Ganske, Harkin trade tape shots

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Republican Senate challenger Greg Ganske accused Sen. Tom Harkin of "dirty politics," while Harkin said Ganske is seeking to divert attention because he's on "the wrong side of Iowa."

In their first debate of the fall campaign, the two were questioned about a dispute that's erupted over the Harkin campaign's role in surreptitiously taping a Ganske strategy session.

Ganske decried the "stunning revelations of the Watergate-style dirty politics here in Iowa" and said Iowans deserve explanations.

Harkin said he's fired a low-level staffer who taped the meeting and that voters want to hear about more than "just petty politics and that's all it is." "I've taken responsibility, and I've taken action, and it's time to move on to the issues," Harkin said.

He said there are clearly reasons that Ganske keeps pushing the tape issue, mainly because the Republican challenger doesn't want to talk about more serious issues.

"He doesn't want to explain to the people of Iowa why he wants to privatize Social Security," said Harkin. "He doesn't want to talk about these issues."

Ganske said, "You can't sweep under the rug that there is a criminal investigation going on" and accused the Harkin campaign of misleading voters.

"This is a crime, and it is fortunate that they were caught," Ganske said. "The word disinformation is political talk for lies."

Harkin said much bigger issues are at work in the campaign, and he warned about

Charges of 'dirty politics' rare in Iowa, experts say

BY CHUCK LARSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

The allegations of dirty politics against Sen. Tom Harkin's re-election campaign are extraordinarily rare in Iowa, a state known for its honest elected officials, political experts say.

But those same experts disagreed Sunday over whether Harkin's bid for re-election will take a hit as a result of the alleged secret recording of his opponent's strategy meeting.

"Iowans feel a bit besieged [by] these shenanigans," said

Basil Talbott, who has covered many political scandals as a reporter for and editor of the Chicago Sun-Times. "Voters will pay attention to this."

Added Talbott, the George H. Gallup UI professor of journalism: "Harkin needs to get this behind him. This will probably cut his lead in the polls."

Shooting videotape along the protest's frontlines

BY AMIR EFRATI
THE DAILY IOWAN

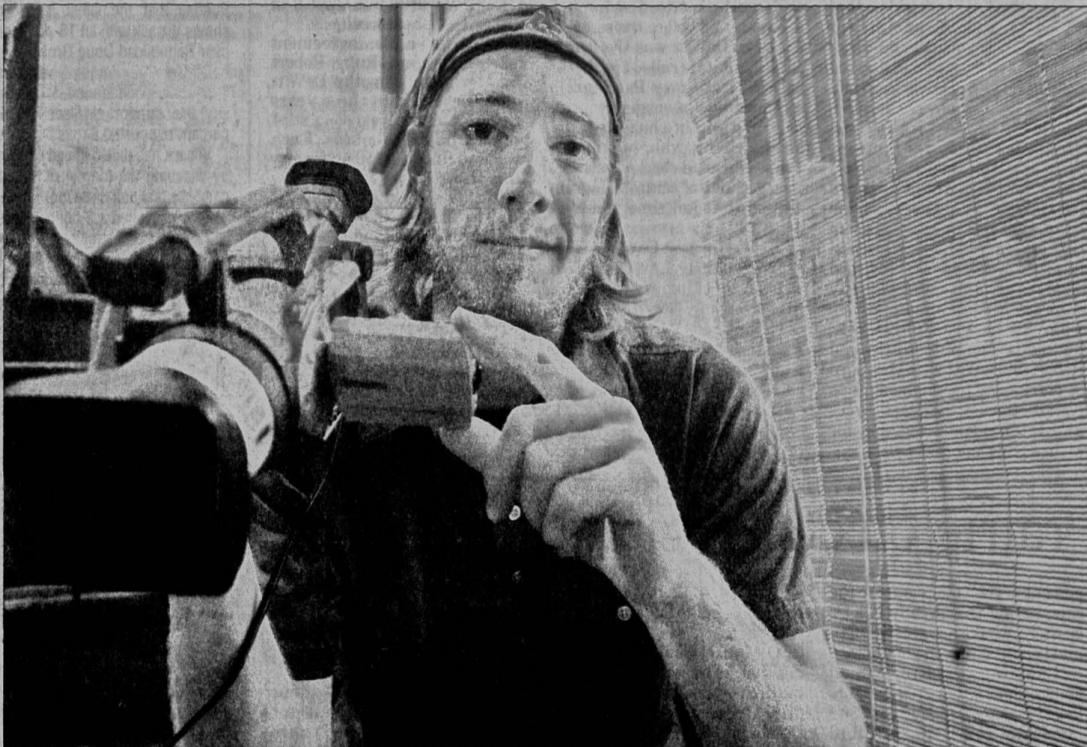

Chris Ward and David Burnett were trapped.

Washington, D.C., riot police had them contained inside an area of only 300 square feet alongside 150 other anti-globalization protesters.

"I was in a daze," said Burnett, a former UI student. "People were on top of each other."

The incident, in the nation's capital between Vermont and 14th streets on the morning of Sept. 27, was part of a "People's Strike" on the city coinciding with the annual summit of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. The Sept. 27 clashes between 2,000 scattered demonstrators coordinated by the Anti-Capitalist Convergence — an anarchist group dedicated to abolishing global institutions — and more than 3,000 police resulted in nearly 650 arrests, minor property damage, and traffic jams.

"Everyone was surprised by how quickly police moved to shut everything down," said Ward, a UI senior who followed Burnett and three UI student activists to document the weekend's events for a sociology honors project. Ward, whose political-science thesis is on the anti-globalization movement, recorded the images and sounds of the protests using a Canon digital video camera and interviewed numerous activists.

Far from his heyday, Mezvinsky admits guilt

BY MARYCLAIRE DALE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — In their heyday, Ed Mezvinsky and his wife, Marjorie, were a power couple in Democratic Party circles and on suburban Philadelphia's swanky Main Line.

The couple had both served in Congress, and Marjorie Margolies-Mezvinsky, a magnetic former NBC-TV reporter, was gearing up for a 2000 Senate bid.

Political advisers, friends, and one or another of their 11 children, some adopted from overseas, came and went in their $900,000, 8,200-square-foot mansion in Narberth.

"It was always a vibrant household, with community figures, political figures, cultural figures. Marjorie has many acquaintances, and Ed did, too," said Jerome Shestack, a close friend who is the former president of the American Bar Association.

But the children are now grown, and the couple's careers, mansion, money, and status are all but gone, too.

On Sept. 27, Edward Mezvinsky, 65, admitted that he bilked investors who handed over more than $10 million, including friends, law clients, and even his late mother-in-law.

"I'm trying to understand what happened," Mezvinsky said Sept. 28 from his rented house in Merion, as he watched his native Iowa edge Penn State in overtime. "Something broke."

Student financial aid's anti-drug provision fizzles

BY JOHN MOLSEED
THE DAILY IOWAN

A federal financial-aid provision aimed at denying government money to students with drug convictions hasn't proven to be much of a hurdle at the UI.

This fall, 10 UI financial-aid applicants were initially turned down for assistance under the Higher Education Act measure that denies or limits federal aid for students who have been convicted of drug-related crimes. All the applicants either admitted to a drug conviction or left the question blank on their Free Application for Federal Student Aid forms. They later changed their answers when notified by the university.

"It's a self-reported field," said

Catherine Wilcox, the UI associate director of Financial Aid, adding that the law does not provide any way of verifying an applicant's answer.

The question appears on the financial-aid as a "yes" or "no" field. Applications with a blank or "yes" answer are flagged. They are then contacted by letter explaining that they may not receive aid and are given the opportunity to change the response. There is no method to determine if the corrected response was deliberately falsified to retain eligibility.

Approximately 87,000 students nationwide have been denied federal aid since the provision's implementation in 1998, said Shawn Heller, the national director of Students for a Sensible Drug Policy. An estimated 30,000 were denied loans and grants at the start of this year. Not all of the applicants were necessarily enrolled when their aid applications were rejected.

"Many people in higher education and financial aid strongly oppose even having the question," Wilcox said. "If there's no way of policing it, what purpose does it serve?"

The UI's first chapter of Students for a Sensible Drug Policy group will meet tonight to begin a campaign to repeal the provision and raise awareness on campus about drug laws.

Despite bumps, group drives along

BY ALEXIS GRUND
THE DAILY IOWAN

Every time Karly Whitaker takes "Old Vicki" for a drive, she looks at the odometer and wonders what roads the 1990 Crown Victoria ventured down during its last trip.

Whitaker is one of six Iowa City residents taking part in the area's first public car-sharing program, the Iowa City Car Co-op.

People ranging from a restaurant owner to City Councilor Steven Kanner formed the group to save money, rely less on automobiles, and encourage a more environmentally friendly community. After three months in operation, however, the group is hitting bumps in its efforts to recruit members.

"The co-op's a hard sell because everyone has a car," said program scheduler Joy Bayshore. "There's interest out there, but we want to generate more."

The co-op is hoping to expand its membership to include UI students, Iowa City residents, and individuals with disabilities, said Whitaker, the program's chairwoman. Potential members must be at least 18 years old and have a clean driving record.

"This [co-op] is a great way to make ourselves less addicted to cars," she said. "Iowa City is a perfect place for a program like this ... so the co-op has the potential to grow."

as membership increases.

Inspired by other car-sharing programs, Kanner said, he began organizing the program to voice his concerns about the environment and to help decrease the number of automobiles in use. Car co-ops are found in such cities as San Francisco and Seattle and also are popular in Canada and Europe.

Bayshore said the program will also provide an outlet for drivers who are frustrated with transportation and parking issues in town.

Members pay a $50 refundable security deposit upon joining the program and contribute a $44 monthly fee to cover repairs, maintenance, insurance, and the recent purchase of equipment for disabled members. Members must also pay 5 cents per mile driven; they cover their own gasoline expenses.

Co-op members hold meetings every two weeks to arrange their driving schedule, discuss membership issues, and share stories about their experiences with the car, which has ventured as far as Washington, D.C.

"One week, a member took the car to hike a nature trail, and one week another member took it to buy cat litter," Bayshore said. "It is interesting to find out where Old Vic has been."

Judge hits DeWitt with up to twelve years

BY CHAO XIONG
THE DAILY IOWAN

Referring to the "enormity" of his crime, a District Court judge sentenced the "frail, old" mastermind of a multistate forgery and theft ring to up to 12 years in prison.

Robert DeWitt Sr. must serve three consecutive terms of an indeterminate amount of time for his part in a crime spree that involved more than 500 forged checks, $100,000 in stolen merchandise, and more than 180 Kmart stores. Judge William Thomas also fined DeWitt the maximum $2,000 for two counts of forgery and one count of third-degree theft.

Each forgery charge carries a five-year prison term; the theft charge carries a two-year term.

"What happened here is so large ... I don't think there is any alternative but to impose a sentence," Thomas said, adding that the punishment is not unreasonable despite DeWitt's age and physical health.

The state sought maximum prison time and fines for DeWitt, 56, because of his prominent role in a family scam that hit Kmart stores in approximately a dozen states, said Assistant Johnson County Attorney Mike Brennan.

DeWitt, his wife, Ruby DeWitt, and sons Timothy, Mark, and Robert Jr. DeWitt were convicted of purchasing merchandise from Kmart stores with forged checks and later returning them for cash, saying the items were leftover gifts their church was unable to give away.

"This was a well-planned out and well-executed scheme," Brennan said before the sentencing. "Mr. DeWitt was the leader of the family. He called the shots."

DeWitt attorney Pat Ingram recommended a suspended sentence and time in a halfway house for his client, who, he admits, wrote a few bad checks years ago that got "out of control." Ingram argued that jail time wouldn't benefit his client, who refers to himself as the Rev. DeWitt.

"This family has been torn apart by this," Ingram said before the sentencing. "Rev. DeWitt has been punished by that."

A shackled DeWitt apologized and said he wanted to return to being a law-abiding citizen.

"Your honor, I'm sorry ... for getting myself and above everything, my family, into this place and this situation," he said. "I never meant for this to happen. I don't know how or why this happened."

Ingram will file an appeal of the sentence next week.

As part of a plea agreement reached in June, Ruby, Robert Jr., Mark, and Timothy DeWitt were sentenced to three years probation and a year-long stint in area halfway houses. Each was also fined $1,250 on forgery and theft charges. Timothy DeWitt was fined an additional $500 for identity theft.

All the charges against the youngest DeWitt, Esther, were dismissed as part of the deal.

The family must pay Kmart $90,807 in retribution.

Coralville police arrested the sextet Feb. 24 after discovering fake IDs, stolen electronic goods, and receipts in the DeWitts' two motel rooms at the Ramada Inn.

Blooming Prairie elects to merge with giant

BY PHIL DAVIDSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Members of Blooming Prairie Co-op Warehouse have voted to sell the company's assets to the nation's largest organic-food distributor.

