Court's ruling hammers budget

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — A divided Iowa Supreme Court on Wednesday struck down a state law that taxes land-based casinos more heavily than floating riverboat gambling operations.

The decision could punch an $8 million hole in an already strapped state budget.

"The essence of the tax is that it treats racetrack slot machines differently from riverboat slot machines," the court said.

"Where the same activity is being taxed at significantly different rates, a mere difference in location is not sufficient to uphold the discriminatory tax."

Dissenters in the 4-3 decision argued that the Legislature ought to be free to structure a tax system as it sees fit.

"Riverboats are not the same as racetracks," wrote Justice Linda Neuman. "From an entertainment perspective, they speak to different cultural traditions — river lore versus agriculture."

Under state law, riverboat casinos pay a tax of 20 percent on receipts over $3 million. Casinos located at racetracks are currently taxed at a 32 percent rate, and that is scheduled to increase to 36 percent.

The court ordered that both forms of gambling be taxed at 20 percent.

Dennis Prouty, the head of the nonpartisan Legislative Fiscal Bureau, said the state collected $80 million in taxes from land-based casinos this year, and reducing that by 10 percent would cost the state $8 million.

Student-loan rates plummet

By Sara Faiwell
The Daily Iowan

Student-loan interest rates will drop by almost 2 percent next month to the lowest they have been in history — a move that could affect the 62 percent of UI students who borrow federal money.

The U.S. Department of Education announced late last month that beginning July 1, federal student-loan interest rates will drop to 4.06 percent from 5.99 percent.

That means students borrowing $10,000 who are on a 10-year repayment plan will save approximately $1,133 in interest over the loan's life with the new rate, department officials say.

"This is great," said Beth Oakes, an assistant director of the Office of Student Financial Aid. "Any time our students have to pay less, it is very good."

Oakes said the rate changes every July 1. Last summer's rate was the lowest to that point, she said, which is why the dramatic decrease this year was unexpected.

"I didn't think it could get lower than it was last year," she said. "But now nothing surprises me, because it has dropped once again."

Rates are calculated according to a formula based on the 91-day Treasury Bill, plus 1.7 percent for students in school and 2.3 percent for those out of school. A new rate of 4.86 percent has been set for loans taken out by students' parents.

The average UI student borrows approximately $11,000 in loans from all sources, which includes parental debt, Oakes said.

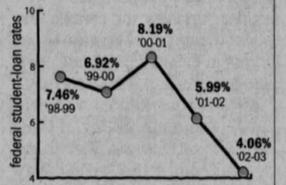

UI graduate student Anne Slattery said she will receive approximately $6,000 in student loans this coming academic year. When informed of the almost 2 percent rate decrease, she said it was "much appreciated."

"I am planning to pay them all back when I am done with school," she said. "It's really a big help they have dropped."

If students choose to consolidate loans now, they will receive a fixed interest rate at the new,

Students unfazed by rising tuition

UI officials predict record enrollment as Orientation sessions kick off

By Karen Heinselmann
The Daily Iowan

Against the backdrop of budget cuts, higher tuition, and fewer classes, incoming freshmen flocked to the UI Wednesday for the first of several two-day Orientation sessions this summer.

Budget cuts that totaled $37.9 million this year and a 19 percent tuition/fees increase that will go into effect in the fall have not chased away many prospective students and their parents. In fact, the number of first-year applicants jumped 10.7 percent from last year.

University administrators are expecting the largest freshman class ever, likely breaking the 4,000 mark. The record enrollment will come without changing the university's recruiting strategy, which includes the manner in which the school notifies potential students about tuition hikes.

Bill Dauman, a parent from Lauren Fishman of Illinois (middle) stands with her mother, Janice, and father, David, outside the IMU after completing her first day of Orientation on Wednesday afternoon.

Aurora, Ill., learned of the tuition hike at Wednesday's Orientation, which aims to prepare new students for the Iowa way of life and registration procedures.

He appeared to be unfazed by the news, calling the UI "a good value."

Andrew Cinoman, the assistant director of Admissions, said the Orientation staff is prepared to discuss any financial concerns during the sessions, including a panel discussion for parents.

This fall, state officials will discuss tuition increases for the 2003-04 year. While all signs point to a big increase, UI officials insist it is too early to tell how large that hike will be.

Therefore, they say, they have no plans to warn parents and students about a potential future increase, and they insist that they are not misleading incoming students and their parents. They point out that tuition is set for 2002-03 and cannot be raised for that school year.

"We are mindful of being accurate of what costs are and what they will be," said UI Admissions Director Mike Barron. "We'd never hide it; that's not consistent with our values."

Leo and Cindy Morris of Des Moines said they heard about the tuition hikes, but the changes won't affect their

Vito's faces two-week license suspension

By Sara Faiwell
The Daily Iowan

Vito's, a popular downtown restaurant and nightclub, will not be able to serve alcohol at the end of the UI's eight-week summer session if the state accepts a recommended penalty for two liquor-license violations.

An administrative law judge ruled last week that Vito's, 118 E. College St., should have its liquor license suspended from July 22 through Aug. 5. The UI's summer session ends Aug. 2, and hundreds of students typically hit the bars that weekend.

The judge, Margaret LaMarche, also recommended a $500 civil penalty against the establishment for punishment in connection with two 1-year-old incidents in which Vito's allowed minors to consume alcohol after 2 a.m.

The bar owners, Aziz Longou and Fatah Teganem, have the opportunity to appeal the decision within 30 days. If an appeal is not filed, Lynn Walding, the director of the Iowa Alcoholic Beverages Division, may accept, modify, or amend the ruling.

LaMarche made her decision based on:

• On April 14, 2001, two people in the bar were caught drinking at 2:20 a.m. while playing a video game. The manager of the bar, Dawit Kidane, who was in the basement of the establishment, was cited for serving after-hours. That charge was later dismissed.

• On April 27, 2001, an officer spotted four individuals with three pitchers and four plastic cups filled with beer inside of

UI search process will be mostly open

UI to make public names of final four candidates

By Mike McWilliams
The Daily Iowan

The state of Iowa Board of Regents will soon appoint 21 members to a search committee that will develop criteria for the next president, recruit and screen prospects, and eventually publicly recommend four finalists.

The committee, working with an executive search firm, hopes to make its recommendation of finalists by December or January, according to documents released Wednesday. If all goes according to plan, the regents will announce a replacement for UI President Mary Sue Coleman after interviewing the four candidates.

Coleman will assume the presidency at the University of Michigan on Aug. 1. At their June 20 meeting in Ames, regents will set the search for her successor into motion by approving the process.

University officials say they plan to make the names of the finalists public, but they hope to ensure the confidentiality of those interested during the beginning stages. Michigan's search, on the other hand, was done in secret, and the selection of Coleman stunned the UI campus.

"I do think that to the extent that we can maintain confidentiality, that would be desirable, especially early in the process," said UI law Professor Jonathan Carlson, who will be approved as the chairman of the search committee next week.

A public search process, as

[The public process] is one of the tradeoffs. In the interest of openness, we want people to know ahead of time ... it gives people a chance to ask the candidates questions.

— Steve Parrott,
director of University Relations opposed to a closed one, creates a different pool of candidates, Coleman said. Had Michigan's search been public, she said, she wouldn't have been a candidate.

"If you're a sitting president, you won't reveal yourself as a candidate for another job," she said. "If you have an open process, like this, you don't tend to get presidents to apply. I don't think one process is bad and the other is good; it's just different." While reports say that officials at other universities have questioned the public procedure, saying it causes some candidates to shy away, UI spokesman Steve Parrott said he doesn't think that will be the case here.

"[The public process] is one of the tradeoffs," said the director of University Relations. "In

UI firing draws lawsuit

Former employee claims UI violated civil-rights law and the disability act

By Peter Rugg
The Daily Iowan

A former UI employee filed a lawsuit against the university Wednesday, alleging that she was wrongfully fired because of medical problems.

Beverly Prostine is seeking compensatory damages as well as attorney fees and court costs, according to documents in Johnson County District Court. She has filed for a trial by jury.

Prostine worked as a conference coordinator in the UI Center for Conferences and Institutes from 1995 until May 2000, when she took medical leave to seek treatment for a "serious medical condition," according to court records, which did not specify the condition. All of her furlough was covered by accrued sick and vacation leave.

During Prostine's absence, her supervisor, Peggy Houston, allegedly "verbally harassed" Prostine because she had a disability and was taking the leave. Prostine was fired on June 1, 2000.

