Hylton pleads guilty to murder

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

In an unusual effort to clear his conscience and help his victim's family, the man accused of strangling to death a prominent Coralville realtor pleaded guilty to first-degree murder June 7.

A clean-shaven Bradley Hylton voluntarily took the witness stand in Johnson County District Court so he could apologize to the family of 76-year-old Donald Hebert. With his head hung, he quietly admitted to the July 2001 slaying.

"I committed a crime that was so horrible and selfish that I don't deserve to live," said Hylton, 27. "I hope this will help with the pain."

He was arrested and charged with the murder little more than three days after Hebert's body was found bound and gagged at his River Realty business in Coralville. Hylton and his suspected accomplice, 45-year-old Daniel Coop, allegedly robbed Hebert and used his credit cards for a shopping spree at Coral Ridge Mall and Wal-Mart in Iowa City. Police added first-degree murder to Coop's pending forgery charge on May 22.

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White voluntarily dismissed Hylton's forgery charge June 7 but made no plea bargain.

Going against the advice of Fae Hoover-Grinde and Ahmet Gonlubol, his court-appointed attorneys, Hylton told his victim's family he would accept his punishment and begged them not to judge him on his actions.

"That's it. I'm sorry," he said before returning to his seat and burying his face in his hands.

Coleman to leave; Boyd to step up

A legacy of development and fund raising marks Coleman's UI career

By Choyon Manjrekar
The Daily Iowan

UI President Mary Sue Coleman will leave behind a legacy of development on campus, new methods of operating, and increased research, her colleagues say.

Coleman, 58, announced May 29 she will leave the UI to become president at the University of Michigan. She will take the Wolverine reins on Aug. 1.

"She has left behind a commitment and vision for the future that will inspire the institution for a long time to come," said Steve Collins, a UI professor of electrical and computer engineering who headed the selection committee that chose her as president in 1995.

Her track record at the University of New Mexico and references made her a unanimous choice for president in 1995, he said.

Striving to reduce binge drinking on campus, Coleman established the Stepping Up Project to provide an alcohol-free environment for students. She helped the residence halls and IMU go dry in the wake of the death of fraternity pledge Matthew Garofalo.

At least 11 new buildings were erected during Coleman's tenure, including the Seamans Center and the Medical Education and Research Facility. She laid the foundations for the upcoming construction of a new journalism building and the renovation of Burge Residence Hall.

Asked what her legacy would be, Coleman said it is up to others to decide. But she noted her fund-raising efforts as well as her commitment to the new art building.

In Coleman's last year in office, the state cut the budget by more than $37 million, landing a hard blow to the university. Through the process of attrition, 103 faculty positions and 63 graduate posts were lost, making for larger classes.

During her tenure, external research funding skyrocketed, hitting a high of more than $300 million last year.

"Research revenues have steadily been on the rise in spite of budget cuts," said Amitava Bhattacharjee, the former president of the Faculty

Boyd, a popular leader and law scholar, returns in time of turmoil

On one of his last days as the UI president, Willard "Sandy" Boyd was carried like a king from his home by an ecstatic group of university students, bringing a bittersweet end to his reign as a Hawkeye.

"He would be walking around campus, and students would be yelling 'Sandy! Sandy!' He was always horsing around with students," said Arthur Bonfield, an associate law dean.

At a June 6 press conference, university officials announced that Boyd is expected to take the interim presidency until a permanent replacement for Mary Sue Coleman can be found. The state of Iowa Board of Regents will make the official announcement at a meeting in Ames on June 19-20. Coleman announced her decision to leave for the University of Michigan two weeks ago.

During his presidency, which spanned from 1969 to 1981, Boyd faced a state budget crisis that brought a massive 66 percent tuition increase and social turmoil on campus in reaction to the Vietnam War. It was Boyd's good judgment and concern for academics that sustained the university during those difficult times, Bonfield said.

TIMELINE OF MARY SUE COLEMAN'S PRESIDENCY

Oct. 2, 1995 — The state of Iowa Board of Regents selects Mary Sue Coleman to succeed Hunter Rawlings III as the UI's 18th president on her 52nd birthday.

April 5, 1996 — A UI freshman is arrested for hacking into 2,389 UI e-mail accounts, including Coleman's.

Oct. 30, 1996 — Twenty-five students attend Coleman's first fireside chat, which go on to become a staple of her administration.

Sept. 4, 1997 — UI receives the rest of the $700,000 grant for Stepping Up.

Oct. 31, 1997 — Coleman announces the new $26.5 million engineering building will be named after Gary F. Seamans, a graduate who donated $3 million to the UI Foundation.

April 3, 2000 — Student activists attempt a sit-in at Coleman's office to protest her handling of the sweatshop issue. They are carried out by UI police officers, but occupy Jessup Hall for a week before being arrested.

June 28, 2000 — Coleman approves a code of conduct for companies that make clothing bearing the UI's logos.

March 29, 2001 — After student protest, Coleman backs off on a policy change that would have increased fees for hundreds of graduate students to $412 from $70.

June 13, 2001 — UI officials issue an apology for the work of a revered alumnus after a newspaper reveals his 1939 study that taught orphans to stutter.

July 26, 2001 — UI breaks ground on $14 million honors center, one of Coleman's top priorities.

Nov. 15, 2001 — Regents raise tuition/fees by 18.5 percent after Coleman says the hike is needed to maintain the UI's quality.

Nov. 20, 2001 — Flames destroy the Old Capitol's golden dome. A visibly shaken Coleman vows to rebuild and donates $5,000 for the cause.

May 29, 2002 — The University of Michigan announces Coleman will be the school's next president.

— Ryan J. Foley

March 3, 1996 — UI is selected to apply for a $700,000 grant to fight binge drinking on campus. Stepping Up is formed with a $55,000 grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

April 17, 1996 — Graduate students vote to unionize.

June 24, 1997 — Coleman pitches the new art building to the regents.

Oct. 27, 1997 — The Interfraternity Council says fraternities will voluntarily go dry by Sept. 1, 1998.

Sept. 15, 1999 — Coleman releases her plan to separate mandatory fees from tuition, hitting students with an additional $76 fee in exchange for longer library hours, more writing classes, and other initiatives.

April 19, 2000 — A black UI dental student is arrested in connection with a series of racist threats that terrorized her fellow students.

Sept. 8, 2000 — Coleman merges the UI men's and women's athletics programs.

April 4, 2001 — Activist Michael Moore leads a crowd of 400 to Coleman's house to commemorate the one-year anniversary of the sit-in at Jessup Hall.

July 25, 2001 — Coleman announces she will donate her record $40,000 raises to the UI. She had received criticism for the 16.8 percent raise.

Sept. 6, 2001 — UI slips from 20th to 24th among public schools in the U.S. News & World Report rankings. Coleman blames budget cuts that resulted in larger class sizes and fewer faculty members.

March 6, 2002 — Coleman announces that the UI will rename the UI College of Medicine after the Carver family, whose foundation donated $63 million to the school.

UI fund raising races past projections

Officials now hope to raise $850 million by 2005

By Tony Phan
The Daily Iowan

The UI is well ahead of its initial projections for the amount of money it expects to raise over a seven-year period, university officials announced this weekend.

The UI Foundation will strive to meet a new $850 million fund-raising goal within the next three years, which is $100 million more than it had initially estimated, said Mary Louise Petersen, the fund-raising campaign's co-chairwoman. The effort is set to wrap up in 2005.

So far, the foundation has received $526 million in short- and long-term gifts, said Petersen and Foundation President Michael New, drawing gasps and loud cheers from an audience of alumni, students, and supporters on June 8.