Seventy-three percent of members voted in favor of the deal on Sept. 28, allowing United Natural Foods Inc. to pay $31 million for the Iowa City-based firm. Sixty percent of votes were needed for passage.

New Pioneer Co-op, a member of Blooming Prairie, used its 1 percent of the vote to oppose the sale, saying the already indebted store would not receive optimal benefits from the merger.

Blooming Prairie, which employs more than 200 workers locally, is owned by its 2,344 members, consisting of retail stores, co-ops, and buying clubs in the Midwest. With annual sales topping $130 million this year, the warehouse drew interest from United Foods. Although the company is the nation's largest natural and organic-food distributor, it does not have a warehouse in the Midwest.

"We have national customers now who want to buy from us on a national basis," said United Foods CEO Michael Funk, acknowledging that acquiring a warehouse the size of Blooming Prairie would help in supplying this demand.

Though New Pioneer is set to receive an estimated $403,000 before taxes from the sale, New Pioneer board members say they think the money will be retained by United Foods to reduce the store's $430,000 debt to Blooming Prairie. Under this scenario, New Pioneer would have to pay approximately $62,000 in federal and state income taxes on the capital gain.

Funk, however, said stores generally would receive cash from the sale.

"As a result of this sale, stores can raise a significant amount of capital," he said. "They'll have cash to pay off the debts."

New Pioneer Treasurer Peter Fisher said United Foods has not stated how it will handle the debt.

"It's their choice," he said. "I'm not sure how they would pay it one way or another."

STATE BRIEF

Vilsack pulls ahead in Governor poll

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A new poll says Gov. Tom Vilsack's support has strengthened over the last three months in his campaign for re-election.

In a copyright story, the Des Moines Sunday Register reported Sunday that the latest Iowa Poll shows Vilsack with an 18-point lead over Republican Doug Gross.

Of the 805 randomly selected, likely voters questioned, 51 percent said they supported Vilsack and 33 percent supported Gross.

Vilsack has pulled ahead of Gross by widening the margin of support since the last poll three months ago, when Vilsack had a 2-point lead.

The poll, conducted by Selzer and Co. Inc. of Des Moines between Sept. 21-15, interviewed adults who said they planned to vote on Nov. 5.

The margin of error is plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

The recent poll does show some room for Gross to gain, however, because 13 percent of the likely voters said they are still unsure who they will vote for.

Two percent said they would cast their ballots for Jay Robinson, the Green Party candidate, if the election were held now. Liberta, an candidate Clyde Cleveland garners the support of 1 percent.

Gross still may have time to overtake Vilsack.

Among likely voters who favor the governor, 37 percent say they could still be persuaded to vote for another candidate. Among those supporting Gross, 32 percent say they could change their minds.

Vilsack's strength comes from solidifying his already strong support among Democrats from 79 percent to 87 percent since June.

Report: Number of UI minorities increases slightly

BY JESSICA BRADY
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI saw an increase in minority enrollment this fall thanks largely to a record freshman class, said university officials.

There are 2,568 minority students enrolled this semester, up 45 from last year. Undergraduate minority enrollment increased by 62 students; the number of graduates and professionals dropped by 17.

At the same time, the number of blacks, American Indians/Native Alaskans, and Asian or Pacific Islanders all dropped from enrollment figures four years ago. Latino enrollment continued its steady climb.

UI sophomore John Jackson said he is glad to hear about the overall increase in enrollment, adding that the university doesn't pursue an existing pool of minority students.

"There should be more advertising for the university in the South," he said. "There are a lot of students seeking opportunities to come to Northern schools such as Iowa."

Associate Provost Joe Coulter, the director of Opportunity at Iowa, said he is pleased about the increase, but he conceded that improvements still can be made. "The fact is we have low retention," he said. "To improve diversity, we need to retain students to get their degrees."

The university's minority enrollment — which is usually around 8.5 to 9 percent — is consistently better than that at Iowa State University, Coulter said. The state's minority population is approximately 6 percent.

ISU's minority enrollment reached 7.15 percent last year and 6.88 percent in 2000. The school has not yet released its numbers for this fall.

"We've pursued a continuing effort to identify college-bound minority students," said Michael Barron, the UI Admissions director. "It's our priority to make recruiting an on-going effort."

Opportunity at Iowa has a heavy presence in the recruitment of minority and majority students, he said. The organization offers outreach programs to elementary and high-school students, campus visits, and financial-aid consultations.

"It's our job to make sure all students know about the UI when making their college decisions," Barron said. "We're just going to keep doing what we've been doing."

He also cited the Educational Opportunities Program as a resource for minorities. The program, which has been in place at the UI's Carver College of Medicine for more than 30 years, provides financial assistance to students based on need.

Despite the decline in the number of minority graduate students from last year's 906 to the current 889, Barron said the Educational Opportunities Program continues to be an asset in recruiting.

The enrollment numbers do not include foreign students attending the university on student visas, who number 2,142 this year. Last figure was 2,026.

Vision Iowa has dished out $238M

BY MIRANDA LEITSINGER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST BEND, Iowa — The new motel in this northwestern Iowa town of 834 shows a community partnership: a couple gave their sauna, an artist painted walls and tables, and an antique shop donated decorations.

Residents and friends contributed more than $400,000 to build what was viewed as a project to save the community, state, and county funding.

"It's a town that ... just refuses to give up," said Lannie Miller, a Palo Alto County supervisor and project organizer. "You can't believe the amount of participation we had from people."

That community cooperation is what Gov. Tom Vilsack says demonstrates the success of the state's one-of-a-kind Vision Iowa program, which has funded approximately $238 million for museums, events centers, riverfront projects — more than 70 projects over the past two years.

Vilsack says this is an example of why the state should bankroll similar initiatives, and he has proposed giving $1 million in state money to every county.

"What we learned from our experience with Vision Iowa is that there is tremendous interest at the local level in partnering with the state to improve quality of life," he said.

Vision Iowa was approved by the Legislature two years ago to provide seed money for recreation, education, entertainment, and cultural projects. At least $15 million a year is earmarked for projects over the next 20 years.

The Vision Iowa board also hands out Community Attraction and Tourism grants to smaller projects. A total of $12.5 million a year, coming from the state's tobacco-settlement fees, will be available through June 2004.

Communities have won funding for projects ranging from swimming pools to community centers, to Music Man Square in Mason City and the America's River project in Dubuque.

To be eligible, local leaders must secure private and public funding. Public support must be apparent at the town and county levels. Community organizers have to submit feasibility plans as part of their application.

"That feasibility ties into sustainability. That's the real thing that we're looking at," said C.J. Niles, the director of the Iowa Department of Economic Development. It's important that the projects can support themselves in the long haul, she said.

Unlimited access in Iraq key, U.N. inspectors say

BY DAFNA LINZER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS — U.N. weapons inspectors, who today will lay down demands to Iraq about getting back into the country, may not get the unfettered access demanded by the United States unless the Security Council alters a deal made in 1998.

The inspectors are dusting off old equipment, ordering helicopters, and testing new technology as the United States negotiates a new proposal for their return.

The Bush administration dismissed Iraq's offer earlier this month to accept the inspectors' unconditional return under previous U.N. resolutions. Instead, it wants a tough new resolution completely redesigning the inspections regime and the powers that inspectors would have to enter Saddam Hussein's palaces, block his movements, and break in on closed facilities during their hunt for weapons.

"This resolution that we're working on has to give the inspectors all the access they need, and there cannot be any conditions on presidential sites or sensitive sites, that just can't happen," one U.S. official said.

Hans Blix, the chief U.N. weapons inspector, and Jacques Baute, the head of the International Atomic Energy Agency's nuclear team, will begin two days of talks today with Iraqi experts in Vienna, Austria, to arrange for the inspectors' return.

The Iraqis are supposed to bring a backlog of reports listing items they possess that could have military purposes. The lists must disclose the locations and current uses for those items.

"We're certainly aware of what happened last time," said Melissa Fleming, a spokeswoman for the Vienna-based energy agency. "But we uncovered Iraq's secret nuclear program, and we dismantled it. If we get unfettered access, we will be successful again."

Although they have not been inside Iraq since December 1998, international inspectors are certain Iraq has a biological-weapons program.

Some experts also believe that, despite 12 years of sanctions in place since Iraq invaded Kuwait and lobbed Scud missiles at Israel and Saudi Arabia, Saddam is ready to build a nuclear bomb if he gets enough weapons-grade uranium or plutonium.

Britain said last week that Iraq has a growing arsenal of chemical and biological weapons capable of being launched within 45 minutes. Washington also has claimed Iraq has ties to Osama bin Laden's Al Qaeda terror network.

But unless they are on the ground, inspectors say, there is no way to know just how quickly Iraq is resuscitating its programs.

When U.N. inspectors first arrived in Baghdad in the aftermath of the 1991 Persian Gulf War, they were a powerful, almost untouchable force. Operating like commandos outfitted with a fleet of helicopters and all-terrain vehicles, they launched surprise inspections across the Iraqi desert, uncovering ballistic missiles and VX nerve gas.

Helped by hundreds of cameras and air sniffers installed at more than 750 sites, they got Iraq to admit to a biological-weapons program and were able to tightly monitor materials that could be used for military purposes.

While more than 120 people worked in the field, hundreds of experts and analysts in New York and Vienna poured over their findings and swapped intelligence with select governments — chiefly the United States.

But the operation began to unravel by 1996, as Iraq and the inspections teams faced off over access and transparency. Inspectors accused Iraq of violating resolutions and refusing to cooperate with some inspections.

The Iraqis accused inspectors of the same, pointing to wording in resolutions calling on monitors to respect the country's sovereignty.

The inspectors also complained they were spied on, and Iraq claimed the entire operation was a front for U.S. intelligence.

IMF commits to easing debt

BY MARTIN CRUTSINGER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The world's financial leaders pledged Sunday to do everything possible to prevent stock-market turmoil from derailing an uncertain global recovery and committed themselves to meeting an April 2003 deadline for unveiling a dramatic new approach for handling bankrupt nations.

IMF Managing Director Horst Koehler said the agreement to move the bankruptcy proposal forward was a major achievement for this year's annual meetings of the 184-nation IMF and its sister lending organization, the World Bank.

"This is a kind of breakthrough... There is a recognition that there is a gap in the international financial architecture," he told a concluding news conference.

Delegates on Sunday approved a recommendation that the IMF staff develop, for consideration by April, a fully developed approach for allowing countries with unsustainable debt burdens to essentially declare bankruptcy and force creditors to negotiate more lenient repayment terms.

Koehler and World Bank President James Wolfensohn said the protesters failed to appreciate the extensive reforms both institutions have undertaken to better respond to the needs of poor countries. But both officials acknowledged that much more was needed to be done to narrow the gap between rich and poor nations; 15 percent of the world's population controls 80 percent of the income.

"The quest for a more equal world is the quest for long-term peace — something that military power alone can never achieve," Wolfensohn said.

At the concluding news conference, he ticked off a range of initiatives the World Bank has underway to improve drinking water in poor nations, educate millions of children not now in school, and combat AIDS.

KUWAIT CITY, Kuwait — U.S. Marines rode massive green hovercrafts last week onto the Kuwaiti shore. But instead of assaulting hostile Iraqi troops, they joined Kuwaiti allies for a three-week exercise in the desert.

Fighter jets from the USS Abraham Lincoln flew overhead, not part of the exercise, but on their way to enforce a "no-fly" zone in southern Iraq.

Engineers in Qatar, meanwhile, are finishing a new forward command post for the U.S. Central Command — the men and women who would lead a war in Iraq. They're expected to arrive in November to direct another exercise from the low-profile buildings camouflaged as sand dunes.

Special Operations forces have put up tents at a new base in Djibouti, across the Red Sea from Yemen. In Kuwait, part of an armored infantry brigade from Fort Benning, Ga., sits within 28 miles of the Iraqi border — a 10-hour drive to Baghdad.

U.S. military spokesmen insist that the exercises and deployments are routine — or part of the war against terrorism. But there is little doubt whether these forces could be used in an invasion of Iraq to remove President Saddam Hussein.

During a visit to Kuwait last week, Central Command's Gen. Tommy Franks said his men "are prepared to do whatever we are asked to do."

While the governments of Bahrain, Qatar, Kuwait, and Saudi Arabia refuse to discuss military matters, their citizens bear witness daily to the U.S. military presence in the region.

The Kuwaiti government ordered gas masks for all civil servants and authorized their sale to civilians. Troops have rolled out Patriot missile batteries to defend against possible Scud missile attacks.

"From what we're seeing, it looks like something is going to happen, but it's hard to know exactly what," said Bader al-Otibi, a government worker who was taken prisoner during the Iraqi occupation in 1990. "I'm against war, but I'm also against Saddam."

Along the featureless, rolling desert that is shared by Kuwait and Iraq as a border, unarmed U.N. monitors stand guard in a 10-mile-wide demilitarized zone. An electric fence and anti-tank trenches mark it, but there's little to slow an invading force.