Until she left, Prostine had consistently received "average" or "above average" job-performance evaluations.

Houston, who retired last fall, refused to comment.

Prostine's complaint states that because she was fired specifically for her disability, and because the UI Operations Manual directs employees to seek treatment for medical problems, her firing qualifies as wrongful termination because it violated not only civil-rights laws but also the Americans with Disabilities Act.

UI General Counsel Mark Shantz said wrongful termination suits are rarely brought against the university.

"Generally, we're part of the state government, so employees are supposed to go through specific channels if they have a complaint," he said. "It's very uncommon for this to happen."

The Office of Affirmative Action declined to comment on whether Prostine filed any complaints with it.

The state Employment Appeal Board determined that Prostine had not committed work-related misconduct and ordered that she receive unemployment benefits in October 2000. Prostine then filed a complaint with the Iowa Civil Rights Commission and Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in November 2000 and was granted a right-to-sue letter.

Prostine, reached at her home in Marion, declined to comment on the lawsuit. Her attorney, Bruce Nestor, could not be reached for comment.

CITY BRIEF

Coop pleads not guilty

IOWA CITY (AP) — The second of two men charged with killing an elderly real-estate agent last summer pleaded not guilty Wednesday and waived his right to a speedy trial.

Daniel Coop, 45, was charged last month with first-degree murder in the July 20 slaying of Donald Hebert, 76, of Coralville.

Coop, through his attorney Paul Smith, filed the plea in Johnson County District Court, and a trial will be scheduled for some time in January 2003, said Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White.

Bradley Hylton, 27, has pleaded guilty to first-degree murder in the case and was sentenced to life in prison without parole.

Authorities accuse Coop of working with Hylton to bind Hebert with duct tape and strangle him before taking his credit card and running up nearly $1,400 in charges.

Coop was immediately charged with forgery in the case, based on police allegations that he had used Hebert's credit cards. White said the forgery charge will be consolidated with the murder charge.

Police charged Hylton within days of the slaying, but they waited 10 months to gather enough evidence to charge Coop with first-degree murder.

UI pitches insurance institute

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

UI finance students and insurance company employees alike could further their education with a proposed new insurance institute.

Officials of the UI Tippie College of Business hope to establish an insurance institute that will provide a concentration in the study of risk and insurance for finance majors and insurance workers who lack a college education or want to pursue an advanced degree. University officials expect the project to attract finance and actuarial-science students while enhancing the state's appeal to insurance companies for prospective employees.

The Institute of Risk and Insurance would be the first program of its kind in the state, offering both degree and non-degree programs in an administrative relationship with the Actuarial Science Program.

"It's going to be an exciting program," said Gary Fethke, the dean of the business school, saying he will reveal more about the initiative next week.

The business school offered similar courses in the 1980s but discontinued the curriculum because of a downturn in the insurance industry, Fethke said.

However, in 1998, Iowa's insurance industry accounted for 3.9 percent of Iowa's Gross State Product — the second highest output in the nation.

Officials feel they again need to offer an extensive program to meet industry needs. Insurance accounts for more than $150 billion of the state's assets.

Funding for the program, which university officials refer to as "The Institute," will come from private sources, the university, and tuition from non-credit continuing education courses.

The university will pay $185,000 annually for, with private sources and revenues from other education programs covering faculty and staff salaries, supplies, equipment, and travel costs.

Kerry Byrnes of the Lake George Fire Department watches a burnout behind a home in the Happy Meadows area of the Pike National Forest in Colorado on Wednesday. The wildfire that started June 8 has burned 90,000 acres; it is the largest forest fire in Colorado history.

Firefighters advance on Colorado blaze

By Pauline Arrillaga
Associated Press

LAKE GEORGE, Colo. — Hundreds of firefighters attacked the huge wildfire outside Denver on Wednesday, putting themselves between the southwestern suburbs and the flames that have sent eye-stinging smoke and ash across the region for days.

The fire has burned 90,000 acres in the foothills southwest of Denver since it began June 8. But it has not grown much since Tuesday, giving fire crews a chance to go on the offensive for the first time in more than 24 hours.

About 450 firefighters marched toward the fire as plumes of billowing smoke rose to 20,000 feet, concealing the rolling hills between Denver and Colorado Springs.

The fire covers more than 135 square miles; it has destroyed at least 21 homes.

Another 2,500 homes are threatened, and up to 40,000 people have been warned in the past three days that they may have to flee. Most of the activity Wednesday, however, was on the fire's southern flanks, away from the city.

"The fire itself is not going to threaten Denver," Gov. Bill Owens told the Associated Press. But, he said, "the smoke sure is."

The smoke has eased in the Denver area in the past two days, but it is still obscuring the city's postcard view of the Rockies. Some residents have swept gray flakes of ash off their vehicles, porches, and plants daily. Others have sought medical help.

Valerie Miller, 49, who lives in southeastern Denver, was in her yard when the haze arrived Sunday.

"I thought that the solar eclipse had come a day early for some reason," she said. "When I started to smell the smoke, I knew it was more serious than that."

"I keep having to pull out my contacts because they burn from the ash in the air. It's not easy to drive this way."

William Allstetter of the city's National Jewish Medical and Research Center said patients suffering from asthma, emphysema, and chronic bronchitis were complaining of more symptoms.

"We've also got a lot of phone calls," he said. "Many of the callers are feeling worse; a lot of them are worried."

State health officials have advised those with respiratory ailments to exercise indoors.

Authorities initially suspected the fire was started by a campfire, but investigators said Wednesday they were unsure of its origin other than that it was human-caused. It has moved slowly to the northeast, creeping within about 35 miles of the city limits.

The flames are much closer to small hamlets and subdivisions approximately 55 miles southwest of Denver. More than 5,400 people remained out of their homes Wednesday, primarily in mountain towns near the fire's origin.

Victims of priests meet with bishops

By Rachel Zoll
Associated Press

DALLAS — Victims of clerical sex abuse, once shunned for criticizing leaders of the Roman Catholic Church, were given a rare insider role Wednesday in shaping how American bishops handle errant priests.

Members of the Survivors Network of Those Abused by Priests and others who say they were molested by clergy were scheduled to meet privately with several cardinals and the eight bishops working on a national policy to rid the priesthood of abusers.

Victims have met previously with church leaders over the years, both individually and in groups. But never before has so much been at stake. The policy — undergoing revisions before hundreds of bishops who begin debating today — will determine how the church hierarchy responds to abuse claims for years to come.

"We're looking for a real commitment for change of behavior," said Barbara Blaine, a founder of the survivors' group, in a news conference before her talks with church leaders.

The victims will be competing for influence with the many U.S. prelates who have suggested amendments to the proposal, which the Ad Hoc Committee on Sexual Abuse made public last week. That draft, developed over several weeks, included input from at least one victim.

The survivors' group has pressured the committee to approve some mechanism for disciplining bishops who fail to comply with whatever national policy is approved. Chicago's Cardinal Francis George is one of the few church leaders to publicly agree.

Since January, when the crisis began in the Boston Archdiocese, at least 250 of the nation's 46,000 priests have resigned or been suspended over sexual-misconduct claims. Four bishops also have resigned, but none have left their post because they mishandled abusive clergy.

Charlie Riedel/Associated Press

Bishop Wilton Gregory of Belleville, Ill., speaks during a news conference in Dallas on Wednesday before the opening of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops. Gregory said church leaders were committed to leaving Dallas with a new discipline plan for priests.

NATION BRIEF

Jury deadlocked in Andersen trial

HOUSTON (AP) — Jurors in Arthur Andersen LLP's obstruction of justice trial announced Wednesday that they were deadlocked, but the judge told them to continue their deliberations.

On the seventh day of deliberations, the jury said in a note to the judge: "We are not able to reach a unanimous decision."

After a 20-minute discussion with lawyers, U.S. District Judge Melinda Harmon reminded jurors of their duty to "deliver a verdict if you can do so without surrendering your conscientious conviction."

The judge then sent the panel back to the hotel where they've been sequestered and told them they were to return today to resume deliberating.

The jury is trying to decide if the Chicago-based accounting firm illegally obstructed justice by shredding documents to thwart federal regulators investigating former client Enron Corp.

It's the first criminal trial to emerge from Enron's stunning fall last year.

Andersen has argued that employees shredded documents to comply with a long-standing company policy of eliminating unnecessary and outdated materials.

The trial began with jury selection May 6.

Deliberations started June 6 and stretched through the weekend. The jury had been quiet since Sunday, when Harmon denied their request for a dictionary.

