UI job shuffling annoys some

BY AMY JENNINGS AND CHOYON MANJREKAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

Doug Strickler hates his new job.

The former UI Hospitals and Clinics air-care dispatcher of two and a half years now takes telephone calls as a clerk for the hospital. Come Oct. 2, he's quitting.

Strickler is one of 40 UI employees who was shuffled to a different position in the university because of state budget cuts. And some of the changes have ended with dissatisfying results.

"The [UIHC's] inefficient handling of the situation has made me feel under-used and given me reason enough to quit the university," Strickler said, whose previous job was replaced by contract air-dispatch service from Omaha.

"I had to undergo six weeks of training to do my job, while the new staff was just trained from a one-page flowchart," he said.

He plans to leave his clerical job next month to teach research methods at Wesleyan College in Mount Pleasant, he said.

"It is better than sticking around here," said Strickler, who has filed a 40-page appeal to the state Board of Regents regarding his job change.

Nancy Pounds worked as a secretary at the Labor Center in Oakdale for 35 years before being shunted to the UIHC.

"I have to spend extra money parking in my new job at the UIHC, which I knew nothing about," she said. "It was like starting over again."

Also, her new 8-to-5 hours do not allow her to care for her mother and take her to afternoon doctor appointments, she said.

The university doesn't usually track employees after they are placed in different positions, said Kevin Ward, the interim associate director of Human Resources. The university works on a case-by-case basis to relocate employees who have been laid off, he said.

"Percentage-wise, we are doing a good job because only two of 40 employees were not relocated," Ward said. "We wish

U.S. talks tough on Iraq's 'ruse'

BY GLENN KESSLER AND COLUM LYNCH
WASHINGTON POST

UNITED NATIONS — Russia, France, and other nations on Tuesday questioned whether a new Security Council resolution was necessary in the wake of Iraq's offer to permit unconditional weapons inspections, slowing the momentum that had been building for a U.S.-backed plan to confront Iraq over its defiance of previous U.N. demands to give up its weapons of mass destruction.

While Bush administration officials swiftly rejected Iraq's offer as a ruse, many here hailed the Iraqi stance as a possible step toward averting a war and urged the United Nations to explore its implications. "From our standpoint, we don't need any special resolution for that [inspections] to occur," Russian Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov said.

On Capitol Hill, leaders in both parties expressed skepticism about the Iraqi letter and support appeared to be gathering for a congressional resolution authorizing military action against Iraq. But the quickly shifting debate at the United Nations, just days after President Bush forcefully demanded that the body take action, suggested the administration still hasn't convinced much of the international community of the urgency of the Iraqi threat.

The administration plans to intensify its lobbying campaign today, when Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld will testify on Iraq before the House International Relations Committee. Secretary of State Colin Powell will follow on Thursday, a week earlier than planned.

As a signal to the Iraqis, officials said Tuesday the administration is seeking permission Spinning roundhouse kicks, lethal body blows, and a chauffeur service?

Before Master Min Seok Kang teaches his students tactics in self-defense, the trained world champion will be picking them up after school.

Kang, of Kang Martial Arts in Coralville, is hoping to develop a taekwon do program in which he and his assistants will pick up students on routes throughout the local area when classes lets out. The students will then be driven to Kang's dojo, 108 Second Ave., where they will participate in learning the ancient art.

"Right now, I am only picking up four to five students, but soon I hope to have more than 10 participating in the program," Kang said.

Parents have complained to Kang that they didn't have a way to transport their children to class on time because of work constraints, he said, adding that he's looking at purchasing a van to pick up the students outside their elementary and middle schools.

"It has been going on in Korea forever and in big cities around the United States," Kang said. "But I didn't see anything like it around this area, and I think it is a good way to keep up communication and trust with parents."

The idea of after-school taekwon do, which runs Monday through Thursday, is a new alternative to traditional after-school programs, giving children a new perspective, he said.

"It's a lot healthier than television and more recreational than a baby-sitter," Kang said. "It gives the kids a chance to start something new in their lives."

Parents whose children are enrolled in the class said they are optimistic about the new program once it takes off and that they are not worried about placing their children in Kang's hands because he is trustworthy and well-liked.

Nurse confirms DNA, but not force, in rape trial

BY TONY PHAN AND TONY ROBINSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

A UI medical examiner called to testify in the Antonio Foster rape trial Tuesday said the defendant's DNA matches evidence collected from the alleged victim, but signs of forced intercourse cannot be proven.

Judy Anderson-Bruner, a nurse from the UI Hospitals and Clinics specializing in sex abuse, took DNA samples from the woman after the alleged rape on July 16, 2001.

Anderson-Bruner said the woman was "shaken" and crying when recounting the incident.

"After a head-to-toe examination, the only thing I found was a small painful area on her back. Besides that, she had no injuries," Anderson-Bruner said.

But the prosecution maintains that the woman, then a clerk at the Coralville Ramada Inn, where the alleged incident occurred, did not resist for fear of her life. Anderson-Bruner confirmed that only 30 percent of sexual assaults nationwide result in injuries.

Throughout Tuesday's session, Foster took copious notes on a yellow legal pad and chatted amicably with his wife and a female friend during the afternoon recess.

Foster's wife, Emily Nolan-Foster, who has attended the trial both days, was also called to the stand by defense attorney Crystal Usher.

Foster only had two pairs of shorts and approximately five shirts — none of which matched the clothing the alleged victim described him as wearing the morning of July 16, his wife said. When asked why he had such a limited wardrobe, she said that she threw out his clothes when they separated in May 2001.

Nolan-Foster said she and the defendant went to bed together at 12:45 a.m. the

In 1999, UI senior Anna Buskohl underwent a full-body skin examination to inspect the numerous moles on her body.

One located on the outside of her lower left ankle especially concerned Buskohl, but her physician's assistant assured

Panel finds many warnings of 9/11

BY DANA PRIEST
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — The U.S. intelligence community received a surprising number of credible reports of a likely terrorist attack prior to Sept. 11, including some threats to domestic targets, according to a congressional report to be unveiled today.

The preliminary findings of the staff of the Senate-House intelligence panel investigating the Sept. 11 strikes also show that some intelligence analysts had focused on the possibility that terrorists might use "airplanes as weapons" in attacks, a congressional official said Tuesday.

National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice said in mid-May that prior to the attacks, analysts didn't seriously consider the use of planes as bombs and therefore were surprised by the method of attack on Sept. 11. "All this reporting about hijacking was about traditional hijacking," Rice said at a May briefing on what President Bush knew before the attacks.

The 30-page unclassified report also will "raise serious questions" about whether the U.S. government shared enough information with the public about what it knew to be a grave threat from Osama bin Laden and his Al Qaeda terrorist network, the official said.

After reading and analyzing hundreds of thousands of pages of documents from the CIA, the National Security Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency, and other government agencies, "you start thinking: Did anyone really explain to the public how serious this stuff was? ... Did the American people really realize the strength of the threat out there?" the congressional official said.

The committee report, the first official examination of how much intelligence agencies knew about the terror threat to the United States prior to Sept. 11, contains no single piece of information that could have been used to thwart the strikes that killed 3,000 people in New York, Washington, and Pennsylvania, the official said.

But while the committee staff found no information that revealed the exact date, time, and place of the attack, the official said there were numerous credible reports of possible domestic attacks and suggested that some of them may have been played down because the intelligence agencies were too focused on threats to U.S. interests overseas.

"There was reporting on [the possibility of] domestic attacks, even though a lot of people were focused overseas," the official said.

The official said that even in the summer of 2001, when intelligence officials were describing a dangerous spike in threats against the United States, the seriousness of the threat from bin Laden may not have been uniformly recognized throughout the government.

"At least some part of our intelligence community recognized what [was] out there," the official said. But "there are issues about information sharing with the intelligence community and between the intelligence community and the rest of the federal government."

The official noted that it isn't the intelligence community's responsibility to warn the public about threats. Asked if White House officials — who would make the call on whether to publicly release threat information and warning — were cooperating with the panel, the official deferred. "We've had discussions and requests," the official said. "They've answered some questions and some, maybe not."

On Aug. 6, 2001, Bush received a daily intelligence briefing that covered bin Laden's use of hijacking as a method of terror. Following disclosure of the briefing in the media this spring, Rice held a news conference in which she made it clear that the intelligence community hadn't seriously focused on the possibility that Al Qaeda would think to use planes as flying bombs.

"I will say that, again, hijacking before 9/11 and hijacking after 9/11 do mean two very, very different things," she explained.

The House and Senate formed a joint intelligence panel shortly after Sept. 11 and charged it with assessing the performance of the $35-billion intelligence community and recommending ways to repair and improve it.

The panel got off to a rocky start. Members couldn't agree on its scope, and its first staff director was forced to resign. It continuously delayed public hearings; the first one, in fact, is set for today.

A second public hearing is still in question. The panel is having a difficult time persuading intelligence officials to appear in open session while the U.S. war on terrorism continues.

"There are people who don't want to do public hearings on this at all," the official said.

Today's meeting won't delve into the extensive information the panel has collected on the hijackers themselves: their background, training, and to what extent U.S. intelligence agencies were monitoring any of them. That will be the subject of a future hearing.

The panel, composed of the members of the separate House and Senate intelligence committees, has met 10 times in closed sessions. The staff has combed through 400,000 documents from the various intelligence agencies and found roughly 70,000 pages it considered relevant to the investigation.

Bush pumps $ into ex-foes' campaigns

BY DANA MILBANK
WASHINGTON POST

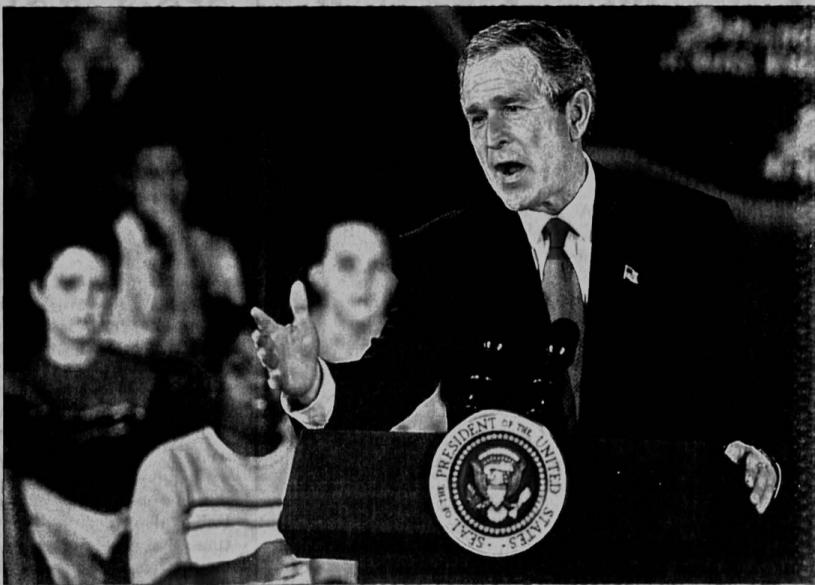

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Lamar Alexander, the plaid man of the 1996 and 2000 presidential campaigns, donned a sober business suit Tuesday to accept $1.1 million in assistance from the Bush fund-raising machine he once accused of destroying grass-roots politics.

