No beauty contest for this queen, king

BY KAREN HEINSELMAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Vanessa Shelton remembers college homecomings in the '70s, when the quest for queen was nothing short of a beauty pageant and a popularity contest — a mindset far removed from the candidates vying for the crowns at the UI this fall.

The paradigm shift was clear to Shelton, the UI director of Scholastic Journalism Programs, when she sat on a panel of four judges last month and asked 14 homecoming hopefuls about how they would solve pressing university issues, why they wanted to be named king or queen, and how the honorary titles are relevant in 2002.

"There was a rebellion of students rejecting the idea of a beauty contest and adapting Homecoming to reflect the times," said Shelton, who added Homecoming is more appealing to students, now that leadership, scholarship, and service determine the king and queen. The eight finalists were announced Thursday evening at Iowa Shout, a kick-off to a week-end of Homecoming events. They are Helen Fuller of West Branch, Kristin Trotzig of LeMars, Anne Wellman of Bettendorf, Angela Wolfe of Iowa City, Mike Brooks of West Des Moines, Hank Diggelmann of Iowa City, Eric Harlan of Clive, and Brand Newland of Iowa City.

The king and queen will be coronated at today's pep rally on the east side of the Old Capitol following the 6:15 p.m. Homecoming parade.

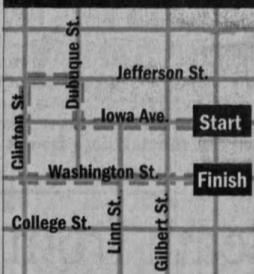

The candidates participated in a broad range of activities, including the Ronald McDonald House, Dance Marathon, and

New art building strikes chord with UI

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI officials will break ground today on a new art building, inspired by Pablo Picasso and designed by nationally renowned architect Steven Holl. Gov. Tom Vilsack, top UI officials, and members of the art-school faculty will be present at the ceremony launching a $21 million, two-and-a-half-year construction project.

Holl, a New York City-based architect, was named Time magazine's Best Architect in America in 2001; he has received a number of other awards, including a New York American Institute of Architects Medal of Honor.

"It is an interesting site and was designed by an outstanding and famous architect," said Rod Lehnertz, UI Facilities Services Group project manager.

The 65,000-square-foot facility, tentatively scheduled for completion in summer 2005, will house administrative and faculty offices, the School of Art and Art History, a library, a 225-seat auditorium, a gallery for student work, and a media theater.

It will also include a small cafe, classrooms, studios, and an interdisciplinary forum space. The building will be located directly adjacent to the Hutchison Quarry Pond on North Riverside Drive.

Holl's other designs include an addition to the Museum of Modern Art in New York City and the Museum of Contemporary Art in Helsinki, Finland. He also has proposed a new model for the World Trade Center.

Facilities services is completing construction documents, and it will hire a contractor in early 2003.

New Asian center faces bridge building

BY BRIDGET FRODYMA
THE DAILY IOWAN

After recently ending a five-year wait to have a place of its own, some say the UI Asian-American Coalition might face difficulties fitting a multitude of cultures under one roof.

The university granted the first-ever cultural center for Asian students, 605 Melrose Ave., to the group last month, and it could serve as a place to gather. But with a large and diverse population ranging from Indian to Malaysian, some students are bracing for discord. There are at least 10 different Asian student groups on campus.

Foreign-exchange student Dae Mo Koo, the founder of KOLORS, an organization representing Korean heritage, recognizes the need for the house but admits he's noticed division between Asian Americans and Asian foreign-exchange students.

"There are a lot of conflicts between Asian Americans and study-abroad students in the Asian American community," said Koo, a UI junior who was born and raised in Korea. "A lot of Asian women and men hang out in groups, but you almost never see Asian American students and foreign students hanging out in a group."

But even among Asian Americans, a number of ethnic groups with diverse cultural practices, languages, and beliefs exist, pushing the university's Asian or Pacific Islander enrollment this fall to 1,049.

Panel to review UI's suspension of Pierre Pierce

BY KELLEY CASINO
THE DAILY IOWAN

A seven-member panel consisting of some of the UI's top scholars will decide at a hearing later this month whether Pierre Pierce's suspension from the men's basketball team is warranted.

Pierce's attorneys contend that the suspension implies that the Hawkeye sophomore guard is guilty of third-degree sexual assault. University officials say the severity of the incident warrants the measure.

"We still feel that the suspension is not the proper avenue," said Maggi Moss, one of Pierce's attorneys. "In our system of justice, he should be presumed innocent, and if he's innocent, why is he being suspended?"

The panel members from the Athletics Board will decide whether to uphold Pierce's Oct. 1 suspension by Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby. The decision will come after a hearing in which both sides will be able to present their cases. The date of the hearing and whether it will be open to the public are yet to be determined.

"The appeals process allows the university, Pierre Pierce, and his lawyers to make their cases," said education Professor Nicholas Colangelo, the board's chairman. "We will weigh all the evidence and make a decision based on that."

The review panel will only examine Pierce's ability to play and practice in the upcoming basketball season, not his guilt or innocence, said Colangelo, who will head the panel.

The other panel members are mathematics Professor Dan Anderson, pharmacy Professor Paul Perry, epidemiology Professor Charles Lynch, nursing Associate Professor Paula Mobily, Pamela White Trimpe, the Museum of Art's curator of painting and sculpture, and psychology Professor Elizabeth Altmaier.

Linda McGuire, an associate dean of law, will serve as the group's legal adviser.

According to police records, Pierce allegedly performed unwanted sex acts on an acquaintance at his 725

Attorney: Change alcohol wording

Council will begin review of alcohol law next week

BY CHOYON MANJREKAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City City Attorney Eleanor Dilkes suggests swapping the word "servings" for "containers" to end the spate of alcohol cases dismissed because of the ambiguity of the city's alcohol ordinance.

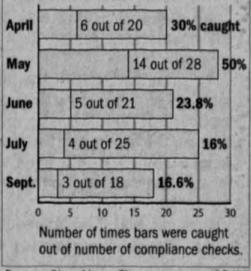

In a letter to the City Council, she said the ordinance is having its intended effect but that adopting the new wording will help restrict out-of-sight sales, meaning bartenders can only sell two drinks per one customer. Some councilors said Thursday they support the change — a move sparked by three cases in which charges were dropped against bartenders accused of the infraction.

Two cases were thrown out because the language of the charges was inconsistent with the language of the ordinance. The third case was dismissed by a District Court judge because of the ambiguity of the word "serving."

Dilkes said "containers" is easier to define than "servings," but she conceded objection may arise because some drinks are typically sold in multiple containers, including the "Stoplight," which comes in three stacked shot glasses or with a beer chaser.

The council will consider Dilkes' recommendation during its informal Oct. 7 work session.

"I am looking forward to the review," said Mayor Ernie Lehman. "Enforcement of rules has become more vigorous in the past few years. I can't say whether it's because of the ordinance or new laws."

The ordinance went into effect Aug. 1, 2001, limiting

Awards reunite 2 rights pioneers

BY RYAN PARNELL
THE DAILY IOWAN

Not only did the 2002 Catalyst Awards recognize outstanding individuals in diversity, it also reunited two long-time friends.

UI interim President Sandy Boyd was surprised by the special appearance of Dr. Cecilia Foxley, the university's first director of affirmative action. The two had not seen each other in almost 20 years until Thursday's awards ceremony.

"This is a true homecoming, to be back at the university and to see a long-time mentor and friend," said Foxley after embracing Boyd in a long hug. "I told my secretary to cancel my meetings the rest of the week because I was going to Iowa."

Foxley was hired as affirmative-action director in 1972, the year she and Boyd started the first program in the Big Ten and one of the first in the nation. In 1981, she left to take a job in her home state, Utah, where today she is the commissioner of higher education.

"I hired her because she was a bright, outgoing, persuasive person who could get the job done," said Boyd. "We were both on the same page with the same goal of trying to diversify the faculty as well as the student body."

Boyd and Foxley jumped many hurdles throughout their time together, but their relationship never suffered.

"When things were heated, she had this quality of staying calm and collected," Boyd said. "Some people would have been frustrated, but she led by example."

Foxley said her best memories of Boyd were his constant backing and support, which made her job much easier. She remembers her first major meeting with all the deans of the university.

"The senior dean of the UI told me he couldn't back 'Foxley policy' on affirmative action," she said. "I told him it wasn't my policy, but the university's policy and that he would support it. Without Boyd behind me, I wouldn't have been able to do that."

Even though the office, which helps educate the community about affirmative action and equal-employment laws, was created 30 years ago, Boyd and Foxley's work has left a lasting impression.

"Dr. Foxley building an affirmation-action department when there was no road map to follow was a phenomenal feat," said Charlotte Westerhaus, the program's current director. "Together, they created the blueprint used by all universities today."

Foxley, who called the 10 years she spent at the UI the "formative years" of her career, worked as a director but also worked in counseling services and held the positions of assistant provost and dean of students.

"President Boyd and the UI really made a difference in my professional career and personal life," Foxley said, breaking into tears while speaking in the IMU.

UI interim President Sandy Boyd is reunited with long-lost friend Cecilia Foxley at the 2002 Catalyst Awards held in the IMU on Thursday afternoon.

The Catalyst Awards, hosted by Westerhaus and program associate Diane Finnerty, honored two individuals and two departments striving for diversity in a creative and innovative way.

With the department's 30th anniversary this year and a clean slate ahead of her, Westerhaus said she also hopes to make a difference.

"My objective is to reinvigorate the pulse of diversity on campus," she said. "I want to create some type of synergy to combine our efforts and push forward to accomplish our goals."

City offers county deal on fiber optics

BY LAURA JENSEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City has extended an offer to Johnson County to connect several of the county's buildings with fiber-optic technology to speed up communications.

The project, which the Board of Supervisors will consider next week, will have a one-time cost of $71,295. A wireless link from the Courthouse to the Johnson County Jail will cost an additional $4,000.

Under the proposal, the city and county will share a contract to connect the County Administration Building, the Courthouse, and the Secondary Roads

Building with fiber-optic cables. The city has already secured a contract to install the technology in Iowa City.

The project would be paid for within three and a half years.

"This is a great example of inter-governmental communication," said Johnson County Supervisor Terrence Neuzil, reflecting the supervisors' general warmth for the idea.

The new system will improve data communication between buildings by networking the county computers with fiber-optic cables, speeding up connections from 1.5 megabytes per second to 1 gigabyte — 1,000 megabytes.

County network administrator Bill Horning said the technology will prevent network congestion, which slows communication.

The system will also allow all county phones to operate on one phone system, reducing costs. The county now pays $21,000 for Qwest T1 phone connections, an annual payment that increases each year. Future uses for the fiber-optic system could include video conferencing, county officials said.

The city already plans to run fiber-optic cables near county buildings, which means the county only needs to cover the cost of running lines from its buildings to the city's lines.

Pending the project's approval, the county Information Services Department will allocate $46,000 in carryover from previous years' central technology funds to pay for the fiber optics at the supervisors' authorization. An additional $15,000 budgeted for this year's hardware expenses would also be used.

County officials said they can meet the remaining costs with phone-line savings and the unexpected-expense budget.

"The speed and clarity of the fiber-optic connections will be better for Johnson County," said Supervisor Patrick Harney.

Iowa records its first death from West Nile

BY DAVID PITT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Iowa has confirmed its first death from West Nile virus, health officials announced Thursday.

The victim was identified as a man in his 80s from west-central Iowa. His name was not released.

The man died within the last week after numerous days in the hospital, said Dr. Stephen Gleason, the director of the Iowa Department of Public Health. He was infected approximately two weeks before that.

The man had gone to see his family doctor complaining of weakness and then went home. He returned to the hospital the next day confused and delirious, then went into a coma and died, Gleason said.

Where or how he contracted the virus is not known for sure.

"He was fairly active, and he had mowed his yard within the previous two weeks," Gleason said.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, 2,631 cases of West Nile virus had been reported nationally as of Thursday; 136 people have died from the disease. CDC records show Illinois leading the nation with 35 deaths.

Iowa health officials announced two additional human cases Thursday, both in Webster County, bringing the state's tally to 30 cases.

Both of the additional victims were elderly — a 74-year-old woman and an 81-year-old man. Both were hospitalized, Gleason said.

Doctors say it is difficult to predict who will become severely affected by the virus because several factors come into play, including genetic resistance and other infections or diseases.

"Advanced age is the highest risk factor," said Dr. Patricia Quinlisk, the state epidemiologist.

She said most victims who become seriously ill are elderly.

Symptoms of mosquito-borne West Nile virus can include fever, weakness, muscle pain, headache, and confusion. These typically appear three to 12 days after exposure, state health officials have said.

Most people affected by the virus have no symptoms, while a few may have fevers or headaches. Fewer than 1 percent become seriously ill with a potentially fatal brain inflammation.

Gleason said with the arrival of autumn, mosquitoes were becoming more active in the middle part of the day.

"They're shifting to daylight hours, and they will remain active until the first hard frost," he said.

Shooter stalks D.C. 'burbs

WASHINGTON POST

Five people going about the prosaic chores of daily life were indiscriminately shot dead in a 17-hour span in Montgomery County, Md., Thursday and Wednesday. Police said they believe that all were slain by an elusive assailant, acting alone or with an accomplice, who prowled the normally peaceful sidewalks and shopping centers of suburbia, squeezing off shots and then vanishing unnoticed.

The killings — all single-shot, sniperlike attacks, police said — occurred outdoors in public places in the Montgomery neighborhoods of Aspen Hill, Glenmont, Kensington, and White Flint. The first victim, a man, fell in a supermarket parking lot Wednesday evening, then two men and two women were slain separately Thursday in just over a two-hour span, beginning at 7:41 a.m. All the shootings occurred in a 2½-mile radius.

Police said they knew of no motives or obvious similarities among the victims. But because the five killings were carried out in a strikingly similar fashion in a county that has averaged just two homicides per month this year, police said they were convinced that the slayings were related.

"We do have someone that so far has been very accurate in what they are attempting to do, and so we probably have a skilled shooter," county Police Chief Charles Moose said of the gunman, who remained the focus of a law-enforcement dragnet Thursday night.

The shootings put the terrorism-conscious Washington region on a heightened state of alert, as law-enforcement agencies joined in air and ground searches for the killer, and school officials took precautions to protect children. In a regionwide hunt for a white truck that may have been involved in the shootings, police made numerous traffic stops of vehicles matching that description, in some cases approaching with guns drawn. But as darkness fell, the killer remained on the loose.

Schools in Montgomery and surrounding jurisdictions went into emergency "lockdown" status, with students banned from outdoor activities. School officials across the region said they planned to open schools today even if the search was continuing but said they would do so with greatly increased security. The bodies of the five victims were taken to the Maryland medical examiner's office in Baltimore for autopsies. As of Thursday night, pathologists had not recovered any bullets from the victims, a source familiar with the investigations said.

The Washington Times, Joseph Silverman/Associated Press

Police said Thursday night that they were not certain what type of weapon was used, although they said it may have been a powerful rifle. And they were unable to find eyewitnesses to the killings, despite Thursday's attacks occurring in well-traveled areas during the morning commute.

"We are certainly not closing any door," Moose said of the investigation, adding that police are considering all possible motives for the slayings. "We are taking a broad-brush approach to this," he said.

Though police searched vigorously Thursday for a small, slightly damaged white truck with two occupants that a witness saw racing from one of the shooting scenes, the truck was never found, and it seemed to be a thin lead.

Police departments across country, meanwhile, were alerted, and federal and state law-enforcement agencies were called in to huddle with county police Thursday night.

Schools were temporarily locked down across the area Thursday, authorities said, while frantic parents telephoned to check on their children's safety. Schools let out on time, but many had police on guard.

Senate clears deck for Iraq debate

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — The Senate Thursday cleared the way for a historic, politically charged debate on a resolution to authorize military action against Iraq as key Democrats expressed reservations but agreed with Republicans it is likely to win a strong bipartisan majority.

Across the Capitol, a House committee approved the resolution, putting it on track for House passage as well, probably by the end of next week.

The Senate gave the go-ahead for the war debate — expected to last a week — by voting 95 to 1 to take up the measure without further delay. Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the Democrats' senior member and chairman of the Appropriations Committee, cast the only dissenting vote after delivering a blistering speech describing the resolution as a "product of presidential hubris" and dangerously hasty.

The resolution would authorize President Bush to launch military action against Saddam Hussein's regime with a minimum of conditions. The language, which Bush and House leaders endorsed Wednesday, would require him to inform Congress that United Nations efforts had failed to address the threat posed by Iraq's chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons.

Just before Thursday's Senate vote, Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., and Minority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., urged members to take up the resolution, even though they disagree on its substance.

"Let there be no mistake, the elimination of the Iraqi threat is essential if we are to win the war on terror," said Lott, who supports the resolution.

Daschle, who wants limits on the president's war-making authority, said the debate will show that "similarities will be far greater than the differences" among senators in their approach to dealing with Saddam. He said it could lead to a "broad bipartisan coalition" on the final vote.