Andersen's U.S. work force of 28,000 has dropped to approximately 10,000 as the firm lost more than 670 clients this year, most of them since an indictment against the company was unsealed March 14, said C.E. Andrews, the global-audit practice director.

The obstruction charge carries a fine of up to $500,000 and probation for five years. Andersen could also be fined up to twice the amount of any gains or damages the court determined were caused by the firm's action, and it could be barred from auditing publicly traded companies — which would likely put the firm out of business.

A divine right to commit a wrong?

Evidently, R. Kelly chose the wrong profession. As a recording artist, he has to be held to ridiculous standards that no human could possibly reach. He cannot have a sexual relationship with a minor. I know this sounds ludicrous to the everyday observer and, apparently, the Catholic hierarchy. In recent months, numerous charges have been filed related to Catholic priests and the molestation of young children. A handful of priests have stepped down, and the pope has denounced this unacceptable behavior. Needless to say, the Vatican has some issues to deal with.

Recently, a suggestion has surfaced relating to the rules of conduct of Catholic priests. This suggestion is the Two-Strike policy, wherein priests are dismissed after their second sexual offense. Well, now we are finally getting somewhere. Talk about divine forgiveness. Pedophiles everywhere are giving their seal of approval; and they have some direction and career aspirations by way of Catholicism. From Wednesday through Friday, the bishops' conference will meet in Dallas, and this option will be thoroughly evaluated. In every other walk of life, molestation, if found out, warrants dismissal and some legal action. But this ingenious idea allows for the men who are placed on the highest pedestal to have their one fling and get it out of their system.

Clearly, this idea is not without its logic, though minimal. The argument is that the dismissal after one incident would cripple the already feeble number of priests in America. This seems extraordinarily hypocritical; the church can denounce anything from abortion to homosexuality without pause for compassion, but in this instance Catholic priests are given this freebie clause. It is an exemplary case of the Vatican acting as the unmitigated monitor of morality. For this Two-Strike suggestion to be considered is absurd.

Ultimately, the Vatican will have to make a decision about molestation in the church. Surely it is not the case that pedophiles are more prone to be enthralled by the word of God than others, so therefore the Vatican should hold priests to the same standards that everyday citizens have to meet. Teachers, coaches, and recording artists are not allowed one momentary lapse of reason; neither should priests.

Campaign about the real issues, not place of birth

The arena for the gubernatorial race in Iowa is shaping up to be a boxing ring so far — both candidates came out fists first. With Democrat Gov. Tom Vilsack running for re-election against Republican Doug Gross, mudslinging has been the main agenda.

When Gross began his statewide campaign, he told the press that his main position was "to focus on Vilsack's weaknesses." In turn, it seems that Vilsack has followed suit. Along with harsh words slung at press releases, commercials have been the most aggressive method of attack. Both sides accuse the other of being afraid and intimidated by the opposite side.

Strangely enough, where the candidate was born has been a major topic thus far. Vilsack claims to have lived in rural Iowa for many years and knows the values exercised by people in Iowa, although he actually went to school in New York and was born in Pittsburgh. Gross strikes a chord by harping on his small-town upbringing in Defiance, Iowa, yet he lives in Des Moines.

Now, rather than having intelligent talks about the candidates' visions for Iowa's budget, higher education, and agricultural issues, they challenge each other to debates in a childish way. For example, Gross wants Vilsack to debate him "anywhere, right now, about anything." Voters must feel like onlookers of a schoolyard fight, which they are if there is nothing in either campaign that concentrates on the people of Iowa.

In addition, they will have to choose between the two based on the charges being slung at each other, not on the issues, because it seems neither side is concerned with the issues, only at what a terrible governor the other man would make. In fact, commercials focus primarily on the other candidate.

With voters watching this embarrassing scene, they will have to dutifully head out to vote for whoever was the least insulting to them during the campaign. Because neither man ventures to focus on anything that benefits Iowa, the voters will sadly choose the candidate according to their personal items revealed by the other side, characteristics that will not necessarily matter to the future decisions made for Iowa by the governor. A man from Pittsburgh does not necessarily mean big-city values just as a man from Defiance may care nothing about small-town ethics, not to mention that name-calling is hardly a great example of such ethics. Each candidate should concentrate on his plans for Iowa's future.

Letter to the Editor

Reform, don't repeal

When the Senate votes soon on permanent repeal of the estate tax, it should be clear on one thing: Repeal would be a gift to the ultra-rich, not a sensible move to protect family businesses and farms.

Family businesses and farms would be better served by reforming, not repealing, the estate tax. A simple and equitable reform would be to raise the exemption ceiling, as Congress has already done.

Congress raised this ceiling from $675,000 last year to $1 million this year, and $3.5 million for a single person (or $7 million for a married couple) by 2009. This type of reform can keep family businesses and farms intact, yet maintain fairness.

In contrast, permanent, outright repeal of the estate tax would cost billions — letting the richest Americans off the hook while increasing the burden on the rest of us to fund vital programs. It would also put huge new pressure on state budgets here in New York and elsewhere, which are already feeling the pinch. The U.S. Senate should vote to reform, not repeal, the estate tax.

Put the DEA thugs out of business

DEA Thug-in-Chief Asa Hutchison visited Iowa on Monday; he brought a posse. Sen. Tom Harkin, Sen. Chuck Grassley, and Director Bruce Upchurch of Iowa's Office of Drug Control Policy took the opportunity to talk tough about the perils of methamphetamine in Iowa.

No doubt, meth use is a problem for many people. People who fail to control themselves and to use the substance only in moderation can create problems for themselves and their families. The same is true for alcohol. But, people who want to intrude on your life as much as these thugs-in-suits are not so myopic that they fail to see the light on alcohol. The biggest fascists in government have the sophistication to see that alcohol should be legal despite the family violence, drunk driving, and general nuisance that accompanies it.

Why is it that so many of us, and so many politicians, become paranoid about drug use once tobacco and alcohol are off the list? Just take a look at what some of our politicians said Monday. Are any of their comments unique to meth? Do they really justify an atrocious War on Drugs?

Hutchison said, "Whenever you see it impacting the community health with the danger from meth labs, the toxic chemicals that come out of it ... these are broad-based problems that affect all of Iowa society." But why do we see meth labs in our residential communities, where they pose such a health risk? Other dangerous chemical ventures do not start operations in people's basements and kitchens. If meth were legal, it would be manufactured in places where it did not pose health risks. Legal operations are worried about tort litigation. Meth-lab operators are worried about execution under federal drug kingpin statutes. Until drugs are legal, meth lab operators will never worry that they create hundreds of toxic waste sites every year in Iowa alone.

James Eaves-Johnson

IN DEFENSE OF LIFE,
LIBERTY, AND PROPERTY

Harkin pointed out, "... let's not forget we have a terrorist threat right here in Iowa as well, and it's called methamphetamine." Really? If there is any terrorist threat, it is the U.S. War on Drugs. It has done more to erode the Bill of Rights, it has killed more people internationally, it has broken into more people's homes, and it has reduced more people to slavery than any terrorist organization in existence. What use is the Fourth Amendment protection against "unreasonable searches and seizures" when a DEA agent can kick down your door unannounced, slam you on the floor, and steal your property before you have a chance to defend yourself in court? What use are Fifth Amendment protections to not be deprived of your "property without due process of law" when the government can take all it wants from you, then you have to sue and prove the property has no relation to some drug crime before you get it back? People such as Hutchison and Upchurch are a more serious threat to the average Iowan than Osama bin Laden.

Grassley pontificated, "If we're going to win this, it isn't just the federal, state, and local government. We're going to have the total involvement of the community." Of course, that is what people said about alcohol in the earlier part of the last century. They thought alcohol was bad enough that the Constitution should be amended to prohibit it. But, look at what happened then. Prohibition funded massive criminal activity, built a federal police state, and created havoc. It was bad enough that for the only time in history people repealed a constitutional amendment. Drug prohibition is worse. It has funded terrorism, destroyed most of our civil liberties, and turned our cities into war zones. We should take a lesson from those brave enough to oppose prohibition.

Finally, Upchurch reported, "Once they get addicted to these drugs, they don't care if their children are exposed. When that happens, they become very, very dangerous to their children." If it were not for the context, one might think he was talking about alcohol. But, Upchurch, and his government, practically stands by while alcoholic fathers terrorize families. Meanwhile, he and his posse kick down doors, raid people's homes, and shred our Constitution when some teenager makes unsatisfactory choices about staying up for a couple days partying.

