Another bomber strikes in Israel

By Susan Severeid
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — A suicide bomber sprang from a car, slipped past a pair of policemen, and blew himself up at a busy Jerusalem intersection Wednesday, killing at least six other people in the second deadly attack in the city in two days.

Responding, Israeli forces earlier today entered a suburb of the West Bank town of Ramallah. Palestinian witnesses said tanks circled a house in Beitunia, where soldiers apparently planned to make arrests. The Israeli military had no immediate comment.

Soldiers also occupied Qalqiliya, placing the West Bank town under curfew. Two Israeli soldiers were killed and three others wounded when they entered a house of a suspected militant and shooting broke out, the military said.

Shortly after the suicide attack, Israeli helicopters fired rockets at metal workshops in the Gaza Strip used to manufacture weapons. Thirteen Palestinians were hurt, two seriously, Palestinian doctors said.

A group tied to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's Fatah faction, the Al Aqsa Martyrs Brigades, claimed responsibility for the suicide bombing, according to Al Manner television station run out of Lebanon by the militant Islamic group Hezbollah.

Israel said early Wednesday that it would seize and hold parts of Palestinian territory in retaliation for terror attacks, and troops moved into three West Bank towns.

Smoking rate plummets at UI

Health officials say ban on smoking in dorms has paid off

By Christy B. Logan
The Daily Iowan

Smoking rates among UI students have plummeted but are still slightly above the national average, according to a recent survey conducted by the Health Iowa/Student Health Service.

The number of students who reported smoking in the past 30 days significantly decreased from 41.1 percent in 1997 to 28.3 percent in 2001 — slightly above the 27.8 percent average for subjects ages 18-25, the survey states.

The study, which analyzes a representative sample of 500 undergraduate students by both sex and grade level every other year, suggests that factors such as the university's shift to smoke-free housing is one possible reason for the large decrease.

"I think the results do indicate that the smoke/residence hall policy may have some effect on the decrease, but that is not to say that everyone in the residence halls is 100 percent smoke-free," said Phillip Jones, the vice president for Student Services.

Jones helped to implement the current smoke-free residence hall policy, which has banned the use of tobacco products in all dormitories since August 2000. An earlier policy, implemented in August 1998, limited tobacco use to designated floors in the dorms.

At the University of Minnesota, which contains similar student demographics as the UI, smoking rates have continued to increase from 1992, based on data from a comparable survey. The Minnesota smoking rate was nearly 49 percent in 2000, the last year from which data are available.

Speculations cited for dramatic smoking rates between the two schools may be linked to differences in students' residential status. Unlike the UI,

LONDON — Tobacco smoke is even more cancerous than previously thought, for both smokers and nonsmokers who breathe in the fumes, causing cancer in many more parts of the body than previously believed, a panel of experts has concluded.

Although smoking has been established as a leading cause of cancer, scientists have only now been able to track more than one generation of smokers to develop a clear picture of the dangers of tobacco.

The group found no clear evidence that children exposed to their parent's tobacco smoke in the womb or after birth have an elevated risk of developing childhood cancers. Whether they face an increased risk of lung or other cancer in adulthood remains unclear, the panel said.

The scientists, convened by the International Agency for Research on Cancer, a branch of the World Health Organization, said Wednesday that for types of cancer already known to be caused by smoking, the risk of

Avoiding bacteria lurking in lakes

Officials say local beaches are safe for swimming

By Jennifer Sturm
The Daily Iowan

Claudia Espinosa has a tip for beach aficionados looking to avoid excessive bacteria:

"Never go swimming after it rains," said the UI environmental engineering graduate student. "Everything that is on the soil goes into the water."

Espinosa takes weekly water samples at the Coralville Reservoir for the Army Corps of Engineers.

Espinosa's first sample, taken June 13, went to the UI Hygienic Laboratory, where samples are tested for such bacteria as E. coli, enterococci, and fecal coliform. An excessive level of any of the three over a five-week period could be enough to shut a beach down. The test results should be available today for release, Espinosa said.

But state officials, who oversee state beaches, such as the one at Lake Macbride, near Solon, have scrapped using high levels of E. coli or enterococci this summer as a reason to advise against swimming or to shut a beach down. They said the public was confused in past years when levels of all three bacteria were posted.

They will only advise the public against swimming in a lake when fecal coliform bacteria levels — which come from anything that defecates in the water, ranging from babies in diapers to cattle and other farm animals — are too high.

While the Environmental Protection Agency considers both E. coli and enterococci tests to be important, Rick Langel, a research geologist with the state Department of Natural Resources, says the testing the state does is sufficient, and the water is safe.

"We do test for all three, and last year we were posting results of all three — and it was very confusing," he said. "Fecal coliform and other bacteria in the water are safe enough for myself to go out and collect. I'd still swim in the water."

Five state beaches were shut down last year, none locally. State beaches will not be closed this year, officials said, regardless of how high bacteria levels run.

Rather, signs advising beachgoers not to swim will be posted. Every Friday, the levels of fecal coliform will be released to the public for both federal and state beaches.

Meanwhile, local scientists are working to document the causes of high levels of bacteria in the state beaches.

Last year, the DNR park rangers could determine when the bacteria was high just by looking at how cloudy the water was. By watching 13 different

'Hobby' turns into real-estate empire

By Jessica Brady
The Daily Iowan

What began as a "hobby" 20 years ago for real-estate tycoon Marc Moen has added up to more than $15 million in property spread among 8 buildings in downtown Iowa City.

And now, in what he calls an effort to create a more upscale market, the local entrepreneur plans to more than double his real-estate ownership with a $22.3 million development near the Public Library. The city-owned land he bought June 11, now a parking lot, is expected to feature a grocery store, luxury hotel, and convention center.

"We want to attract a diverse population with all of our projects, not just students," he said.

Moen opted not to put a bar in the complex to keep noise levels down and promote a more upscale environment. The Iowa City City Council approved the project, 4-3, but only after heated debate concerning what the city would do if the building did not turn a profit.

Moen developer which some councilors initially protested. The refunds are typically used to supplement low-income residential projects and essential development for low-income households.

"We don't need to support rich developers," Kanner said. "I want an ear on the side of the small-business person."

First prompted by complaints about expensive, poor-quality housing in 1988, Moen purchased his first properties, two houses near City High School.

"There's a real market for nicer apartments in the downtown area," he said. "A lot of people are willing to pay a slightly more expensive rent for a more upscale place."

The Moen Group is also preparing to open the Vogel House, an apartment complex located at 229 Iowa Ave. The complex will offer rooms furnished by Swedish furniture company Ikea and will provide semester-long leases.

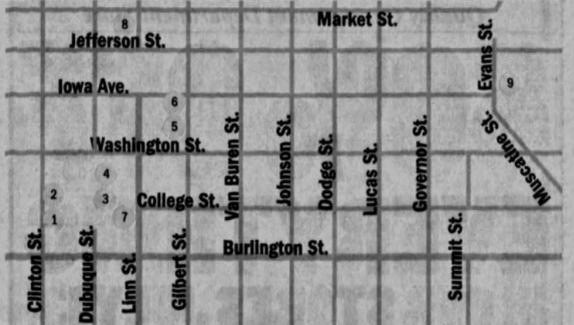

The building will include a coffee house on the ground level. Moen said he avoided putting a bar in the building for cosmetic reasons.

"We're really trying to enhance that area," he said. "With the glass on the grand level, we wanted to make sure whatever was inside was eye-appealing."

Linkletter: Aging drivers a concern

By Emily Gersema
Associated Press

WEST DES MOINES — Although he joked about getting older, television personality and producer Art Linkletter had serious advice for seniors: Ask loved ones who are dangerous drivers to stop driving.

"It is important that the one who is well be firm about things like that," the 89-year-old television and radio host told 170 people Wednesday at a seminar about elderly drivers and safety.

Older people who aren't safe drivers are often reluctant to admit it, Linkletter said.

"Independence is very closely linked to the automobile," he said. "We hate to give it up, and we all like to think that we're pretty good drivers."

