, and five rebounds, but he went scoreless for more than 15 minutes in the second half before making a meaningless free throw with 35 seconds left. Davis was 1-6 at the line.

David Wesley scored 17 points, and Elden Campbell added 15 for the Hornets, who also fell into a 2-0 deficit in the second round a year ago before coming back to win their next three games against the Milwaukee Bucks.

Game 3 will be Thursday in Charlotte.

Bill Kastroun/Associated Press

New Jersey Nets' Keith Van Horn goes for the dunk as teammate Kerry Kittles, left, and Charlotte Hornets' Baron Davis look on during Game 2 of the Eastern Conference semifinals Tuesday.

The Nets held an 86-74 lead after Kenyon Martin scored with 8:25 left, but Charlotte came storming back with a 9-0 run to make it a three-point game. Harris ended the run with a corner jumper, Martin blocked a shot by Davis, and Harris turned it into a fast-break bucket to make it 90-83.

A short jumper from the opposite corner gave New Jersey a 92-83 edge, and Charlotte never threatened thereafter.

NBA BRIEF

Rick Carlisle wins NBA Coach of Year

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Rick Carlisle won the NBA Coach of the Year award on Tuesday after leading the Detroit Pistons to the Central Division title in his first year with the team.

Carlisle led Detroit to 50 wins — 18 more than last season — and its first division title since 1990. He played in the league for five seasons and was an assistant coach for 11 before getting his first head coaching job this season.

Carlisle

"This isn't an award for me. This is an award for our franchise," he said. "I'm humbled to win this and be among this type of basketball royalty, but I couldn't have done it without the players and the staff and their hard work."

The Pistons lead the Boston Celtics, 1-0, in their best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series. Game 2 is tonight.

Detroit started 14-6, then lost 13 of 16 games, before bouncing back and finishing the season with a 33-13 run.

His honor is the latest for the Pistons. Ben Wallace was the Defensive Player of the Year and a third-team All-NBA choice, while Corliss Williamson was the top sixth man. Cliff Robinson was voted to the second-team All-Defense team, and Zeljko Rebraca made the second-team All-Rookie team.

Sampras extends drought

By Andrew Dampf
Associated Press

ROME — Pete Sampras admits he's having a tough time finding the will to win.

His drought stretched to 26 tournaments without a title Tuesday, when he lost 6-4, 6-7 (3), 6-3 to Felix Mantilla of Spain in the first round of the Italian Open.

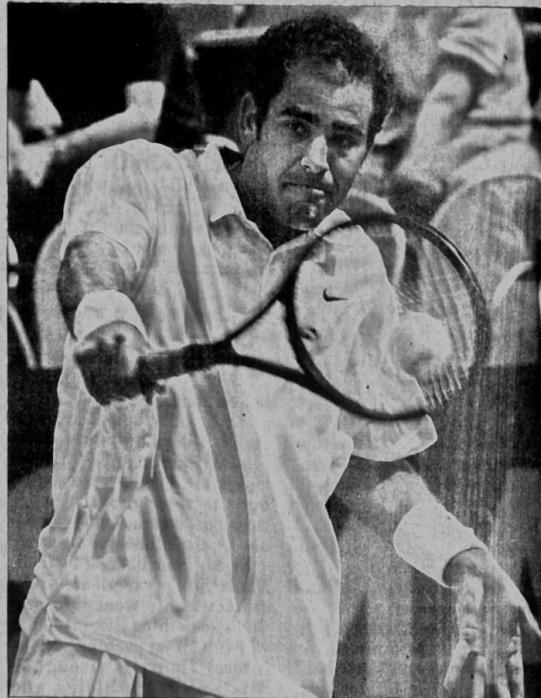

It was Sampras' second-straight first-round exit at the Tennis Masters Series event, which is a key French Open tuneup.

He owns a record 13 Grand Slam singles titles but hasn't won a tournament of any sort since Wimbledon in 2000.

"I think breaking the record a couple years ago took a lot out of me," the 30-year-old Sampras said.

"Week in, week out, it's tougher to find that enthusiasm. It's still there — it just takes, you know, playing well and a few breaks here and there, which I need to get."

Tuesday's result doesn't bode well for Sampras' chances at the French Open, which starts May 27. It's the only Grand Slam tournament played on clay — and the only one he hasn't won.

SPORTS BRIEF

Ivanisevic will miss Wimbledon due to shoulder surgery

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — Goran Ivanisevic won't defend his Wimbledon title because he needs surgery on his injured left shoulder.

"I wanted so much to play that opening match on Monday at Wimbledon on Center Court," Ivanisevic said in a statement Tuesday. "I am very disappointed, but I have no other choice."