Our politicians are nothing more than thugs trying to claim the moral high ground. Shame on us for electing them and buying their lies. If we cannot see through the lies they spread Monday, then God help us. We might just deserve to live in the hellish police state we are creating with the War on Drugs.

Out of the romance & into the kitchen

By Anne Webbeking
The Daily Iowan

When local author Thisbe Nissen's boyfriend found out she and her friend Erin Ergenbright were putting together a cookbook using recipes from their ex-boyfriends, the chef immediately began to create the perfect recipe in an attempt to secure a page or two in the book.

The result: Vito's Veggie Galette (pages 170-1). An eventual break-up. And yet another amusing story for The Ex-Boyfriend Cookbook: They Came, They Cooked, They Left (But We Ended up with Some Great Recipes), a colorful book that combines short, endearing accounts of ex-boyfriends loved and lost and the one thing they left behind: their recipes.

Ergenbright and Nissen will read from The Ex-Boyfriend Cookbook today at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

With more than 80 ex-boyfriend stories and the recipes that go with them, you're probably thinking, Where did these two 30-year-old women find the time to date so many men, and, even more stunning, how did they find so many men who cooked for them?

"Clearly, we're using the word boyfriend pretty loosely," Nissen said in a phone interview with the DI from her parents' home in New York City.

So how fictional is this book? That seems to be the first question people ask Nissen and Ergenbright these days. While their ex-boyfriends might find some small seeds of themselves in the pages of this fictional book, all of the stories are embellished, they said. The recipes mainly came from family and friends.

The authors met at the Iowa Writers' Workshop and began to write the book after moving into a farmhouse on the outskirts of Iowa City four years ago. They lived in the seven-bedroom house for a year, each writing separate stories in their offices, yelling down the hallway to each other when they had just written another humorous story for the cookbook.

"We were most inspired when we were there together," Ergenbright said.

Ergenbright moved to Portland, Ore., after living with Nissen for a year, and Nissen remained in Iowa City. But the women continued to write stories, picking up the telephone when they wanted to share what they had just written.

"We would call each other and say, 'Oh my god, listen to this,'" Nissen said.

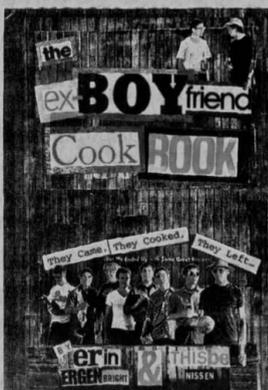

While the actual stories and recipes took time to develop, the authors said, they spent more time on the artwork for the book. All 175 pages of the book have collages as backgrounds, with the stories/recipes placed on top. Ergenbright and Nissen did all of the collages themselves using rubber cement, scissors, photographs, scrapbooks, postcards, and magazines. They bought 1950s scrapbooks at an auction and asked friends for anything they could spare. In the end, they were frantically searching for any pictures of male bodies.

The idea for the artwork came to them after Ergenbright made a collage on a puke-yellow refrigerator they had bought to put in their farmhouse. After personalizing their refrigerator, Ergenbright joked about going into business doing the same with other people's, but instead, she and Nissen collaged the book. Many of the collages will be framed and sold at a show in Portland later this month.

Ergenbright and Nissen said they weren't nervous about the June 4 release of their book; rather, they are looking forward to spending the summer together on a book tour. They have already been in New York City and Chicago, and they will stop in Iowa City today, then venture on to Seattle and Portland at the end of June.

The most nerve-racking part of it all was their appearance on the "Today Show" on June 7. A "Today Show" food stylist cooked five of the recipes, and Al Roker interviewed the authors about each dish and the ex-boyfriend who left the recipe behind. Nissen said she watched the program for the first time ever a few days before their appearance.

Nissen lives in Iowa City and is the author of Out of the Girls' Room and into the Night: Stories and The Good People of New York. She said she recommends Lucas Amarati's Gazpacho (pages 66-7). The self-proclaimed tomato snob grew 11 different varieties of tomatoes in her Iowa City backyard last summer and said the Gazpacho recipe (which is actually her mother's) is the best she's ever had.

Ergenbright lives in Oregon and is working on her first novel. She said she most enjoys Phil's Perfect Picadillo (pages 154-5), a Cuban chili that won her second place in a chili cook-off.

At the end of The Ex-Boyfriend Cookbook, the authors leave a few white pages with lines for readers to include their own stories and recipes. From the book's conception, they said, they could imagine people sitting at their kitchen table, cooking, reading The Ex-Boyfriend Cookbook, and sharing their own stories about ex-boyfriends.

People have already told them how much they can relate to the book, they said. The Ex-Boyfriend Cookbook isn't about getting revenge against their ex's or having regrets for love lost, they say, but rather about laughter.

As Nissen put it, "If we were man-hating, would we have that many ex-boyfriends?"

ARTS BRIEF

When a name can be too big

NEW YORK (AP) — Author David Baldacci has settled a legal dispute with a publisher after complaining that his name was featured too prominently on the cover of an anthology of mystery stories.

Baldacci, author of such best sellers as Absolute Power and Last Man Standing, won a rare preliminary court injunction last month to stop New Millennium Press from publishing The Mighty Johns.

Baldacci's name appeared in large foil letters above the title of the book, which also is the title of a novella contributed by Baldacci. A federal judge ruled that consumers could mistake the book for Baldacci's next novel, writing that New Millennium "was attempting to deceive the public into buying a misrepresented book."

However, New Millennium and Baldacci have agreed that the cover will be altered and the book released. Baldacci's name will appear below the title, in smaller letters.

"With such a wonderful story that we dearly wanted to publish, I wanted a way to make it happen," said Michael Viner, New Millennium's co-president and publisher.

Under the agreement, New Millennium will make a donation to "a charity of Mr. Baldacci's choosing," the Barbara Bush Literacy Foundation.

"I can't think of a better place for these funds to go to," Baldacci said.

The Mighty Johns also includes fiction by Lawrence Block, Anne Perry, and Brad Meltzer. Viner said the book will have a first printing of 100,000 copies.

Men in Kabul, Afghanistan, gather around a transistor radio Wednesday to listen to the proceedings of the loya jirga that is selecting a new Afghan government. Many Afghans are suspicious that the United States is orchestrating the council.

Powell floats notion of interim Palestine

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Colin Powell said Wednesday the Bush administration is considering establishing an interim Palestinian state and left open the possibility Yasser Arafat would head it.

"It isn't all that new and revolutionary a suggestion," Powell told reporters as he flew to a foreign ministers meeting in Canada. "It's been a pretty consistent element in all of the discussions about how to move forward in the Middle East."

In an interview on June 10 with an Arabic-language newspaper, Powell said creating a provisional state would give the Palestinian people "something they can put their hopes in, their dreams in, something the international community can invest in with some confidence."

"I think almost everybody has come to the agreement there is a need for provisional or interim steps," he said.

On Wednesday, en route to British Columbia, Powell eased back, saying an interim state was one of many ideas long under consideration.

President Bush is scheduled to meet today at the White House with Prince Saud al-Faisal, the foreign minister of Saudi Arabia. An announcement by Bush on his strategy for carrying out his promise to the Palestinians of a state of their own could come as early as next week.

A senior administration official said Bush was seriously considering provisional statehood but had not reached a final decision.

Saeb Erekat, a senior Palestinian negotiator, responded coolly to the suggestion. "I don't know what he means by that," Erekat said. "The main thing here is to end the Israeli occupation and to have Israel withdraw to its old borders."

U.S. looks heavy-handed in Afghan council

Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — When Hamid Karzai's opponents quit the race for Afghan head of state at this week's loya jirga, many Afghans saw it as a sign of heavy-handed U.S. interference in what was supposed to be an all-Afghan selection process.

"Everything seems to have been decided. But we don't need anyone to decide for us," delegate Asella Wardak complained Wednesday. "We have had enough of foreign interference in our country."

Secretary of State Colin Powell has denied the United States is manipulating the loya jirga — the grand council convened to establish a new transitional government. Powell said in Washington on Tuesday that the American role was limited to creating the conditions under which the 1,550 Afghan delegates could "find their way into the future in accordance with their traditions and their processes."

However, Sam Zarifi of the New York-based Human Rights Watch accused the Bush administration of "brazen" interference in the loya jirga, which had been promoted as the birth of Afghan democracy.

The controversy over the American role at the loya jirga erupted Monday because of U.S. efforts to resolve a power struggle between ethnic Tajiks from the former Northern Alliance and Pashtun followers of the former monarch, Mohammad Zahir Shah.