But in warm-up speeches Thursday, dissent predominated. In a lengthy address, Byrd said the resolution "redefines the nature of defense ... [and] reinterprets the Constitution to suit the will of the executive branch ... not to mention the fact that it stands the charter of the United Nations on its head." Urging colleagues to "overcome the siren song of political polls," he suggested the White House was exploiting the issue as the Nov. 5 elections near.

Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn., whose GOP challenger, Norm Coleman, repeatedly has criticized the senator's national-security record, announced he will vote against the Bush-backed resolution. "A pre-emptive, go-it-alone military strategy towards Iraq is wrong," Wellstone said. "I support riding Iraq of weapons of mass destruction through unfettered U.N. inspections, which should begin as soon as possible."

Daschle, too, continued to express doubts. "Certainly, the White House has moved," he said, speaking of changes adopted Wednesday to win the support of House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo. "In my view, there is still improvement that I think can be made."

Man fires shots near U.N.

BY DAFNA LINZER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS — A man believed to have been born in North Korea emptied a seven-shot pistol in front of U.N. headquarters Thursday, hitting several offices but injuring no one in an apparent protest against the communist nation's leader.

The gunman, who threw leaflets criticizing the North Korean government, was identified as Steve Kim, a naturalized U.S. citizen living in Des Plaines, Ill. FBI spokesman Jim Margolin said Kim was born in 1945 and that agents were trying to confirm he was born in North Korea.

The shooting occurred at 1:10 p.m. as the Security Council was meeting on Iraq and Secretary-General Kofi Annan was holding talks with the Cypriot leaders in his office on the 38th floor.

U.S. Secret Service agents protecting visiting Cyprus President Glafcos Clerides apprehended Kim in the compound just outside the building.

"The first people to reach this individual were U.S. Secret Service personnel," U.N. security chief Michael McCann said. The agents were assisted moments later by members of a State Department protective detail also on site as well as U.N. security.

Margolin said Kim was expected to be arraigned in federal court in Manhattan for violation of the protection of foreign officials act although specific charges have yet to be determined. The protect act is a federal law that establishes protections for visiting dignitaries.

The shots, fired from a Smith & Wesson pistol, hit a women's restroom on the 18th and an American Express office on the 20th floor of the U.N. Secretariat building. McCann said several shots narrowly missed U.N. employees inside the building.

Kim, wearing a blue shirt and brown pants, entered the U.N. compound by jumping over a poorly guarded fence surrounding U.N. headquarters. He walked up to the building, shot seven times in the air, and then dropped the pistol on the ground, witnesses and security officials said.

He then tossed out a stack of leaflets from a small black bag before he put his hands up against a wall and awaited capture.

The leaflets, found by reporters near the scene, were handwritten in English with many misspellings and were addressed to "all people who love freedom and justice."

"In a shining and civilized 21st century, most people in the world enjoying peace and freedom. North Korea however is groaning under the weight of starvation and dictatorial suppression. They don't have even the most basic of human rights since all things body and spirit plants and plows belong to one named greatest general Kim Jong Il," it said.

It was signed: "A citizen of UN, Steve Kim, Oct. 2, 2002."

President Bush has accused North Korea of being part of an "axis of evil." The communist

Gettin' together for a House party

BY RICHARD SHIRK
THE DAILY IOWAN

Other bands would have moved to Los Angeles after releasing an album like My Ass-Kicking Years on Columbia. Instead, House of Large Sizes has sent us another postcard from quaint Cedar Falls — a rocked-out and beefed-up eponymous album from the underground heroes.

This is the eighth release for House since the band formed in Cedar Falls in 1986, and it is the first album of new material since 1997's Glass Cockpit (W.A.R.?). It's also the first time the trio of singer/guitarist Dave Deibler, bassist Barb Schlie, and drummer Brent Hanson have placed the emphasis of an album more on content and structure rather than on the same overwhelming energy found at any of the band's shows.

Loaded with bouncing shout-alongs, House of Large Sizes rolls along with all the off-kilter turbulence one expects from the low-watt college radio faves. Like a Midwestern bastard offshoot of Superchunk circa On the Mouth, the fuzzed-out bass lines of tracks such as "Creeps Like Us," "Lightning Rod Salesman," and "Fine Time" carry as much as Deibler's distortion-pedal heavy guitar and bratty-holler style of singing.

House also has taken full advantage of the facilities of co-producer John Svec's Iowa City's Minstrel Studios with the angular and loud "History of Camouflage" and "Stop Sign Malaria" — enough evidence necessary that some of that Pixie dust rubbed off on the band when touring with Frank Black.

Although the title might sound like a B-side from a Swedish Black Metal band's 7-inch, "Sudden Adult Death Syndrome" is actually one of the standouts.

CONCERT

House of Large Sizes
When: 9 p.m. Saturday
Where: Gabe's,
330 E. Washington St.
Admission: $7

This slow-burn of a song is a rare occasion relying as much on the dust-bowl slide guitar as Deibler's half-sung lyrics.

Normally a scattershot ordeal lost under the instrumental caterwaul, being able to clearly discern Deibler's doomed-lover narrative is something new and refreshing from House.

Even if toys with slowing a couple tracks down, don't think this band is getting soft on us with House of Large Sizes.

But if you do need proof that the Cedar Falls trio rocks as hard as it did during the Reagan administration, House will be at Gabe's on Saturday. The group will be joined by Chicago's the Cells and Iowa City's Wax Cannon.

Song for Pearl

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Master Chorale has debuted a song dedicated to the parents of slain Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl.

Pearl's father, Judea, is a former conductor of LA Shir, a Los Angeles Hebrew choir. He had retired just days before his son's abduction in January.

"Haem Hashlshit (Mother's Lament)," an a cappella work written by Sharon Farber, was sung in its world premiere on Sunday at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion.

Farber, who served as Judea Pearl's former arranger, is the new conductor of LA Shir. She said the work, inspired by a poem, was an expression of her feelings.

"When I came across Nathan Alterman's poem, I knew I had to use it to compose a piece that would portray every mother's worst fear," Farber said in a statement.

"I began writing the piece when Daniel was kidnapped and completed it after his death," she said. "It is dedicated to Judea and Ruth Pearl, his parents, as well as to every parent who has ever lost a child."

Pearl, who was kidnapped and slain by terrorists in Pakistan, was a violinist, fiddler, and mandolin player.

Inheriting the spin and other rhymes

BY RICHARD SHIRK
THE DAILY IOWAN

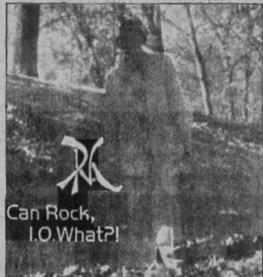

While Watson and Crick described the molecular structure of deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) in 1953, they never would have been able to foresee the funky beats and dope rhymes of Cedar Rapids' DNA in all their kooky double helixes.

But then again, it's probably just a generational thing. Can Rock, I.O.What?!, the debut album from the rapper DNA, also known as Roland Gibson, marks another tally on the chalkboard for Iowa hip-hop.

What carries DNA's self-produced I.O.What?! is a do it yourself approach and his earnest rhyming. Unlike local hip-hopper Tack-Fu's guest-peppered releases and Psychosomatic's reliance on charged-up live dynamicism, the stripped down feel of I.O.What?! works on the strength of DNA's style and flow.

Although these beats might skitter, click, and stomp along like the juke-box selections at the Column, a closer listen to I.O.What?! should reveal the same sort of positivism and non-thuggery found in albums from underground Minneapolis acts such as Atmosphere or Sage Francis. Through DNA's laid-back cadences and blunt beats, standouts such as "I.O.What?!", "Priceless," and "Hey Ma" reinforce the themes introduced by "Praise and Thanks" — namely a fierce loyalty to family, spirituality, and the close-knit community of Iowa hip-hoppers.

Guest vocalists Melin and MRS bring a softer R&B feel to

Can Rock, I.O.What?!
"Boy" and "Angels' Cryin'" respectively, and Aaysin/Antagonist drag in the extra brag-along to "I Luv Hip Hop." But the collaboration-heavy first half of the album doesn't always work.

"It's The Song," featuring Michael Joseph, follows the Intro of "Praise and Thanks" with some of DNA's most sure-footed rhyming, but like followup groove

"Bang N Your Soul," the song is brought down by too much Usher-like quivery vocal syrup.

Still, DNA's fresh perspective in a familiar format makes Can Rock, I.O.What?! a fresh hip-hop listen and a promising step towards what could eventually become as microcosmic a scene as Minneapolis. That is, provided that DNA and other local artists such as the Bad Fathers, Tack-Fu, and Psychosomatic can manage to keep the bar as high as it is now.

DNA will appear Saturday at 3rd Street Live, 1202 Third St. S.E., Cedar Rapids, with hip-hoppers Psychosomatic, 85 Decibel Monks, Real Wid It, Preacher C & Po' Charlie, and DJ Kevin Basset.

CNN chasin' the argot-nauts

NEW YORK (AP) — Is CNN Headline News down with it?

The cable network is trying, judging from an effort emanating from its executive suite to think young.

CNN Headline News general manager Rolando Santos told the San Francisco Chronicle this week that he's looking to mix "the lingo of our people" — words like "whack" and "ill" — into newscasts to attract young people.

And the New York Daily News on Wednesday quoted from an e-mail sent by a network manager to his headline writers, sending them a copy of a slang dictionary so they can be "as cutting edge" as possible.

"Please use this guide to help all you homeys and honeys add a new flava to your tickers and dekkos," the message said, referring to graphics on the Headline News screen.

The list of phrases included "fly," meaning sexually attractive.

Santos said Thursday that the e-mail was designed to point out resources that might help headline writers.

"The e-mail was informational, not a policy or directive from me," he said. "With that said, I should point out that I want the language used in our tickers and dekkos to be real, current, and relevant to the people who watch us."

CNN underwent a makeover a year ago to add busy graphics to make its screen look like a computer screen. Its ratings have been improving among young viewers.

He and other students, background, were taking weather readings and measurements as the eye of the hurricane approached.

Lili weakens as it hits land

BY ALLEN G. BREED
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTEGUT, La. — Hurricane Lili gave Louisiana's coast a 100 mph battering Thursday that swamped streets, knocked out power, and snapped trees. But Lili dwindled to tropical storm strength as it moved inland, leaving residents thankful it was not the monster they were expecting. "It looks like we were lucky," Gov. Mike Foster said.

More than a million people in Texas and Louisiana had been told to clear out as the hurricane closed in with terrifying intensity. But in an overnight transformation even forecasters could not fully explain, Lili weakened from a 145-mph, Category 4 hurricane to a Category 2.

And after its center crossed land at Marsh Island, the storm's winds dropped again, falling by midday to 75 mph, barely a hurricane. By evening, Lili was a tropical storm with winds of 50 mph, and instead of a potentially catastrophic 25-foot storm surge, more manageable surges of 6 to 10 feet blew in.

"A lot of Ph.D.s will be written about this," said National Hurricane Center Director Max Mayfield.

No deaths were reported along the U.S. Gulf Coast. Injuries included three people hurt in Louisiana — two in a roof collapse and a deputy whose cruiser was hit by a falling tree. Earlier this week, Lili killed eight people in the Caribbean.

Foster requested and received a disaster declaration from President Bush. The president did not specify which areas of the state would be eligible for federal aid.

Residents of the region, meanwhile, waited out the weakened storm in shelters.

"Better to make a blank trip than get caught in a hurricane and have a massive loss of life," said Harvey Hart of Port Arthur, Texas, who spent the night with his family in a high-school cafeteria shelter.

Despite its dropoff, Lili was a powerful storm, with gusts as high as 92 mph in New Iberia hurling pieces of metal through the air, felling tree limbs, and blowing down a 50-foot-high sign at the Holiday Inn.

It tore roofs from homes and buildings, snapped trees, and knocked out power to an estimated 448,000 customers statewide. Approximately 1,300 homes and businesses in Lafayette and New Orleans lost phone service.

It also flooded much of Montegut, around 40 miles southwest of New Orleans.

"I'd say right now at least 75 percent of the town got water in it," said Spencer Rhodes, the fire chief in the town of 4,000, where water cascaded through at least three breaks in a hurricane-protection levee.

Rescue crews in big National Guard trucks evacuated 500 to 600 Montegut residents who had failed to heed calls for evacuation.

NATION BRIEF

Prisoners tell of further attacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Walker Lindh and other Al Qaeda and Taliban prisoners told U.S. interrogators the Sept. 11 hijackings were supposed to be the first of three increasingly severe attacks against Americans. Their claims have not been corroborated, government officials said.

Lindh will be sentenced today, likely to 20 years in prison, for supplying services to the Taliban and carrying an explosive during commission of a felony. He heard some of the claims while serving in a 20-man Taliban infantry unit of Arabic speakers in Afghanistan, said people familiar with his account.

Authorities have gathered similar information from prisoners of various levels of the terrorist network. But the officials said the United States hasn't found specific plans for two additional large-scale attacks, and they suspect the claims could involve disinformation or folklore.

Letters to the Editor

Speaker has agenda

On Sept. 20, columnist Tom Friedman spoke at the IMU. Friedman said the source of Arab anger was the indignity that their countries were not as prosperous and democratic as the West and then ridiculed the idea that the United States had any role in suppressing democratic development in the Arab nations.

But an historical review of U.S. policy reveals a past that belies Friedman's statements:
 • 1944: A U.S. State Department memo refers to Middle Eastern oil as "one of the greatest material prizes in world history."

• 1948: George Kennan, the director of Policy Planning at the State Department, writes: "Our real task is ... to maintain this position of disparity [U.S. military-economic supremacy] ... We should cease to talk about ... unreal objectives such as human rights, the raising of the living standards, and democratization."
 • 1953: U.S. and British intelligence agents engineer the overthrow of an elected Iranian government (which is replaced by an absolute monarchy) who had threatened to nationalize oil resources.

• 1963: Another U.S.-supported coup in Iraq takes the life of Iraqi leader Abdul Kassem, who also wanted to nationalize oil resources. Kassem had previously overthrown an Iraqi monarchy and helped to found OPEC.
 • 1975: The Shah of Iran signs the Algiers Accord with Saddam Hussein. The CIA then refuses to help Kurdish refugees being massacred by Iraqi forces.
 • 1979: The United States begins arming and organizing Islamic fundamentalists in Afghanistan, drawing the Soviets into an Afghan quagmire. Ten years later, Afghanistan falls into the hands of Muslim fanatics.

• Spring 1991: The U.S. gives Saddam permission to violate the "no-fly" rule and use armed helicopters to put down a rebellion. National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft said the United States wanted a military coup to oust Saddam, not a popular uprising: "I envisioned a postwar government being a military government."
 Friedman is not ignorant of this history; he is a pro-government, pro-corporate propagandist and an imperialist.

He has been a zealous advocate of "bombing Iraq, over and over and over again." He has called on Israel to use even more brutal force to repress the Palestinians. And he has bragged that the United States will bomb countries back to the Dark Ages: "We will set your country back by pulverizing you."
 Friedman has exploited the 9/11 tragedy to misinform Americans and lead us toward unending conflict, repression, and war.

Focus on the issues

Recently, Chris Van Sickle responded to a letter by Jeremy Morrison about the House race between Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, and Julie Thomas (DI, Sept. 26). He offered some "objective facts," even after saying that he had known Thomas for many years. It turns out, however, he was not so objective.

Van Sickle asked if Leach had ever accepted PAC money in his career. No, he has not, even when he was a challenger like Thomas.

Editorial

The marketplace of ideas; why censorship isn't our ad policy

Two UI officials affiliated with the Stepping Up Project have recently called on The Daily Iowan to stop running bar ads. We're not going to do that, and as editor, I should explain why we won't "print less."

The ads are certainly a staple of our revenue as much as they are the insides of our sports pages. We receive approximately $320,000 of our $2.2 million budget annually from them. That's slightly more than the stipend we receive from UI student fees to deliver the paper to their doors. To put things in perspective, our printing bill from one year is approximately $600,000.

The officials say that while we criticize Stepping Up's ability to rein in problems associated with binge drinking, we do nothing to cure those problems ourselves. They say our approach is inherently hypocritical, that our editorial policy does not match our advertising policy.

I take that as a compliment. That is how newspapers are supposed to operate. It shows the freedom of the press is alive and well on the UI campus. Clearly, we are not the only newspaper that operates on that principle. Every great one does, too.

The New York Times will print articles that examine the negative effects of drug use on society. It will also publish a full page ad of the city's mayor, Michael Bloomberg, admitting to smoking marijuana.

Every newspaper and magazine in the country will accept car ads and also criticize the companies when their tires are faulty.

There is nothing hypocritical about such actions. The concept is called the marketplace of ideas. It is why people enjoy newspapers, because there is not only one point of view in the content. It is what makes newspapers interesting.

It is not a newspaper's job to police ads to which some people are opposed. It is a slippery slope because many, many ads offend some people. Profilers, for instance, hate Emma Goldman ads and vice-versa. The First Amendment guarantees the right to print ads for legal businesses.

But constitutionality aside, we are not operating on a grant specifically for the purpose of battling problem drinking. We are an independent business that aims to train future journalists and put out an interesting newspaper daily. We give out approximately $50,000 in scholarships to students every year, and pay 80 students to put out the paper every day. We are also the only student newspaper in the country to deliver to students' doors every morning.

