Bali bombs spook tourists; 188 dead

BY IRWAN FIRDAUS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALI, Indonesia — Terrified tourists tried Sunday to flee this island paradise that turned into an inferno, with the death toll from a pair of bombings climbing to 188 and fears growing that Al Qaeda has taken its terror campaign to the world's largest Muslim country.

Many of those killed by the two bombs that tore through a nightclub district on Bali island on Oct. 13 were Australians, in addition to other visitors from Canada, Britain, Germany, and Sweden. Two Americans were killed, while three were among the more than 300 people injured. Steven Brooks Webster, 41, of Huntington Beach, Calif., remained unaccounted for.

No one claimed responsibility for the bombings — the worst terrorist attack in Indonesia's history — but suspicion turned to Al Qaeda and an affiliated group, Jemaah Islamiyah, which wants to establish a pan-Islamic state across Malaysia, Indonesia, and the southern Philippines. It is accused of plotting to blow up the U.S. and other embassies in Singapore.

"We are interviewing witnesses, but we have no suspects," Kuta police Capt. Muhammad Anwar said earlier this morning.

Economic fallout from the attack surfaced early today; the country's currency fell approximately 3 percent to 9,300 to the dollar, with the stock market expected to follow suit.

In Washington, President Bush condemned the attack as "a cowardly act designed to create terror and chaos" and offered U.S. help in finding the perpetrators.

Residents and foreign tourists evacuate the scene of a bomb blast in Denpasar, Bali, Indonesia, on Sunday. The bomb destroyed a nightclub, killing least 188 people and injuring 300 others. A second bomb exploded approximately 110 yards from the U.S. consular office in Denpasar.

"The world must confront this global menace, terrorism," he said.

The attacks were on the second anniversary of the Al Qaeda-linked attack against USS Cole off Yemen, which left 17 sailors dead, and it took place amid signs of increasing terrorist activity that had led to the closure of U.S. embassies and renewed terror alerts for Americans.

The destruction started when a small homemade bomb exploded outside Paddy's Discotheque in the maze of clubs and bars on Kuta Beach, a popular haunt with young travelers. Shortly afterward, a huge blast from a bomb in a Toyota Kijang, a jeep-like vehicle, 30 yards down the street devastated the crowded Sari Club, a surfers' hangout.

A third, smaller bomb exploded outside the U.S. consular office. No one was injured in that blast.

The second blast ripped into the open-air bar, triggering a massive burst of flames that officials said was caused by the explosion of gas cylinders used for cooking. The explosion collapsed the roof of the flimsy structure, trapping revelers in flaming wreckage. The explosions and fire damaged approximately 20 buildings and devastated much of the block.

Identification of the dead was slow because some were burned beyond recognition.

American Amos Libby, 25, felt himself lifted off his feet as he walked by the Sari Club as the bomb detonated.

"All the buildings in the vicinity just collapsed, cars overturned, and debris from the buildings fell on them," he said. "I have never seen anything so horrible. There were so many people, 18- to 20-year-olds, people in pieces all over the street."

Two UI students will run for cancer victim

THE DAILY IOWAN

Bound to metal braces on her lower legs, 3-year-old Amber Fink has two UI students running the extra mile for her. Twenty-six point two miles, to be exact.

Senior Matt Monson and junior Martin Biderman will run the Honolulu Marathon on Dec. 8 in Hawaii to raise money for Amber and the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society. Biderman said he was looking for a good cause to run for, and the society paired him with the young northeastern Iowa girl.

The marathon helps to raise money and promote awareness for blood-related cancers, the No. 1 disease killer of U.S. children.

Fink, who lives in Cultier, was diagnosed with Acute Lymphocytic Leukemia when she was 8 months old. Initially, treatments went well, but after a three-month struggle, she needed a bone-marrow transplant.

"It's really a great opportunity to do our part," Biderman said. "It doesn't take much effort to make a difference, and we're just trying to help."

Group pushes housing for mentally ill patients

BY LAURA JENSEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

The symptoms started during Kristin Friedrich's freshman year at Arizona State University. She had trouble concentrating on classes and eventually began hearing voices. The outgoing student who had planned to become a teacher experienced the onset of schizophrenia, a disease that has put a halt to her career plans and prevented her from living independently.

The 36-year-old Iowa City resident could overcome at least one of those obstacles if a Johnson County advocacy group gets its plans approved to construct an apartment complex for the severely mentally ill on the West Side of town.

