Amtrak train derails near D.C.

By Susan Levine and Lindsey Layton
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — An Amtrak passenger train derailed near Kensington, Md., Monday, toppling six rail cars and tossing unsuspecting passengers from their seats and sleeper compartments. Of the 176 people on board, 97 were treated at hospitals. Officials said six of them were seriously injured.

Moments before the accident, the engineer told officials, he saw track that had heaved to the side, Amtrak sources said Monday night. Extreme heat can cause such a condition, which railroaders call "heat kink." The temperature in the region at the time of the accident was recorded at 96 degrees.

"We know it's possible with continuous-welded rail," said Carol Carmody, the vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, which dispatched investigators to the scene. She said heat can cause "a slight mishap or buckling." It could take months before the panel identifies the cause of the accident.

Investigators will look at other factors, such as whether maintenance work was performed on the track in the past few days, Carmody said.

Amtrak officials said the train, an eastbound Capitol Limited made up of two engines and 13 cars, was traveling from Chicago to Washington via Pittsburgh when the accident occurred about 2 p.m.

Passengers were gathering possessions for their arrival in Washington when the train began rocking, witnesses said, and the cars rolled onto their sides. Many passengers scrambled for the

County attorney calls for state to look into spending by mental-health agency

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

The county mental-health agency's rush to spend money before the end of the fiscal year "may have resulted in fiscal improprieties," Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said Monday as he announced that the state will investigate thousands of dollars in suspicious claims.

White called for a special state audit of the county's Mental Health/Developmental Disabilities Fund to "determine the amount and extent of impropriety" that apparently includes billing by contractors whose work was never finished. County officials will meet with state auditors to begin the investigation Thursday.

"I've never seen anything like this" in 25 years, County Auditor Tom Slockett said of the special audit.

The audit will clarify whether the services of 10 independent contractors were incorrectly billed for June 29 and 30, when they had actually done no work. The new fiscal year began July 1. The alleged improprieties also include billing records for at least one independent contractor that put her in two places simultaneously.

Although no one else is currently under suspicion, county officials will point state auditors toward approximately $82,260 in "similar" claims, Slockett said Monday.

Said White: "It appears that they were cooking the books."

Agency Director Elaine Sweet came under fire last spring, when the department lost $500,000 in state funds as a result of having too much money in reserves at the end of the fiscal year. A state law cuts funding for departments that carry more than 15 percent of a fiscal year's total budget over to the next fiscal year.

The audit will likely determine how much Sweet knew about the transactions and whether they were part of a plan to meet state-funding requirements.

Cheney defends policies

By Choyon Manjrekar
The Daily Iowan

CEDAR RAPIDS — Vice President Dick Cheney defended the Bush administration's efforts to stimulate a faltering economy and said a bill to be signed today by the president will crack down hard on corporate corruption with more stringent penalties.

With investors' confidence shaken by corporate scandals at Enron and WorldCom, he promised the measure will "protect investors from the oversight of accountants" besides giving "higher ethical standards to the system and prosecuting wrongdoers."

"The economy is on the path to recovery," he declared during a 20-minute speech.

The vice president spoke in front of approximately 700 people who paid $100 each to attend the invitation-only event at the PS hangar at the Eastern Iowa Airport to raise funds for Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa.

Cheney, a longtime friend of the congressman, endorsed

Cheney said he and the president planned to boost employment and the economy with their energy policy and free-trade initiatives. The administration has drawn up an energy bill that is pro-job and pro-growth, he said, and he emphasized using ethanol to reduce the dependence on foreign oil.

The speech also provided an update on the trade bill, which is projected to open new overseas markets to farmers and resurrect the slumping economy. The bill has been passed by the House; it awaits action in the Senate.

The Republican crowd seemed thrilled about hearing the vice president speak.

"I thought this was a great opportunity to see the vice president in Iowa," said Mount Pleasant resident Jan Towne.

UI's Defense projects swell

By Tony Phan
The Daily Iowan

From studying how to clean up polluted Army bases to building a better ship, the UI features a wide range of research funded by the Department of Defense.

Fiscal year 2002 saw a 59 percent increase in Pentagon projects, the largest percentage boost among all contributors. The Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, Department of the Navy, Army Research, Army Medical Research and Development, and the Air Force gave $5.1 million to 34 projects.

Despite the guns-and-bombs implication of the funding sources, the research conducted with the money funds numerous projects with no military applications.

"It might seem strange that Department of Defense funds are being spent on things like medical research," said Thomas Griffith, an assistant professor in the urology department. "A number of years ago, there was a surplus of Defense funds and people looking for places to spend it."

Griffith's project focuses on using a virus to carry a cancer-killing protein directly into the cells.

"The hope is that we can target the cancer cells and not kill off everything in the treated area," he said.

The increase in Pentagon funding this year was not related to the events of Sept. 11; applications were submitted prior to the tragedy, said Brian

Frederick Stern poses next to the tow tank in the UI Hydraulics Laboratory on Monday afternoon. Stern uses the tank to simulate ship dynamics in research funded by the U.S. Navy. Ben Plank/The Daily Iowan Harvey, an assistant vice president for Research. However, Defense-related grants might rise in the future, he said.

Rebecca Parales, a UI microbiologist, is also working on a Pentagon-funded project. Her research is intended to help clean up such sites as Army bases polluted with dinitrotoluene (DNT) and trinitrotoluene (TNT).

TNT and DNT are highly explosive compounds commonly used in munitions, though they are also used in making furniture, bedding foam, and automotive airbags. Exposure to the compounds has been linked to numerous health effects, including reduced fertility, nervous-system disorders, and kidney damage.

UI turns back clock on Main Lib hours

By Amir Efrati
The Daily Iowan

UI Libraries officials will roll back the clock on avid studiers this fall, closing the Main Library's doors two hours earlier as a cost-saving measure.

The adjustment means the library will close at midnight Sunday through Thursday and at 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday. The recent decision, prompted by a slash to the library's budget, angered some students loyal to the Main Library study areas.

University Librarian Nancy Baker expects that some students will be disappointed, but she stressed that the change was an inevitable "budgetary decision," which called for a 5 percent reduction in hours. She estimates that the library will save $92,000 from the cutbacks.

Indeed, some students were disappointed.

"I'm upset," said graduate student TeNille Carey, who said that last semester, she regularly studied with friends until 2 a.m. "If you don't live in the residence halls, you have nowhere to study late except there."

Senior Jeff Rasmussen said he usually can't reach the library until after 10 each night.

"It's definitely going to cut down my study time," he said. In 2000, the Main Library extended its hours until 2 a.m. during weekdays as part of outgoing UI President Mary Sue Coleman's plan to separate some fees from tuition. That freed up money for the longer hours, more writing classes, and financial aid, but students paid additional fees. Now, university officials said, student fees are no longer being fully allocated for library hours.

Safety concerns about library workers and students returning home late was another consideration in the decision, Baker said. One concern has been that Cambus does not run as late as 2 a.m.

Until now, library officials had resisted cutting hours and instead cut 7.5 vacant personnel positions, Baker said.

"I wish we could be open anytime, but this is not an option we have left," she said.

Janice Simmons-Welburn, the director of the library system's Central Public Services, said officials looked at patterns of use, called "gate counts," and cut the least-busy periods.

"Our numbers support our doing this," she said, but she refused to elaborate on specific totals. "We're still able to meet the needs of our students."

Simmons-Welburn promised an effort to extend Main Library hours during finals.

Junior Drew Wolman said that with his late classes this fall, the reduced hours might pose serious problems for his study time.

Midwest warned on terrorism

By Margery Beck
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — In the rural Midwest, people tend to live by a different set of rules. They trust their neighbors. They leave their tractors and livestock out in the open. They don't lock their doors.

That's going to have to change, a top U.S. Department of Agriculture official said Monday.

"It's going to take a lot to change the mindset of a lot of people," said Jim Moseley, a deputy Agriculture secretary. "The threats are real. 9/11 was not the end; 9/11 was the beginning."

Moseley spoke before a crowd of approximately 150 representatives from 13 states at the Midwest Governors' Conference summit on agricultural terrorism. Speakers at the two-day summit led by Nebraska Gov. Mike Johanns and Missouri Gov. Bob Holden included scientific experts and federal and state officials.