Alexander introduced President Bush at the Nashville Convention Center Tuesday afternoon with a warm speech hailing the president's values and leadership. White House officials said Alexander, the Republican candidate to succeed retiring Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., received $800,000 from Tuesday's luncheon; the state GOP got $300,000 in soft-money donations.

Three years ago, when Alexander, a former governor and Cabinet secretary, was challenging Bush for the party's presidential nomination in Iowa, the candidate ran an ad targeting Bush for prolific fund raising. "The Iowa caucuses have been canceled — an auction is underway on the White House lawn," a voice in the ad declared. Alexander mocked a candidate who "just blew in from Texas" and pronounced Iowa's capital city "Dez Moines."

There was no public mention of those bygones Tuesday as Alexander served as the warm-up act for Bush. Alexander, after praising Bush's homespun values as compatible with those of Tennesseans, said he was the man who would honor Bush's agenda in the Senate, not his Democratic opponent, Rep. Bob Clement.

Bush praised his vanquished rival as "a class act" and the "one man in this state" who could do the job. The only sign of dissent at Tuesday's fund-raiser was a couple of hundred demonstrators outside the convention center protesting Bush's plans for a possible invasion of Iraq. In changing his view of Bush's fund-raising prowess, Alexander has taken the path of another former Bush rival, Elizabeth Dole. The GOP nominee for a Senate seat in North Carolina, Dole hosted Bush at a fund-raiser earlier this year. In addition to the Bush fund-raiser, Alexander has events scheduled with Vice President Dick Cheney and with former President George H.W. Bush.

Bush has proven so successful as a rainmaker for Republicans that White House officials plan to have him continue raising money until the Nov. 5 election. Presidents typically shift their efforts in the fall to large rallies in an effort to boost voter turnout.

"His greatest value lies in his ability to raise significant amounts of money," said GOP pollster Whit Ayres, who's working for Alexander. Though Bush will probably shift to larger rallies sometime in October, Ayres said, "right now, he's doing what he ought to be doing, which is fill the coffers."

SCIENCE MAJORS

Are you interested in healthcare, laboratory work and analytical problem solving?
Consider a Career in Clinical Laboratory Sciences
Employment potential - Demand for CLS graduates is at an all-time high.

Diverse work environments - Work in laboratories in hospitals, research institutions, public health facilities, and pharmaceutical companies.
Advancement - Continue your career as a laboratory manager, computer specialist, or sales representative; or obtain an advanced degree in basic sciences, business, medicine, or hospital administration.
Impact - Positively affect the lives of hundreds of patients every day; provide information essential for the treatment and prevention of disease.

If you are a science major who will have completed at least 86 semester hours of coursework by May 2003, the time to apply is NOW!
Review of applications will begin on October 15.

it could be different for those isolated cases."

Ward said laid-off employees have priority for placement in vacant positions, but that priority is not absolute. The UI must follow certain guidelines when job shuffling.

For example, contract-transfer employees — employees who are capable of holding the same job in another department — must be considered first for open positions.

Employees can also use the PIK 15 system, which allows employees to submit a list of up to 15 desirable jobs they would be willing to fill if vacated.

"The problem with PIK 15 is if you are offered a job on your list, you must take it or you lose all priority in the system," said Dave Johnson, who is still looking for new employment.

UI transportation workers Johnson and Larry Zahradnek gave their last hours of service Tuesday, saying their good-byes with cake and brownies.

Johnson, a mechanic for patient transportation, was laid off after 10 years of service.

"I think that they could have worked with me more if they really wanted to put me in another job," he said.

Zahradnek, a UIHC patient transportation driver for more than four years, is also out of work after budget cuts.

"I am very depressed about it, but I try not to dwell on the fact that as of [today], I'm unemployed," he said.

night of the incident, which allegedly occurred shortly before 3 a.m. He left a short time after going to bed, and Nolan-Foster said she was awoken at 3:15 a.m. when he returned home.

Usher attempted to cast doubt by noting that the alleged victim was allowed to write a statement at home without being in the presence of a law-enforcement official. Usher also iterated several times that there were no visible injuries or complaints by the alleged victim during the incident.

The Daily Iowan has chosen not to print the alleged victim's name.

Ramada Inn employee Valerie Bertram's deposition was read aloud in court, in which she said she did not have problems using a push-button combination lock on the door Foster entered to access the employee hallway where the alleged rape occurred. The door was a point of contention for both sides. Bertram stated in the deposition that there were problems with some doors not locking properly.

Lawyers on both sides said they are confident the trial will conclude today, pending jury deliberations.

Service. "Most think that cancer is an old people's disease."

She said more young people are being diagnosed with melanoma, which can be fatal, because they use tanning beds and are not cautious when exposed to too much sun. Not all cancers in young people can be prevented, however, she said.

The recent death of former UI student Michael Junker from colorectal cancer was one of these cases. After suffering symptoms that began last spring, the active 21-year-old became an unexpected victim.

One in 69 males and one in 52 females are at risk of developing cancer between birth and age 39, according to "Cancer Facts and Figures 2002," released by the American Cancer Society.

"I always thought it would happen to me," Buskohl said. "But not this early. Not until at least 40 or 50."

Buskohl, now 22, started receiving skin exams early in her life because of her mother's concerns and a family history of melanoma, which her great-grandfather had died of.

Buskohl was not only lucky because she caught her cancer early, she said, but also because she had the knowledge to take precautionary measures.

"We're concerned about young people who go to the wrong places for information," said Lou Halsch, the coordinator of the UI Hospitals and Clinics Thoracic Oncology Program.

"It is always best to talk with a real person rather than seeking information on the Internet. Being interactive gets all questions answered with the correct amount of emotional support."

The Cancer Service Information Center is a free, confidential service that provides accurate information about cancer. Beelner also suggests Student Health Service as another viable option when seeking accurate information.

"Some precautionary measures, such as not smoking and reducing exposure to the sun, are more obvious than others. Despite the few who take risks, preventative knowledge has spread, said Joan Felkner, a program associate for Cancer Service Information.

"Overall, people are more aware of being responsible for their behavior, but there can always be more [done]," she said.

from Britain to base a small number of Air Force B-2 Stealth bombers on the island of Diego Garcia in the northern Indian Ocean.

The B-2's normally are based on U.S. territory; deploying them in the Indian Ocean site would cut flight time in half.

U.S. officials argue that the current inspection regime, which Iraq suspended in 1998, has such lengthy timetables that it would permit Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to drag out the inspections process for months, if not years. They said they are crafting a Security Council resolution that would set specific benchmarks and a much shorter timeline for judging whether Iraq is fully cooperating in the effort to eliminate any chemical, biological, or nuclear weapons — and also promise consequences if Iraq fails to live up to the U.N.'s demands.

Administration officials expressed confidence they would succeed in winning a new resolution, despite the flurry of interest generated by the Iraqi statement, which was signed by the Iraqi foreign minister and released Monday. In a major shift of position, Iraq didn't tie the return of weapons inspectors to the lifting of sanctions as it has in the past. Said one U.S. official of the Iraqi offer, "We're confident it won't succeed."

Still, Hans Blix, the chief U.N. weapons inspector, met Iraqi officials Tuesday to discuss details involved in restarting inspections. During a Security Council meeting Tuesday, French officials pushed for Blix to report to the council as early as today, in an apparent attempt to shift the debate to the question of resuming inspections and away from the U.S. plan to win a new resolution with more stringent conditions.

U.S. and British officials objected to the French proposal, saying Blix should decide when he's ready to brief the council. In the end, it was decided Blix will brief the Security Council on Thursday.

West Nile skyrockets in Ill.

BY LINDSEY TANNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Bob Meisenheimer liked to sit in his backyard with friends on sultry summer nights, wearing a T-shirt and trying to solve the world's problems. The one that killed him — West Nile virus — has authorities scrambling for answers.

The mosquito-borne illness has hit Illinois harder than any other state this summer, with 399 cases so far, including 21 deaths. That is far worse than even hot, humid, and swampy Louisiana, which has had 11 deaths.

The outbreak here is the deadliest in the nation since West Nile virus was first discovered in this country in New York City in 1999.

Experts are uncertain why the problem is so bad here, but their theories include bird migration patterns, a heavy concentration of mosquito-infested cemeteries, and Illinois residents' summertime habits.

"You've got a short warm season, and everybody loves to be outside. To be told to cover up and wear repellent when you go outside, you're kind of messing up the party," said Kitty Loewy of the Cook County Public Health Department.

Bret Meisenheimer thinks that may explain his 76-year-old father's death on Sept. 5 from West Nile encephalitis, or brain swelling. A World War II veteran and retired bricklayer, Bob Meisenheimer had battled leukemia, but he was feeling pretty good until he developed flu-like symptoms approximately three weeks ago.

His son figures Meisenheimer got bitten during his nightly routine, sitting out on the picnic table in Bethalto, north of St. Louis.

"I don't think he ever thought a mosquito would get to him," Bret Meisenheimer said of his father.

He doubts whether his dad wore insect repellent or protective clothing — which, along with avoiding being outside at dusk and dawn (when mosquitoes are most active) are among precautions state officials have recommended.

While Illinois residents may not have curtailed summertime fun, many are worried, especially in Chicago's hard-hit suburbs.

"You go to a block party and a soccer game, and it's on everybody's minds," said Jay Terry, a health director in Evanston, where 26 people have been infected. "We had a block party two weeks ago, and there was a table set up just for insect repellent."

As of Tuesday, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported more than 1,500 cases nationwide, including 71 deaths. That does not include the three deaths reported Tuesday in Illinois.