Approximately 181,000 people age 70 and above were injured in traffic crashes in 2000, accounting for 6 percent of all people injured in crashes that year, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

The issue of keeping unsafe older drivers off the road has surfaced in Iowa because the state has one of the highest concentrations of elderly people in the nation.

Nearly 42.4 percent of the state's population is 65 and older, Census figures show.

Linkletter admitted aging isn't easy to deal with.

"One sign of age is you sit in a rocking chair, and it doesn't go, or you sink your teeth into a big juicy steak, and they stay there," he joked.

"You've got to be on alert that you're getting old," he added.

Joking aside, Linkletter said he has had to confront a friend about his unsafe driving.

His friend was showing the initial signs of Alzheimer's disease but refused to admit it, so Linkletter spoke to him, warning him to stop driving.

It's a difficult thing to do, but friends and family members must speak up to protect their safety and other people's lives, Linkletter said.

The two-day seminar sponsored by the Iowa Highway Safety Management System had an agenda full of meetings focused on safe driving practices and education.

JoAnn DeCamp, a former legislator from Adel, said some of the information was intimidating.

"I always thought that I was a pretty good driver," she said. "I'm 75, but when I drive, I feel confident."

Sharon Owenson, 60, of Ames, said Linkletter's speech made her realize that she needs to talk to a friend whose husband continues to drive without a license.

"I know he doesn't have a license, and his wife doesn't know what to do to get the keys away from him," Owenson said. "You have to be more bold about confronting them."

County officials warn that more budget cuts are coming

In a laid-back special session Wednesday, Johnson County officials said the county's budget will experience more "major" cuts in fiscal year 2003.

Specifics of the cuts will be determined when the Johnson County Board of Supervisors receives state appropriations and completes its budget in September.

Supervisor Sally Stutsman said the budget will be hit hard because the county has reached its taxing limit.

"This is just a 'heads up' to Iowa City, Coralville, and North Liberty," Stutsman said. "We can't raise taxes anymore, so money available in the past just won't be there."

The budget problems are not caused by slowing state revenues but by a lack of money in the county's general fund. The fund's progress has been slowed by employee salary increases and the overcrowded Johnson County Jail, which forces officials to transport inmates to Linn County.

Funding shortfalls for the Johnson County Senior Center also drew concern from the panel during the 45-minute meeting. The county failed to pay the promised 20 percent of the center's operating expenses last year after it lost $46,000 in state appropriations.

CITY BRIEF

Sketch released of bank robbery suspect

Iowa City police have released a computerized composite sketch of a man they say robbed the Iowa State Bank & Trust, 2233 Rochester Ave., on June 7.

Police say the man approached the bank teller at approximately 3:45 p.m. and asked for bills when he presented $10 in quarters. He threatened the teller and demanded money before fleeing on foot.

The man is described as white or possibly Latino with tan skin, 17-20 years old. He is approximately 5 feet, 6 inches tall with a thin build and dark hair that was sticking out of a green baseball cap with the word "Boulevard" on the front.

Anyone with information regarding the robbery is encouraged to contact police at 356-5444.

Bush proposes $500 million to fight AIDS

By Scott Lindlaw
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With 2,000 babies infected each day by the AIDS virus, President Bush proposed spending $500 million over the next five years to stop HIV-infected women in Africa and the Caribbean from transmitting the disease.

Critics called the proposal "grossly underfinanced."

More than 2 million women carrying the AIDS virus give birth each year; 90 percent pass it on to their young during pregnancy, childbirth, or nursing. Bush chose this front in the war on the disease and singled out 12 African and two Caribbean nations for his AIDS initiative.

"Medical science gives us the power to save these young lives. Conscience demands we do so," he said. He embraced the spending, part of which is already pending in Congress, a week before he is to attend a summit of the world's wealthiest nations. The meeting in Canada will focus on Africa.

White House officials said Bush's proposal was meant to soften criticism that the United States doesn't spend enough on such global initiatives.

Bush unveiled his proposal for the increased spending, mostly for anti-AIDS medications to be administered during pregnancy and after birth, in a Rose Garden ceremony. The United States would pay for the drugs, such as nevirapine, which blocks transmission of HIV to unborn children.

A second component of the program would improve health-care delivery systems in the targeted countries.

The White House is tapping $200 million that both houses of Congress recently approved

The bodies won't stop piling up until Bush commits $2.5 billion in new money for HIV that prioritizes getting medicine into the hands of people with AIDS.

— Asia Russell,
a representative of Health GAP

for global AIDS programs for the first installment of the $500 million proposal. Bush has requested nearly $1.1 billion for the worldwide AIDS fight for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The announcement brought sharp criticism from several AIDS activist groups, including Act Up, which denounced the proposal as a "sham," demanded $2.5 billion in spending, and said it would demonstrate outside a Washington fund-raiser Bush was headlining Wednesday night. The group complained that Bush was ignoring people who already have AIDS.

Act Up and others want the United States to contribute more to the United Nations-backed Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis, and Malaria. The United States has pledged $500 million to that fund.

"The bodies won't stop piling up until Bush commits $2.5 billion in new money for HIV that prioritizes getting medicine into the hands of people with AIDS," said Asia Russell, an official with the AIDS advocacy group Health GAP.

The Global AIDS Alliance branded Bush's plan "grossly underfinanced." But Marc Isaac, the director of public policy for the Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS Foundation, called Bush's focus on mothers and babies "appropriate and farsighted."

The president called his proposal "the first of this scale by any government anywhere."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., called Bush's proposal a "welcome development in the battle against global AIDS."

Kennedy and Sen. Bill Frist, R-Tenn., introduced a broader bill Wednesday proposing to spend $500 million on prevention and treatment in 2003-04 in unspecified countries threatened by AIDS epidemics.

The nations Bush targeted are Botswana, Ivory Coast, Ethiopia, Kenya, Mozambique, Rwanda, South Africa, Uganda, Guyana, and Haiti. In 2003, the program would expand to Namibia, Nigeria, Tanzania, and Zambia. White House officials said those countries were targeted because they have widespread AIDS problems and the infrastructure to accommodate U.S. efforts — "the best bang for the buck," as one White House official put it.

Once all 12 African nations are brought into the program, the new effort will reach as many as 1 million women a year and cut mother-to-child transmission of the AIDS virus by up to 40 percent, the White House said.

U.S. approves plan to patrol jungle with Philippine forces

By Pauline Jelinek
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon has approved a plan to send Americans on jungle patrol with Philippine soldiers who are fighting Islamic rebels, Defense officials said Wednesday.

While agreeing to the expansion of a counter-terror training program, the military rejected the idea of letting Americans stay beyond July, senior officials told the Associated Press on the condition of anonymity.

The Pentagon is notifying Congress and working out details with the Philippine government, which is expected to give its approval, two Defense officials said.

The expanded program could put U.S. military advisers and trainers at greater risk of being drawn into combat, a prospect that could bring political problems for the Philippine government because national law prohibits foreigners from engaging in combat there.

It also has raised concern that Americans might be drawn into deeper involvement. The U.S. role in the Vietnam War also started with advisers.

Under an agreement between the two governments early this year, some 1,200 Americans are to be in the Philippines through July 31 to train, advise, and equip local forces fighting the guerrillas.

Outside of Afghanistan, it is the largest U.S. military deployment in the war against terrorism.

On Monday, U.S. Marines and Filipino soldiers guarding a road construction site exchanged heavy gunfire with 10 suspected rebels on Basilan — the first time Americans had seen hostile action in the five months since they arrived.

The training so far has been confined to the battalion level — that is, the Americans work at headquarters and remain behind when Filipinos patrol.

Under the new plan, U.S. troops would advise and train some 20 to 25 Filipino units at the smaller, company level, and they be allowed on patrol, Pentagon officials said.

But rather than extend the program beyond the approved six months — as has been debated in recent weeks — the Pentagon will begin drawing down U.S. troops at the originally planned time, the officials said.

Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld had for weeks been studying recommendations by commanders that said moving with the smaller units would allow Americans to give better advice. It would let them observe Filipinos in field situations and advise them on the spot.

The Americans include 160 military advisers on the island of Basilan, where the rebels have been based. There also are trainers, several hundred intelligence and logistical support personnel, and approximately 300 Navy engineers who are improving an airplane runway, a causeway, and other infrastructure.