Although the ex-king had indicated for months he did not want to restore the monarchy, support for him was growing among delegates who saw him as the only figure capable of unifying this fractious country after 23 years of war.

However, an ethnic Tajik clique from the Panjshir Valley north of Kabul had long opposed any role for the aged former monarch. The Panjshiris, who led the Northern Alliance and maintain a powerful position in the interim government, had long suspected that Zahir Shah's close aides would try to install him as head of state.

Those fears were heightened when Saddam Wali, the former king's son-in-law, said in a statement last weekend that Zahir Shah would play whatever role the loya jirga requested of him.

According to a European official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, Defense Minister Mohammed Fahim, an ethnic Tajik, warned Karzai late Sunday that his faction's delegates would withdraw from the loya jirga unless the former king guaranteed he would seek no political post. He also threatened to place his troops on alert.

With a major crisis developing, the opening session of the loya jirga was postponed by a day as meetings were held to resolve the conflict. On Monday afternoon, the special U.S. envoy, Zalmay Khalilzad, told a news conference the former monarch wanted no role in the new government and would say so in a statement.

Hours later, Khalilzad sat with Zahir Shah, Karzai, and Afghan Foreign Minister Abdullah while an aide to the former monarch read a statement disavowing any role in the new government. The following day, the head of the Northern Alliance, Burnahuddin Rabbani, also bowed out of the race for head of state, leaving Karzai as the sole major candidate.

The United States has long supported Karzai, an urbane Pashtun fluent in English whose siblings live in the Washington area. Before Rabbani dropped out, Khalilzad appeared at the loya jirga site Monday night where, according to international officials, he lobbied delegates to support Karzai.

Khalilzad acknowledged visiting the site but said he was mobbed by delegates seeking his opinion. He also denied applying pressure on Zahir Shah to make his statement.

Other Western officials in Kabul say the United States has a special interest in seeing that the loya jirga approves a government to its liking because of the search for Taliban and Al Qaeda fugitives.

French nab 5 suspects in shoe-bomb case

By Angela Doland
Associated Press

PARIS — French anti-terrorist police rounded up five people on Wednesday who are suspected of providing assistance to alleged shoe bomber Richard Reid in Paris, the second such sweep in two months.

The arrests came as officials in Germany said they had received intelligence of a possible Al Qaeda plot to shoot down civilian airliners. Separately, Indian officials claimed they had evidence of an imminent Al-Qaeda attack on financial institutions in Bombay. And Britain said it was forming a 6,000-strong reaction unit in case of a Sept. 11-style attack.

Two Pakistanis and three North Africans with alleged sympathies to radical Islam were taken into custody at dawn in the Paris suburbs, police officials said on the condition of anonymity. Several may also have had French citizenship.

They were being questioned at Paris police headquarters. During the sweeps in Evry and a notoriously rough neighborhood of Mantes-La-Jolie, authorities found radical pamphlets and three guns, the officials said.

Reid, a 28-year-old British citizen, is being held in the United States, and French police have been conducting their own investigation to track his activities in France before he allegedly tried to ignite his explosive-stuffed sneakers on a Paris-Miami flight in December.

Le Monde newspaper reported the suspects detained Wednesday were identified by people arrested in a previous roundup. The new suspects had allegedly been seen with Reid eight months to a year before he boarded the flight.

Though police believe Reid had logistical support in the French capital, they have so far been unable to track down solid evidence, Le Monde reported.

In April, French police took seven Pakistanis into custody on suspicions they had helped Reid. Six were later released, and the seventh, who was in France illegally, was sent back to Pakistan, the newspaper said.

In Germany, a warning was triggered when a civilian intercepted radio traffic in the Middle East of someone talking about the possibility of attacks on airliners in Germany, said Udo Buehler, a spokesman for the Hesse state criminal-investigation agency.

A spokesman for the German Interior Ministry, Rainer Lingenthal, said there was no evidence a specific plot was in the planning stages but added, "Of course, we take this information seriously."

An internal report by the Hesse state criminal-investigation agency outlined how Al Qaeda members might bring down an airliner in Germany, the tabloid Bild reported.

The report said terrorists could use heat-seeking ground-to-air missiles or an unmanned drone aircraft carrying explosives to down a jetliner during takeoff or landing, Bild reported.

daughter's decision to attend the UI this fall. "We're determined to get her into a school that will provide her with the best opportunities," Leo Morris said. Barron noted that the university immediately updated its Web site with the new tuition estimates following the state of Iowa Board of Regents' decision to raise rates. Admission packets mailed after the regents' November 2001 vote included the 19 percent tuition and fees increase for Iowa residents and the 15.5 percent raise for non-residents. Working with incoming students and their parents, admissions counselor LeDon Sweeney said he's observed concern about the budget cuts, but he has seen no backlash against the university. Most parents aware of the tuition hike already have a child at the university, he said. Parents ask the same financial questions as always, and admissions counselors limit their answers to addressing the 2002-03 school year. Budget cuts have been publicized by the university and the press, Barron said, especially in conjunction with the all-around economic conditions of the state and country. Barron said the university will conduct a study this year of applicants who turned down admission. High enrollment doesn't explain why some students chose not to attend the UI, he said.

lower percentage than the one that changes every July 1. Consolidation allows a borrower to combine several types of loans into one, despite the disparities among repayment schedules. According to the Department of Education, a consolidated loan's monthly payment is typically lower, which results in a more manageable debt. Oakes advises students to borrow only money that they really need because the rates will always change, meaning they could rise in the coming years. "It is silly to do excess borrowing," she said. "No matter how low the rate is, you still have to pay it all back eventually." E-mail D/I reporter Sara Faiwell at: sara-faiwell@uiowa.edu

Vito's faces two dry weeks, $500 fine

VITO'S

Vito's, again at 2:20 a.m. The three males and one female patron, who were all underage, except one, turned out to be bar employees counting their tips. Kidane was in the basement again during the incident and did not know there was drinking going on. Under Iowa law, a person holding a liquor license cannot sell alcoholic beverages from 2-6 a.m. Any violation will result in the suspension of a liquor license.

Vito's said it should not be responsible for the actions because the manager was in the basement at the time of the infractions, but the judge rejected the argument. "The licensee's responsibility to prevent illegal activity on his licensed premise does not cease because the manager is in the basement office," LaMarche wrote in her statement. "It is the licensee's responsibility to ensure that the premises are properly monitored." The judge recommended a two-week suspension because Vito's had two occasions of underage drinking. A seven-day penalty was in order for each offense. Walding says he does not know whether Vito's will decide to appeal. The bar's lawyer, J. Dean Keegan, was unavailable for comment, as were both of the owners of Vito's. It was unclear why it took this long for a ruling to be handed down. E-mail D/I reporter Sara Faiwell at: sara-faiwell@uiowa.edu

State wary of ruling's effect on budget

Later in the day, Prouty said a further review of the state's budget shows the effect could be as high as $32 million. Ron Parker, a spokesman for Gov. Tom Vilsack, said aides were meeting Wednesday to try to assess the potential effect of the decision on the state's budget but conceded "it could be significant." "We won't know anything for a while," Parker said. Bob Brammer, a spokesman for the state attorney general's office, said the state's lawyers were examining the decision. He said one worry was that racetracks could go to court seeking refunds for taxes paid in past years. During the last legislative session, the Racing Association of Central Iowa, which operates Prairie Meadows Racetrack and Casino at Altoona, and the Iowa Greyhound Association sought to block the tax increase for racetrack casinos. The issue split the Legislature along geographic lines, with border lawmakers arguing for protection of the riverboat industry that has helped revitalize such river towns as Daventry and Sioux City. Other lawmakers warned the growing tax burden was likely to drive Prairie Meadows out of business. The court said it's inherently unfair to treat the same function — casino gambling — differently because of where it takes place. "We cannot justify this tax based on the fact that racetracks operate on land whereas riverboats operate on water," the court said.

The court's decision hands the racetrack proponents a far bigger legal victory than they had sought from the Legislature. "We are obviously elated with the court's decision," said Thomas Flynn, an attorney for Prairie Meadows. Neuman had said there are many reasons that lawmakers could decide to tax floating casinos less than those at racetracks. "Riverboats are mobile; racetracks are not," she said. "If the economic climate turns unfavorable here, a riverboat merely unties its lines and sails elsewhere." That could lead lawmakers to give the operations a tax break, and courts shouldn't substitute their judgment, Neuman said.