To meet our rising costs, we have relied on advertising revenue from local businesses for 135 years. It happens that many businesses at the heart of the UI campus are bars.

That does point to a problem that needs to be addressed. Our editorial board has debated these issues repeatedly, at length. We criticize Stepping Up and offer better ways to operate because we act as the voice of students. Frankly, we feel that is something that has been ignored throughout the whole Stepping Up campaign.

The thing lost in the debate is that students' binge drinking habits should not be blamed on newspaper ads. Instead, it is time to preach personal responsibility to students. When it comes down to it, if everyone made sure he or she did not drink too much, binge-drinking would not be a problem — even if the front page was a daily full-page ad for 50-cent pitchers of beer.

The UI would do better to look at its own policies rather than those of the DI. The university does have control over its parking lots, which will fill up with thousands of drinkers of all ages and sizes this weekend before and during the football game.

How many of those beer bongs will people slam this weekend on UI property?

Slowing down for the fiesta

Although I was delighted to return to the land of free refills (the United States) after traveling through Europe this summer, I realized I was quite reluctant to leave behind a culture that had proved to me what was beautiful in life.

After digesting the idea that I had evolved into an individual awakened to the phenomenal things that exist in our chaotic lives, I immediately became angry with myself and thought it was ridiculous that I had to cross the ocean to learn such a significant lesson. After much contemplation, though, I have realized that it was crucial to remove myself from my own culture in order to get a universal perspective that allowed me to understand how privileged this world truly is.

I lived in a quiet city on the Mediterranean on the coast of Spain. I observed a look of tranquility in the eyes of the people that passed me in the streets. I never remember seeing people drag their feet. People laughed longer and louder. Babies did not scream as much; they merely sat back and smiled. Young people held hands and never cared if people saw them kissing. Old women held their heads high, knowing they were still beautiful. And even though the sunshine was brilliant there day after day, I always heard people in the streets commenting about the gorgeous weather.

In the month of June, the entire city celebrates the arrival of summer with a weeklong party. I had never seen such festivities or happiness that could unite a whole city. The mother in the family that I lived with attempted to explain the significance of the holiday to me.

For an entire year before our week of celebration, each neighborhood is busy creating enormous floats that we will honor in the coming of sunshine and glorious weather, she said.

"What?" I asked, horrified. "A whole year before? How do they have time for that?"

She smiled and looked down, shaking her head. She laughed, lit a cigarette, and pushed up her sleeves.

KATHERINE PETERSON

They spend thousands of dollars on each individual float and put all of their energy into them. "The floats represent the people and their dedication to their tradition," she explained.

"Thousands of dollars?" I shouted.

She nodded and smiled. I sat perplexed at the kitchen table and was silent for a moment. Our professor had explained that the floats were created and then burned to the ground at midnight on the last night of the celebration.

She explained that the floats represent life and its delicacy, and the fires symbolize destruction that can end a life so suddenly. She talked to me about how it is crucial to put all of your energy into your existence and to live each day as though it might be your last. She went on to describe her most amazing conversations with people and her relationships with others who had only been in her life a single afternoon. The entire time she spoke, she smiled to herself and looked back to days I was unable to see even in my own life.

I honestly think I was quiet for a week. If you know me, that is an incredible amount of time. I spent the week of the celebrations thinking of our conversation. I was ashamed that money and time had been my primary concerns regarding their cultural tradition. I began to think about what made me laugh and cry and smile. I realized that there were certainly things in my life that could not be priced. The more I thought of those days, the more my smile grew. I realized I had been looking for the wrong thing. My happiness was directly under my nose. I learned that the wrong things appeared right in the life I lived back home, whether my culture or my childhood or my own decisions had contributed to that belief. It was time to change. It was time to listen. It was time to really open my eyes. I sat back and looked at the clouds for a couple of hours, forgetting that I had a composition to write for the next day in class.

"Then from a remote part of his soul, from the past of his tired life, he heard a sound."

youth and elderly volunteer programs while maintaining high grades, judges said. Some candidates boasted a GPA above 4.0.

"I certainly wouldn't have run for queen if it were still determined solely by looks and popularity," Fuller said.

Fuller, who plays baritone in the UI Marching Band, said she looks forward to riding in a convertible during the parade rather than lugging around her cumbersome instrument.

"It's about recognition of achievements," said Harlan, the former president of the Medicus Pre-Medical Society.

To qualify, candidates had to be full-time UI students, seniors, and have a GPA of at least 2.962. The candidates were self-nominated.

The panel of four judges was Shelton, journalism program associate Kate Corcoran, Chuck Green, the vice president for Public Safety, and UI Student Government Vice President Matt Blizek.

Fuller Trotzig Wellman Wolfe

Brooks Diggelmann Harlan Newland

Sixty-eight students turned in résumés, two letters of recommendations, a list of student activities, and answered questions in the form of a personal statement. Judges cut the field to 14 candidates, who endured a day-long session of back-to-back interviews.

"It was surprised how much I enjoyed talking with candidates," Green said. "It was interesting to see how [students] spend their time outside academics."

Blacks ready to select queen, king

BY PHIL DAVIDSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

To give black students a better opportunity to celebrate the UI Homecoming, the Black Student Union will crown its own Homecoming king and queen today.

"We want everybody to know that there is a black population on campus," said former Black Student Union President Gia Mason.

This year's applicants for queen are UI seniors Sheree Rawlins and Bethany Miller and sophomore Zahra Collins. UI junior Brandon Campbell is the only Homecoming king candidate.

Mason said applicants must hand in an essay of 100 words or fewer on why they are qualified for the honor. Candidates must also take a black-history test, as well as undergo a formal interview by the judges, the most important part of the process. Aside from looking for such formal interview criteria as appearance and eye contact, candidates are also asked to give a quote they find important.

Rawlins used the quote, "The world is full of hundreds of languages, but a smile speaks them all." Rawlins, who plans on attending law school next year, describes herself as a person who smiles all the time.

"If you smile at someone, that says so much," she said.

Judges look for extracurricular activities as well as involvement in the overall community. Miller, who quoted from Frederick Douglas — "Without struggle there is no progress" — is on the Campus Activity Board and is involved with the 24/7 ministry group.

Campbell is the president of the UI chapter of the National Association of Black Journalists, as well as editor of Nuru Newspaper. In addition, he is the owner and CEO of Oneofakind Entertainment, a media-production company he started in his hometown of Little Rock, Ark.

"The best part about the award is being considered the best representative possible," he said.

During the interview, candidates must address how they will help promote the Black Student Union as Homecoming king and queen. Last year's king and queen sold Valentine's Day cards and balloons to raise money for the union, Mason said.

Rawlins applied for both the Black Student Union and university-wide Homecoming king and queen. Campbell said he may run for UI position next year. "It just might happen," he said.

This year's judges are Mason, BSU President Krystal Jossell, and UI senior Guinevere Banks.

Ways the Iowa men's basketball team can still have a positive season

• Try, through a variety of meta-physical experiments, to actually freeze Hell over.

• Go back in time and change their mistakes with the help of Michael J. Fox and a beat-up DeLorian.

• Drive to their games in a multi-colored hippie van and repeatedly sing the chorus to "Sunshine Day."

• Keep in mind that at least they won't be in the NIT to lose in the first round again.

• Videotape the season and sell the footage to CBS. Viewers will be enthralled as another player leaves the team each week.

• Hibernate for the winter.

• Buy Josh Kimm a pair of those shoes that make Lil' Bow Wow a star in Like Mike.

• Attend the women's games.

• Remember that, as long as they try their best, they all are winners. Unless, of course, they lose.

Rangers place John Rocker on waivers

ARLINGTON, Texas — John Rocker is looking for a job. The Texas Rangers placed the one-time star closer on waivers Thursday for the purpose of his unconditional release.

Rocker is 13-22 with 88 saves in 278 major league appearances with Atlanta, Cleveland, and Texas.

In Rocker's first full major league season, he had 38 saves in 1999, when Atlanta went to the World Series. The Braves went to the playoffs again in 2000, when Rocker had 24 saves.

But Rocker hasn't been a dominating pitcher since a Sports Illustrated article before the 2000 season in which he made disparaging remarks about gays, minorities, and others.

The Braves traded Rocker to Cleveland during the 2001 season, and he went 3-7 with four saves and a 5.45 ERA in 38 games.

Volleyball team takes road trip for redemption

BY ALI NOLLER
THE DAILY IOWAN

Despite slumping to last place in the Big Ten standings after losing two conference matches last weekend, Rita Buck-Crockett remains optimistic about the future of her Hawkeyes.

"We played the No. 17 team in the country very closely," Buck-Crockett said of Iowa's outing with Michigan State on Sept. 28, when the Hawkeyes lost 3-1. "This is the best team I've put on the court at Iowa."

The Hawkeyes' coach, in her fifth season at Iowa, said the team's outing with the Spartans was one of the best matches in Iowa City in recent years, in terms of the level of play of both teams.

The Hawkeyes came back from a 2-0 deficit at intermission to dominate game three against Michigan State, winning 30-19 after a 20-9 run. The Hawkeyes held the Spartans to their lowest point total of the season in the match.

As Iowa continues the Big Ten season, the task for Buck-Crockett's team is to take the level of play exhibited against Michigan State and build on it.

The forecast for Iowa continues to rumble with bursts of blue-ribbon competition, with the 9-5 Northwestern Wildcats next on tap for the Hawkeyes.

Iowa travels to Evanston, Ill., tonight for a 7 p.m. game against the No. 3 team in the Big Ten. The Wildcats started their conference season with wins over Illinois and Purdue. Tonight the Hawkeyes will look to hone their serving skills and contain Wildcat junior Erika Lange, who leads Northwestern with 4.07 kills per game at a .365 attack percentage. Buck-Crockett, who has been forced to make numerous lineup changes in recent weeks because of inconsistent play by her big guns, will push the team to pick up at the level it left off in its match with the Spartans.

"I want the girls fighting for their positions," Buck-Crockett said, "and not slacking off once they earn them. They need to come out hard, ready to compete all the time."

The Hawkeyes netted strong conference starts from both Renee Hill and Jitka Stehnova, who opened the Big Ten season with back-to-back double-doubles. Hill, who leads the team in kills, collected 32 kills in her first two Big Ten matches.

Sophomore Pam Kavadas leads the team in digs with 3.51 per game, and her per-game average also ranks in the top three in the Big Ten.

The Hawkeyes' task will not be over at the culmination of tonight's game — Iowa faces No. 14 Wisconsin Saturday afternoon in Madison, with the Badgers bringing a 10-3 record to the court.

Despite the advantages both Northwestern and Wisconsin maintain over the Hawkeyes, Iowa expects to let the play on the court do the talking.

"Every weekend, we know we will play a top-20 team," Buck-Crockett said. "We have seven teams in the Big Ten that are in the top 30 in the nation, so if we want to compete, we need to maintain the level we played [Sept. 28] — and then step it up."

No. 24 Hawkeyes can't recall positives from last meeting with Purdue

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

There was no way for any member of the Iowa football team to put a positive spin on what occurred the last time the Hawkeyes met Purdue, just as there has been no easy way to forget the 23-14 loss a year ago in West Lafayette.

"It's in the back of our minds that they did some good things against us and we didn't do anything good against them," Iowa center Bruce Nelson said.

Nelson and the No. 24 Hawkeyes will get the chance to atone for last year's poor performance against the Boilermakers when the two teams meet in Iowa City on Saturday. It will mark the 75th game between the two.

Iowa entered the 74th meeting a year ago with a perfect 3-0 record and returned humbled and embarrassed after turning in what many team members felt was their worst performance of the season.

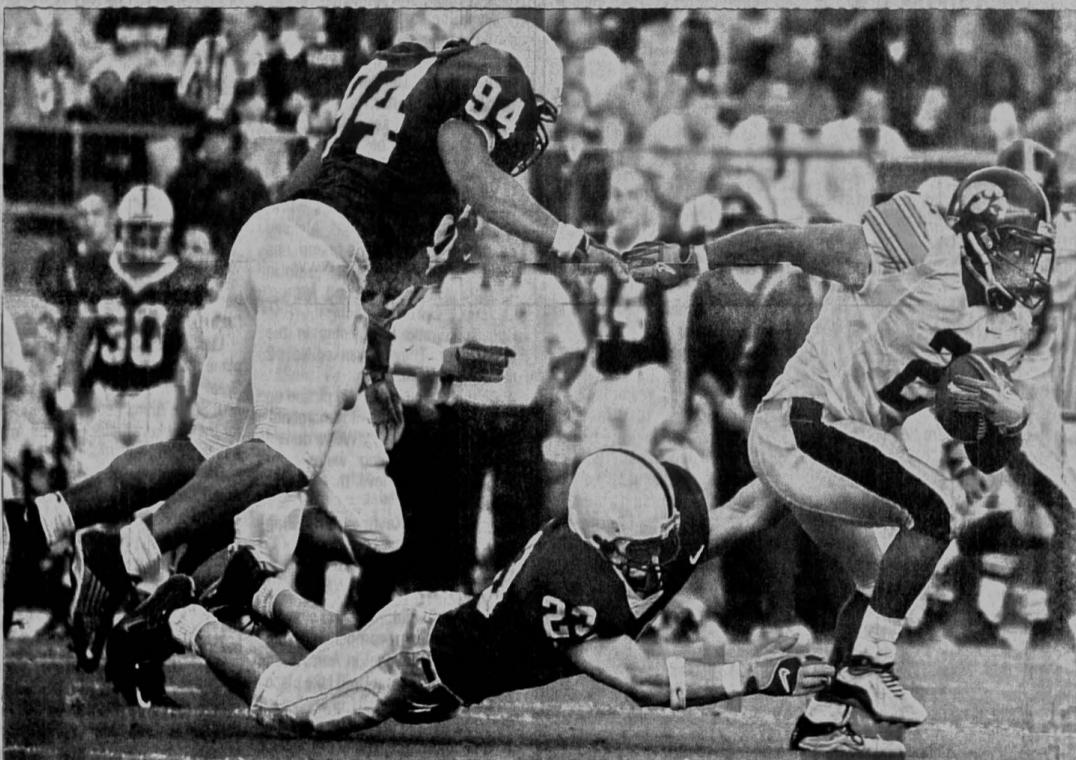

Some of the low-lights:
• Iowa managed just 33 yards rushing on 34 carries, with Ladell Betts held to a season-low nine yards and the team to just 207 yards of total offense.

• Iowa's vaunted offensive line collapsed, allowing five sacks for a loss of 25 yards.

• Quarterback Kyle McCann had an interception returned 86 yards by Ashante Woodyard for the first score of the day.

• Purdue moved just a combined 13 yards on nine plays on two drives because of terrific field position, scoring a pair of

Rough Big Ten start motivates soccer team for weekend

BY KATIE LOW
THE DAILY IOWAN

Two fierce Big Ten matchups will face the Iowa soccer team this weekend when they take on Minnesota (6-4-0) and Wisconsin (4-5-2) at home.

The Hawkeyes (5-4-0) are still waiting for a victory against a Big Ten foe. The team dropped three-consecutive games against No. 14 Michigan, Michigan State, and Northwestern.

Last weekend, Iowa captured a 1-0 defensive victory over nonconference rival Illinois State. Sophomore Katelyn Quinn scored the lone goal; she leads the team with five.

Minnesota will come to Iowa City with a 4-1 series lead over Iowa. Last season was the Hawkeyes' first-ever victory over the Golden Gophers. They beat Michigan last week in a huge 4-0 upset of the nationally ranked team.

"We have to be ready for Minnesota," coach Carla Baker said. "They're coming off a very big win against Michigan. We need to be able to go into the game and counter their emotions."

Junior Rachel Roth leads Minnesota with eight goals on 45 shots, three of those as game-winners.

Freshman Karli Kopietz tends goal for the Gophers, allowing only seven goals on the season. Kopietz boasts an impressive 50 saves and four shutouts, starting all 10 games so far this year.

Taking on Wisconsin will be another daunting task for the Hawkeyes. The Badgers claim a 3-2 series over Iowa.

Wisconsin fell to Michigan in a close 3-2 loss last weekend. However, the Badgers also beat Michigan State, handing the Spartans their first Big Ten loss of the season and recording Wisconsin's own first Big Ten victory of the year.

Jenny Kundert leads the Badgers with five goals on 25 attempts and five assists.