The seven-year effort began in 1999 but remained in a quiet phase until the hour-long announcement at Hancher Auditorium. The event marked a new, public phase of the campaign.

"We would have been really happy if we had raised $500 million by this point," New said.

Despite the campaign's success, university President Mary Sue Coleman said the private money raised was not intended to offset cutbacks in state funding.

"I think of them as two separate entities," she said. "It's a big mistake for us to say, 'Let's go out and raise private money, and we'll match dollar-for-dollar what we lose from the state.' We'll never be able to do that."

UI law Professor Willard "Sandy" Boyd, who is scheduled to assume the interim presidency Aug. 1, has already helped the campaign and is eager to assist further.

He pledged to "get out there and pound the pavement" to raise funds. The role of a university president is to be the school's chief fund-raiser, Boyd said. He helped to establish the UI Foundation 47 years ago.

Contributions to the university were virtually identical to last year's total in a time when many colleges have reported declines in private contributions, said Marvin Pomerantz, a Des Moines businessman and Des Moines co-chairman.

"We need to maximize our resources in the public as well as the private sector," he said.

Another goal of the campaign is to "bring together" the donors and the recipients of the philanthropy, officials said.

"This lets people see firsthand the impact their money has," Petersen said.

Other speakers at the event included former Maytag CEO Leonard Hadley, Venise Berry, the interim director of the journalism school, and former head football coach Hayden Fry, who said he was proud that his players had received an excellent education in addition to their success on the field.

KRUI happy with new home

By Tony Phan
The Daily Iowan

The UI's student-run radio station found a new home earlier this month, ending a controversial search for a permanent location acceptable to both station employees and university administrators.

The third floor of the IMU will house KRUI, replacing Faculty/Staff Governance offices that currently occupy the space.

Initially, the station was slated to move to a house at 605 Melrose Ave., a location KRUI general manager Jennie Guyan called inadequate and unexpected.

"We thought we were involved with the search for a new place, but when we were informed that we were moving to 605 Melrose, we were taken aback, because it wasn't even on the list of potential locations," she said.

Among the stations' complaints about the Melrose location were that it was too loud, located too far from the heart of campus, and too cramped. The new location addresses these issues, Guyan said.

The current studio, 129 Grand Ave. Court, is slated for demolition July 17 to make way for an athletics learning center. Construction on the new studios has not yet begun, so the station must set up a temporary presence in the IMU Game Room.

The UI planned to spend $100,000 renovating the Melrose location. Though the budget for the new location is expected to be approximately the same, Guyan predicted there would be a shortfall that will prevent KRUI staffers from taking the studio to the level they want.

For facilities comparable with KRUI's size, paying as much as $300,000 is "common" for such basics as equipment costs and soundproofing, said Adam Erickson, KRUI's chief engineer. But moving to the IMU will be cheaper because it already offers handicapped facilities and a quieter atmosphere.

In a letter to station officials, Phillip Jones, the vice president for Student Services, said the funding for the relocation and construction of the studio would come from general university funds, making it a tough decision about the allocation of resources.

Fund-raising efforts currently underway include solicitation of alumni donations as well as sponsoring live music events, with the proceeds going to help the station.

Though the new studio looks to be an improvement on the current location, KRUI alumni expressed a fondness for the place.

"Over the four years, it became home," said KRUI alumna Emily Villhauer. "I think it was a nice location because it was separate from other offices."

KRUI's listeners greeted the news with enthusiasm and anticipation.

"Sometimes, you can hear sirens and cars during the broadcasts," said UI alumna Maggie Darby. "The new location should alleviate that problem."

Blizek charged with public intoxication

A charge is pending against the UI Student Government vice president after he allegedly attempted to conceal a bottle of beer from police while intoxicated.

Police charged 21-year-old Matt Blizek with public intoxication, a simple misdemeanor, on May 29. Blizek said he will not contest the charge.

Blizek was seen walking with two other men at the intersection of Burlington and Dodge streets just before 4 a.m., concealing something under his sweatshirt, police records allege. Blizek disputed that assertion, saying the bottle was in his pocket.

Blizek allegedly smelled of alcohol and had difficulty maintaining his balance. His speech was allegedly slurred, and his eyes were bloodshot and watery, police said.

When police approached him, Blizek dropped the bottle on the sidewalk, shattering it.

The men with Blizek, both of Centerville, Iowa, were charged with possession of an open container, public intoxication, and possession of alcohol under the legal age.

UISG executives have not yet determined what disciplinary action, if any, to take against Blizek, said spokeswoman Mayrose Wegmann. Officials are expected to address general disciplinary issues at a meeting today, she said.

Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for Student Services, said he was unaware of the charges. He declined to comment about the incident.

Porch couches safe

The Neighborhood Housing Relations Task Force decided to drop a couch ordinance from its list of proposals last month, citing little public support and difficulties enforcing the measure.

Task force member Mike Carberry said implementation was one of the ordinance's main problems.

"We'd have to figure out what would constitute non-porch furniture, and then we'd have to figure out what exactly would constitute a porch," he said. "It would've added an unnecessary number of hours to the city staff reviewing this stuff, when they could be looking into more important things."

The couch ordinance would have banned any furniture deemed "indoor" from being displayed on a resident's front lawn or porch.

The ordinance was widely unpopular at a public forum on the proposals held in April. The task force has also dropped proposed keg and party permit ordinances for similar reasons.

The task force decided to remove the measure after reviewing rules on non-porch furniture in other cities.

Carberry said the remaining ordinances will focus on over-occupancy and parking; the group will likely submit them to the Iowa City City Council by the end of August. The ordinances are being drafted into a legal language.

Police seek bank robbery suspect

Iowa City police are on the lookout for a young male who robbed a branch of Iowa State Bank & Trust on June 7.

Police responded to a robbery call from the bank, 2233 Rochester Ave., at approximately 3:45 p.m.. The suspect demanding money and threatened the bank teller after conducting a minor transaction, witness accounts said. The unidentified man fled on foot in an unknown direction with an undisclosed amount of money. He brandished no weapon, and there were no injuries.

The suspect is described as a white male between 17 and 19 years old. He is approximately 5 feet, 5 inches tall, with a thin build, tan skin, and Latino features. At the time of the robbery, the suspect wore a green baseball cap, a navy-blue jacket, white T-shirt, and jeans. No surveillance video or images are available at this time.

The FBI and Iowa City police are investigating the incident. Anyone with information about the crime is asked to call the police at 356-5275.

Iowa flood damage hits $7.2 million

DES MOINES (AP) — Last week's flash flooding in Eastern Iowa caused at least $7.2 million in damages to public property, including roads, bridges, parks, and utilities, an official with the Iowa Emergency Management Division said Sunday.

A total damage amount for homes and businesses had not yet been calculated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said Dave Miller, the chief of staff for the state division.

But, he said, loans and potential loans for homes and businesses from information from the Small Business Administration could top another $4.2 million.

Miller said 1,004 homes in the eight counties named as disaster areas by Gov. Tom Vilsack were affected by flood water. Of those, 22 homes had major damage, and 11 were destroyed.

Floodwaters rose quickly June 4 after a burst of heavy rain across the region. According to the National Weather Service, some areas received as much as 8 inches of rain in a 24-hour period.

Vilsack issued disaster declarations for Clayton, Clinton, Delaware, Dubuque, Jackson, Jones, Linn, and Scott counties.

From the damage left behind, Linn County took the brunt of the storm.

"I think it was the way the storm impacted and how it went through," Miller said.