But the court said that a fundamental constitutional precept of taxation is that fairness must prevail, absent some reason for treating similar operations differently. "Where the same activity is being taxed at significantly different rates, a mere difference in location is not sufficient to uphold the discriminatory tax," the court said. The court also warned that should the tax on racetrack casinos grow to 36 percent, the profit margin would evaporate, frustrating state law designed to encourage the racing industry. "The racetrack industry is responsible for employing hundreds of Iowans. It also supports the horse industry by distributing millions of dollars to pursue supplements," the court said. The court ruled there was no rational reason for taxing the operations differently, unless lawmakers were trying to drive the tracks out of business to aid the riverboat industry.

Carlson, Cox will nominate search-group members soon the interest of openness, we want people to know ahead of time ... it gives people a chance to ask the candidates questions. It's worked well for us in the past." Carlson, working with UI Faculty Senate President Jeffrey Cox, hopes to nominate the members of the search committee by next month. The committee will be "broadly representative of the major campus constituents with a heavy contingent of faculty, many of whom will be distinguished faculty," said regents' president Owen Newlin. It will include nine members of the faculty, one dean, three UI staff members, three students, two alumni, and up to three others chosen by the regents. Carlson said he has not thought seriously about nominating members, but he is looking forward to meeting those who will serve with him along with presidential candidates. The committee will next develop a number of criteria for the candidates. The last time the university searched for a president, the 17 credentials included fund-raising skills, an understanding of health sciences, and other general qualifications. Carlson said he planned to call UI engineering Professor Steve Collins, who served as search committee chairman during the last presidential search, in 1995. "I hope to get together with him and get some wisdom from him before too long," he said. The regents are also expected to appoint Willard "Sandy" Boyd as the university's interim president from Aug. 1 until a new president is hired. ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid arguments with friends or colleagues. Go to the gym or get involved in a competitive sport. Keeping extremely busy will help you get through the day without a hitch.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will learn a great deal if you listen to what your friends have to say. The information might not be directed at you, but if you apply it to your situation, you will find yourself ahead of the game.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't hesitate to set up an interview if you happen across a job that looks interesting. Money-making propositions are apparent. Don't be afraid to invest in something you believe in.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It may be hard for you to contain the way you feel. Your emotions will be close to the surface, and you may find yourself complaining and nagging. Take a step back and be objective.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can make some changes to your home that will add to its entertainment value. Secret activities may be made available to you, but you should think twice before you take part.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get out and see what's going on in your neighborhood. You can make some new friends if you take part in community events. You need a change of pace, but you need to make the effort.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good things are happening. Don't let your emotional ups and downs stand in your way. You may be judged by the job you're working on.

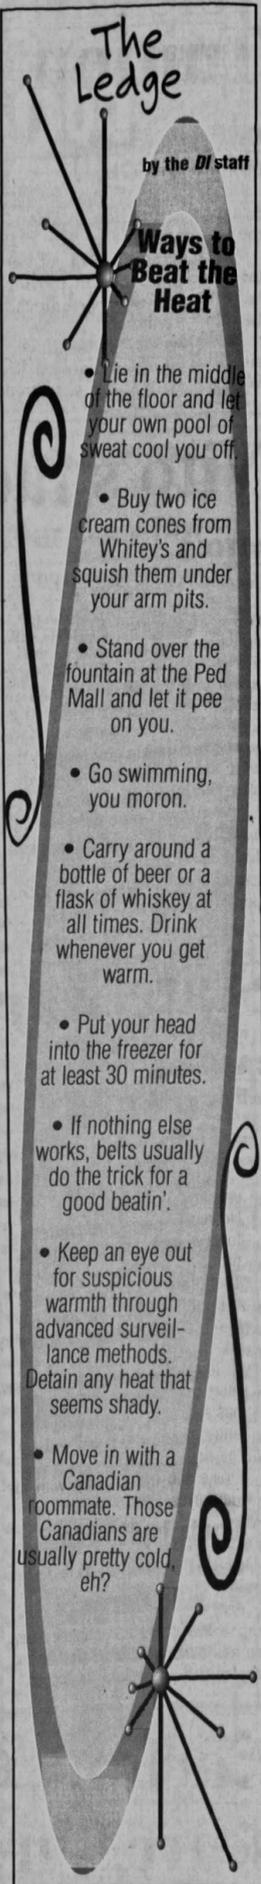

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your ability to talk to strangers will enable you to discover new possibilities. Attending a conference or seminar will help you to understand the nature of the business you are in.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You've been burning the candle at both ends, and it's time to give yourself a rest. Your financial situation will improve if you move some of your money to a safe haven.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will probably feel that the people you deal with today are demanding, but the problem may be with you. Be understanding and willing to see both sides of any issue that arises.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your ability to be creative in your everyday activities, including your job, will help you attract new friends. Share your talents with those who can appreciate your gift.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Decide what it is you would like to do in order to spice up your looks and your life. It's time to make changes that will allow you the freedom to do the things you enjoy. Don't procrastinate any longer.

- Lie in the middle of the floor and let your own pool of sweat cool you off.
- Buy two ice cream cones from Whitey's and squish them under your arm pits.
- Stand over the fountain at the Ped Mall and let it pee on you.
- Go swimming, you moron.
- Carry around a bottle of beer or a flask of whiskey at all times. Drink whenever you get warm.
- Put your head into the freezer for at least 30 minutes.
- If nothing else works, belts usually do the trick for a good beatin'.
- Keep an eye out for suspicious warmth through advanced surveillance methods. Detain any heat that seems shady.
- Move in with a Canadian roommate. Those Canadians are usually pretty cold, eh?

HAWKEYE SPORTS BRIEFS

Jensen withdraws from Xavier coach consideration

Iowa women's assistant basketball coach Jan Jensen announced today that she has withdrawn her name from consideration for the head-coach vacancy at Xavier University.

"I was extremely flattered to be considered for the position at Xavier," she said.

"It is an excellent program that was in the Elite Eight in 2001. However, my situation here at Iowa is also tremendous. I'm so proud to be with the Hawkeyes. The future of Hawkeye basketball is bright, and I feel Iowa is one of the best places in the nation to coach."

Jensen serves as Iowa's recruiting coordinator, and she has served as an assistant coach under head coach Lisa Bluder for the past 10 years, eight while at Drake and the last two with the Hawkeyes.

Goetz invited to National Team Rowing Camp

Hawkeye senior Jessica Goetz was invited to the U.S. National Team Rowing Development Camp at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., becoming the first Hawkeye to attend. The camp started Wednesday and runs through June 29.

Approximately 30-35 women from across the country are invited. Athletes are selected based on coaches' recommendations, ergometer scores, collegiate performances and results from fall racing in pairs.

The list of athletes is separated into two athlete groups (pre-elite and development); however, women will move between groups based on technical ability and ergometer scores gathered during the camp.

From the pre-elite camp, athletes will be invited to Princeton, N.J., for the final selection of crews to race at the U-23 Nation's Cup Regatta in Genoa, Italy, July 25-27.

Cubs blow lead to Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Craig Biggio hit a two-run double, and Jeff Bagwell had a go-ahead sacrifice fly in a three-run seventh inning, rallying Houston to a 5-4 victory over the Cubs on Wednesday.

Trailing 4-2 to start the seventh, the Astros loaded the bases off Juan Cruz (1-8) before Biggio tied the game.

White Sox 2, Mets 1

CHICAGO — Tony Graffanino provided all of Chicago's offense, homering and then driving in the go-ahead run as the White Sox beat the New York Mets.

With their second-straight victory, Chicago won the first-ever series with the Mets.

It was only the third one-run win of the year for the Sox.

Diamondbacks 9, Yankees 5

NEW YORK — Byung-Hyun Kim, pitching at Yankee Stadium for the first time since his World Series meltdowns last year, got six outs to preserve the Arizona Diamondbacks' 9-5 victory over New York on Wednesday.

Arizona starter Miguel Batista out-pitched Mike Mussina, getting home-run support from backup catcher Rod Barajas and Steve Finley just as he did in Game 5 of last year's Fall Classic.

Red Sox 7, Rockies 5

BOSTON — Nomar Garciaparra reached base three times without a solid hit as the Boston Red Sox took advantage of five Colorado errors — and a few other misplays — to beat the Rockies.

Giants 6, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — Barry Bonds hit his 22nd homer, and Damon Minor went 4-4 and homered in his third-straight game as the San Francisco Giants beat the Toronto Blue Jays.

Braves 3, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Rookie Damian Moss pitched seven shutout innings, helped by a spectacular play by center fielder Andruw Jones, and the Atlanta Braves beat the Minnesota Twins.