Wisconsin's goal is tended by senior Kelly Conway. Conway allowed 13 goals,

HAWKEYE BRIEFS

Women's tennis plays in Indiana tourney

This weekend: The Iowa women's tennis team travels to the Hoosier Classic Invitational in Bloomington, Ind. UI player Cassie Haas returns to this tournament as a defending champion. Three Big Ten teams — Iowa, Ohio State, and Indiana — and three Big 12 teams — Kansas, Kansas State, and Missouri — will compete in a hidden dual-match format. This means each Big Ten team will compete against each Big 12 team once during the three-day tournament. Competition begins at 9 a.m. at Indiana University's Varsity Courts.
Last weekend: The Hawkeyes brought home a championship and a runner-up spot from last weekend's Furman Fall Classic. Sophomore Gloria Okino won the flight five competition, posting a 3-0 record. Cassie Haas, Steffi Hoch, Deni Alexandrova, and freshman Chelsea Glynn all left the tournament with respectable 2-1 singles records.
On Indiana: The doubles team of Karie Schulke and Linda Tran are touted as the team to watch this weekend. The pair of Hoosiers was ranked in the ITA preseason rankings at No. 13. The pair is building momentum after coming off a second place finish at the ITA Summer National Championships this past summer. Last weekend at the Bronco Invitational Sarah Batty posted a 3-1 finish at the number one singles position.
On Ohio State: The Buckeyes' Erica Fisk is the tournament's highest ranked player at No. 69 and is expected to be tough competition. Fisk and partner Meaghan Colville were the only doubles pair from Ohio State to advance to the quarterfinals last weekend at the Cissie Leary Invitational.
On Kansas: Ranked No. 37, Kansas is the highest-ranked team of the tournament. The Jay Hawks opened their season Sept. 20 at the Tulsa Hurricane Invitational. Emily Haylock enters this weekend's tournament with a 2-1 singles record and an undefeated doubles record (3-0).
On Kansas State: The No. 54

Wildcats kick off their fall play this weekend at the Hoosier Invitational.

K-State welcomes back five lettermen, including senior Petra Sedlmajerova. Her awards include 2002 Big 12 No. 3 Singles Position Runner-up and 2001 All-Big 12 Singles first team.
On Missouri: Mizzou finished last year at No. 70 in the ITA rankings. The Tigers will be playing without the No. 48 doubles team of Urska Juric and Katka Sevcikova; the Tiger tandem will be attending the All-American Championship in Los Angeles.
Coach's comment: "We're working on getting better at doubles. I'm really pleased at how we're playing individually. We're moving in the right direction," Paul Wardlaw said.

Four men's racketeers to compete in Tenn.

This weekend: Four UI men's tennis players will head to Chattanooga, Tenn. to compete in the ITA All-American Tournament. Pete Rose, Hunter Skogman, and Justin Gaard began competition yesterday in the prequalifying round. Teammate Stuart Waters will join them Oct. 8 for the qualifying round. The three-part tournament features over 350 competitors, including members from heavyweights Georgia and Stanford and Big Ten champs Illinois. Oct. 4-7 is the prequalifying round that whittles 256 singles players and 128 doubles teams into brackets of 64 singles players and 32 doubles pairs. The main draw of 64 and 32 begins Oct. 10.
On Iowa: The Hawkeyes are coming off a disappointing start to the season at the Virginia Invitational Sept. 20-22. Rose, Gaard, and Skogman will all look to record their first singles win of the fall season. Waters, in his second All-American appearance, looks to build off a good showing at last week's Baylor Intercollegiate. The Hawkeye senior went 2-1 at the tournament to advance to the round of 16.
On UGA: The Bulldogs will send two players to the All-American tournament. Hard hitters Bo Hodge (No. 79) and Nicolas Boeker are ranked No. 6 in doubles. Both will also be competing in the singles draw.

On Stanford: The Cardinal finished at No. 10 last season, and the strength of the program continues this year.

Scott Lipsky and David Martin are the No. 1 doubles seed at this weekend's tournament. The duo advanced to the finals last year at Stone Mountain, Ga. and were finalists at last year's NCAA Doubles Championships. Martin is also seeded No. 9 in the main draw, in which both he and Lipsky will compete.
On Illinois: The Fighting Illini send the most players to the tournament, with nine. In the prequalifying round Ryler DeHeart, Pramond Dabir, Evan Zedar, and Conner Murnighan will all see action. No. 88 Chris Martin will be added to the qualifying draw of 64.
On Minnesota: Seven Gophers will travel to Tennessee this weekend, including No. 51 Aleksey Zharinov. Joining his are teammates Thomas Haug, Avery Ticer (both in the qualifying round), and Manuel Lievano. Chris Wettengel, Eric Robertson, and Clay Estes in the prequalifier. They are ranked No. 12 nationally.
Coach's comment: "We picked up a lot at the Virginia tournament," Steve Houghton said. "We've done a lot more conditioning; we're competing at a higher level than a week ago."

Men's golf swings into action in Ann Arbor

This weekend: The Hawkeyes' men's golf team competes in the Wolverine Invitational in Ann Arbor, Mich. The tournament will take place on the par-71 University of Michigan Golf Course. The first 36 holes of the 54-hole tournament will be played on Saturday, with a shotgun start at 8:30 a.m. Play will resume Oct. 6 at 8 a.m.
On Iowa: The Hawkeyes competed in the Northern Intercollegiate Sept. 29-30, finishing seventh in a field of 16 teams. Leading Iowa this weekend will be seniors Mike Tapper and Aaron Krueger. Tapper set team records at the Northern Intercollegiate for lowest 54-hole and 36-hole scores, and finished third overall. Krueger finished in a tie for 20th.
On the competition: The field

includes 16 teams, including the Big Ten's Indiana, Michigan State, and Wisconsin.

Iowa led Michigan State for much of the Northern Intercollegiate, but the Spartans passed the Hawkeyes in the third round and finished third. Indiana finished in a fifth-place tie, and Wisconsin placed 11th in the tournament.
Coach's comment: "We've had very competitive qualifiers," Terry Anderson said. "My players are getting better at playing with some heat on them. We have to go out and beat as many teams as we can. That's what it's all about."

Cross-country women run at Notre Dame

This weekend: The Iowa women's cross-country team travels to South Bend, Ind., on Friday to compete in the Notre Dame Invitational. The 5,000 meter race will begin at 4:15 p.m. at the Burke Memorial Golf Course.
Last competition: The Hawkeyes placed 24th out of 26 teams at the Great American Race in Charlotte, N.C. Sarah Arens was the top finisher for the Hawkeyes, placing 108th with a time of 20:32.6.
On Iowa: Iowa's lineup for the meet includes sophomores Katie Donlon and Michelle Sokol; juniors Sarah Arens, Atalie Barber and Georgia Millward; and seniors Michelle Lahann and Ericka Roberts. Arens has been the top finisher for the Hawkeyes in every meet that she has run in.
On the competition: The Hawkeyes will meet Big Ten teams for the first time this season. No. 18 Wisconsin will run along with Indiana, Purdue, Ohio State, Illinois, and Northwestern. There will be 25 teams competing, including two top-10 teams (No. 3 Stanford and No. 5 Notre Dame).
Coach's comment: "It's a great course to run on," Wayne Angel said. "I think we are going to have a breakthrough and I hope we finish in the top 15. They are going to run fast and give it their best. If we execute our plans, we will be able to break into the Midwest regional polls."

Badgers face first test tomorrow

BY ANDREA SZULSZTEYN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wisconsin has gotten off to one of its best starts under coach Barry Alvarez.

The No. 19 Badgers are 5-0 heading into their Big Ten opener against No. 20 Penn State on Saturday. Wisconsin has started this well two other times — in 1993 when it went 6-0, and in 1998, when it went 9-0.

Both times, Wisconsin won the Big Ten.

Will a quick start in 2002 translate to the same success? The Nittany Lions certainly provide the biggest challenge so far this season.

Wisconsin, which already has matched its win total from last season, has beaten the likes of Northern Illinois, West Virginia, and UNLV. Penn State is the first ranked team the Badgers play this season.

"Big Ten season is what we are," Wisconsin linebacker Jeff Mack said.

Penn State (3-1) has not beaten Wisconsin since 1997, and Saturday's game has quickly become a must-win. The Nittany Lions trailed 23-0 to Iowa last week before rallying and sending the game to overtime.

They could not pull out the win, losing their conference opener 42-35. It was the second time this year Penn State has gotten off to a slow start. The Nittany Lions led Central Florida in their season opener 13-9 at halftime.

Another conference loss puts Penn State at 0-2 and at a major disadvantage for the Big Ten crown. Only once in the last 10 years has the conference champion had two losses.

It happened in 2000, when Michigan, Purdue, and Northwestern finished 6-2.

"We should be a better football team this week than we were going into the game last week," Penn State coach Joe Paterno said. "Whether we can play better, we will see."

IOWA BRIEF

Alford, Knight to meet again on the court

IOWA CITY (AP) — Steve Alford and Bob Knight could become coaching rivals again.

Alford, the Iowa basketball coach, said he has scheduled two games with Texas Tech, where Knight is the coach. Alford played for Knight at Indiana.

"It's going to be fun," Alford said. "Our systems are similar, and it will provide incredible exposure."

Alford said the teams would meet in the 2004-05 season at the United

Center in Chicago and the following season at American Airlines Arena in Dallas. Both games will be nationally televised, he said.

Alford has faced Knight only once since taking the Iowa job. In Knight's final season at Indiana, the Hoosiers beat Iowa, 74-71, in Bloomington, on Jan. 18, 2000.

The Iowa coach disclosed the Texas Tech games during a meeting with students on Tuesday night, only hours after sophomore guard Pierre Pierce was charged with third-degree sexual abuse and suspended from the team.

Redman has lead at LPGA worlds

VALLEJO, Calif. (AP) — Michele Redman shot a 7-under 65 Thursday at the Samsung World Championship and held a one-shot lead over Annika Sorenstam, who had her sixth hole-in-one as a professional.

Redman has two LPGA Tour victories, the last at the 2000 First Union Betsy King Classic. She tied for second twice this season, at the Kellogg-Keebler in June and Canadian Womens in August.

Sorenstam's 38 career wins include eight this year and the world's No. 1 player tied Redman for the lead with one swing of her 5-iron at the 185-yard 17th at Hiddenbrooke Golf Club.

"I told the ball to go into the hole," said Sorenstam, who had birdied No. 16 from 3 feet. "I couldn't see the ball, but when I saw the crowd jump up and down, I knew it went in."

Sorenstam hit her second shot into the water at the closing 497-yard par-5 and settled for a bogey that dropped her to 66.

Grace Park was third with a 67, while Cristie Kerr, Laura Diaz and Rosie Jones were another shot back. Three players, including Se Ri Pak, had 69s in the invitation-only tournament featuring the 20 top woman golfers.

Redman birdied No. 4 and then moved into the lead with birdies at Nos. 6 and 7. She had birdies on the first two holes of the back nine and then closed out the no-bogey round with birdies on 13, a chip-in, and 18.

"I've been playing pretty well since the middle of the year," Redman said. "I'd say a lot of it is that I started putting a lot better since I switched to the 2-ball putter. I took only 25 putts today and missed only four greens."

Redman reached the par-5 18th in two and left her 50-foot eagle putt just inches short for a tap-in birdie.

Park had five birdies on the back nine, including a 15-footer on No. 18 that got her within two shots of Redman.

With weather not much of a factor, Hiddenbrooke was not its usual frustrating self. Thirteen players shot par or better at the course in the San Francisco Bay area suburbs.

"You couldn't ask for better conditions," Park said. "It was a little cold in the morning, but it warmed up when my group got to the tee. There is just a little bit of wind coming in, but it wasn't enough to affect play."

MLB BRIEFS

Narron tops Brewers' manager prospect list

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jerry Narron is the first name on Doug Melvin's list to replace Jerry Royster, fired as manager of the Milwaukee Brewers after a franchise-worst 106-loss season.

That doesn't necessarily mean Narron, fired Tuesday by the Texas Rangers, is the leading candidate.

"I'm very fond of Jerry. We have a relationship I know would work well. I would say Jerry's a candidate," Melvin said Wednesday. "I talked to him last night. I said, 'I'll probably be in touch with you.' But I owe it to the organization and I owe it to myself to be in touch with other people, too."

Another name near the top of Melvin's wish list is Buck Showalter, an ESPN analyst who managed the Yankees and Diamondbacks and who played with Melvin in the minor leagues.

"I've got a call into Buck," Melvin said.

Melvin also said he wanted to talk to Oakland bench coach Ken Macha, one of the most sought-after managerial candidates in the major leagues.

The Athletics already have given Detroit and Chicago Cubs permission to talk to Macha after Oakland's best-of-five playoff series with Minnesota.

Melvin also mentioned Arizona bench coach Bob Melvin — no relation — who was the only outside candidate interviewed when Royster took over for the fired Davey Lopes on April 18 following the club's 3-12 start.

Royster is the sixth major league manager to lose his job this off-season.

Valentine announces desire to manage again

NEW YORK — The way Bobby Valentine sees it, his firing as manager of the New York Mets was fair treatment after his $95 million team finished in last place, 11 games under .500.

"We had plenty of talent," Valentine said Wednesday. "I was disappointed, I don't mind saying. And they were, too."

On the first day of the rest of his life, Valentine tried to be cheerful, comforted by the fact that he has $2.7 million left on his contract and that there are five managers' jobs open around the major leagues.

He immediately announced his candidacy for them.

"Sure, I'd love to manage again," he said. "I'm probably a slow learner. I hope I learned a lot. Maybe I was able to learn how to be better next time."

"Once it ends, there's a sense of relief. I have a bad feeling in my stomach. This is not the way I wanted it to end."

Speaking in his restaurant across the street from Shea Stadium, Valentine confirmed owner Fred Wilpon's opinion that there was something different about the manager's style this season.

"I think I didn't smile as much," Valentine said, "I think because there was not a lot to smile about. If I had anything I could do over, I would smile and get it lighter, look for some levity. It wasn't there."

In its place was a difficult season punctuated by predicaments — an underachieving lineup, intramural animosities, and finally a drug scandal, in which Newsday reported that seven Mets players had smoked marijuana this season.

Dolphins, Patriots battle for supremacy in weak AFC East

BY DAVE GOLDBERG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

A week ago, the Miami Dolphins and New England Patriots were unbeaten, looking ahead to this week's meeting in Florida.

Now both are 3-1, but the game is still huge in the AFC East, where, with the early demise of the Jets, these two look to battle it out.

The Dolphins are favored by three, the standard award for home-field advantage. But their 17-game home winning streak in August and September is no longer relevant — this is October.

What's relevant is Ricky Williams. The Patriots were superb in their first two games, then allowed 180 yards rushing to Kansas City's Priest Holmes and 217 more to LaDanian Tomlinson in last Sunday's loss in San Diego.

Duval leads after Michelob opener

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — With his passion for golf renewed by his Ryder Cup experience and his game in a better state than it has been for some time, David Duval once again made Kingsmill Golf Club look easy.

Duval shot a 7-under 64 Thursday — his best round of the season — and shared a two-stroke lead after the first-round lead in the Michelob Championship.

"Out there playing last week at the Ryder Cup and today, I felt like me," Duval said. The intense competition against Europe, he said, restored "some passion that I found I had been missing for quite some time."

Hidemichi Tanaka, at 5-foot-6 and 132 pounds likely the smallest player in the field, birdied three of the last four holes for a 64. He missed a right-to-left, 11-foot birdie putt on the par-4 18th.

"I was thinking if I put this in, I will be on top of it and I knew I would come to the interview room and I was wondering what I would speak about in here, that pressure," Tanaka said through a translator.

Tanaka, who has been in 28 PGA events this year as a rookie, had eight birdies and one bogey — the par-4 10th — and said bouncing back right away with a birdie at the par-4 11th kept him going.

Duval tried building on his experience in England, where he posted a 1-1-1 record for the U.S. team in its loss to Europe and felt like he played well.

With his back feeling better, a nagging shoulder injury finally healed, and his game coming around, Duval is planning to play in three or four events the rest of the year — and anticipating doing great things.

It doesn't hurt that he earned his first career victory here in 1997, repeated as champion the next year and would love to win the final PGA event played here. Next year, the course will host the less expensive LPGA Tour.

"The thinking I have is I can clean up this year with three wins pretty easy, that I can turn what's been a bad golf year into another multiple win season. That's how I feel about golf right now," he said.

Duval hasn't won since the 2001 British Open, but he got a good start on the 6,853-yard River Course, making seven birdies and an eagle against two bogeys.

Knicks off to rough start

BY CHRIS SHERIDAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, S.C. — New York Knicks President Scott Layden refused on Tuesday to discuss details of Latrell Sprewell's hand injury, just one of the problems the team faced as it opened training camp.

While most of the team went through the first of two-a-day practices, Sprewell was in New York having surgery to repair a displaced fracture below his right pinkie. He will wear a cast for a month and be sidelined at least six weeks.

Sprewell's injury caught the team by surprise. He came to practice Monday with a swollen right hand and complained that it hurt. X-rays revealed a broken bone.

It was unclear whether Sprewell gave the Knicks a detailed explanation on the cause. The team refused to make Sprewell available on media day Monday, and neither Layden nor coach Don Chaney offered details.

Layden, pressed on how Sprewell injured himself, would not or could not provide an answer.

"What we know is he banged the hand two weeks ago. That's the comment," Layden said.

Layden also would not comment on whether Sprewell had an obligation to notify the team when the injury occurred.

Sprewell's agent, Robert Gist, did not return calls. A day earlier, Gist was unaware Sprewell injured his hand.

Also missing was Allan Houston, who was not at practice for personal reasons. Center Kurt Thomas was in Connecticut for his arraignment. He is charged with assaulting his wife during an argument over a laptop computer.

A judge ordered Thomas to stay away from the couple's home and to avoid all contact with his wife. He will be allowed one trip home with a police escort to collect his belongings.