The Illinois victims have ranged from a 3-month-old baby girl from the Chicago area, who survived a severe case to a 92-year-old suburban woman who did not. Most people bitten by an infected mosquito do not become ill, and most of those who do get sick have only mild symptoms.

One reason for the outbreak may be that Illinois is on a major bird-migration route, the Mississippi Flyway. Birds can spread the disease.

In Cook County alone, which includes Chicago, there have been approximately 300 cases, including 15 deaths. And the Chicago-area geography includes lots of forest preserves and marshes, which are better mosquito breeding grounds than, say, the concrete jungles of New York, said Dr. Robert Craven of the CDC.

North Korean leader Kim Jong Il, left, and Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi shake hands after their first-ever summit meeting, in Pyongyang, North Korea, on Tuesday.

N. Korea admits abductions

BY VALERIE REITMAN
LOS ANGELES TIMES

TOKYO — Years after the mysterious disappearances of at least a dozen citizens from its shores, Japan on Tuesday received a grim revelation about their fates — and an apology — from reclusive North Korean leader Kim Jong Il.

The victims were indeed kidnapped by North Korea in the 1970s and 1980s to assist spies infiltrating South Korea. Eight have since died of undisclosed "disease or disaster" — including Megumi Yokota, who disappeared from a coastal path in 1977 at age 13 while walking home from a school badminton practice and was never heard from again.

Four are alive and living in North Korea. It was an extraordinary revelation for Kim to make to Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi during the first summit between the two long-stranged nations. It was also a reversal of his nation's repeated denials that it had abducted Japanese citizens.

Kim's seeming candor and his apology paved the way for the two countries to agree to begin discussions next month aimed at establishing diplomatic relations. Koizumi had made it clear that negotiations on other issues would fail if North Korea didn't come clean about the kidnappings.

In the discussions, Kim admitted to Koizumi that a North Korean "organization with a special mission" abducted the Japanese, saying it had done so without his knowledge. Kim said he has punished those involved, and he vowed it would never happen again.

In addition, Kim agreed to extend North Korea's moratorium on nuclear missile testing through "2003 and beyond." In addition, spy ships that recently ventured into Japanese waters — including one sunk by Japan's Coast Guard in December 2001 — were likely "elements of the North Korean military" that Kim vowed to investigate and prevent from straying again. And he asked the Japanese leader to tell the Bush administration that the North is ready to resume stalled negotiations with the United States any time.

For his part, Koizumi apologized to North Korea for Japan's brutal 35-year occupation of the Korean peninsula, which began in 1910.

Excessive tuition increase puts burden on students

This October, another tuition hike is likely to be approved, causing UI tuition to go up 19.1 percent starting next fall. While this money is certainly needed by the university, it is the third such jump in three years. In-state students will pay $4,994 next fall, up from $4,191 this year, while out-of-state students will pay a whopping $15,285.

Supporting the tuition increase is Regent Clarkson Kelly, who goes so far as to call the current situation "soft and cushy." He argues that students should take out more financial aid or get jobs. Maybe Kelly doesn't realize that a full course load is equivalent to a full-time job or that a student making $7 an hour at 20 hours a week will only make $560 a month before taxes. That amount would make only a dent in in-state tuition, and it is a laughable help for an out-of-state student. Kelly goes on to say that people don't have to go to this school and that students who can't afford it should just go somewhere else. It's a good thing Kelly isn't on the welcoming committee for new students — even better that he isn't the one who has to tell the UI senior who can no longer afford the school that he or she should simply go somewhere else for her or his last year of studies.

UI seniors have seen their tuition increase by 50% during their stay here. If the current trend continues, it could be even worse for freshmen.

As for new students, current freshmen should make sure that they know the limits of their college funds. Seniors this year have seen a 50 percent increase in tuition since they started school at UI — who knows at what level tuition will be in another three years? This once-affordable university is becoming almost as expensive as a private college (which often offer considerable financial-aid packages), and the end is nowhere in sight.

Budget cuts are the reason behind the tuition hike. When the state cut $124 million from the budget, including $60 million for the UI, the school had to find a way to make ends meet. The decision was loud and clear: It will come straight from the students' pockets. Furthermore, UI students are beginning to figure out that the increased tuition is not paying for new improvements but simply to keep things running smoothly. The question on everyone's mind is surely, When will this stop? When students begin paying $6,000 for in-state and $17,000 for out-of-state, the university will have to find a way to finance itself without turning to the already hard-working students and their families.

Don't sell your vote — Give it to Leach

Today, the opponent of Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, will hold a fund-raiser 900 miles away, in Washington, D.C., at the home of Hillary Rodham Clinton. She doesn't want you to know.

It is becoming quite clear that Leach's opponent, Dr. Julie Thomas, is not a candidate worthy of representing the people of Iowa. While she is off collecting money, Leach is turning away all out-of-state donations. He is not accepting any PAC money, and he has set a per-person donation limit half that of the $2,000 allowed under law, which his opponent accepts in full. To this point, only about 30 percent of Thomas' funds have come from Iowans, including $200,000 that she has given her own campaign. Thomas is a candidate who has no grasp on the issues Iowans face and would like nothing more than for us to ignore that fact.

I must ask, how can she claim that she will fight corrupt CEOs and businesses when she herself is more concerned with money than with the people of Iowa? In his years in Congress, Leach has acted with dignity and principle. He helped pass legislation toughening the penalties for corporate malfeasance and has drafted legislation to merge the SEC and Commodity Futures Trading Commission to better the government's ability to pursue white-collar crime.

An issue-oriented candidate, Leach has consistently won endorsements from environmental groups for his work to protect our natural resources. The League of Conservation Voters recently endorsed Leach, saying in the Washington Post that his re-election is one of the most important environmental issues this year. He has fought for Iowa's children, earning him endorsements from the Iowa Education Association. The United Seniors Association has also given its support to Leach.

A proven sage about issues facing America and Iowa, Leach has represented us with true intelligence and unwavering dignity. His opponent, however, is not conversant with the issues Iowans face and hopes to hide that behind a smoke screen of money.

Send a message on Nov. 5 that your vote cannot be bought by voting for Jim Leach.

Bad timing, DI

Do you guys want Iowa to lose? Why would you publish your report about alcohol troubles of athletes a day before the ISU game (DI, Sept

Game doesn't justify binge drinking

On Sept. 16, on the front page of The Daily Iowan was a picture of a massive drinking party called "tailgating." The picture showed two people passing a "two-story beer bong around." There are almost daily articles in Iowa City newspapers and The Daily Iowan about what can be done to stop binge drinking by students, but in the name of athletics, binge drinking is a good thing. Where were the officers arresting people for public intoxication? After the game, why wasn't the State Patrol doing massive road "safety checks" for speeders, drunk drivers, etc.? You can't have committees, crackdowns, and letters sent to parents of underage students when on football weekends, binge drinking is condoned in the name of athletics. The university has a lot of baseball, basketball, and other games that happen without this massive chaos. A decision must be made on which behavior is acceptable.

University Jeopardy

The following is a lost transcript from a special UI taping of "Jeopardy" that never aired.

Trebek: Hello, and welcome back to "University Jeopardy." Today, we are joined by special guest contestants Gov. Tom Vilsack, Dean Phillip Jones, and UI interim President Sandy Boyd. Welcome.

Vilsack: Thanks a lot Alex; it's a pleasure to be here.

Jones: Yes, thanks Alex. I've always thought that "Jeopardy" is a great alcohol alternative.

Boyd: Where am I?

Trebek: All right then, let's get started. Our categories are: "Diversity," "Tuition," "Alcohol," and "University Issues." Gov. Vilsack, why don't you start us off?

Vilsack: I'll take "Tuition" for 200, Alex.

Trebek: The answer is "802." (buzzer)

Dean Jones: Do you have a response?

Jones: Yes, I believe that that's the number of alcohol letters I sent to students' parents last weekend.

Trebek: No, I'm sorry, that's incorrect. And please remember to phrase your answer in the form of a question. Anybody else?

Boyd: Is it, "How old am I?"

Trebek: No, I'm sorry. You're actually only 75. Gov. Vilsack, do you have the correct response?

Vilsack: "By how many dollars is in-state tuition going up next year?"

Trebek: That's right. You're on the board with $200. Please select another category.

Vilsack: I'll take "Diversity" for 500.

Trebek: Oh, this is a difficult one. The answer is "Diversity and mountains."

(buzzer) Yes, Dean Jones.

Jones: "What are things that we should look for in the new UI president?"

Trebek: I'm sorry, that's incorrect.

"Diversity and mountains." Anyone? Sorry, time's up. The correct response is, "What are two things you'll never see at Iowa?" Gov. Vilsack, it's still your pick.

Vilsack: I'll take "Tuition" for 400.

Trebek: That's our Daily Double! How much would you like to wager?

Vilsack: I'll go for broke.

Trebek: All right, now listen carefully: "Last year, this man defended a midyear UI budget cut of 7 percent by saying that the funds could be made up through an increase in tuition; this year, however, he calls the tuition hike 'unacceptable.'

Vilsack: Oh, that's easy. "Who is Doug Gross, my competitor?"

Trebek: No, actually, that's incorrect. Anyone else?

Boyd: "Who is Gov. Tom Vilsack?"

Trebek: Yes, that's correct, and you have control of the board.

Boyd: I'll take "Alcohol" for 300.

Trebek: The answer is "1.7."

(music: doo-doo-doo-do-do-doo, duh, da-da duh, dunt dunt dunt)

Trebek: All right, let's see what you've come up with. Dean Jones, you wagered $50,000. I'm sorry, but you don't have that much money.

Jones: Hey, that never stopped me from giving it to Planet X.

Trebek: Yeah, that worked out great for you. Anyway, the answer is "Students." Let's see what you wrote. No, I'm sorry, the correct response is not, "What is the root of all evil?" Moving on, let's see what Gov. Vilsack wagered. All right, $200. And his response ... "Who are going to vote for me out of an obscene lack of viable options?" No, I'm sorry, that's incorrect.

Vilsack: But it's true.

Trebek: And finally, let's see what President Boyd wagered. I'm sorry, President Boyd, but you can't wager the Law Building.

Boyd: Hey, it's named after me, isn't it?

Trebek: All right, fair enough. The answer is "Students." Let's see your response: "Why does the university exist in the first place?" That's right; students are the reason the university exists. So Sandy Boyd is our winner, walking away with, er, $200 and a Law Building.

RED BANK, N.J. — When Jennifer Buono decided where to enroll after high school, she chose little-known Brookdale Community College in central New Jersey over Rutgers University.

