The family of Craig Amundson, the only UI alum to die in the attacks, moves on

BY CHAO XIONG
THE DAILY IOWAN

Amber Amundson is running from the memories of Sept. 11. She's hoping each step will bring her closer to building a new life for herself and her two kids and help her find solace before thoughts of her late husband seep into her mind dozens of times each day.

The UI alumna used to start every morning craving a pot of coffee and half pack of cigarettes. A year after her 28-year-old husband, UI graduate Craig Amundson, died in the attacks on the Pentagon, she's jogging instead, burning off the mental exhaustion that has plagued her since last fall.

Craig Amundson was the only UI alum to die in the Sept. 11 attacks.

Amundson died at Pentagon

"Everyone's sad, but I get frustrated because we lost Craig, and I know everyone's sad, but you didn't lose your husband, you didn't lose your father," she said from her Springfield, Mo., home. "We knew these next couple of days were going to be extremely difficult. It's the smell in the air and the color of the trees, and that's really bringing back ... last year the fall was so crazy and unimaginable."

'He's not coming out'

Amber Amundson was gardening outside their Fort Belvoir, Va., home when Craig phoned from his cubicle on the third floor of the Pentagon where he worked as a multimedia illustrator.

They talked about the World Trade Center crashes. He said he would be safe and that, no, they weren't being released from work. We'll talk about it later, he assured her, go outside and don't watch TV. He said that before lunch, he'd design invitations for their son Elliot's 5h birthday party on Sept. 22.

She felt thankful they were near Washington, D.C., and thought her husband would come home.

"I love you, babe," he said before hanging up the phone. Five minutes later a passenger jetliner veered off course and crashed into his department.

U.S. rejects 51 visas

U.S. officials refused at least 51 student-visa applications from foreign students who had already been accepted at the UI this summer. The absence of some Chinese students — who made up 43 of the rejections — has meant delays in teaching and research plans for some UI departments.

"It's a huge intellectual loss for the university," said Steven Hoch, the dean of International Programs.

Visa rejections grew from 30 to 35 last year, he said. Most of the applicants were denied because of their alleged intent to immigrate to the United States after completing their education at the UI.

Bush warns of 'high risk' of new attack

BY DAN EGGEN AND ALAN SIPRESS
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration Tuesday elevated the nationwide terrorist threat index for the first time, warning of a "high risk" that Al Qaeda cells in southeast Asia and suicide bombers in the Middle East would launch attacks to coincide with today's anniversary of the Sept. 11 suicide hijackings.

The heightened alert, approved Tuesday by President Bush, came as the Pentagon moved live anti-aircraft missiles to launchers deployed around Washington for the first time in 40 years, and it prompted the State Department to shutter more than a dozen embassies and consulates in Asia and elsewhere.

Attorney General John Ashcroft and other U.S. officials warned that the volume and type of intelligence reports received in recent weeks was eerily similar to the climate last summer, when authorities had evidence of an imminent attack but no inkling the strikes would come on U.S. soil.

The new warning — based primarily on information gleaned within the previous 24 hours from an unidentified Al Qaeda operative who is in custody — revived the jittery atmosphere that prevailed after last fall's attacks, which killed more than 3,000 people in the World Trade Center, the

Search group holds second forum

The UI presidential-search committee heard from concerned faculty and students at its second and final open forum Tuesday.

The state Board of Regents will review the panel's criteria for the next president at its Sept. 18 meeting.

Echoing issues brought up during the committee's last forum, speakers at the event said the ideal candidate would be creative and encourage diversity.

"I think the students want the next president to understand university life," said committee member and UI student Dan Rossi, who added that tuition increases were a great concern on campus.

Panel Chairman Jonathan Carlson said the forum was held to continue the 26-member team's efforts to complete the criteria the group will include in the proposal. Updating a group of 15 on the committee's progress, he said most nominees the committee has reviewed so far have been administrators at other universities, though few have held presidential positions.

Carlson said he expects to have a pool of candidates from which the committee can draw finalists by the end of October. He said those people will be invited for on-campus interviews; a president should be named by January.

Oakdale may add to mental-health agency's load

The Johnson County Mental Health/Developmental Disabilities Executive Committee may be required to pay for mental evaluations of inmates at the Iowa Medical & Classification Center at Oakdale.

The facility performs evaluations on inmates suspected of mental illness and pays for these examinations with its budget, said Elaine Sweet, the director of mental-health agency. During the last fiscal year, however, the prison was no longer able to afford the costs because of budget cuts, she said.

In the past, the mental-health agency has not been responsible for making the payments, but it is possible that the state attorney general will decide to require the department to pay for the evaluations.

The prison has submitted several requests to the mental-health agency to help with mental-evaluation payments.

Central point of coordination applications, which contain the mental history and personal background information of each evaluated inmate, are submitted with every request, Sweet said.

"We are stuck with processing the applications of the inmates, which makes it difficult," she said. "Oakdale sends the bills over and over again, which frustrates the staff."

CITY BRIEF

Colangelo: Ferentz's salary is too high

Some members of the UI Faculty Council expressed concern with a recent raise given to Iowa football coach Kirk Ferentz after reviewing a report that said the "arms race" of intercollegiate athletics must be scaled back.

Ferentz, who will earn at least $910,000 a year through 2009, is the highest-paid UI employee.

"I do not like it when any coach makes more than the president of the university," said Nick Colangelo, the chairman of the university's Athletics Board. He noted that Ferentz earns the median income of Big Ten football coaches.

The council reviewed the Committee on Institutional Cooperation's Resolution on Intercollegiate Athletics during a meeting Tuesday afternoon, which launched a hour-long discussion on coach's salaries.

History Professor Katherine Tachau said she is concerned about the reduction of non-athletics budgets. An increase in the general fund going toward athletics has risen from $500,000 in recent years to $2.8 million for this year.

"What we're dealing with here is a growing enterprise that increases red ink," former Faculty Senate President Amitava Bhattacharjee said.

University General Counsel Mark

Schantz said, however, that Ferentz's signing was a precautionary measure that will eventually save the school money.

"What is really expensive is going out and having to hire a new coach," he said. "We have stability now."

Newcomer joins board

BY AMY JENNINGS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Voters picked a newcomer over a veteran Tuesday in a School Board election that saw the crumbling of a triple-incumbent slate.

Toni Cilek, a UI associate professor of speech pathology, defeated incumbent Dale Schultz by nearly 300 votes to join Lauren Reece and Don Jackson on the board. Reece finished first, followed closely by Jackson, with Cilek bringing up the rear.

Cilek, who learned of the results with family and friends at home, said she is excited to work closely with parent organizations, staff, and administration to meet the district's needs.

"It was difficult to run against three incumbents," she said. "I feel that my qualifications are stronger than theirs were when they initially ran for office, but I wasn't able to quote information because I haven't sat on the board before."

Cilek attributed her victory to the public's desire to bring a new perspective to the board.

Reece, who garnered nearly 70 percent of the votes, said she expects the chemistry of the board to change with the addition of Cilek.

"Anytime you change a character in the cast, the story changes," Reece said.

Jackson said it's frustrating that voters tend to group incumbents and pit them against newcomers instead of considering them individually.

Both incumbents agreed that Schultz will be missed, and Schultz said he is disappointed.

"I think that we've done good work in the past three years, and I'll miss being a part of that," he said.

Although the board oversees approximately 10,000 students in 22 schools, School Board elections historically have by far the lowest voter turnout of all contests, according to Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett.

Out of the 59,402 registered voters in the School District, 3,362 voted in the election. Turnout has increased from last year, when only 2,049 of eligible voters participated on the Sept. 11 elections.

"It's ironic because of the enormous importance of education in our community," Slockett said. "I think that people don't vote because they are willing to let others deal with the complex issues and trust them to make the right decision."

Council squabbles over rebate

BY GRANT SCHULTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa City City Council lowered the maximum amount of tax rebates a local entrepreneur can receive by $100,000 — a move that sparked two councilors to question a local project's value.

Councilors decided 5-2 to return $400,000 to developer Gerry Ambrose instead of $500,000 in tax dollars over a seven-year period because the once-struggling area he wants to develop has grown economically since the council established a tax-rebate program.

One of Ambrose's projects for the area surrounding Plamor Lanes, 1555 S. First Ave., which includes a gymnasium and fitness facility between the bowling alley and a nearby strip mall, faced criticism from Councilors Steven Kanner and Irvin Pfab during a confrontational meeting Tuesday night.

Kanner said he didn't support the proposal because the $400,000 amount was arbitrary, adding that he was unsure what the money would go toward, even going so far as to propose dropping the rebate to $10,000. The council refused to second his proposal, in effect killing the idea. Kanner also said he was also concerned with how accessible the gym would be to the public.

"Why did we pick $400,000?" he said, adding that Ambrose has not yet specified what parts of the project the rebate will fund. "What are we basing our tax abatement on?"

The original $500,000 figure is approximately one-third of the $1.2 million to $1.5 million investment Ambrose plans to make in the renovation.

Pfab expressed concerns that the project was taking money "that we can't touch" away from other city organizations, such as the School Board.

The tax-increment finance district circulates its own tax revenues into projects within its boundaries.

The TIF district, which runs from the railroad tracks crossing First Avenue to Highway 6, was established approximately a year ago to remedy financial hardships at Sycamore Mall and the surrounding area.

Ambrose said his project, which also includes renovating and reopening Plamor Lanes, will help revitalize the south-eastern section of town, which faced financial hardships because of businesses lost to Coral Ridge Mall. The project will create jobs and motivate residents to visit the area, stimulating development, Ambrose said.

"When we set up this district, we knew it needed some renovation," he said, adding that the $400,000 figure was a "reasonable" amount. "Sycamore Mall looks the way it looks because of this program. You need to revitalize that area of opportunity, and I'm here to help."

"If you can't see the improvements in Sycamore Mall, then I'm sorry, you need to re-evaluate your position," Ambrose told Pfab.

The rest of the council said the lowered rebate would stimulate growth in the area.

"This is an opportunity," said Councilor Mike O'Donnell. "It's an investment in Iowa City."

The tax rebates will run from 2006 until 2012.

Firm dumped by UI studies appeal options

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

A construction company that lost a contract to renovate the Old Capitol might appeal the UI's decision, company officials say.

Tricon Construction Group's bid was rejected last week after university officials announced that they wanted a more experienced company to do the historical restoration on the building, which was damaged in a Nov. 20, 2001, fire. Although Tricon was the lowest of four bidders, officials chose Knutson Construction of Iowa City to replace the Dubuque-based firm because the local company offered a more complete proposal, university representatives said.

Tricon may take its case to the state Board of Regents, said Ron Richard, the company's vice president. He said the firm, which bid $1.47 million, is looking into what its options are; it will take action sometime next week.

"We do not agree with the university's decision at this time," he said. "We believe we are qualified, and we want it reviewed."

The contractors and their subcontractors must meet all the project's criteria — one of which is experience with historical restoration — for university officials to approve them for the job, said Drew Ives, the interim director of the university's Facilities Services Group.

Knutson was chosen over Tri-con because one of its subcontractors specializes in timber framing, he said. Tricon did not propose subcontractors to assist with timber framing on the restoration of the 162-year-old dome, he said.

"It's an important job to be done right," Ives said.