Marion, Cedar Rapids, Alburnett, and Hiawatha all had damage, he said.

"It was heavy rain, a big down-pour. Water went up fast and receded quickly," he said.

Damage to public structures was estimated only in seven of the eight counties declared as disaster areas because Scott County had only minimal damage, Miller said.

Senate. "Her capital fund-raising campaigns have given us a sense of direction."

Coleman won praise during her career at the UI for always remaining open to suggestions, said David Skorton, the vice president for Research. In the face of budget cuts, she invited faculty members to suggest means for alleviating the crisis.

She also held fireside chats to interact with students and address their grievances.

Besides research, Coleman boosted the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences by beginning an arts and humanities initiative that sanctions finances for studies and furthers arts by appropriating funds from a $400,000 fund allotted by the state Legislature.

"She has been central in recognizing the college as an area of enhancement and has helped us a whole lot by naming a new provost and dean," said Fred Antczak, the liberal-arts school's associate dean for academic programs and services.

Antczak pointed to Coleman's four-year plan, under which students would sign a contract at Orientation in exchange for receiving classes they need to graduate.

"Even though budget cuts have made classes larger with fewer choices available, she has helped weather the storm by sustaining the four-year plan and presenting education to the state of Iowa," Antczak said.

active community certainly influences teaching."

With his "tireless" approach to education, Boyd always concerned himself first and foremost with students, said Charles Davidson, a UI professor emeritus of law.

"He has a genuine concern for students," Davidson said. "He always has worked long hours to appeal to his many academic interests."

Boyd found an active community in the law school populated more than ever with women and American Indians.

"I've taught the fathers of many of my students, and now I'm teaching their daughters," Boyd said. "That was a new experience for me, and I think it's really improved the quality of our university."

As founder of the Iowa Non-profit Resource Center, Boyd is working on his latest project to create more volunteer opportunities for UI students, which can be useful when they seek employment after graduation.

In 1988, Boyd won the Award for Lifetime Services to the Public Humanities. He was also honored for his excellence in education, receiving the Charles Frankel Prize in 1989, which is given by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Hylton pleads guilty in realtor's death

Judge Thomas Good sentenced Hylton to life in prison without parole — the mandatory term for first-degree murder — and ordered him to pay court costs and $150,000 restitution to Virginia Hebert, Donald Hebert's wife of 44 years. Donald Hebert's death was "an enormous loss to the community," he said.

As she read her prepared statement, Virginia Hebert's description of her husband — a family man and history buff who loved Civil War books and the History Channel — drew tears from her three children, who were seated in the public section's front row.

"The music, the laughter, the good times, the hugs and kisses have all stopped," she said. "It's difficult to think of the future when the love of my life is gone."

Don and Virginia Hebert's daughter, Laura, spoke about the daily reminders of his death, from television coverage to letters from the county attorney's office.

"They are like shadows that forever come and go," she said. "There's a large empty space where [my father] was, and it's difficult to imagine this was due to the irreconcilable acts of another human being."

Neither woman, however,

And I know that no matter where you go, you can't run away from God.

— Virginia Hebert, wife of victim directly addressed Hylton, who sat silently with his hands covering his face.

After the two-and-a-half hour hearing, White met with the Hebert family privately in his office. With Coop yet to stand trial, the case is not over for them, he said.

"This is different from the usual end of a case," said White, who learned on May 31 of Hylton's decision to spare the family a painful trial. "You can't reach the same level of closure."

White said he appreciated Hylton's decision to confess, which is rare — the last person to plead guilty to first-degree murder in Johnson County did so in 1988.

Virginia Hebert fought back tears as she closed her statement by telling the court what her husband's death taught her.

"Your life can be changed in a minute," she said. "And I know that no matter where you go, you can't run away from God."

Coleman's legacy could be overshadowed by bad timing

The legacy of Mary Sue Coleman's presidency could be any number of things: her commitment to confronting underage and binge drinking, her success in raising the UI's graduation rate, her fund-raising efforts, and more.

But she will also likely be remembered for her timing in leaving her office.

Coleman was selected May 29 as the University of Michigan's next president. Because the search was cloaked in secrecy, the announcement stunned the UI campus. She will officially become Michigan's 13th president on Aug. 1.

Her announcement came just days after the Iowa Legislature again slashed funding for the fiscal year that begins next month, and 10 days before the UI kicked off the latest phase in an $850 million fund-raising campaign.

The UI, and higher education in Iowa, is at a crossroads. As Coleman herself said in a speech last fall, just after the UI plummeted from 20th- to 24th-best public university in the U.S. News & World Report rankings, the budget cuts signaled the beginning of a new era in the state, one that does not value higher education.

President Coleman leaves the UI at a time when it is crucial to secure funding for higher education.

As such, the next year is critical for the UI if the institution is to continue to maintain its quality. And without a permanent president, it's going to be that much more difficult.

Willard "Sandy" Boyd is an excellent choice as interim president, especially because of his familiarity with the university and his fund-raising prowess. But Boyd will no doubt face a learning curve when he formally takes office Aug. 1.

And then, when a permanent president is named in five or so months, the process will repeat itself. A new president also won't have as much clout or know the intricacies of politics in the Statehouse, a factor that will be important in securing funding for the university.

So while the university administration's bench is deep, it will be tough not to lose momentum, especially with budget cuts taking a toll on the school's morale.

Coleman said the Michigan job is an offer she couldn't refuse, and we understand that. Michigan is a much more prestigious school than the UI in many ways, and her salary will double.

But, if the UI takes a turn for the worse, Coleman could be remembered as the UI president who jumped ship when times were tough.

Vets' thanks

The Vietnam Vets Motorcycle Club wishes to extend a heartfelt thank-you to all the many people who dedicated their many talents, time, and donations to the VA Hospital Benefit, Bike Blessing, and Poker Run. The June 1 event was a great success because of the commitment of so many loyal supporters. The club was honored to present a check for $626 to the director of the VA Medical Center in Iowa City to be used to supplement the canteen fund to benefit indigent patients of the VA Medical Center.

The club wants to say a special thanks to the VA Medical Center administrator, the entire security department, the chaplain services and Father Lou, the American Legion Post 671 of Swisher, Iowa — all the caring people who donated and participated in the days' events. A very special thank-you goes out to "Docker" Berry, a supervisor in the boiler room at the VA Medical Center, for his dedication and commitment in helping coordinate this event.

The gratitude and joy on the faces of the VA hospital patients made this event very worthwhile, and we thank all of you for your support and look forward to next year's event.

Corporate profit over environmental health

On May 31, the Environmental Protection Agency released a report stating that use of fossil fuels has caused, and is continuing to cause, significant environmental damage. The report, which was reviewed by several government agencies and prepared for the United Nations, predicts the permanent disappearance of coastal marshes and alpine meadows in the Rocky Mountains, disruption of snow-fed water supplies, and other serious effects within the coming decades. A few days later, President Bush snidely dismissed the report as coming from "the bureaucracy," asserting that there is no need to actually do anything about this alarming situation.

To finally admit that fossil-fuel pollution is causing climate change, which is likely to have major negative environmental effects, but then insist that nothing should be done about the pollution is irresponsible stewardship of our environment. Indeed, Bush still advocates drilling for more oil (increasing fossil-fuel pollution) rather than raising standards for automotive fuel efficiency by a very modest amount (reducing pollution), even though the latter would also mean far less American dependence on foreign oil.

Clearly, Bush is more concerned about preserving corporate profits for polluters than about public or environmental health. Please contact the president and our congressional representatives to let them know that we are aware of the hypocrisy and utter lack of conscientious leadership in this situation.