Israel retreats from Arafat siege

BY MOLLY MOORE
WASHINGTON POST

RAMALLAH, West Bank — A beaming Yasser Arafat, flanked by euphoric Palestinian government employees, emerged briefly Sunday from the only building left standing in his pulverized compound here as Israel ended a 10-day siege under mounting pressure from the United States.

Israeli tanks and armored vehicles rumbled out of the Palestinian Authority's battered headquarters at 2 p.m. Sunday, hours after an Israeli Cabinet decision to pull back. The decision followed an intense round of telephone calls from senior members of the Bush administration, expressing concern that the siege was hobbling U.S. efforts to build support in the Arab world for military action against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, said Israeli officials and Western diplomats.

"The president welcomes this development," White House spokesman Gordon Johndroe said in Crawford, Texas, where President Bush was spending the weekend at his ranch. "All parties need to live up to their responsibilities to promote peace, stability, and reform in the Palestinian Authority."

Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon also had been hammered in domestic media in recent days. Critics said he had rallied support among Palestinians for Arafat, who less than three weeks ago accepted the resignation of his Cabinet rather than face a "no-confidence vote" by the Palestinian Legislative Council.

The Israeli attack on the compound began Sept. 19, hours after a suicide bombing on a crowded bus in the heart of Tel Aviv killed six people and the bomber.

Muhammed Muheisen/Associated Press

Palestinian gunmen on Sunday peer from the windows of a damaged building in Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's compound in Ramallah shortly after Israeli army troops left the area.

Arafat, addressing reporters who crammed into his office minutes after the tanks allowed access to the compound, described the withdrawal as "cosmetic," adding: "This is not withdrawal. This is only moving a few meters away. They are trying to deceive the world."

In a handwritten statement read by his spokesman on the steps of his office building, Arafat renewed his call for withdrawal from Ramallah and five other West Bank cities that remain under Israeli occupation.

Arafat, looking pale but wearing a broad smile, then came out of the building, waving and blowing kisses to several hundred chanting Palestinians. Without public comment, Arafat ducked back inside the building he has seldom left since the Israeli military first attacked the compound in late March. Aides said he took a nap.

But many of the Palestinian government employees — most of them members of various security and police forces — jostled their way out of the building, ecstatic after 10 days of being jammed into rooms thick with the stench of unwashed bodies, backed-up toilets, heaps of moldering garbage, and food and water shortages.

"The situation was very tragic," said Tareq, a 28-year-old bodyguard for Arafat who asked that his full name not be used. "Trash was piled up, there was no water, no phone lines, people could not breathe fresh air, tanks were making noises all around us all the time, the bulldozer was shaking the building. We were awake 24 hours; we did not sleep."

Every man interviewed said the most stressful moments came last week when Israeli soldiers announced on loudspeakers that occupants had 10 minutes to vacate the building before it would be destroyed. Everyone with access to a cell phone called to bid farewell to their loved ones, they said.

D.C. protests end with antiwar march

BY DAVID HO
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Thousands of people opposing a war with Iraq marched to the residence of Vice President Dick Cheney on Sunday, culminating three days of smaller-than-expected demonstrations.

Protesters, some holding signs that said "No Blood for Oil," blamed Cheney for pushing the nation toward war. Police estimated that approximately 2,500 people turned out for the peaceful event.

Demonstrator's threats to shut down the nation's capital and disrupt meetings of the world's financial leaders during the weekend fell flat, and all protesters had evaporated from city streets by dusk Sunday.

However, protest organizers insisted that their goals were met: drawing attention to those seeking more money for global AIDS research and calling for changes in world economic policies.

"It's been a highly successful couple of days," said David Levy, who was the only protest organizer to show up for a Sunday morning news conference to evaluate the demonstrations.

Police had prepared for as many as 20,000 demonstrators, but during the largest event, on Sept. 28, a much smaller number filled a five-block long stretch of a four-lane street as they shouted opposition to policies of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund, which were holding their annual meetings nearby.

"No, we didn't change the state of the global economy," said Zoe Baldwin, 21, a college senior from Garfield, N.J. "The main purpose for most of these demonstrations — it's basically a huge outreach tool."

Meetings of global financial institutions have been a magnet for violence-scarred protests since 1999, when anti-globalization protesters clashed with police in Seattle. In April 2000, Washington police arrested around 1,300 people during demonstrations against the IMF and World Bank. There were fewer than 700 arrests this year, almost all of them people who gathered in a park on Sept. 27 without a permit to demonstrate.

Researchers dig for clues in 'chips' cancer

BY LAURAN NEERGAARD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Scientists have found a clue to the chemical reaction that may cause potato chips, French fries, and other fried or baked starchy foods to build up high levels of a possible cancer-causing substance.

The suspect is acrylamide, a naturally occurring amino acid that, when heated with certain sugars such as glucose, leads to the formation of the worrisome substance acrylamide.

The Food and Drug Administration has made studying acrylamide's risk and determining how to lower its levels in food one of its highest research priorities, according to a plan that agency officials were scheduled to discuss today with consumer groups and food manufacturers.

The Canadian government made the discovery about the suspect chemical reaction, and it has ordered food manufacturers to look for ways to alter it and thus lower levels of acrylamide in food. Cincinnati-based manufacturer Procter & Gamble Co. says its scientists, too, have found the asparagine connection.

It is the first clue to emerge in the mystery of acrylamide since Swedish scientists made the surprise announcement in the spring that high levels of the possible carcinogen are in numerous everyday foods: French fries, potato chips, some types of breakfast cereals, and breads — plenty of high-carbohydrate foods that are fried or baked at high temperatures. The chemical was not found in boiled foods, which are cooked at lower temperatures.

Sweden's findings were confirmed in June by governments in Norway, Britain, and Switzerland, and preliminary testing of several hundred foods by the FDA suggests that U.S. foods contain similar acrylamide levels, said Richard Canady, who is directing the agency's assessment of acrylamide's risk.

Acrylamide is used to produce plastics and dyes and to purify drinking water. Although traces have been found in water, no one expected high levels to be in basic foods.

It causes cancer in test animals, but it has not been proven to do so in people. Still, Swedish scientists have said the levels are high enough that foodborne acrylamide might be responsible for several hundred cases of cancer in that country each year.

In the United States, the FDA has been careful to caution that acrylamide so far is only a suspected carcinogen. The FDA has not yet advised consumers to alter their diets to avoid it.

Still uncertain is whether the FDA, once it finishes testing different foods next year, will publicly identify which brands contain the most acrylamide — information wanted by consumer advocates.

For now, Canady said, "We want to reinforce ... eating a balanced diet with plenty of fruits and vegetables. That's the best way to ensure that you're getting adequate nutrition."

The FDA has an impressive research plan but "should give the public better advice," said Michael Jacobsen of the consumer group Center for Science in the Public Interest.

"People should be consuming less French fries and potato chips for other reasons — the salt, the calories, the fat — and the government should have been urging that anyway. Here's yet another reason," he said.

The food industry stresses that while fried potato products are getting most of the bad publicity — most testing so far shows the highest levels in them — acrylamide is in a wide variety of foods. Procter & Gamble said on Sept. 27 that its testing found acrylamide in such previously unimplicated foods as roasted asparagus and banana chips.

Ganske voices Watergate charges

the need "to focus on the big things that matter to Iowans."

After debating the taping, the two underscored deep differences on a long series of issues.

As chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, Harkin was the main author of a new farm bill that President Bush signed into law; he labeled the bill "good for America and good for America's farmers."

"I'm proud to have gotten that bipartisan farm bill through," Harkin said. "Iowa is the No. 1 beneficiary."

But Ganske said the bill is much better for the South, for cotton, and for rice growers.

The farm bill is one of the significant differences between the two. The measure got the endorsement of virtually every commodity group in the country, and it was the major reason Harkin collected the endorsement of the traditionally Republican Iowa Farm Bureau Federation.

The two also split over making President Bush's tax cuts permanent, how to offer prescription-drug benefits, and the wisdom of a giant tax cut approved by Congress.

Harkin said the tax cut plunged the nation back into budget deficits, while Ganske argued they stimulated the economy.

There were questions about the effect of Sunday night's debate, which wasn't televised but was broadcast on the radio statewide.

Most polls have shown Harkin with an edge in the race. But the polls haven't considered the impact of the taping of the Ganske strategy session.

A poll published Sept. 28 — but taken as the revelations were unfolding — showed Harkin with a 54-34 lead with a 4.5 percentage point margin of error.

While the two underscored differences on a long series of issues, Ganske sought to focus attention on the taping, which has dominated the last week of the campaign. Ganske repeatedly compared the taping to Watergate.

"You know what a string of lies is? It's a coverup," Ganske said. "What did Tom Harkin know and when did he know it?"

"I expect him fully to continue talking about politics and not what's important to the people of Iowa," Harkin said. "Let's talk about the issues and not politics."

Ganske said Harkin hasn't answered the fundamental point of the issue.

"We need leadership in the Senate that cares more about policy than politics," he said.

Harkin fired his own shots about campaign deceptions, noting that Ganske has aired an ad with an actress posing as an Iowan.

"That last statement of yours was about as phony as that actress you've got in the ad," Harkin said.

Harkin is seeking a fourth term in office after serving 10 years in the House. Ganske was elected to the House in 1994 and is giving up his seat to challenge Harkin.

On Oct. 6, Harkin and Ganske will meet in debate that will be televised on KCRG-TV and rebroadcast statewide. Their final meeting will be a joint appearance on an Iowa Public Television news program.

"toss-up" last week after it was discovered that Harkin's campaign had been involved in circulating a transcript of a secretly tape-recorded meeting between rival Rep. Greg Ganske and his supporters.

On Sept. 22, Jeff Link, Harkin's campaign manager, said the campaign had no involvement or any knowledge of accusations that a Harkin staffer recorded a meeting in which Ganske says "[no one] will attack him like we're going to. [Pause.] With a smile on our face."

The next day, Link admitted that a junior staffer, later identified as Rafael Rothchild, received the tape and passed it along to a reporter.

On Sept. 26, sources named registered Democrat Brian Conley, a Harkin staffer in the 1970s, as the mole. Link resigned from the campaign the next day, and during a press conference, Harkin admitted that Rothchild requested Conley to record the event.

Criminal-law experts have said that if someone has permission to be at an event, they can record it and use it for any purpose as long as it doesn't bring anyone harm.

"In states like Illinois, Louisiana, and New Jersey, Harkin's response would have been sufficient," Sabato wrote on a Web site he runs predicting the outcome of the 2002 election. "But in the clean-campaign Hawkeye state, the media and many voters are outraged."

In New Jersey, for example, Democratic Sen. Robert Torricelli sits in hot water because of accusations of accepting contributions for his 1996 campaign in exchange for political favors. And in Illinois, two former aides to Republican Gov. George Ryan were indicted in April, and federal prosecutors branded Ryan's campaign committee a "criminal enterprise."

UI political science Professor Peverill Squire said he believes that Harkin won't be held responsible for his campaign's work.

"This was a stupid thing to allow happen," Squire said. "The Harkin campaign had no good reason to let this occur, but unless this gets linked directly to the senator, not much will happen."

The Democratic incumbent opened a 20-percentage-point lead over Ganske, a congressman from Des Moines, in the latest Iowa Poll of likely voters. His lead in late June was 9 points.

marchers in retaliation for the property damage.

"I resigned [myself] to the fact that I was going to be arrested," he said.

In a bizarre turn, one officer opened up a spot in the police line and allowed people to walk away with their hands up, said both Ward and Burnett, who gratefully took the opportunity. Forty people were arrested during the half-hour incident.

"One second I was two people from being dragged away, the next I was funneled out to the street," said Burnett, who had participated in a similar demonstration last year.

The three-day protest, which ended Sunday, was an effort by aggressive anti-capitalist factions and the more mainstream Mobilization for Global Justice to challenge the IMF and World Bank policies. They contend that the IMF practices dictate internal economic policies of its client nations and hurt poor people and local decision-making. Many criticize the World Bank for funding government projects that harm the environment.

The IMF, which provides loans to countries in financial crises, contends that it contributes to the economic growth and stability of developing nations. The World Bank, an organization that provides development money to poorer countries, insists that its aid contributes to education, health care, and the fight against HIV/AIDS.

"The evidence is mixed," said UI economics Professor Ray Riezman, speaking of the IMF. "It has made mistakes in the past."

As for the World Bank, he said, it seemed reasonable for the organization to weigh the environmental effects of development projects before making loans.

Ward said that unlike the Mobilization for Global Justice, which coordinated a 5,000-person march on Sept. 28, the anti-capitalist movement did not connect with the public and the media. He said the Sept. 27 protest became less about global questions and more about confrontations between police and demonstrators.