Croatian newspapers reported earlier Tuesday that the 30-year-old left-hander decided to undergo an operation on his serving shoulder, which has been bothering him for years.

Ivanisevic will be the first Wimbledon men's champion not to defend his title since Stan Smith in 1973. Smith stayed away because of an ATP boycott.

Ivanisevic was reportedly hastened toward surgery when pains in his shoulder forced him to cut short Monday's training in Split, his hometown in southern Croatia.

He has played only once in six weeks, a doubles match for Croatia in a Davis Cup quarterfinal a month ago. Ranked No. 16 in the world, he has canceled his entry in the ATP World Team Championship in Dusseldorf, Germany, on May 20.

Doctors recently determined that much of the cartilage and muscle tissue in Ivanisevic's left shoulder was badly affected by more than a decade of professional tennis.

O'Neil tears ACL in pickup game

AMES (AP) — Anne O'Neil, expected to be a key player for the Iowa State women's basketball team next season, will be out of action indefinitely because of a torn knee ligament.

O'Neil tore her anterior cruciate ligament in a pickup game on May 3, the university said. She is expected to have surgery this week.

Normal recovery time for a torn ACL is five to six months. If she comes back in five months, O'Neil would be available for the start of practice in mid-October. The season will start in mid-November.

Iowa State's Erica Junod returned in three months this past season after sustaining a similar injury in November. O'Neil, a 5-11 guard from Cedar Rapids, sat out last season after transferring from Illinois. She has three seasons of eligibility at Iowa State.

Her injury was the latest in a series of personnel losses for coach Bill Fennelly. Forward Melanie Bremer and center Kate Bauman announced recently they were transferring. Center Nina Smith, who transferred from Wisconsin, said last week she was giving up basketball.

Golf's Cal Ripken strokes on

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

When the Senior PGA Tour asked Dana Quigley for some biographical information, he listed baseball, hockey, sports, planes, and boats as interests.

That's a little misleading. His true interests: golf, golf, and golf.

When he's not on the Senior PGA Tour, where Quigley has played in a record 178-consecutive tournaments, he can be found playing marathon golf with his son, playing casual golf with friends, playing corporate golf for easy cash, playing golf to raise money for charities, and sometimes playing golf by himself because he can't get enough.

"I'm a freak," he said. "There's no question about it."

What's to question? Two years ago, he went home to Rhode Island to see his two children in December and didn't play for five days because of the snow.

"That was my last Christmas in Rhode Island," Quigley said. "Now, they spend Christmas with their mother, then fly down to Florida and spend time with me." The senior tour takes a break during the Masters.

The 55-year-old Quigley doesn't. "My son flew down from Rhode Island that week," Quigley said, "and you can't believe the golf we played."

He and 17-year-old Devon played 36 holes Monday, 45 holes Tuesday, 43 holes Wednesday, and 54 holes Thursday. Bruce Lietzke didn't play that much in three months.

As a head professional for 15 years in Rehoboth, Mass., Quigley arrived at dawn every day and played Crestwood Country Club until it opened at 8 a.m. If he had a 30-minute gap in his teaching schedule, he would find an open hole and play it. At the end of the day, he played with his assistants until they could no longer see.