SAN MIGUEL DE ALLENDE, Mexico — They say that everyone gets ripped off in Mexico City. Everyone. I always replied that maybe every dumbass gets ripped off in Mexico City, as maybe every dumbass should, every once in a while.

Then, just to prove that there is in fact a God and that this All-seeing Benevolent Prankster gets a kick out of arrogant dumbasses, I got ripped off in Mexico City.

Now, when people tell me that everyone gets ripped off in Mexico City, I reply: Yes, that is true; even wise and serious and Good people who are not dumb and naïve at all but in fact quite witty and perceptive and street-wise and did I mention Good, even THEY get robbed in Mexico City. I should know — I am one of those people.

And the people who stole from me 170 of my precious U.S. dollars are Bad People.

Mexico, in fact, is a country FULL of Bad People. It IS Bad People, the very definition of Bad People. Mexico is rip-off and robbery, highway robbery, and it's rotten to the core, like the Big Apple but rotten rotten rotten, rancid in the ruthless corrosive rain and stinking in the sun of the hot summer sidewalks and ...

Needless to say, after a few hours of such savagely spouted soliloquy and much convincing of no one in particular except perhaps the few present Tacuba Street alleyway brick walls, which really couldn't do much about the situation, and even if they could have probably wouldn't have, what with me flinging insults, and taunts, and threats, and spit, and shoes their way — after a few hours of that, I decided the time had come to reappraise the situation. And conserve some spit. And put my shoes back on.

I took the cheapest local bus north out of town to get a little distance between myself and the Rotten Apple, trying my hardest to locate exactly the source of my anger and then, strangely, gradually, eventually, two and a half hours out of town, trying to locate exactly the source of my aplomb. As close as I can figure, the source was this:

If Mexico City is a Robbery, it is also an Exchange. Better, it is the Great Exchange.

It is a superhighway of human experience, and superhighways don't come without their tollbooths.

You give me a small fee, the City asks, suggests, nudges, strong-arms if it has to, kicks under the table, maybe, and I will give you access to a world you've never known. We give it our tired, our poor, our huddled masses, and it does all it can to sort the whole mess out, to redistribute a bit of the monetary wealth in one direction if necessary, and certainly to redistribute the experiential wealth in another. It will swallow what it needs to keep its teeming masses afloat and belch back Art, Life, and the Subway (the smoothest running subway, by the way, that a foreigner could ever hope for), and the Cartwheeling Kid in the Subway you see on your angry way to the station after losing all your dollars on Tacuba.

It will give you pain, growing pains, but also then growth — also, you can never forget and keep coming back to, the kid cartwheeling down the tunnels in the middle of all this tangle. It won't let you rest, might force you out of town on a northbound bus to think about what you've done, send you to the desert for a time-out, admonish you, beg you to dwell a moment on what your responsibility and fault was, too, in this incident.

Like all great cities it will demand of you more than you can give: more money, more time, more love, and more hate than your poor heart can bear. It will stretch you and leave it up to you what you want to do with the shortage, the excess, the elation, the misery. It will treat you alternately like a grown-up and like a child.

Like all great worlds full of human beings, it will not simply roll over and yield what is valuable; rather, you will be forced to search this out. "In Mexico," as Tony Cohen puts it in On Mexican Time, "say it's a functional economy." This gets it just about right.

In the time-tested New Economy of the Sweet Rotten Apple, there is no thief.

There are people, there are lots of people, there is lots of pain, lots of poetry, and if you believe that 20 million people can't all be wrong, there is lots of potential.

Film: Divine Secrets of the Ya-Ya Sisterhood
Director: Callie Khouri
Writers: Mark Andrus, Khouri, and Rebecca Wells
Starring: Ellen Burstyn, Sandra Bullock, Ashley Judd, and Maggie Smith
Length: 116 minutes

the Ya-Ya sisterhood: Teensy (Fionnula Flanagan), Necie (Shirley Knight), and Caro (Dame Maggie Smith). The friends use roofies (a drug used in date rape) to kidnap Sidda from her life in New York and bring her to a remote Louisiana cabin. The purpose of all this grand scheming is to teach Sidda the secrets of Vivi's Ya-Ya past with the hopes that both Vivi and Sidda can bury the hatchet once and for all and become a loving and caring mother and daughter.

Ellen Burstyn, Maggie Smith, Fionnula Flanagan, Sandra Bullock, and Shirley Knight star in Divine Secrets of the Ya-Ya Sisterhood.

Hollywood from its inception has had a love affair with Southern belles. From Scarlett in Gone With the Wind to the women in Steel Magnolias, Hollywood can't seem to get enough of these fast talking, drink swirling, debaucherate women.

The genre needs a facelift, though, as evident from the newest entry into female Southern comedy, Divine Secrets of the Ya-Ya Sisterhood. Ya-Ya falls well short of anything fresh and new in the way of comedy and finds itself relying on all of the old Southern female and mother/daughter formulas in order to depict a thoroughly pointless and predictable tale.

As the film opens, four girls sneak out of their comfortable Louisiana homes and pledge their undying loyalty to each other around a bonfire in the bayou as they create the Ya-Ya Sisterhood. Skip ahead 50 years, and Sidda (Sandra Bullock), the daughter of the head Ya-Ya sister Vivi (played by Ellen Burstyn in her 60s and Ashley Judd in her 30s), an accomplished playwright, has a new play opening on Broadway. In a Time magazine interview, Sidda recalls that her childhood was wrought with difficulty and pain mostly on account of her mother. Vivi, upon reading this article that questions her motherly abilities, banishes Sidda from her life forever.

Quickly rushing in to save this mother/daughter relationship are the other three members of

First-time director Callie Khouri, the author of Thelma and Louise, seems to be quite out of her league with setting the film's pace. Not enough time is spent in character development, and too much time is spent recording the zany antics of these Ya-Ya sisters. It must not have bothered Khouri during the filming of the movie that Bullock has a tough time determining whether she should speak with a Southern or New York accent or that Maggie Smith struggles to hide her English one. Little direction by Khouri has led to little character credibility, and the events in the film become not even remotely believable.

James Garner, who plays Vivi's faithful husband, Shep, and Angus McFadyen, who portrays Sidda's Scottish fiancé, Connor, are absolutely wasted in the film. They become the subservient men who can only shake their heads and smile as their women go about destroying any semblance of normalcy in their lives. They are placed in the film as figures of support and understanding, but in the end, they are so blatantly standoffish that one must wonder whether either have a real understanding of how emotionally unbalanced every female character in this movie is. The movie seems so annoyed that it has to even discuss the role of men within Southern living. But it merely glances over the topic and quickly goes back to those crazy Ya-Ya sisters.

The only redeeming value in the entire movie occurs in Judd's performance as Vivi in her early 30s. Because the flashbacks in which Judd stars in discuss Vivi's good times and bad, she is able to expand upon her character and show the full range of her acting prowess. Judd is not subjected to the same type of formulaic dialogue and generalizations that the older Ya-Ya sisters are; instead, she is allowed more freedom to find her character and make her Vivi believable.

What could possibly convince great actors such as Academy Award winners Smith and Burstyn to submit themselves to such shallowness of script? The possible answer: money, wardrobes, and makeup. These actresses, all in their 60s and 70s, look absolutely fabulous on the screen. They must have been blinded into not recognizing the absolute trivial and unoriginal nature of this script. The divine secrets of the Ya-Ya Sisterhood are in no way divine and should have been kept as secrets lost forever in the Louisiana swamps.