The Johnson County chapter of the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill is working to build an apartment complex with eight to 12 units east of Chatham Oaks, a tightly structured group home for the mentally ill and elderly where Friedrich now lives.

Representatives of the group, which offers support to families of the mentally ill and works to de-stigmatize mental illness, plan to begin work on the project's cost estimate later this month. It will seek funds from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"It would give me my own space and still allow me to be around people whom I know and trust, who could support me," Friedrich said of the less-controlled apartment complex. "It would also be helpful to have Chatham Oaks employees whom I know nearby to assist me."

The apartments would house adults with severe mental illnesses, such as schizophrenia, personality disorders, and bipolar disorders under the supervision of Chatham Oaks employees. Residents would receive some rental assistance from the federal government.

Leach comfortable with his record

BY CHUCK LARSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

While most of the press has focused on Jim Leach's horse-race against a well-financed and well-connected challenger, Cedar Rapids pediatrician Dr. Julie Thomas, what is typically left out is how he bucks party leadership and votes with his conscience — a Washington rarity.

Leach, R-Iowa, who stopped by The Daily Iowan on Sunday to meet with the editorial board, proclaimed one theme: He is comfortable with his record and confident in his campaign.

Last week, Leach was the only representative in the Iowa delegation in the House and one of only six Republicans nationwide who voted against the Iraqi resolution. He called it "on the wrong track" and said he made no friends in the administration by casting his "nay" vote.

He also favors stem-cell research and supports a woman's right to choose — beliefs Republican leadership cringes at.

Leach calmly presented a platform fueled by a working knowledge gained from years of representing Iowa in the House.

He described himself as moderately conservative on fiscal issues, moderately liberal on social issues, and progressive on foreign policy, boasting a legislative record to prove his point.

"With 1,000 issues on the platform, no one can fit exactly into one of the two political parties," Leach said.

Leach championed a bill in the House to regulate Internet gambling corporations. Run by out-of-country companies that are not subject to U.S. law, these sites often are involved in

Iowa City — the cornucopia of volunteering

BY BRIDGET FRODYMA
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City is overrun with willing volunteers, putting many would-be helpers on waiting lists and prompting a new student group to surface to funnel the energy.

The Women's Resource and Action Center typically is forced to reject potential volunteers. Even the Salvation Army occasionally has to politely decline the help.

Last month, a horde of students swarmed a table to sign up as volunteers at the UI Hospitals and Clinics. The students desperately reached over each other for 15 minutes.

"If your hands are not touching the table, I can't take you," shouted the man at the table, causing the group to disburse.

UI student Chellena Ellerman was one of many rejected that day.

"We didn't get to do anything because there were too many people," said Ellerman, who wanted to volunteer in the cardiology department because of the patient contact and scrubs. "We walked around to other [volunteer] tables, but all were filled because we were waiting in line."

Meningitis hits student

BY JEFFREY PATCH
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI senior Amanda Ball doesn't know how she contracted bacterial meningitis and blood poisoning, which left her hospitalized and near death for 12 weeks while studying in Ireland this past spring.

The Alpha Chi Omega sorority member said education by the UI about preventing the disease was minimal.

"The only grievance I have is that Iowa never warned me about meningitis," said Ball, a finance major who is now wheelchair-bound and will wear leg splints the rest of her life because of the diseases.

Students are required to attend short orientations in which they are briefed on health and safety issues overseas, and although Ball attended a session, she said the UI should have provided more information on meningitis — which occurs in 3 of every 20,000 persons annually in Ireland, according to the Meningitis Research Foundation.

Approximately 3 out of every 1 million Iowans contract the disease each year, based on figures provided by the Iowa Department of Public Health and the 2000 U.S. Census.

The university adequately prepares students, said John Rogers, a UI Study Abroad adviser, adding that not much else can be done to protect students.

Andrea Nucci, a UI senior who studied in Germany last year, said she felt prepared for the diseases she might encounter abroad.

Arcadia University, the school through which Ball traveled, also offered basic information about meningitis.

"We got a little pamphlet on meningitis," she said. "I'm really lucky that my flatmate actually read that."

Ball's roommate in Ireland, a student from Missouri, found her in bed sweating with a rash enveloping her body. In the next few days, the disease caused Ball's kidneys to quit working. She lost 40 pounds and suffered a collapsed lung and multi-system organ failure. Finally, she drifted into a drug-induced coma for two and a half weeks in an Irish hospital.