The timber framing that will reconstruct the dome portion of the cupola tower requires expertise. Tricon has done well with $1 million to $4 million projects, said Ives, but it has never done timber framing.

"The decision does not speak to its quality as a contractor," he said.

While Tricon, a 5-year-old company, has no history of working with the university, Knutson has worked on several campus projects, including the Pappajohn Business Building and Pharmacy Building. After passing over Tricon, university officials went straight to Knutson's second-lowest $1.63 million bid. Iowa law says public institutions must accept the lowest bidder if the company is qualified.

Phase I construction on the dome, cupola, and roof was slated to begin within the next couple of weeks and completed by next spring.

Gibson will lead jail discussion

BY TONY PHAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

In nearly 40 years at the UI, Richard Gibson oversaw planning, facilities, and space utilization on campus.

Now, he's putting those skills to work as the chairman of the Johnson County Jail Space and Services Task Force.

"I didn't intend to become chairman when I volunteered for this," chuckled Gibson. "My work at the UI gave me quite a bit of experience with issues dealing with facilities as well as large groups, and hopefully, I can move people towards a consensus."

The task force is charged with investigating jail overcrowding and making recommendations to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors in the spring.

Area voters rejected a new $20 million jail in November

2000, and the county's budget has taken a hit by paying nearly $300,000 in fiscal 2002 and a projected $500,000 for fiscal 2003 to transport maximum-security prisoners to the Linn County Correctional Facility in Cedar Rapids.

The 26-member committee will look at a draft of a public survey at today's meeting to get input from area voters on the overcrowding.

"We want to know where people stand on this issue," said Gibson, who retired as the director of the university's Facilities Service Group in 2000. "If they say 'don't do it,' we need to take

Gibson
Task force

that into consideration."

The group is in an information-gathering stage, said county Supervisor Terrence Neuzil, who was pleased to hear about Gibson's joining the jail panel.

"Dick brings an open mind and has a lot of experience in running an efficient meeting," Neuzil said. "It'll be interesting to watch how the entire bunch works together."

The task force includes members from all parts of the community, including people who voted against building a new jail.

"I hope the task force can see that there are alternatives to throwing people in jail," said Bob Thompson, a Citizens for Jail Alternatives representative. "I don't think that the community will go for building a big honking new jail, so things such as rehabilitation and community service need to be looked at."

Thompson added that he was impressed with Gibson's leadership at the committee's first meeting.

UI Student Government Vice President Matt Blizek, who represents UI students on the task force, said though it is still early, the committee is working as a cohesive unit.

"[Gibson] definitely has a tough job," Blizek said. "I hope that we can make something good happen."

Whatever the task force decides, something must be done soon, Neuzil said.

"The overcrowding is also a security risk, because weapons aren't allowed inside the jail," he said. "The current jail is dangerous for county employees, and both employees and prisoners have been injured as a result."

Lawyers are able to stay on in Rich case

BY TONY ROBINSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

A district judge ruled Tuesday that all four attorneys can remain on the Andrew Rich first-degree murder case, rejecting claims of conflicts of interest from both sides and keeping the Sept. 24 trial date on track.

Defense attorneys had argued that Iowa Assistant Attorney General Thomas Miller contacted a key witness prior to his deposition and persuaded him to change testimony to support the prosecution's theory of death. In a separate filing, prosecutors had asked Judge Kristin Hibbs to determine whether Rich's two court-appointed lawyers had a conflict of interest because their office had represented two witnesses.

"The court sees no actual conflicts of interest [that require] Thomas H. Miller being excluded from the case," Hibbs said. "Also, nothing shows that the defense attorneys are not able to zealously represent Mr. Rich."

Rich, 45, of Greybull, Wyo., is accused in the 1999 slaying of John Helble in North Liberty. Helble, 28, was found dead from two gunshots to the head in his trailer on Feb. 23 of that year. Prosecutors say he died approximately 34 days earlier.

Johnson County Sheriff's Detective Douglass Vannoy, a key investigator since the start of the case, was called to the stand Tuesday to determine if Rich was coerced into making statements to law-enforcement officers prior to his arrest.

The defense's motion would wipe out Rich's statements to authorities and any evidence arising from them. Hibbs is expected to rule on the motion within the next week.

According to court records, law-enforcement officials contacted Rich on eight separate occasions — six of which resulted in his cooperating and voluntarily answering questions regarding the investigation.

Vannoy testified to giving Rich his Miranda rights on several occasions and interviewing him about the homicide in a Yellowstone Hotel three blocks from his Wyoming residence. Documents placed in evidence showed that Rich signed a waiver of rights on five separate occasions.

"I explained the rights to Andrew Rich, and he had no questions that I can recall before initialing the papers," Vannoy said.

NATION BRIEF

Problems again bedevil Florida vote

MIAMI — Tuesday was supposed to be Florida's chance at a makeup exam in civics, to show itself and the rest of the country it had learned the right lessons from the fiasco of 2000 and could organize a proper election.

Instead, in the first statewide voting since Floridians cast ballots for president 22 months ago, polls opened late in many precincts, and the high-tech ATM-style touch-screen gadgets that were supposed to relegate the old punch-card ballots to the ash heap of history showed they could pose troubles of their own.

With problems reported in precincts from Jacksonville to Miami, Gov. Jeb Bush proclaimed a "state of emergency" and ordered polls across Florida kept open for an additional two hours, until 9 p.m., "in order to ensure maximum citizen participation in the electoral process."

Keenly aware of being yet again in the spotlight, state officials noted that voter complaints were concentrated in the Miami and Fort Lauderdale areas and that the day went smoothly in most of the rest of the peninsula. The effect of the polling miscues on actual returns was unclear Tuesday night.

In one predominantly black neighborhood in Miami's Liberty City, voting didn't begin until 11:45 a.m., nearly five hours behind schedule, and more than 500 would-be voters were turned away.

Forget your Pill? Now you can.

Check out Depo-Provera, the birth control you think ABOUT just 4 x a year.

Depo-Provera is 99.7% effective.

Not only is Depo-Provera 99.7% effective, but you need just one shot on time every 3 months to stay pregnancy-protected. So, unlike the Pill, Depo-Provera isn't your every day birth control.

Remember, Depo-Provera doesn't protect you from HIV/AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases.

Some women using Depo-Provera experience side effects. The most common are irregular periods or spotting. Many women stop having periods altogether after a few months and some may experience a slight weight gain. You shouldn't use Depo-Provera if you could be pregnant, if you have had any unexplained periods, or if you have a history of breast cancer, blood clots, stroke, or liver disease. When using Depo-Provera, there may be a possible decrease in bone density. Ask your health care professional about prescription Depo-Provera.

UI alum soldiers on after losing husband

heard the news on TV. In denial, she turned off the set and refused to acknowledge the severity of the event. Her daughter, Charlotte, then 2 years old, was a voice of reason.

[Charlotte] hadn't seen anything ... and she said to me very nonchalantly, 'Daddy's in the Pentagon, and there's a lot of fire, and he's not coming out.' I was just in denial. I said, 'Oh honey, everything will be OK,' Amber Amundson said.

A slew of phone calls were placed to hospitals and Craig's bosses as night fell, and still only Charlotte had come to terms with the loss of a man many describe as funny, goofy, devoted, and smart.

"She came up to me and said, 'Mom, he's not coming out. He can't get out,'" Amber Amundson said through tears.

The news breaks

Craig's younger brother, Ryan Amundson, was substitute-teaching in Hartsville, Mo., when the news from the Pentagon hit him.

"One class' assignment from the prior day was to make paper airplanes and try them out," he said. "I sat in class, hoping Craig was OK. Here I am sitting in the classroom, and the kids are flying all these planes. It was just really weird."

Near the San Francisco Bay area, their older brother, Barry Amundson, was just waking up. The sky was a clear blue — "wonderful," Barry said.

Their mother, Karen Amundson, was watching the news the moment she was left with only memories, childhood items, and debris from the crash site by which to remember her middle child. His parents and Ryan Amundson hopped in a minivan that night and drove 22 hours straight from their home in Hartsville to Fort Belvoir.

There were tears and few words.

"When we drove out there, we were at that low point of hopelessness," Ryan Amundson said. "The first thing I remember when I got there was I walked out and one of the neighbors ... they thought I was Craig for a second."

A film fanatic

Craig Amundson had a "crooked" smile, said friends and family. Tall and athletic, he didn't fit the jock stereotype, preferring to spend his free time making movies — as he did all through high school in Anamosa, Iowa. The 1996 UI communications graduate spent his adolescent years filming square dancers and setting the footage to rap music, crafting anti-war movies during the Gulf War, and spoofing a masochistic dentist, among several other films.

One of his projects involving his entire high-school art class, Pet Taxi, won second place at a state contest and earned Anamosa High $10,000 toward the purchase of video equipment. More than 65 students are now enrolled in video-production classes in the town roughly 40 miles northeast of Iowa City.

"I refused to watch most of his movies because I felt they would be inappropriate and I would be party to it until his brother sent them to me after his death," said Craig Amundson's high-school art teacher, Nancy Kula. "They were very childish but very clever. He was a goofy boy just like all boys ... but he was a bright boy."

He continued with film at the UI while deejaying at KRUI. The station will rebroadcast a tribute show to Craig Amundson today at noon and 5 p.m. that first aired last spring. It was at KRUI that he befriended Mac Smith, the godfather of 5-year-old Elliot and 3-year-old Charlotte and a groomsman at his and Amber Amundson's 1996 wedding in Hubbard Park's Danforth Chapel.

Their courtship began when Amber Amundson pulled her ragged blue Escort into the parking lot of her new apartment building at the intersection of Clinton and Church streets her sophomore year in college, impressed with the nicer vehicles that lined the lot. But next to her sat a tired red Escort.

"I remember thinking, 'I have to meet this person ... we have something in common; we can't afford anything but a beat-up Escort,'" Amber Amundson said.

Days later, Craig knocked on her door and asked her if it was her blue Escort in his red Escort's parking space. A friendship followed. Years later, they were raising kids and growing daisies, wildflowers, and chrysanthemums at a military base in Virginia, counting down the last three years Craig Amundson would serve in the army before he could pursue his Web design company, www.sock-odesign.com, full-time.

Moving on

Craig Amundson was sitting on the third floor of the Pentagon when it was struck by terrorists, leaving a dark hole that his family members still vividly recall from their trip to the crash site two days after the attacks.

"It was pretty hard because you knew he was probably still in there," said Karen Amundson. "It was devastating."

They collected shards of glass from the lampposts sheared by American Airlines Flight 77 before it crashed into the building at 9:43 a.m.

"It's just a part of the last moments of Craig's life," Karen Amundson said. "They were just lying there, so we just picked them up."

Few clung to hope as the days passed; Craig wasn't identified until Sept. 23. A funeral service was held at Arlington National Cemetery on Sept. 29, 2001, and memorial services were held in Hartsville and Anamosa.

The days leading to the one-year anniversary of the attacks haven't been easy. Amber Amundson and Craig Amundson's family say they don't plan to observe any remembrance services today, opting to spend time with each other and Charlotte and Elliot, who are now in preschool and kindergarten respectively.

Charlotte's asking for a new daddy, much to Elliot's disapproval and Amber Amundson's quiet dissuasion. But at nightfall, the three Amundsons are moving forward with lives that seemed paralyzed 365 days ago.