"Located in the Heartland, we have never felt we were the target of our foreign enemies," said Moseley, a former pork producer from Indiana. "I have to tell you, with all sincerity, this is one farmer who now understands the risk."

The summit's genesis can be traced more than a year ago to the outbreak in Europe of the fatal livestock disease foot-and-mouth.

Then came the terrorist attacks last fall.

"We quickly realized the importance of collaboration," said Johanns, the chairman of the Midwest Governors' Conference.

Some farm states already have taken steps. Holden noted he signed into law this year a measure that makes agriculture terrorism, such as spreading diseases among livestock, a felony in Missouri.

Other Midwestern states must also begin building an infrastructure to protect the nation's farms and food supply against terrorist attacks, said Holden, the vice chairman of the conference.

Map under scrutiny after accident

By Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

SOMERSET, Pa. — Gov. Mark Schweiker said Monday that a special state commission will examine mine safety and recommend changes to prevent accidents like the one that trapped nine men in a flooded coal mine for more than three days.

"Our first step is to understand exactly what happened," he said.

The miners were trapped 240 feet underground after they broke through the wall of a flooded adjacent mine that their maps showed to be 300 feet away. The accident released a torrent of water that cut off their only escape route on the night of July 24 and pinned them in an air bubble until rescue crews bored a hole and plucked them out early Sunday.

Richard Stickler, the director of the state Bureau of Deep Mine Safety, said maps will be a key focus of a joint state-federal investigation.

"You rely on those maps as being accurate and safe," said Dave Lauriski, an assistant secretary for the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration.

Within hours of the accident, state mine officials said that underground maps of Pennsylvania coal country were notoriously sketchy. The adjacent mine, the Saxman, was abandoned in the 1950s, and it had filled up with rain and storm runoff over the decades.

A retired miner, Joseph Jashienski, said the map being used by the miners was wrong because of improper mining techniques used in the Saxman the day before it was abandoned.

Jashienski, 89, said the Saxman Coal and Coke Co. gathered all the coal it could that day by using a machine to carve out a large space in the shape of a baseball diamond. He said the now-deceased mine superintendent who made the map left that detail out.

"He didn't want anybody to know he made a ball field the last day of work," said Jashienski, who declined to identify the manager. "If you put on the map that you made a ball field, the state inspector is going to wonder what you are doing."

Speculation rages: Is Osama dead?

By Vernon Loeb
and Walter Pincus
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Osama bin Laden's son Saad has gained prominence in Al Qaeda since the Sept. 11 attacks, senior U.S. officials said Monday, but they dismissed speculation he has assumed his father's command of the terrorist network.

A prominent London-based Saudi newspaper, Asharq Al-Awsat, reported that Saad bin Laden, 22, had taken control of Al Qaeda and that this "substantiates the theory that bin Laden was killed or seriously wounded" by U.S. air strikes in Afghanistan.

A growing number of terrorism analysts inside and outside the U.S. government believe that Osama bin Laden is probably dead. They point to the fact that it has been seven months since he last appeared in a video, looking gaunt and partially immobilized, as well as to a dearth of electronic "chatter" since then indicating he is still alive.

Dale Watson, the FBI's chief counterterrorism official, added his voice to this chorus two weeks ago, saying he personally thought Osama bin Laden "is probably not with us anymore."

But other analysts interpret the lack of information as evidence that he has simply gone underground and shut down all communications, reasoning that his death would have prompted communications among his supporters that almost certainly would have been intercepted.

One thing the FBI and the CIA know for sure is that they do not have Osama bin Laden's body. DNA samples obtained from bin Laden relatives would allow them to identify his remains, if they were found. But no match has turned up after testing samples taken by U.S. military personnel from hundreds of bodies in Afghanistan, including the remains of a "tall individual" killed in a missile attack 30 miles southwest of Khost in February.

West Nile virus west faster than expected

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — West Nile virus is sickening people far earlier this summer than usual, and it is spreading so quickly — it's hit 34 states, as far west as South Dakota — that health officials believe it will reach California this year or next.

Nobody knows how bad the mosquito-borne illness will get — although a rapidly growing outbreak among 32 people in Louisiana began a month earlier than West Nile has ever struck in this country, a big worry. But it's clear the virus first detected in New York City a mere three years ago has become a permanent summertime threat in most states.

Yet it's fairly easy to prevent: Spray on DEET-containing mosquito repellent when you go outdoors, and don't let puddles collect in flower pots, wading pools, or other spots where mosquitoes can breed. One specialist equates the safety steps to the routine of buckling a seat belt before driving.

"That's the level of worry people should have," said Dr. Lyle Petersen of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. "You should be concerned enough about it to do something but not have it change your whole lifestyle."

West Nile virus has struck other countries for decades, from the tip of Africa up to Europe and throughout Asia, so its move here probably was inevitable. The CDC has confirmed 161 U.S. cases, including 18 deaths, since the first Americans were diagnosed in 1999.

Officials are investigating if West Nile just killed two people in Louisiana. In addition to 32 West Nile-caused encephalitis cases there, a Mississippian is sick, and health officials are investigating 10 similarly ill Texans.

The virus doesn't discriminate: A dead crow was even found on the White House lawn.

West Nile can cause a potentially fatal brain inflammation. Anyone suffering such symptoms as a high fever, severe headache, confusion or difficulty thinking, stiff neck, or severe muscle weakness should see a doctor right away. It has struck Americans as young as 16, but those most at risk are over 50.

For every case of West Nile encephalitis, 150 more people are thought to be mildly infected — not sick enough to see a doctor. They get a flu-like illness, with fever, headache, and muscle pains, that lasts two or three days.

How does West Nile spread? It infects numerous types of wild birds, from house sparrows to crows. Mosquitoes spread it among birds and then to people. A spate of dead birds can be an early warning signal that the virus is circulating in a certain spot.

Aside from people, the mammals most vulnerable are horses. There is a horse vaccine but not a human one, nor is there any anti-viral treatment — victims get supportive care.

So preventing mosquito bites is important. Some health departments track bird deaths in deciding when to spray insecticides, but the CDC said people can do a lot on their own:

- Wear a mosquito repellent containing DEET; those without DEET aren't nearly as effective. Follow the label's instructions carefully, especially when applying to children.
- Stay indoors at dawn and dusk, when mosquitoes are most active.

1,000s break Israeli curfew

By Mohammed Daraghme
Associated Press

NABLUS, West Bank — Thousands of Palestinians poured onto the streets of Nablus on Monday in defiance of a 40-day-old Israeli army curfew, the strongest challenge yet to the Israeli army restrictions on West Bank cities and towns.

If Nablus residents effectively lift the around-the-clock curfew on their own, such actions could spread to other West Bank cities. Nablus Gov. Mahmoud Aloul, who had urged his people to defy the curfew, said Palestinians should follow the Nablus model.

"People who can't find food and need medicine and treatment should break the doors of their jail," Aloul said in an interview with the Associated Press.

Shops, banks, and offices opened to accommodate the curfew breakers, who filled the streets of Nablus. "I've been confined to my home for more than a month. I have eight children; we've eaten all we have," said Tamer Adnan, working at his falafel stand.

"I'm just fighting to get food for my kids."

Israeli soldiers in armored vehicles ringing the city stood by without response, in contrast to tough reactions to earlier violations in which troops have even opened fire on people because of misunderstandings over the curfew's duration.

"There is a curfew, and we are aware of the violations," military spokesman Lt. Col. Olivier Rafowicz said Monday. "For the moment, we are not responding."

In some cities, the curfew is often lifted during the day, then reimposed before nightfall. But the restrictions have been particularly tight in Nablus, where the curfew has been officially lifted five times, for a few hours at a stretch, in the last 40 days.

On Monday, the curfews were lifted for the day in Tulkarem, Qalqiliya, and Hebron.

The restrictions, imposed when Israeli forces took over seven of the eight main Palestinian population centers starting June 20 in response to suicide-bomb attacks, have worsened already difficult conditions for Palestinians in the West Bank. International aid agencies warn that some are facing malnutrition.

Preliminary figures from a U.S. government report show that 30 percent of Palestinian children are suffering from malnutrition, up from 7 percent since the fighting began.

In response, Israel pledged to release $15 million to the Palestinian Authority on Monday, the first such transfer since fighting erupted in September 2000.

The transfer, the first of three planned installments, is a small fraction of the estimated $600 million in taxes and customs revenues Israel has collected on behalf of the Palestinians. Up to now, Israel has refused to release the money, contending it might be used to finance terror attacks.