Ball also suffered from septicemia, a type of blood poisoning that eroded the muscles in her legs, leaving her dependent on a cane to walk short distances.

Ball spent seven weeks in a hospital in Ireland before being transferred to the University of Chicago's hospital, where she finished her course work this summer.

She does not know how she contracted the disease, which resides in the back of the nose and throat and spreads via contact with saliva such as coughing, sneezing, and kissing.

The risk for catching bacterial meningitis may increase while studying abroad, especially in sub-Saharan Africa and parts of Europe, including England and Ireland, said state epidemiologist Dr. Patricia Quinlisk, though she could not say why.

A vaccine is offered to combat many types of meningitis, but in Iowa the most prevalent strain of the disease, type B, evades the

The disease is treated with antibiotics and is rarely contracted twice, Quinlisk said.

UI undergrads allowed to seek grants

BY PHIL DAVIDSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

For the first time, UI undergraduate students can apply for research grants — a move university officials say will expand educational opportunities.

"We're trying to figure out a way to get students more active in research," said Geb Thomas, a UI assistant professor of industrial engineering. He said another goal was to encourage faculty members to involve students in research.

Approximately $72,000 is available for awards this year through the UI Office of the Vice President for Research. Students can receive a maximum award of $3,000 each.

Budget constraints prevented the office from beginning the program last year, as university officials had originally planned. However, a reallocation of funds within the office enabled the program to kick off this year, said William Decker, an associate vice president for Research.

Robert Kirby, the assistant director of the Honors Program, said the number of applications has increased as the Friday deadline approaches, though he could not cite the exact number. He has talked to several students and faculty members interested in the opportunity, he said, but he declined to say what the research proposals entailed.

Up to $1,500 of the maximum grant may be used to support research-related supplies and expenses. The remainder must be used as an undergraduate stipend, or payment for work done, Kirby said.

The actual research proposal must be submitted by a tenure-track or tenured faculty member, research scientist, research engineer, or adjunct, clinical, and emeritus faculty on behalf of students.

The proposal must include a letter of support from the head of the applicant's department. It should also explain how meaningful the experience is for the student. In addition, the review committee will be looking for a set of eight points including:

- Providing a timeline for the work that shows, as appropriate, the student's preparation, involvement, and follow-up activities.

- Indicating how the student has been or will be prepared to participate in the work; this may include enrollment in courses, prior semester course work, practicum, or training programs.

- Explaining the benefit to the student and methods for evaluation of the student's work.

The review committee will examine proposals twice a semester. The second review is Dec. 16.

Officials say Union Bar site of fiery stunt

BY KELLEY CASINO
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City officials say they have forwarded all information regarding a recent fire stunt at the Union Bar to the state for review.

The downtown business, 121 E. College St., was charged Oct. 10 with using an open-flame device in a drinking establishment after police allegedly witnessed a man waving a fiery baton on Oct. 4, police records show. It's the second such incident to occur in Iowa City in six months.

"It's the practice of the city to forward cases of civil penalties directly to the State Alcoholic Beverages Division because the establishment can appeal to the state and almost always does," said Assistant City Attorney Andrew Matthews.

Police records show that the Union was hosting a traveling promotion for Spring Break in Acapulco when the incident allegedly occurred.

"One of our officers saw a person with some sort of a device with a flame, and that flame was being waved over a crowd of patrons in the bar," said Sgt. Dan Lord.

Police Officer Michael Smithey was the first on the scene, Lord said. Police records show that Smithey was performing a routine bar check of the Union at 1:35 a.m. when he witnessed one of the promoters with the baton.

Police records show that no one was injured during the stunt at the Union.

Owner George Barlas, who purchased the bar from former owner Herbert "Kip" Pohl last spring, did not return phone calls seeking comment Sunday night.

In a similar incident on April 18, a manager at Etc., 118 S. Dubuque St., allegedly ignited alcohol he had poured on the bar, burning several bar patrons.

While both bars were charged with use of an open flame, Matthews said the severity of the Union incident is not so great as that of Etc., which at that time was owned by Pohl.

Etc. was also charged with reckless use of fire, and its liquor license was suspended.

Matthews said he could not speculate on the penalties that may be levied against the Union.

Iowa races avoid social issues

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWS ANALYSIS

DES MOINES — In the busy run-and-gun world of politics, folks often don't take time to pause and figure out what isn't happening in a heated campaign.