Scandal tarnishes Kelly's career

By Nekesa Mumbi Moody
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — Before scandal involving R. Kelly began to surface in February, the R&B singer's sparkling career seemed unstoppable.

He had a much anticipated album with Jay-Z coming out and a hit on the charts with rapper Fat Joe, and he was picked to perform his inspirational hit "The Greatest" at the opening ceremonies of this year's Winter Olympics.

Since then, the singer (full name, Robert Kelly) has taken a commercial hit amid allegations that he taped a sexual encounter with an underage girl. (On June 5, he was charged with 21 counts of child pornography; he could face 15 years in prison if convicted. Kelly, who posted bond June 6, has denied the charges).

The album with Jay-Z, The Best of Both Worlds, has barely gone gold, and Jay-Z as well as other artists have distanced themselves from Kelly.

"I think in the short term, it's going to affect his career. There's evidence of that from the lackluster sales of the Best of Both Worlds," said Lola Ogunnaike, who wrote about the scandal for the May issue of Vibe magazine.

Yet, radio stations are still playing his music, and his record company, Jive Records, is standing behind him.

The long-term effect on Kelly's career remains unclear.

"We have to watch how it all plays out ... it's still all very new," said Wayne Mayo, an assistant program director at a New York urban-music station WWPR-FM.

Pornographic videos purportedly showing Kelly having sex with an underage girl and other women have been sold on the streets in cities across the nation and on the Internet. But Mayo says his station never considered pulling Kelly's songs.

"The audience will tell us if it doesn't want us to play his music, but we haven't gotten that," he said. "[The fans] seem to be separating R. Kelly the artist from R. Kelly the alleged child pornographer."

Though Kelly has worked with Mary J. Blige, Michael Jackson, Celine Dion, and Sean "P. Diddy" Combs, none have offered public support.

Jay-Z has refused to promote their album or appear with Kelly. And the hot new singer Ashanti reportedly was to collaborate with the singer but dropped those plans.

However, Kelly does have one defender — Ronald Isley.

The longtime member of the Isley Brothers has known Kelly for years, and Kelly's work with the group is credited with helping with the platinum success of the band's album last year.

Isley told the Associated Press that the charges against the singer aren't true and that he is a victim of blackmail. He believes Kelly will eventually be acquitted — and support from other artists will return.

"He's at the top of his game, and it's a shame that any time one of us gets at the top of our game, there's someone, or something, that wants to destroy him," Isley said after Kelly's arrest.

Kelly has sold 23 million albums since he made his debut in the early '90s, and he has an uncanny ability to mix the inspirational and sexual — with hits ranging from the Grammy-winning, gospel-like "I Believe I Can Fly" to songs such as "Bump and Grind," "You Remind Me," and "Feel in Yo' Booty."

"He has always been one of the most diverse artists. He can be on a record with Jay-Z, he can be on a record with Celine Dion," said Sean Ross of Airplay Monitor. "He can make a record that only pop radio can play; he can make a record that only R&B radio will play."

And while he married Aaliyah briefly when she was just 15, he didn't suffer any major fallout from it. But Ogunnaike believes that now, his career will be damaged, and no matter what happens, some people will only "know him as an accused pedophile."

Kelly's situation is reminiscent of Jackson's in 1993, when the singer was accused of sexually abusing a 13-year-old boy. He denied the allegations and reached a financial settlement with the child, and he was never charged with any crime. While his popularity has waned, some say his problems are more due to his eccentric behavior.

No pullback to '67 borders, Sharon proclaims

By Steve Weizman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Looking to his White House meeting, Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon is adamant that peace talks cannot begin until Palestinian violence ends, and he says his country will not return to its 1967 borders.

An Israeli pullback to those borders is the crucial element of a Saudi peace proposal endorsed by almost all Arab states and by the United States.

"Israel will not return to the vulnerable 1967 armistice lines, redivide Jerusalem, or concede its right to defensible borders," Sharon wrote in an opinion piece in Sunday's New York Times. The Israeli leader is scheduled to hold talks with President Bush today.

The White House chief of staff said the main consideration now is to bring stability to the Middle East for Palestinians and Israelis.

"The primary objective should be to make sure there is security for the Israeli people and hope for the Palestinian people," Andrew Card said on "Fox News Sunday."

Sharon also stood firm on his position that Palestinian attacks against Israelis must cease before peace talks can begin. Fighting has raged for 21 months, both in Palestinian-controlled areas of the West Bank and, largely with suicide bombs, in Israel proper.

"Israel must defeat terrorism," Sharon wrote. "It cannot negotiate under fire."

"Defensible borders" were guaranteed by a U.N. Security Council resolution after the 1967 Six-Day War that also demanded Israel withdraw from lands captured during that war. The Arabs interpret that to mean from all captured territory; Israel, which has returned the Sinai peninsula to Egypt and given autonomy to Palestinians in some areas, interprets it otherwise.

In March, the Arab League adopted a Saudi proposal for pan-Arab peace with Israel in exchange for return of all captured territory: the West Bank, the Gaza Strip, the Golan Heights, and traditionally Arab East Jerusalem.

Sharon appeared to have scored points even before he sees Bush. Bush, who met with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak at Camp David on June 7 and 8, dampened Mubarak's hopes for the United States to set a timeline for Palestinian statehood.

"We're not ready to lay down a specific calendar, except for the fact we need to get started quickly, soon, so that we can seize the moment," Bush said on June 8. A senior White House official said later that while Bush is not ready to offer a timetable or statehood deadline now, he has not ruled out either idea down the road.

On Sunday, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, endorsed Bush's reticence to act. "When you set a timetable, you leave for the lowest common denominator the ability to mess it up," he said on CNN's "Late Edition."

An aide to Sharon said before leaving Israel on June 8 that deflecting a firm timeline at this point had been a goal of the Israeli's visit.

"Everybody wants [movement], and it will happen when it is clear that there is intensive action against terror," Sharon spokesman Raanan Gissin said. "If that doesn't exist, you can't set a timetable."

In an interview taped after the Mubarak-Bush meeting and broadcast Sunday, Mubarak did not mention his quest for a timeline. He spoke of a need for careful planning for a Middle East peace conference the Bush administration wants to convene this summer and said he supported the conference.

"The United States is the key for the peace process," Mubarak said on Fox. "Such two states, Israelis and the Palestinians, if they are left alone to solve the problem, they will reach nowhere. The Israelis and Palestinians need a heavyweight such as the United States."

He also stressed the legitimacy of Yasser Arafat, whom Sharon has declared irrelevant, as the Palestinians' chosen leader. Bush has expressed disappointment in Arafat's leadership and has blamed him for not doing enough to stop the bombings.

Mubarak said Arafat has been enfeebled by Israeli military action against his Palestinian security forces. "If he's given the authority and given the tools, I think it would work," Mubarak said. "If not, the people who elected him will not accept him afterward. We should give him a chance anyway."

But Card said the Palestinians must be frustrated because of their long wait for better economic conditions and freedom. "They can't even really participate in their own government," he said. "So we've got to see reforms in the Palestinian community, and hopefully, they will come sooner rather than later."

Arafat named a smaller Cabinet on Sunday with a new minister to oversee the security forces. The move follows demands for reform by ordinary Palestinians and Western governments.

There was no immediate response from the White House, State Department, or Israeli government. Sharon has said repeatedly that changes in the Palestinian Authority must bring about real order and accountability and not be merely cosmetic.

Tyson's reign of terror may be over heavyweight ranks in the 1980s and then returned from a prison term for rape to win the heavyweight title once again.