Under interim peace accords, Israel collects customs and taxes for Palestinian goods transiting Israel and transfers the money to the Palestinian Authority.

Israel has explained the drastic measures of confining hundreds of thousands of Palestinians to their homes while, in effect, reoccupying towns and cities turned over to Palestinian self-rule in 1994 and 1995 by pointing to dozens of suicide-bombing attacks that have originated in the West Bank.

The curfews, in addition to roadblocks, travel restrictions, and a ban on Palestinians working in Israel, have wrecked the Palestinian economy during nearly two years of fighting. The sanctions have left thousands of families dependent on food handouts from international aid organizations.

While the Israelis cite security, Palestinians charge that Israel is trying to destroy their infrastructure and bring down the Palestinian Authority, headed by Yasser Arafat.

In Paris, Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said his government plans to allow Palestinian workers in increasing numbers to return to their jobs. However, he said, "it's not simple because past experience shows that from time to time, the people who worked in Israel throw bombs against people who employ them."

Dems try a new tack on drug bill

By Janet Hook
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Senate has reached a make-or-break stage in its debate on providing a prescription-drug benefit under Medicare, as Democrats pushed Monday to build support for a stripped-down plan that could rescue the issue from legislative oblivion.

A compromise that would target benefits to the poor and those with high drug costs has won support from key Democratic lawmakers — including Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D. The proposal represents a retreat from Democrats' traditional insistence on making Medicare benefits universally available — a significant concession aimed at attracting Republican support.

The proposal is estimated to cost approximately $395 billion over 10 years. But leading GOP senators immediately criticized the plan as too little coverage for too much money. And proponents of the last-ditch compromise conceded that they had not secured enough votes to pass the measure, which might be put to the test as early as today. If it fails and no other alternative emerges in the next day or so, the Senate's long and much-ballyhooed debate on prescription-drug relief is likely to collapse with no bill enacted.

Under Senate rules, a 60-vote majority is needed to pass any prescription-drug bill. Last week, a $594 billion, seven-year Democratic plan to provide benefits through Medicare garnered only 52 votes; a $370 billion, 10-year Republican plan that would provide benefits through private insurers drew only 48 votes.

In the week since those votes, lawmakers increasingly have become concerned about political fallout if they come up empty-handed on an issue that both parties have made a staple on the campaign trail for years.

Afghans' legacy: amputated limbs

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Legs line the shelves, and arms hang from hooks, each one a portrait in molded propylene of the human tragedy in Afghanistan.

Take the shepherd girl Tawsana, whose sheep led her onto a land mine that exploded and blew her leg away, leaving her dragging herself across her nomad family's floor.

Or take Moshala, who as a 6-year-old ran terrified with her father from the Russian bombs — and straight into a minefield. First one mine killed her father and took her left hand. Then the girl stumbled across another. It took her left leg.

Then there's Sabara, who couldn't outrun the American bombs one midnight last fall, when six family members were killed on a road lined with refugees. Next week, in a bittersweet homecoming, she will finally return to her five children with a leg of plastic and steel.

An uneasy peace may be settling in, but the tragedy of Afghanistan lingers on, nowhere more poignantly than among a white cluster of buildings on a Kabul hillside where, for 14 years, the International Committee of the Red Cross has produced artificial legs, arms, feet, and hands that have helped 20,000 Afghans overcome the disabilities that war has inflicted on them.

This week in Kabul, international activists, diplomats, and Afghan officials are gathering to draw new attention to what is probably the world's most mine-afflicted country. The new Afghan leadership took the occasion to announce its acceptance of the 5-year-old treaty banning land mines, a global pact signed by 143 nations. The United States is not among them.

At the Red Cross orthopedic center, 80 percent of those with amputated legs or hands are land-mine victims. For them, the meaning of a treaty outlawing these indiscriminate weapons is felt in the daily pain of an amputee's life.

"Those who use land mines are very bad people," said Mahmoud, 55, whose left leg was lost to a mine 15 years ago. "They don't realize they can kill their own brothers."

Land-mine victim Sultan Mohammed puts on a clean bandage on his amputated leg on July 27 in Kabul, Afghan. International activists, diplomats, and Afghan officials are gathering here this week to draw attention to what is probably the world's most mine-afflicted country.

Checkmate to Shahada? Character matters

Israel launched a missile attack on a private house in a crowded residential neighborhood in the middle of the night, knowing for certain that innocent women and children sleeping in their homes would be killed. The attack killed 15, almost all women and children, and wounded 100. Israel says it did this to stop the suicide bombings by Palestinians.

This will not stop the suicide bombings. It will only increase the resolve of the Palestinians to attack Israelis and drive them into the sea.

The United States needs to stop supporting terrorism and to stop sending money to the world's No. 1 terrorist, Ariel Sharon.

Sam Sloan
Woodside, N.Y., resident

During the 2000 presidential campaign, George W. Bush often said he would bring integrity to the presidential office. When he said those words, he was implying his character was far superior to President Clinton's. Bush wouldn't be president today if it weren't for Clinton's sexual peccadilloes while occupying the Oval Office. During the Clinton presidency, the connotation for the word "character," when used by Clinton's foes, dealt primarily with his sexual misbehavior.

It is ironic that character is surfacing again two years later in a different context, one of corporate greed. At the same time

Clinton was fooling around with Monica Lewinsky, and during Bush's run for president, many corporate crooks were cooking the books. Did the white-collar thieves believe all would be well if they could raise record amounts of money to get their man in the White House?

President Bush is our first president with an M.B.A. He knows the "insider game," and the American people deserve to know whether he played it inappropriately. Just as it did for Clinton, character does matter on Wall Street, Main Street, and Pennsylvania Avenue. What would Bush's approval ratings be if it weren't for Sept. 11?

Gross misrepresentations

Doug Gross is talking out both sides of his mouth, and somebody other than Tom Vilsack or his eloquent spokesman has to point this out.

The Republican gubernatorial candidate criticized Democrat Vilsack last week for forcing "stealth tax increases" on Iowans in the form of increased tuition and property taxes at the local level, such as the recent increase in Johnson County.

Out the other side of his mouth, Gross tries to paint Vilsack as a big-spending liberal who mismanaged the state budget and did not see the economic slowdown coming.

Vilsack literally can't be both, so let's take a look at the facts.

The only way Vilsack could have lessened the size of the 18.5 percent tuition increase that goes into effect in the fall was to spend more on higher education. He proposed that, and it was shot down by the Republican-run Legislature.

The Republicans also cut the amount of funding in tax credits for the low income/elderly by 20 percent and the homestead credit by 10 percent. Democrats warned all last session that the counties would have to pick up the tab, and the budget passed on a party-line vote. Vilsack, fearing a shut-down in state government, was forced to sign the budget after trying twice to work out a more favorable compromise.

Gross is simultaneously trying to paint Vilsack as a big-spending liberal and an economic miser. Obviously, the governor can't be both.

As a result, taxes in counties are going up. Johnson County homeowners will see an additional $16 per $100,000 worth of property taxes on their next bills. The way to avoid this: Have the state spend the money.

"Republicans in the state Legislature have found a way to raise taxes without taking responsibility for it," an angry House Minority Leader Dick Myers, D-Coralville, recently said. "Frankly, this is nothing less than an outrage."

We agree. Yet Gross continues his political commercials that wrongly state Vilsack came to office with a $1 billion surplus and is now faced with a $1 billion deficit. He has yet to articulate a clear plan on how he would have dealt with the budget or how he will stimulate Iowa's economy if elected.

A new study suggests Vilsack has actually done pretty well. It shows Iowa cut spending last year by more than any other state. Iowa did not raise taxes, as did several other states. Eighteen states raised taxes on cigarettes, nine raised income taxes, and another 10 increased fees.

Vilsack recently revamped the way the state budget projections work to make them more accurate. Indeed, he should have done this earlier, because as revenue consistently dipped lower than projections, more cuts were necessary.

But at least he's taken some steps to make sure the situation doesn't repeat itself. He's certainly not making illogical criticisms out both sides of his mouth.