"When the kids are sleeping and I'm lying there in bed," Amber Amundson said, "I think, 'Wow. We made it through another day.'"

U.S. rejects UI foreign students

Ge Wang, the director of the UI Computed Tomography Laboratory, said he hired 29-year-old Ping Wang of Xi'an, China, to work at the lab. After being admitted to the UI earlier this year, Ping Wang was rejected three times in Beijing.

"While I respect the decision, it is a pity that we lost a good postdoctoral fellow candidate," Ge Wang said.

Diana Davies, the interim director of International Students and Scholars, said visas were delayed for four Middle Eastern students because they wish to study "sensitive science" fields such as physics and biochemistry. Davies, who oversees nearly 1,800 international students, said the mathematics department was also hit particularly hard.

"For each one denied, we lose that much more expertise and knowledge," she said.

Xiang Li, the president of the Friendship Association of Chinese Students and Scholars, said two students from Peking University — Ruan Guoxiang and Yuan Liu — had registered with the group earlier this year but did not make the trip.

"This is a personal loss for those students and for the university," Li said.

He added that visa officers in Beijing rejected applicants in a three-minute interview if they suspected a student planned to immigrate to the United States.

A UI Chinese student who spoke under the condition of anonymity said U.S. Embassy officials in Beijing claimed their rejections were not politically motivated or linked to Sept. 11.

"But their policy is affected by external factors," he said.

The student added that after a protest earlier this year over tougher visa restrictions outside the U.S. Embassy in China, officers inside refused 100 applicants in one day.

The remaining eight UI students refused visas came from South Asia.

Deborah Hoe, the president of the Malaysian Student Association, said two Malaysians, one of them a "talented" musician, were refused visas.

"He could have been an asset to the music department and the university," she said.

Hoe said the U.S. Embassy in Malaysia has stopped processing male applications and now performs extensive background checks on students.

Despite the complications, the two students will try again next semester.

"They're not giving up just yet," she said.

Depo-Provera Contraceptive Injection

medroxyprogesterone acetate injectable suspension

DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection (medroxyprogesterone acetate injectable suspension, USP)

This product is intended to prevent pregnancy. It does not protect against HIV infection (AIDS) and other sexually transmitted diseases.

What is DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection? DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection is a form of birth control that is given as an intramuscular injection (a shot) in the buttock or upper arm once every 3 months (13 weeks).

To continue your contraceptive protection, you must return for your next injection promptly at the end of 3 months (13 weeks). DEPO-PROVERA contains medroxyprogesterone acetate, a chemical similar to (but not the same as) the natural hormone progesterone, which is produced by your ovaries during the second half of your menstrual cycle. DEPO-PROVERA acts by preventing your egg cells from ripening. If an egg is not released from the ovaries during your menstrual cycle, it cannot become fertilized by sperm and result in pregnancy. DEPO-PROVERA also causes changes in the lining of your uterus that make it less likely for pregnancy to occur.

How effective is DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection? The efficacy of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection depends on following the recommended dosage schedule exactly (see "How often do I get my shot of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?"). To make sure you are not pregnant when you first get DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection, your first injection must be given ONLY during the first 5 days of a normal menstrual period ONLY within the first 5 days after childbirth or breast-feeding and, if exclusively breast-feeding, ONLY at the sixth week after childbirth. It is a long-term injectable contraceptive when administered at 3-month (13-week) intervals.

DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection is over 99% effective, making it one of the most reliable methods of birth control available. This means that the average annual pregnancy rate is less than one for every 100 women who use DEPO-PROVERA. The effectiveness of most contraceptive methods depends in part on how reliably each woman uses the method. The effectiveness of DEPO-PROVERA depends only on the patient returning every 3 months (13 weeks) for her next injection. Your health-care provider will help you compare DEPO-PROVERA with other contraceptive methods and give you the information you need in order to decide which contraceptive method is the right choice for you.

The following table shows the percent of women who got pregnant when using different kinds of contraceptive methods. It gives both the lowest expected rate of pregnancy (the rate expected in women who use each method exactly as it should be used) and the typical rate of pregnancy (which includes women who became pregnant because they forgot to use their birth control or because they did not follow the directions exactly).

Table with 3 columns: Method, Lowest Expected, Typical. Rows include DEPO-PROVERA, Implants (Norplant), Female sterilization, Male sterilization, Oral contraceptive (pill), IUD, Progesteron only, Copper T 380A, Condom (with spermicide), Diaphragm (with spermicide), Cervical cap, Withdrawal, Periodic abstinence, Spermicide alone, Vaginal sponge, and Abstinence.

Source: Trussard et al. Obstet Gynecol. 1990;76:559-567. *From "Nipster" package insert. Who should not use DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection? Not all women should use DEPO-PROVERA. You should not use DEPO-PROVERA if you have any of the following conditions: • if you think you might be pregnant • if you have any vaginal bleeding without a known reason

Birth control you think about just 4 x a year.

- if you have had cancer of the breast
• if you have had a stroke
• if you have or have had blood clots (phlebitis) in your legs
• if you have problems with your liver or liver disease
• if you are allergic to DEPO-PROVERA (medroxyprogesterone acetate or any of its other ingredients)
What other things should I consider before using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection? You will have a physical examination before your doctor prescribes DEPO-PROVERA. It is important to tell your health-care provider if you have any of the following:
• a family history of breast cancer
• an abnormal mammogram (breast x-ray), fibrocystic breast disease, breast nodules or lumps, or bleeding from your nipples
• kidney disease
• irregular or scanty menstrual periods
• high blood pressure
• migraine headaches
• asthma
• epilepsy (convulsions or seizures)
• diabetes or a family history of diabetes
• a history of depression
• if you are taking any prescription or over-the-counter medications
This product is intended to prevent pregnancy. It does not protect against transmission of HIV (AIDS) and other sexually transmitted diseases such as chlamydia, genital herpes, genital warts, gonorrhea, hepatitis B, and syphilis.

What if I want to become pregnant after using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection? Because DEPO-PROVERA is a long-acting birth control method, it takes some time after your last injection for its effect to wear off. Based on the results from a large study done in the United States, for women who stop using DEPO-PROVERA in order to become pregnant, it is expected that about half of those who become pregnant will do so in about 10 months after their last injection; about two thirds of those who become pregnant will do so in about 12 months; about 83% of those who become pregnant will do so in about 15 months; and about 93% of those who become pregnant will do so in about 18 months after their last injection. The length of time you use DEPO-PROVERA has no effect on how long it takes you to become pregnant after you stop using it.

What are the risks of using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection? Irregular Menstrual Bleeding The side effect reported most frequently by women who use DEPO-PROVERA for contraception is a change in their normal menstrual cycle. During the first year of using DEPO-PROVERA, you might have one or more of the following changes: irregular or unpredictable bleeding or spotting; an increase or decrease in menstrual bleeding; or no bleeding at all. Usually, heavy or continuous bleeding, however, is not a usual effect of DEPO-PROVERA; and if this happens, you should see your health-care provider right away. With continued use of DEPO-PROVERA, bleeding usually decreases, and many women stop having periods completely. In clinical studies of DEPO-PROVERA, 55% of the women studied reported no menstrual bleeding (amenorrhea) after 1 year of use, and 68% of the women studied reported no menstrual bleeding after 2 years of use. The reason that your periods stop is because DEPO-PROVERA causes a resting state in your ovaries. When your ovaries do not release an egg monthly, the regular monthly growth of the lining of your uterus does not occur and, therefore, the bleeding that comes with your normal menstruation does not take place. When you stop using DEPO-PROVERA your menstrual period will usually, in time, return to its normal cycle.

2. Bone Mineral Changes Use of DEPO-PROVERA may be associated with a decrease in the amount of mineral stored in your bones. This could increase your risk of developing bone fractures. The rate of bone mineral loss is greatest in the early years of DEPO-PROVERA use, but after that, it begins to resemble the normal rate of age-related bone mineral loss.

3. Cancer Studies of women who have used different forms of contraception found that women who used DEPO-PROVERA for contraception had no increased overall risk of developing cancer of the breast, ovaries, uterus, cervix, or liver. However, women under 35 years whose first exposure to DEPO-PROVERA was within the previous 4 to 5 years may have a slightly increased risk of developing breast cancer similar to that seen with oral contraceptives. You should discuss this with your health-care provider.

4. Unexpected Pregnancy Because DEPO-PROVERA is such an effective contraceptive method, the risk of accidental pregnancy for women who get their shots regularly (every 3 months (13 weeks)) is very low. While there have been reports of an increased risk of low birth weight and neonatal infant death or other health problems in infants conceived close to the time of injection, such pregnancies are uncommon. If you think you may have become pregnant while using DEPO-PROVERA for contraception, see your health-care provider as soon as possible.

5. Allergic Reactions Some women using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection have reported severe and potentially life-threatening allergic reactions known as anaphylaxis and anaphylactoid reactions. Symptoms include the sudden onset of hives or swelling and itching of the skin, breathing difficulties, and a drop in blood pressure.

6. Other Risks Women who use hormone-based contraceptives may have an increased risk of blood clots or stroke. Also, if a contraceptive method fails, there is a possibility that the fertilized egg will begin to develop outside of the uterus (ectopic pregnancy). While these events are rare, you should tell your health-care provider if you have any of the problems listed in the next section.

What symptoms may signal problems while using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection? Call your health-care provider immediately if any of these problems occur following an injection of DEPO-PROVERA:

- sharp chest pain, coughing up of blood, or sudden shortness of breath (indicating a possible clot in the lung)
• sudden severe headache or vomiting, dizziness or fainting, problems with your eyesight or speech, weakness or numbness in an arm or leg (indicating a possible stroke)
• severe pain or swelling in the calf (indicating a possible clot in the leg)
• unusually heavy vaginal bleeding
• severe pain or tenderness in the lower abdominal area
• persistent pain, pus, or bleeding at the injection site

What are the possible side effects of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection? 1. Weight Gain You may experience a weight gain while you are using DEPO-PROVERA. About two thirds of the women who use DEPO-PROVERA in clinical trials reported a weight gain of about 5 pounds during the first year of use. You may continue to gain weight after the first year. Women in one large study who used DEPO-PROVERA for 2 years gained an average total of 8.1 pounds over those 2 years, or approximately 4 pounds per year. Women who continued for 4 years gained an average total of 13.8 pounds over those 4 years, or approximately 3.5 pounds per year. Women who continued for 6 years gained an average total of 16.5 pounds over those 6 years, or approximately 2.75 pounds per year.

2. Other Side Effects In a clinical study of over 3900 women who used DEPO-PROVERA for up to 7 years, some women reported the following effects that may or may not have been related to their use of DEPO-PROVERA: irregular menstrual bleeding, amenorrhea, headache, nervousness, abdominal cramps, dizziness, weakness or fatigue, decreased sexual desire, leg cramps, nausea, vaginal discharge or irritation, breast swelling and tenderness, bloating, swelling of the hands or feet, backache, depression, insomnia, acne, pelvic pain, no hair growth or excessive hair loss, rash, hot flashes, and joint pain. Other problems were reported by very few of the women in the clinical trials, but some of these could be serious. These include convulsions, jaundice, urinary tract infections, allergic reactions, fainting, paralysis, osteoporosis, lack of return to fertility, deep vein thrombosis, pulmonary embolism, breast cancer, or cervical cancer. If these or any other problems occur during your use of DEPO-PROVERA, discuss them with your health-care provider.