The bottom line, she said, was the bottom line.

"Brookdale is cheaper, and you're getting the same education for less," said the 18-year-old education major. "And when I get out of school, I won't have all those student loans to pay off."

budgets nearly everywhere are being squeezed by declining state revenues.

Barbara Grano of Lakeland Community College outside Cleveland said that with a 10 percent increase in students in the past year, classroom capacity is being pushed beyond its limits. She recently visited an algebra class in which 34 students were squeezed into a room intended to hold 30.

"Students are begging their way into classes," Grano said. "They're saying, 'Please, let me take this class. I have to get in.'"

Such overcrowding worries Kent. "We are all about access," she said. "The idea that we might have to turn people away is appalling."

Recessions tend to inflate college enrollment. But this time is different because the increases are coming primarily at the community-college level, said Barmak Nassirian, a policy analyst with the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers.

With many large public universities hiking tuition, he said, it is not surprising that students are turning to commuter schools.

"For most families, the economic downturn doesn't manifest itself in depleted portfolios but instead forces them to make different choices," Nassirian said. "And for those people, community colleges present a safety net."

Renee Brock, a freshman at Brookdale Community College, says community colleges are even more attractive for students who must pay their own tuition.

"I would say that a lot of people whose parents are paying are going to the four-year colleges," she said. "But for those who are paying their own way, this is a good place to go."

In cities and towns hard-hit by the economic downturn, community colleges also have become a magnet for displaced workers.

On the six campuses of the Moberly Area Community College in northeast Missouri — a region with several plant closings — many of the 2,600 students are repositioning themselves for recession-proof jobs.

The typical Moberly student is female and 29 years old and shows up for computer-oriented classes that meet after 5 p.m. Moberly has seen credit-hour registration increase by 7 percent this semester.

Blast injures 8 Palestinian kids

BY NASSER SHIYOUKHI
ASSOCIATED PRESS

HEBRON, West Bank — Israeli police and Palestinian officials in the West Bank said they believe extremist Jewish settlers planted two bombs in a Palestinian schoolyard Tuesday. One device exploded, injuring eight children.

Yehoshua Mor-Yosef, a spokesman for the Jewish Settlers' Council, said the bombing was an "immoral and illegal act."

Israeli military officials said the explosion occurred near a water cooler in the courtyard of the Ziff junction secondary school south of Hebron. The second bomb was found and safely detonated. The Israeli military controls the junction, a remote region populated mainly by Bedouins.

The schoolyard bomb went off just after recess ended at 9:45 a.m. A 6-year-old boy was among the injured children.

On July 26, Palestinians killed an Israeli couple, their 9-year-old son, and a soldier from Hebron in an ambush at the same junction.

Palestinian Cabinet Minister Saeb Erekat said he held the Israeli government responsible for Tuesday's bombing. Israel "failed to bring any of those who kill Palestinians in cold blood to justice," he said.

Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres' office, meanwhile, said the government had rejected a Palestinian cease-fire proposal during a meeting at United Nations headquarters in New York.

The proposal by Palestinian Cabinet Minister Nabil Shaath called for an end to Palestinian attacks against Israeli civilians in a first phase and an end to all attacks in the second. Peres' office said the plan was unacceptable because it would allow attacks on those not classified as civilians during its first phase. That was taken to mean Jewish settlers and soldiers in the West Bank and Gaza.

Shaath said the cease-fire also calls for an Israeli commitment to stop killing suspected Palestinian militants and destroying houses. "If Israel will do that, then this will pave a way for a comprehensive cease-fire, but unfortunately Mr. Peres said that he rejects it," the Palestinian minister said.

In other developments, the Israeli Supreme Court rejected a petition by the families of two Palestinian suicide bombers to prevent the destruction of their homes by Israeli forces, Army Radio reported. The two bombers carried out a Dec. 1, 2001, attack in which 11 Israelis were killed. Relatives denied they knew of the suicide attackers' plans.

Israeli troops entered the Khan Younis refugee camp in Gaza earlier Tuesday and blew up metal workshops where the Israelis say Palestinians were making weapons, the latest in a series of almost nightly raids by Israeli forces in Gaza.

On Tuesday evening, Israeli forces destroyed a house in the Gaza-Egypt border, residents said. The area is the scene of frequent clashes, and Israeli forces often uncover tunnels there used for smuggling weapons into Gaza.

Most of the violent incidents allegedly involving Jewish extremists have centered on the Hebron area. The most recent incident was July 28, when a Palestinian girl was shot and killed during the funeral of an Israeli soldier in the divided city. Settlers are suspected, and several have been detained for questioning.

Escaping the hell of utopia

BY CARLOS ORTEGA-AMPARAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

1975 — The Khmer Rouge, in an attempt to create an absolute classless utopian society, empties all Cambodian urban centers of their populations — abolishing banking, finance, and currency, outlawing all religions, reorganizing traditional kinship systems into a communal order, and eliminating private property. The government starves, places into slavery, and murders a third of the population — laying the foundation of a utopian agrarian society on a satiety of bones and sorrow.

1979 — Cambodia is still in a "dark age," recovering and rebuilding its human resources. A New York Times article said "half the country's high-school teachers have only an elementary-school diploma," and the country as a whole struggles to train and educate children because of the lack of professionals available. The mass exodus after the Khmer Rouge's fall drains the country of its educated masses.

First They Killed My Father, the nightmarish account of Loung Ung's lost childhood and of a time in Cambodia when death was parceled out as if it were a blessing, will be featured in the second All Johnson County Reads the Same Book project — a series of discussion forums sponsored by the UI Center for Human Rights.

The book is a product of a 300-page diary Loung inscribed to portray feelings that she was unable to speak about. "I've chosen to speak about it today," Loung told The Daily Iowan.

"I am releasing the toxicity that was trapped in my mind, soul, and body."

Speaking out has made Loung realize that she was not alone — her experience is not a unique occurrence in the world.

"I wanted to tell a story of survival — of courage, spirit, resiliency, strength, beauty of the Cambodians, and of Cambodia as a whole," she said.

As members of the middle class in 1970s Cambodia, Loung and her family were obvious targets of the Khmer Rouge. From the moment they left Phnom Penh, keeping their true identity secret was of the essence.

At a checkpoint on their march to a labor camp, Khmer Rouge soldiers asked for any former government employees, ex-soldiers, or politicians to step forward to help form a new government of the Angkar — a hideous lie. The Khmer Rouge's philosophy was that "if you are to eradicate the grasses, you must eradicate the roots." Those who did identify themselves were led away to be executed in Cambodia's notorious killing fields. Loung's father, a former member of the military police (an occupation that the Angkar did not see as valuable to its utopia), decided that, from that point on, his family was to live as if they had always been peasants.

The deception lasted only until December 1976, when two men dressed in black walked toward the family's hut and asked Loung's father to help them shift an ox cart out of the mud. He knew it was the end.

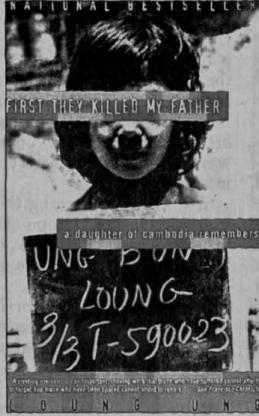

"My beautiful girl," he says to me as his lips quiver into a small smile. "I have to go away with these two men for a while," Loung recounts in First They Killed My Father. He never returned.

Surviving starvation became imperative; the family had to scavenge for food from any source available, eating rotting leaves, insects, rats, and the occasional plant root.

After losing their father, and then a sister to dysentery, the remaining members of the Ung clan split up. "Ma" chose to stay with little Geak, while the three remaining children were to travel separate routes. Loung and her sister Chou disobeyed and remained together.

"If we stay together, we will die together," "Ma" tells her children in the book.

A little more than a year later, both "Ma" and Geak were murdered.

Loung would eventually, after the Khmer Rouge's ousting, escape to the United States via Vietnam and Thailand. Chou and two of Loung's brothers remained in Cambodia and escaped death.

Through her book, Loung recounts a time in world history that has faded from the American psyche, educating a new generation too young to ever know about the tragedy and healing those old enough to recall.

And through the All Johnson County Reads the Same Book project, organizers hope to inform and educate the local community about global human-rights issues.

"First They Killed My Father is a haunting book that made me more passionate about human rights," said Elizabeth Azoff, a UI sophomore and volunteer intern with the rights center. "The goal of the project is to not only educate but incite discussion."

Ideally, the community will read this book between Sept. 22 and Nov. 15 — participating in open discussions that will be held and sponsored by local businesses around Iowa City. These events will be open to the public and free.

The mettle of their sludge fest

BY DAN MALONEY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Stressful as this semester has become, and as much as I would like to bang my head against a wall and throw my books through a window, I've discovered other options.

I can save the money and spend it at Gabe's tonight, releasing my tension in the raging sounds of Relapse Recording artists High on Fire, the female/male duo Jucifer, and local hard-rock band Burnout.

Burnout, as well as fellow rock band Kita, formed from the ashes of Iowa City metal band Scrid. The demise has led to two bands offering the best hard rock to come out of Iowa City. To say that Burnout is heavy is an understatement. Combining Zeppelin-esque riffs and howling vocals, the band provides enough sludge to completely clog a drain. Burnout's yet-to-be-released debut album, Armour of the Gods, is a suitable representation of Burnout's sound.

The opener on the CD, "Backstabbed Again," begins with a distorted bass line and is backed by squealing dual guitars that propel into an onslaught of noise. Amid the havoc, the vocals rage through in competition. The bombast riffs continue on with tracks "Under the Table" and "Drink It Up," both songs that follow the stoner-rock format — slow paced enough to prevent a tweak-out but louder than screaming sirens from hell.

The rest of Armour of the Gods is packed with more fuzzed-out guitar slinging, except for the track "Life No More," which is Burnout's closest approach to a power ballad. The track includes acoustic guitar noodlings, flanger-tainted tones, and love-torn vocals. However, "Life No More" brings some balls in the end to remind the listeners that they weren't listening to the latest Staind single.

By this time, it should go without saying that earplugs should be inserted before attending tonight's show. The intensity of the amplifiers stacked to the ceiling of Gabe's will have the neighboring retirement-home patients on a clear path to insanity, all the while providing a soundtrack intended to help relieve mid-week stress.