Deep in the heart of the corporate noir

In the summer of corporate noir, all the skeletons shout, Out of the closets and into the streets, and come clank, clank, clanking down the byways and alleyways and means and ways. Saints go marching in, indeed, if not in spirit. In the summer of corporate noir:

Furtive guys in slick suits named Louie start chirping and warbling, and long-ago bodies are disinterred, disengorged, disembarked from their long days' journeys into now. The chickens in every pot swoop suddenly home sweet home to roost on the head of the King, laying eggs and candling fantasies of Cordon Bleu, Kiev, à la King.

In the summer of corporate noir, you don't need a featherman to know which way the sin blows. Imbalance sheets go scattering and skittering in the wind, looking inconspicuously like tarantulas on tuxedos. All the pretty corporations, all in a row.

What happens to your house of cards when you're not playing with a full deck? Now we know.

In the summer of corporate noir, the White House breaks out its fowl-weather gear, searching for someone to get all these roosting chickens out of here, looking for someone to take the fall. Or at least the summer. Why couldn't this be the Summer of Jaws? Where is Jimmy Hoffa when you need him? Just doing what politicians do best when the going gets tough and the tough get the hell out of Dodge — blame somebody else.

In this case, it turns out, the somebody else at fault for the corporate cancer rippling through the body America is none other than — Ta Da — Bill Clinton.

Yes, Wild Bill, that famed defiler of blue dresses. Turns out, this corporate-scandal stuff happened on his watch; it wasn't Republican CEO types after all. Praise the Lord and pass the dividends

It's interesting, just for accuracy's sake, to note that former President Clinton, the dress-defiling one, tried in the '90s to push tougher controls on corporate practices through Congress — measures that would have prohibited the wink-wink, nudge-nudge style of accounting that characterized Enron. And Arthur Andersen. And, for that matter, Harken Energy (motto: Go for the arbusto).

You'll never guess what happened: The Republican-controlled Congress snuffed Clinton's idea.

Harvey Pitt, then a securities lawyer who numbered among his clients Arthur Andersen, was chief lobbyist in persuading Congress to reject the tougher measures. Pitt now, of course, is Dubya's SEC chairman and chief watchdog over corporate-accounting practices.

Recently, Pitt has become famous for few other things (besides continually recusing himself from SEC decisions because of his many ties to corporate America): In his first speech as chairman, he promised the accounting industry that, under his leadership, there would be a "kinder, gentler" SEC. In other words, to paraphrase Mel Brooks, Springtime for corporations; winter for you and me.

And when Xerox and auditing firm KPMG were under investigation for fraud, he went against the advice of his staff and met with the leaders of the two companies — which, while perhaps technically not illegal, was at the very least unseemly.

You can see why Democrats — and Sen. John McCain, the Arizona Republican who has seemed to raise his gadfly rep a notch or two during CorporateGate — have been calling for Pitt to resign. Actually, the calls have pretty much reached the level of demands. Pitt is widely seen as a corporate Go-fer at a time when corporations' stock (in all senses of the word) has plummeted to somewhere below toxic-waste-dump status. (An aside: The administration recently decided to slash EPA funding to clean up toxic-waste sites. Big Government is bad. Seepage, apparently, is not.)

So, in the face of this not-so-friendly fire, the estimable Mr. Pitt, as Congress was wrapping up its corporate-reform bill on July 26, lobbied lawmakers to elevate his status to Cabinet rank and give him a pay raise.

One thing about Pitt, he knows the essence of comedy. Timing.

In the summer of corporate noir, the White House scurries about, looking for a dry spot, but it turns out there are more holes than dikes. The footsteps of Halliburton-past slosh closer and closer; corporations keep dropping like fly balls in a Little League outfield. It may be time to start tossing bodies overboard.

Or? If the jig's up, it must be time for the waltz, Matilda. Maybe a lovely little war. Yeah, that's the ticket. Now you're talking Turkey, palavering Peoria, wapsidoodling Wasbush. Let's go get that Iraqi guy. He's a Saddamist, anyway. In the summer of corporate noir.

No gold in Moldmember

Film: Austin Powers in Goldmember
Director: Jay Roach
Writers: Mike Myers and Michael McCullers
Starring: Mike Myers, Beyoncé Knowles, and Michael Caine
Length: 93 minutes

There's no denying a simple fact about the Austin Powers films: They aren't High Art.

They are mostly a collection of half-witted eighth-grade humor, mixed in with some clever spy spoofery. So, of course, they usually work fairly well. Lowbrow fun is always a big box office draw, and for good reason — it's a great release of tension. However, this time around, writer-star Mike Myers has really spread himself thin.

International Man of Mystery Austin Powers (Myers) puts the handcuffs on arch-nemesis Dr. Evil (Myers again) early in the flick and thinks his life is back to shagadelic parties and no worries. Alas, one of Evil's henchmen, Goldmember (Myers AGAIN) has kidnapped Austin's father (Myers — sorry, Michael Caine) and taken him through time to the year 1975. Austin heads back to that year and enlists the help of blaxploitation icon Foxy Cleopatra (Beyoncé Knowles) to stop whatever dastardly plan is brewing.

Myers takes on four different roles this time, playing Austin, Evil, Goldmember, and (briefly) Fat Bastard. Continuing the trend of the previous entry, The Spy Who Shagged Me, Dr. Evil is by far the most interesting character in the film, filled with as many idiosyncrasies as a single film will allow.

Austin gets more and more tired as time goes on — the swinging '60s hipster stuff was squeezed dry in the first film. Goldmember has the interesting distinction of being the most pointless and annoying creation in the whole film. I didn't like his look, I didn't like his accent, and I didn't like his dialogue. He had one good joke in the entire film. As for Fat Bastard — well, he's good for a scatological joke or two, and I'm glad his appearance was kept to a minimum.

Most of the jokes in this film are recycled from the previous two. There's the "people dancing in the streets" number, and Dr. Evil himself has an all-new rap (this time he does Jay-Z's "Hard Knock Life"). Austin yet again has a brief encounter with a female with a bizarrely sexual name (this time around it's twins, both of whom have unprintable monikers). Oh, and there's more — lots more Beyoncé Knowles stars as Foxy Cleopatra in Austin Powers in Goldmember. Austin Powers, played by Mike Myers, travels back in time after his father is kidnapped by Goldmember and taken to 1975.

— and none of it feels fresh.

What little new material is brought to the fore is hit-and-miss. The opening sequence, featuring cameos from Tom Cruise, Gwyneth Paltrow, Kevin Spacey, Danny DeVito, and Steven Spielberg, is brilliantly funny; it's nearly worth the price of admission. Caine hams it up to the best of his ability as Nigel Powers, the original spy in the family (who has one or two dark secrets). I would have preferred more of him than the recycled material.

However, Knowles' character is a mass of clichés, and the R&B singer turned actress is more wooden than a sequoia. I never thought I'd say this, but I must: Bring back Heather Graham! A bit with obscured subtitles is cute, but the laughs don't last long. Plus, who thought that a balding Seth Green was a good idea?

The primary problem with Goldmember is that too often it feels like a set of ideas discarded from the previous two films that have now been strung together in the same old screenplay. Things jump out as non sequiturs just so a gag can be done. If the writers had taken a bit more care to make the script more cohesive, it might have worked a lot better.

It's obvious that this series is losing its, ahem, mojo. There's nowhere else for the characters to go, really, and I doubt whether a few new knee-slappers will be enough to propel them any farther. Myers seems to wrap up things quite nicely, though, leaving only the slightest hint of a possible sequel.

Of course, one can never underestimate the power of a single joke to tickle your funny bone for an entire film. That's why you should probably see Goldmember: It doesn't work all the time, but when it does, it works exceedingly well.

The hot new do — Hairspray

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mel Brooks, Anne Bancroft, and Nathan Lane have already seen it. So has Bette Midler, but then, she's an investor.

Danny DeVito and Yoko Ono are on tap for Thursday, and we haven't even gotten to the musical-theater groupies who have bombarded Internet chat rooms with their opinions, most of which range from rave to rave to rave.

The buzz is building for Hairspray, and although the $10.5 million musical is still in previews and doesn't open at the Neil Simon Theatre until Aug. 15, it's already being burbled about as "the next Producers," Broadway's hottest show. Critics won't see it until close to the opening.

"It's wild. I can't believe what's happening," said producer Margo Lion, who came up with the idea for a stage version of John Waters' campy movie about a pudgy teen's obsession with a TV dance show in 1960s Baltimore. "And most of it has been word of mouth."