Phillies 7, Indians 3

CLEVELAND — Vicente Padilla pitched out of jams for most of his 6 1/2 innings, leading the Philadelphia Phillies over the Cleveland Indians.

Rangers 10, Reds 4

ARLINGTON, Texas — Rookie Kevin Mench hit a two-run single, and Michael Young had a bases-loaded triple as the Texas Rangers rallied for seven runs in the eighth inning to beat the Cincinnati Reds.

Golfers prepare for Bethpage Black

All signs point to Woods, although that's the case at just about every major. He has won six of the last 10, and comes into the U.S. Open with a chance to become the first player since Jack Nicklaus in 1972 to win the first two legs of the Grand Slam.

Woods won the Masters in April by building a quick lead on Sunday at Augusta National, then watching the best players fall apart.

The real intimidator this week could be the Black, an A.W. Tillinghast design at the world's largest public golf complex.

"When you're done here in four days, you know you've worked hard," two-time U.S. Open champion Ernie Els said. "Every aspect of your game gets the test it deserves — your mental strength, your scrambling ability, long-iron play, driving ability — everything gets tested. And definitely, your nerves."

Els won both his U.S. Opens on similar courses — in 1994 at Oakmont, with its thick rough, punishing bunkers, and slick greens and in 1997 at Congressional, with its length and tight fairways.

Bethpage Black is the longest par-70 in history at 7,214 yards, with two of the longest par 4s ever at a U.S. Open, No. 10 (492 yards) and No. 12 (499 yards).

It that isn't enough, the USGA will send players off both sides the first two rounds to deal with slow play. That means half the field will start out on today or Friday facing a 492-yard hole lined by shin-high rough.

"You'd better be warmed up," Els said.

And they better find the short grass as often as possible.

Several players say the Black reminds them of Carnoustie, site of the 1999 British Open and the toughest major since the 1974 U.S. Open at Winged Foot. The winning score at Carnoustie was 6-over 290 because of a combination of high rough and whipping winds.

"With Carnoustie calm, guys can shoot good scores around it," Nick Faldo said. "But this is the toughest we've ever played in calm conditions."

There is always thick, nasty rough at the U.S. Open, but the USGA must have found a particularly good blend of fertilizer for the Black. There are no patches of thin grass, so no one can expect to get a break by missing the fairway.

Azinger put a 9-wood in his bag for the practice round Wednesday, hopeful it would help him advance the ball out of the rough. Asked if he worried the fairway metal would slide under the ball and lead to a whiff, Azinger laughed.

"You can't even get under the ball," he said.

Despite the length on the Black Course, Woods rarely hits driver — only five times during his only full practice round on Tuesday, the rest of the time going with a 3-wood or 2-iron.

Woods broke his 3-wood on the practice range Wednesday and had to get it repaired.

"On most of the courses we play, if you're 5 yards farther right than you're aiming, you're still in the fairway," Duval said. "Here, you're chipping out."

Pierce taken with first pick

Larson selected Leslie and Boyd with his first two picks for Mike Gatens Real Estate-Highland Park Development.

Larson expects much attention to be given to the five Iowa newcomers, who have yet to experience true college play. He also expects a lot of interest in Pierce and Worley.

He said, "I think it's important that Steve Alford's recruits step up and assume their responsibilities as starters."

The first Primetime League games will take place June 17 at 4:30 p.m. at the North Liberty Community Center. Games will be held every Monday and Thursday culminating with the championship game on July 29.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Boone transfers from Carolina to Minnesota

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The 2000 Minnesota high-school basketball player of the year is returning to his home state to play for the Golden Gophers. Minnesota announced Wednesday.

Adam Boone, 20, who played two seasons with North Carolina, will not be able to join the Gophers until the 2003-04 season because of NCAA transfer rules. He can practice with the team this fall.

Boone, 6-2, 202 pounds, started 18 games for the Tar Heels in 2001-02. He averaged 7.2 points and 3.2 assists while shooting 46 percent from the field and a team-leading 43 percent from 3-point range.

War Emblem involved in lawsuit

LOS ANGELES — The majority owner of Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner War Emblem has filed a lawsuit seeking the $1 million bonus for the colt's victories in the Illinois and Kentucky derbies.

The Thoroughbred Corp. filed the suit against the National Jockey Club, which runs Sportsman's Park, the Chicago racetrack that sponsored the bonus.

The dispute centers on who is entitled to the $1 million bonus —

Thoroughbred Corp. owner Prince Ahmed bin Salman or War Emblem's previous owner, Russell Reineman, who retains a 10 percent interest.

Green Bay signs linebacker Nickerson

The Green Bay Packers plugged a glaring hole at middle linebacker Wednesday, signing five-time Pro Bowl selection Hardy Nickerson.

Although terms were not released, Nickerson was seeking a multiyear deal that would pay him at least $1 million this season. The 15-year veteran chose the Packers over the Philadelphia Eagles.

Smith wins NBA Sportsmanship Award

NEW YORK — Steve Smith won the NBA's Sportsmanship Award on Wednesday, becoming the third player from the San Antonio Spurs to be chosen for the honor.

Smith won over P.J. Brown of the Hornets, followed by LaPhonso Ellis of the Miami Heat and Shawn Marion of the Phoenix Suns.

San Antonio's David Robinson won the award last year, while former Spur Avery Johnson took the honor for the 1997-98 season.

Smith received 65 of 126 votes from the a panel of national media members.

U.S. in unfamiliar role as favorite

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — American soccer has come a long way: The United States is the favorite going into Friday's game against Poland. The players say they won't deserve to advance to the second round of the World Cup if they can't get at least a tie.

British bookmaker Ladbrokes lists the United States as an 8-11 favorite to beat the Poles, who already have been eliminated, and it has lowered the Americans' odds of winning the World Cup from 250-1 to 125-1. The U.S. team has a chance to go through the first round unbeaten for the first time since 1930, yet much of the team thinks the soccer world treats them like dirt.

"A lot of teams still don't respect us," said 20-year-old midfielder DaMarcus Beasley, among the new breed of player out to change U.S. soccer's image. "We've done pretty well in the World Cup and are 13th in the world, but they don't know that."

Coming into this month, the Americans had been 1-8-1 since their return to the World Cup in 1990, advancing past the first round only in 1994, when they were the hosts. In 1990 and 1998, they went 0-3, finishing last among the 32 teams four years ago.

With their 3-2 upset of fifth-ranked Portugal and their 1-1 tie with co-host South Korea in front of 61,000 roaring, red-clad fans, the Americans moved within one point of a second-round matchup with either Italy, Mexico, or Croatia. They would advance with a win, a tie — or even a loss if South Korea either beats the Portuguese or loses in a rout that swings goal difference.

"I think we better win the game outright," defender Eddie Pope said Wednesday. "I think it's dangerous to try to play for a tie. I think that if we go out, and play hard, and do the things we've done in the past, we have an opportunity to win."

Pierce first pick in PTL draft

By Katie Low
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa guard Pierre Pierce was chosen first in the Prime Time League draft Wednesday night by Liberty Motors-First Realty.

Pierce started as a freshman point guard for the Hawkeyes during the 2001-02 season. Two incoming freshmen highlighted the first round. Forward Greg Brunner of Charles City, Iowa, was chosen third, and

Brunner, Horner also selected early point guard Jeff Horner of Mason City, Iowa, was picked sixth.

Brunner was selected by Lebeda Mattress Factory, Horner by Goodfellow Printing-Imprinted Sportswear.

The remaining first-round picks were former Iowa guard Darryl Moore and current Iowa players Erik Hansen, Glen Worley, Chauncey Leslie, and Marcellus Sommerville.

Hansen and Sommerville redshirted last season; Leslie and Worley are returning as a senior and a junior, respectively.

More Iowa players followed in the next round, with the Jared Reiner, Brody Boyd, and Sean Sonderleiter filling the first three slots.

Former Iowa forward Duez Henderson was the fifth pick of the second round, while a third incoming Iowa freshman, Josh Rhodes of Santa Cruz, Calif., was picked sixth.

Lakers swee-peat

Shaq wins third straight Finals MVP

By Chris Sheridan
 Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Proficiently and professionally, the Los Angeles Lakers finished strong, closed out the New Jersey Nets, and won their third-straight NBA title with a franchise first — a 4-0 sweep in the finals.

Shaquille O'Neal had another dominant night Wednesday with 34 points and 10 rebounds, while Kobe Bryant went back to playing a supporting role with 25 points in the 113-107 victory.