"The message wasn't clear enough; it was lost," Ward said about the "planned actions," such as road blocks, bike rides, and marches executed by the Anti-Capitalist Convergence. "There's a need for people to have a political dialogue about globalization, what it is now, and where it's heading."

Burnett said the number of participants in the protests and the extensive media coverage "amount to a victory — whether we're all arrested or free."

Student groups form to challenge drug laws

ANTI-DRUG

"Most students don't even know about the Higher Education Act provision," said freshman Kyle FitzGerald, a co-founding member.

The group is a Washington, D.C.-based organization formed in 1998 to repeal the provision. A resolution in the House of Representatives calls for the provision's removal and has 69 supporters, but lawmakers say it probably won't be addressed before the end of the current congressional session.

"These kind of changes to the Higher Education Act usually come when the entire act is reauthorized," said Bill Tate, a spokesman for Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa. "We'd want to see it in the context of the entire act."

The measure is slated for reauthorization next year.

Matt Blizek, the UI Student Government vice president, said he hopes the Iowa City group gets more students and young people involved in politics.

"Students will care about [the drug provision]," he said. "They're being persecuted for personal choices. This is an issue where the politicians are way behind the public."

UI junior George Pappas, another co-founder of the local group, said the organization will also address such local and university issues as the one-strike dorm policy, which expels students from campus housing if they're caught with any amount of drugs.

Students for a Sensible Drug Policy will meet today at 7 p.m. at Pizza on Dubuque, 5 S. Dubuque St.

UI senior Andrew Williams is working to start another student group with a similar agenda.

Williams is drafting a constitution for a local chapter of National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, which he will present to the UISG sometime this week. Like the other group, he hopes his can work closely with local politicians to help create alternatives to the nation's drug war. He also advocates the legalization of marijuana.

"I want to break down the stereotypes of recreational cannabis users," Williams said. "People can use it and lead a productive life."

Senegalese ferry toll nears 1,000

BY JAMEY KEATEN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAKAR, Senegal — In long, solemn lines, thousands of people poured over photos Sunday of the bloated bodies from one of Africa's deadliest ferry accidents. The government said that nearly 1,000 people are now believed dead.

Only 64 people are known to have survived when the MS Joola capsized off Africa's West Coast in heavy winds late on Sept. 26. On Sunday, the government said that 1,034 people were on board the ship, sharply up from the 797 it had first announced.

By midday Sunday, Gambian and Senegalese sailors, dive teams, and other searchers had collected 352 bodies from the ferry, the water, and from along the coast, where some were washing up, said Aminata Dibba, the permanent secretary for Gambia's presidency.

Six refrigerated ship containers with bodies inside were lined up in the capital's port, while hundreds more disintegrating bodies were offshore waiting to be brought in.

Authorities planned today to finish an investigation into what caused the Senegalese state-run boat to sink off Gambia, a former English colony approximately 30 miles across at its widest point that divides roughly half of northern and southern Senegal.

Grieving family members studied photos of the dead in hopes of identifying rapidly decomposing victims.

"Now, there seems to be little chance they'll come back alive," said Tijane Jalow, 29, who had three brothers on board.

"This is awful, awful, awful. I'm inconsolable," he said, pinching his eyes.

On Sunday, the government added the 55-member crew and said 185 passengers had boarded the doomed ferry at a second stop en route from southern Senegal, bringing the total aboard to 1,034, said Diadji Toure, the communications adviser for Senegal's prime minister.

Authorities set up five "crisis centers" in Dakar to display photos of those retrieved from the wreckage. Boy Scouts rushed bottled water and food to more than 3,000 people who waited in line throughout the day, officials said.

Ambulance teams tended to people who passed out from temperatures of approximately 92 degrees Fahrenheit.

Many victims' faces were too waterlogged to be recognizable.

One bleary-eyed woman wailed, "Papa, Papa," as she was helped away from a display.

At the port in Dakar, young men crouched in the shade, pressing radios to their ears. Most family members were calm, but some bickered with army guards providing slow access to the photo lineup. Senegal's flag flew at half-staff in the last of three days of national mourning.

Capt. Samba Fall of the Senegalese navy said many children were on board because they were returning from summer vacation from the southern Casamance region, known for its powdery beaches. He declined to say how many children were on board or believed missing.

The government has pledged financial support for the families of the victims, and relatives who identified victims were to be helped in arranging funerals, Fall said. "No one could have ever imagined this. If God wants this to happen, we can't do anything about it," said police Officer Jerome Dieme, whose 20-year-old son, Serge, was on board. Dieme was one of roughly 1,000 military, rescue, medical, and security personnel deployed to help family members.

Ferries are the main way of transportation between north and south Senegal, in part because travel by road is slowed by border checks passing through Gambia. Merchants carrying dried fish, mangos, and other goods from verdant Casamance make up many of the usual travelers on the ferries.

GOP, Dems jockey over homeland bill

BY CURT ANDERSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Election-year politics are a chief reason for the Senate's impasse on creating a Homeland Security Department. Democrats are refusing to buck their allies in organized labor and give President Bush the broad power he demands to hire and fire agency workers.

With the Nov. 5 elections fast approaching, Republicans increasingly see the bill as a chance to force Democrats into an uncomfortable choice between a popular president and the unions, which overwhelmingly support Democrats.

Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., implied the connection when he said on Sept. 27 that Democrats "are determined not to let a bill go through that these public-sector unions are not satisfied with, and it's very interesting why they're so overwrought over that."

Bush wants broad authority to hire, fire, and deploy the 170,000 workers who would be transferred to the new Cabinet-level agency to meet emerging terrorist threats. The president contends that Democrats are trying to limit his existing authority to exempt department workers from union-bargaining agreements for reasons of national security.

Republicans are engaging in "cynical manipulation" and seeking to gain political advantage on the worker-rights issue, says Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md.

Some Democrats question whether the GOP prefers letting the bill stall and blaming it on Democrats and unions.

"I feel as though I am being set up," Mikulski said. "If we stand up for the workers, we are somehow or another slowing down the debate on homeland security."

While campaigning Sept. 27 for GOP candidates, Bush went after labor leaders, arguing that they have hindered steps to tighten border security. He criticized union protests of Customs Service efforts to get emergency-contact numbers for its workers and require those inspecting shipping containers at the nation's 301 ports to wear radiation detectors.

Democrats rely heavily on unions for campaign money. Unions this year have given 92 percent of their contributions — more than $49 million — to Democratic candidates or organizations, according to the most recent reports from the Center for Responsive Politics, which closely tracks political donations. The GOP has gotten approximately $4 million.

Unions representing government employees are among the most generous and play important roles in races that could decide control of the Senate.

South Dakota Democratic Sen. Tim Johnson, in a tight re-election race with GOP Rep. John Thune, tops the list in contributions from these unions at $82,750. Following close behind are other Democrats up for re-election, including Max Cleland of Georgia at $80,500, Minnesota's Sen. Paul Wellstone at $74,500 and Jean Carnahan of Missouri at $67,700.

Deadly robbery netted no money, officials say

BY AMY LORENTZEN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NORFOLK, Neb. — An attempted robbery at a northeast Nebraska bank in which five people were killed last week appears to have netted no money, officials said Sunday.

"The police have reported that there was no money missing," said Madison County Attorney Joe Smith.

Sunday afternoon, visitation services were scheduled for two of the victims, bank employees Lola Elwood and Lisa Bryant, on the eve of their funerals.

Four men remained jailed on murder charges in the Sept. 26 shootings at the US Bank branch.

Police Chief Bill Mizner said on Sunday that while no money appeared to be missing, a bank audit was being performed.

"With all four of the suspects — there was no money recovered from any of those apprehensions," Mizner said.

Jose Sandoval, 23, of Norfolk and Jorge Galindo, 21, Erick Fernando Vela, 21, and Gabriel Rodriguez, 26, all of Madison, have each been charged with five counts of first-degree murder.

Police said the men planned for at least two weeks to hold up the bank. Sandoval, Galindo, and Vela were arrested approximately three hours after the shootings, and Rodriguez was arrested early on Sept. 27.

Surveillance tapes showed the men broke into the bank and shot six people within 40 seconds, said Capt. Steve Hecker, who testified at a bond hearing for the suspects last week. They were scheduled to appear in court again this week.

Bank employees Elwood, 43, Bryant, 29, Samuel Sun, 50, Jo Mausbach, 42, and customer Evonne Tuttle, 37, were killed. Another customer was injured.

The community was dealt another blow when a distraught state trooper, Mark Zach, 35, fatally shot himself with his service revolver the day after the robberies.

Zach had stopped Vela less than a week before the robbery and ticketed him for carrying a concealed weapon. But Zach transposed two digits when entering the gun's serial number into a police computer, preventing him from learning that the gun had been stolen.

The gun was confiscated by authorities and not used in the holdup. However, Zach apparently felt responsible for not getting the suspect jailed on a more serious stolen weapons charge.

An autumn tradition

Ah, autumn in Iowa. As summer fades and winter approaches, there are a few things we, as Iowans, can count on. You know what I mean: colorful landscapes, hay rides, apple cider, Halloween, the start of hockey season, and tuition jumping higher than any frog could dream of.

Hockey? I'm a transplanted Detroit, and I happen to like the sport. Correction: I happen to like the sport a lot. But tuition? An autumn tradition? Huh? It certainly looks that way to me. As much as I'd rather talk about hockey, hockey isn't going to cost me any money next year. Tuition might. It's not carved in stone — yet — but it looks like it's making the transition from notion to veiled threat at about the same speed as a puck in motion.

There are people to blame for this. At the university itself, there are people who make questionable fiscal decisions. A stellar example of this is the university's spending of $39,600 for an 18-month lease on a property for a president we don't have. Why not spend the $22,000 allocated for repairs and renovations to the president's mansion and save $39,600? Better yet, how about spending $39,600 on faculty salaries so they'll be here to teach us. Isn't that why we're here?

My finger is now pointed in your direction, dear reader. Elected officials are sticking it to you because they can, and they can because you let them. The vast majority of college students are young, and young people simply don't vote. When you don't vote, you have to assume responsibility for the direct result of your lack of action. In this case, the result is a bigger tuition bill.

If you vote this year, and vote for candidates who will fund education in a more rational manner, it's possible you can escape another increase in time for hockey season ... 2004.

Play a part

So, let me get this straight ... The Daily Iowan, according to Publisher Bill Casey (CR Gazette, Sept. 22), gets approximately $400,000 yearly in advertising revenue from bar and liquor ads. I guess it's no wonder that the DI's editorial page and "humor" column (using that term very loosely), the Ledge, make consistent references to the college experience as one big drunk-fest.

While you noted in your response to Vice President Phillip Jones that there are real consequences to abusive alcohol use, I've yet to see much in your pages about any downside at all to the Animal House mentality you promote. Everyone has to play a part in solving the problems around high-risk drinking. What role is the DI willing to play?

Scott Hansen
UI employee

Completely clueless

Have you any musical sense, Richard Shirk? (DI, Sept. 25) Do you even know what music is? If you did, you just might realize how Howie Day really is. If you saw him at the IMU last spring, you would probably take back everything you said. Day is by far one of the most talented artists at the present time.

Having seen him many times while opening for John Mayer and for O.A.R., I have a slight advantage over you. Yes, Day does use numerous loop effects, and no, it's not sampling. He creates the rhythm, bass line, percussion, and other effects from scratch, right up on stage. I've seen him do it live, but you probably couldn't see it just by listening to Australia.

At worst, Australia blows anything Richard Marx or Milli Vanilli have done clear out of the water. Your best bet would be to leave your one-bedroom apartment and step out into the world of live music. This is where you will see Day shine, rather than compare him with two of the most pitiful musical acts the industry has ever seen.

Australia contains songs done in a studio but also with some coming from Day's basement. On a studio album, Day, just like any other artist, takes advantage of all the lights and buttons that make an album sound strangely enhanced. Regardless, he deserves a little bit more credit. And, by the way, do you really still listen to Richard Marx and Milli Vanilli?

Safety issues at UI's Mossman Building should raise eyebrows

The health and safety issues surrounding the UI Mossman Business Services Building and its violations of Occupational and Safety Health Administration standards should appall the community. The building not only faces $14,000 in fines, it also to file a complaint dubbed the situation a "civil war." She and two other employees who complained have been relocated, though the university insists that this has happened for budgetary reasons.

This situation at Mossman clearly requires attention. But the inquiries shouldn't end there.

Mossman having "one of the highest injury rates" implies that there are other, comparable buildings. What about those? Where else on campus are people hurting themselves for lack of training? And surely the uncivil relationship between employees and management is not unique to Mossman. In what other buildings and departments are workers' voices silenced because they fear for their jobs?

We would hope that the fines suffice to correct the Mossman scenario. Even if they do, however, the public should ask broader questions of the university. Mossman stands out for the moment, but it probably does not stand alone as a violator of health and safety standards. Nor does its divisive work atmosphere sound unique. There are probably other people working in tense and hazardous environments who deserve equal attention, but they may not get it if people don't make inquiries.

boasts one of the highest injury rates among campus buildings and a worker-management relationship described by one employee as a "civil war."