Should any precautions be followed during use of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection? 1. Missed Periods During the time you are using DEPO-PROVERA for contraception, you may skip a period, or your periods may stop completely. If you have been receiving your DEPO-PROVERA injections regularly every 3 months (13 weeks), then you are probably not pregnant. However, if you think that you may be pregnant, see your health-care provider.

If you are scheduled for any laboratory tests, tell your health-care provider that you are using DEPO-PROVERA for contraception. Certain blood tests are affected by hormones such as DEPO-PROVERA.

2. Drug Interactions Cydren (aminothiothamide) is an anticancer drug that may significantly decrease the effectiveness of DEPO-PROVERA if the two drugs are given during the same time.

3. Nursing Mothers Although DEPO-PROVERA can be passed to the nursing infant in the breast milk, no harmful effects have been found in these children. DEPO-PROVERA does not prevent the breasts from producing milk, so it can be used by nursing mothers. However, to minimize the amount of DEPO-PROVERA that is passed to the infant in the first weeks after birth, you should wait until 6 weeks after childbirth before you start using DEPO-PROVERA for contraception.

How often do I get my shot of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection? The recommended dose of DEPO-PROVERA is 150 mg every 3 months (13 weeks) given in a single intramuscular injection in the buttock or upper arm. To make sure that you are not pregnant at the time of the first injection, it is essential that the injection be given ONLY during the first 5 days of a normal menstrual period. If used following the delivery of a child, the first injection of DEPO-PROVERA MUST be given within 5 days after childbirth if you are not breast-feeding or 6 weeks after childbirth if you are exclusively breast-feeding. If you wait longer than 3 months (13 weeks) between injections, or longer than 6 weeks after delivery, your health-care provider should determine that you are not pregnant before giving you your injection of DEPO-PROVERA.

Spanish double-major into the spotlight, she still has trouble viewing the picture.

"I cry when I look at it," said McFarlane, 20, who was 19 when the photo was snapped as she watched televised accounts of the attack in the IMU. "It's really hard. It reopens every wound that day brought out in me."

Since its initial appearance Sept. 12, 2001, in the Iowa City Press-Citizen, McFarlane's image has appeared in such publications as the Chicago Tribune, Time, People, Newsweek, the Dallas Morning News, and the Cairo Times in Egypt. Add the television viewers who watched Ed Bradley of "60 Minutes" hold up the Cairo Times copy during a report, and a conservative estimate suggests her picture has appeared approximately 58.7 million times worldwide.

Today, McFarlane's picture debuts once again, this time in a Smithsonian exhibit titled Sept. 11: Bearing Witness to History. The image will appear prominently near the exhibition's front alongside a photograph of President Bush, said Kathleen Kendrick, a Smithsonian curator.

"It's one of the first ones you'll see going into the exhibit," said Kendrick, a UI alumna. "That photo showed what the rest of the world was feeling on that day."

Such fame frightens McFarlane, who never expected the photo to leave Iowa City. Shortly after the attacks, she received "creepy" calls from Marines who wanted her e-mail address and a man who repeatedly told her, "You're a wonderful person."

Most attention was positive, however — friends and relatives sent her publications in which her picture had appeared, and her parents keep multiple copies of the Chicago Tribune, Time, and People issues that ran her photo.

She said she hopes the picture shows victims and their families that the rest of the world mourns their losses, but in the same breath, she wishes her fame hadn't come from the worst terrorist attack in American history.

"I'm not Nelson Mandela, Mother Theresa, or the Dalai Lama, but if people see my picture and they're moved by it, then I feel it's my duty to be a good person because apparently it has meant something to a lot of them," she said.

News of the attacks reached McFarlane after a 6 a.m. jog and a breakfast of fried egg whites, bacon, and toast. She was watching "Good Morning America" when American Airlines Flight 11 hit the north World Trade Center tower.

When McFarlane went to shower, she heard her roommate yell that a plane had just struck the south tower.

"My legs gave way underneath me, and I just started sobbing," McFarlane said. "Everything about that day just hurt."

McFarlane attended class, but around noon, as fears of war and more attacks swept the campus, she sat down with a crowd of students at the IMU to watch the coverage.

Enter Danny Wilcox Frazier, an award-winning photographer then working for the Press-Citizen. Now a UI graduate student and a Daily Iowan photography coach, Frazier photographed reactions downtown before heading to the IMU.

Frazier said he prefers capturing his subjects' emotions as an "invisible observer," so he dropped to his hands and knees and crawled to the front of the crowd. He rose to an Indian-style sitting position, raised his Canon DCS 520 camera, and shot what he called "one of the easiest photographs I've ever taken."

"Megan's facial expression was as honest a reaction as I saw that day outside of New York City," Frazier said. "She was so wrapped up in the event that she just ignored me. It was such a real moment."

The next day, McFarlane's father, Jerry McFarlane, was shocked to discover his daughter on the cover of the Chicago Tri- bune as he sat down for a cup of coffee in his Wheaton, Ill., home.

"Oh, poor Megan," he said to his wife, Susan McFarlane, as she prepared for work. "I've never seen her this distraught."

The photo's circulation shocked Megan McFarlane as well, but during this past year, she has focused on healing, she said.

"I have always believed in the goodness of humanity," she said. "I'm an idealist — I still am — and I have faith in God. Always in God."

Aftermath sends alum to N. Zealand

BY JENNIFER STURM
THE DAILY IOWAN

The attacks of Sept. 11 have taken UI alum Michael Weinstock to unexpected places: the gruesome scene at Ground Zero as a volunteer firefighter, the funeral of his best friend, and back to the UI to lecture to a class.

Now, one year after the events that changed his world, Weinstock is in New Zealand to meet a family that snapped a picture of him on that horrific day.

On Tuesday, Weinstock held a press conference with New Zealand Prime Minister Helen Clark to discuss the anniversary of the attacks. He hoped to put a human face on the tragedy and said he choked up, recalling the death of best friend Jonathan Lelpi, 29, who died when the south tower collapsed.

The people of New Zealand have no connection with the terrorist attacks on America other than from television, Weinstock said.

"It's easy for them to see what happened on TV," he said in a telephone interview. "The clips have been shown so many times it's almost like a movie. I hope to add a human element to what otherwise seems like a distant event."

But Weinstock did not go to the country seeking publicity — "I didn't anticipate all this attention," he said — but rather to reunite with a couple whom he met one year ago today.

Weinstock, as a volunteer firefighter, was trying to clear people from the congested Brooklyn Bridge in case an attack hit there. He met the couple on the bridge, and they helped him carry an elderly woman back to Manhattan. They took the photo showing the 29-year-old helping a woman with respiratory problems across the Brooklyn Bridge.

Since then, he has kept in touch with them. Recently, he finally gave in to his desire to meet them.

"We'd e-mail every so often," the 1994 UI graduate said. "They would always end their e-mails with, 'When are you coming out to New Zealand?' I finally thought, why don't I take them up on their offer?"

"I helped them out, and they in turn helped me carry an old woman who had difficulty breathing and take her back into Manhattan."

Weinstock still remembers the day as if it were yesterday.

He was in his downtown Brooklyn apartment on his first day of vacation when he heard of a fire at the World Trade Center. He looked out his window and saw flames.

Weinstock, an assistant district attorney in the Domestic Violence Bureau in Brooklyn, worked below the trade centers, saving lives and treating injured people. Dead bodies and body parts covering the pavement were the first things he saw.

Recalling the events of Sept. 11 has helped Weinstock to heal. He spoke at Macbride Auditorium April 1 for Professor Jay Holstein's class and the public last spring.

"I'm just a regular guy from New York," he said. "I played a very small role in a city that did a lot, where a lot of people sacrificed much more than I did."

The Presidential Essentials

Recent reports in the press on the UI Presidential Search Committee prompt comment. It would be nice to have someone who consults staff, students, and faculty and is committed to human rights. But what is essential in a first-rate university president is (1) absolute, unqualified commitment to academic excellence in teaching and research — they are the reason for the existence of a university, (2) unquestionable ability to run a complex and very large institution — this is what a university president does, and (3) genuine political savvy — a UI president must be effective in dealing with the governor and the Legislature, be they Republican or Democrat.

Panayot Butchvarov

when we need to be demonstrating to the world's people that America is ready to work with them to forge a better world, Bush and Cheney's aggressive war talk sends a poisonous message: The United States will ignore any sense of global consensus in the name of making the world a safer place. Clearly, the hypocrisy and arrogance of that stance is being noticed and decried by the people and governments of nations all around the planet, including many U.S. friends.

Without the support of our friends and allies in Europe and elsewhere, without the support of Iraq's neighbors and the Muslim world in general, and without any direct provocation that would provide some degree of moral authority to our response (as in Afghanistan), I believe that launching a major military offensive against Iraq would create more intractable problems than it would solve.

Let's not hand Saddam Hussein a scenario in which he has nothing to lose by using chemical or biological weaponry. Instead, let's use our own arsenal of weapons of mass destruction as a clear deterrent. That preventive approach worked for years during the Cold War; why isn't it good enough now?

Attack on Iraq = Holy War

Sometimes, I wonder if President Bush really thinks about the dreadful results that would likely emanate from America attacking Iraq. Attacking Iraq without provocation poses grave danger of catastrophic consequences. Starting a war in the Middle East against an Islamic nation risks the possibility that other Muslim countries might join Iraq in fighting the United States. Bush says the war on terror is not a war against Islam, but if other Islamic nations join with Iraq in fighting America, it becomes a Holy War. A world Holy War in the Middle East could be the war to end all wars. For our country to start a war there would be foolish and suicidal. All wars are horrific, but a Holy War is the worst kind of war.

Editorial

Sensationalist coverage of Sept. 11 is unethical

Today, many newspapers across the country will run special sections recounting in graphic detail the horrendous events that shook the foundation of our nation one year ago.

The television networks, going commercial free, will repeatedly show the sensational images of airplanes hijacked by knife-wielding terrorists smashing into our very symbols of financial prowess and military might.

This will be the culmination of weeks of media coverage of the anniversary for these newspapers and networks. They have covered every angle, and unfortunately, it's for the wrong reasons.

The Daily Iowan has tried to strike a different tone. We made the decision — like organizers of most local commemoration events — to keep our coverage simple and somber. The type of stories that don't try to exploit the tremendous emotions associated with the event — nostalgia, hatred, anger, sadness.

We've also tried to keep our coverage to a minimum. While some newspapers have been writing stories on the topic for weeks, we opted to do a five-part series of stories this week alone.

We recognize that it's not time to try to sell copies or get more readers by sensationalizing the coverage. That would be unethical.

Certainly, it's an important story, but we don't need to relive the precise moments that the planes sliced through the skyscrapers, igniting pure hell — flames, falling bodies, and collapsing skyscrapers. We don't need to go through those painful moments. We know they happened, and we must move on.

We do need to remember the precious loss of life that our nation endured on that day, how we changed as a people, and what lessons we learned.

How did we let this happen? What can we do to make sure it won't happen again? How can we foster a better understanding among everyone in society?

Let's hope that the media surprise me and cover these forward-thinking, critical stories today. If not — and we get bombarded by the opposite — it will be a worse day than it needs to be.