At the July 26 sold-out preview performance, you could hear a contented hum.

"The people were like little bees," said JoEllen Kitchen of Pasadena, Calif. "The audience walked in knowing they were going to have a good time — and they did."

That contentment has translated into growing ticket sales. Before previews began July 18, the show — which has a top ticket price of $95 — was pulling in $40,000 to $50,000 a day, Lion said. A week later, the daily figures had climbed to more than $200,000. On July 26, the box office took in $330,000. Lion said the musical now has a $6 million advance-ticket sale, and that could double by opening night.

Not bad for a musical with no stars — except perhaps Harvey Fierstein, who has inherited the role of full-figured Edna Turnblad, played in the film by Divine. To portray Edna's daughter, perky Tracy Turnblad, Lion chose Marissa Jaret Winokur, who achieved minor cult status by uttering one of the biggest laugh lines in the Academy Award-winning film American Beauty — "You are so busted."

Out-of-town reviews in Seattle, where Hairspray played in June, were enthusiastic, setting the stage for chat-room frenzy and growing mainstream-media interest, including an upcoming segment on NBC's "Today."

"This will be the longest theater piece it has ever done," chirped Richard Kornberg, the musical's relentless publicist.

Web sites have been exhausting in their comments. Log onto www.talkingbroadway.com, for example, and you will find review after review, with most of the self-appointed critics saying they can't wait to see it again.

Lion and her army of other producers (they number more than a dozen) also initiated an innovative marketing campaign. They mailed 325,000 CD samplers, containing three songs from the show, to potential ticket buyers whose names were culled from various mailing lists.

"We made the decision early on that the easiest promotional tool was the music," said Lion, praising the pop-flavored score by Marc Shaiman and Scott Wittman. The sampler also allowed recipients to purchase tickets at a discount. This direct-mail effort cost more than $200,000, but the return has been more than $1 million so far, she says.

And there are other promotions, said Kornberg, who is more than just the show's press agent. Together with three friends, he invested $40,000 in the show.

Bloomington's will sell Hairspray-inspired clothing in five of its stores, including two in the New York area, he said, adding that it's the first time the store is promoting plus sizes.

The producers also invited 120 hair stylists to see the musical during its early previews. "If you wanted to build word of mouth, who else could spread the word more effectively?" Kornberg said.

Even the show's cast recording will be pressed into service

Guatemala cheers tired pope

By Traci Carl
Associated Press

GUATEMALA CITY — A visibly exhausted Pope John Paul II called for peace and justice Monday on his third trip to Guatemala, where thousands of Roman Catholic faithful carpeted Guatemala City's streets with an ornate path of pine needles, sand, and flowers.

Arriving from Canada, the pope used a hydraulic lift to descend from a white Grupo TACA jet painted with the words "Messenger of Hope." John Paul, who has been using lifts to board and exit planes since May, surprised many when he used the stairs on his arrival and departure from Toronto.

A stiff wind blew off the pope's skullcap as he crossed the tarmac in Guatemala, gripping the rail of his cart. He stopped briefly to kiss a toddler who was held up to him.

With the help of two aides and a cane, John Paul walked a few steps and slumped into a chair. He quickly rose to his feet, supporting himself with the back of another chair, as a children's choir sang Guatemala's national anthem.

The pope, slurring his words as he spoke in Spanish, said he arrived in Guatemala "as a pilgrim of love and hope." He said he hoped the canonization of Pedro de San Jose Betancur today could be "a true moment of grace and renewal for Guatemala" and help the country's people in their search for "peace, solidarity, and justice."

He blessed the Guatemalan people, especially the poor and marginalized.

Guatemalan President Alfonso Portillo called the pope "a symbol of hope" and said he had helped Guatemala become "a more democratic and less unequal country." Five other Central American presidents, Belize's prime minister, and the president of the Dominican Republic attended the ceremony.

Thousands of pilgrims packed avenues in the hot sun, singing and cheering as the 82-year-old pontiff waved from his "popemobile." Many who had waited hours for a glimpse of the pontiff were surprised how quickly he passed along the sand-and-flower path.

"I think he looked this way, but even if he didn't, it doesn't matter," said Carla Oliveras, who screamed and waved as the pope came near.

The pope planned to celebrate a Mass today canonizing Betancur, a 17th-century Spanish missionary who dedicated his life to helping prisoners, abandoned children, and the handicapped in Guatemala.

During a Mass in Toronto on Sunday, the pope made his first public comments about the sexual-abuse scandals that have rocked the church since January. He said those responsible fill "us all with a deep sense of sadness and shame," but he urged followers to support the vast majority of priests who he said do good.

Afghans capture assassin

By Amir Shah
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — A would-be assassin who aimed to crash an explosives-packed car into members of Afghanistan's national leadership was foiled when officials arrested him after a traffic accident in Kabul on Monday, national television reported.

The report cited a statement by the Afghan intelligence service and did not identify the suspect nor say how investigators learned of his alleged plan to ram the car into a vehicle or vehicles carrying government members. Intelligence officials could not be reached for comment.

A second man also was arrested in the case, said Interior Ministry spokesman Alishah Pakti-awal. He had no additional detail on that arrest.

The arrests were the latest developments feeding concern about security in Kabul in the wake of the killing of Vice President Abdul Qadir three weeks ago. While Afghanistan works with foreign countries to train an army and a police force, an international peacekeeping mission patrols Kabul but does not work outside the capital.

A spokesman for the international security force in Kabul, Turkish Maj. Murat Pekgulec, said he had no information on the case.

The TV report was accompanied by video of the man's Toyota Corolla, whose door panels were exposed to show yellow blocks of what the intelligence service statement said were explosives.

The report also showed a photo of the suspect, a heavily bearded young man in a vest and open shirt. His dress and appearance seemed Afghan or Pakistani, but the government statement read by the station said he was a foreigner and the plan was developed abroad.

It did not identify him further or explain how the explosives were uncovered after the accident.

The suspect, said to have been injured in the accident, was taken to the intelligence service's offices for interrogation, the statement said.

"International terrorism once again is showing its face," the statement said. "The enemies of Afghanistan are not sitting quietly. They're conspiring to conduct terrorist operations."

Remnants of the Taliban and Al Qaeda are believed to be lying low more than a half-year after the Taliban were driven from power. And Afghanistan's transitional government is troubled by enmity among ethnic groups and by warlords who command substantial forces and are reluctant to yield power.

Verdict for activist draws U.S. criticism

By Nadia Abou el Magd
Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — An Egyptian-American academic and human-rights activist was sentenced Monday to seven years in prison after being convicted of misusing European Union grants and tarnishing Egypt's image.

The verdict was quickly criticized by the United States, Amnesty International, and defendant Saad Eddin Ibrahim.

During the trial, the European Union said in an affidavit it did not believe its grants were mishandled, and a main defendant said he was forced to falsely accuse the 63-year-old Ibrahim.

Moments after the State Security Court's verdict and sentencing, Ibrahim told the Associated Press he would appeal again.

His wife, Barbara, said, "The rule of law died today in Egypt."

Their daughter, lawyer Randa Ibrahim, said the verdict came right after defense attorneys finished their arguments Monday.

"It's outrageous," she said.

The verdict concluded a three-month retrial ordered by an appeals court on procedural grounds. Saad Ibrahim, a sociology professor at the American University in Cairo and an outspoken human-rights and democracy advocate, was sentenced last year to seven years on the same charges.

In closing arguments last week, prosecutor Sameh Seif said Saad Ibrahim used funds raised through his Ibn Khaldun Center for Development Studies for personal gain and lured his staff into an embezzlement scheme.

At the heart of the case was approximately $252,000 in EU democracy-building grants that included money to monitor and encourage participation in Egypt's legislative elections in 2000.

That monitoring include creating a documentary whose script argued that election fraud, which observers say has marred Egyptian voting, is less likely when citizens participate. Prosecutors claimed the documentary's references to fraud tarnished Egypt's image.

Prosecutors also say Saad Ibrahim spread false statements about religious persecution of Coptic Christians in Egypt, saying such comments could undermine the country's reputation abroad.

The U.S. charge d'affaires in Cairo, Gordon Gray, expressed "disappointment" at the verdict and iterated U.S. concerns about the "fairness of the process" against Saad Ibrahim.

Egypt is a close ally of Washington, which considers it an important Arab voice of moderation in the Arab-Israeli confrontation. But the United States occasionally has chided Egypt for its poor human-rights record.