The Mossman hazards require more than a raised eyebrow; they necessitate questioning safety and health conditions throughout the campus. In levying $14,000 in fines against the building, OSHA cited, among other things, a dearth of fire-protection and evacuation plans and the lack of employee education on using chemicals. While management has rectified some of these, a resounding concern remains, particularly among some workers.

The workers have no small gripe. Mossman's accident history of the past few years includes a cut-off finger (in a printing machine), a mangled knee (because of a lack of lifting training), and a seizure that no one had the training to treat.

However, because of the at-odds relationship workers and management have found themselves in, employees seem to fear stepping forward with their grievances. One of the workers brave enough

Wearing their sex lives on their sleeves

I've said it before, and I'll say it again: Things are messed up down in Florida. Need more proof? How's this: People recently ran a story on a new law passed in Florida. According to the article, ... a private adoption in which the biological father is missing can be finalized only after the mother gives him a chance to stop the process. To that end, she must publicize her sexual past, running newspaper ads in areas where she lived or visited at the time of conception. Along with a physical description of herself, she must provide the names of all males who may have fathered her child. The law applies equally to minors and (except in Palm Beach County, where a judge ruled otherwise) victims of rape and incest."

Excuse me? Several of the legislators who voted in favor of this act have admitted to not even reading the 106-page document. And who would? It's 106 pages; who would have suspected that somewhere, buried deep within the bill, was such a devastating clause? So one problem here — and many other places, doubtless — is lengthy legislation and hasty action on the part of legislators.

But that is only the beginning. Since this law took effect, Oct. 1, 2001, the Florida Association of Adoption Professionals has seen more pregnant women opt for abortions rather than undergo the humiliation of publishing their sex lives in order to complete an adoption. Presumably, many of these women would have preferred to see their pregnancies through in order to give their child over to a loving family. Instead, this law forced them into an undesirable — but unavoidable — alternative.

Additionally, this law applies universally to all single mothers seeking adoption — everyone from career-minded women to rape victims and minors. The result is something lawmakers never foresaw. What minor would be willing to broadcast such information in a community in which perhaps her grandparents reside? What rape victim would want to be reminded of the horror of the experience by actively seeking her assailant? Moreover, if the attacker had been masked or unidentifiable, there would be no way to describe him in a newspaper ad.

For a moment, let us forget that this inane law applies to a group of victims and young girls not old enough to vote. Any self-respecting woman who conceives as the result of a one-night stand or through irresponsibility — either on her part or the part of the father — should notify the man whose seed is now growing inside of her. Regardless of whether the man wants anything to do with the child, he should at least be made aware that his sexual interactions will produce offspring sometime in the next nine months. If the woman was a consenting party to the act that produced a pregnancy, she owes at least that much — to herself, to the man, and to the child.

Florida passed this bill to prevent the lawsuits that resulted when absent fathers discovered that their children were being put up for adoption. Some men have tried to halt adoptions on the grounds that they have some say in the child's future.

However, if a man is a mutually consenting party to an act that results in pregnancy, he should also behave responsibly. One can use every method of birth control available — pills, condoms, spermicide, the whole nine yards — and there still is no guarantee against conception. Every sexual encounter presents the chance for a pregnancy to occur. Both men and women need to realize that. A man who thinks he can be promiscuous with no sense of responsibility toward the women he attracts cannot expect to step in at the last minute and play the hero. If he's not man enough to inquire and be around for the pregnancy, he has no claim to the fate of the child that he has thus far ignored.

The main sponsor of this act, Sen. Walter Campbell, has promised to try to have the public-notification portion of the law removed when the Florida Legislature meets in March. Judging by the results — such ads have not prompted one father to step forward — and the detrimental consequences for young women, Florida lawmakers would do better to repeal this law entirely.

1994 may be hailed forever as a year that revolutionized film. It marked the release of Quentin Tarantino's masterpiece, Pulp Fiction, which shocked the film world with its blatant disregard for storytelling normalcy.

Although movies had experimented with nonlinear plot construction before, no movie until Pulp Fiction had opened the doors so wide for originality in screenplay writing. It began a flood of some of the most original movie tales of all time.

Because of Pulp Fiction, movies such as Run Lola Run, Sliding Doors, and Memento, all of which play with the changing of a space-time continuum, have been lauded over as creative and inventive pieces of storytelling. There no longer seem to be unbending, inflexible rules in the world of film.

Thirteen Conversations About One Thing follows in this filmic modernist tradition with a reserved and dignified subtlety that establishes it as one of the top films around.

New York City has long been acknowledged as a place of anonymity and personal distance. It is a city in which millions of people live, work, and play, but all attempt to avoid eye contact with each other in order to never fully get to know their fellow borough dwellers. In the mix of this bustling metropolis of ambiguity come five strangers who soon find their lives intertwined in love, guilt, and reflection through the use of casual conversations about leading a happy and opportune life.

There is Troy (Matthew McConaughey), a successful lawyer in the DA's office whose life is completely turned around after he is involved in a hit and run, Walker (John Turturro), an adulterous college physics professor who is the victim of an unfortunate mugging, and Beatrice (Clea Duvall) a 20-something house cleaner who must recover from a car accident. Gene (Alan Arkin) is a disgruntled claims manager obsessed with pulling people down to his unhappy level

Alan Arkin stars as Gene, a disgruntled claims manager obsessed with pulling people down to his unhappy level of life, in Thirteen Conversations About One Thing.

Thirteen Conversations director Jill Sprecher uses much more restraint in telling her tale. While Magnolia clocked in at just over 180 minutes, Thirteen Conversations' 104-minute running time doesn't seem to leave anything out.

Instead, Thirteen Conversations achieves the same success of character development that Magnolia did without the flare and fanfare. Sprecher has stripped her story to the barest bones and most vulnerable points. It is in this vein that the story is able to flourish. Thirteen Conversations shows how less can definitely be more, especially in the telling of a complicated tale.

Although Sprecher shows absolute maturity in the telling of this tale, the film itself truly belongs to Arkin, whose character is one of the most interesting on film this year.

Arkin's Grinch-like portrayal of Gene encapsulates range and emotion in a part in which he is asked to do much more with his face than with his voice. The part, which usually would have been played with rigid flatness in countless Hollywood films, comes alive when emanating from Arkin. A veteran of the screen since 1966's The Russians are Coming, the Russians are Coming, Arkin, an Academy Award nominee, says more with a quick glance and a slow wave than most actors can convey in an entire soliloquy-ridden epic. He gives one of the most genuinely understated supporting roles of the year and should be remembered around Oscar time for his wonderful performance.

The performances are honest, the direction immaculate, and the storytelling venerable. This is a tight, well-reasoned piece of filmmaking that at its best is a testament to the optimism and the defenselessness that marks this time in American society. Although this movie only focuses on 13 conversations about one thing, it is sure to generate many more discussions at coffee shops across the country.

Driving Cobain

SEATTLE (AP) — A long-anticipated Nirvana song that's been the subject of much speculation and litigation finally surfaced on the nation's airwaves this week, more than eight years after singer Kurt Cobain killed himself.

Cobain's estate closely guarded "You Know You're Right," making it one of the most legendary unreleased tracks in rock history. The band, which launched the early 1990s "grunge" movement, recorded it in late January 1994, less than three months before Cobain's death.

"It may not be the best song it ever did, but it's probably in the top 10," Cobain biographer Charles Cross said Thursday. "At the time, people were saying Kurt was over, and that's what's so significant about this song — it's the last great Nirvana song."

It's unclear how the track finally aired. Several radio stations said it first surfaced on the Internet, off which they obtained it.

One station, KROQ-FM in Los Angeles, reported receiving a one-day cease-and-desist order earlier this week, but said it had permission to play the song Sept. 26.

Kimm fired Sunday before final game

CHICAGO — Bruce Kimm got the opportunity he'd always wanted, the job he'd envisioned during the long road trips in the minor leagues.

But his stint as a manager in the majors was only on an interim basis, and it didn't last long.

Kimm was fired Sunday by the Chicago Cubs before the final game of another 90-loss season that was most certainly not his fault.

Informed before the game he would not be retained, Kimm stayed to manage the regular-season finale against the Pirates, a game he knew would be emotional.

"I'm the type of guy who cries at movies and cries at funerals if I know them or not. It's a tricky day, but it's part of the game," Kimm said.

Tickets go on sale Friday for opener

The Iowa wrestling team can demonstrate its potential for regaining the national title as the Hawkeyes take on the defending national champion Minnesota Gophers on Nov. 15.

The Xcel Energy Center will host the contest, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Tickets go on sale Friday at noon at all Ticketmaster locations.

The idea to add a second dual between the rivals sprung from a record-setting meet Feb. 1 that attracted 15,646 wrestling fans, setting a NCAA dual-meet attendance record. This year's event will take place on the same weekend as the Minnesota-Iowa football game in Minnesota; it is expected to challenge last year's attendance record.

The Hawkeyes finished fourth at last spring's national tournament; they enter the season ranked second behind Minnesota.

Bent but not broken

Zach Boyden-Holmes/The Daily Iowan

Players scramble to recover a Fred Russell fumble on the Penn State one-yard line. Penn State recovered the ball, but Iowa held on to win, 42-35, in overtime.

Lions QB Zack Mills tosses Iowa defense for 202 yards in fourth, OT

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — Iowa defensive coordinator Norm Parker ran his hands through hair, which would have turned gray were it not already, and exhaled.

It was a fitting gesture given the fact thousands of Hawkeye fans from coast to coast were doing exactly the same thing after Iowa's 42-35 overtime victory over No. 12 Penn State. The victory vaulted the 4-1 Hawkeyes in to this week's Associated Press poll for the first time since 1997, earning Iowa the No. 24 spot.

Parker's "bent but don't break" defense bent, bowed, and bent again like a freshly planted sapling caught in the midst of a hurricane, but it never broke.

The storm Iowa's defensive 11 found itself in the eye of was Hurricane Zack, as in Penn State quarterback Zack Mills.

Mills found his bearings in the game's final seven minutes, leading the Nittany Lions on three consecutive lightning quick scoring drives to erase a 35-13 Iowa lead and force overtime.

That was about as much bending as the Hawkeyes could do, and after quarterback Brad Banks hit C.J. Jones on third and goal for a 6-yard touchdown strike, it was time for Iowa's suspect defense to stand tall.

"Really once they got down there inside the 10-yard line, we called the same defense four times in a row," Parker said of Iowa's final stand. "It was just a red-zone defense."

With Penn State staring at fourth down and four from the Iowa five-yard line and threatening to force a second overtime period, defensive end Jonathan Babineaux broke loose from his defender to apply pressure on Mills. In what seemed like slow motion to the 108,247 fans inside Beaver Stadium, Mills

Hawkeyes scatter Wildcats, open conference with win

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
THE DAILY IOWAN

After the Iowa field hockey team played its first eight games of the season on the road, it felt good for the team to come home. What felt even better was a 4-1 win over the Northwestern Wildcats at Grant Field to begin Big Ten play.

"It was awesome to be home," senior midfielder Lauren Edwards said. "It's so nice after being on the road for so long to have our home fans and be on our own home field."

The Hawkeyes set the tone of the game early with their defense, allowing the Wildcats to take only one shot on goal, compared with Iowa's eight.

Senior Tiffany Leister started things off for the Hawkeyes by scoring her team-leading fifth goal of the season off a penalty corner eight minutes, 46 seconds into the game. Edwards was credited with her third assist of the year.

With 11 minutes to play in the first half, Northwestern's Juli Formenko was hit in the face by a ball that was flipped up in the air, forcing play to stop for several minutes.

After play resumed, junior back Jess Zosky knocked in Iowa's second goal with only 40 seconds left to play in the first half. It was her first career goal.

"It's great when your team scores, and if it's you, it's even better," Zosky said. "So I was excited."

In the second half, junior Pattie Gillern doubled her goals for the season after she scored twice within two minutes.