"Yes, we are still angry, and emotions are high. And yes, we lost a lot of people in these terrible events," said Will Norton Jr., the dean of the College of Journalism at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, who called on the media to cover the anniversary responsibly. "But how do we keep the public rhetoric focused on solving the problems that caused the attacks? We don't do it, as media, by pandering. That's not what audiences need."

No open microphones on Patriot Day; just be

Earlier this week, I attended a lecture by Robert Siegel, the editor in chief of The Onion. I found the discourse to be both stimulating and entertaining — until, of course, the microphone was opened up to the audience for questions.

As a civilization, we can only hope that history does not judge us based on what the lowest of our morons happens to say into an open mike.

One such moron on Monday night, thinking himself such the wit, asked Siegel (in slightly more offensive terms) how often he moved his bowels. His follow-up question ("Have you ever tasted human flesh?") was even more tactful and appropriate.

The next said, "Hey, do you wanna f the rest of these questions and go smoke a bowl?"

And the self-indulgent verbal masturbation continued for upwards of 40 minutes.

My point? That it is almost never a good idea to offer up an open microphone to an unmediated group of people. They will misuse this power faster than Dean Jones with a typewriter.

Case in point: Exactly one year ago today, our country was shaken to the core by terrorist attacks that, at the time, appeared to threaten our very existence. Not knowing what else to do, I went to a candlelight vigil with my friend Tyler.

As we approached the Pentacrest, the visual was amazing: Five or six hundred students, sitting silently on the grass, holding candles, listening to Mary Sue Coleman speak.

And then, they opened up the microphone. Big mistake. Each person who stepped up to the platform thought that he or she had some sort of new, profound way of looking at the situation that would put it into perspective for the rest of us, which of course, he or she did not. As one speaker stepped down and another came up, I found myself wishing that they were at a loss for words like the rest of us.

Those who didn't insist on stroking their own profundity instead thrust their political agendas down our throats.

Finally, one man got fed up with it. "People died today!" he shouted from the back of the crowd. "And you're up there making political speeches!"

This incited a political shouting match throughout the crowd (on a day that, above all else, was supposed to bring about unity), and Tyler and I left to go study and get away from it all.

"That's what I hate about Iowa City," I said. "Everything has to be so damn political."

"Yeah," he said. "You can't just be."

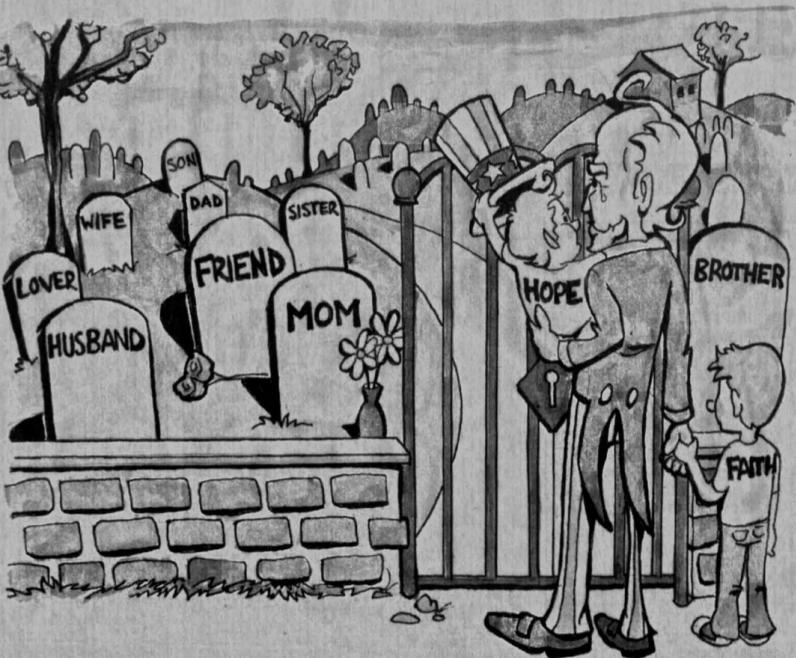

So today, on the anniversary of the attacks, I have no advice for you. I won't stand on my pulpit and tell you to mourn in a certain way; I won't expect you to feel the same way I do about a war with Iraq; I won't even pseudo-intellectually spout inapplicable Gandhi quotes to try to manipulate your feelings. I have no advice for you; but I do have a request: Just be.

President Bush has declared today to be Patriot Day, but although I consider it to be a nice gesture I'm not really sure what it means. It's doubtful whether it will ever become a national holiday — we already have too many of those. To save space, they would have to combine it with Labor Day, and then we would just have a day of barbecuing and national mourning.

So I'm going to observe Sept. 11 by not being political, not being cynical, and not even really being that patriotic — instead, I'm going to try to just be.

Maybe it can be the one day of the year when we can all get over ourselves.

Celebrating freedom, art

BY JESSIE ROLPH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Joe Mirabella remembers "every blinking moment" of a long day that seems like 10 years ago and yesterday all at once. In a day that didn't seem real, with newscasts on the corner and an eerie silence in the sky, he gathered with friends at Morgan's Bar & Grill to comfort each other.

That's why this year on Sept. 11, Mirabella will again meet friends at Morgan's. Instead of waiting nervously to hear from friends in New York, they will celebrate their freedom through poetry.

Today, the Iowa City arts community will offer people a sanctuary from the first anniversary of the terrorist attacks on New York and Washington, D.C. People will have an opportunity to voice their emotions through poetry, music, and open discussions.

Mirabella has been organizing free biweekly Wednesday poetry slams since June at Morgan's, located in the Sheraton Hotel. The slams — performers sign up at 9 p.m. and begin at 10 p.m. — are generally a fun event, where poets perform three-minute original pieces and audiences cheer, laugh, and boo. But when Mirabella noticed that a slam would fall on Sept. 11, he stopped in his tracks.

"I was like, 'Should it be something we do?'" Mirabella said. "It didn't take me long to say, 'Yes, that's exactly what we should do,' because poetry — especially the poetry slam and art in general — is about the community."

The slam will start with something respectful; poets have been asked to reflect on the anniversary. However, Mirabella wants to energize, not depress, the crowd.

"It's going to be a celebration of our freedoms, especially the freedom of speech," he said. "The audience can expect to hear anything."

That freedom is what will take Blake Rowley to work tonight. He refuses to sit at home all day staring at endless television coverage.

Arts events today

- Poetry Slam: 10 p.m., Morgan's Bar & Grill.
- DJ Almost and DJ Vapor, 9 p.m., Green Room.
- Hate Daises, Marcato, Malakai, and the Midnight Thunder Express, 8 p.m., Gabe's.
- "Reflections on a Global Year: The Worldview, Post-9/11," 3:30 p.m., Meeting Room A, Iowa City Public Library.

He refuses to let terrorists make him feel trapped and scared. Instead, he'll head to the same place he went a year ago — the Green Room, 509 S. Gilbert St.

Rowley, the Green Room manager, considered not opening this year out of respect of the anniversary, but he wanted to provide a place for people to go.

"We have to go on with everyday life," he said. "The date should be remembered but not dwelled on non-stop."

A year ago, Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise played while friends gathered in the gloomy atmosphere to grieve together. It was soothing compared to watching the endless news coverage on TV, Rowley said.

He hopes that people will come to the Green Room tonight to vent their emotions. Drum-and-bass music will take the stage at 9 p.m. with DJ Almost and DJ Vapor.

"What are people going to do? Watch TV and dwell on something that's very negative all day and night?" Rowley said.

Rather than silently reflect, patrons at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., will vent their anger over the anniversary with a metal throwdown.

Taking the stage at 8 p.m. are the Hate Daises, Marcato, Malakai, and the Midnight Thunder Express. The show is open to all ages and has a $5 cover.

When concert organizer Chris Bobbitt woke up a year ago, he expected to hear "happy birthday," not that airplanes had hit the World Trade Center. That prompted him to put together the metal show this year to celebrate his birthday and help others cope with the anniversary.

"I want people to be able to escape the national problems," he said. "I want everyone to release all their anger, with rock as their outlet."

A more quiet discussion of changes over the past year worldwide will be the International Writing Program's way of remembering the anniversary.

In a free panel discussion at 3:30 p.m. in Meeting Room A of the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., six writers in the program will discuss "Reflections on a Global Year: The Worldview, Post-9/11."

"It's a good opportunity to hear what writers from around the world have to say about Sept. 11. It has affected not just the United States, but every country," said IWP Director Christopher Merrill.

The panel, which will offer short presentations and question-and-answer sessions, will include poet Sunny Ayewanu of Nigeria, poet Sukrita Kumar of India, and fiction writer and essayist Guillermo Martinez of Argentina.

The war against terrorism is being waged around the world, including the home countries of many IWP writers. They know the dangers of terrorism first hand, Merrill said.

"It gives us a more complex understanding and insights we wouldn't hear otherwise," he said.

Images of a city's resiliency

NEW YORK (AP) — Exhausted rescue workers, numb from hours of searching for human remains, sit silently at the remains of the World Trade Center. The charred facade of the north tower stands amid devastation. And deep in "the pit," a lone police officer — on hands and knees — sifts through rocky debris.

These and other images from The City Resilient, a collection of 73 images by photographer Joel Meyerowitz, are on view at the former AT&T headquarters near Ground Zero beginning Tuesday and running through Nov. 3. Some of the pictures measure as large as 20 feet across; most have never before been shown in the United States.

The exhibit will travel to Chicago, San Francisco, and Washington, D.C. A smaller version will open at the Gerald Ford Museum in Grand Rapids, Mich., on Sept. 11 and tour the country over the next two years. Another version of the exhibit is being shown simultaneously as part of Sept. 11 remembrances in 50 foreign cities, including London, Berlin, and Jerusalem.

The images, part of the Museum of the City of New York's photographic archive of the disaster and its aftermath, have an intimacy that's lacking in the news images so familiar to the world. Unlike news photos, there is not a single image of the attacks themselves.

Yet some of the pictures, shown to almost 2 million people overseas since February, have prompted viewers to shiver visibly and sometimes to weep out loud, museum Director Robert Macdonald said.

NY gets its Yeah Yeahs out

BY DAN MALONEY
THE DAILY IOWAN

A rock 'n' roll trend has certainly swept over New York.

The big city has seen many musical explosions from the disco and punk of the '70s to the no-wave of the '80s. As a testament to the no-wave, bands such as Liars, Radio 4, !!!, and Ex-Models have started a revival — making music that is danceable and rhythmically based and that ties in lyrically with social and political issues.

Another group leading the call in New York is the Yeah Yeah Yeahs. The band has been receiving quite a bit of press for its vivacious live shows led by fashion-conscious singer Karen O, as well as press for being local heartthrobs, the Strokes, favorite band.

Despite this, Yeah Yeah Yeahs don't care about the press, or the Strokes, for the matter. The music speaks for itself.

Yeah Yeah Yeahs is undeniably one of the best-kept secrets in the underground New York scene, but the secret is being spread by the release of the band's self-titled EP on Touch and Go Records. The secret has even been spread to the United Kingdom, where the British are finally recognizing the validity of American rock music.

The first track on the EP, "Bang," is fitting because of an immediate guitar screech and drum beat. Karen O then kicks in with a sass that comes off salty-sweet and innocently snotty. "Bang" holds a danceable beat and impeccable guitar tone but still remains raw and dirty.