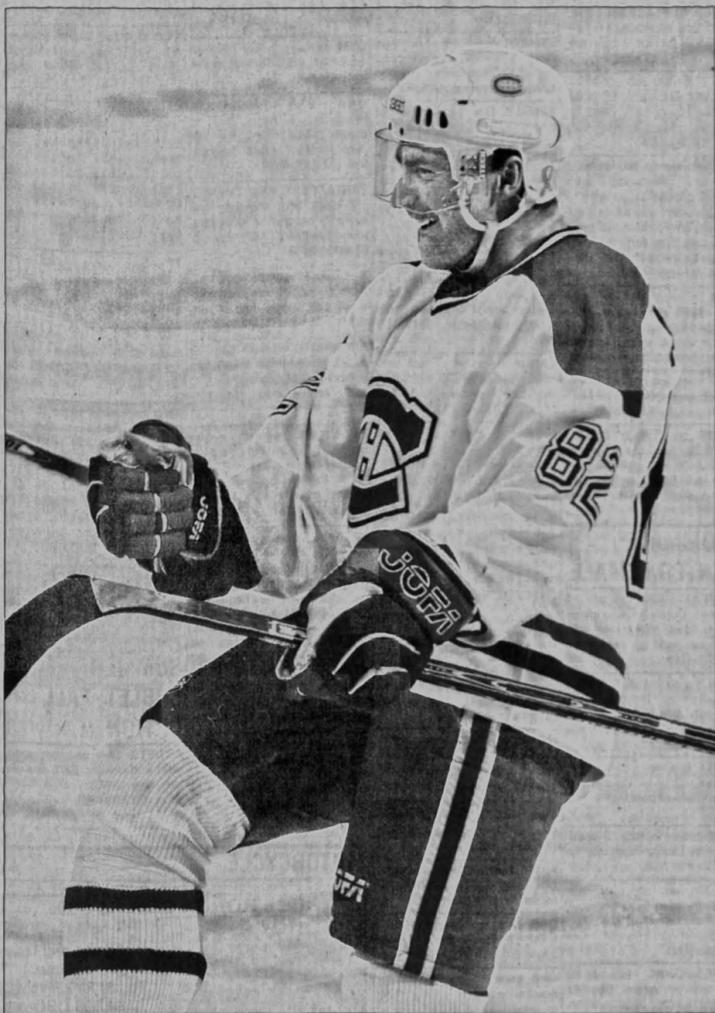

Quigley's passion for golf landed him in the record books last week.

He lost in a playoff to Sammy Rachels at the Bruno's Memorial Classic, where Quigley teed it up for the 178th-consecutive Senior PGA Tour event for which he was eligible, breaking the mark held by Mike McCullough.

Chris O'Meara/Associated Press
Dana Quigley, of Palm Beach, Fla., tips his hat to the gallery after finishing the 18th hole during the first round of the Verizon Classic Feb. 15.

The streak dates to the 1997 Bank-Boston Classic, which gave him a sponsor's exemption. The next week, he went through Monday qualifying to get into the Long Island Classic, then won in a playoff for his first of six senior victories.

Jacques Boissinot/Associated Press

Montreal Canadiens' Donald Audette celebrates his overtime goal to beat the Carolina Hurricanes, 2-1, during Game 3 of the Eastern Conference semifinals Tuesday.

Red Wings feeling the Blues

The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Keith Tkachuk had his first playoff hat trick as the St. Louis Blues put a huge dent in Dominik Hasek's aura of invincibility, beating the Detroit Red Wings, 6-1, Tuesday night.

The Blues shaved their second-round series deficit to 2-1, getting 27 saves from Brent Johnson. They will try to even the series Thursday night in St. Louis.

Tkachuk, who led the Blues with 38 goals during the regular season, has four goals in the postseason. He scored once in each period, putting deflections past Hasek in the first and second periods, then converting Pavol Demitra's setup on a 3-on-2 break in the third.

The power play also came to life for the Blues, who ended an 0-for-10 drought with a pair of goals. Scott Mellanby scored on a two-man advantage in the first period, and Tkachuk's second goal came on a power play for St. Louis, which was 2-5 overall. The Red Wings' power play was 0-6.

Demitra had three assists and a short-handed goal, and Chris Pronger had three assists for the Blues, who treated Hasek rudely.

Hasek stopped 58 of 60 shots in the first two games, including his eighth career playoff shutout in Game 1. But the Blues built their confidence by scoring a pair of third-period goals in a 3-2 Game 2 loss, and they scored twice on eight first-period shots in Game 3.

Canadiens 2, Hurricanes 1

MONTREAL — Donald Audette waited until overtime to take his first shot of the game. It buried the Carolina Hurricanes.

Audette scored his fifth goal of the Stanley Cup playoffs at 2:26 of the first overtime Tuesday night, and Jose Theodore made 33 saves as the Montreal Canadiens beat Carolina, 2-1. The victory gave Montreal a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series, which will resume here Thursday night.

The winning goal came off a faceoff, and Carolina ace Rod Brind'Amour was victimized on the draw by Yanic Perreault. He drew the puck to Audette, who beat goalie Kevin Weekes with a quick shot from the low slot.

It was Carolina's first overtime loss after two wins against New Jersey in the first round. Weekes finished with 18 saves.

Saku Koivu, who leads Montreal in scoring with 10 points, got his fourth goal of the playoffs at 9:03 of the second period to break a tense, scoreless duel between Theodore and Weekes.

Andreas Dackell set up the goal, intercepting a pass by Carolina defenseman Sean Hill just outside the Hurricanes' zone. Dackell closed in on Weekes from the right and zipped a perfect goal-mouth feed to the diminutive Canadiens captain, who deflected it past Weekes before he could move his pads.

Quarterback injured at party, requires stitches

DENVER (AP) — Denver Broncos quarterback Brian Griese was knocked unconscious and needed seven stitches above his right eye after he fell in the driveway at the home of teammate Terrell Davis.

Griese was running down the driveway Sunday night during a party when he stumbled, team spokesman Jim Saccomano said Tuesday.

Paramedics treated Griese and took him to Swedish Medical Center. He received the stitches above a blackened right eye and was released. A chipped tooth was treated by a dentist Monday.

Griese was expected to be ready for the Broncos next mini-camp June 10-14.