The absence of three starters was of no help to Chaney, who is trying to install a more up-tempo offense and a defense emphasizing backcourt pressure.

Shandon Anderson has emerged as the probable replacement for Sprewell. Power forward Clarence Weatherspoon could move over to the small forward spot to play alongside Thomas and Antonio McDyess.

McDyess went through his first hard practice in more than a year and said his surgically repaired left knee felt fine.

He said his goal is to average 20 points and 10 rebounds for a team that has lacked a low-post offensive presence since Patrick Ewing was traded.

Cards win game two; Braves even series

LOS ANGELES TIMES

PHOENIX—The St. Louis Cardinals should have been full of themselves after sweeping the first two games of their National League Division Series against the Arizona Diamondbacks, but it just hasn't been that kind of year.

They outlasted 23-game winner Curt Schilling in Game 2 and pushed the defending world champions to the brink of elimination with a 2-1 victory Thursday at Bank One Ballpark. Then, as it has been throughout a season of off-field tragedy and on-field adversity, the Cardinals found themselves faced with another major setback.

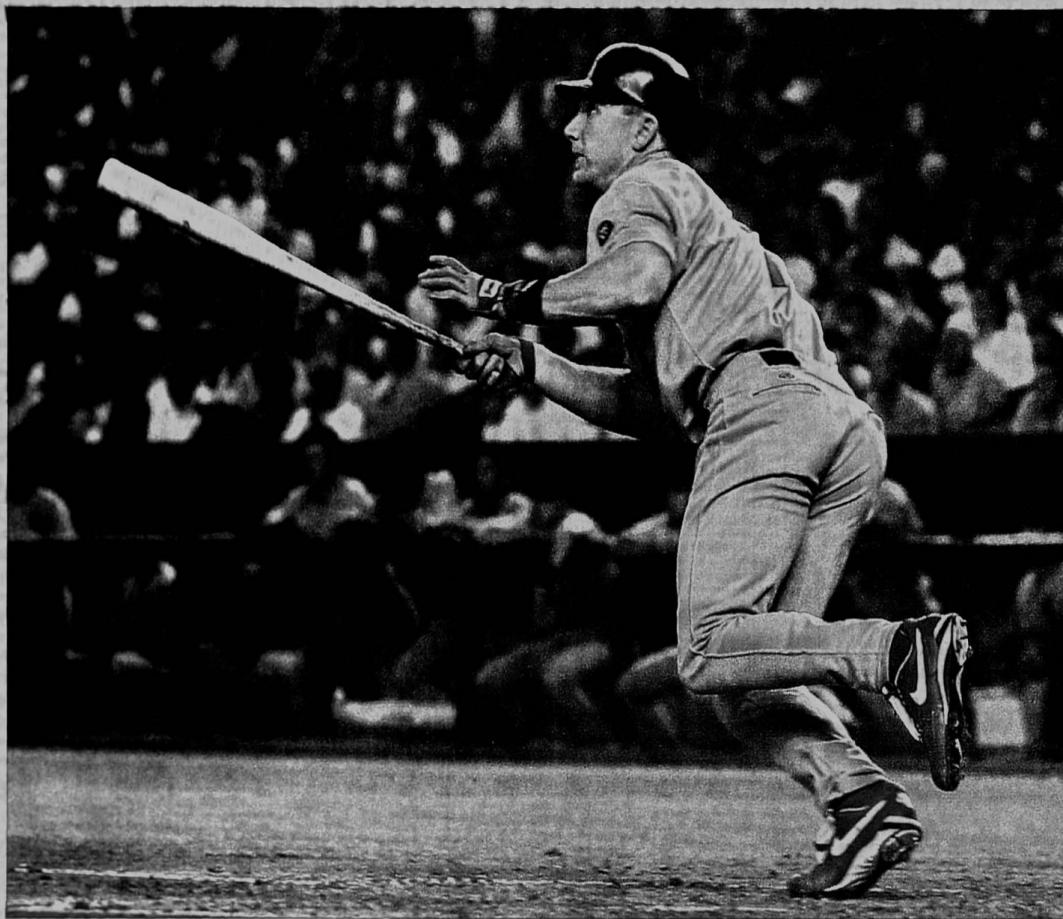

Third baseman Scott Rolen suffered an injury to his left shoulder late in the game that could knock him out of the postseason. He was blindsided by base runner Alex Cintron in the seventh inning and left the field with a member of the Cardinals' medical staff supporting his left arm.

"I think there is a chance that he might have played his last game," Cardinals Manager Tony La Russa said.

The injury was listed as a sprained shoulder. Rolen underwent X-rays during the game, but more conclusive tests will have to be performed today after the Cardinals return to St. Louis. Even in a best-case scenario, club officials consider him doubtful for the remainder of the division series.

What a loss. Rolen gave the Cardinals a huge lift after he came over in a midseason trade with the Philadelphia Phillies, and his long-term presence on the team was secured last week when he agreed to an eight-year, $90 million contract extension. He befooled up an already potent St. Louis lineup and was swinging the bat very well in the first postseason series of his career.

"I'm kind of out there," La Russa said after the game. "I have a warm feeling about the way we played today, but I'm sick to my stomach about Scott. The news probably isn't too good." Left-hander Chuck Finley pitched 6½ shutout innings to out-duel Schilling, but he left the game when his pitching hand cramped up in the seventh. He attributed the muscle spasm near his thumb to fatigue and appeared confident that he would be able to make his next start.

J.D. Drew of the Cardinals watches as his third-inning home run off Arizona Diamondback Curt Schilling goes over the fence in St. Louis' 2-1 game two win. The Cardinals won the first two games in Arizona, and need one win at home to move on to the League Championship Series.

Schilling allowed only a bases-empty home run to J.D. Drew in a strong seven-inning performance before leaving for a pinch hitter. The Diamondbacks came back to tie the score in the eighth on an RBI double by Quinton McCracken, but the Cardinals won the game on a run-scoring single by utilityman Miguel Cairo in the top of the ninth.

Braves 7, Giants 3

ATLANTA (AP) — Kevin Millwood is back, and so are the Atlanta Braves.

Millwood allowed only three hits in six innings and the Braves evened their NL division series with San Francisco at one game apiece, beating the Giants 7-3 Thursday night.

Filling in for Greg Maddux, Millwood earned his first postseason win since 1999 with a dominating performance, which neatly summed up his recovery from two dismal seasons.

Millwood, who threw only 72 pitches, was replaced by a pinch-hitter shortly after he hit the ground on a fielding play at first base. He wasn't hurt.

Barry Bonds went 1-for-4, hitting a massive, meaningless homer off John Smoltz in the ninth. It was only his second postseason homer, the other coming off Atlanta's Tom Glavine in the 1992 NL championship series.

The Braves wasted no time bouncing back from an 8-5 loss in Game 1. Chipper Jones had an RBI single in the first, and Atlanta went ahead for good when Javy Lopez and Vinny Castilla led off the second with back-to-back homers off Kirk Rueter.

Mark DeRosa, making his first postseason start, doubled his first time up and came in to score on Rafael Furcal's bloop single, capping a three-run second.

TENNIS BRIEF

New era in Davis Cup as old stars move on

(AP) — Don't look for old pals Pete Sampras and Andre Agassi on the United States Davis Cup team when America resumes competition for the tennis trophy next February.

That era is over, U.S. captain Patrick McEnroe said.

"It's time to put that in the rearview mirror," McEnroe said Thursday after the United States drew Croatia in next year's opening round.

"It's time to pass the baton completely. It's time for all of us to go forward and stop asking if these guys are going to play. It's time to move on."

It's likely that McEnroe will select young players like James Blake and Andy Roddick, who shared the singles responsibilities when the United States lost 3-2 to France in this year's Cup semifinals at Paris. Roddick lost both his matches, while Blake split his singles matches and won the doubles with Todd Martin.

Also on McEnroe's list of possible players are youngsters like Taylor Dent and Mardy Fish. He could tap twins Bill and Mike Bryan for doubles duties.

Croatia is likely to have former Wimbledon champion Goran Ivanisevic back for the matches against the United States, set for Feb. 7-9. Ivanisevic, who had left shoulder surgery last May and has not played any tennis since April, began training this week.

Ivanisevic called the United States a "very attractive rival — and also a very good and dangerous rival," and said he hoped to play, at least in doubles. "However, with or without me, it will be very hard to beat" the Americans, he said.

Also expected to play for Croatia are Ivan Ljubicic, ranked No. 37 in the world, and Mario Ancic, who defeated Roger Federer in the first round at Wimbledon this year.

McEnroe said it would be good to have Ivanisevic return for the Cup matches.

"I'd love to see him back," he said. "It would be great for the game. It will be huge, regardless."

The draw places the United States on the road throughout the Cup quest, and McEnroe thought the experience gained by playing the semifinals in Paris would help his young team.

New baseball labor pact tough on drug convictions

BY RONALD BLUM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Drug possession convictions will lead to specified penalties under baseball's new labor contract.

The drug prevention program, the first one agreed to by players and owners since 1985, was included in the "memorandum of understanding" signed Tuesday by the sides. Copies were released Wednesday.

It calls for suspensions of 15- to 30 days for a first offense, 30- to 90 days for a second conviction, a one-year penalty for a third, and a two-year suspension for a fourth.

For players convicted five or more times, the commissioner would determine the level of discipline. If the commissioner doesn't want to suspend players, he has the option to fine them without pay, with the maximum amount increasing with each offense.

Players convicted of the sale or distribution of prohibited substances face suspensions of 60-to-90 days and $100,000 fines for a first offense and two years for a second offense.

A player who has not been in the drug program who voluntarily admits to a problem is put into treatment without penalty.

"If you get caught, you're given a grace period, a chance to rectify the problem," Anaheim's Scott Schoeneweis said. "I think that's a good thing."

Darryl Strawberry pleaded no contest to cocaine possession charges in May 1999. Under this agreement, he would've been subject to discipline.

Owners and the union have spent more than two decades squabbling over drug-related penalties, with arbitrators overturning or shortening suspensions imposed on Ferguson Jenkins, Steve Howe, Willie Wilson, LaMarr Hoyt, Pascual Perez, and Tony Phillips.

"I'd like them to test as stringent as they can," the Angels' Scott Spiezio said.

Some have criticized the agreement because it does not ban supplements and doesn't call for unannounced, random, year-round testing by an independent agency that can impose penalties.

Marijuana use and possession is covered separately in the agreement, with players facing fines of up to $15,000 but no suspensions.

A first positive test for steroid use would result in treatment and a second in a 15-day suspension or fine of up to $10,000.

The length of suspensions would increase to 25 days for a third positive test, 50 days for a fourth, and one year for a fifth. These suspensions also would be without pay.

Each player will be given two announced tests for illegal steroids next year during spring training or the regular season as part of a survey, and both tests will take place within a week.

If more than 5 percent test positive for steroids, "program" testing starts the following year and continues until less than 2.5 percent test positive in two consecutive years combined. If there is program testing in 2004, owners can conduct up to 240 additional random tests.

Over-the-counter supplements such as androstenedione are not banned, but if more than 10 percent of players in a year test positive for them on the first test but negative on the followup, a joint union-management health committee may prohibit their use. The committee's vote must be unanimous.

Players will not be tested randomly for drugs of abuse such as cocaine, LSD, PCP, marijuana, opiates, and Ecstasy, but they can be tested if a health committee agrees there is "just cause."

If a player is in an inpatient treatment program during the season, he gets his full salary for first 30 days of treatment, and half his salary for days 31-60.

The labor deal, which expires Dec. 19, 2006, changes the rule regarding tampering, allowing clubs a 72-hour window to talk with players on other teams even if they don't already have a proposed trade in place.

In addition, it says owners may not take a contraction vote prior to April 1, 2006, and that if owners want to eliminate two teams for the 2007 season, they must notify the union by the preceding July 1.

Under the deal, agreed to Aug. 30 just 2½ hours before the start of a scheduled strike, a luxury tax on payrolls will be imposed starting next year, with the 2003 threshold at $117 million.

Half the money raised by the luxury tax will be spent on the benefit plan, 25 percent on the industry growth fund, and 25 percent to develop players in countries that do not play organized high-school baseball or are being added to the amateur draft.

The deal increases the amount of shared local revenue from 20 percent to 34 percent, and requires that "each club shall use its revenue-sharing payments in an effort to improve its performance on the field."

"The commissioner shall enforce this obligation ... and may, consistent with his authority under the Major League Constitution, impose penalties on any clubs that violate this obligation," the agreement said.

The maximum fine against a player by the commissioner's office increases from $500 to $5,000 unless otherwise specified, and a new rule bans bus travel during the season on trips of more than 200 miles except under "extraordinary circumstances."

The Rams' Kurt Warner says he would like to be back in five weeks.

Warner hopes to return sooner than doctors' estimates

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS — The doctors say Kurt Warner won't be back under center for the St. Louis Rams for about two months, but the two-time MVP isn't paying any attention to their prognosis.

Warner figures it'll take just five weeks for the broken little finger on his throwing hand to heal.

"I believe that it's going to be sooner," the former Northern Iowa and Iowa Barnstormer quarterback said. "Last time, I was out for just five weeks and came back. So I'm believing that it'll be at least that quick if not quicker. I'm going to stand on that."

Warner broke the finger during the Rams' 13-10 loss last Sunday to Dallas, when he landed on his hand after he was hit during a safety blitz by Roy Williams. The injury was the latest blow for the struggling Rams, the defending NFC champions who at 0-4 are off to their worst start since 1963.

When Warner broke the same finger on his right hand two years ago, he missed five games. But doctors who performed surgery on Warner's finger this week said the latest injury will take longer to heal because the finger was broken in three places and was displaced.

"I'm going to do whatever I possibly can to get back as soon as possible," Warner said. "And that's all I can really do. They're throwing out these numbers way down the road, but I think they're just trying to be safe, and we're going to prove them all wrong."

Warner was back at the Rams' practice facility the day after Tuesday's surgery, with his right arm in a large splint. He called breaking the smallest finger on his hand a second time surreal, given that it's the only injury that's caused him to miss a game in his career.

"But at the same time I'm going to fight through this and believe that it's going to heal quickly," Warner said.

The Rams are also holding out hope that Warner can beat the doctors' estimates. In his place, backup Jamie Martin will make his second career start against San Francisco on Sunday.

Miami hosts CART races this weekend

BY TIM REYNOLDS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Downtown Miami is about to be transformed into a racetrack again after seven years, one postponement and many legal challenges that in some cases remain unresolved.

The city will host the Grand Prix of the Americas this weekend, a three-day event anchored by a CART series race Sunday. There's also an American LeMans race on Saturday and a Trans Am series event following the Champ car event.

Race officials estimate that more than 100,000 people will attend the three events, providing at least $25 million in direct economic impact during the three days. The long-term impact could reach $125 million.

"The amount of people coming in and the injection to the economy is what cities like ours need," Mayor Manny Diaz said. "Here's an event born in our city years ago [that] for whatever reason, left. Now it's come back to its roots and that's what we're trying to do as a city."

Original plans called for the event to be held in April, without CART. Those plans were nixed last March after a circuit judge ruled the city had illegally granted promoters the right to hold an annual race on the downtown streets for a period of 15-25 years.

Homestead-Miami Speedway, located about 30 miles southwest of downtown in Miami-Dade County, filed suit, arguing the city could not enter such a deal without having open bidding. A county judge agreed, but one day later event promoters announced the races would go on as scheduled in October — and that CART would be part of the new plan.

Jorge Lopez, an attorney representing Homestead, said the track did not sue solely to block the event from happening along the waters of Biscayne Bay in Miami's Bayfront Park area. Homestead simply wanted an opportunity to bid, he said.

"The city charter requires for these types of activities to be put out to bid," Lopez said. "This deal involves the use of waterfront property as well as streets, all without a competitive bidding process. It's illegal."

Lopez and attorneys for the city of Miami delivered oral arguments before a panel of judges in a state appeals court on Sept. 17. Those judges have not yet issued an opinion, but should they side with Homestead, Lopez said the race weekend would, in effect, be canceled.

CART president Chris Pook insists this year's event will go on as scheduled. He said his understanding was that the appeals judges will file opinions on the future of the city's relationship with the race promoters, not the arrangement for the 2002 event.

Diaz said this year's event is in no jeopardy.

"There's no bidding process needed here because this is not a lease. This is a permit," Diaz said. "We have all kinds of events throughout the year at Bayfront Park. When Cirque de Soleil wants to come here, we don't put out the bid for all circuses."

CART last came to Miami in 1995, after which Ralph Sanchez — who founded what was then known as the Miami Grand Prix — moved his race to Homestead. The event was run there from 1996-2000. The city of Miami hosted international sports car racing on its streets from 1985-88 and again in 1995.

Pook praised Homestead's facility, but said the ideal location for racing in South Florida is in a more tourist-friendly environment such as the downtown waterfront.

"When you talk about Miami, this is what the world looks at Miami to be," Pook said. "You have to deliver the world's perception, and this is it: Biscayne Boulevard, palm trees, water and the cruise ships in the background."

Some drivers share Pook's sentiment, saying that if South Florida is going to host open-wheel racing, it should be done in the city of Miami.