The next track, "Mystery Girl," begins with a buildup that, after two minutes, finally breaks out. However, Karen O squeals like a cheerleader and keeps the song interesting.

On the track "Art Star," the tempo starts slowly but turns into a sonic freakout with grind-blast beats from the drums and piercing screams from Karen O; but then the song quickly returns to the dance with a clever "Do Do Do Do" sing-a-long.

With the listeners not knowing what to expect next, "Miles Away" kicks in slugging, and Karen O rants like a young, pissed-off Iggy Pop. The guitars are definitely teetering into the red, making the static almost unbearable, but they are still compelling because you don't know what's going to happen next.

The last track on the EP is "Our Time," which closes the album with a mid-tempo swing and ballad-style formula that has Karen O's voice sounding sweeter than ever — but that quickly gets thrown out when Karen O screeches into the chorus.

Yeah Yeah Yeahs seems like just a couple of art kids who got together to rock out and ended up getting signed, but that's not entirely the case. Yes, Yeah Yeah Yeahs is fashionable and marketable, but it also has a lot of talent and presence, which the EP proves.

Karen O, as well as drummer Brian Chase and guitar player Nick Zinner, bring a new sound to New York, even if their influences say otherwise. The rock 'n' roll explosion in New York may not be the new-wave or no-wave, but it might just be the new new-wave.

Ferentz surprised Hawkeyes favored Saturday

BY JEROD LEUPOLD
 THE DAILY IOWAN

During his Tuesday press conference, Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said he was surprised that the Hawkeyes were favored to win Saturday's annual game with archrival Iowa State by 3½ to 4 points.

Iowa dominated the intrastate rivalry for 15 years under former coach Hayden Fry. But for the last four years, the Cyclones have ruled.

"[The series] wasn't competitive then; now, we are fighting to get a win," Ferentz said. This year things may be looking up.

Comparing the matchups, Ferentz said there were similarities in the quarterback position, but the ultimate difference between Iowa's Brad Banks and Iowa State's Seneca Wallace lies in experience.

"Banks has only two games under his belt. Wallace has a season versus top-tier teams," Ferentz said.

Indiana's Antwaan Randle El and Wallace are the two best athletes Ferentz has seen in recent years. In preparation, Banks has been a help to the Iowa defenses because of their similar styles.

Greiving, Fred Russell (who has gained 320 yards in two games), and Jermelle Lewis (144 yards in the first two games). Iowa State has Hiawatha Rutland with 362 yards, Brian Thompson with 136 yards, and Michael Wagner with 68 yards thus far this season.

In the last two games, Iowa has managed to elevate its passing game — 473 yards and five touchdowns. On defense, the Hawkeyes stopped Miami of Ohio's pass-happy offense and have allowed 45 points in two games.

Iowa State has thrown for 800 yards and six touchdowns.

Iowa State opponents have accumulated a meager 47 points in three games.

"They have weapons at every phase," Ferentz said. "No one dimension will win the game."

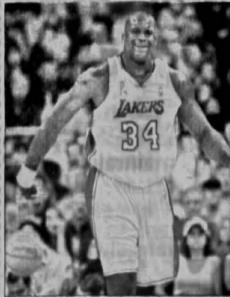

Iowa enters Saturday's game with a 2-0 record; Iowa State is 2-1, having suffered a close loss to Florida State on Aug. 24, 31-38.

With an increased level of competition, Ferentz said Saturday's game should be exciting.

"It is a tribute to football in Iowa," he said.

Shaq to undergo surgery on toe today

LOS ANGELES — Los Angeles Lakers center Shaquille O'Neal is scheduled to have surgery today on his arthritic right big toe.

The 30-year-old O'Neal could be sidelined for up to six weeks, meaning he might not be ready when the three-time defending NBA champions open the season Oct. 29 against San Antonio.

He will undergo a cheilectomy, the removal of bone spurs in the joint that have caused pain and restricted his motion.

Dr. Robert Mohr will perform the operation at UCLA Medical Center.

O'Neal played last season using a combination of medication, orthotics, and other treatments to ease the pain, but he still was bothered by the sore toe.

Suter retires after 17-year career

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Gary Suter, a four-time NHL All-Star defenseman, retired Tuesday.

Suter, a two-time U.S. Olympic player, spent the past four seasons with the Sharks in a 17-year career that included stops in Calgary and Chicago. He won the Calder Trophy as the NHL's top rookie in 1985-86 with the Flames.

Last season, Suter led Sharks defensemen in scoring for the second-straight time, recording six goals and 27 assists while playing in all 82 games. He also played for the United States' silver medal-winning team in the Salt Lake City Olympics in February.

"It's disappointing to see him go, but he's going out on top," Sharks coach Darryl Sutter said.

Suter finished his NHL career with 203 goals and 641 assists. He is one of just four American-born players and 15 defensemen to score 200 goals.

Anniversary of attacks poses powerful questions on healing

BY LAURA VECSEY
 BALTIMORE SUN

NEW YORK — Baseball will be played here tonight. Yankees-Orioles. It said so right up there on the side of Yankee Stadium. In big block letters it promised: Baltimore, 7:05 p.m.

Baseball goes on, like life does, though not without a long, sad pause at 9:11 p.m. and an undeniable sense that despite our routines and return to normalcy, nothing is quite the same.

When the baseball schedule came out and the Orioles saw they were going to play the Yankees in New York on Sept. 11, it was not a date to be anticipated with any relish.

The anniversary poses a powerfully personal question for everyone: how to commemorate the tragedy. But to be in New York or at the Pentagon or among those mourning those brave, doomed airline passengers, this necessitates an extra dose of emotional resolve.

"I know some of the guys were scared," Orioles outfielder Melvin Mora said Tuesday.

"We took a train all the way here, and some of the guys were talking about it. I told the guys: 'Listen, New Yorkers are strong people.' I talked to each of them, especially the Latin players, and said it's different playing here. People don't care. If they get hit, they say, 'Let's go.' Nobody stops in this city. Look at what happened to all these people, and they still are strong."

Mora, whose big-league career started with the New York Mets and whose wife is from the Coney Island section of Brooklyn, feels in his heart he's still part New Yorker. The words he preached on the train to his teammates turned out to be exactly the correct read on the city.

"When we stepped off the train [in New York Monday] and the guys saw that people in New York weren't scared, they understood. There was no anxiety. People were out walking in Past stays in the past for Georgia running back

BY PAUL NEWBERRY
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATHENS, Ga. — Musa Smith didn't tell anyone about his father's misdeeds when he got to Georgia.

Not his coaches. Not his teammates.

"It was in the past," said Smith, a junior running back. "I dealt with it in the past."

Even after the events of Sept. 11, Smith managed to keep anyone in Athens from finding out that his father's Pennsylvania farm was once dubbed "Camp Terror," a place where Islamic radicals were allegedly trained to wreak havoc on America.

"He's so quiet," coach Mark Richt said. "I had no idea."

Now, it's all out in the open. Kelvin Smith spoke for the first time in a decade about his supposed ties to terrorism, putting an uncomfortable spotlight on his soft-spoken son.

"I'm not really happy about it coming up," said Musa Smith, a key player for the nation's No. 9-ranked team.

The elder Smith, also known as Abdul Muhaimin in court documents, discussed his past in an interview in the current issue of ESPN The Magazine.

A decade ago, Smith's farm was used as a training ground by Islamic extremists plotting to assassinate world leaders and blow up New York landmarks, including the United Nations and the Lincoln Tunnel.

Musa Smith was only 10 when federal investigators told his father that the trainees were anti-American terrorists. Eight days later, on Feb. 26, 1993, a Ryder truck exploded in the World Trade Center, killing six and injuring more than 1,000.

Kelvin Smith denies knowing anything about the terror plot, but he was later convicted of dumping assault rifles in a river and lying to investigators. As his son finished his junior

Bradley hands Hawkeyes second consecutive road loss

BY ALI NOLLER
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The Robertson Field House proved to be too menacing of a challenge for the Hawkeye volleyball team to overcome as it dropped their second match of the season to an Illinois opponent, this time to Missouri Valley team Bradley.

The Braves boast an .800 winning percentage on their court since the start of the 1999 season, and they ruled in their 3-0 sweep of the Hawkeyes.

The Hawkeyes' loss to Bradley was their second consecutive after dropping three to the Braves last season.

The Hawkeyes were playing with an adjusted lineup because of Amoreena Reynolds' sprained ankle, which left the sophomore hitter sidelined.

The change accounted for a bright spot in an otherwise dismal outing, as freshman Echaika Agba came on strong to lead the Hawkeyes with a career-high 17 kills. Also hot for the Hawkeyes was senior Kelli Chesnut, who returned to her power-hitting groove with nine kills and 11 digs while hitting at a .529 clip.

After a 4-4 tie to start game one, the Hawkeyes dropped four points to fall behind, 8-4. Iowa was able to regroup to take 10 of the next 17 to close the gap to one before tying the game at 17. After several lead changes, and the victory within its grasp, Iowa faltered while Bradley flourished to take the game, 30-28.

The Braves' momentum propelled them to an early lead in game two, with several Iowa charges that came up short. The second game would again belong to Bradley, 30-22.

A last gasp in the third game — the Hawkeyes poured it on to come close but not close enough — as they dropped the game (30-27) and the series.

Iowa now has a few days to rejuvenate before it returns to Illinois for the third time in a week to take on a trio of Midwestern teams. Coach Rita Buck-Crockett will have some work to do on her team, which has gone 0-6 in its last two outings.

Luckily for the Hawkeyes, time is on their side as Big Ten competition will not resume until Sept. 27 with Iowa hosting Michigan.

The Hawkeyes (3-2) will next travel to Macomb, Ill., to compete in the Western Illinois Tournament. Play is slated to begin Friday at 1 p.m. with the Hawkeyes taking on Northwestern State.

Q & A

with
Bo Anderson

Bo Anderson is a senior on the Iowa men's golf team, and he has been a key contributor since his first round of collegiate play. He led the Hawkeyes with a 74.5 average in the spring, while turning in Iowa's best Big Ten performance — tying for 13th overall. He placed third overall in the Big Ten in 2001 and competed in every event dating back to fall 1999. This streak ended when he didn't participate in the Badger Invitational on Sept. 6 through Sunday after subpar performances in qualifying. Anderson spoke with DI sports-writer Drew Manroe about not playing in the Badger Invitational, dealing with pressure, and his future in golf.

DI: How does this year's team compare with teams you've played on in the past?
 Anderson: This team is quite a bit younger and not as experienced. But it's an enthusiastic team, and that should be exciting.

DI: How much are you hoping to improve your scoring average this fall?

Anderson: I'm hoping to improve it quite a bit. I'd like to be able to score at school the way I do in the summer.

DI: Coach Terry Anderson has said you've been tweaking your swing lately. How are you adapting to those changes?
 Anderson: I'm getting closer. It's been a bit of a struggle, but I'm thinking long-term. It's starting to come around.

DI: Were you satisfied with how the team played last weekend?
 Anderson: It was hard to know what to expect. We had three guys who had never done any collegiate play. They found out what it was all about. It's no cakewalk. Someone has to play well; not everyone can play average. Overall, it will benefit us that they got that experience.

DI: Were you disappointed that you didn't get to participate last weekend?

