Rossi to join UI search group

By Sara Fawcett

Responding to concerns about the quality of the presidential search process, two students have recently been added to the Iowa Student Government to help influence the search for a new president.

The students, John Graven and Nick Thompson, were recently appointed to the search committee by the Iowa Student Government Board.

Graven said the committee was established by UI President Bruce Harreld for the sole purpose of considering students' input.

"Adding students as part of this process is a good idea, not only reflecting undergraduate voices, but all students," Graven said. "We have heard from UI-related issues for a while, and it is time that I put my time where my mouth is." Thompson.

In July, the regents approved 12-member committee to meet the board with the search for a new president to hire. The Valve of 2016, who began her academic year as the president of the University of Iowa, submitted some 500 recommendations to the committee.

In a statement announcing the committee's appointment, the regents acknowledged "concerns were expressed about the breadth of undergraduate st-

Two former WorldCon Inc. executives surrendered to the FBI in New York Thursday to clear the way for a bankruptcy proceeding and conspiring for allegedly mishandling millions in deposits through accounting tricks in an effort to make WorldCon appear profitable during the first three months of this year. WorldCon's directors acknowledged the importance of the improper accounting on July 5 when the FBI launched its investigation.

Residence Hall head to retire early

By Mike McWilliams
The Daily Iowan

When Mangie Van Oel came to the UI in 1991, she was an unconventional woman to presume a teaching career. More than 20 years later, she's still at the university, but her dream of becoming an art instructor has faded. Today, she begins the last phase of her life in the university's nine residence halls. A demanding job in the halls is one of 21 university services Van Oel oversees as director of UI Residence Services.

Van Oel began her Residence Services career in 1971, when she took a job as a show-student in the halls at Burge — an undergraduate job, she said, that "was beneficial to providing a space in a residence hall to drive at an airport." She said she'd have "something happen" where she couldn't walk away and go to school. "I think that would happen multiple times, and I find that I needed a different course." After working as hall coordinator in 1979, Van Oel stayed close to Residence Services, working in the housing-assignment office before taking her current position.

Since then, she instituted a system of accountability for hall dorms in the fall of 2000 — a switch that was met with little resistance, she said. And she was one of the students who went to the hedge garden to smell the colors of double peak bloom at a time as diverse. Van Oel has overseen several infrastructure improvements, such as the remodeled Van Der Meer and Hillcrest cafeterias. "I think we've spent over $7 million for safety upgrades in the dorms." In the works is a $14.5 million Burge cafeteria renovation, which will begin this fall, and an expansion of the main residence hall dormitory, beginning in 2005.

Disabilities director to examine legitimacy of 30 independence-center claims

By Amy Jernigan

Joe Reisinger, director of the Iowa City Disability Rights, visited the university's nine residence halls to examine the legitimacy of 30 independence-center claims within the campus's nine dormitories.

The auditor, who wrote about meeting with officials from other centers as part of their reviews, said he was "surprised at the number of people who live in the residence halls. Blackshear was full July 16, with more than 7,500 from Johnson County." The state auditor is expected to issue a report in two to four weeks on the campuses and their programs. The auditor, who was joined by UI Facilities Management Director Steve矢, said he was "very impressed by the work that several dorms." The Senate voted 64-34 to override President Bush's veto of the measure, ensuring it will become law. "It's not just about the economy," said Senator Edward Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat and a leader of the Senate's liberal wing. "It's about the future of our country."

The bill now goes to President Bush in the hope of his signature. "This is a historic and great day for America," Commerce Secretary Donald Evans said.

Both parties agreed that the legislation was needed to avoid a recurrence of the recent uncertain financial situation where banks and others refused to lend money. The bill allows the Treasury to make direct loans to banks, a move that could help stabilize the economy.

"The markets are up because they know that the government is going to back them up," said Senator Richard Shelby, a Republican from Alabama. "This is a good thing for the economy."

CUTTING LIBRARY HOURS FORCES NIGHT OWLS OUT INTO THE COLD

Nothing is more important for learning than an atmosphere where every student is welcomed and where learning is accessible 24 hours a day. The librarians, too, understand this. As such, they have defended the status quo against the proposed changes that would force library officials to shut off the Main Library at 10 p.m.

By scaling back library hours, library officials are taking an important step toward creating a quality education for all new students. The revised hours will force these students to find new places to study. The university has a responsibility to ensure that its students have the necessary materials to complete their education.

By forcing these students to find new places to study, library officials are fulfilling their mission to provide quality education for all students. This decision is not only in the best interest of these students, but also in the best interest of the university.

THE NOT SO LAZY DAYS OF SUMMER

The DII photo staff decided to take a look at what students and other people around Iowa City do to pass the time during the dog days of summer. As it turns out, they spend most of their time trying to beat the heat and not go broke. Plus, they try to squeeze in a little time to have fun. These photographs examine just a few ways they take advantage of their short time away from school and work.

The funding comes after plans from Englert officials, who are in the midst of a $35 million renovation to the 90-year-old facility. Those officials hope to attract 500,000 people to the restored theater for five performances every year, as soon as in the fall of next year.

"Your budget is very close to what you can afford and what you cannot afford," Englert president and CEO Matthew Comerford said. "At this point, we're only looking for a financial contribution to the next stage."

Vision Iowa board member Paul Parks of Dubuque said, "We have been working on this project for years. We are very excited to see it come to fruition." He added, "With this contribution, Englert will be able to continue its tradition of bringing world-class performances to the Iowa City area."

The Englert renovation project also received a $750,000 contribution from Iowa City in order to qualify for the City of Iowa City's matching funds. The city contribution will come from Community Blood Greens and is also conditioned on the amount of Vision Iowa's support.

"I think $750,000 is a small price to pay for a $3 billion contribution," said Iowa Governor Tom H. "The state's investment is a significant step forward in preserving the Englert's historic role as a cultural landmark."

The Englert restoration project is expected to be completed by the fall of next year.