Chief Egyptian government spokesman Nabil Osman refused to comment on the case.

Sara Hammond, a London-based Amnesty International official, said the verdict was "quite a shock. From the beginning of the case we were saying the charges were politically motivated."

Negad Borai, a leading Egyptian lawyer and political-reform advocate, said the verdict revealed "that Egyptian laws are autocratic by nature."

Saad Ibrahim, sweating in the un-air conditioned courtroom with temperatures Monday topping 100, was composed as the verdict was read.

Twenty-seven co-defendants, most of them think-tank staff members, were convicted of bribery and fraud and received sentences ranging from one-year suspended sentences to three years Monday.

Why moving sucks...

• Your lease ends July 31, yet you can't move in until Aug. 1.

• None of your friends will loan you their trucks.

• You finally find the hole where all the bugs have been coming in from.

• No matter how hard you clean, you never get your deposit back.

• Even though you got your couch in the first time, for some reason, it no longer fits through the door.

• You have to change your address on bills, magazines, Cheese of the Month Club, etc.

• You planned to start packing a month ago, but you didn't.

• You have to throw out your favorite recliner with the torn armrests and indentations that fit your butt perfectly.

• It's hot as hell outside.

• You have a 10-page paper due, a test on Friday, an eight-hour work shift, and all your crap has to be moved across town tomorrow.

"Hallibacon," the corporate-crime fighting pig, and his fellow Democratic Party activists look for support from the public while protesting the arrival of Vice President Dick Cheney in Cedar Rapids on Monday evening near the Pedestrian Mall.

Cheney talks up proposals, ignores Halliburton scandal

CHENEY

"People confuse the state of the economy with the stock market. I think he's doing a great job, and the economy looks pretty strong to me."

Cheney avoided discussing his former company, Halliburton, which is currently under investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission for accounting issues that arose during the time Cheney was CEO.

Reporters were cordoned off in a makeshift enclosure more than 50 feet from the vice president and were given no opportunity to ask questions regarding his affiliation with Halliburton's alleged accounting malpractice, which reportedly overstated revenue.

Cheney spoke hours after the Iowa Federation of Labor distributed free peanut butter-and-jelly sandwiches in protest outside Leach's Iowa City office.

"We registered 20 voters and distributed 150 lunches to state our case to the people," said Sara Swisher, a leader of the protest. "We want to show that Leach does not care about health, job and social security, and workers' issues, which are major concerns of Iowa voters."

The protesters were upset with Cheney's tenure at Halliburton as well as Republican proposals to "reform" Social Security.

White calls for special audit

SPECIAL AUDIT

White said he "has reason to believe that department's zeal to achieve a lower year-end balance" may have triggered the spending.

Johnson County Supervisor Sally Stutsman said Sweet was "very up-front" and came forward immediately when notified of the discrepancy. Sweet was unavailable for comment.

"She's responsible for managing the program's budget, but I have no reason to believe she's in any way responsible," Stutsman said. "We'll have to wait and see what the audit turns up."

The audit will determine whether Diane Blackburn, the director of the Jackson County Mental Health/Developmental Disabilities Department, billed both counties simultaneously while working as an independent contractor for Johnson County. She made four claims from Johnson County totaling $11,500, Slockett said.

The alleged double-billing, discovered July 1 by Jackson County officials, came to Slockett's attention. Slockett met last week with White, who in turn suggested they contact state auditing officials to determine how much Blackburn had received.

"If these allegations here are true, it's a very serious crime," Slockett said.

Johnson County was paying Blackburn $50 per hour for her services as a quality-assurance surveyor who oversaw various agencies working for the mental-health service in Johnson County while she was earning $17-$18 hourly in Jackson County, Slockett said.

Blackburn is the only surveyor suspected of double-booking her hours, but the state audit might reveal more, Stutsman said.

A check of the phone book turned up a Diane Blackburn in the Jackson County town of Charlotte, Iowa. Nobody answered repeated phone calls there Monday, and Blackburn did not return e-mail messages.

Library no longer open late nights

LIBRARY HOURS

"I'm shocked they would do that," he said. It may be less busy after midnight, he said, but it's important for him to study when study areas are less-occupied and, thus, quiet.

Senior Ryan Edmonds, an employee in the Main Library Instructional Technology Center, said shortening hours is a good idea but the current cut might be too excessive.

"There aren't enough people to warrant hours until 2 a.m., but midnight is too early," he said. UI Student Government President Nick Herbold said library officials consulted with him before making the decision. He saw benefits and drawbacks to the plan, he said.

An alternative late-night study location, preferably in the IMU, might ease student concerns, Herbold said, but budget concerns might not allow that to happen.

Hours were also cut this fall for most of the university's 12 branch libraries. According to budget figures, the library system faced a 4.39 percent cut — $525,000 — in fiscal 2002. For the fiscal year that began July 1, it must cut an additional $133,000.

UI's Defense funding rises 59 percent

SPENDING

"DNT and TNT are man-made chemicals, and we have found bacteria that use them as energy sources," Parales said. "Hopefully, we can isolate and enhance the properties that allow them to break the compounds down."

Other research being done relates directly to the military's goals, said Frederick Stern, a professor of mechanical and industrial engineering who has been receiving research funding from the Navy for 20 years.

"The Defense Department has more focused objectives than other places that give grants," he said. "In some cases, if you're investigating something they want to know about, you have a high chance of success in receiving funding."

Working with Robert Wilson and Joseph Longo, Stern aims to predict the performance of ship designs under a variety of wave conditions using computer simulations and testing of physical models in an advanced "tow tank." "Our tank is the most advanced in the world in terms of the detail and quality of data we gather," he said.

Harvey credited new facilities and advanced equipment on campus as a big boost to researchers that helped them do high-quality work.

Since 1967, the UI has attracted $4.09 billion in external support, with more than $1 billion coming in the past four years.

"This was a banner year for us," said Derek Willard, the UI special assistant to the president for governmental relations. "The past several years have been phenomenal in terms of our researchers getting the funding they need."

He credited the quality and quantity of the research proposals to the leadership and vision of UI President Mary Sue Coleman and David Skorton, the vice president for Research.

"We are very proud of the researchers and looking forward to next year," he said.

Derailment near D.C. latest Amtrak setback

AMTRAK

cars unassisted; nearby workers and residents swarmed to the train to assist others on board, and more than 200 fire and rescue personnel arrived quickly.

Screams and shouts pierced the train. Children cried. Many passengers pulled off the rubber gaskets on the windows and climbed out, feet first, and scrambled away. They carried their luggage and wore dazed expressions as they walked from the track bed. Others were pinned beneath bunks and collapsed seats and had to be pulled from the tumbled steel.

Carmody called the emergency response "remarkable." Rescue workers and investigators were amazed that no one was killed.

"To get out of this without any fatalities is a miracle," said Montgomery County Police Chief Charles Moose. "People were certainly bounced around and thrown around, but fortunately, there was not any fire, and fortunately, there was not any explosion." The train did not split its 5,000 gallons of diesel fuel, firefighters said.

Because the rail cars simply fell to their sides without a collision to twist the steel, the rescue was straightforward. The last passengers were pulled from the train within 90 minutes of the accident, and the atmosphere at the steamy scene was calm.

The injured were taken to area hospitals; Montgomery County fire officials said nine people had been admitted by Monday night.

Sources close to the investigation said the train was going approximately 60 mph when the engineer said he saw a kink ahead in the track. He put the air brakes into an emergency stop but said he was still running at 56 mph when he hit the

Cavs deal Miller to Clippers for Miles

By Tom Withers
Associated Press

CLEVELAND (AP) — Andre Miller, the NBA's assist leader last season, and forward Bryant Stith have been traded by the Cleveland Cavaliers to the Los Angeles Clippers for forwards Darius Miles and Harold Jamison. The Associated Press has learned.

A team source, speaking on the condition of anonymity, told the AP that the teams finalized the deal on Monday and that it will be announced Tuesday.

Miller, 26, was nearly traded to the Clippers on draft night last month, but the deal fell through.

A Cavaliers spokesman would not confirm the four-player trade Monday, and said the team had no announcement planned.

Clippers vice president Joe Safety acknowledged the teams were in contact, but added: "There is nothing conclusive to report at this time. We're still working on it."