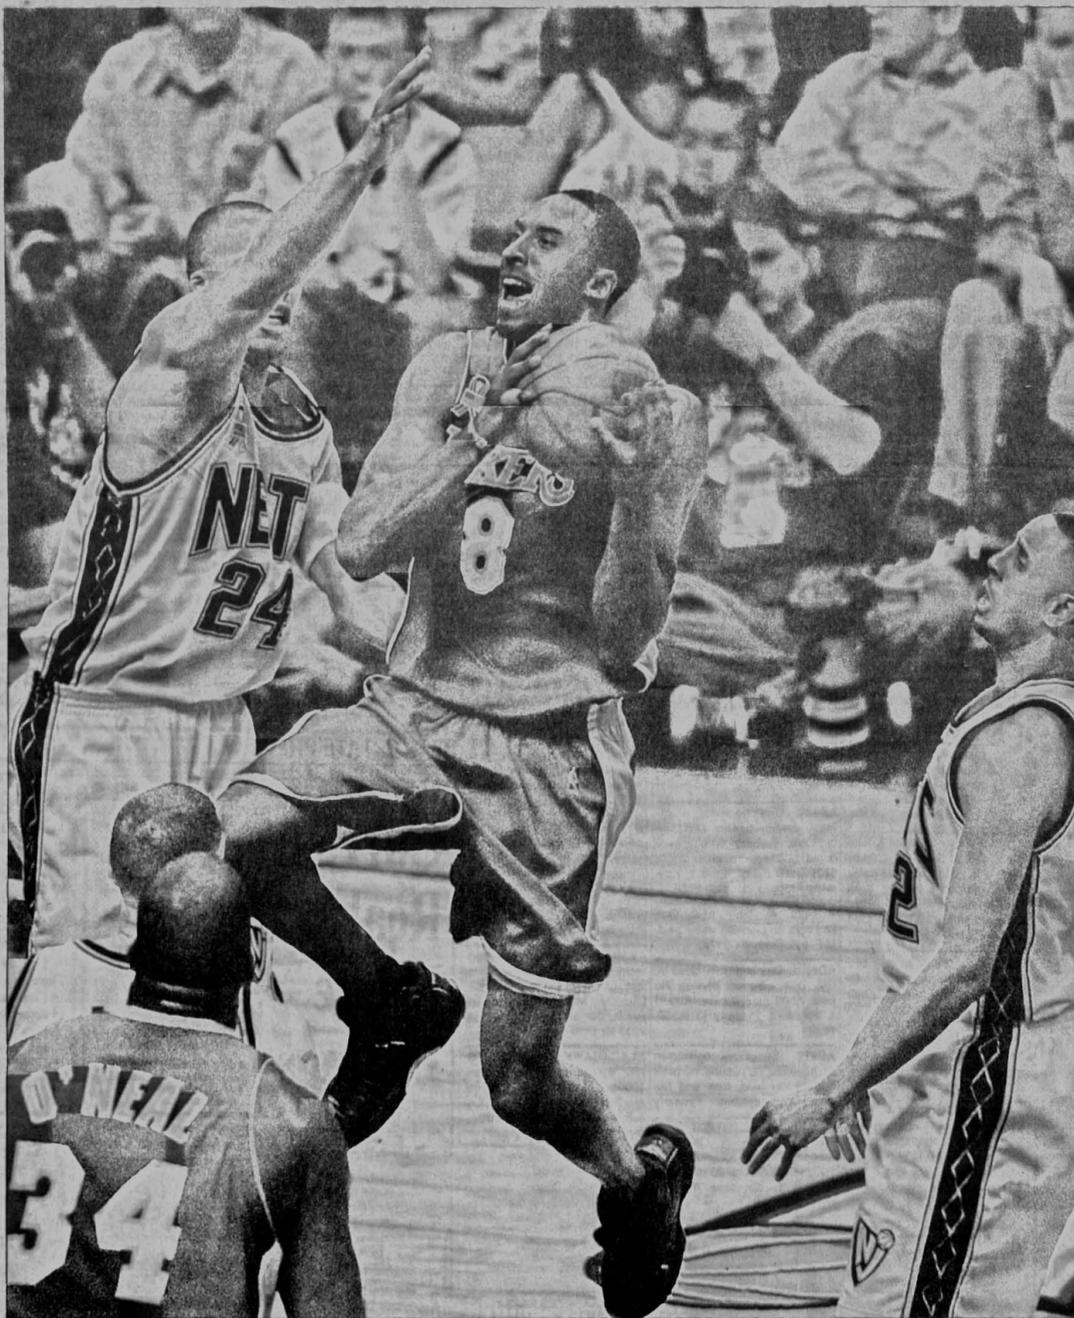

The rest of the Lakers also came up big in the deciding game — just as they did a year ago.

It was the 14th title in franchise history, five while the team was in Minneapolis — including a three-peat — and nine in Los Angeles. This, however, was the first time they ever beat an opponent in four straight games.

Bryant walked over and hugged Nets coach Bryon Scott, and O'Neal, the finals MVP, sought out Nets guard Jason Kidd and then walked over to embrace his grandfather, who towelled the sweat off O'Neal's face.

Coach Phil Jackson tied Red Auerbach for most titles as a head coach (nine) and passed Pat Riley for the most career postseason victories (156). Jackson also went over to Scott, smiled and shook hands at midcourt.

The Nets all but conceded defeat with 44 seconds left, subbing for Kidd and Kenyon Martin despite trailing by only six points. Bryant made two free throws while the two Nets got a rousing ovation, and 14-year veteran Mitch Richmond hit the final shot of the game.

Ben Rand primed for Iowa

By Kavitha Thimmaiah
 The Daily Iowan

Shooting guard Ben Rand knows he has a lot to learn — and who better to teach him than one of the greatest shooting guards the college game has seen, Steve Alford?

"Coach Alford played shooting guard, I have lots to learn, and there is lots he can teach me. No one can teach me better than him," said Rand.

The senior-to-be from Rochelle, Ill., made an oral commitment to play for the Hawkeyes in the 2003-04 season. Rand toured the UI campus and athletics facilities last week.

"It's a really nice campus. It reminded me of my hometown — that was really good," he said. He also met with future teammates Chauncey Leslie and Glen Worley. Rand said the two were very friendly and made him feel very comfortable.

The 6-5, 180-pound Rand averaged 24 points in his junior season and led his team in breaking the school's record for most wins in a season for the third-consecutive year. His high-school coach, Russ Zick, said he could tell Rand was a Division I athlete from the beginning.

"Most tremendous shooters [such as Rand] are mostly just that, but Ben is also athletic, and that's what sets him apart," Zick said.

Like most high-school ball players, Zick said, Rand needs to work on his ball-handling skills because the change in tempo from high school to college hoops is so great.

Regardless, Zick thinks Rand will make an excellent addition to the Hawkeyes and will complement such players as sophomore Pierre Pierce and incoming freshman Jeff Horner.

Iowa coaches are unable to comment on Rand because of NCAA rules that prohibit coaches from speaking about players before they sign their national letter of intent.

Rand plans to sign during the early signing period, which begins Nov. 13. "I wanted to play in the Big Ten. I've watched it my whole life. I'm very excited to be part of it," said Rand.

Bethpage Black a formidable foe

By Doug Ferguson
 Associated Press

FARMINGDALE, N.Y. — Bethpage State Park erected a sign on the first tee to let the public know what to expect. "Warning: The Black Course is an extremely difficult course which is recommended only for highly skilled golfers."

There was no need to remove the sign just because the world's best players came by for the U.S. Open.

"We all think of ourselves as highly skilled," Hal Sutton said Wednesday. "I guess we're about to find out."

The charm of this U.S. Open is that it will be played for the first time on a truly public golf course that costs no more than $39 a round. Whether it's a public course or a ritzy country club is no longer an issue for Tiger Woods or the rest of the 156-man field.

They just want to survive. "This is every bit as hard as any venue I've ever seen," David Duval said. "If you're not doing everything well, you've got no chance."

That's what the Open is all about.

Only a dozen players have finished 72 holes under par in the last seven editions, which is why this major championship stands out as the toughest in golf.

Blend that with a course that has a reputation for being a beast, and it's little wonder that players are approaching the opening round today with trepidation.

"This golf course is tough on its own," Paul Azinger said. "The U.S. Open has turned it into a monster. It's going to be a survival of the fittest in every aspect — the fittest mind, the fittest body, and the fittest game."