Murder investigation opened for Dele

Acting on information from a California woman, prosecutors in Tahiti on Monday opened a murder investigation into the disappearance of former NBA player Bison Dele.
 A French Polynesian police official, after an FBI forensics team began searching Dele's boat, said the decision to launch the murder investigation was a result of comments Erica Weise gave to Sonoma County Sheriff's Dept. and San Francisco FBI officials.
 Weise is a former girlfriend of Dele's older brother, Miles Dabord, according to a family member of the brothers, and was listed as the primary emergency contact for the boat.
 The police official said Weise told the FBI Dabord informed her of a struggle aboard Dele's boat, the Hakuna Matata, that resulted in the deaths of Dele, his girlfriend, Serena Karlan, and the boat's captain, Bertrand Saldo.

Trial about Pierce stabbing begins

BOSTON — The trial of three men accused of stabbing Boston Celtics star Paul Pierce opened Tuesday with lawyers claiming each was wrongly identified in the nightclub fight two years ago.
 William Ragland, 20, Anthony Hurston, 33, and Trevor Watson, 35, are charged with armed assault with intent to murder and related charges in the Sept. 25, 2000, fight at the Buzz Club in Boston's theater district. Each has pleaded not guilty.
 Pierce, 24, recovered from his injuries and returned in time to start the basketball season later that fall.
 Lawyers acknowledged that each man attended a private party at the club the night Pierce was stabbed. But they said none was involved in the fight.

Secondary questioned after Iowa State game

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Questions about Iowa's pass defense put Kirk Ferentz and members of Iowa's secondary on the defensive Tuesday.
 Ferentz spent the majority of his weekly press conference discussing Iowa's problems in stopping teams from throwing the ball against the Hawkeyes. Iowa allowed its opponent to throw for more than 300 yards for the second-consecutive week during its 36-31 loss to Iowa State.
 "I think our guys are doing good things out there, but obviously, people are throwing the ball on us right now," Ferentz said.

Not only are Iowa's opponents throwing the ball, they're doing it effectively. After three games, Iowa defense ranks dead last among Division I teams in pass defense, allowing an average of 333 yards per game through the air. Only one other team, Bowling Green, has allowed an average of more than 300 yards passing this season.
 "We've been getting picked on a little bit," safety Derek Pagel admitted.
 And the team expects to get picked on again this week when Utah State visits Kinick Stadium. The Aggies (1-2) are a pass-oriented team with a veteran quarterback in Jose Fuentes and a dangerous wide receiver in Kevin Curtis. Curtis, a third team All-American a year ago, led the nation in pass receptions with 9.1 per game and finished third in yards per game with 139.2.

 "For the fourth-straight week, we're going to face a quarterback who can throw the ball," Ferentz said. "They find Curtis, he's going to be all over the place."
 Despite the team's struggles shutting down the passing game, there won't be many changes made for this weekend's contest, Ferentz said. Iowa's coach remains comfortable with the team's defensive schemes, and the early missteps by the defense are part of a larger growth process for several of the younger players in the secondary.

Top 10 worst pass-defense teams

Rank	Games	Passpct.	Ydscomp.	Yds.pgm	W	L
1	Iowa	3	66.67	1000	333.33	2	1
2	Bowling Gr.	2	61.18	628	314.00	2	0
3	Utah	3	51.61	863	287.67	2	1
4	UAB	3	55.32	849	283.00	1	2
5	Wyoming	3	67.27	844	281.33	0	6
6	San Jose St.	3	56.31	837	279.00	1	2
7	Okl. State	3	49.62	834	278.00	1	2

10	Syracuse	3	59.81	853	284.33	1	2

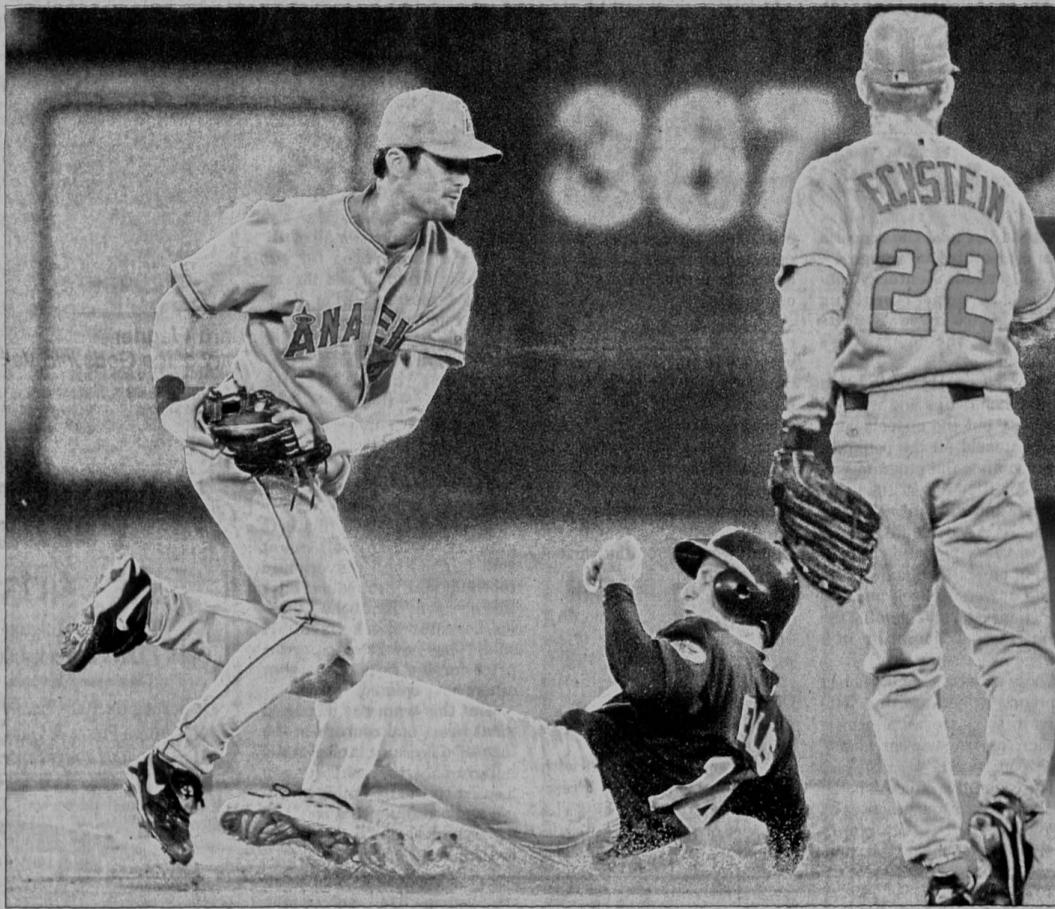

"There's only so much you can do," Ferentz said. "You can't change too much philosophically."
 Adding to the uncertainty of Iowa's defense will be the sta-

OAKLAND, Calif. — Tim Salmon homered in the 10th inning as Anaheim reclaimed sole possession of first place in the AL West with a 1-0 victory over Oakland on Tuesday night.
 Salmon's one-out shot against closer Billy Koch (10-4) decided what began as an exceptional duel between two batter, and Washburn didn't allow a runner past first base. Fans at the Coliseum stood and applauded both pitchers in the late innings.

 Koch, who won for Oakland on Monday night, relieved Mulder to start the 10th. Salmon, who was hitting just .162 in September, worked a full count before hitting his 20th homer of the season to left.
 Ben Weber (7-2) pitched the ninth for the win. Troy Percival pitched the 10th for his 40th save in 44 chances — and the 250th save of his career.

 After Oakland (94-57) climbed back into a first-place tie with a win over the Angels on Monday night, Anaheim (95-56) returned the favor in a four-game series that has big implications on baseball's tightest division race.

Volleyball faces sold-out Northern Iowa crowd

BY ALI NOLLER
 THE DAILY IOWAN

When the Iowa volleyball team travels to Northern Iowa tonight to face its No. 7 nationally ranked in-state counterparts, the Hawkeyes will start all of their hometown athletes on the floor.
 All three of them.
 On the opposing side of the court, the Panthers will have six Iowa players on the court — and seven more on the bench.
 Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett said that when faced with the decision to attend Iowa or UNI, many top Iowa athletes choose to attend the latter, based solely on the tradition of the program.

 "We try to recruit in Iowa, but it's tough recruiting against a top-20 team in the country," Buck-Crockett said. "UNI is a totally different animal than we are. We are trying to build a program."
 Buck-Crockett, who is in her fifth season with the Hawkeyes, is not from Iowa, which makes it even harder to recruit.
 She added that the Hawkeyes are not at the level to redshirt freshmen. The Panthers can guarantee a redshirt year.

Benny Sapp
 Getting to know the real Benny

After an altercation in Iowa City over the summer, cornerback Benny Sapp was released from the team by coach Kirk Ferentz. After his pleas to stay on the team were denied, the Fort Lauderdale native vowed his college football career was over. Sapp, a day after announcing that he would continue his education at Iowa to stay loyal to his fans, transferred to Northern Iowa to play for the Panthers.

Sapp

DI sportswriter Ali Noller talked to a serious and dejected Sapp about his feelings toward the Iowa program and Ferentz, the differences between the Iowa and UNI programs, and dispelling the pseudo-thug image that people assumed about him following his removal from the Iowa team.

DI: You recently suffered an injury.

Sapp: Yeah, the Saturday before last. I hurt my right knee and my ankle on the same play against Wayne State.

DI: Are you practicing?

Sapp: I'm going through minimal practice. It probably won't be decided until Saturday if I play.

DI: What was the transition like from being a Hawkeye to a Panther?

Sapp: It was very different. Basically, programs are run by head coaches, and you have to abide by the rules. I miss my old teammates, but my new teammates have treated me tremendously good. They understood what I went through and picked me up.

DI: Were your teammates or fans intimidated by you when you first joined the team?

Sapp: You might look at me and see only my dreads and my gold teeth — but I'm not the bad person the newspapers made me out to be. The players and fans [here] have accepted the real me.

DI: How was your first

LPGA BRIEF

Whaley becomes first woman to win PGA Section Championship

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Suzy Whaley shot a 1-under-par 71 Tuesday to become the first woman to win a PGA Section Championship and earned an exemption to next year's Greater Hartford Open.

Whaley, the pro at Blue Fox Run Golf Club in Avon, finished with a 5-under-par 54-hole score of 68-72-71-211 at the Ellington Ridge Country Club to win the Connecticut Section title.

"I had a couple wins this summer already and had a whole lot of confidence," Whaley said.