"It's hard to pull those people down to Homestead," said Oriol Servia, a CART driver from Spain who now makes his home in Miami. "Even though it's not that far, just 45 minutes, people are there to enjoy the beach. Having the event downtown will be great."

HOCKEY BRIEFS

Avalanche 4, Stars 1

DALLAS (AP) — Greg de Vries scored on a third-period penalty shot and Patrick Roy made 28 saves as the Avalanche beat the Stars in an NHL exhibition game Thursday night.

Martin Skoula added a shorthanded goal, Milan Hejduk scored at even strength, and Joe Sakic had three assists for Colorado (2-4-0).

Radim Vrbata scored into an empty net for the Avs with 15.7 seconds left.

Niko Kapanen had the only goal for the Stars (3-4-0).

Skoula scored on a 2-on-1 break while Colorado was killing a penalty to give the Avalanche a 1-0 lead at 8:21 of the opening period. Kapanen's goal from the edge of the left circle at 15:11 of the second period got Dallas within 2-1, but de Vries beat Dallas goaltender Marty Turco on the penalty shot with 6:44 left.

In their first preseason meeting on Sept. 19, the Stars routed the Avalanche 7-1 in Denver.

Kings 2, Coyotes 1

OKLAHOMA CITY — Chris McAlpine scored on a power play with 10 seconds left, sending the Los Angeles Kings past the Phoenix Coyotes.

McAlpine banged in a rebound on a goalmouth scramble to beat goalie Sean Burke.

Jaroslav Bednar of Los Angeles (6-1) opened the scoring, converting on a power play with 17 seconds left in the first period. Bednar redirected Mathieu Schneider's point shot through Burke's legs.

Jeff Taffe evened the score for Phoenix (2-4) with a power-play goal at 1:18 of the third period. Taffe took a cross-ice pass from Radoslav Suchy and one-timed a shot over a sprawling Felix Potvin.

This was the first sports event at Oklahoma City's Ford Center. Wayne Gretzky, the Coyotes' managing partner, dropped the ceremonial first puck.

Iowa led 14-13 heading in to the fourth quarter only to watch as the Boilermakers scored 10 unanswered points.

"I'm aware of the stats from that game," Iowa's David Porter said. "I think we have a little something to prove [on Saturday]."

Added tight end Dallas Clark, "We looked pathetic."

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz credited the team's poor play against Purdue to the Boilermakers' tenacious defense. It seemed Purdue threw everything it had defensively against the Hawkeyes.

"We really struggled last year," Ferentz said. "We couldn't make a first down."

Barring a repeat of last season's combination of poor execution and turnovers, Saturday's game should be won or lost strictly between the lines. Through all games played thus far, the Hawkeyes enter the contest with the best total offense in the league, running up an average of 485 yards. Purdue brings the league's second-most effective defense, allowing just 301.6 yards of total offense.

"We really have our work cut out for us," Ferentz said. "We have to make sure we have a great plan."

The biggest challenge for Ferentz and his staff was trying to figure out which direction Purdue coach Joe Tiller is taking his team. Tiller is credited by many for bringing the pass-heavy West Coast style offense to the Big Ten, but this season the Boilermakers appear to favor a more balanced attack.

Purdue enters the game averaging 172 yards rushing per game — nearly double the 98 yards the Boilermakers averaged a year ago, which ranked at the bottom of the league standings. Running back Joey Harris is the fourth-leading rusher in the conference, averaging 105.4 yards.

"The biggest thing is we don't know what the [pass/run] ratio will be Saturday," Ferentz said. "I'm sure they'll probably throw more against us. It seems like everybody does."

After allowing 399 yards passing to Penn State's Zack Mills last weekend, the Hawkeyes pass defense regressed to second-worst in the nation, permitting opposing quarterbacks an average 324.4 yards per game.

Led by Altoona, Iowa, product Kyle Orton at quarterback, the Boilermakers average 238.2 yards passing per game.

Pondering Purdue: The Boilermakers have not won in Iowa City since a 27-16 victory in 1992 ... Purdue holds a 43-28-3 lead over Iowa in the series, including a 18-15-2 record in Kinnick Stadium ... The Boilermakers took 20 straight games from the Hawkeyes from 1961-1980 ... Strong Safety Ralph Turner was named Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week after his 23-yard interception return for a touchdown helped lead the Boilermakers past Minnesota last weekend ... Running back Joey Harris has rushed for 100 yards in four games this season, including 106 against the Gophers ... Purdue's defense ranks second in the Big Ten with 16 sacks ... Iowa athletic trainer Ed Crowley was a member of Purdue's football team when it won the 1967 Rose Bowl, the school's first appearance in Pasadena.

recording 39 saves and one shutout while starting every game.

Baker's main focus is Minnesota right now, but she has put a bit of thought into Sunday's match-up.

"I haven't really thought about Wisconsin," she said. "But it's a similar situation. We need to come out and be able to repeat a performance that we expect to see on Friday night."

Baker intends to focus on her team's intensity in the first quarter of the game.

"I think that the biggest indicator of success will be how well we start," Baker said. "If we start with momentum, it will give us confidence to be able to be successful this weekend. We're a team that's able to create scoring opportunities early in the game. If we can put away those opportunities, it will make winning easier."

Quinn agreed with Baker's sentiments.

"We need to come out and establish our style and play our game," she said.

Celebrate 'kool' times in Iowa football

Has there ever been a better time to be a football fan in the state of Iowa? I pose this question because at not quite 23 years of age, I admittedly don't have much of a point of reference. Of course who at 23 years of age has much of a point of reference on anything?

TODD BROMMELKAMP
Asst. Sports Editor

When the Hawkeye State awoke from one hell of a collective football hangover last weekend, what it saw was truly a sight to behold. For the first time since Oct. 26, 1981, both of the state's major football teams were ranked in the Associated Press Top 25.

Ronald Reagan hadn't been president for a full year yet in October '81. Riding in the wake of February chart-topper "Celebration," Kool and the Gang was actually still cool. So cool, in fact, it spelled it with a "K."

There's a party going on right here. Right here in the middle of America's heartland. If you were to have watched nothing but "SportsCenter" following Iowa's upset road win over then-No. 12 Penn State and Iowa State's throttling of Nebraska, you would have been led to believe this was the hot bed of college football.

A celebration to last throughout the years. The euphoria may wear off, especially if the Hawkeyes lose to Purdue on Saturday. It may be hard to maintain the same level of top-notch play for years on end, let alone the remainder of this season, but as Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said earlier this week, why not? It's a good question to ponder.

So bring your good times and your laughter, too.

Good times are just what this state needs right now. Iowans have dealt with budget cut after budget cut, down and dirty mudslinging in the races for the state's highest two elected offices, and the high-profile arrest of the very popular Pierre Pierce on charges of sexual assault.

A little laughter would be nice too, especially because the football world has done its fair share of mocking Iowa State and Iowa in recent years. It's time for this state's football fans to throw their collective heads back and let out a good belly laugh at those who think of Iowa as one giant, sprawling corn field. We gonna celebrate your party with you. It's not your typical, statewide love fest for these two teams, either. Besides the almost over-the-top Iowa love doled out by the crew at ESPN, articles on the Hawkeyes and Cyclones have popped up everywhere from the Ames Tribune to the Chicago Tribune. Everyone, it seems, wants to get in on the fun.

It's time to come together. It's up to you, what's your pleasure?

It's clear that both Iowa and Iowa State fans are making the most of this drastic turn of fortunes. There's no more need for Iowa fans to feel insecure in wishing their Big 12 counterparts well. Likewise, Cyclone faithful are openly admitting to pulling for the Hawkeyes. It's mutual respect. It's harmony. And it's down right scary.

Everyone around the world — come on! Yahoo! It's a celebration. Yahoo!

As Iowa State coach Dan McCarney said amid a mob of giddy Iowa State students after beating Nebraska, "It's a great day to be a Cyclone." Earlier in the afternoon, his counterpart in Iowa City was thinking the same thing about being a Hawkeye more than a thousand miles away in Happy Valley.

It is indeed a kool time to be a football fan in the state of Iowa.

IOWA FOOTBALL

After long wait, Iowa Hawkeyes

Behind the numbers of running backs and quarterbacks, the members

BY DONOVAN BURBA
THE DAILY IOWAN

Here's a riddle: What local group has an average height and weight of 6-6 and 295 pounds, respectively? No, not the lunchtime crowd at Denny's, but good guess. The Hawkeyes' offensive line fits that physical bill, making it perhaps the most formidable such unit in the Big Ten. The members are fast, strong, and unlike those midday munchers, they block more than just the sun.

Offensive linemen are the only players in football who don't have official stats. Oh sure, some teams keep track of "pancakes," a glorified term for "really good block," but there's no official statistical standard for a pancake (or any other breakfast food, for that matter). The best measure of an offensive line is the statistics of the offensive "skill" players, particularly the quarterback and running backs. Even the quickest glance at Iowa's numbers shows that the Hawkeyes' line is in an elite class.

On the ground, the Hawkeyes have accumulated 1,295 rushing yards, averaging 5.8 yards per carry and 259 per game—on top in the Big Ten in all three categories. It is a testament to the line that Iowa has had such success without preseason starting running back Aaron Greving, who has played sparingly while he recovers from an ankle injury. Fred Russell, Greving's replacement, third in the nation in yards per game with 153.2, is certainly skilled, with the ability to hit holes with lightning-quick speed. But consider this: Iowa has had a 100-yard rusher in each of its last eight games. Impressive, but even more amazing when one considers that four different backs contributed to that streak (Russell, Greving, Jermelle Lewis, and Ladell Betts). The one constant in all eight games? The offensive line.

"We feel good about [the streak]," said senior center Bruce Nelson. "We struggled in the past with having a solid running game, and now we're really getting the ball moving on the ground, and that's certainly a feather in our hat."

Russell, for his part, isn't complaining either.

"[Running behind the line] makes things a lot easier for me," he said. "I have a lot of confidence in the guys, and I hope they have the confidence in me."

Quarterback Brad Banks is another beneficiary of the Great Wall of Iowa. Banks, considered by many to be impatient in the pocket, is able to drop back without worrying about the defensive rush. The line has allowed only five sacks all year, and Banks, with more time to make accurate reads and throws, has completed nearly 60 percent of his passes.

Character, as much as size, dictates how successful a line will be, and one would be hard-pressed to find a unit with more character than the Hawkeyes' O-line. Four starters are seniors, including David Porter, who is playing his fifth season for Iowa. The fifth member, junior Robert Gallery, started all 12 games last year after moving from tight end in 2000. Even though Iowa is now ranked in the top 25 nationally, the veterans still have memories of leaner days.

"We understand how rough things can be, and now we're understanding how good things can be," said Nelson, who suffered through the Hawkeyes' 1999-00 seasons, in which they went a combined 4-19. "We don't want anybody to get too high or to get too low, so we just try to stay in that steady and level path."

While that path may have been a little rougher than anyone in the Iowa program would have liked, coach Kirk Ferentz knew that it was just a matter of time before the offensive line lived up to its potential.

"Going into the season last year, we hoped they'd hit stride, and I think they did," he said. "They've really been resilient and persevered through some rough times, and I think they're enjoying where they're sitting right now."

Offensive lineman Eric Steinbach blocks a Utah State defensive lineman during the second quarter on Sept. 21. The Hawkeyes defeated the Aggies, 48-7. Steinbach is on the watch list for the Outland Trophy and the Lombardi trophy, which are presented to the top interior lineman and down lineman, respectively. The senior, from Lockport, Ill., was named first team all-Big Ten.

IOWA SPORTS

Soccer team hits rocky start in Big Ten beginning

BY KATIE LOW
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa women's soccer team knows that the past doesn't necessarily dictate the future.

The Hawkeyes (5-4-0, 0-3 Big Ten) are still set on attaining their pre-season goal of winning the Big Ten Tournament.

"We absolutely need to get to the tournament," coach Carla Baker said. "Wins are the steps to getting there, and we need more of those. I know that if we get there, we have a good chance of winning."

The Hawks started the season off impressively, winning their first three match ups against Wisconsin-Green Bay, Northern Iowa, and Dartmouth. They lost a 2-1 game against Boston College and followed that with a victory over Idaho at home.

The start of the Big Ten season has proved to be somewhat disastrous, however. On a road trip to Michigan, the Hawkeyes lost to Michigan State, 4-0, and to Michigan, 2-1. The Hawkeyes also suffered a disappointing 1-0 loss to Northwestern on Sept. 27.

The team jumped back on the winning track with a hard-fought, 1-0 win over nonconference opponent Illinois State on Sunday.

"We started strong, but we hit some obstacles along the way," Katelyn Quinn said. "It was a good learning experience, and it shows us where we are, character-wise. We have our ups and downs just like any team."

Quinn, a sophomore forward, leads the team with five goals. She is followed by senior captain Sarah Lynch and junior Courtney Wilkerson, who've each netted three.

"We learned a lot of lessons from the first half of the season," Baker said. "One big thing we came away with was that we need to be more consistent in our warmup, our preparation for games, and the way we start. We would do a lot of things different if we could."

The team still faces the bulk of the Big Ten season, including tough matchups against Illinois and returning Big Ten champs Penn State.

This weekend, Iowa will take on Minnesota at 7 p.m. on Friday and Wisconsin at 1 p.m. on Oct. 6. Both games will take place at the Iowa Soccer Complex.

Minnesota boasts a 4-1 series lead over Iowa. The Golden Gophers are 6-4 overall and 1-3 in the Big Ten. Their only Big Ten victory was a 4-0 victory over No. 14 Michigan. Rachel Roth leads the team with an impressive eight goals, including three game-winning goals.

Wisconsin holds a 3-2 series lead over the Hawkeyes. The Badgers defeated Michigan State, handing the Spartans their first loss of the season. Their current record is 4-5-2 overall and 1-2-1 in the conference. Jenny Kunder leads Wisconsin with five goals and five assists.

"We have to come out and start strong against Minnesota," Baker said. "They are coming off a big win and an emotional victory over Michigan. The first 15 minutes of the match will be crucial. Wisconsin is an equally tough game. The way that we start will dictate the game we play. We need to create and whoever can get over the hump and score will win."

And if anyone knows offensive lines, it's Ferentz. Hayden Fry's offensive line coach from 1981-1989, Ferentz produced two Big Ten Linemen of the Year, Mike Haight in 1985 and Dave Croston the next year. He went on to coach the O-line for the NFL's Cleveland Browns/Baltimore Ravens franchise before Iowa hired him away to fill the head coaching spot in 1999.

"I owe all of my success at the University of Iowa and in the NFL to [Ferentz]," said former Hawkeye and NFL All-Pro lineman John Alt.

While the line may have hit stride last year, paving the way for Betts to run for more than 1,000 yards, it suffered one major stumble — against Purdue. The Boilermakers completely shut down the Hawkeye running attack in their Oct. 6, 2001, meeting in West Lafayette, Ind., holding Iowa to a measly 33 yards rushing on 34 carries. Only a stingy defense kept Ferentz's squad in the game, but Purdue pulled out a 23-14 victory. Naturally, revenge is on the minds of all the Hawkeyes, but the offensive line in particular is eager to prove that last year's lapse was just that.

"I think we have something to prove to ourselves," Porter said. "They came up there ready last year, and we really weren't ready. We have to prove to ourselves that it was a fluke, that it wasn't them, it was us."

On Sept. 28, Iowa shut down Penn State's defensive line, a unit with several NFL-bound players. However, as both Porter and Nelson are quick to point out, Purdue's defense style is fundamentally different from the Nittany Lions, meaning Iowa can't afford to sit back and enjoy its new national ranking.

"I don't think our coaches will let us underestimate [Purdue]," Porter said. "Practices get pretty intense, especially when we're running against a good defense like Purdue. If you step wrong, you're getting yelled at. If your head is in the wrong place, you're getting yelled at."

Nelson emphasized the Boilermakers' speed on defense, something that gave Iowa fits in 2001, but also noted that this year's Hawkeye line is prepared for anything.

"They presented some things that were tough tactically [last year]," he said. "If the defense is fast, you really have to be on your horse and drive your feet. There really isn't anything you can do; the speed you have now is the speed you'll have in the game."

With that in mind as they play their last Homecoming game at Kinnick, the four senior offensive linemen hope to atone for last year's slip, as well as opening up a big hole for Iowa to run through to a conference title. And that, ultimately, fulfills a plan years in the making. As Ferentz put it, "Our plan was to ride those guys, and they've done a great job of responding."

Northwestern: Cruel and unusual in Big Ten

BY DONOVAN BURBA
THE DAILY IOWAN

Ohio State at Northwestern: If you only stay home to watch one college football game, make it this one. Northwestern is almost unbeatable at home, and ... oh, I give up. Making the Wildcats play the No. 5 Buckeyes should be classified as some sort of cruel and unusual punishment. Here, for formality's sake, is a breakdown of the matchup.

One criticism of Ohio State is that it's a one-man team. Without freshman star half-back Maurice Clarett (143.8 yards per game, second in Big Ten), the Buckeyes are just decent. Saying that is like saying that without Jimmy Page, Led Zeppelin was a pretty good band. Clarett is a legitimate Heisman contender, and if he doesn't win it this season (and he won't, because stubborn voters hate underclassmen), he'll be the favorite every year until he graduates. Clarett gives Ohio State a chance at playing in the Fiesta Bowl, and that's all that matters.