Anderson: Oh yeah. I was extremely disappointed. Things just didn't fall too well. The timing wasn't good with working on some things with my swing. I didn't have, or wasn't allowed, enough time to practice.

DI: Does that serve as motivation for you?
 Anderson: Yeah, but I have enough of that already. I just need to go out and take care of business. That motivates me, but I've got plenty of other things that motivate me anyway.

DI: Are you optimistic you'll participate in the Northern Intercollegiate tournament [taking place Sept. 28-29]?
 Anderson: Yeah, I don't see any reason why I won't if I play my game. I just need to go out there and trust my game.

DI: How do you handle the pressure of being such an integral part of your team and its success?
 Anderson: I don't think about it too much. Golf is a pressure-sport anyway. You aren't going to have anyone help you out there. You have to rely on past experiences and success and try not to think about it like that. I need to play well, but everyone else has to play well too. I try to block that stuff out when I'm playing.

DI: Do you think the mixture of veterans and young guys and the competition within the team will be beneficial?

Anderson: Yeah, if it holds up. It depends on how people hold up their play. The young guys are feisty and playing well, and hopefully, we'll be competitive, too. If we all are, it will benefit everyone.

DI: Which professional golfers do you try to emulate?
 Anderson: I don't try to emulate any one golfer. But I watch all professional golfers and how they handle adversity. Golf's a learning game, and you can learn something new each day. I watch how they act and react. Their emotions are always so steady.

DI: Do your career aspirations include golf?
 Anderson: It depends on how much I improve. I'd like to play after this, at least for a while. That's why I'm working on my swing. But I'd like to be somewhere in the golf business. I love the game.

DI: Which moment has been the most memorable in your career with Iowa?
 Anderson: Finishing third in the Big Ten.

DI: What would be the ideal way for you to finish your college career?
 Anderson: Definitely winning the Big Ten individually and as a team, then going on to regionals and making it to the NCAA Tournament.

Sampras, Agassi won't take part in Davis Cup play at Roland Garros

BY IRA PODELL
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

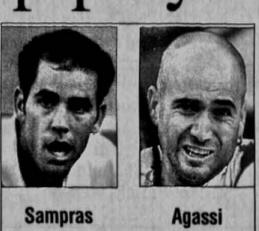

NEW YORK — The all-American U.S. Open final between Pete Sampras and Andre Agassi took enough out of both players to keep them off the Davis Cup team.

Sampras beat Agassi to win the U.S. Open on Sunday and told team captain Patrick McEnroe a day later that he wasn't ready to play in next weekend's Davis Cup semifinal match against France in Paris.

"I think Pete needs time to digest what happened and decide what he wants to do," McEnroe said Tuesday. "I think he's just worn out, and I certainly understand that."

Once the United States' top two players passed on the chance, McEnroe chose Andy Roddick, James Blake, Todd Martin, and Marty Fish to play France at Roland Garros, the home of the French Open.

Roddick and Blake will play singles, and there is a good chance that Blake and Martin will make up the doubles team. That pair beat Mahesh Bhupathi and Max Mirnyi, the U.S. Open doubles champions, to win the ATP Tour's event in Cincinnati last month.

Sampras eliminated Roddick in the U.S. Open quarterfinals en route to his first singles title since winning Wimbledon in 2000.

"It's time for the younger guys to take the baton and run with it," said McEnroe, whose term as captain was extended by two years on Tuesday. "This is a big step; we're relying on them."

Agassi had previously decided that he wasn't going to play, but McEnroe held out hope that he would change his mind.

"I really want the guys who want to be there," McEnroe said. "I've seen too many situations in Davis Cup when the so-called best players were there and didn't want to be there for whatever reason. And that never works."

McEnroe said that had Agassi won the U.S. Open, he thinks Agassi's Davis Cup decision might have changed.

"I think Andre was devastated with his loss," McEnroe said. "Andre has said all along he is not going to play Davis Cup. I wasn't surprised that he declined."

Sampras, who has won a record 14 Grand Slam singles titles, has Division-champion Braves continue to win

ATLANTA (AP) — Just because they've already clinched the NL East, the Atlanta Braves don't have to stop beating up on the New York Mets.

The Braves overcame a five-run deficit for a 12-6 victory over New York on Tuesday night behind two homers and was ejected in the fifth inning after he plunked Gary Sheffield in the arm with a pitch.

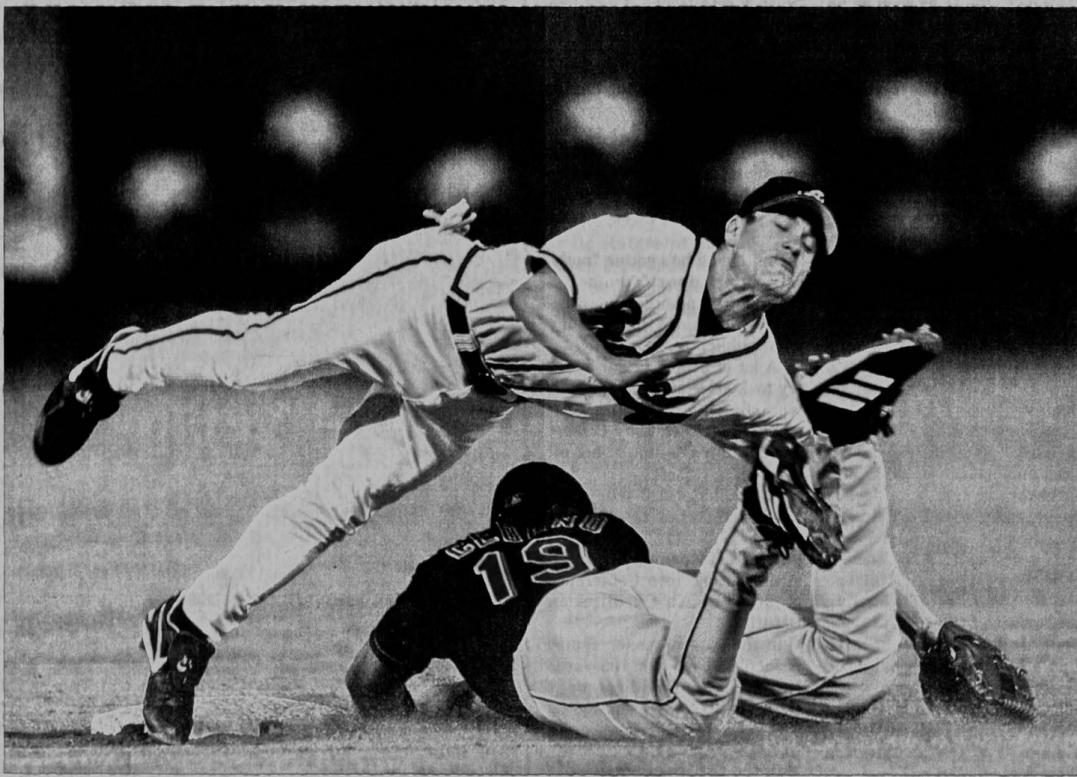

Trey Hodges (1-0) earned the win in his big-league debut. Mets starter Pedro Astacio (12-9) gave up four homers and was ejected in the fifth inning after he plunked Gary Sheffield in the arm with a pitch.

New York's Roger Cedeno homered off Damian Moss' first pitch of the game.

Moss gave up four more runs in the second, including a mammoth homer by Mike Piazza. The left-hander was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the bottom half.

After Julio Franco led off the fifth with a single, Astacio hit Sheffield with a fastball. Plate umpire Tony Randazzo immediately tossed him.

Chipper Jones singled to lead the bases, and Andruw Jones singled in two runs, putting the Braves ahead to stay.

Roger Cedeno of the New York Mets dives safely in to second base on a steal attempt in the second inning as Marcus Giles attempts to make the tag in Atlanta's 12-6 victory Tuesday. The Braves clinched their 11th-consecutive division title on Monday.

Florida 6, Philadelphia 4

PHILADELPHIA — Mike Redmond hit a tiebreaking two-run homer in the seventh inning and had three RBIs, leading the Florida Marlins over the Philadelphia Phillies in a double-header opener.

Redmond, who came in during a double switch in the sixth inning, connected off Randy Wolf (11-8). It followed a leadoff single by Mike Mordecai, who had three hits.

Derrek Lee had a bases-loaded triple in the first inning for the Marlins.

Graeme Lloyd (4-4) pitched a hitless sixth in relief of Julian Tavarez, who gave up three runs, seven hits and five walks in five innings.

Armando Almanza pitched the save. Wolf gave up five runs and seven hits in seven innings.

Kevin Millar extended his hitting streak to 15 games, the longest active streak in the NL.

Toronto 5, Cleveland 4

CLEVELAND — A throwing error by reliever Mark Wohlers in the ninth inning allowed Shannon Stewart to score the go-ahead run as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Cleveland Indians.

With runners on first and second and one out, Vernon Wells smashed a grounder back to Wohlers (2-4), who spun around and made a wild throw to second base.

Indians catcher Victor Martinez, making his major-league debut, singled to drive in a pair of runs in the seventh and tie it at 4.

Cincinnati 3, Pittsburgh 0

CINCINNATI — Russell Branyan hit a solo homer to back Danny Graves and four relievers, who combined on six-hitter that led the Cincinnati Reds over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Cincinnati, which gave Graves his first career start, got its sixth shutout of the season.

Kip Wells allowed five hits in six over seven innings. He has lost three-straight decisions for the second time this season.

Montreal 6, Cubs 2

CHICAGO — Javier Vazquez matched a season high with 10 strikeouts and helped himself with an RBI single Tuesday night, snapping a seven-game losing streak and leading the Montreal Expos to a victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Brad Wilkerson tied a Montreal rookie record with his 19th home run, and Jose Vidro and Fernando Tatis added RBI singles.

Vazquez (9-13) scattered six hits over seven innings. He walked three, one intentionally.

Mark Bellhorn hit a solo homer for the Cubs. Carlos Zambrano (3-7) gave up five runs and seven hits, needing 112 pitches to get through 4½ innings.

After giving up an RBI double to Fred McGriff in the third, Vazquez kept the Cubs in check.

St. Louis 8, Milwaukee 3

MILWAUKEE — Matt Morris, activated from the disabled list before the game, allowed one run in five innings Tuesday night as the St.

Louis Cardinals beat the Milwaukee Brewers.

Eduardo Perez hit a three-run homer, and Scott Rolen had a solo shot for the Cardinals.

Morris (16-7) allowed five hits, struck out three, and walked one. He threw 74 pitches, 44 for strikes.

Milwaukee's only run off him came on Jim Rushford's RBI single in the second. The Brewers' 51-94 record is the worst in the National League.

Houston 11, Colorado 4

HOUSTON — Lance Berkman hit his career-high 40th home run and had five RBIs as the Houston Astros beat the Colorado Rockies for their fourth-straight win.

Berkman had a two-run double off Denny Neagle (8-10) in the sixth and a three-run homer off Mark Corey in the eighth. Berkman's 118 RBIs lead the National League.

Jeff Bagwell followed with another home run.

White Sox 12, Kansas City 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jeff Liefer hit his first career grand slam, and Paul Konerko drove in three runs to reach 100 RBIs as the Chicago White Sox beat the Kansas City Royals.