Rumsfeld approved the plan to expand the program in recent days, and President Bush agreed, officials said Wednesday.

The situation in the Philippines also has changed in that the rebels no longer are holding missionaries Gracia and Martin Burnham of Kansas. A rescue attempt by Filipino troops freed Gracia Burnham but left her husband and Filipino nurse Ediborah Yap dead.

Pentagon spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Jeff Davis declined to comment on any new plans for the counter-terrorism program but acknowledged that officials are working "to refashion" it.

"Working with our Philippine allies, we are breaking the vicious cycle of terrorist violence that has been causing poverty and lack of government services, which in turn gives terrorists more fertile ground," he said.

The number of terrorists on Basilan has been cut by hundreds, some displaced residents have begun returning home, and U.S. humanitarian assistance has won public support for the fight against rebels, Davis said.

"On the other side of the coin ... the job is not finished," he said.

Clergy already held to a higher standard

I am writing in regard to the DI editorial, "A divine right to commit a wrong," which ran on June 13.

Three problems occur within your paper's editorial. First, the paper makes the claim that the church's refusal to follow the recent craze of law enforcement and other bodies for "freebie" for criminals. This policy toward allegations that have not been substantiated — not proven matters — is designed to ensure the rights of the accused are not violated, a principle that holds a high place in our legal system. It is not an endorsement of any wrong; it simply leaves the flexibility — individuals CAN be removed for one allegation of an offense if supervisors deem it advisable — that situations can be dealt with as they warrant without bringing zero-tolerance mechanisms grinding into action.

Second, your paper makes the factually erroneous claim that teachers, coaches, and recording artists "are not allowed one momentary lapse," implying that abuse policies are in place in each of these professions. As a teacher, I am aware of many schools that do not have abuse policies. We are required to report suspected sexual abuse by parents, but we are not held to similar standards. Similarly, I was unable to find any abuse policy listed for the faculty here at the UI in the faculty handbook, even though several departments do work with minors. The closest the UI comes is sexual harassment among adults. The university (UI Operations Manual, Chapter 4.1, section "d") provides that "isolated" or "inadvertent" sexual offenses shall not necessarily mandate the termination of employees.

Finally, the editorial asks why clergy members should be held to different standards from those of the community at large. Fair enough. The clergy now have standards in place, putting them ahead of the game.

Now, how about the UI?

Privacy versus security: a non-issue

One of the cable networks recently asked viewers if they would be willing to surrender a little privacy for the sake of greater security. The question presents a false choice.

First, privacy is a broad term with many meanings. Allowing a dog to sniff my suitcase at an airport is one thing; reading my mail or tapping my phone is quite another. It seems as if there is a public-relations move underway to minimize our privacy rights. The public discourse focuses on inconveniences such as lines at the airport, while the policy changes run much deeper.

Second, the question assumes that the two aims are mutually exclusive. They are not. There are many ways to improve our intelligence-handling without surrendering privacy. Most importantly, privacy versus security is a false choice because privacy rights are a security concern. Some say that those who are concerned about privacy must have something to hide. This betrays an ignorance of the role privacy plays in a democracy. Restraints to protect citizens from government intrusions are a shield against tyranny. This was our Founding Fathers' greatest concern in drafting the Bill of Rights. It should remain so for us as well. When we understand that privacy is a safeguard against tyranny, a fair restatement of the cable-news question is this: "Would you be willing to risk greater tyranny at home in exchange for the uncertain prospect of reducing the risk of terror from abroad?" Most Americans would say no.

Bob Barr's legal maneuvering is the pinnacle of hypocrisy

Is there no decency in the Democratic Party? Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga., seems to think not, as he is suing former President Bill Clinton, Democratic analyst James Carville, and Hustler's Larry Flynt for "emotional distress" he suffered during the Clinton impeachment. What kind of world are we living in when a man cannot even attempt to run a successful president out of office without being pestered?

According to Barr, the three defendants were part of a conspiracy aimed at running his name into the ground. This irreverent behavior was unacceptable to the congressman and required legal action. How unacceptable? Apparently, $30 million unacceptable, not to mention attorney's fees and other costs. One does wonder, however, whether Ken Starr would do the case for free, for the sake of integrity of course.

Clearly, the humor in this lawsuit is enough to make Barr's lawsuit for "emotional distress" would make a good joke, were he not completely serious.

Strom Thurmond laugh. It is asinine for Barr to sue Clinton, Carville, and Flynt for playing the same game he was. He and other GOP leaders were the catalysts of the biggest waste of taxpayer money in the history of the United States, and now he feels like he deserves his piece of the pie. Since when were Republicans in favor of frivolous lawsuits, especially in regard to "emotional distress"? Bob, does that not sound like a liberal term?

Clinton, Carville, and Flynt have all shaken their heads at Barr's publicity stunt. Carville notes Barr's primary race against fellow GOP candidate John Linder. The race is tight, and Barr will do anything he can to get more conservative support.

Obviously, no one's personal life should be exposed by one's enemies for public scrutiny. Barr is right on that account, but he should practice what he preaches. Barr and his colleagues had no qualms investigating a stained dress or the many uses of a cigar in order to cripple the Democratic Party. As a result, calling foul for alleged emotional trauma will get no sympathy here.

It seems that there is only one viable counteraction that Clinton can take. He must sue every Republican representative who voted for impeachment. This way he can ensure that his emotional well-being will not be disturbed. After all, if we allow dirty tricks to infiltrate American politics, it will ruin the integrity we have all come to associate our leaders with.

Why can't we decide when our lives are over?

The sight of my old friend Ruth Nash being pulled out of the Mississippi River near Dubuque after almost drowning must have been a hilarious sight.

I realize this sounds a bit morbid, so let me explain further.

Picture an 80-year-old woman cursing the River Patrol as the officers dragged her from the turbulent muddy waters for not letting her drown. Those damn rescue workers just got in the way of a nearly successful suicide attempt, her second one that month.

I guess that's still pretty morbid, but Ruth's reasons for her suicide attempts seemed reasonable at the time — she was certain she had Alzheimer's disease.

Yes, that dreaded mind-destroying illness that brings nothing but sadness, frustration, hopelessness, and the "Star Wars" missile-defense plan.

It is a fate worse than death for the sufferer and their friends and family. I know that sounds clichéd, but picture yourself slowly losing your mind until you recognize no one you see, staring at a closed door unable to figure out how to turn the doorknob to go through it.

No thanks. I'd take a .223 slug between the eyes first.

That was Ruth's attitude as well, but it's illegal to end your own life.

In April, she threw herself a farewell party. There were old friends, family members, good food, and music.

Picture Bilbo Baggins' goodbye party from Lord of the Rings, only replace the magical ring that turns the guest of honor invisible with a bottle of sleeping pills. There weren't enough in the bottle, and one of party guests snatched to the police. Paramedics stormed her home and dragged her to the hospital. She recovered and was immediately arrested.

The sight of her in court before a judge in one of those orange jump suits puts a big grin on my face. Fiction has nothing on reality when it comes to humor.

John Molseed

FIVE ROUNDS RAPID

In court, Ruth was asked to voluntarily submit to three weeks of group therapy. She agreed, thinking it was better than jail or commitment to a mental institution. She was wrong.

"It was worse than death," she said.

Ruth was confined with mentally ill patients, her visitors were screened, flowers in a glass vase were forbidden. Doctors refused to accept her assertion she wasn't depressed. She was forced to endure three weeks of group therapy — three weeks of hearing people whine and moan about their lives. This is supposed to help someone who is suicidal. That kind of torment will drive a well-adjusted and healthy individual over the edge.

She endured the weeks like a junkie endures rehab, and afterwards, she took a cab to a restaurant near the Mississippi. She trekked across six lanes of free-way traffic, placed her coat on a rock on the bank, and walked into the river.

One problem with her plan — even at 80, she's still a good swimmer. Eventually, she began swallowing water.

That's when the River Patrol came upon her, and she was not happy. I seriously wish I could have seen that.

So it was back to the hospital, back to therapy, back to a cruel, prolonged death sentence.