It is true that the Buckeyes are one-dimensional on offense; they're dead last in the Big Ten in passing yards. It's also true that Northwestern got blown out by Air Force and barely beat perennial doormats Duke and Navy. The Wildcat defense is last in the conference, allowing over 100 more yards per game than 10th-place Penn State and giving up 40 points per game. On offense, they're slightly better: ninth in total offense and 10th in points per game.

I'll be honest: I like Northwestern. I grew up in the shadow of Ryan Field and couldn't have been more excited when they rose to national prominence in the mid-1990s. But they're going to get killed.

Ohio State 51, Northwestern 6

Penn State at Wisconsin: In nature, there's nothing more dangerous than a wounded animal. In football, there's nothing more dangerous than a team coming off a heartbreaking upset loss. The Nittany Lions felt they had a shot at the conference title, and Iowa's overtime win last weekend in Happy Valley threw a serious wrench into the works.

The Lions (get it? wounded animals?) can go one of two ways. They can either take out all their frustrations on Wisconsin and win big, or they can give up and lie down for the rest of the year (with a lamb, perhaps). Joe Paterno teams do not lie down.

Paterno showed why he's still one of the nation's best coaches last season when Penn State started out 0-4. JoePa rallied his troops and, with the help of backup quarterback Zack Mills, led them to a 5-6 record — decent, considering the situation, but unacceptable for a Paterno team. Penn State should have no trouble rebounding from last week's setback.

Wisconsin, though 5-0, has yet to play a tough opponent,

Northwestern against Maurice Clarett and Ohio State? No way.

beefing up on such powerhouses as Northern Illinois and UNLV. Even if star wide-out Lee Evans does play today — coach Barry Alvarez has been vague on the subject — the Badgers will be hard-pressed to win despite playing at home.

They should keep it close, but ultimately Mills will show why he's one of the top quarterbacks in the country.

Purdue emphasizes positive attitude

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Prior to the start of this season, Purdue head coach Joe Tiller's main point of contention with his Boilermakers was that starting quarterback Kyle Orton had never won a game as a starter.

That issue has resolved itself, but read anything Tiller says about the Boilermakers' performance on the field so far, and it becomes obvious where the veteran coach has now turned his attention.

Tiller after Purdue's 24-17 loss to Notre Dame: "Whenever I've been around a closely contested game in all the years I've coached, it invariably comes down to one thing — turnovers. If you win the turnover battle, you win close games."

Tiller after the Boilermakers were upset at home by Wake Forest: "It's always a game of turnovers. When you turn the ball over [five times], that's a huge hole."

Tiller prior to his team traveling to Iowa City this weekend to face the No. 24 Hawkeyes: "We're going to continually emphasize [hanging on to the ball] without being negative."

If it seems Tiller has the perception turnovers are hurting his team, it's because they are. The 3-2 Boilermakers boast a Big Ten-leading 17 fumbles this season, including three during last weekend's 28-15 victory over Minnesota.

Controlling its recent plague of turnovers may be the key to whether Purdue can survive the always-rigorous Big Ten schedule, because without the fumbling follies, the Boilermakers are a formidable team.

Much like Iowa, Purdue has a trio of talented running backs and a corps of solid wide receivers, made to look even better by a talented quarterback.

Montrell Lowe, who has rushed for 2,479 yards in his previous three seasons, has been replaced by Joey Harris.

Tiller coach
Orton quarterback

Wide receiver John Standeford trails only Michigan State's superhuman Charles Rogers in receiving, averaging 110.2 yards per game and 23 yards per reception.

And Orton already has people comparing him with former Purdue quarterback and current NFL starter Drew Brees — and he's only a sophomore.

Add in to the mix an offensive line that Tiller believes has gone unnoticed, and they combine to make one of the league's best offensive units, averaging over 400 yards per game.

"We really have our work cut out for us," said Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz, who spent most of the week trying to figure out ways to slow the Boilermakers.

But Purdue's offense, long its bread-and-butter since Tiller arrived in West Lafayette six years ago, has nearly been overshadowed by its veteran defensive unit. The Boilermakers rank second in the conference in total defense, allowing an average of just 254.4 yards per game through five contests.

Throw in a touch of aplomb attained after hanging on for a victory over the Gophers at home last weekend, and the Boilermakers are as much in the hunt for a Big Ten title as the other 10 teams in the league heading in to the second week of conference play.

"After the win last Saturday, our level of confidence has gone up from what it was after the Wake Forest game," cornerback Antwaun Rogers said.

QB Orton returns to Iowa for his own homecoming

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The irony is not lost on Purdue's Kyle Orton.

The sophomore quarterback returns to his home state for the first time as a player Saturday for Iowa's Homecoming game against the Boilermakers.

But don't expect Orton to have any jitters when he takes the field at Kinnick Stadium for the first time as a member of an opposing team in front of dozens of acquaintances.

"My dad always told me that if I wanted to be a quarterback, I couldn't ride an emotional train," he said. "If you're a defensive player, you can get jacked up for a game, but as a quarterback, you need to be more level-headed."

If the Altoona native has done anything since taking over the reins of Purdue's offense near the end of the 2001 season, it's been keeping things in perspective.

"I'm pretty low-key," he said. "I do get excited inside before a game, but I try not to let it show too much."

Orton's story has been far from low-key. He appeared in seven games as a true freshman last season, including starting Purdue's final three. He set an NCAA record for passing attempts in a bowl game when he turned in a 38-74 performance against Washington State in the Sun Bowl in December 2001. The 419 yards he compiled in that game were the most by a freshman in Purdue history — not bad for a school who's roll call of quarterbacks includes such names as Drew Brees, Jim Everett, Bob Griese, and Len Dawson.

Brees' name comes up most often in conversations involving Orton. It didn't take fans and members of the media long to start making comparisons between the current San Diego Chargers' quarterback who helped make Purdue one of the Big Ten's best teams in the late '90s and the soft-spoken Orton.

His maturity level is approaching that of Brees, one of the most polished, poised players in recent memory, almost as quickly as his numbers are.

"There were things that I wouldn't necessarily talk to Drew about because I knew he could handle it from a maturity standpoint," Purdue coach Joe Tiller said. "I did do some counseling last season [with Kyle], but I'm not doing nearly as much this year because, like Drew, Kyle has a maturity level that can handle situations like this."

Situations such as playing in front of an expected crowd of 65,000 rowdy fans, wondering why the nation's second-highest-rated high school quarterback in 2000 didn't stick close to home.

Orton quickly became a hot commodity his senior season at Southeast Polk High School, where he passed for 1,366 yards and 12 touchdowns. He made USA Today's Super 25 prospect list and garnered a pair of top-10 rankings by national recruiting analysts. And yes, for the record, he was offered a scholarship by Iowa.

"We really never even danced," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "I wish him the best of luck except against us."

Orton continued to gain attention with several impressive showings at various camps around the country where players go to showcase their abilities for coaches. He attended an Elite 11 Quarterback camp in California where one of the instructors happened to be Brees. Shortly thereafter, he visited West Lafayette and committed to the Boilermakers.

Orton marked two days on his calendar when he signed with Purdue — the dates the Boilermakers played rival Notre Dame and Iowa. He played well in Purdue's 24-17 loss to the Irish in South Bend on Sept. 7, completing 14-30 passes for 171 yards. That performance helped keep things in focus for his trip back to the Hawkeye State.

"I don't think I could get more excited than I was for that game, and I believe I played pretty well in South Bend," Orton said. "I just think it will be fun to go to my home state and play in front of a crowd that will be really nuts."

As a youngster growing up in Altoona, just a little over an hour and a half west of Iowa City, Orton attended many games in Iowa City with his friends, but he never considered himself much of a Hawkeye fan. On Saturday, he will make yet another journey to Kinnick Stadium, this time traveling from the east and under markedly different circumstances.

"As a player, you get excited for every college football game," he said. "With all my friends and family there, it'll be added fun, not added pressure."

Orton said he expects more than 100 family members and friends to be in attendance on Saturday.

Steps to avoiding a bad horror movie plot

BY DONOVAN BURBA
THE DAILY IOWAN

In every bad horror movie, there's a scene where the terrified teenage prey thinks he's defeated the monster and relaxes, only to be eaten alive moments later.

It's not hard to see that B-movie cliché as a metaphor for the Purdue-Iowa game (OK, maybe the connection isn't that clear, but it will be). Iowa comes into today's game ranked No. 24 in the nation, the first time the Hawkeyes have cracked the top 25 since 1997, and it is fresh from a road victory over then-No. 12 Penn State.

But coach Kirk Ferentz's squad can't afford to exhale, lest the Purdue boogiemer swallow it whole.

The memory of Purdue's 23-14 victory in last year's contest (which also came a week after an Iowa win over Penn State) is fresh in the minds of the Hawkeyes, particularly those on the offensive side of the ball. The Boilermaker defense completely shut down the Iowa running game, allowing just 33 yards on 34 carries. The Hawkeye offensive line hasn't faltered since, and it brings a streak of eight games with a 100-yard rusher into today's contest.

Iowa's biggest offensive weapon is Fred Russell, who not only leads the Big Ten in rushing, he is also third nationally in the category. Ferentz had a mini-running back controversy on his hands in the opening weeks of the season as preseason starter Aaron Greving recovered from an ankle injury, but Russell answered any doubts about his position. He ran for 142 yards Sept. 28 against Penn State, which boasts one of the toughest defenses in the conference.

While Russell came out of nowhere to become a major ground threat, quarterback Brad Banks was expected to lead Iowa's air attack from day one. Against the Nittany Lions, he shined, completing 18 of 30 passes for 261 yards. More impressive than his numbers was Banks' composure under pressure. With the sound of 108,000 hostile fans in his ears and Hawkeye momentum all but dead, he threw a 6-yard touchdown pass to C.J. Jones in the first overtime series. The hook-up proved to be the difference, and Banks was named co-Big Ten Player of the Week on offense.

Once again, the key to beating Iowa is a successful passing attack. Penn State quarterback Zack Mills threw for 399 yards and four touchdowns last week, driving the Hawkeyes' Big Ten-worst pass defense average up to 324.4 yards per game allowed. Boilermaker QB Kyle Orton may not get as much press as Mills, but he's got as much raw talent. His 231.6 yards per game average is fifth in the conference. If Orton has watched any Iowa game film at all, he'll know to pick on freshman cornerback Antwan Allen. Allen is still learning, and Mills exploited that weakness to perfection.

Orton's favorite target is wideout John Standeford. At 6-4, Standeford towers over all of Iowa's cornerbacks, all under 5-10. The onus will be on 6-1 safety Derek Pagel to help contain Standeford. Pagel is coming off his best career game, recording eight tackles, one interception, and blocking a PAT attempt in last week's win. Taylor Stubblefield, a speedy sophomore receiver, should also see plenty of passes.

Ferentz and Purdue coach Joe Tiller can commiserate on one "problem": too much depth in the backfield. Like Iowa, Purdue has three solid running backs: senior Montrell Lowe, junior Joey Harris, and redshirt freshman Brandon Jones. Unlike Ferentz, Tiller has yet to make a concrete decision about who is the No. 1 back. Lowe was benched for Purdue's Sept. 28 victory over Minnesota because he couldn't hang on to the ball, and Harris and Jones picked up the slack, combining for 146 yards on 39 carries against the Gophers.

Finally, there's the matter of holding a lead. The Sept. 14 loss to Iowa State, in which the Hawkeyes blew a 24-7 halftime lead, will not soon be forgotten. When Penn State outscored Iowa 28-9 in the second half of regulation last weekend, there wasn't an Iowa fan alive who wasn't having flashbacks to the Cyclone game.

That the Hawkeyes still won says a lot about Ferentz's ability to get his players back on track; on the other hand, it would be nice if the train never derailed in the first place. Today's game will be close, and don't be surprised to see lots of bald, fingernail-less Hawkeye fans by the end of the season.

Right: Fred Barr helps the Iowa secondary take down a Boilermaker running back.
Bottom: Receiver C.J. Jones tries to elude the Purdue secondary. He finished the game with six catches and 77 yards.

After beginning the season with victories over Kent State, Miami University, and Penn State, the Purdue Boilermakers handed Iowa its first defeat of the 2001 season in West Lafayette. It was the first of back-to-back road losses for the Hawkeyes, and the game itself was considered to be by many the low point of the season. The Boilermakers stifled Iowa's offense, allowing 207 yards of total offense. Running back Ladell Betts was held to a season low nine yards rushing. "We really didn't get much done," said Iowa offensive lineman David Porter, recalling the loss. "Last year I think they just outplayed us." The Hawkeyes held a slim 14-13 advantage heading in to the final quarter of play, but the Boilermakers scored the game's final 10 points on a 4-yard touchdown run by quarterback Brandon Hance and a 37-yard field goal by Travis Dorsch. Purdue finished the 2001 season with a 6-6 record - 4-4 in the Big Ten - and lost to No. 13 Washington State, 33-27, in the Sun Bowl. — by Todd Brommelkamp

HOMEcoming

Bluder hopes for good weather for parade

BY TONY PHAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Homecoming festivities this week will be capped off with the annual parade Friday, with UI women's basketball coach Lisa Bluder serving as the grand marshal.

"I'm very honored to have been selected this year, and it's really exciting since there's so much school spirit Homecoming week," Bluder said.

Bluder will be at the head of the parade riding in a yellow convertible with her husband and two daughters.

"We hope for really good weather since we're riding in an open-top car," chuckled Bluder.

Despite the gloomy forecast for tomorrow, Bluder anticipates a good time for all parade participants and attendees.

Past grand marshals have included former UI president Mary Sue Coleman, Hawkeye radio announcer Ed Podolak, and UI men's basketball coach Steve Alford.

"Homecoming is what the college spirit is all about," Podolak said. "Whether we win or lose, experience rain, snow or sunshine, it is an opportunity to come back and remember the great times of college without the tests."

This year's theme will be "Keeping the Past, Creating the Future," and Homecoming Council members are excited about continuing the parade's long-standing tradition.

"This year's parade will be great, with 77 groups participating," said Homecoming Council executive director PJ Besinger.

Besinger said that participation in the parade was open to everyone, from one person to large groups. "If you wanted to pay the $95 fee and march by yourself carrying a banner, we would be fine with that," he said.

In choosing the grand marshal, the council looked for someone with ties to the university that was somewhat well-known. Bluder's success with the women's basketball program didn't hurt, Besinger said.

The committee also chose John Pappajohn as the honored guest this year. Pappajohn is a 1952 UI business graduate whose name graces the business building, clinical cancer center, and a UIHC pavilion.

"The honored guest is usually someone well-known that has UI or state roots," Besinger said.

The list of previous honored guests reads like a Who's who of Iowa fame, including former NBA star B.J. Armstrong, legendary wrestling coach Dan Gable, and actor Tom Arnold.

UI alum Joesph Pieter said he would be taking in the sights of the parade and cheering the Hawkeyes on no matter what the weather conditions are like.

"This is my favorite game of the year," he said. "The festivities and students coming together are what make this place so great."

Riding the roller coaster

Tumultuous start to Iowa career makes Derek Pagel's success sweeter

BY ROSEANNA SMITH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Jeanette Pagel can't talk about dark days in the spring of 2000 without choking up and fighting back tears.

She doesn't want to remember the phone call when her son, Derek, free safety on the Iowa secondary, almost walked away from the team with a broken heart.

She does remember Derek's tears, though, after the spring game when he walked out of the locker room distraught. She watched as the roller coaster of her son's Iowa career began.

After walking on to the Hawkeye squad with a single chance to make it and a dump-truck load of hope, Pagel spent a redshirt season on the bench, watching and learning.

"I was a recruited walk-on, but I never had an official visit," Pagel said. "I honestly think I was recruited here to be a scout-team football player. They bring good athletes in, and those guys are important to good football teams, but I don't think they were very concerned whether I came to Iowa or not."

A decorated player from Plainfield, Iowa, Pagel won first-team All-State honors as a running back senior year and as a punter junior year. He was voted most valuable back in the district, rushing 184 times for 1,163 yards and scoring 17 touchdowns. He didn't just play football, accumulating letters in baseball, basketball, and track as well.

Derek wrestled with the idea of even joining the Iowa team — taking a risk walking on with no scholarship and no guarantees — or going to Wartburg, where he could play every down as a hero.

But the choice seemed to narrow as he looked around the basement of his parents' house — decorated wall to wall in black and gold. There were the memories of cookouts and parties hosted in the garage, where the television was always tuned to Iowa football, the hamburgers were always sizzling on the grill, and the fans flocked sometimes in groups of 100 to see how the Hawkeyes fared each weekend. He remembered a picture taken with Hayden Fry.

"Our house isn't painted in black and gold, but it's close," Derek's father, Richard Pagel, said. "It was a tough time for the family and for him. I always wanted him to attend the UI; I've been a fan since 1962, when I was in high school, but it wasn't an easy thing to do to tell someone to excel in something that hard to do."

Derek looked at his letters, awards, and himself, and took one giant leap of faith.