The victory also gives her a berth on next year's Challenge Cup team, a 10-year exemption into the Connecticut Open, and a lifetime exemption into the Connecticut Section Tournament of Champions.

Whaley, 35, also was the first woman to qualify for the National Club Professional Championship.

'Bama, Kentucky will stay on probation, says NCAA

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kentucky and Alabama lost again Tuesday when the NCAA rejected their appeals to lift sanctions against the football programs because of recruiting violations.

An infractions appeals committee upheld a one-year post-season ban placed on Kentucky's football program. It was one of several penalties levied against the school in January after internal and NCAA investigations unearthed dozens of recruiting violations.

"The Kentucky case was one of widespread abuse by employees of the university," said Terry Don Phillips, chairman of the infractions appeals committee. "It is about institutional responsibility for the conduct

Aging Ewing calls it quits after 17 years

BY HAL BOCK

NEW YORK — As Patrick Ewing talked about his retirement, there was a softness in his eyes, a relaxed look replacing the glare he used while establishing himself as one of the 50 greatest players in NBA history.

Then Ewing saw old pal Charles Oakley in the back of the room and his eyes danced. "My hit man, Oak! We had some times, didn't we, Oak?" Ewing shouted from the podium.

Indeed they did.

And for a fleeting moment Tuesday, Ewing was back under the basket with Oakley, the two battling for baskets and bounces, trying to put the New York Knicks over the top.

They never quite got there, but they had fun trying.

For 15 years, Ewing was the centerpiece of the Knicks, New York's go-to guy. There were two wrap-up seasons with Seattle and Orlando, footnotes to a career as one of the league's most dominant centers.

The 40-year-old Ewing finishes his NBA career with 24,815 points and 11,606 rebounds. He'll move on to become an assistant coach for Michael Jordan and the Washington Wizards.

The 11-time All-Star holds a number of Knicks records, including leading scorer (22.8 points) and leading rebounder (10.4). Most of the time, Oakley was right there with him.

"He came to work every day," Oakley said. "He put a lot of effort into what he wanted to do, what he wanted to accomplish."

Also attending Ewing's farewell news conference were ex-teammates Charley Ward, Allan Houston, Herb Williams, and Mark Jackson; coaches Mike Jarvis, Don Chaney, and Jeff Van Gundy; and Miami's Alonzo Mourning, out for the season with the Miami Heat because of his kidney condition.

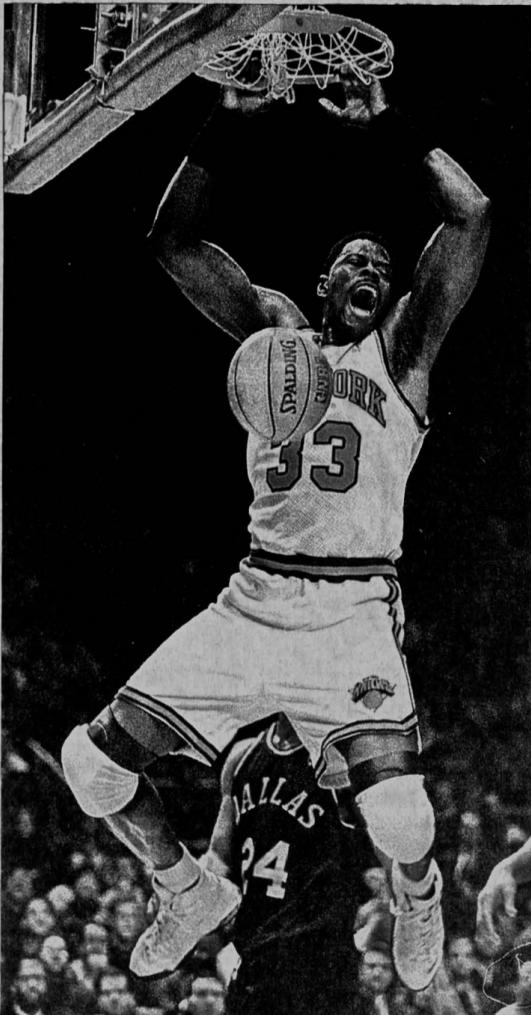

Ewing was asked how he wanted to be remembered.

"As a hard hat," he said. "A hard nose. The work ethic I brought, I gave it 110 percent. I thought I had a great career. I have no regrets. I wouldn't trade it for anything. I enjoyed every minute."

The NBA championship was the missing piece of the puzzle for the man who led Georgetown to three NCAA finals, including the 1984 title, before becoming the No. 1 pick in the first NBA lottery draft.

"I'm disappointed I never won a championship — in the pros," Ewing said. "We did the best we could to help the franchise win one. It didn't happen. That's life. You've got to move on."

In 1994, Ewing led New York to a 3-2 lead over the Houston Rockets in the NBA Finals before losing in seven games. He said his greatest memory was converting a putback on a shot by John Starks that beat Indiana for the Eastern Conference title and put the Knicks in those finals.

Now, he'll be an assistant coach with the Wizards, Jordan's team.

After general manager Wes Unseld signed him, Ewing was asked about the irony of working with Jordan, who often denied him his shot at an NBA title.

"Instead of needing me from afar, he'll be needing me in the same town. We'll be in the same organization," Ewing said.

Pat Riley, who coached Ewing and the Knicks to the finals in 1994, said: "I'm sure that his next career in coaching will be just as successful as his playing career."

For owner Abe Pollin, the signing of Ewing brings an important asset to the Wizards.

"It will be a unique opportunity for our players to be tutored by three of the 50 greatest players of all time — Michael Jordan, Wes Unseld, and now, Patrick Ewing," he said.

Ewing said he had thought hard about retiring, discussing it thoroughly with friends and family.

"It's still a hard decision," he said. "It's still 50-50. Should I play? Should I retire? I felt I could still play. "It's time to move on. It was a great ride."

So what happens if sometime next season some NBA team decides it needs help in the middle? Is Ewing available?

"A few teams called," he said, laughing. "I made this decision anyway. Unless one of the Wizards goes down and they tell me, 'Put down the pad, we need you to get some shots...'"

Dave Checketts, longtime president of the Knicks, remembered Ewing's work ethic. In a game against Milwaukee, the center banged his knee and, with the Knicks comfortably in front, he went to the dressing room. Checketts came down to join him.

As the two men sat, talking basketball and families, the Bucks sliced the Knicks' lead to single digits. Ewing, watching on the dressing room television, took note of the situation, removed the ice from his knee, and stood up.

"Look," Checketts recalled him saying, "I've enjoyed talking to you, but I've got to go."

"He pulled the sleeve over his knee, went back out to check into the game, and we won it."

Football world turns out to lay 'the greatest' to rest

BY FOSTER KLUG

BALTIMORE — With the wail of bagpipes filling the cathedral and his coffin covered in white lilies and roses, Johnny Unitas was remembered as "the greatest," a quarterback who made the impossible possible.

Before more than 2,000 relatives, fans and friends, the Hall of Famer was honored Tuesday as a leader who forever changed the NFL and made everyone around him better. Unitas died Wednesday of a heart attack at 69.

Former Baltimore Colts receiver Raymond Berry, Unitas' most frequent target, told the crowd his teammate was a "once-in-a-lifetime quarterback."

"You elevated all of us to unreachable levels, whether we were in the stands or on the field," Berry said.

Berry was joined at the Cathedral of Mary Our Queen by NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue, Baltimore Ravens coach Brian Billick and players Ray Lewis, Peter Boulware, and Michael McCrary. Also attending were former Baltimore Colts teammates Art Donovan and Tom Matte, and Mayor Martin O'Malley.

"He was mythic," Tagliabue said. "He symbolizes football, and, more importantly, he symbolizes leadership."

Outside the cathedral, a small plane flew overhead with a banner that said, "Unitas We Stand" in big red letters. Near the coffin stood a painting of Unitas walking into the distance in his No. 19 blue Colts jersey.

Unitas' six sons were the pallbearers. Chad Unitas choked back tears as they prepared to take the coffin out of the hearse and a bagpiper played "Edelweiss."

"We remember the cheers that rang out from 33rd Street, celebrating a man in black hightop shoes," said Cardinal William Keeler, the archbishop of Baltimore, recalling Unitas' glory days at Memorial Stadium.

"He humbly and generously dealt with everyone, whether a grandson beginning to play football or a fan seeking an autograph. He led and he touched others by his integrity and loyalty."

The memorial service and funeral Mass were open to the public. The cathedral, which seats about 2,200, was filled by the time the Mass began. The coffin was closed, and the body will be cremated.

Unitas played for the Colts from 1956-72, and for the San Diego Chargers in 1973. He set 22 NFL passing records, was named MVP of the NFL three times and was selected for the Pro Bowl 10 times. He won three championships, including the overtime victory against the Giants in the 1958 NFL title game.

"You made the impossible possible," Berry said. "Those images of your performances still haven't faded."

Donovan added: "He was the greatest. He should get this kind of respect. He's the guy who put Baltimore on the map."

Outside the cathedral, Ravens President David Modell said Unitas supported the new team when it came to Baltimore from Cleveland before the 1996 season.

"Johnny U. was the father of modern football, so all of us, including my father, who enjoyed participating, owe that to Johnny," Modell said. Modell's father, Art Modell, is the Ravens' owner.

Frank Gitschier, a former coach at the University of Louisville, was the first speaker.

"The world has lost one of its greatest legends and all of you have lost a friend," Gitschier said. He recalled how he met Unitas 52 years ago, when he was recruiting as an assistant coach.

Gitschier said he was told, "This kid is tough as nails and he [can] really throw the ball." After he promised Unitas' mother that he would go to Mass every Sunday and would graduate, she agreed he could attend Louisville.

"It was no great recruiting coup — we got Johnny U. because no one else wanted him," Gitschier said.

Several of Unitas' children also spoke. Janice Unitas DeNittis said she remembered sitting on her father's lap as a little girl as they watched game film over and over. She said that after practice, her father and Berry would often run pass plays in their yard until they perfected them.

His son Joe recalled his dad's reputation as a straightforward man, including his traditional pregame speech to his teammates: "Talk is cheap. Let's go play."

Sosa's 497th homer not enough to lift Cubs

NEW YORK (AP) — Jeremy Burnitz hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the New York Mets a victory over the Chicago Cubs on Tuesday night.

Sammy Sosa hit his 497th career homer and 47th of the season.

Edgardo Alfonzo hit a one-out single off Juan Cruz (2-11) in the ninth, and Burnitz lifted a 3-2 pitch over the right-field fence.