It was shortly after this incident I saw her during a visit to Dubuque. I was attending an art fair.

For some people, Ruth Nash is the Dubuque art community. (Yes, Dubuque has an art community. I was surprised when I learned that, too.) She has served as an inspiration for many local artists and helped many of them find their voice and a forum for expression.

Her absence from the event was conspicuous, to say the least. I finally saw her in the afternoon, wearing a hospital band around her wrist. She was on a temporary pass to attend the event, like a prisoner on a day-pass.

"I'm a crook," she said while showing off her bracelet.

Ruth, however, got the reprieve of her life, literally. Doctors told her shortly after that incident she does not have Alzheimer's and pointed to her suicide attempts as proof. The suicide attempts took "administrative ability," they said.

Imagine, however, if it had been Alzheimer's. If she could have been open about her decision, maybe a medical professional would have given her the diagnosis before her attempts. Society's taboo on the right to die could have killed her.

My dad had to put his dog Tonka to sleep this year (I loved that dog). Is it wrong to do for yourself what pet-owners do for their suffering animals?

When facing a disease like Alzheimer's or other fatal debilitating diseases, we should have an option other than wasting away slowly. It's time we were allowed to die like dogs.

Catching the uncatchable

By Aryn Henning
The Daily Iowan

Author Sands Hall once wanted to play guitar and follow in the footsteps of Joni Mitchell. She dabbled with singing/songwriting for awhile, gained extensive experience in acting, and landed a recurring role on "Guiding Light." She then chose writing as the next art form to explore and left behind the demanding life of Hollywood.

Hall will read from her debut novel, Catching Heaven, a story about two sisters trying to overcome their sibling rivalry, today at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

The story of Maud and Lizzie began with Hall's need to express the anguish of a Hollywood actress. Her life before venturing from Los Angeles to the Iowa Writers' Workshop in 1989 saw some small roles in movies, television, and theater, but mainly it featured rejections and waitressing. Encouraged by her father, novelist Oakley Hall, an alum of the Writers' Workshop, she applied, looking for a way to change her life.

She had to sit herself down on her couch before opening the workshop's letter of response. Her heart thudding, she said, she slit the envelope, not expecting anything but hoping she'd get what she thought she deserved.

The letter of acceptance shocked and thrilled her, and Hall prepared to leave the smog of Los Angeles and venture into the "blinding green" of Iowa.

"When I first got here, I looked around and asked, 'Do you have to water everyday?'" she said, laughing.

In the workshop, Hall, who now returns to Iowa City every June to teach in the Iowa Summer Writing Festival, said she began to really learn how to write for the first time in her life. Quietly, she started a novel. The former actress took a more subdued approach to her creative outlets and didn't talk to anyone about her developing character, Maud, who, much like Hall, left LA to escape the brutal life of acting and lack of acceptance. Few knew she was working on a book that would later become the national best-seller and award-winning Catching Heaven.

The novel follows the lives of three characters: Maud, Lizzie, and Jake, in the town of Marengo, N.M. Maud leaves LA spontaneously one day, running from a cheesy commercial audition to a life she thinks will be better and less lonely — her sister's life. Lizzie, a painter, also attempted an escape, to Paris, but hers was halted by motherhood. Jake, the father of Lizzie's youngest child, Theo, is a singer/songwriter who has returned from Nashville to the life he had tried desperately to leave behind.

Catching Heaven illustrates the dichotomy between two women, equally strong and independent, but one has set roots in a specific place because of children, and the other has a seemingly glamorous life free of restraints.

In Catching Heaven, Hall said, she wanted to discuss art, the different forms it can take, and the effect it can leave on our lives. Much of Maud's anguish was a result of her not having children. But also, Maud was part of an art form that was completely transient, Hall said. Maud was a live performer, and this self-expression is impossible to entirely capture in a permanent manner. You have only the moment, then it's gone. Lizzie's art was more tangible, even if her paintings were being sold as greeting cards. But how did Jake fit into this permanent/non-permanent dichotomy of art?

"Music can be captured through a recording in a manner that live performance cannot," Hall said. "Although Jake was leaving behind recorded music, he was also performing live."

Jake's musical talents bridged the gap between the transient and the tangible art.

While her three characters explore separate art forms, Hall said, she realizes people can do more than one thing with their lives. For her, it's been acting, singing, and now writing. Although the process of writing Catching Heaven took almost a decade — the book she started in the workshop was published in August 2000 — it has resulted in an engaging piece of art that will live long beyond her life.

On the wings of the Doves

By Dan Maloney
The Daily Iowan

The English seem to have a good sense of what rock 'n' roll is all about. They've been exporting bands such as the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, and most recently Radiohead, while nowadays American music is suffering through a nu-metal phase that the Brits might think hilarious.

One English export that follows the line of other Brit pop artists (Travis, Coldplay) is Manchester's Doves with a new release, the last broadcast, a follow-up to its ambitious Lost Souls. Broadcast picks off where Lost Souls left off; however, where the latter was somber and melancholy, broadcast is reciprocally uplifting with foreshadowing glimpses of hope.

The opening track begins with a brief wall of sound intro that launches into "words," led with a poppy synth beat and somber vocals from frontman Jimi Goodwin. It recalls work from the British shoe-gazer movement, with bands such as Ride and Slowdive.

"There goes the fear" is rightfully selected as a single for its undeniably catchy hooks and hum-able chorus. The tune could easily surface on Top-40 radio in the United States if programming directors get smart.

"M62 song," a reworking of King Crimson's "Moonchild," is hauntingly bleak and subtly beautiful with a lush acoustic guitar that draws its influence from the later Beatles' ballads. To add to the mysterious feel of the song, it was recorded at the M62 flyover in Manchester.

Broadcast peaks with tracks "where we're coming from" and "N.Y." "Where we're coming from" sets up an atmospheric noiscape that flows into "N.Y." It bravely opens with blisteringly distorted guitars that quickly are exchanged for acoustic guitars. Goodwin's voice rises and collapses like a domino set, and the song trails off whimsically like tracks off Radiohead's Kid A.

A second choice for a single would be "pounding," a track that

the last broadcast

lives up to its title with a pulsating, bouncy beat that forges throughout the whole song. The tune could be the feel-good Brit-pop club single of the summer, and it even has a guitar solo similar to the style of Edge from U2.

The album closes with "caught by the river," an acoustic ballad that could be a long-lost track off Radiohead's The Bends. The track flows with a catchy chorus that sways like a waltz beat. Goodwin holds his own by closing an album that lives up to the success of Lost Souls.

It seems painfully pathetic to have to look across the sea to the English for some decent rock music. Great American music still exists, but, unlike English music, it lives beyond the mainstream music belt line. The Doves remains at the forefront of English mainstream music and continue to strengthen the tradition of great British rock.

Domesticity maven Martha Stewart, right, leaves a media industry conference in New York on Wednesday, where she made her first public appearance since the ImClone insider-trading scandal broke last week. Stewart said she had no inside knowledge before she sold her holdings in the company.

Stewart says she 'had no insider information'

By Seth Sutel
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In her first public appearance since the ImClone insider-trading scandal broke, Martha Stewart told Wall Street analysts Wednesday that there was nothing improper about her dumping company stock just before it plunged on bad news from the government.

At the start of an hour-long presentation at an industry conference, Stewart briefly addressed her December 2001 sale of nearly 4,000 ImClone shares. The sale came a day before federal regulators said they would not consider the biotech company's new cancer drug, which sent ImClone plummeting.

"I had no insider information," said Stewart, a friend of the company's former chief executive who is now facing insider-trading charges. "The sale was based on information available to the public that day."

"These are the essential facts, and I'm sure that time will bear them out," she said, adding that she would not comment further on the topic.

Executives of Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia Inc. then announced an upbeat earnings forecast. Shares in the company rose $2, or 14 percent, to $16.40 in afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The stock has been pum-

It has been one week of panic, but there is tremendous durability of the brand.

— Doug Arthur,
Morgan Stanley analyst

meled since June 6, when congressional investigators said they were looking into Stewart's sale of ImClone stock.

But an analyst who attended the Mid-Year Media Review said he would not change his "buy" rating on the company because of questions surrounding the stock sale.