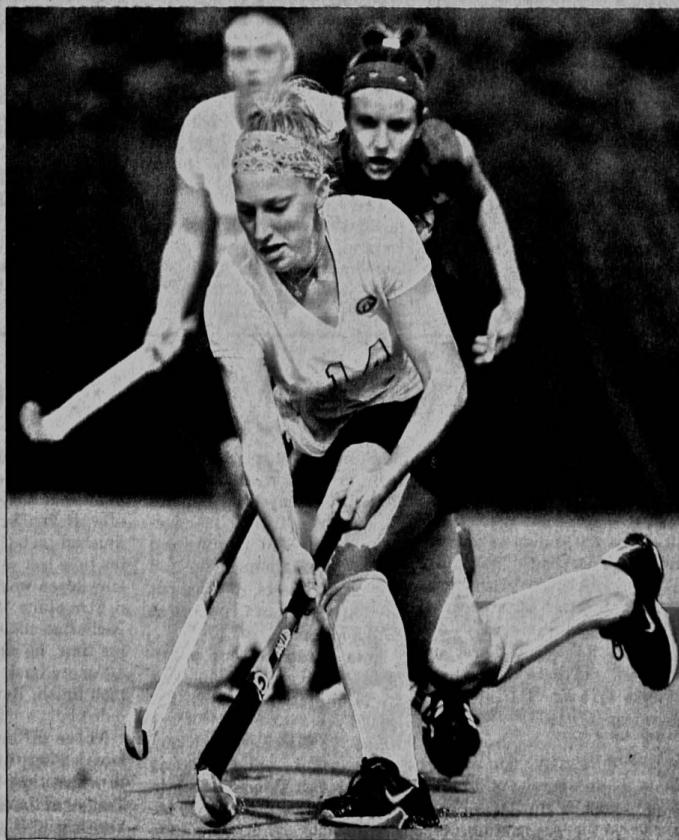

Although the Hawkeyes, ranked No. 12 in the National Field Hockey Coaches Association Poll, looked solid with a 4-0 lead, they gave the Wildcats plenty of chances. In the second half, Northwestern took 11 shots on goal, compared with Iowa's four.

"I think we lost a little bit of focus, and our formation was starting to really come undone," said coach Tracey Griesbaum. "We got really bunched, and people were chasing the ball."

Fortunately for the Hawkeyes, the Wildcats only capitalized on one of those

Wolleyball team starts Big Ten season with two losses at home

BY ALI NOLLER
THE DAILY IOWAN

A pair of Michigan foes proved to be too much for the Hawkeyes to handle, and the Iowa volleyball team dropped two matches over the weekend in its Big Ten opener.

The losses dropped Iowa to 6-6 overall, 0-2 in the Big Ten.

Michigan was the first test for the Hawkeyes on Sept. 27; Iowa saw their first-game momentum diminish as they dropped the next three to the Wolverines.

Wearry Hawk coach Rita Buck-Crockett said things went well in the first set but spiraled downward soon after.

"Michigan realized we weren't rolling with a full car and took advantage of that," she said of weak performances by usually consistent Kelli Chesnut and Amoreena Reynolds. "They also took advantage of our middles. Our middles just weren't there — they just didn't show up."

Iowa pounced on a quick 7-6 first game lead that it never relinquished, taking the game 30-28. A freshly focused Renee Hill finished the game with a kill, one of her team-high 18 on the night.

Hill has recently been reassigned to the left side, where Buck-Crockett said she was filling nicely.

"Renee has very good ball control," Buck-Crockett said. "All and all, she did an awesome job."

Teammate Laura Simpson, who took over Hill's spot on the right side, had the best outing of her Hawkeye career as she racked up 12 kills.

But Iowa could not hold on for long, as the scrappy Wolverines bounded to a 24-12 lead in the second game. A late rally by the Hawkeyes was not enough to overcome the deficit, and they fell 30-22.

The third and fourth game proved to be equally tumultuous for the Hawkeyes, who lost twice by a 30-23 margin.

On Sept. 28, the Hawkeyes' big game came in the third, topping Michigan State 30-19.

But despite a rallied performance by Chesnut, who collected 12 kills and 10 digs, the Hawkeyes could not overcome the Spartans, dropping another 3-1 match.

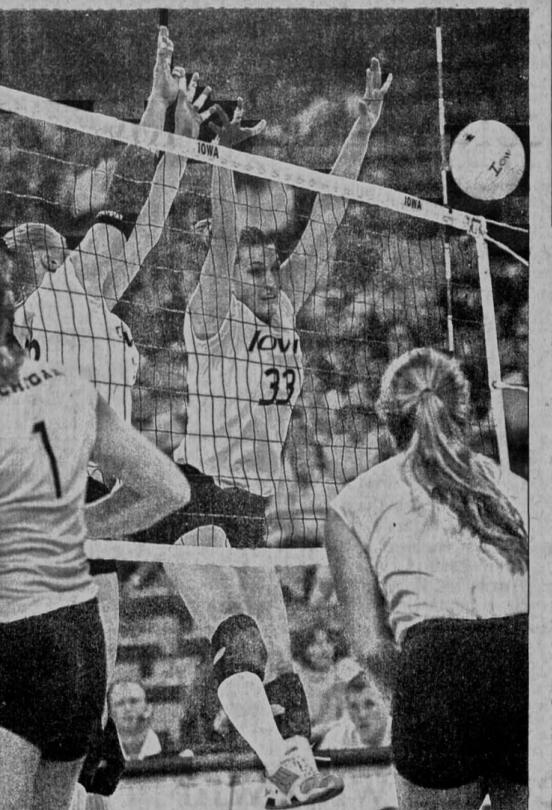

Buck-Crockett said the gaping hole in the Iowa attack is getting all of her starters "on" at the same time — a problem that needs to be remedied if the Hawkeyes want to improve on their 10th-place Big Ten finish last season.

"We need everybody," Buck-Crockett said. "We should have been able to beat Michigan."

Simpson echoed her coach's sentiments.

"We have such a good team," the Iowa sophomore said. "It's unfortunate we can't be all there at once. I'm not pointing the finger; I'm just as big of a culprit. But some of the things we rely on just weren't there."

The Hawkeyes will have a few days to assess their shortcomings before they continue Big Ten competition. Iowa will travel to Northwestern on Fri-

Cross-country edged out of top 10

BY JEROD LEUPOLD
THE DAILY IOWAN

Five seconds was the difference in keeping the men's cross-country team from finishing in the top 10. The Hawkeyes placed 11th out of the 27 teams that participated in the Roy Griak Invitational.

"I think it is a reflection of our inexperience," Iowa coach Larry Wiczorek said. "But it was a good step forward."

The Hawkeyes top-five timed runners crushed their season bests by an average of 33 seconds. Redshirt freshman Matt Esche led the way, placing 14th overall and besting his time by 72 seconds. Team captain Joe Welter ran a personal best 25 minutes, 3 seconds to place 40th.

Brian Rae, Tony Rakaric, and Dan Haut stepped up to place No. 77, 83, and 86 — three seconds apart. Dan Trainor and Micah VanDenend, who had won earlier meets, rounded out the top seven Iowa runners at 89th and 106th.

Iowa defeated several prestigious opponents, including No. 15 Michigan State, Big 12 leader Nebraska, and last year's winner, the U.S. Naval Academy. The Big Ten made a strong showing with Minnesota clinching fifth place and No. 4 Wisconsin finishing eighth. Ohio State and Illinois placed 14th and 16th.

However, for the Hawkeyes, opportunities were just missed.

The top four teams all turned in average times under 25 minutes. If VanDenend could have finished just 11 seconds faster, his time last week of 25:17, the Hawkeyes would have earned ninth place. If 14th-placed Esche had added two seconds to his time, he would have fallen 10 spots back because of the mob finish. But Iowa's scoring didn't fall on either individual.

Three different Hawkeyes have led Iowa in the three meets in which they have competed: Trainor in the Iowa State Open, VanDenend in the Huskie Invitational, and Esche in the Roy Griak.

"That shows our depth," Wiczorek said. "We have interchangeable parts, and every runner has a feeling of being No. 1."

Iowa will take a three-week break before preparing for the Pre-Nationals, the No. 1 meet of the season.

"That gives us three weeks to train, learn, and get stronger," Wiczorek said.

GAME QUOTES

Penn State is a great football team, we had great respect for them coming in and we knew it was going to be a 60-minute game, and that's exactly what it was. With a guy like Mills back there, they have a heck of a football team.
— Iowa football coach Kirk Ferentz

We got licked, we didn't play very well the first half and came back and played a good, tough second half and it wasn't good enough.
— Penn State coach Joe Paterno

Penn State quarterback Zack Mills leaves the field after a pass he attempted in overtime was botched on the Nittany Lions' last play. The Hawkeyes won 42-35, securing their win after C.J. Jones caught a 6-yard pass from Brad Banks, and Nate Kaeding kicked his final point-after of the day.

threw a wobbly pass that struck his own center, Joe Iorio, in the helmet before floating harmlessly to the green turf. "I got no idea how he broke free," Parker said. Neither did Babineaux, who recalled his thought process while lining up for the crucial play for reporters after the game. "Give it all I've got, this is the last play, if we stop them, the game is over." Mills finished the day with 399 yards passing — the most allowed by Iowa this season — including 202 in the fourth quarter and overtime. But take away his production in the game's final quarter, and one of the Big Ten's most versatile quarterbacks looked down right average. Mills was just 7-of-15 for 89 yards at half time, thanks largely to Iowa's defense shutting down Penn State's running game. The Nittany Lions netted just 54 total rushing yards against the Big Ten's best run defense, making the game one dimensional and allowing the Hawkeyes to focus on Mills and his receivers. "We turned it loose a little bit today," said Iowa's Jared Clauss. "We got a chance to turn it loose on the pass rush." Penn State's offense came to a grinding halt in the process, not scoring until there was 1:25 remaining in the first half. The pressure applied by linemen Babineaux, Clauss, Colin Cole, and Howard Hodges did wonders for most of the game, accounting for three sacks, two interceptions, and numerous hurries and incompletions. "Those four guys up there kept digging, fighting, and clawing," Ferentz said. "Those guys are working hard." Working hard to bend but not break. Five games in to the season, it appears as if Iowa's defense understands the biggest obstacle remaining to overcome is itself. "If we can stop making mistakes on our own, we'll be a tough team to beat," Clauss said.

Top 25: Nebraska out — Iowa in

BY RICHARD ROSENBLATT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

For the first time in 21 years, Nebraska is not ranked in The Associated Press college football poll. The Cornhuskers (3-2) fell out of the Top 25 on Sunday after a 36-14 loss to Iowa State — ending a run of 348 consecutive polls. Nebraska moved into the AP rankings Oct. 5, 1981, and remained among college football's top teams week after week after week until a second-straight loss knocked it out. During the streak, Nebraska won two AP national championships (in 1994 and 1995) and was ranked No. 1 in 52 polls. The Huskers were 49-31-1 against ranked teams, with four of those losses coming in the team's last seven games dating to last season. A 40-7 loss at Penn State on Sept. 14 dropped Nebraska from No. 8 to No. 18. The next week the Huskers fell to No. 20 despite not playing. The loss to the Cyclones was the clincher — Nebraska received a grand total of 10 points in this week's balloting. No. 25 Colorado State had 206 points. Florida (4-1), ranked No. 6 this week after a 41-34 victory over Kentucky, now owns the longest consecutive polls streak, at 208. To match the Huskers' run, the Gators would need to be ranked in every poll for the next eight years. Nebraska also fell out of the USA Today/ESPN coaches poll. Miami (4-0) was No. 1 again in the AP poll, picking up three more first-place votes than last week — even without playing. Miami received 71 of the 74 first-place votes and 1,847 points from the sports writers and broadcasters on the AP panel. Texas (4-0) replaced Oklahoma (4-0) at No. 2, with the Sooners now No. 3. The Longhorns beat Tulane, 49-0, while the Sooners beat South Florida, 31-14. Texas, with two first-place votes to Oklahoma's one, had five more points than the Sooners, 1,729-1,724. Florida State (4-1) tumbled seven spots to No. 11 after its 26-20 overtime loss at unranked Louisville on Thursday night, while Penn State dropped eight places to No. 20 after its 42-35 overtime loss to Iowa. The Hawkeyes (4-1) moved in at No. 24 — their first appearance in the AP poll since 1997. Alabama (4-1) also joined, at No. 22. Oregon State, which lost to USC 22-0, dropped out. The Beavers were ranked 23rd last week.

Cincinnati coach improves after heart attack

BY TERRY KINNEY

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati basketball coach Bob Huggins' condition improved Sunday, a day after suffering a heart attack at Pittsburgh International Airport during a recruiting trip. Huggins, 49, remained in serious but stable condition at Medical Center in Beaver, about 20 miles northwest of Pittsburgh, said Tom Hathaway, the university's assistant athletics director. "He continues to make progress and the doctors are happy with the type of progress he's made this afternoon," Hathaway said. Athletic Director Bob Goin visited with Huggins before returning to Cincinnati to meet with reporters. "He was alert," Goin said. "He's talking. He's in pain. He has his family there, and obviously that's a tremendous comfort to him." Hospital spokesman Scott Monit deferred calls on Huggins' health to the university. Doctors implanted a stent on Sept. 28. The tiny, metal mesh device is designed to keep Huggins' once-clogged artery open. Hathaway said Huggins could remain in Pennsylvania for several days and then come to Cincinnati. Dr. Lynne Wagoner, director of cardiac services at University of Cincinnati Hospital, said Huggins' doctors will have to determine the damage to his heart before they decide when he can return to Cincinnati. Huggins was at the airport for a flight to Milwaukee for a coaching clinic. "He was lucky he was where he was, not in the wilderness or on an airplane," Wagoner said. The hard-driving Huggins was the third-youngest coach to get 500 wins in Division I.

shots, when Christine Nannicelli knocked a penalty stroke past goalkeeper Saleema Rogers. Rogers, who became the only other goalkeeper to see time other than Barb Weinberg this season, filled in for the starter with a little less than 15 minutes to play. "[Rogers] deserves to play, and she's had a good couple weeks of practice," Griesbaum said. "We just wanted to give her some time." Rogers recorded one save on the day, compared with Weinberg's six. The Hawkeyes enjoy a bye week before traveling to

Evanston, Ill., on Oct. 9 to take on the Wildcats in a second-consecutive game. "We're going to definitely prepare no differently from what we did this time," Griesbaum said. "I don't really mind having to play Northwestern again."