The 6-foot-2 Miller averaged 10.9 assists last season for the Cavs, but he can become a restricted free agent after this season and had told Cleveland he wants a maximum contract.

But the team, which owner Gordon Gund has denied he is selling, didn't plan to offer Miller a new deal until he becomes an unrestricted free agent next season.

In exchange for Miller, the Cavs are getting Miles, a 6-9 bundle of energy and athleticism the club hopes can help sell tickets at Gund Arena next season and beyond.

He averaged 9.5 points and 5.5 rebounds last season and helped the Clippers partially shed their sad-sack image as one of the league's worst teams.

Miles' agent, Jeffrey Wechsler of Miami, said the deal wasn't done.

"There has not been a trade completed yet," he said Monday. "If a trade involving Darius is completed, I'm sure he'll be very disappointed for the fans of the Los Angeles Clippers."

Miles, who will turn 21 in October, was the No. 3 overall pick in the 2000 NBA draft out of high school. He averaged 9.4 points in 81 games as a rookie, and showed flashes he could be a future All-Star.

NBA approves use of instant replay for last-second shots

NEW YORK — The NBA will make sure next season that last-second shots really do beat the buzzer.

The league on Monday approved the use of instant replay beginning with the 2002-03 preseason, just months after some controversial last-second calls in the playoffs.

Officials can also determine if a player was fouled before time expired (but not whether the foul call was correct or not) and if a 24-second shot clock or eight-second backcourt violation occurred before a shot.

Any last-second shot would be reviewed, and coaches will not be able to prompt them.

The league's Competition Committee recommended the move to the Board of Governors last week, and the board approved the measure by an "overwhelming majority" Monday. At least three-quarters — 22 of 29 members — needed to vote in favor of the rule for the league to adopt it.

Several last-second shots last season helped precipitate the move.

"I don't think there's any one event that drove this decision," said Stu Jackson, the NBA's vice president for basketball operations. "There have been a number of instances where, quite frankly, for any human being it would have been impossible to determine whether the shot got off in time."

In an April playoff game between the Hornets and the Orlando Magic, Charlotte's Baron Davis banked in a shot that clearly beat the buzzer after the Hornets inbounded with 0.7 seconds left and the score tied.

Referee Bernie Fryer waved the shot off while it was in the air, saying the officiating crew had discussed beforehand that no player could catch, turn, and shoot in that amount of time.

play.

"Finally, I had a couple of penalty times, and I learned to play faster," Nicklaus said.

Garcia got another lesson that he knows all too well.

"We had our chances, but we missed too many putts on the front nine," he said. "When you're playing against a guy of this caliber, if you don't make the putts, you can't afford it."

Birdies were a must in the best-ball format.

The only hole that someone didn't birdie was the last one. Garcia had a 15-footer to extend the match, but it slipped by on the left.

Nicklaus had not played with Woods since the first two rounds of the 2000 PGA Championship at Valhalla, where Woods went on to win in a playoff for his third out of four consecutive majors.

"I know now that I have no business playing on the regular tour," Nicklaus said. "If you see the way Tiger and Sergio play, there's no such thing as a par-5 anymore. My partner was great. And I like to win."

So does Woods, who came out with a focus that belied the hit-and-giggle event. Garcia is the only player to have beaten Woods in the Battle at Bighorn, and Woods seemed bent on gaining some revenge in the middle of a team event.

It all led to a far more compelling event than last year, when hot blasts of desert wind, ridiculously tough conditions, and an alternate-shot format guaranteed a snoozer in a mixed-team match featuring Woods and Annika Sorenstam against David Duval and Karrie Webb.

That wasn't the only difference. The conversation was off the charts, most of it thanks to the Trevino.

He started gabbing from the moment he arrived on the practice range and stopped only long enough to hit the ball.

Best high-school player went to David Kummer of Cedar Rapids Washington.

The best coach award went to James Moses, the HawksNest coach, and the MVP award went to ex-Iowa player Darryl Moore.

Iowa freshman Jeff Horner took home this year's Chris Street award. Named after the former Iowa forward who died in 1993, Larson said the award represents the MVP of the MVPs.

"It's the top award given to someone who makes the players around him better," Larson said. "I've never given it to that young of a player before, but in my mind, there were no other contenders."

Byrd hurls Royals past Blue Jays

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Paul Byrd, pitching before a bevy of scouts in perhaps his last appearance with Kansas City, threw his fourth-straight complete game as the Royals beat the Toronto Blue Jays, 4-1, Monday night.

Carlos Beltran homered off Chris Carpenter (4-2) and drove in three runs for the Royals, who snapped a six-game losing streak.

Byrd (14-7) allowed five hits to become the first Kansas City pitcher with four consecutive complete games since Tom Gordon in 1990.

With the trade deadline just two days away, Byrd has been the subject of much speculation as contending teams look to bolster their rotations.

He looked like the premier pitcher available Monday night, beating the Blue Jays in a crisp 2 hours, 2 minutes. He threw only 98 pitches, 72 for strikes.

The first two Kansas City runs off Carpenter were unearned, but he lost for the first time since April 22. Carpenter has made eight starts since coming off the disabled list June 22.

With two outs in the third, Brent Mayne doubled and scored on shortstop Chris Woodward's throwing error on Knoblauch's grounder.

Yankees 9, Rangers 2
ARLINGTON, Texas — Orlando Hernandez (6-3) pitched six impressive innings, and Rondell White hit a two-run homer as New York beat Texas.

Jorge Posada homered, drove in two runs and reached base four times for the Yankees, who have won 16 of 22 at The Ballpark in Arlington.

Rangers starter Kenny Rogers (11-6) fell behind 3-0 in the first inning against his former team and lost his sixth-straight decision to the Yankees. He was knocked around for Smith, who pitched a no-hitter in his rookie season last year, was sent to Triple-A Memphis on July 20 after going 1-5 with a 6.94 ERA in 11 appearances, including 10 starts. The 22-year-old left-hander was 6-3 with a 3.83 ERA in 16 games last year.

Timlin, 36, is 1-3 with a 2.51 ERA in 42 appearances and is holding righties to .197.

Nickle, 27, was 3-5 with a 2.97 ERA and seven saves in 34 games — one of them a start — at Triple-A Scranton/Wilkes-Barre this season. He appeared in four games — 4 1/3 innings pitched — for the Phillies this season, and he has made 10 career major-league appearances.

Nickle went 9-3 with seven saves and a 1.68 ERA at Scranton/Wilkes-Barre last season.

"We did not replace Scott Rolen with an All-Star, Gold Glove third baseman, but we did replace him with a very good baseball player, and we got some other guys who should help us," Phillies general manager Ed Wade said.

Rolen was the NL Rookie of the Year in 1997 and averaged 26 homers and 95 RBIs in his first five seasons.

Rolen's last two seasons with the Phillies have been marred by turmoil and controversy. He feuded with manager Larry Bowa, mostly because they have

HAWKEYE SPORTS BRIEFS

Skogman wins fourth-consecutive Iowa Open title

Hawkeye men's tennis player Hunter Skogman captured his fourth-consecutive Iowa Open title on Sunday.

Skogman defeated Nick Barnes of Cedar Rapids in three sets (6-2, 4-6, 6-4). The senior-to-be becomes the first men's player in tournament history to win four-straight titles.

Skogman proved to be a dominant force for the Hawkeyes in the 2002 spring season.

He led the team with a 7-2 Big Ten record playing in the No. 4 slot and posted a 4-1 record in his last five singles contests of the year.

Skogman and the Hawkeyes will begin the 2002 fall season at the Virginia Invitational in Charlottesville on Sept. 20.

NFL BRIEFS

James works out, seems as good as new

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Edgerrin James annoyed the Indianapolis Colts' front office by working out on his own to recover from knee surgery last season.

But he looked like the old Edgerrin on Monday, scrimmaging with the Colts for the first time since the operation in November 2001 for a torn anterior cruciate ligament. He wore pads, ran hard, caught passes, and made defenders miss.

"It's always nice when you see guys up close and personal," new coach Tony Dungy said after opening his first training camp with the Colts. "I've seen Peyton Manning, Marvin Harrison, Marcus [Pollard] and some of our other guys. But this was the first time I've seen Edgerrin, and it was impressive."

James worked out for most of the two-hour practice. There seemed to be no problems. He didn't even wear a knee brace.