"It has been one week of panic, but there is tremendous durability of the brand," said Doug Arthur of Morgan Stanley.

Congressional investigators are trying to determine whether Stewart had prearranged with her broker, Peter Bacanovic at Merrill Lynch, in late November 2001 to sell her remaining ImClone shares if they fell below $60, or after Dec. 10, as the Wall Street Journal reported her broker saying.

Also under investigation is whether Stewart received inside information from Sam Waksal, the former ImClone CEO, or anyone else before she sold her stock Dec. 27.

Waksal was arrested last week on charges of insider trading for allegedly trying to sell his stock and tipping off family members after learning of the government's decision against the company's highly touted cancer drug Erbitux.

In a statement Tuesday, Stewart said she had spoken with the Securities and Exchange Commission and the U.S. Attorney's office and has cooperated with the House committee that is investigating the ImClone case.

Stewart's attorney has provided documents requested by the committee, including a copy of her cell-phone records from Dec. 22 through Jan. 6.

Grand jury: Colorado fire was deliberately set

By Jennifer Hamilton
Associated Press

DENVER — A federal grand jury charged a veteran U.S. Forest Service worker Wednesday with intentionally setting the largest wildfire in Colorado history, saying she maliciously sent flames racing through the bone-dry timber southwest of Denver.

Terry Barton, 38, was charged with setting fire to timber in a national forest, damaging federal property, injuring a firefighter, and using fire to commit a felony. If convicted of all counts, she could face up to 65 years in prison and a $1 million fine.

"These counts reflect the government's contention that the Hayman fire was deliberately set," U.S. Attorney John Suthers said. "Beyond that, we cannot and will not go into specifics regarding the defendant's intent or motive."

Barton was being held without bail pending a bond hearing today in U.S. District Court. Her attorney, Rick Williamson, declined to comment.

The arrest of the 18-year Forest Service employee over the weekend stunned her colleagues and angered the public. Since the fire began June 8, it has grown to 135,000 acres, destroyed 25 homes, and forced the evacuation of 7,500 people. It is far from being contained, and officials warn it could smolder until the first snows arrive this fall.

Investigators contend that the fire was set and staged to look like an escaped campfire. They say Barton willfully set fire to timber, underbrush, grass, and other inflammable material.

According to authorities, Barton initially told investigators she was patrolling the Pike National Forest approximately 40 miles southwest of Denver when she smelled smoke and discovered the fire.

After she was confronted with contradictory evidence a week later, Barton told investigators she was burning a letter from her estranged husband in a campfire ring, and the fire accidentally got out of control. She said she tried unsuccessfully fully to douse it.

On Monday, a criminal complaint against Barton charged her with setting fire to timber in a national forest, damaging federal property, and lying to federal investigators.

The charge of lying was dropped in Wednesday's indictment, but Suthers wouldn't say why.

He identified the injured firefighter as Forest Service worker Ryan Beyer, who broke his arm. The date of his injury was not released.

Study says UI students smoking far less in 2001

the University of Minnesota does not have a smoke-free housing option for its students.

"One of the most effective things you can do to prevent smoking is to have smoke-free environments, such as restaurants and work places," said Eileen Fisher, an associate research scientist in the UI College of Public Health and the former chairwoman of the Johnson County Tobacco-Free Coalition.

But some university officials still say the overall decrease cannot be fully attributed to smoke-free dorms; they cite a combination of factors, such as increased education on health risks, tobacco-cessation services, and on-campus marketing campaigns.

"It's pretty surprising because it's such a simple thing," Fisher said. "It doesn't cost any money to have smoke-free dorms."

By forcing students to go outside, the ban "reduces peer pressure ... because most residents would be less prone to smoke inside," she said.

The best way to curb students' smoking, she said, would be to increase the price of cigarettes.

Second bomber hits Jerusalem

revealing his plan for a future Palestinian state. Administration officials said an announcement at this sensitive time would be unlikely to have a positive effect. Aides said the announcement may be delayed until next week.

"I believe this great country, if we're steadfast and strong, we stand to our principles and stick to our guns, that we can help achieve peace," Bush said Wednesday night at a Republican fund-raiser.

A trip to the Middle East next week by Secretary of State Colin Powell also was put on hold, though it remained under consideration. Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon adamantly opposes any form of Palestinian statehood at this time, and he blames Arafat for failing to stop the attacks.

Arafat was expected to call for a halt to attacks against Israeli civilians in a speech today. An advance copy of the speech set for Palestinian TV, obtained by the Associated Press, urges an end to the attacks because "these operations have given the Israeli government the excuse to reoccupy our land, killing hundreds of our innocent people and destroying all that we have built in the last eight years."

In one of his strongest condemnations ever, Pope John Paul II decried Tuesday's attack, saying "those who plot and plan such barbarous attacks will have to answer before God."

More than 50 prominent Palestinians signed a full-page newspaper ad in al Quds urging groups behind deadly assaults on Israeli civilians to "stop sending our young people to carry out such attacks."

On Wednesday, the bomber emerged from a red Audi and dashed toward a concrete bus stop shelter, which is also used as a hitchhiking post. The intersection has been targeted by assailants in the past and was heavily guarded.

But the attacker made it past a pair of border policemen.

"The police chased him to try to stop him, and when he got to the [bus stop], he blew up a large device," said Jerusalem Police Chief Mickey Levy.

One policeman chasing the bomber was badly hurt, Levy said. More than 35 people were wounded, many of them seriously.

Body parts and shattered glass littered the street, and religious volunteers propped a ladder against a stone wall and picked through the shrubbery for bits of human remains.

An overturned baby carriage was covered with black plastic by rescue workers. Government spokesman Danny Seaman said a baby wasn't among the dead, but one had been rushed to a hospital.

The newspaper ad, whose signers included legislator Hanan Ashrawi and the Palestinians' senior Jerusalem official, Sari Nusseibeh, said: "We see no results in such attacks but a deepening of the hatred between both peoples and a deepening of the gap between us."

The ad urged all Palestinians who support such a call to sign on. Polls consistently have found the majority of Palestinians support suicide bombings but less strongly since Israel's recent six-week military campaign in the West Bank.

That shift hasn't gone unnoticed.

"I have begun to discern developments on the Palestinian side that they are, for the first time, doing some soul-searching about. 'What have we done? What have we achieved?'" Israeli Defense Minister Binyamin Ben-Eliezer told Jewish delegates to an annual Zionist Congress in Jerusalem.

Editor's note — This story was submitted to Israeli military censors as required by the government; deletions were made.

tumors is even higher than previously noted.

The analysis is the first major examination of the accumulated research on tobacco smoke and cancer since 1986. A full report of the findings will be published later this year.

The scientists combined the results of more than 3,000 studies involving millions of people, which allowed them to draw conclusions not possible in smaller studies.

"We are still learning about just how damaging cigarette smoking is," said the panel's chairman, Dr. Jonathan Samet, the head of epidemiology at the Johns Hopkins School of Public Health. "Only now are we beginning to see the full picture of what happens when a generation begins to smoke at an early age, as youth do, and then smoke across their whole lifetime. Before, we only had snapshots." "The full picture is more disturbing than what we saw when we only had the smaller pieces," he said.

There are approximately 1.2 billion smokers worldwide, half of whom will die prematurely from cancer, heart disease, emphysema, or other smoking-related diseases, research has shown.

The best way to prevent those deaths is to get smokers to quit, the scientists said.

"Our group concluded that any possible public-health gains from changes in cigarette characteristics or composition would be minimal by comparison. Changes in cigarettes are not the way to prevent cancer," Samet said.

The 29 experts from 12 countries found that in types of cancer already linked to smoking, the risk is even higher than previously believed.

"For example, for tumors of the bladder and the renal pelvis, previously we thought the elevated risk was maybe three to four times that of a nonsmoker. Today, it looks like the risk is elevated five to six times," said Dr. Paul Kleihues, the director of the U.N. cancer-research agency.

Two cancer types under suspicion were cleared — those of the breast and endometrium, or lining of the womb. Prostate cancer has been less-studied, but the group did not believe it is caused by smoking.