Jeff Gordon wins again at Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Jeff Gordon shook off his recent slump and revived his bid for a fifth Winston Cup title Sunday, pulling away from a late red-flag restart to win a crash-filled Protection One 400. But for now, at least, the points lead belongs to Gordon's teammate, rookie Jimmie Johnson. Gordon, who also won last year's inaugural Winston Cup event at Kansas Speedway, snapped a three-week string of frustration in which he finished 40th, 14th, and 37th after back-to-back wins in the two races before that. "I kind of put my foot in my mouth last week and said we had to win," Gordon said. "Luckily, I was able to back that up." Gordon led the last 57 laps and 116 laps overall in the 267-lap, 400-mile race and appeared headed for an easy victory until Johnny Benson, Jeremy Mayfield, Jimmy Spencer and Ricky Rudd spun out in the fourth turn with five laps left. The rest of the field parked in the second turn for more than 13 minutes — in 92-degree heat — before starting up again. Gordon handily held off rookie Ryan Newman on the restart with three laps to go.

Schumacher lets Barrichello win

INDIANAPOLIS — Rubens Barrichello won the United States Grand Prix on Sunday when Ferrari teammate Michael Schumacher slowed on the final lap and appeared to let him pass at the finish. It was the opposite of the finish May 12 in Austria, where Barrichello — obeying team orders — allowed Schumacher by on the final straightaway for the victory. At the time, Schumacher had yet to clinch his fifth Formula One title. This time, the two red cars were side-by-side as they crossed the yard of bricks that designate the finish line on the oval portion of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway road course. Barrichello led by 0.01 seconds, one of the closest margins in Formula One history. As they came out of the final turn onto the main straightaway, Schumacher slowed, and Barrichello pulled alongside. The two cars crossed the finish line with the more than 100,000 fans standing and roaring. The teammates hugged after climbing out of their cars.

Bears can't find magic against Bledsoe, Bills

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — After having a potential game-winning field goal blocked with 25 seconds left in regulation, Buffalo quarterback Drew Bledsoe led the Bills to a 33-27 overtime victory over Chicago. Bledsoe found Travis Henry on the second play of overtime on a 26-yard touchdown, setting an NFL record with his fourth overtime pass in OT.

The Bills (2-2) already have played in three OT games this season and have won two straight after losing the opener to the Jets. No NFL team has ever gone to an extra period three times in its first four games.

Meanwhile, the Bears (2-2) are losing their reputation for pulling out close victories. Before last weekend's 29-23 loss to New Orleans, Chicago had won 12-straight games that were decided by 7 points or fewer.

Bledsoe finished 28-of-36 for 328 yards and four touchdowns.

Pittsburgh 16, Cleveland 13

FOXBORO, Mass. — Unlike Drew Bledsoe, Tommy Maddox isn't used to winning overtime games. Until Sunday, in fact, Maddox's only triumphant moments in the last few years came when Vince McMahon was his employer.

Maddox, who signed with Pittsburgh last season after reviving his career by winning the Most Valuable Player award in the XFL's only season, replaced ineffective starter Kordell Stewart and led the Pittsburgh Steelers to the tying touchdown drive late in the fourth quarter.

Maddox then drove his team for Todd Peterson's winning 31-yard field goal in overtime as the Steelers (1-2) rallied to beat Cleveland, 16-13.

Maddox, who didn't get any meaningful playing time with the Steelers last season, went 11-of-13 for 122 yards and threw a tying 10-yard touchdown pass to Plaxico Burress with 2:02 left in regulation. He was 6-of-7 for 77 yards on the drive.

Tim Couch went 16-of-29 for 144 yards and two interceptions to lead the Browns (2-2), and Jamal White carried 16 times for 105 yards.

Dallas 13, St. Louis 10

ST. LOUIS — A bad season got worse for the Rams when Kurt Warner was knocked out with a broken little finger on his throwing hand. Then the Cowboys dropped St. Louis to 0-4 when rookie Billy Cundiff kicked a 48-yard field goal as time expired.

Warner will be evaluated today to determine whether he needs surgery, but by the time he comes back it might be too late. No team except the 1992 San Diego Chargers has made the playoffs after an 0-4 start.

Dallas quarterback Quincy Carter was 26-of-36 for 204 yards and a touchdown, and he led the Cowboys 41 yards in 1:27 to set up the field goal.

Emmitt Smith had 58 yards rushing, and he needs 303 yards to catch Payton's record of 16,726.

Detroit 26, New Orleans 21

DETROIT — Rookie quarterback Joey Harrington won his first game, throwing for 267 yards and a touchdown as the Lions won for just the third time in 20 games under coach Marty Mornhinweg.

The Lions held on after building a 20-0 lead on Harrington's 38-yard TD pass to Bill Schroeder.

The Saints (3-1) fell behind 20-0 for the second-straight week but couldn't mount the same comeback they had against Chicago. Deuce McAllister was held to 61 yards rushing but caught eight passes for 67 yards.

Kansas City 48, Miami 30

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Trent Green threw five touchdown passes — three to tight end Tony Gonzalez — ran for 48 yards, and even threw a block on a TD run by Priest Holmes as the Chiefs handed Miami its first loss of the season.

Safety Greg Wesley intercepted three of Jay Fiedler's passes in the final eight minutes, setting up the final 10 points for the Chiefs (2-2), who had lost five in a row to the Dolphins.

Green was 24-of-34 for 328 yards, and Gonzalez caught seven passes for 140 yards.

Ricky Williams was held to 66 yards rushing for Miami (3-1).

yard touchdown with 4:10 left to win it for Green Bay.

Newly signed Shayne Graham missed a 24-yard field goal with 13 seconds left that would have tied the game.

Favre was 18-of-32 for 200 yards with one interception to lead the Packers (3-1).

Steve Smith filled in nicely for injured receiver Muhsin Muhammad, catching five passes for 116 yards. But it wasn't enough for the Panthers (3-1), who lost their first game of the season.

Philadelphia 35, Houston 17

PHILADELPHIA — Brian Dawkins caught a touchdown pass, had an interception, a sack, and a fumble recovery for the Eagles.

Donovan McNabb completed 24 of 42 passes for 259 yards and one touchdown, and Duce Staley added two 1-yard TD runs as Philadelphia (3-1) cruised to its third-consecutive double-digit victory.

David Carr, the No. 1 overall pick in April's draft, was 16-of-29 for 188 yards and two touchdowns to Corey Bradford. The Texans (1-3) have lost three in a row since beating the Cowboys in their opener.

Jacksonville 28, Jets 3

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Led by 237 yards from Fred Taylor — 142 rushing and 95 receiving — the Jacksonville Jaguars made the Jets look hapless again.

Stacey Mack scored three touchdowns for Jacksonville (2-1), which is three more than New York has scored in the last two weeks. The Jets (1-3) have been outscored 102-13 in three-straight losses, their worst three-game stretch since 1962, when they were known as the Titans.

Jets quarterback Vinny Testaverde left with a bruised right shoulder. The injury wasn't major, but Testaverde had thrown four-straight incompletions to start the game, and backup Chad Pennington went 21-for-34 with 281 yards.

Women's golf swings into fifth place in home tourney

BY DREW MANROE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Despite a disappointing third round, the Iowa women's golf team was excited about their progress and fifth-place finish at the Lady Northern Invitational in Iowa City.

The Hawkeyes shot rounds of 303 and 299 on Sept. 28, and going into Sunday's play the team was in fourth place in the 12-team field. However, Iowa's third round score of 311 allowed Michigan to pass them.

But this didn't dim the exuberance reverberating throughout the team over the Hawkeyes' play on Sept. 28 and the host of excellent individual performances.

Sophomores Megan George and Liz Bennett each finished in the top 10 individually, tying for sixth place with scores of 224.

"[Sunday] was a bit of struggle," said George, who shot a third round score of 79, after rounds of 71 and 74 on Sept. 28. "We have to learn how to shoot good third rounds. But we're really happy about our progress. We're learning how to all play well on the same day."

"We were really realizing how much potential we have."

Junior Laura Holmes finished third of the Hawkeyes and tied for 17th overall with a score of 230. She also remained positive amid the team's third-round woes.

"We were really happy," Holmes said. "I have had psychological problems with shooting good third rounds. I was scrambling [on Sunday], and I was so steady before."

"But I think on Saturday we had the best team score since I've been here, which was awesome. We talked after we were done and we were really excited as a team."

Penn State's Katie Futcher won the individual championship, firing a 211, while Kent State won the team championship, shooting 895. Penn State, Indiana, and Michigan also finished ahead of Iowa.

But the Hawkeyes did manage to finish ahead of Big Ten competitors Illinois, Northwestern, Wisconsin, and Minnesota. The Big Ten teams will face off at Finkbine Golf Course again when Iowa hosts the Big Ten Championships in April.

The Hawkeyes' next tournament takes place at the Legends of Golf Shootout on Oct. 7-8 in Bloomington, Ind.

Rainy weather not kind to women's cross-country

BY ROSEANNA SMITH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Stormy weather created a slip 'n' slide for the Iowa women's cross-country team in its weekend competition at the Great American Cross-Country race in Chapel Hill, N.C.

The Hawkeyes finished No. 24 out of 26 teams on a tumultuous, waterlogged 5,000 course.

Brigham Young University finished in the top position, followed by No. 23 Columbia, No. 6 North Carolina State, University of Northern Carolina-Chapel Hill, and No. 7 Arkansas. BYU is ranked No. 1 in women's cross-country competition nationally.

Coach Wayne Angel said he was not disappointed in Iowa's finish since the field included 17 nationally ranked teams.

"The weather was terrible, and it is a very challenging course with all the hills," Angel said. "All the times were slow, but I think our young ladies did very well [and] learned how to run against quite a few of the best teams in the country."

"I think they learned what it takes to be good and what they have to do to get to that level. It was good because I also learned what level I have to recruit on to get there. Overall, I thought the weekend was a success."

Though the team finished in the back of the field, Angel said a performance from Michelle Sokol stood out as a shining moment. Sokol ended in 135th place, recording a 21-minute 2-second finish.

"Michelle ran a good race," Angel said. "She raced — and that's really important to me and the team."

The Hawkeyes were led by Sarah Ahrens, who nailed down Iowa's top finish at 108. Ahrens recorded a 20:32 time, affected by the soggy conditions. Atalie Barber, Georgia Millward, Katie Donlon, Ericka Roberts, and Michelle Lahann also ran for the Hawkeyes.

"This was a really nice learning tool for all of us," Angel said. "I think you'll see that in meets that come up."

The Hawkeyes meet Notre Dame this weekend on a flat course in South Bend, Ind.

Men's golf finishes seventh

BY DREW MANROE
THE DAILY IOWAN

An unimpressive third round provided an anticlimactic end to the Iowa men's golf team's performance in the Northern Intercollegiate.

The Hawkeyes sat in fourth place at the end of Sept. 28's play, which was aborted after 21 of 36 holes because of darkness.

Play resumed Sunday, and the team matched its first round score of 285 in the second round. However, things took a turn for the worse in the third round, as the Hawkeyes shot 291 and dropped to a seventh-place finish.

"I'm disappointed right now," coach Terry Anderson said. "We had ourselves where we needed to be. We were in the hunt, but we just got lapped [Sunday]."

One bright spot among the disappointment was the play of senior Mike Tapper. He turned in a stellar performance for the Hawkeyes, shooting a 206 to finish in third place in the individual standings.

Tapper finished at or below par in each round of play. But his teammates couldn't keep pace, with senior Aaron Krueger managing the only other sub-par round, shooting a 67 in round two.

Anderson said he was extremely pleased with Tapper's performance and the team's performance as a whole on Sept. 28. But this didn't mask his displeasure at giving up so much ground in the third round of the tournament.

"A ton of teams passed us," Anderson said. "Ohio State passed us. Indiana passed us. Michigan State passed us. It stings right now."

Illinois barely edged out Minnesota for the team championship with an 843, and Illinois' James Lepp shot a 202 to take the individual championship.

Anderson said the Hawkeyes can't wallow in their disappointment for long, because the Hawkeyes will travel to Ann Arbor, Mich. to compete in the Wolverine Invitational Oct. 5-6.