On March 28, 2001, Griese pleaded guilty to driving while impaired and was placed on 12-months' probation. He failed a Breathalyzer test after being stopped for speeding. He also was placed in the NFL substance-abuse program, which requires him to submit to testing for two seasons.

Saccomano would not say if alcohol was involved Sunday.

Sports agent Black sentenced to five years in prison

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Sports agent William "Tank" Black was sentenced to five years in prison Tuesday for swindling millions of dollars from NFL players he represented.

Black was convicted by a jury on Jan. 31 of defrauding Jacksonville Jaguars running back Fred Taylor, New York Giants receiver Ike Hilliard, and others.

U.S. District Judge Stephen Mickle ordered Black to serve the new sentence after finishing the 6-year, 10-month sentence he is serving for laundering $1.1 million for a drug ring in Detroit. Black began that jail term in June 2001.

Black's attorney, Jon Uman, said he plans to appeal.

Black's co-defendant, Linda Wilson, also was sentenced to five years by Mickle for conspiracy to commit wire fraud and defrauding the government. Her sentence is concurrent with a 3½-year sentence she is serving from the same Detroit case.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jerry Sanford said during trial that Black abused his clients' trust and stole between $12 million and $14 million from them. NFL players testified that Black used his position as their agent to steal millions from them through bogus investments.

Taylor testified in January that he lost most of his $5 million signing bonus to Black, while Hilliard testified he was bilked of approximately $2.5 million.

Former player Robert Brooks said he lost $2.5 million by investing in a bogus car-title loan company called Cash 4 Titles. The Securities and Exchange Commission shut down the company in 1999, calling it an illegal pyramid scheme.

Ohio State player indicted on charges of having gun, drugs

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio State linebacker Marco Cooper, suspended from the football team after being arrested last month, was indicted Tuesday on felony charges of drug abuse and carrying a concealed weapon.

Police allege that Cooper had a handgun, ammunition, and Ecstasy pills hidden in his SUV when he was stopped for a traffic violation on April 27.

Franklin County Prosecutor Ron O'Brien said Cooper faces up to 7½ years in prison if convicted.

Coach Jim Tressel suspended Cooper following his arrest.

The 19-year-old from Detroit was stopped hours after the Buckeyes played their annual intrasquad scrimmage at Ohio Stadium to conclude spring workouts.

According to the arrest report, Cooper was driving without a license and gave officers permission to retrieve a temporary permit from his glove compartment.

The handgun and a plastic bag containing 12 white pills, which officers later determined was Ecstasy, were hidden in the center console, police said. An officer found a marijuana pipe in the passenger-side door handle, the report said.

Cooper is the fourth Ohio State player to run into trouble with the law since Tressel became head coach in January 2001 with a mandate to clean up the off-field antics of the Buckeyes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your high energy must be directed wisely. Sports events or active social functions will be favorable. Personal relationships will develop if you take part in functions that deal with people of all ages.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): There is far too much to miss out on if you hibernate today. Get out to events that interest you, and you will make new connections both professionally and personally. It's time to expand your interests.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have to keep a close eye and refrain from believing everything that you're told. Deception regarding peers and co-workers could mislead you on vital issues. Don't take criticism too personally.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your ability to share your thoughts about things you truly believe in will bring you in touch with some wonderful allies. The information you pick up today through books, lectures, or listening to others will be valuable regarding your future prospects.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You will be extremely active in your financial pursuits today. Travel will enhance your cultural appreciation and bring you in contact with some interesting individuals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone you least expect may be trying to take advantage of you. Your patience will run thin if you can't get legitimate answers. Focus on the partnerships that mean the most to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): This is not the day to be lazy. The more involved you get with your colleagues, the better the job will be. You will form a close bond with people who will be there to help you in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It may be the middle of the week, but you must get out and be active. Social activities will promote romantic encounters. Involvement with large groups will be beneficial.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Safe investments will be your best bet. Problems with family members will develop if you have been gambling or spending foolishly. Do not take risks or exhaust yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will meet potential partners if you mix and mingle. Get involved in something that you believe in, and your contribution will enhance your reputation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may want to focus on what you have and what you need to hold on to. Financial limitations will set in if you are too generous with others. Give advice, but don't make financial promises.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You will be sensitive today. Don't let someone's criticism get you down. If you believe in yourself and your abilities, you will go far. Stick to the creative and avoid any temptation to take part in an over-indulgent pastime.

quote of the day

What we have in excess are women. So if you want, we can give a few of those to you, some tens of thousands.

— then-Chinese leader Mao Zedong, discussing trade imbalances with President Nixon in 1973. In newly released tapes, Mao can be heard apologizing after a female Chinese interpreter rebukes him, saying the comment would cause an uproar if made public.