David Weathers (6-3) struck out Mark Bellhorn and Alex Gonzalez with two on to end the ninth.

Sosa crushed Al Leiter's first pitch in the fourth an estimated 455 feet.

Leiter gave up four hits in 8½ innings, striking out eight.

Atlanta 2, Philadelphia 1

ATLANTA — Greg Maddux rebounded from one of the worst starts of his career, pitching four-hit ball over seven innings as the Atlanta Braves beat the Philadelphia Phillies.

Maddux (14-6) threw 82 pitches and never went to a three-ball count.

Gary Sheffield was 2-3 with an RBI, and Vinny Castilla, mired in a season-long slump, went 3-4 with a double.

Boston 4, Cleveland 2

BOSTON — Tim Wakefield won his fourth-straight start, and Manny Ramirez hit his seventh homer in 11 games as the Boston Red Sox beat the Cleveland Indians.

Ramirez, who began the day tied for the AL batting lead at .340, went 3-4, improving his average to .344. He hit his 33rd homer of the season in the eighth, reaching 100 RBIs for the fifth-straight season.

Milwaukee 5, Houston 4

MILWAUKEE — Ben Sheets beat the Houston for the third time this season, and the Milwaukee Brewers damaged the Astros' faint postseason hopes Tuesday night.

Sheets (10-16) allowed six hits in eight innings with seven strikeouts and no walks. Daryle Ward hit a solo homer in the fourth, and Craig Biggio had a two-run homer in the eighth.

Pittsburgh 11, Cincinnati 3

PITTSBURGH — Pokey Reese had a career-high five RBIs, and the Cincinnati Reds made five errors — their most in 12 years — in losing to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Pittsburgh scored five runs over two innings with just two hits, both singles by Reese. They took advantage of three errors, three walks, a hit batter, and a wild pitch.

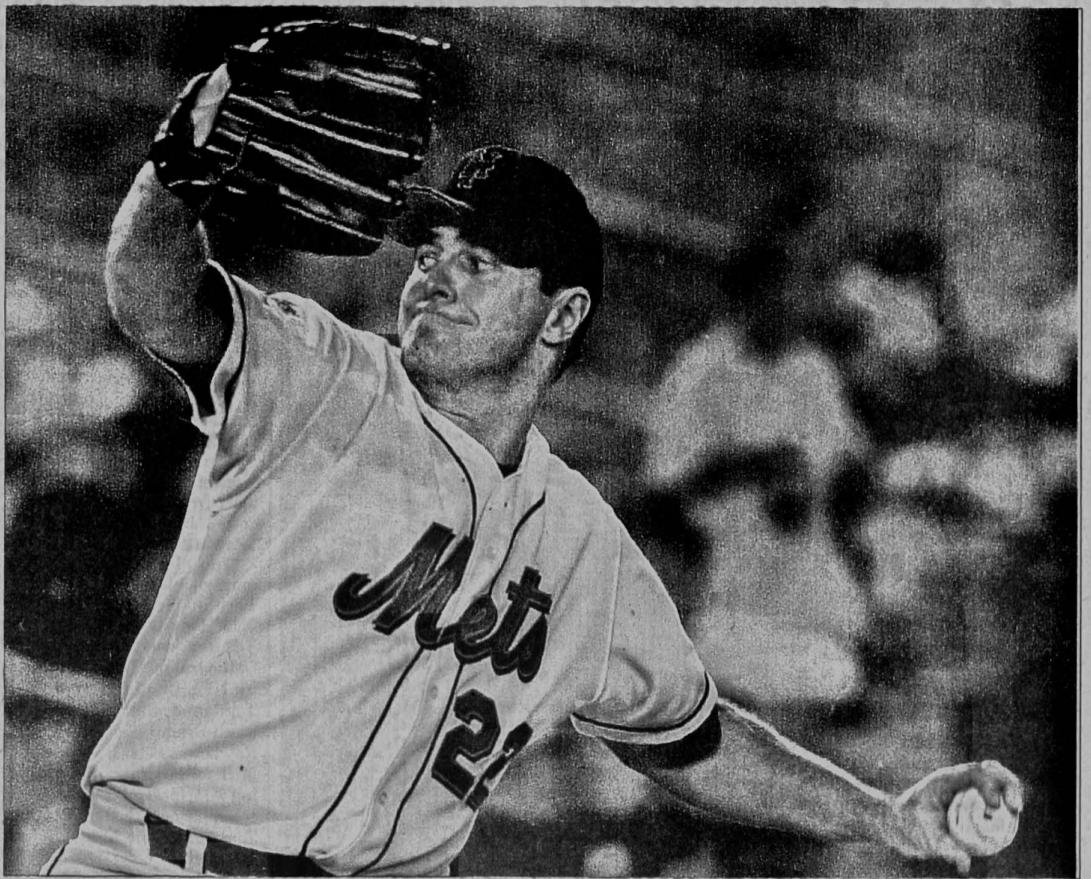

Minnesota 7, Detroit 4

DETROIT — Despite losing outfielders Torii Hunter and Jacques Jones and third baseman Corey Koskie to injuries, the Minnesota Twins beat the Detroit Tigers.

Jones had four hits, including a home run to lead off the game, before spraining his ankle sliding into second base.

Hunter had a bruised triceps after being hit by a pitch, and Koskie bruised his shin after fouling a ball off his leg.

X-rays showed no major injuries to any of the players.

Mets pitcher Al Leiter delivers in the first inning of New York's 3-1 victory over the Cubs. Leiter struck out eight in 8½ innings.

Brad Radke (9-4) gave up three runs on eight hits in six innings, and Eddie Guardado pitched the save.

Tampa Bay 9, Yankees 7
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Alfonso Soriano went 5-5 and hit his 39th home run for the Yankees, but John Flaherty hit a tiebreaking double in the eighth inning that lifted the Tampa Bay Devil Rays over New York on Tuesday night. Randy Winn also homered for Tampa Bay.

GOLF

Rankings undermine competitiveness

BY DOUG FERGUSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

THOMASTOWN, Ireland — For those players who can't get into the World Golf Championships, one simple solution is to play better.

Only it's not always that simple.

"Before all the world rankings came along, how did we figure this stuff out?" Jeff Sluman wondered aloud. "We did survive, didn't we?"

The world ranking is the chief criterion for getting into the three official WGC events and the four major championships. Not many players understand the way the ranking works, although several of them have figured out one troubling component.

It's not always how they play, but how often.

Sluman is an example of a system that penalizes some guys for playing too much at a time when the PGA Tour wants everyone to play more.

Sluman finished the 2000 season at No. 63 in the world ranking. In 30 tournaments the following year, he won the B.C. Open, finished second at Riviera, third at Doral, had five other top 10s, earned $1.8 million and was 21st on the PGA Tour money list.

He moved all the way up to No. 62.

"That's absurd," Sluman said. The world ranking, endorsed by the PGA Tour five years ago, essentially works like this: Players accumulate points based on the strength of field and how they finish. Those points are devalued by one-eighth every 13 weeks over a two-year period.

Then — and this is the critical part — the total points are divided by the number of tournaments they play, with a minimum of 40 events.

The more tournaments, the greater the divisor, and the lower the average, the tougher it makes it to move up in the ranking.

The ranking becomes a lot more volatile lower down the food chain, where players at times have to decide whether they're better off not playing — especially the week before the deadline for getting into the marquee events.

Paul Azinger twice has been on the bubble before a big event and qualified by not playing. The latest example was two weeks ago when he decided not to play the Canadian Open. He didn't realize he had dropped to No. 49, and figured he would slip out of the top 50 and miss out on the American Express Championship in Ireland.

Surprise! He went up to No. 46.

"If I had played and missed the cut, or finished 20th, I probably wouldn't be here," he said. "It encourages you not to play at times. The world ranking is fine, but it shouldn't be used to exempt players into fields. No one understands it."

Sluman has 55 more points than Azinger, although at No. 49 this week he is only a fraction of a point ahead in the ranking. The difference? Sluman has played 63 tournaments in the last two years, while Azinger has played 41.

"It's something that goes against the grain of our ideals," said Stewart Cink, who slipped out of the top 50 and didn't qualify for Ireland. "You want the top players to play as much as possible. But let's get real. The guys around 50 aren't exactly the elite."

Even so, Sluman believed he belonged at the NEC Invitational last month at Sahalee, especially since he had won twice on the PGA Tour over the past 13 months.

Instead, he fell victim to a couple of strange circumstances.

The Greater Milwaukee Open had a field strong enough for the winner to qualify for the NEC — until Bob Tway withdrew, which reduced the strength of field

Did Tway's absence make it that much easier for Sluman to win by four strokes?

"Oh, yeah. It was a real layup," Sluman said sarcastically, shaking his head.

While Sluman stayed home in Chicago, Graeme McDowell competed for the $1 million first prize at Sahalee. How did McDowell get into the field? By winning the Scandinavian Masters, which became a qualifying event because — get this — Sluman played and helped increase the strength of field.

The world ranking is not evil. Any system that tries to measure more than 500 golfers playing six tours around the world is going to have flaws.

But when players start realizing that the best way to qualify for seven big tournaments is to stay home during certain weeks, the world ranking sends the wrong message.

Sluman has an interesting solution.

Instead of making 40 tournaments every two years the minimum, why not make that the maximum? The ranking then would depend on how someone performs in the 20 strongest tournaments he plays each year, and not worry about how often he plays.

NFL BRIEF

Kelly rejoins Vikings following wife's death

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — The first time Lewis Kelly tried to return to football, he just wasn't ready. After two more weeks of grieving the death of his pregnant wife, he rejoined his Minnesota Vikings teammates.

"I gave myself a two-week goal to see if I could recover from it," Kelly said Monday. "I've just got to realize I'm going to deal with this for a while before I can move on."

Kelly's wife, Rakiva, who was four months pregnant, died Aug. 25 of a rare blood disorder. Kelly returned to practice Sept. 2, the week of Minnesota's season opener, but he called coach Mike Tice the next night to tell him he needed more time.

The Vikings received a roster exemption for Kelly, who was supposed to start at tackle with rookie Bryant McKinnie holding out.

"It was a blessing," Kelly said. "I really needed time."

Everett Lindsay started the first two games, but he had back spasms during Sunday's loss to Buffalo and left in the second quarter. It's unclear who will start at left tackle against Carolina this weekend.

"We'll figure that out when Wednesday comes," Tice said. "The guy lined up there first Wednesday will be the guy lined up there first Sunday."