He would be disappointed. He received limited playing time in all 11 games in 1999 on special teams, but after being looked over for reps in the 2000 spring game, he made the call home.

"At that point, I was ready to leave," Pagel said. "I was just as down as anyone could be in a football career. I didn't even know if I wanted to play football or just go to school, become a student, or transfer and go somewhere where I knew I could play."

"I was just so down. I said I'll stick it out one more summer here, work out, and go through camp. I knew even if I went through camp and I didn't like what was going on, I'd still have time to transfer to another school."

Heavily recruited out of high school by Wartburg, where his older brother Dallas was a senior, Derek considered his options and made arrangements to re-evaluate the situation after fall camp in 2000. He had all but packed his bags, before he talked first to his brother, then to Iowa football coach Kirk Ferentz and assistant Bret Bielema.

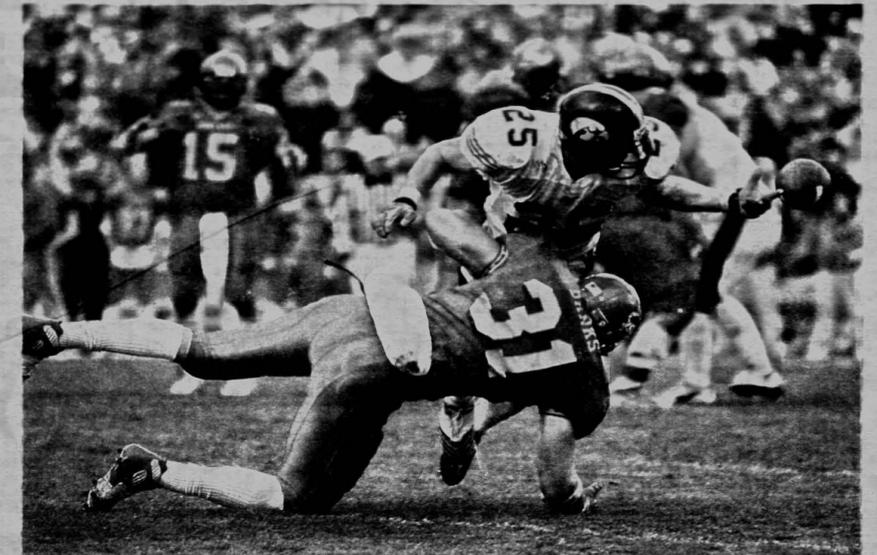

"We have a different brother relationship — he's my best friend," Dallas Pagel said. "Every day I'd talk to him on the phone at least once or twice. I told him, 'You've made it this far, if you want to leave and play football at Wartburg, that's what you need to do.'"

"He's an athlete, and it's hard for a competitor to sit on the sidelines. It was a really tough decision for him, but I think that's why he went to the coaches."

A positive meeting, position change, and 10 pounds later, Derek was on his way. He began working on third-down situations and played in 10 of 12 games that fall, recording 11 solo tackles, six assists, one sack, and three pass deflections.

The roller coaster was beginning to head uphill.

In 2001, Pagel started in six of the 12 games he played, recording season totals of 28

solo tackles, 16 assists, three tackles for loss, one recovered fumble, one interception, and four pass break-ups. He was chosen as a team captain against Michigan and Texas Tech, and he felt like he was gaining ground — literally.

The roller coaster chugged along on Dec. 29, 2001, when he played a role in Iowa's 19-16 win against Texas Tech at the Alamo Bowl. Though he posted humble numbers of two solo tackles, two assists, and one pass break-up, Pagel proved his worth on the gridiron and off.

He met his parents, who travel to every home and away game sporting Derek's No. 25 jersey, at the hotel after the victory and changed into street clothes for dinner.

"He didn't want to be decorated like a superjock hero," Richard said. "He was on the winning team, but he didn't want to go downtown and have everyone around — he's just like that — he doesn't want to take all that credit."

On the field, Pagel proved his mettle during the spring game, recording five tackles including one for a loss, after which he finally saw his name — under the first team free-safety slot.

"The coaches gave him their confidence," Dallas said. "He went in knowing he was the starting free safety, and it was his job to lose. He didn't have to worry about it anymore."

Though Derek's day in the limelight has finally arrived, he hasn't quit working. He recorded eight tackles against Iowa State and had a career day in Iowa's 42-35 overtime win at Penn State on Sept. 28. Pagel came up with his second interception of the season and the third of his career in the second quarter. He also blocked a PAT attempt that was returned 99 yards by defensive back D.J. Johnson. He finished the game with eight total tackles and an excitement he'd never felt before.

"It's an amazing feeling," Pagel said. "It's been so up and down. The highs are so high, and the lows are so low it's just incredible. Really in my career right now, I think I'm running on high."

Sitting in the 12th row, three seats in, Dallas Pagel switched seats with his dad between third and fourth down at the end of the Iowa State's overtime possession before rushing down to the front row as quarterback Zack Mills failed to convert a screen pass on the five-yard line.

"I darted down to the front — it was crazy," Dallas said. "Just to be there, to celebrate that moment with him was a highlight in my life. It was probably his biggest game so far."

And members of Derek's family haven't been the only ones noticing his progress and success. Ferentz said he was pleased with Pagel's efforts and anticipated more good things from the senior.

"He wanted to give it up three years ago, but he stuck it out, and the rest is history," Ferentz said. "I wouldn't say I talked him into it; we [the football staff] counseled him a little bit and encouraged him, but it was his decision to make."

"I think he's got a chance to play a lot more football after this year. It's a story that's going to turn out really well, I think."

Though Derek said he was focusing on graduating in December with a finance degree instead of thinking about a future in the NFL, the door is still wide open.

His father says it always has been.

"He knows what it's like to taste defeat — to be stepped on and to come back up. He wants to go to Pasadena to the Rose Bowl, and I think he'll do it, too."

Hawkeye athletes volunteer in the community in several ways

BY MICHELLE YONG
THE DAILY IOWAN

When some Iowa athletes aren't giving their all out on the field, they are giving back to the community.

Besides focusing on their sports and academics, they find satisfaction volunteering in the community, helping out children and those less fortunate.

The football team paints sheds, works at food pantries, and does other community service around the city.

"The kids and fans are whom you play for," Iowa football player Bruce Nelson said. "We still have their support even when we are losing. They are there for us through the good times and the bad times. No matter what, we always get support from Iowa, and we like to show them our appreciation."

Track, cross-country, field hockey, and baseball are involved in Hawkeye Pride, through which athletes visit elementary-school classrooms and tutor students or help teachers.

"Our team is always very interested in volunteering and dealing with kids," track and cross-country runner Becca Thompson said. "We enjoy helping out and giving back to the community."

On Sept. 29, the baseball team participated in the Heart Walk. Participants raise money to fight heart disease and stroke, then walk in the event.

"The Heart Walk was a great way for us to give back to the community," baseball player Kyle Thousand said. "We like to show our support for our fans the same way they show their support for us."

In the past, many teams have volunteered at the Ronald McDonald house, the Children's Hospitals, or participated in Day of Caring, a semi-annual opportunity for Iowa's student-athletes to offer their support to service organizations throughout the community.

On Oct. 6, the women's basketball team will join forces with Habitat for Humanity to help build a house with other women.

The men's and women's basketball teams are involved in the Read to Grow program. The athletes work with the Iowa City School District, visiting elementary schools each year to take part in educational activities.

"They support us and are always behind us," basketball player April Calhoun said. "Without our fans, we couldn't win. It is important for us to give back. The children look up to us, and it is rewarding for us to be there."

Basketball player Jared Reiner takes pleasure in the Read to Grow program.

"It's great to put a smile on a young kid's face," he said. "We like to do anything we can to help out."

The gymnastics team in particular is lending a hand to Roosevelt Elementary School, assisting the teachers in the classroom and reading to the children.

"We need to have positive influences on these children's lives," gymnast Jessica Kyan-ka said. "The choices we make and things we do are going to affect these children and their futures."

Doing community service and helping those in need are important to the athletes, who look to have a positive influence on lives of others.

"We are a visible group as athletes," field-hockey player Carolyn Lee said. "Hopefully, with all the positive things we do, other students will follow suit and also participate in the community."

Leg of steel

Nate Kaeding kicking himself into the Iowa record books

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
THE DAILY IOWAN

Nate Kaeding is kicking himself. Into the record books, that is.

The Hawkeyes' place kicker has been breaking so many records, some of the only records left to break are his own.

Whether he is setting a new milestone or one of his streaks is ending, it seems as though a majority of the time Penn State has something to do with it.

Against Penn State on Sept. 28, Kaeding kicked in his 13th-consecutive field goal. That broke his previous school mark of 11, which was put to rest in 2001 against the Nittany Lions.

Penn State also ended another streak of Kaeding's when his school PAT record ended at 60 after his second quarter extra-point attempt was blocked in this season's game in Happy Valley. "I didn't really worry about that," said Kaeding, who is the nation's 14th-leading scorer this season. "That was a good play on the Penn State guy's part. We were just disappointed because we didn't score the point out there."

This doesn't mean that Penn State has always gotten the best of Kaeding. In his freshman season, he racked up four field goals and two PATs in a 26-23 overtime victory against the Nittany Lions, earning him Big Ten special-teams player of the week honors. His 14 kicking points that game tied a school record, which he would go on to break the following season against Kent State when he scored 15 points on three field goals and six PATs.

On top of that, in this year's game against a No. 12 ranked Penn State team, he booted field goals of 47 and 55 yards and held part of the Big Ten special-teams player of the week honors once again. His 55-yarder tied for the third longest in Iowa history and gave the Hawkeyes a momentum-building 26-7 lead as time expired in the first half.

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said he would not have opted for the field goal had the Hawkeyes been back much farther, but he does have a lot of trust in his kicker.

"He's not fragile at all," Ferentz said. "He's like a bona fide football player. I think that's a big part of his success."

Kaeding claims, however, his range is from about 60 to 65 yards, and he has hit 70-yarders with the help of the wind.

This year, Kaeding is a perfect 10-10 on field-goal attempts, and he has already accumulated 53 points for the Hawkeyes.

"I'm just worried about helping out this football team and helping it win games," Kaeding said. "We got something awesome going on right now this year."

Success has always been a big part of Kaeding's athletics career, even in his high school days. He grew up in Coralville, and attended Iowa City West High School, where he holds every kicking and punting record. His football team won state championships his junior and senior years and had a record of 26-0.

In his senior year at West, Kaeding started on the state champion basketball team, and also kicked in his soccer team's final point of a shoot-out for a victory in the state championship game.

If anyone knows as much about Kaeding's success as he does, it's his parents. Larry and Terry Kaeding have attended every one of Nate's collegiate games, home and away, but one. The game they did not attend happened to be the one against Penn State in 2000 when Kaeding tied the 14-point kicking record and earned Big Ten special teams player of the week honors. His mother claimed she and her husband will never miss another game.

"His determination is one thing we've noticed since the time he was very young," said Nate's mother, Terry. "His leadership abilities were always very evident, and he always liked being the center of attention."

As a kicker, Kaeding often is the center of attention. In last year's Alamo Bowl against Texas Tech, all eyes were on Kaeding as he kicked in a 47-yard field goal with 44 seconds remaining to give the Hawkeyes a 19-16 victory. The field goal was Kaeding's fourth of the game, setting the Iowa bowl game record.

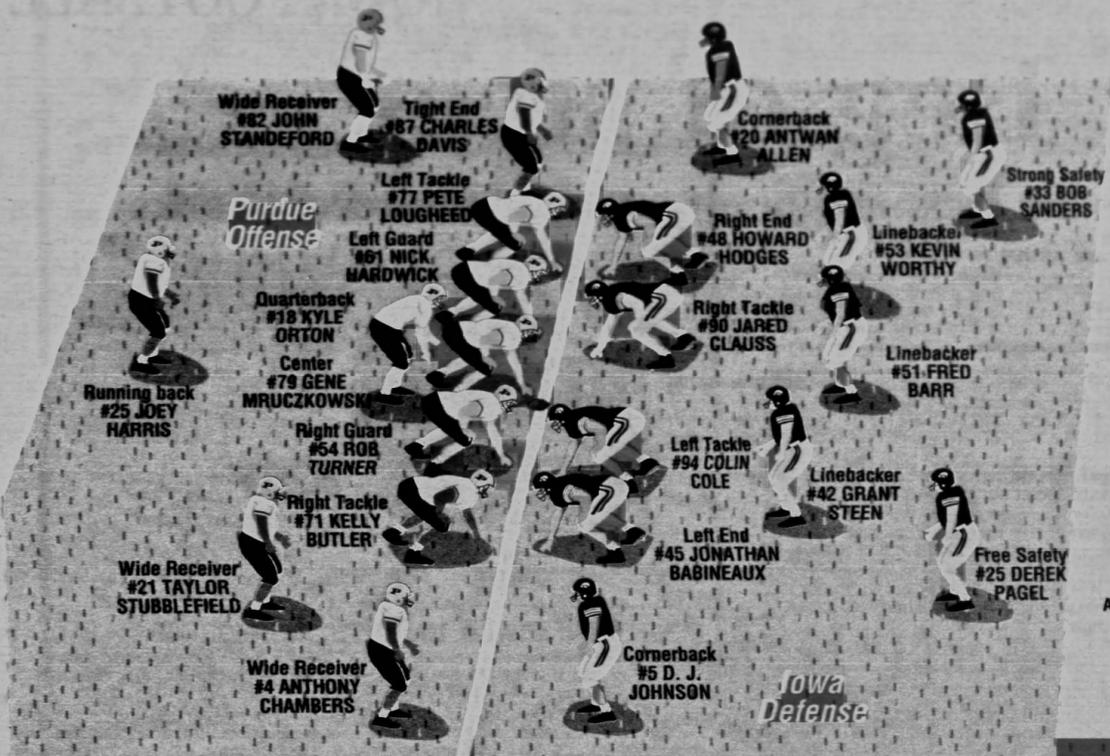

Kaeding racked up a team-high 85 points last season. Combined with 62 points his freshman year and the 53 he tallied up so far this season, Kaeding ranks No. 7 on Iowa's all time scoring list with 200.

If his production continues, Kaeding will no doubt surpass Rob Houghtlin's record of 290 career points to become the most prolific scorer in Iowa football history.

There are still some records for Kaeding to break and still some time to break them.

The longest field goal in Iowa football history is 58 yards set by Tim Douglas in 1998.

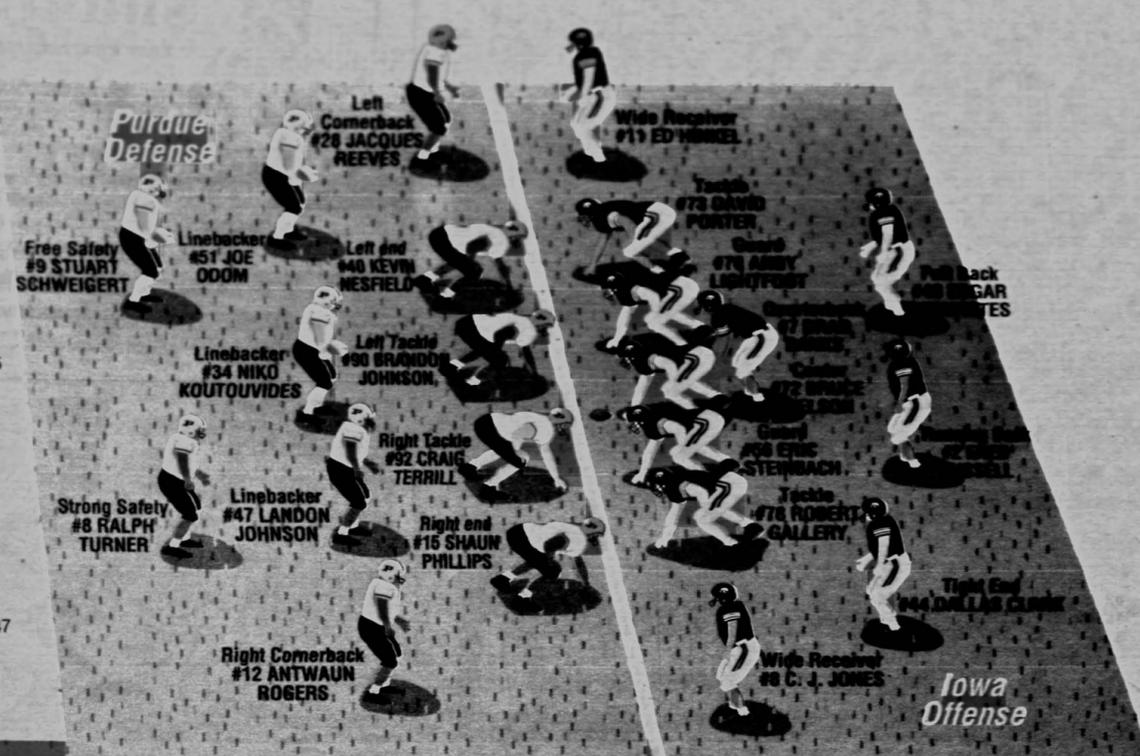

With a strong leg and a little help from the wind, maybe Kaeding could add one more record to his book.