TYSON-LEWIS

But that Tyson hasn't been seen in years, and the ease with which Lewis beat him means he has likely seen the last of the $20 million paydays he is so accustomed to getting.

"He hurt me early, and he just kept pressure on me," Tyson said. "I could take a shot from him, but I just couldn't see every punch. He's very big."

At 6-5, Lewis seemed even bigger. He towered over the 5-11 Tyson and seemed to toy with him for several rounds, able to hit him any time he pleased with either his stinging left jab or a combination of right uppercuts and hooks.

In his prime, Tyson might have been able to get inside anyway, using his speed and explosive power to get to Lewis' suspect chin. In the ring in this unlikely fight city, though, he never got close.

"I knew who I was up against. I'm a much superior fighter than him," Lewis said. "This is definitely a defining fight for Lennox Lewis' legacy. You could say this was the icing on the cake."

Lewis cut Tyson over both eyes, bloodied his nose and his mouth, and seemed to knock him down in the fourth round, although referee Eddie Cotton called it a slip and even penalized Lewis a point for pushing him down.

In the corner between rounds, Steward pleaded with Lewis to get Tyson out of there, but the WBC and IBF champion seemed to be having a good time giving his opponent a beating instead.

The end finally came in the eighth round when Lewis landed a combination that buckled Tyson's knees and prompted Cotton to give Tyson an eight-count. Lewis then went after Tyson and landed a huge crashing right that sent him sprawling on his back. Tyson tried to get up but could only get to a knee at the count of eight and was counted out.

"Some of the punches he took, I was shocked," Lewis said. "I felt them right through to my hand."

SPORTS BRIEF

Smith takes home Buick Classic title

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Chris Smith wrapped up two long journeys with a breakthrough victory in the Buick Classic on Sunday.

The 33-year-old Smith, playing the last of six-straight tournaments, won his first PGA Tour title, shooting a 1-under-par 71 for a two-stroke victory.

"It's an awesome feeling," said Smith, tears welling in his eyes as he walked off the 18th green. "I've struggled all year. My putter held me in there."

Smith had a 12-under 272 on the Westchester Country Club's West Course. The five-time Buy.com Tour winner earned $630,000 and a tour exemption through 2004.

The long-hitting Smith, the ninth first-time winner this year, hit only four of 14 fairways, but he still managed to reach 14 greens in regulation. He played the three par-5s in 1-over Sunday after making seven birdies in nine tries in the first three rounds.

David Gossett, Pat Perez, and Loren Roberts tied for second, with Perez shooting a 70 and Gossett and Roberts carding 71s.

Carolina faces tough road back and he knows the damage such a loss can do.

Washington won the first two games in the 1996 Eastern Conference quarterfinals, but after Pittsburgh tied the series by winning that extended Game 4, the Penguins won the last two games to advance.

Two years ago, Pittsburgh did nearly the same thing, winning the first two at Philadelphia before losing Game 4 at home in five overtimes. Just like the Capitals, they also never won again in a series that fell apart after losing one of the longest games in NHL history.

That's why Francis is cautioning the Hurricanes they can't take Game 3 on the ice with them tonight.

"You can't do anything about that game, but there is something we can do about the next game," he said. "That's our focus, and that's where our attention has to be."

However, losing the third-longest Stanley Cup finals game ever — it missed by 27 seconds of being the longest — also cost Carolina a psychological edge it has exploited the entire playoffs.

Until June 8, they were 7-1 in overtime, with goalie Arturs Irbe winning six in a row, and Detroit was 1-4.

All that changed in Game 3, as Detroit was dominant throughout the overtime, getting nearly all the good scoring chances. The Red Wings might have won much sooner if they hadn't put four shots off the post and another off the crossbar.

"It's tough to lose a game like that when you've played for more than five hours. But we deserved to win that game with all the chances we created," said Detroit defenseman Nicklas Lidstrom, who led all players with 52 minutes and 3 seconds of playing time — or what many players play over three games.

Larionov played less than half that, which might be why he was energetic enough not only to score the decisive goal, but Detroit's first goal after Carolina led, 1-0, on Josef Vasicek's goal in the first.

"Yes, we are the oldest team — of course we know the stats are true — but he is in great shape," Sergei Fedorov said. "He may be 41, but he has the body of a 25-year-old."

But if Carolina coach Paul Maurice was worried about the shape his team was in after such a disappointing loss, he felt much better Sunday despite sleeping only a half-hour.

"You can see the spark is still there, and that's a good sign," he said.

What isn't so good for the Hurricanes is they gave back the home-ice advantage they took from Detroit by winning Game 1. Now, to become one of the NHL's most surprising champions, they must win three of the last four games, with two in Detroit.

Carolina defenseman Sean Hill said the danger is to try to do everything in a rush to tie the series and get away from doing all the right things the Hurricanes have done so far.

"I don't think we can be any more desperate than we were last night," he said.

"It's a big game, and we don't want to be 3-1 going back to Detroit."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Social activity and getting together with friends will promote meeting new people and developing your ideas. Your quick wit and mental agility will make you shine.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Nothing will stand in your way today when it comes to completing a task. You will have the determination to finish what you start, so make the most of this progressive day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep busy, and you will prosper. Your ideas will be fresh and will interest others. Go after your dreams and push to get what you want.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Focus on home and family, and you will do just fine. You may want to keep some news secret for a little longer. You need to surround yourself with the colors and artifacts that soothe you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The more you get involved in worthwhile organizations, the better you will feel about yourself. You can make new friends and enjoy new activities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may do something that will cause a problem at work if you aren't careful. Keep your thoughts and criticisms to yourself for now. Someone you thought you could trust will turn out to be a thorn in your side.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): This will be a great day to address your beliefs and talk to people who have different opinions. You will interest those you encounter if you share your thoughts and reasons.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will be on to something good today if you follow through on an interesting proposition or investment. Check out any opportunities that come your way but don't take a chance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may want to talk seriously with a partner who has been taking up most of your time. Lay your cards on the table and determine if you want to continue this connection. Things have to change in order for you to proceed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The more you do to stabilize your position, the further you will go in the future. Helping a colleague will ensure that you have support in the future. Look out for your own interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your curiosity will lead you into all sorts of interesting scenarios. Talk will be the vehicle you use in order to discover new things. The more you learn today, the further ahead you'll be.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You will have to keep a low profile and let others do as they please today. Someone will be looking for an argument; if you give in, you will find yourself in an awkward position.

HAWKEYE SPORTS BRIEFS

Iowa softball

Iowa women's softball player Kristin Johnson was named to the Verizon Academic All-America third team. Johnson, a shortstop, was a third-team NFCA All-American. She led the Hawkeyes in batting average (.379), hits (69), runs (44), triples (six), total bases (106), slugging percentage (.582), stolen bases (34), and walks (20). Johnson also posted team play with a .952 fielding percentage, 13 doubles, 30 RBIs, and four home runs. She is a junior, majoring in communication studies, and earned a 3.71 GPA this season. The Hawkeyes closed a 36-20 season with a loss to Nebraska on May 17.

Iowa baseball

Iowa baseball players Brad Carlson, Ian Mattiace, and Kyle Thousand have been named to the 2002 All-Big Ten team. Carlson, Mattiace, and Thousand were named to the first, second, and third teams respectively. The honor marked an end to Carlson's and Mattiace's collegiate careers. Carlson led the Hawkeyes with 15 home runs, 49 RBIs and a .599 slugging percentage this season. Carlson also broke former Hawkeye Brian Mitchell's record for most career home runs in Iowa's season-ending loss to Michigan State. Carlson hit 44 home runs. Iowa finished the season with a record of 26-29-1, 15-16 in the Big Ten.