But the Vikings are just happy to have their teammate back.

"We're glad Lewis feels good enough to be back," center Matt Birk said. "It's nice to see him around, because he's such a great guy."

"I know if I was a better player, a Pro Bowl player or something, with a lot of money under my belt, I probably wouldn't have come back this year," Kelly said. "But I was starting to have a little success so I felt like I should try to come back."

"I just had to get back to the point in my mind where I could concentrate on football. It was just something I prayed about."

Kelly is concerned about getting back into shape.

"I worked out a little bit, but nothing can prepare you for playing football like playing football," he said.

His biggest hurdle will be an emotional one.

"I just have to push through it," Kelly said. "That's a big part of my life missing. I guess I could try to dedicate the season to her, but that wouldn't be enough."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get into a group that will allow you the creative freedom you need to expand your mind. The more outgoing and enthusiastic you are, the easier it will be for you to get others to support your ideas.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Immediately take care of whatever problems crop up. This is not the time for you to be stubborn or difficult to deal with. You may need to apologize.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The more you do to open your mind to new ideas, the better you will feel about your future. The inspiration you receive from others will help you decide what it is you want to accomplish.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If you haven't been putting enough money away, you may find yourself running a little short. Poor investments may be the cause for your financial problems, but if it happens to be an inability to say no to the ones you love, it may not be so easy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you have made someone a promise, you'd better keep your word or prepare to face the music. Your partner may want a commitment of some sort, and you'd better be ready.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get all promises in writing today. Although this can turn out to be a very favorable time for you, you must play it smart and leave nothing to chance. An older relative may require your assistance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make plans to pamper yourself. A day at the spa or a sports event with some friends will take your mind off your everyday routine and bring you in contact with someone who inspires you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You should reach out and help an older family member. Your ability to handle serious matters will make your family feel secure, but don't do so at the cost of ruining your health or stretching your finances.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will enjoy the company of foreigners and should travel to an exotic destination. Get involved in cultural events that will lead to new friendships with people from different backgrounds.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): This is a good time to re-evaluate your position. You have more options than you think. Do your research and talk to as many people as you can about your intentions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Let your creative side take over. You will be able to come up with a great new plan that should point you in an exciting direction. Idle time will be your worst enemy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): This can turn out to be a lucrative day if you get involved in money matters with other people. You will have luck where contracts and legal matters are concerned. An older relative may lean on you.

quote of the day

To the average person on the street, they have a belief a refinery or power plant is their largest exposure to carcinogenic air contaminants, when in reality, it's a dry cleaner in their community.

— Barry Wallerstein, executive director of South Coast Air Quality Management District (Los Angeles).

Decision on injury expected this week against the Cyclones with a foot injury. X-rays taken following the game came back negative, but he will most likely be held out for precautionary reasons.

Scott Boleyn, a senior walk-on from Dubuque, replaced Sanders against Iowa State and will probably start in place of Sanders, should he not be totally healed.

"Bob went down, and I need to fill in and help the defense," Boleyn said. "Hopefully, we can get him ready for the Big Ten season."

Injuries may also take their toll on the offensive side of the ball, with running backs Fred Russell and Aaron Greving listed as day-to-day. Russell, who sustained a deep shoulder bruise against the Cyclones, said the pain is subsiding, and he is feeling better by the day. Greving's progress this week will also be monitored after he suffered a hip injury while being tackled.

Backup tailback Jermelle Lewis, the team's second-leading rusher with 163 yards, is prepared to start in place of the injured duo.

A decision on the status of the three injured Hawkeyes for this weekend's game is expected to be made later in the week after Ferentz and his staff have had time to evaluate the players during practice.

Iowa outmatched on paper; rivalry remains strong

But while the Hawkeyes may be at a disadvantage in terms of the rankings, the numbers on paper pan out to simply that — numbers.

"The one thing about the Iowa match is that we could be ranked first in the nation, or they could be ranked first in the nation, but I really feel that all of those things go out the window during an in-state match," UNI coach Bobbi Peterson said. "There is a lot of pride on the line, and these matches bring out the best in both teams."

While the Hawkeyes have their work cut out for them in Cedar Falls tonight, Buck-Crockett said the competition they are facing is no different from what they will see in the upcoming Big Ten season.

"We have the eighth-, ninth-, and 10th-ranked teams in the Big Ten, and this is just an opportunity to play a top-10 team."

The Hawkeyes are already off to a fast start, racking up the same number of wins (six) they netted the entire 2001 season.

The Panthers have also been racing at full bore, knocking off Pepperdine, UCLA, and Minnesota. Their only loss was handed to them by Stanford, the top-ranked team in the country.

UNI holds a 23-21 series record over Iowa, winning the last six matches going back to the 1984 season. The past two seasons, the Panthers defeated the Hawkeyes in four games.

Iowa will again be without starter Amoreena Reynolds, who sprained her ankle in the Hawkeyes' outing at the UIC Tournament. The Iowa sophomore's absence leaves a gaping hole in the Hawkeyes' offensive attack, which will likely be filled by senior Suzanne Bouchard. Evelena Ornelas will return to action for the Hawkeyes after starting the season as a student assistant coach following medical leave in 2001 season, when she was sidelined because of an injury.

The battle of the two Iowa teams will be played in front of a sold-out crowd in UNI's West Gym, which seats 2,051 people.

Play is scheduled to begin at 7:30.

Sapp disheartened, hurt after dismissal from Iowa game in the UNI Dome?

Sapp: When I first stepped on the field [in the Panthers first home game against Wayne State], I heard the fans chanting my name. My heart dropped down to my feet — I felt happy and accepted.

DI: How is school going?

Sapp: You've got classes that you have to go to, but you go through new faces every year. School's fine.

DI: Have you been back to Iowa City since you transferred?

Sapp: No, I haven't.

DI: Will you in the future?

Sapp: Yes. I miss my friends, especially my close friends, and the coaching staff.

DI: Do you still keep in contact with your old Iowa teammates?

Sapp: Oh yeah. Bob Sanders, Fred Russell, Kevin Worth, Abdul Hodge, Raymond Perkins, a couple more guys. Jeremiah Roberts. I talk to Fred Russell every day. I miss my boys from Florida — Fred Barr, Collin Cole, David Walker. They were like my older brothers. Fred [Russell] helped me get through this a lot.

DI: How is the coaching staff different at UNI compared with Iowa?

Sapp: Both [Iowa coach Kirk] Ferentz and [UNI coach Mark] Farley are extremely great coaches, and both were very good to me. The difference is in personality. Ferentz is more of a blue-collar guy, and Farley is blue-collared but more laid back. Not one is better [than the other].

DI: Do you have hard feelings about leaving the Iowa program?

Sapp: I wouldn't say hard feelings — I do miss it, but I've got to get on with my life. It was out of [Coach Ferentz'] hands. At first, I didn't want to do anything. Thank God for everybody who helped me through this.

DI: You had said after being dismissed from the team that you would finish your schooling as a Hawkeye. The next day, you had transferred to UNI. What made you change your mind?

Sapp: It's just the way it happened. I had very little time, but I used it wisely. I still had the opportunity to leave. But this guy's [Farley] a good man, and I'm starting to turn things around.

DI: Has your family had a chance to see you play as a Panther?

Sapp: There are a few plane-ticket arrangements that need to be made, but they'll make it here soon.

DI: What made you change your mind to continue playing football?

Sapp: At first I was hurt, and I was still hurt when I got here. I wanted to give up on life, period. I wasn't thinking about the future — I just didn't want to be called a traitor. But I sat down and thought about my family and friends, and I couldn't give up on them. If I would have stayed in Iowa City, I probably would have ended up dropping out. I told myself, "Benny, you're wrong." Norm Parker helped me better myself on and off the field and taught me to be a man. I made my choice — I had to do something. The fans [at Iowa] care about me, and they understood I had to leave. I got a lot of mail from Iowa fans after I left, and I can't respond to all of them individually. I just want to tell the fans thank you.

DI: What do you miss the most about being a Hawkeye?

Sapp: My friends. Hanging around the coaches and stuff.

DI: Do you have a sort of celebrity status on campus like you did here?

Sapp: People have recognized me and have accepted me and shown me support. I'm happy to see that.

DI: You were named to the pre-season watch list for the Bronco Nagurski Trophy, which is given to the nation's top defensive college player. Did that influence your decision to continue playing football?

Sapp: I was nominated for it, but that's the most I've thought of it. It's one of the least goals I'm worried about.

DI: Coach Farley said he set his standards higher for you than for any of his other players. How do you feel about that?

Sapp: It's like what Norm Parker told me. Children do what they want, men do what they have to do. I'm not a child any more — I've got to do what I have to do.

DI: Any final thoughts?

Sapp: Just tell everybody, my fans and friends, thanks for getting me back on track. The coaches, the football office — all for being there for me.

BRIEF

Venus uninjured after car accident

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — U.S. Open runner-up Venus Williams was uninjured when the car she was riding in crashed west of Palm Beach Gardens over the weekend.

The crash occurred either late on Sept. 14 or early Sunday morning, Palm Beach County Sheriff spokesman Jay Hart said Tuesday. The crash report had not been submitted, so details were limited, Hart said.

No further details about the crash were available late Tuesday night. Richard Williams, Venus' father, said his daughter was not hurt.

"She may have been in a minor fender-bender, but I don't believe she was seriously hurt," said Julie Kachner, a spokesperson for Venus Williams.

Williams' half-brother, Richard Williams III, 37, and his wife, Ana, 36, also were in the vehicle. They were treated and released from St. Mary's Medical Center on Sunday, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Work/Life balance...

we're setting the industry standard.

If we were to tell you that Northern Trust is a leading international asset management firm and the 14th largest money manager in the nation, with 85 locations in 15 states in the U.S. alone, what would that say to you? It would give you an idea as to our scope and the depth and breadth of our resources, but in the end, what would it really mean to you?

Now, if we were to tell you that we are consistently recognized by publications such as Fortune and Chicago magazines in their "Top Corporations to Work For" listings, by Worth magazine for the 3rd year as the "Best Private Bank," and by Forbes on its "Platinum 400" listing as one of the Best Big Companies in America, we'd be an organization with some muscle, no? Add to that an unwavering commitment to the community, an on-site fitness center, on-site child care, in-depth training that includes dynamic career-pathing and routine access to Senior Management, and a whole suite of industry-leading benefits, and you have not only an employer of choice, but your employer of choice. Move with an organization whose word is as good as gold.