Types of cancer newly declared to be caused by smoking were cancers of the stomach, liver, cervix, uterus, kidney, nasal sinus, and myeloid leukemia.

"It does look as if it's the cancers that are principally caused by hormones that are not affected by smoking. Most of the other cancers throughout the body are induced by exposure to chemicals, often environmental ones," said Sir Richard Doll, an Oxford University professor who was on the panel.

"Practically all the cancers of tissues that are exposed to the environment in one way or another are affected by the chemicals distributed throughout the body when you inhale tobacco smoke," Doll said.

Cancers already identified as being caused by smoking include lung, oral cavity, gullet, larynx, pharynx, pancreas, and bladder.

The panel also analyzed 20 or 30 years of research on cancer and secondhand smoke and concluded secondhand tobacco smoke increases the risk of lung cancer by 20 percent.

While some national governments have concluded secondhand smoke causes cancer, this is the first time the U.N. cancer agency — which has strict criteria for evaluating evidence — or any organization with a global sweep has reached this conclusion.

Afghan grand council adjourns amid grumbles

By Kathy Gannon
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Afghanistan's grand council adjourned Wednesday after swearing in Hamid Karzai as president and approving a new government to begin the long process of rebuilding a nation shattered after 23 years of war.

However, many of the 1,650 delegates complained that the nine-day council, or loya jirga, failed to dislodge the powerful regional warlords and had left key posts such as defense in the hands of an ethnic Tajik clique opposed by the country's dominant Pashtun community.

"Some of the Cabinet is good, some is not," delegate Mohammed Daoud said. "Warlords are still there."

Karzai, who was elected president June 13, told the delegates that he had worked hard to put together a Cabinet that was both qualified and representative of the country's ethnic mix. He encouraged delegates to "take weapons and fight me" if the government failed to keep its promises.

Karzai also declared that terrorists would not be allowed to operate again in Afghanistan and promised to "relieve Afghanistan of this pain."

He took his oath at the end of the session. His government will rule for 18 months until new elections. It will also appoint a commission to draft a new Constitution.

Six of the 13 Cabinet posts went to Pashtuns, who had complained of being marginalized since the collapse of the Taliban, who were mostly Pashtuns.

Many observers believe that no Afghan government can succeed unless it is accepted by the Pashtuns. Karzai, who led the former interim administration, is a Pashtun. But many Afghans believed Karzai's power was limited by an ethnic Tajik clique in his interim administration.

Karzai
Interim leader

Three posts went to ethnic Tajiks from the opposition Northern Alliance, which seized Kabul last year after the Taliban fled the city under relentless U.S. bombing.

However, the Tajiks held onto two of the most important ministries — foreign affairs and defense. Defense Minister Mohammed Fahim was also named one of three deputy presidents. Dr. Abdullah remains foreign minister.

Fahim was believed to have been backed by the United States, which wanted continuity in the powerful post as it seeks to build a national army capable of defending the country after the U.S.-led coalition withdraws.

In the outgoing interim administration, the Tajiks also held the interior ministry, which controls the police and is the most powerful post after defense. However, the outgoing minister, Yunus Qanooni, announced this week that he was ready to give up the job and refused Karzai's offer of the education ministry.

U.S. threatens to pull out of peacekeeping

By Edith M. Lederer
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — The United States made it clear Wednesday that it will not participate in U.N. peacekeeping operations unless the U.N. Security Council grants Americans immunity from prosecution by the world's first permanent war crimes tribunal.

With the International Criminal Court starting business on July 1, the United States moved on two fronts to get blanket protection for Americans taking part in U.N. peacekeeping missions and those serving in the NATO-led force in Bosnia.

"We think that can and should be possible," said U.S. Deputy Ambassador Richard Williamson. "We will not put American men or women under the reach of the International Criminal Court while serving in a United Nations peacekeeping operation."

But the U.S. initiative faces an uphill struggle because the new court has very wide support in the 15-member Security Council — including from Britain and France, which both have veto power. They are among six council nations that have ratified the treaty establishing the court. Six others have signed the treaty, negotiated in Rome in 1998, and support its principles.

Former President Bill Clinton signed the treaty, but the Senate never ratified it. In early May, the Bush administration announced it wants nothing to do with the treaty creating the court or the tribunal itself.

The campaign to create a permanent international criminal tribunal began after the Nuremberg and Tokyo trials for World War II's German and Japanese war criminals.

SPORTS BRIEFS

O'Brien's comeback over before it starts

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — For four events, Dan O'Brien showed flashes of the past, when he ruled the decathlon. Then, all of a sudden, O'Brien's body reminded him that he's 35 years old.

O'Brien's comeback was interrupted Wednesday when he dropped out of the decathlon at the U.S. Championships before completing the first day of competition.

In third place among the 16 competitors after the first four events of the two-day, 10-event decathlon, O'Brien skipped the 400-meters because his left foot had become too painful.

Though disappointed, he said he still hopes to be among the world's top decathletes by the time of the Athens Olympics in 2004.

"You've got to start somewhere. My journey is to get back to the Olympics, and the first step is the hardest," he said. "What does this tell me? It tells me I've got a long ways to go."

Garcia, Mickelson regroup before GHO

CROMWELL, Conn. — Sergio Garcia sized up the Greater Hartford Open in a hurry early Wednesday morning.

"You get here, and the fairways look real wide," Garcia said with Bethpage Black and Tiger Woods fresh in his mind.

After taking a break from golf Tuesday for a tennis date with girlfriend Martina Hingis, Garcia was on TPC at River Highlands at 6:45 a.m. for his pro-am round.

He struggled to a 2-over 72, joked with his playing partners, and wasted little time with the incessant waggles and regrips that drew the wrath of some U.S. Open fans.

"I need to work on it, but unfortunately I haven't had any time," Garcia said. "I need to take some time off and find something that feels comfortable.

Defending champion Phil Mickelson, second in the U.S. Open, is far more comfortable on the 6,820-yard River Highlands course than the 7,214-yard Bethpage layout.

"This is a great risk-reward course, especially the back nine. In the U.S. Open, you don't have that," said Mickelson, playing his final tournament before the British Open.

NHL elects four to Hall of Fame

Rod Langway had the shortest wait for this day, Bernie Federko didn't even know this was the day, and Clark Gillies and Roger Neilson had it circled on their calendars for other reasons.

Each was elected to the Hockey Hall of Fame on Wednesday.

Langway was a defensive defenseman who twice won the Norris Trophy as the league's top blue-liner.

He played 15 seasons, tallying only 51 goals, the last 11 years with the Washington Capitals after starting his career with the Montreal Canadiens.

Federko, 46, played 13 seasons with the St. Louis Blues, then his last with the Detroit Red Wings. He had four 100-point seasons.

Gillies, 48, was a member of the New York Islanders' four Stanley Cup championship teams from 1980-83.

Neilson was the only non-player honored Wednesday, starting a day that was already going to be memorable for the longtime vagabond coach.

Neilson, elected as a builder of hockey, was preparing for a charity roast in his honor later that evening in Toronto.

Castillo extends hit streak

MIAMI (AP) — Luis Castillo tied Rogers Hornsby's 80-year-old record for the longest hitting streak by a second baseman, going 2-4 to make it 33 games as the Florida Marlins beat the Cleveland Indians, 2-1, Wednesday night.

Castillo was 0-2 before beating out a dribbler to the pitcher in the sixth inning, then scored the tying run on Cliff Floyd's single. Castillo also had an RBI single in the seventh.

Julian Tavarez (5-3), who was with the Indians from 1993-96, pitched against them for the first time.

Phillies 4, White Sox 3

PHILADELPHIA — Pinch-hitter Jason Michaels' RBI single in the ninth inning led the Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-3 comeback victory over the Chicago White Sox on Wednesday night.

The Phillies scored three times in the ninth to snap a two-game losing streak. Chicago had won two straight.

With the Phillies down 3-1 in the ninth, Pat Burrell hit a one-out single off Keith Foulke.

Cardinals 6, Angels 2

ST. LOUIS — After they paid tribute to broadcaster Jack Buck, the Cardinals won their fifth-straight game behind two homers and four RBIs by Placido Polanco.