Mattiace led the Hawkeyes with a batting average of .347, 51 runs scored, and 20 stolen bases. Thousand, a sophomore, led the Big Ten with eight triples; he was named Big Ten Player of the Week at the end of April. He was fourth in RBIs with 29 and had a batting average of .316.

Men's track

Two Iowa track and field competitors earned All-America honors at the 2002 NCAA track and field championships.

Senior Jim Costello placed 11th in the hammer throw with a mark of 202-8. Bill Neumann earned third place in the javelin throw, tossing 244-8. Neumann, a sophomore, posted a school record and a personal best with the throw.

Costello and Neumann became Iowa's first All-Americans in the javelin and hammer throw.

Costello and junior Russell Peterson will compete in the USA Track and Field Senior and Junior Nationals, June 21-23 in Palo Alto, Calif. The duo will compete in the senior meet; they will be joined by teammates Joel Storm and Aaron Pollack, who will compete in the junior nationals.

— by Kavitha Thimmaiah

Women's track

Iowa javelin thrower Alana Redfern finished 18th at the 2002 NCAA championships in Baton Rouge, La. Redfern was the only Hawkeye participant. Her best throw of the meet was marked at 148-6 (45.26).

Overall, the women's track team finished 10th in the Big Ten. Coach James Grant said there was a general improvement from the 2001 Big Ten meet, but the lack of an outstanding performance in one event hindered the team's all-around performance.

The team lost seniors Mandy Beck and Julie Gallery, but Grant is looking forward to the four or five recruits coming in for the 2003 season. "The bulk of our point earners are returning," he said. "I am very optimistic and enthusiastic about next season."

Women's tennis

In May, Toni Neykova became the first Iowa women's tennis player to compete in the NCAA women's Division I singles championships.

Neykova finished a career-best season with an overall record of 13-7 and a personal-best record of 8-2 in Big Ten dual action.

Neykova ended a history-making career with a first-round loss on May 21 to UCLA's Megan Bradley (6-2, 7-5) in the singles championships. Bradley was the Pac-10 Player of the Year and was ranked third nationally. During Neykova's four years as a Hawkeye, she joined former Hawkeye Laura Dvorak as the second woman in Iowa history to receive All-Big Ten honors in each of their collegiate seasons.

In 1999, she, along with doubles partner Shera Wiegler, became Iowa's first doubles team to compete in the NCAA meet.

Costa takes French Open title

By Howard Fendrich
 Associated Press

PARIS — Albert Costa can be excused for an unpolished victory speech. He's a bit out of practice. Mixing speeds and playing nearly impeccably for stretches, Costa beat fellow Spaniard Juan Carlos Ferrero (6-1, 6-0, 4-6, 6-3) Sunday in the French Open final for his first major championship and first title of any sort in nearly three years. Costa never even

LOS ANGELES 106, NEW JERSEY 103

Lakers jump to 3-0 lead

Shaquille O'Neal and Kobe Bryant score a combined 71 points

By Chris Sheridan
 Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Just when it looked as if Jason Kidd might make the NBA Finals competitive, the budding dynasty known as the Los Angeles Lakers — no, it wasn't just Shaq — moved within one victory of its third-straight championship.

Robert Horry hit another clutch 3-pointer to put Los Angeles ahead for good, Kobe Bryant had his first brilliant offensive game of the series, and O'Neal scored 35 points Sunday night as the Lakers beat the Nets, 106-103, in Game 3.

This was the closest and most entertaining game of the Finals, and in the end, the Lakers showed the stuff champions are made of.

When it came time for clutch baskets, big blocked shots, and key free throws, the two-time defending champs had enough of each to take a commanding 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven series.

No team has ever recovered from such a deficit to win an NBA playoff series, and don't expect to see one from the Nets — even though they managed to play a competitive game for the first time in the series. Game 4 will be Wednesday night in New Jersey.

Kidd was outstanding again, leading the Nets on a 19-5 run that gave them their biggest lead of the series — 86-80 early in the fourth.

But it was Bryant who made the bigger plays down the stretch — none more important than his 10-foot jumper over Kidd with 19.1 seconds left for a 104-100 lead. Bryant was double-teamed on the shot, and Kidd even got a hand on the ball before Bryant broke free, turned to his left, and hit the bucket.

Kidd knocked down a 3-pointer with 5.2 seconds to cut it to 104-103, and the Nets fouled Rick Fox with 3.5 seconds left.

He made both, and Kidd was off-target after dribbling upcourt and launching a 30-footer just before the buzzer.

Bryant had 36 points, shooting 14-23 and scoring a dozen points in the fourth quarter.

"I wanted it. I wanted it; it's game time. I wasn't going to let them take it from me," Bryant said. "We're battle-tested. That's what I kept telling the fellas in timeouts."

O'Neal was 12-19 from the field with 11 rebounds, Derek Fisher scored 12 points while going 3-3 behind the arc, and Horry and Fox came through at the end.

I wanted it. It's game time. I wasn't going to let them take it from me.

Lakers coach Phil Jackson tied Pat Riley for the most career playoff victories — 155. It took Jackson only 209 games to tie the mark, a winning percentage of .741 compared with Riley's .608.