Carlos Lee also drove in three runs for the White Sox. Liefer hit a 1-0 pitch from Jeremy Affeldt in the ninth. Konerko added an RBI double, giving him a career-best 100 RBIs.

Lee, who has reached base in 12-straight games, had a sacrifice fly in a three-run first inning and a two-run triple in the four-run seventh.

AL batting leader Mike Sweeney had three RBIs for the Royals, who have also dropped eight straight overall.

Mike Porzio (2-0) pitched two innings of one-hit relief for the win. Antonio Osuna pitched three innings for his 10th save in 13 opportunities.

The loser was Royals starter Runelvys Hernandez (3-4), who is 0-3 in his last four starts. Hernandez went 6½ innings and gave up five runs on eight hits.

GOLF

For Parnevik, 9/11 memories still linger

BY DOUG FERGUSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jesper Parnevik's golf game is in sad shape with the Ryder Cup quickly approaching, although not everything is in ruins.

At least he can sleep through the night without fear.

He no longer wakes up in major cities wondering if the skyline has changed or panics when he sees a car that looks out of place stop in front of a hotel.

"It's very hard to explain," said Parnevik, who was in New York for a photo shoot on Sept. 11, 2001. "You know that feeling you have when there's really bad turbulence on a plane? That's how it was all the time."

Yes, the Ryder Cup will be different. The matches were postponed one year because of the terrorist attacks, and several players on both teams are not in great form. U.S. captain Curtis Strange says no Ryder Cup ever has the best 12 guys at the time, and playing with the 2001 team will be a reminder why the matches were postponed in the first place.

Not that Parnevik needs one.

He had spent Sept. 10 with Johan Lindeberg, the Swedish fashion designer responsible for Parnevik dressing like a Popsicle. The next morning, he was eating breakfast in a midtown hotel when his cell phone rang.

"The first plane had hit the tower," he said. "Nobody even moved in the hotel. It was like nothing had happened. Everyone started discussing it. 'How can you do that? How can you miscalculate the altitude by that much?'"

"Then we got the second call, and then ... it was a different atmosphere."

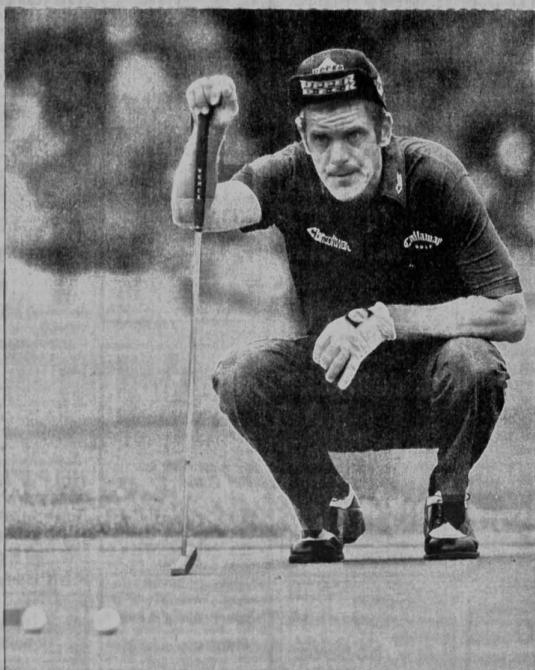

The rest of the day was a blur.

Parnevik went up to his room to watch the news, and when he realized what had happened, he left everything behind and began running north toward Central Park, trying to avoid tall buildings, not sure if the terrorists had another target in mind.

He saw a white cloud filling the streets. With so much smoke and debris in the air, Parnevik had no idea the Twin Towers collapsed until he found a haven at an IMG office.

"That's when it got really weird," he said. "You see it on TV, then you step outside and see all the smoke and all the people."

Parnevik was stuck in New York for three days. Paranoia set in. There were rumors of another attack, maybe a big truck full of explosives.

"Your mind goes crazy," he said. "You think a bomb is going to go off in any corner. Until then, I had never been scared for my life. Ever."

Parnevik took a cab to Philadelphia when the bridges and tunnels finally opened, then decided to rent a car and drive home to south Florida to be with his wife and four children. His father, Sweden's most famous comedian, wanted him to leave the United States.

He stayed, but it wasn't easy. "When I got home, the shocking realization of what happened kicked in," he said. "I couldn't sleep for months. I remember staying in Las Vegas, it was almost to the point I was sure something was going to happen. I was just happy to wake up every morning and see that all the skyscrapers still were there."

"Every time I saw an airplane, or I saw a strange car pull up to the hotel, I said, 'Who's that? What's going on?' It affected me for quite a while."

Parnevik loves his second home in Jupiter, Fla. He always jokes that the reason he flips up the bill of his cap is so the rest of his face can get a tan. He named his son Phoenix, because his first PGA Tour victory came at the Phoenix Open.

What he lost on Sept. 11 was the same sense of security he felt in Sweden.

"I could not imagine living in a country like Israel or Palestine, where this goes on every day, where you cannot go to a restaurant or a movie and know you're going to walk out of there alive," he said.

When the PGA Tour staged a tribute two weeks after the attacks, Parnevik joined U.S. Ryder Cup members David Toms and Hal Sutton on the stage in San Antonio.

Even though he grew up in Sweden, he said he never felt more American.

"The thing that hit me the most emotionally was how the firefighters, the policemen, and the whole city of New York came together like nothing I've ever seen before," he said that night at Fiesta Texas.

New security measures on the PGA Tour were put in place that week. Caddies couldn't even fetch a bucket of balls on the range without showing a photo ID. Tiger Woods was asked for two forms of identification before he played a practice round at Disney.

Parnevik noticed laxer security this spring. Things were getting back to normal. Then, he watched an HBO special on Sept. 11 and fought back tears. "Even though we should go on with our lives, it's very important that we remember that day," he said.

Parnevik plans to be home today, watching television coverage of the one-year anniversary with his family. He leaves for the Ryder Cup the following week, not sure what to expect out of his game at The Belfry in England.

The matches won't have the best 12 players on either side. Big deal.

NBA

Webber denies he lied to grand jury in booster probe

BY GREG BEACHAM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Chris Webber, making his first public statement since being indicted on federal charges, said Tuesday he did not lie to a grand jury and that he tried to help prosecutors in their case against a University of Michigan booster.

The All-Star forward was indicted Monday in Detroit on charges he lied about his dealings with Ed Martin, who admits lending the NBA star $280,000 while he was still an amateur. Martin also admitted lending money to other Michigan basketball players.

Webber, who led Michigan's "Fab Five" team to two NCAA title games, is in the second year of a $123 million, seven-year contract with the Sacramento Kings.

He was charged with obstruction of justice and making a false declaration before a grand jury, according to the FBI and U.S. attorney's office in Detroit.

"I didn't lie to the grand jury," Webber said in a brief appearance before reporters at Arco Arena.

Webber, who had just finished working out at the Kings' practice facility, said he was speaking out because "I wanted to show my supporters I am not running away from the situation."

Martin pleaded guilty in May to conspiracy to launder money, admitting he took gambling money, combined it with other funds, and lent it to several players while they were still amateurs.

Martin, 68, said his payments included $280,000 to Webber, $160,000 to Robert Traylor, now with the New Orleans Hornets, $105,000 to Maurice Taylor, now with the Houston Rockets, and $71,000 to Louis Bullock, who has been playing professionally in Europe.

Former Michigan star Jalen Rose, now with the Chicago Bulls, said in May he took "pocket money" from Martin.

The 29-year-old Webber publicly denied taking significant amounts of money from Martin. The maximum penalty on each charge Webber faces is five years and a fine of $250,000.

Payments to college players violate NCAA rules. The indictment said Webber, his father, and aunt gave false information to the university in its internal investigation and the school forwarded it to the NCAA.

Prosecutors, NCAA spokesman Wally Renfro, Kings spokesman Darren May, and Michigan Athletics Director Bill Martin have declined to comment.

The indictment says Webber, his father, and his aunt conspired to conceal the cash, checks, clothing, jewelry, and other benefits provided to the player and his family by Martin from 1988 to 1993.

Webber's father, Mayce Webber Jr., and his aunt, Charlene Johnson, were indicted on the same charges as Webber. Neither immediately returned messages.

Webber told the Sacramento Bee that he was angered by the indictment of his father and aunt.

"[Martin] knew the best way to hurt me was to hurt my family," Webber told the newspaper in a story published Tuesday.

Traylor and Bullock admitted to the grand jury they received the loans, said their attorney, Steve Fishman.

Webber, a 6-10, 245-pound forward and four-time All-Star, has averaged 22.1 points and 10.2 rebounds during his nine-year career. He was the first pick in the 1993 draft and was rookie of the year with Golden State.

He also starred at Washington before being traded to the Kings. Webber led Sacramento to the Western Conference finals, in which the Kings lost in seven games to the eventual champion Los Angeles Lakers.

IOWA BRIEF

Men's soccer squad kicks off season

The Iowa men's club soccer team played its first three games of the fall season last weekend at Western Illinois University in Macomb, Ill.

In the first game, against the University of Illinois, Iowa was shut out, 8-0. The Hawkeyes rebounded to win the second match, 3-0, over Northern Illinois. A 4-2 loss to Southern Illinois capped off the weekend's play.

"The team is starting to come together," said Iowa's Jimmy Ivacic. "We have a lot of talent on the field, we just have to play more. The team has a balanced offensive attack, as four different players scored."

Ivacic said the team held tryouts last week, giving it scant time to prepare for competition. However, he was optimistic.

"The team found its chemistry in the second game of the season," he said.

The team's next competition is Sept. 15 against Indiana University at the UI recreation fields.

Jordan fitted for insert, debates NBA return

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael Jordan was fitted with a shoe insert this week to deal with discomfort in his knee as he contemplates whether to return for another NBA season.

Washington head coach Doug Collins said Tuesday Jordan hoped the insert would get his foot in better alignment and "take away some of the pain on the outside of the joint" of his right knee.

Jordan

Jordan had surgery on the knee in February, cutting short the first season of his second comeback. He said he plans to play another season if his health allows and his decision won't be announced until shortly before the Wizards open training camp Oct. 1. Collins said Jordan has experienced no new swelling or fluid buildup on the knee over the summer, but Jordan's final decision could hinge on how he feels once he starts practicing with the inserts.

"I don't think that decision's going to come for a couple of weeks," Collins said.

Should Jordan play, he likely would be a regular off the bench for the first time in his career. The Wizards on Tuesday signed Bryon Russell to start at small forward — Jordan's usual position last season — and Collins said recently signed Larry Hughes and Richard Hamilton are penciled in as his starting guards.

"If Michael does play again this year, I don't want him to play forward," Collins said. "I don't want him to get pounded."

Why we'll beat the snout out of Iowa State this weekend

- We have an offensive line the size of New Jersey that can knock down the Great Wall of China.
- Brad Banks is better than Chuck Long.
- We have a hit out on Seneca Wallace.
- Our team has a longer rap sheet.
- Kirk Ferentz gets paid more than Dan McCarney.
- Cuz Iowa City is way better than Ames.
- Bob Sanders hits harder than my ex-girlfriend.
- We have cuter cheerleaders.
- We have cuter girls in general.
- The best running-back from Ames plays in Iowa City.
- And did I mention our offensive line is awesome?
- This is the Hawkeye State, for cryin' out loud!