A day after his death, Buck was memorialized in a pregame ceremony. His closed casket will be at home plate today.

Polanco tied his career best for RBIs and had his first multihomer game to back Matt Morris (10-4), who allowed two runs on seven hits in seven innings.

Polanco homered off Aaron Sele (6-4) in the first to tie it at 1, hit a three-run homer — just his third this season — in the fifth for a 6-1 lead, and had an infield hit in the seventh.

Athletics 3, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — John Mabry's single in the 10th inning drove in Oakland's first run since Miguel Tejada's two-run homer in the first, and the Athletics' record in interleague play reached 10-1.

Oakland won for the 11th time in 12 games. The Athletics are 60-37 since interleague play began in 1997.

The Athletics hadn't gotten a hit off four Pittsburgh pitchers until Mabry's single off closer Mike Williams (1-2).

Four Oakland relievers shut out Pittsburgh over the final four innings, with Chad Bradford (3-1) working the ninth for the victory and Billy Koch finishing up for his 17th save.

Mets 4, Twins 2

NEW YORK — Al Leiter pitched into the eighth inning and surprisingly had two hits for the Mets.

Tony Tarasco had a pinch-hit, two-run homer in the eighth, and Mike Piazza added an RBI single as New York snapped Minnesota's three-game winning streak.

Leiter, one of the game's worst-hitting pitchers, went 2-3 with a key double to raise his career average to .095. He also scored a run.

Expos 6, Royals 3

MONTREAL — Tomo Ohka won his fourth-straight decision as the Expos tied a season-high with their sixth-straight victory.

Brad Wilkerson, Jose Vidro, and Vladimir Guerrero hit consecutive doubles off Mac Suzuki (0-2) in the first inning to start the Royals toward a sixth-straight loss, also matching a season high. Fernando Tatis added two RBIs for Montreal.

Braves 4, Tigers 1

ATLANTA — Kevin Millwood pitched shutout ball into the eighth inning for the Braves.

Chipper Jones had two doubles and an RBI, breaking out of a 1-13 skid, and Julio Franco and Gary Sheffield hit consecutive homers in the eighth. Andrew Jones also doubled home a run as the Braves beat Mike Matroth (1-1).

Mariners 2, Reds 0

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bret Boone homered and made a great defensive play, and Seattle's Freddy Garcia won his sixth-straight start.

Garcia (10-4) gave up three hits in eight innings and retired the last 12 batters he faced. He also had two hits.

Legendary broadcaster Buck remembered

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Jack Buck, who in nearly five decades as a broadcaster became a St. Louis institution and one of the most recognizable voices in sports, died late Tuesday night.

"He had a great life," son and broadcaster Joe Buck said. "He didn't waste one minute of one day. He did everything he could. He packed two lifetimes into one lifetime. He went from poor to wealthy in his lifetime, yet he never changed."

"There only is and always will be just one Jack Buck," said former Cardinal Jack Clark. "He's a Hall of Fame announcer and a Hall of Fame person. He was in the game when it was at its purest. His calls of Stan Musial, [Bob] Gibson, Ozzie [Smith], and all the way up to Mark McGwire are classics. He was a class man and a class human being."

The Hall of Fame announcer underwent lung cancer surgery Dec. 5, 2001, then went back in Barnes-Jewish Hospital Jan. 3 to have an intestinal blockage surgically removed. He never left the hospital. He was 77.

On May 16, Buck underwent another operation to eradicate a series of infections, including pneumonia, that kept recurring, and he was placed on kidney dialysis. Joe Buck said his father died at 11:08 p.m., with his family by his side.

"He continued to fight to his last breath," Joe Buck said. "He made us proud every day. He battled for his life. He did it with dignity and with pride."

Jack Buck started calling Cardinals games on radio in 1954, teaming first with Harry Caray. Nationally, Buck called everything from Super Bowls to the World Series to pro bowling for CBS, ABC, and NBC.

"I wouldn't change a thing about my life," he wrote in a 1997 autobiography. "My childhood dreams came true."

Buck's gravelly voice described to a national radio audience the indescribable end to Game 1 of the 1988 World Series.

"I don't believe what I just saw!" he yelled after Los Angeles outfielder Kirk Gibson, barely able to walk, hit a two-run game-winning homer off Oakland's Dennis Eckersley, the best reliever in baseball at the time.

Buck was also behind the microphone for the first telecast of the American Football League and the NFL championship "Ice Bowl" in 1967.

But in St. Louis and throughout the Midwest, it was Buck's calls of Cardinals games that made him a beloved figure. With each final out of a Cardinals victory, he wrapped things up with his tidy, "That's a winner."

It was Buck who told Cardinals fans to "Go crazy, folks, go crazy!" when Smith homered — his first ever left-handed — to win Game 5 of the 1985 NL Championship Series.

Buck chose to pause — not speak — when slugger Mark McGwire tied Roger Maris' single-season home run record in 1998. Then, he said, "Pardon me for a moment while I stand and applaud."

John Francis Buck was born on Aug. 21, 1924, in Holyoke, Mass. He left home as a teenager to work as a deck hand on the iron-ore boats of the Great Lakes and was drafted into the Army at 19.

Americans confident before facing Germany

Cup in 1930.

"I want to beat them," Donovan said. "I want to be able to tell them we're a good team."

The Germans are big, physical, and relentless. They've won 51 World Cup games to six for the United States. But they no longer intimidate the Americans, whose belief in themselves reached a new high following Monday's 2-0 win over Mexico.

"They are twice my weight," said Beasley, listed at 126 pounds, the lightest player in the tournament. "I can be feisty. I can push with the best of them. I'll be an ant running around."

Since that loss to Germany in Paris four years ago, the teams have met three times, with the United States winning 3-0 in a 1999 exhibition game in Florida and winning 2-0 later that year in the FIFA Confederations Cup in Mexico.

In March, Germany pounded the Americans, winning 4-2 in Rostock as Clint Mathis scored both U.S. goals.

"We got beat up in Germany a couple of months ago," said Kasey Keller, who played in goal that night. "They took it to us. We can't let that happen."

The Americans are very familiar with the foe they will face in Ulsan, on the southeast coast of South Korea. Nine of the 23 U.S. players have spent time with German teams.

While the Americans are speedier, Keller and his teammates think the key to stopping their bigger opponents is to mark them tightly and match them push for push, shirt grab for shirt grab, especially on corner kicks and free kicks.

"We shut that down, I think they'll have trouble scoring a creative goal against us," Donovan said.

Germany is a soccer insider, advancing to the quarterfinals or semifinals of five-straight World Cups but losing in its last two quarterfinal games.

Miroslav Klose, tied for the World Cup scoring lead with five goals, and Carsten Jancker have been a potent force, but the scoring has trailed off since the opening 8-0 rout of Saudi Arabia. Germany needed an 88th-minute goal from Oliver Neuville to beat Paraguay in the second round.

A loss would mark a low point for the Germans, who never have been knocked out of the World Cup this early by a non-European nation.

"We must not make the same mistake we did in 1994 and 1998, when we played Bulgaria and Croatia, and everyone thought the semifinals were within reach," goalkeeper Oliver Kahn said.

"They will be a very unpleasant rival. They fight a lot, like us, and they are very patriotic guys who give everything for their country. We have to be very careful."

HAWKEYE BRIEF

Long named assistant women's swimming coach

Former Hawkeye swimming standout Marc Long has been named assistant women's swimming coach. Prior to joining the Iowa women's swimming coaching staff, Long served as assistant men's swimming coach from 1998-01. He has also served as head coach of the Iowa City Eels Swim Club. During his coaching tenure, Long has helped produce numerous state champions, record holders, and NCAA national qualifiers.

As a Hawkeye swimmer, Long was a two-time Big Ten champion and NCAA finalist in the 100-yard butterfly. He was also a member of the 1988 conference champion and NCAA finalist 100-yard freestyle relay team. Long was a two-time first team All-Big Ten selection and a six-time All-American.

Long earned his bachelor's degree in sports management from Iowa in 1990.

talent and court vision in his PTL debut on Monday. Horner had 14 points and seven assists in the 100-98 win over HawksNestOnline.com.