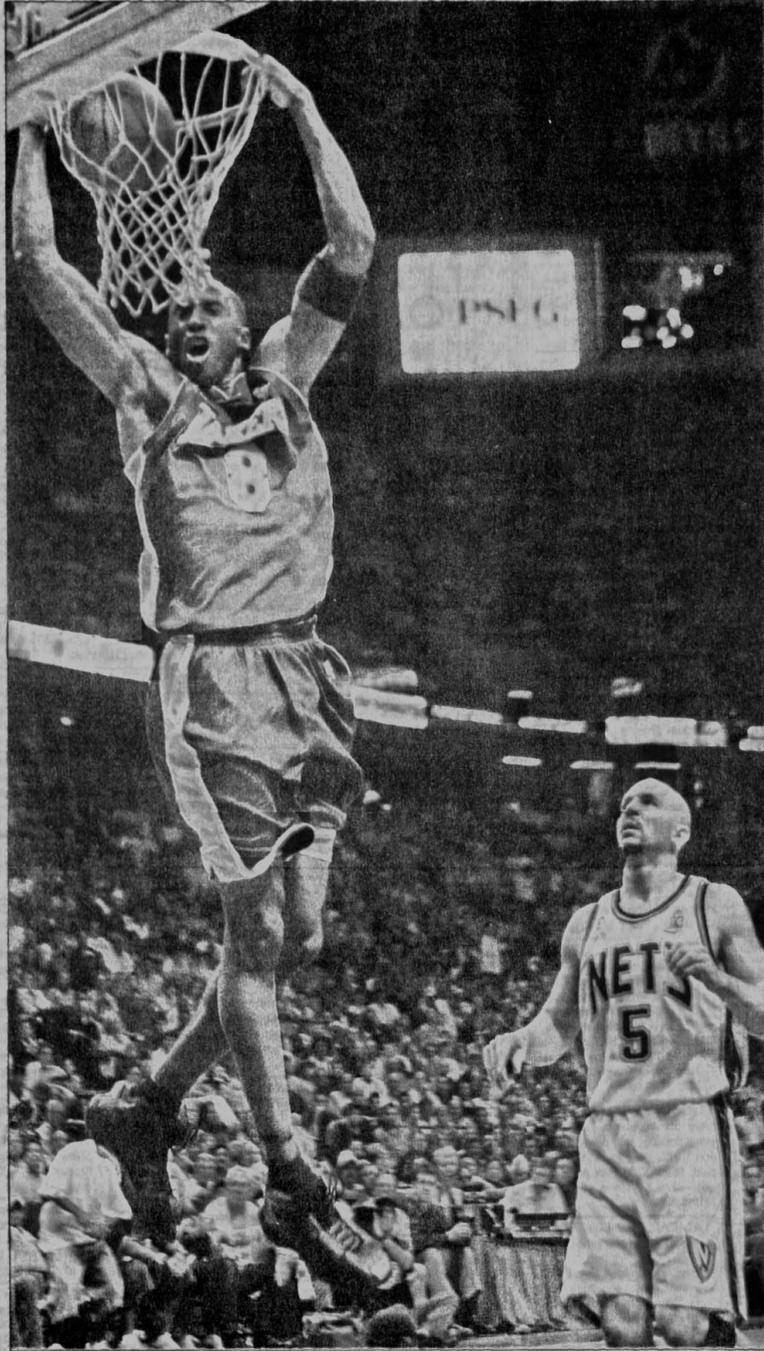

Kidd had 30 points, and Kenyon Martin scored 26 for the Nets, who knew that their best chance for keeping their title hopes alive rested on them winning this game.

"If we can lock this one in, it makes for a very small chance that they could win it," Jackson said beforehand.

Indeed, the Nets now need to win four in a row against a team that has only allowed them to have one single glimmer of hope through the first three games.

Kidd provided it, but it wasn't enough. Los Angeles led, 52-46, at halftime and had its advantage back into double digits after Bryant hit a 3-pointer with 8:17 left in the third. The Lakers had little difficulty maintaining that margin for the next few minutes, with Bryant putting on several nifty moves leading to a short jumper for a 73-63 lead.

That's when Kidd began taking over, scoring seven points over the next 1:13, then hit a jumper with 51 seconds left before feeding Jefferson for a dunk.

Kobe Bryant dunks the ball as Jason Kidd looks on in the first half of Game 3 of the NBA Finals in East Rutherford, N.J. on Sunday.

NHL PLAYOFFS

Wings steal 'Canes' thunder

Comeback win has Carolina searching

By Alan Robinson
 Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — The oldest team in the NHL got the game-winning goal from the oldest player in the league to win one of the longest games in Stanley Cup history.

The symmetry couldn't be any better for the Detroit Red Wings, who are standing the test of time going into tonight's Game 4 in the tightly played finals against the Carolina Hurricanes.

The Red Wings' 3-2 victory on 41-year-old Igor Larionov's goal at 14:47 of the third overtime on June 8 — actually, it was past 1 a.m. Sunday — gave them a 2-1 series lead.

Just as importantly, if recent playoff history is any indicator, it may have swung the momentum their way, too.

Brett Hull, a relative youngster among the Red Wings at 37, sent it into overtime by scoring his 99th career playoff goal with only 1:14 left in the third period. Afterward, he said the impact of winning a game the favored Red Wings nearly lost can't be overstated.

"That's a desperate time when you're down with a minute to go ... knowing you're going to go down 2-1 in the series if you lose," Hull said Sunday.

"Now, they're down 2-1 and, obviously, you are not out of it, but it changes things."

It may have changed everything in a series that so far has been played at the Hurricanes' preferred pace and tempo but without their preferred results. Now, they must attempt to pick up the pieces of a night that left them physically and mentally exhausted and emotionally drained, yet accomplished nothing.

Hurricanes captain Ron Francis played in an even-longer playoff game six years ago — Pittsburgh's four-overtime victory at Washington —

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Lieber masterful in Cubs victory

By Jim Cour
 Associated Press

SEATTLE — Sammy Sosa hit his major league-leading 22nd home run, Fred McGriff also connected, and Jon Lieber pitched the Chicago Cubs past the Seattle Mariners, 5-1, Sunday.

Lieber (4-4) blanked the Mariners until Desi Relaford hit an RBI single with two outs in the ninth inning.

Lieber then finished, ending a personal four-game losing streak with his first victory since April 25. He gave up 10 hits, walked none, and struck out five.

The Cubs won two of three in the interleague series, with each game sold out at Safeco Field. Chicago scored nine runs in the series, seven as a result of five homers.

Sosa took over the homer lead from Barry Bonds with his second shot of the series, a three-run drive off rookie Rafael Soriano in the sixth. It was his 472nd career home run.

Royals 3, Cardinals 2

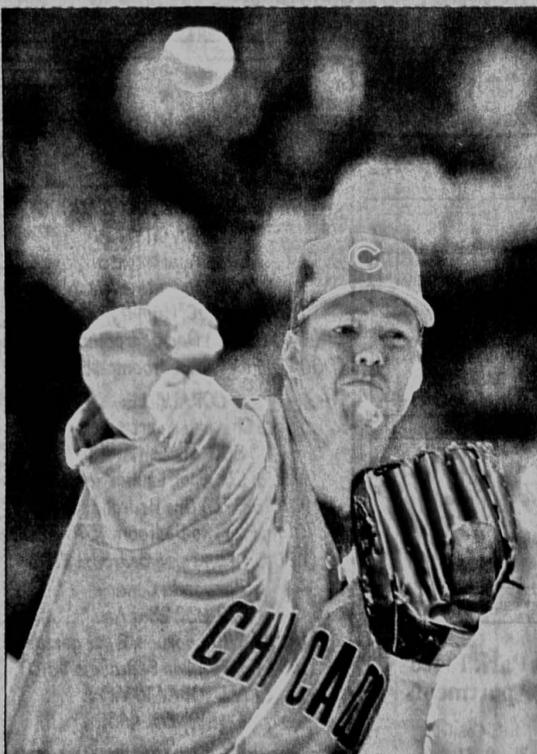

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Raul Ibanez led off the bottom of the ninth inning with a home run into the right-field bullpen, lifting the Kansas City Royals over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Ibanez's second homer of the year, coming on a 3-1 pitch from reliever Mike Timlin (1-3), helped the Royals avoid their first-ever series sweep by St. Louis.

White Sox 13, Expos 2

CHICAGO — Magglio Ordonez drove in six runs to tie a career high, leading Mark Buehrle and the Chicago White Sox over the Montreal Expos.

Ordonez had three hits —

Lewis finishes off turbulent Tyson era

By Tim Dahlberg
 Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Mike Tyson was flat on his back, blood pouring from his mouth, nose and cuts over his eyes. The man who was once the most feared heavyweight in the world was beaten, battered, and finished.

Tyson struggled to try to get up, but it didn't really matter. Lennox Lewis had already done with his fists what two jail terms, a biting, and other fighters couldn't — end Tyson's reign as the baddest fighter of his time.

The most explosive and turbulent era in heavyweight history came to a crashing close June 8 with Tyson taking a beating that will likely finish him as anything other than a heavyweight curiosity.

Sixteen years after he became the youngest heavyweight champion ever at the age of 20, Tyson was exposed for what he now is — an aging fighter with limited skills who can't intimidate anyone anymore.

"That was probably one of the most thorough and systematic beatings a heavyweight champion has ever given to a legitimate challenger in the history of boxing," said Lewis' trainer, Emanuel Steward.

It was a crowning moment for Lewis, the often cautious British heavyweight who needed a big win to cement his legacy as a great fighter. He did just that by giving Tyson such a beating that a planned rematch may never happen.

Tyson was left baffled, bewildered, and bleeding, so badly beaten that he was even questioning his own skills.

"There's no way I could ever beat him," Tyson said. "He's just too big and too strong."

That admission would have been shocking had it come from the Tyson who terrorized the