He started with straight-ahead running, then caught passes in traffic and cut inside a couple times. After sending one defender sprawling, James removed his helmet and laughed.

It was exactly what the Colts had hoped for. To James, who said he wasn't going 100 percent, the performance was no surprise.

"I knew what to expect," he said.

Falcons stalled on talks with Duckett

GREENVILLE, S.C. — Atlanta halted contract talks with first-round draft pick T.J. Duckett until they determine how seriously he was hurt in a fight last week in Michigan. A doctor representing the Falcons and another hired by agent Joel Segal were to examine the former Michigan State running back.

"We made it clear to them that as a precondition to us having any additional discussions with them, we want our own evaluation," Falcons chief administrative officer Ray Anderson said. "That's what we're going for."

Duckett was attacked by three men on July 23 as he was leaving a concert in Ionia, Mich. A report filed by the Ionia County Sheriff's Department said Duckett lost a tooth and received several stitches when he was struck in the face by a bottle.

Rams sign Faulk to contract extension

MACOMB, Ill. — Marshall Faulk signed a seven-year contract with the St. Louis Rams on Monday, a deal that will enable the running back to finish his career with the team.

Coach Mike Martz announced the signing after the second of two practices. Earlier this week, he named Faulk team captain.

"We want to make sure Marshall finishes his career as a Ram," Martz said. "The impact he's had not just on this team but this entire organization is pretty extreme."

Terms of the deal were not immediately available. Faulk, 29, became the first player in NFL history with four-straight 2,000-yard seasons of rushing and receiving last year.

Murray clinches PTL crown

Ex-Hawkeye's 33 leads HawksNest to finals victory over Boyd, Leslie

By Katie Low
 The Daily Iowan

Ex-Iowa star Kenyon Murray powered in 33 points and snagged 15 rebounds, and David Newman of Drake hit a clutch jumper with two seconds left to clinch the Prime Time League title for HawksNestOnline.com.

It narrowly defeated streaking Mike Gatens Real Estate/Highland Park Development, 98-95. Gatens, entering the playoffs as the No. 7 seed, had been red-hot up until the final game.

Murray attributed the win to holding off the two Hawkeye stars of Gatens.

"We tried as hard as we could to guard Chauncey [Leslie] and Brody [Boyd]," he said. "We wanted to contain Chauncey and get a hand up on Brody's shot."

He also pointed out the concerted team effort as a factor of success.

"We showed we were a team all season long," he said. "In the semi-finals last week, we had at least three guys with double-doubles. We've been playing very balanced."

Gatens led for most of the game, but in the second half, HawksNest turned up the heat. With 1:15 left, Murray gave HawksNest a 96-92 lead. Boyd responded with a 3 with 0:35 left, pulling Gatens to within one.

Newman brought the ball back down the floor for HawksNest and hit the jumper just as the 30-second shot clock went off. Gatens was unable to make a shot in the final two seconds.

Murray praised good shot selection by his team.

"We had a lot of guys step up and take some key shots," he said. "Newman obviously hit some very important shots, and Bruce [Sain] hit some clutch free throws."

Murray was hot from downtown in the second half, hitting four of five 3-pointers.

"We needed a spark; our offense was stymied," he said. "I just grabbed the ball, got my feet set, and let it go."

David Gruber of UNI was also impressive for HawksNest, scoring 20 points and grabbing 14 boards. Sain, from Coe College, also had a double-double with 10 points and 10 boards.

Gatens was led by Boyd with 21 points, including four 3's, and Leslie, who had 20 points and five rebounds. Matt Schneiderman of UNI was also hot with 15 points and eight rebounds.

Gatens coach Randy Larson didn't take the loss too hard.

"Frankly, playing in the championship game was satisfying to me," he said.

"I think that these two teams were the ones who played like they deserved it the most."

Prime Time League season awards were given out by Larson during halftime.

Best defender went to ex-Iowa Western Community College player Charlie Nichols.

Iverson all but clear of charges

By Michael Rubinkam
 Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — NBA All-Star Allen Iverson was cleared of all but misdemeanors Monday at a hearing into charges he stormed into his cousin's apartment with a gun and threatened two men, looking for his wife.

Two counts of making terroristic threats were left standing after the six-hour preliminary hearing to determine whether prosecutors had enough evidence to try Iverson.

"It sounds like you had a relative looking for a relative at the house of a relative," Municipal Court Judge James DeLeon said.

The ruling followed testimony from Iverson's two accusers and his cousin Shaun Bowman.

Iverson, the NBA MVP in the 2000-01 season and a three-time league scoring champion, was accused of throwing his wife, Tawanna, out of their home, then barging into Bowman's apartment July 3.

The Philadelphia 76ers guard was arrested on 14 felony and misdemeanor charges, including assault, terroristic threats, and weapons offenses. Iverson's uncle also was charged; he, too, now faces only the misdemeanors.

The original charges against Iverson carried a maximum sentence of more than 50 years.

He was the subject of intense local media scrutiny after the allegations surfaced. Hordes of reporters and photographers camped outside Iverson's suburban mansion in the days before he turned himself in July 16 to face the charges.

It's not Iverson's first brush with the law.

As a teenager in 1993, he was arrested after a bowling-alley brawl and spent four months in jail in Virginia before he was granted clemency by the governor. The conviction was later overturned.

In 1997, Iverson pleaded no contest to gun possession.

He also made an unreleased rap CD in which he used derogatory terms for women and gays, and he's fought several times with 76ers coach Larry Brown.

Golfing greats don't disappoint

Nicklaus and Woods pair up to top Trevino and Garcia at Bighorn

By Doug Ferguson
 Associated Press

PALM DESERT, Calif. — Jack Nicklaus knocked down a flag, and Tiger Woods took care of the rest Monday night as the best players of their generations lived up to the billing in the Battle at Bighorn.

On a sweltering afternoon in the desert, Woods torched Bighorn with the kind of performance he could have used in the British Open. He made nine birdies in 16 holes and carried Nicklaus to a 3 and 2 victory over Sergio Garcia and Lee Trevino.

Nicklaus made only a few contributions, but they were memorable.

Despite an ailing back and 62-year-old legs, Nicklaus hit a 7-iron that kissed off the flagstick for a tap-in birdie on No. 9 as he and Woods won four-straight holes in the middle of the match and turned this battle into a breeze.

The fourth annual made-for-TV exhibition pitted two of the best players from their generations in a best-ball match.

Woods was 9 under for his round when the match ended under the lights on No. 16 with his 3-foot par putt.

So dominant was his performance that he didn't even get a chance at two other birdie putts inside 10 feet.

Nicklaus stole the show on those two holes, making his only other birdie on No. 13 with a 12-foot putt. Sixty-two-year-old Trevino contributed three birdies and most of the conversation. The only time he stopped talking was when he hit the ball.

And the night wasn't a total loss for Garcia, the 22-year-old Spaniard known lately for the countless waggles and regrips. Nicklaus tried to counsel him on the strange habit, telling Garcia that he, too, was guilty of slow

Phillies third baseman Scott Rolen fields a grounder on July 21. Rolen was traded to the Cardinals on Monday.

Finally, he's Rolen along

By Rob Maaddi
 Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Slugging third baseman Scott Rolen was traded to the St. Louis Cardinals on Monday, ending his unhappy tenure with the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Phillies get third baseman Placido Polanco, pitcher Bud Smith, and reliever Mike Timlin for the three-time Gold Glove winner and minor-league pitcher Doug Nickle and cash.

"We are very pleased and excited to add Scott Rolen to our lineup," Cardinals general manager Walt Jocketty said in a statement. "He is an All-Star, a proven run producer, and an excellent defensive player."

Rolen, who made his first All-Star team this season, is batting .259 with 17 homers and 66 RBIs. He had been the subject of trade rumors since rejecting a 10-year contract extension in November 2001 that could have been worth up to $140 million.

Rolen, 27, signed an $8.6 million, one-year deal in January, but he made it clear he wanted to become a free agent after this season. That decision forced the Phillies to make a move or risk losing him for only a pair of picks in next June's amateur draft.

He did not sign an extension with the Cardinals, so he remains eligible for free agency. However, he has said that he is interested in signing a long-term deal with St. Louis.

Polanco, 26, is hitting .284 with five homers and 27 RBIs. He batted .307 last season and .316 in his first full year, in 2000.