Jeff Horner was surprised at the turnout at the game on Monday, saying it made him a little more nervous. Overall, he likes the league and is having a lot of fun.

This winter, he expects to bring leadership to the Hawkeyes. "Even though I'm going to be a freshman, it's a position I'm comfortable with and have had experience in," he said.

Future teammate Brody Boyd said he is looking forward to having a true point guard on the team. "Jeff's a phenomenal player. He does all the things a point guard is supposed to do," Boyd said.

Horner's main goal for the season is to improve as much as he can and hopefully crack the starting lineup. But he will do anything to help the team be successful as it tries to win a Big Ten championship.

He is also looking forward to the intense competition level this winter. "This is the Big Ten; it's one of the highest levels of competition you're going to find in the nation. I've been waiting for this for a long time," Horner said.

He has already been enjoying living independently in Iowa City for about two weeks. He is also eager to meet new people and adjust to college life. Speaking like a true college freshman, he said, "The best thing so far is being on my own and away from my parents."

THE HITS JUST KEEP ON COMIN': Castillo extends streak to 33, Page 9.

Charles Bennett/Associated Press

Rangers batter Rafael Palmeiro is welcomed home after his fifth-inning solo home run against the Cubs on Wednesday.

Rangers blast Cubs' bullpen in win

CHICAGO (AP) — Cubs reliever Jeff Fassero blamed his sweaty hand for making him lose his grip on the ball and the game.

Fassero threw a wild pitch with the bases loaded to let the go-ahead run score, and the Texas Rangers won for the first time in extra-innings this season, beating Chicago, 7-4, in 10 innings Wednesday.

With one out in the 10th, Fassero (1-5) was ahead of Ryan Ludwick 0-2. But on a warm and sticky day at Wrigley Field, Fassero failed to properly wipe his left hand of sweat before the next pitch, and he threw it to the backstop on the fly.

"I didn't have my hands dried up," said Fassero, who tried to throw a splitter. "I squeezed it, let it go, and it slipped out. It's happened before. It depends on the humidity."

Ludwick, who was making his first career pinch-hitting appearance, got another splitter and drove it to center for a two-run single.

The wild pitch "took a lot of pressure off me to get the lead run scored," Ludwick said. "I took it from there. I was sitting on the split, and he threw the split, and I poked it up the middle."

The Rangers were 0-7 in extra-inning games before Wednesday.

Rafael Palmeiro and Michael Young hit solo home runs for the Rangers, who had lost 17 of 21 on the road.

Hideki Irabu (3-6) pitched one inning for the win, and Francisco Cordero pitched the 10th for his first major-league save.

Sammy Sosa hit his major-league leading 26th homer for the Cubs, who got five innings out of starter Mark Prior in damp, 82-degree heat.

Prior threw 28 pitches and walked in a run in the first.

Sosa's two-out homer to right off Dave Burba tied it in the bottom of the first, and Joe Girardi and Delino DeShields hit RBI doubles in the third to give the Cubs a 3-1 lead.

Michael Lamb hit a two-out RBI single in the fourth, and Palmeiro tied it in the fifth with his second homer in as many games, a pop-up to left that rode the breeze into the bleachers.

Prior was pulled after 107 pitches. He allowed three runs and six hits, walked four, and struck out seven.

"They were making him throw a lot of pitches, making him throw strikes," Cubs manager Don Baylor said. "They were trying to wear him down."

Young struck out twice against Prior, but he hit Joe Borowski's first pitch over the wall in left to lead off the sixth.

Sets up elimination game rematch with in-state rival Tigers

By Doug Alden
 Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Trey Dyson hit two two-run homers, and South Carolina stayed alive in the College World Series with a 12-4 victory over Clemson on Wednesday night.

Landon Powell and Steve Thomas added solo homers for the Gamecocks (56-17), who will play their in-state rivals one more time Friday, with the winner advancing to Saturday's championship game.

Matt Campbell (4-2) shut out the Tigers over the final 5 1/3 innings and struck out a career-high eight.

The Gamecocks outhit the Tigers 15-9, and Clemson (54-16) left 12 men on, leaving the bases loaded three times. If Clemson had won, it would have ended South Carolina's season.

Zane Green hit the first pitch of the game for a homer, and Michael Johnson added a two-run homer in the third for Clemson.

Campbell came on in the fourth and walked the first batter he faced to load the bases, then got four-straight strikeouts. He held Clemson to two hits and walked two in his longest outing of the season.

Steve Reba (13-4) yielded Thomas' leadoff homer in sixth, which broke a 4-all tie and started a five-run inning. South Carolina added three more runs in the eighth, including Powell's 12th homer of the season, and improved to 2-3 against Clemson this season.

The intensity of the in-state rivalry was clear before the first inning was over. Both benches received warnings after pitches sailed over the heads of Clemson's Khalil Greene and South Carolina leadoff hitter Drew Meyer.

South Carolina tied the game at 4-all in the fourth when Brian Buscher reached on an error and Dyson hit a high fly that the 23 mph wind helped over the wall in left.

Then, after Thomas' homer into the upper level of the left-field bleachers gave the Gamecocks a 5-4 lead in the sixth, Dyson came up again with a man on and pulled a shot to right for his 18th homer of the year.

Horner beginning to emerge

By Kavitha Thimmaiah
 The Daily Iowan

Jeff Horner isn't intimidated by ex-Hawkeye Dean Oliver's superstar status.

"I'm not going to back down [guarding Dean] even if he scores 50 points," Horner said.

Former Mason City basketball stars and future and former Hawkeye point guards Horner and Oliver may face each other tonight in Prime Time League play.

Horner's Goodfellow Printing/Imprinted Sportswear squad is takes on Oliver's Iowa City Ready-Mix/Deli-Mart at 7:30 p.m.

Oliver's availability for the game is uncertain, said league founder Randy Larson, but he is in the area, on the Ready-Mix roster, and the possibility exists that he will play tonight.

"I worked out with Dean last week," Horner said. "He's been a tremendous help and a great role model."

Horner had no problems backing off of any of Oliver's records in high school, said his father and former coach, Bob Horner. Coach Horner said Jeff broke many records at Mason City, many held by Oliver, including career assists and points.

"He's like a quarterback," Bob Horner said. "He sees the floor really well. He sees plays two or three times ahead of time, and that's where his quickness comes from."

Bob Horner compared his son with Oliver in quickness but accredited Horner's vision to his speed as opposed to Oliver's natural talent.

The younger Horner led the state in scoring last year, averaging 31.2 points per game. The 2002 Mr. Basketball also became the first 4A player in the state to score more than 2,000 points.

U.S. prepares for historic World Cup match

SEOUL, South Korea — It could be a night to remember, the biggest in the history of American soccer — and perhaps the worst for a proud German team.

The United States plays Germany on Friday for a spot in the World Cup semifinals, a game that could mark a shift in global soccer power.

Or it could prove that the U.S. team, riding its best World Cup performance in 72 years, is a valiant overachiever still short of the sport's summit.

Whatever the case, most of the pressure is clearly on the Germans, a three-time champion at soccer's premier event and a team that has made a habit of beating up on the Americans.

"The team that has to win this game is Germany," U.S. coach Bruce Arena said Wednesday. "If we don't win this game, we'll be fine, and we'll go home, and everyone will be happy."

"I'm not sure how the German team will be doing if they lose to the U.S. They may not be heading straight back to Frankfurt after the game."

The Americans are a big underdog — 5-1, according to British bookmaker Ladbrokes. But don't tell that to Landon Donovan, a 20-year-old striker for the United States.

"I don't think we should lose to Germany," he said. "Why can't we beat them?"

Four years ago, Donovan watched the Americans' first-round World Cup game against the Germans when he was a high school sophomore in Redlands, Calif. The United States was fearful and got pushed around in a 2-0 loss.

Donovan's a pro now, and he has two goals in this World Cup, in which the Americans upset Portugal and Mexico, tied South Korea, and lost to Poland.

He and teammate DaMarcus Beasley, also 20, think this game against Germany will be different. With youthful spark and ambition, they think the tournament belongs to them, that the United States should advance to the semifinals for the first time since the first World