"This left a sour taste in the mouth," Anderson said. "It's sad, but it happens."

"We've just got to battle again next week."

Sosa hits 499th homer but has to wait for 500

CHICAGO (AP) — Sammy Sosa hit his 499th career homer Sunday as the Chicago Cubs gave Bruce Kimm a 7-3 victory in his final game as interim manager over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Sosa hit his 49th of the season in the first off Josh Fogg for a 2-0 lead. He was trying to become the first player to hit 50 homers or more five times.

Fogg (12-12) loaded the bases with a walk to Sosa in the fifth, forced in a run with a walk to Hee Seop Choi, and gave up a two-run double to Angel Echevarria that made it 5-1.

Kerry Wood (12-11) allowed four hits in six innings with nine strikeouts.

The Cubs finished the season 67-95, while Pittsburgh went 72-89.

Montreal 7, Cincinnati 2

MONTREAL — In what might have been their final game in Montreal, the Expos beat the Cincinnati Reds on Sunday after a delay caused by fans upset that a check-swing call went against Vladimir Guerrero.

Guerrero, needing one home run to become baseball's fourth player with 40 homers and 40 stolen bases in the same season, was called out by first-base umpire Alfonso Marquez in the eighth.

The crowd of 25,178 showered the outfield with debris, and the game was stopped for six minutes.

Mets 6, Atlanta 1

NEW YORK — Mike Piazza homered and drove in three runs as the New York Mets ended their worst season in six years by avoiding a four-game sweep to the Atlanta Braves on Sunday.

The Mets (75-86) finished in last place for the first time since 1993; they had their most losses since going 71-91 in 1996.

Atlanta (101-58) already clinched its 11th-straight division title, and it will open the playoffs on Wednesday against San Francisco at Turner Field.

Minnesota 3, White Sox 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Bobby Kielty hit a go-ahead, two-run homer in the eighth inning for the second-straight day, and the Minnesota Twins moved into the playoffs with a victory over the Chicago White Sox on Sunday.

The AL Central champion Twins (94-67) will start the playoffs Tuesday at AL West champion Oakland.

Cleveland 7, Kansas City 3

CLEVELAND — Jim Thome singled home the go-ahead run in his last at-bat this season — and maybe his final one for Cleveland — to lead the Indians over the Kansas City Royals on Sunday.

The Royals (62-100) joined the Detroit Tigers, Tampa Bay Devil Rays, and Milwaukee Brewers as 100-game losers in 2002, marking the first time in major-league history that four teams have lost 100 games in the same season.

Yankees 6, Baltimore 1

BALTIMORE — The New York Yankees clinched home-field advantage throughout the AL playoffs, using home runs by Rondell White and Jason Giambi to beat the Baltimore Orioles on Sunday.

Baltimore (67-95) closed the season with 12-straight losses.

New York's Alfonso Soriano went 0-5 and finished with 39 home runs. He was bidding to become the fourth player in major-league history to have 40 homers and 40 steals in a single season.

Boston 11, Tampa Bay 8

BOSTON — Manny Ramirez won the American League batting title and drove in Boston's last run of a disappointing 93-69 season as the Red Sox beat the Tampa Bay Devil Rays on Sunday.

Brandi Jade Thomas/Associated Press

Sammy Sosa connects on his 499th career homer Sunday against the Reds. Sosa finished the season one home run short of the 500 mark.

Ramirez walked with the bases loaded as a pinch hitter in the seventh inning, his only at-bat of the game. It left his average at .349.

Tampa Bay finished 55-106

Toronto 1, Detroit 0

TORONTO — Roy Halladay gave up two hits over eight innings as the Toronto Blue Jays finished the year with a victory over the Detroit Tigers on Sunday.

Eric Hinske hit a tiebreaking single in the eighth for the Blue Jays, whose 44-32 record since the All Star break is fourth-best in the majors.

Oakland 8, Texas 7

ARLINGTON, Texas — Barry Zito got his league-leading 23rd win, and Jermaine Dye hit a grand slam Sunday as the Oakland Athletics beat the Texas Rangers, 8-7.

The AL West champions finished 103-59, matching the New York Yankees for the most wins in the major leagues, but won't get home-field advantage through the AL playoffs.

Texas finished the season at 72-90.

Anheim 7, Seattle 6

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Troy Glaus hit a grand slam in the first inning, and Aaron Sele came off the disabled list and got the win Sunday as the Anaheim Angels beat the Seattle Mariners.

The wild-card Angels (99-63) will open the playoffs Tuesday night against New York at Yankee Stadium.

Seattle finished this season 93-69, third in the AL West.

San Francisco 7, Houston 0

SAN FRANCISCO — Ryan Jensen and five relievers combined on a five-hitter as the San Francisco Giants beat the Houston Astros on Sunday.

A day after the Giants (95-66) clinched the NL wild card and a division series meeting with Atlanta, every regular San Francisco starter watched from the bench.

San Diego 2, Los Angeles 0

LOS ANGELES — Rookie Oliver

Perez ended a nine-start winless streak Sunday as the San Diego Padres beat the Los Angeles Dodgers. San Diego finished 66-96.

St. Louis 4, Milwaukee 0

ST. LOUIS — Edgar Renteria's tiebreaking double in the eighth inning sparked St. Louis to a win over the Milwaukee Brewers Sunday, but the Cardinals still won't get home-field advantage in the first round of the playoffs.

St. Louis (97-65) will open the playoffs Tuesday at Arizona (98-64), which beat Colorado on Sunday to gain the home-field advantage.

The Brewers finished the season 56-106.

Hawkeyes earn weekend split over Illinois State

BY KATIE LOW
THE DAILY IOWAN

Katelyn Quinn stepped up once again for the women's soccer team, scoring a game defining goal against Illinois State on Sept. 29 and handing the Redbirds their first loss of the season. Quinn's goal was the only one of the game as Iowa recorded its third shutout of the year.

The Hawkeyes were not so lucky on Sept. 27, when they were defeated 1-0 at home by Northwestern. The loss was the first for the team on its own field.

The win against Illinois State (7-1-0) could not have come at a better time, because the Hawkeyes had lost three in a row before that. Iowa's record now stands at 5-4 overall, 0-3 Big Ten; it will return to action against conference opponents next weekend.

Iowa began the Illinois State game at a furious pace, recording 16 shots on goal in the first half with Quinn's goal at the 34:09 mark. She leads the team with five goals.

Iowa goalie Britta Voge had six saves in the game. Voge allowed only one goal all weekend.

"Britta's been completely solid," Hawkeye coach Carla Baker said. "She's starting to emerge as a leader of the team. She's communicating more with her teammates and demanding more from them. We'll see a lot more positive things from her this season."

Iowa exercised complete control over the game, outshooting Illinois State 20-14. The Hawkeyes also recorded seven corner kicks to Illinois State's two.

"We dominated the game," Baker said. "It was not just a 1-0 win. Their keeper came up with some pretty good saves, and we had some very close opportunities."

Iowa's loss to Northwestern was a disappointing defeat, and the Hawkeyes are still looking for a win against a Big Ten opponent.

Baker attributed the loss to her team's inability to score goals when the chance arose.

"The bottom line is that we're creating scoring opportunities, but we're not capitalizing on them. Our opponents are able to do that, and that's the difference between getting a result and not getting a result," she said.

The Hawkeyes were strong on defense, however. Voge recorded nine saves in the loss. Iowa also attempted 11 shots on goal but was allowed no corner kicks.

"We're just not very deep coming off the bench right now," Baker said. "I look at the starting 11 and put more responsibility on them. They'll have to play for long periods of time with minimal amounts of rest. Those 11 will have to carry us for the rest of the year."

The Hawkeyes will resume action at 7 p.m. on Friday against Minnesota at the Iowa Soccer Complex.

HAWKEYE BRIEFS

Rowing team sweeps field in Des Moines

The Iowa rowing team continued its five-year domination at the Head of the Des Moines Regatta, sweeping all three categories.

The Hawkeyes took first and second in the Women's Open 8+ with times of 16:06 and 16:39 respectively. They were followed by two Kansas State University boats, with Drake taking fifth.

The Women's Open 4+ was won by Iowa in 17:20. Results for the rest of the race were not available at press time.

Women's pairs was also owned by the Iowa rowers. They took first and second with times of 19:18 and 19:39. Iowa also took fourth, fifth, and eighth place in the event.

Iowa rowing coach Mandi Kowal was thrilled by her team's performance. "This is probably the best we have rowed at this regatta," she said. "Technically, we looked sharper than past years. It was nice to see that. Definitely winning all the events we have entered was a boost."

However, Kowal also noticed room for improvement.

"Some of us need to learn how to execute what goals we set out to accomplish," she said. "For example, if we state we would like to establish consistent pressure throughout the piece, we should have a plan of how to achieve that goal and go for it. We need to realize it will be hard and make sure we work hard at it during the entire race."

Waters eliminated in Baylor round of 16

Iowa men's tennis player Stuart Waters left the Baylor Intercollegiate with a 2-1 tournament record and an overall fall record of 3-3.

Waters was defeated in the round of 16 by Baylor's Benedikt Dorsch in straight sets (6-3, 6-3). Waters, seeded fifth in the tournament, won his first two matches on Sept. 27.

The Hawkeye standout battled back from a first set deficit to defeat Roger Gubser of Texas in three sets. Waters then easily swept Matt Laucks of Texas A&M in straight sets (7-6, 6-4).

"This was a productive tournament for Stuart, he established himself last year in the Big Ten [This tournament] will [help] move him up a level and establish a national level."

The senior will again join his teammates next week in the main draw of the All-American Tournament in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Women's tennis team opens at Furman

The Iowa women's tennis team opened its fall season this weekend at the Furman Fall Classic. Inclement weather forced the tournament officials to play all three rounds of doubles on Sept. 27.

Facing the No. 1 seeds, juniors Cassie Haas and Deni Alexandrova led off the tournament with a loss. Their opponents, Sarah Rieske and Aleke Tsoubanos of Vanderbilt were the eventual champions of Flight One. The pair of Hawkeyes went on to defeat South Carolina's Kathy Boyanovich and Jodi Kenoyer before dropping a match to a Clemson team.

Senior Steffi Hoch and freshman Chelsea Glynn placed highest for the Hawkeyes at fourth in Flight Two. Hoch and Glynn stomped a team from Clemson (8-1), before dropping two matches to duos from Middle Tennessee State and South Carolina.

In Flight Three, Jenny Schulte and Gloria Okino lost their first match (8-4) to Middle Tennessee State. The sophomores were on the losing end of a tie-break, 9-8 (5) in their second match against Furman University at the end of Friday's play.

Europe storms U.S. in Ryder Cup win

BY DOUG FERGUSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SUTTON COLDFIELD, England — Underdog Europe sent out its best players to bring home the Ryder Cup and got even more help from its unknowns for a shocking victory over the Americans.

In a stunning conclusion to a match delayed one year by the terrorist attacks, the Europeans beat the United States at its best game — singles — and reclaimed the Ryder Cup on Sunday when Paul McGinley made an 8-foot par putt.

McGinley earned a halve against Jim Furyk, assuring Europe the 14½ points it needed to win the precious gold trophy.

The European players stormed across the green when it was over. Most of them already did their part by winning early and winning big, giving Europe the lead and momentum that it never surrendered on a thrilling afternoon at The Belfry.

Colin Montgomerie led it off by remaining unbeaten in all five matches, a spectacular performance in which he never trailed in any of the 82 holes he played this week.

McGinley, the ninth of 12 singles matches, won the clinching point by rallying from 2-down with six holes to play to tie Jim Furyk. Tiger Woods was useless at the end, the Ryder Cup already decided as he was playing the 17th hole against Jesper Parnevik.

Woods

The final score was 15½-12½, the largest margin since Europe scored 16½ points at The Belfry in 1985, the start of its domination in a competition that never looks close on paper.

European captain Sam Torrance was the hero in 1985, when he holed the clinching putt, but he called this victory the greatest moment of his life.

"They have all done a great job," Torrance said. "This had nothing to do with me. I led them to the water, and they drank copiously."

U.S. captain Curtis Strange will be second-guessed for his decision to keep his best two players at the bottom of the lineup, when it was too late for them to stop the onslaught of European victories.

The Ledge

by Nick Narigon

You know you had a good weekend when ...

• Your system can still digest solid foods.

• The Hawks beat the 12th-ranked team in the nation.

• You sort through the items in your pockets to fill in memory gaps.

• Your feet are sore from dancing too much.

• You somehow manage to get your homework done or at least catch up to the work that was due last week.

• You wake up in the middle of a field cuddling with a dog named "Nougat."

• You didn't wake up in jail.

• You talked to that girl/guy you have a huge crush on, and you weren't in a drunken, slobbering stupor.

• You sat outside in the beautiful weather and listened to 10 bands in a row with 200 other people, and no one fell in the bonfire.