It's likely that's happening this year, and it could be crucial in determining who emerges as successful in this election cycle.

There's an truism in politics that the candidate who controls the debate agenda wins, and that struggle is playing out again this year. That's best traced through a series of campaign debates held in Iowa's high-profile Senate and gubernatorial races.

U.S. Sen. Tom Harkin and GOP challenger Greg Ganske, as have Gov. Tom Vilsack and challenger Doug Gross, have waged a long series of campaign debates. Like most election cycles, those debates have done little to alter the fundamental dynamics of either race.

In the Senate debate series, the rivals have fought about Social Security and health care, while Ganske has tried hard to make an issue of the taping of one of his campaign events. In the gubernatorial race, the rivals have fought about the state's budget, economy, and traded charges over big hog lots.

Taking a step back, it may be instructive to look at what isn't being talked about in either race. Those omissions have consequences.

First, both races are focusing almost exclusively on the pocket-book. Emotional hot-button social issues such as abortion, crime, gay rights, and ethnicity have simply fallen by the wayside.

There's a delicate balancing act at work in the decision not to press those issues. Both Republican challengers understand they must energize the conservative base of their party to win, while at the same time appealing to independents, who outnumber Republicans and Democrats.

Openly courting conservatives by pushing social issues turns off independents, but ignoring conservative issues runs a similar risk.

Those folks certainly won't vote Democratic, but if they aren't energized, they won't be out knocking on doors on Election Day or digging deeper for that last contribution.

In the governor's race, there's plenty of fodder. Vilsack has flirted with gay-rights issues in some proclamations, as well as vetoing anti-abortion measures. There's a silence from the Gross campaign on such issues, and we are now entering the closing days when an abrupt shift would be very risky.

Changing course and diving into social issues at this point likely would bring charges of desperation.

In the Senate race, Ganske is trying hard to make Harkin's character a central issue in the race, an effort that is made more difficult by the reality that nothing has been linked directly to Harkin. There's little doubt he's a hard-nosed campaigner, but no evidence of anything more.

Iowa Gov. Tom Vilsack, right, shakes hands with Republican challenger Doug Gross after their televised debate in Johnston, Iowa, on Oct. 12.

In final debate, Vilsack, Gross duel on economy

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHNSTON, Iowa — Gov. Tom Vilsack and Republican rival Doug Gross accused each other of skewed spending priorities and misleading voters during a lively closing campaign debate this weekend.

Gross accused Vilsack of turning his back on efforts to keep good jobs in the state, and Vilsack said that none of Gross' promises can be kept because he'll spend too much money on corporate tax breaks.

"We expect a governor in Iowa to fight every fight," Gross said. "We'll establish a hot line for good-paying jobs in Iowa. When the phone rings for good jobs in Iowa, we'll answer."

"These have been difficult and challenging times, but Iowans have responded during these times as they always do," said Vilsack. "Throughout it all, we've maintained our Iowa values. My opponent, he places his faith and trust in corporate tax cuts. I put my faith and trust in you."

The Oct. 13 debate was the last of three between the gubernatorial rivals, and it is likely to have the most effect. The one-hour debate was sponsored by the Des Moines Register and broadcast live statewide by Iowa Public Television, which planned to rebroadcast the debate Sunday night.

Most polls have shown Vilsack developing a lead in the race, though Gross remains within striking distance. Neither candidate launched a new assault or made a campaign-altering gaffe in the debate.

For the most part, both candidates stuck closely to the fundamental issues they have pushed throughout the campaign.

Vilsack said that he has steered the state through tough economic times without boosting taxes, sparing education and health care from the worst of the cuts.

ISU vet, UI health degrees coupled

AMES (AP) — University administrators are planning a new program that will let students earn a doctorate in veterinary medicine from Iowa State University while earning a degree in public health from the UI.

The streamlined process to get the dual degrees is a response to concerns that have developed over anthrax, West Nile virus, rabies, and other public-health risks.

"We need to be concerned about food, water, and air supply that could be subject to terrorism or bioterrorism," said Jack Barnette, director of the public health program at UI. "Animals show things wrong before humans do. It makes sense for these two to be grouped together."

underwent her first transplant, which used marrow donated by her older sister, Ashley, now 12. One year later, she developed graft-versus-host disease, in which the body recognizes the marrow as foreign and rejects it. She now takes immune-suppressants to combat her illness. "She goes to treatments at the University Hospital for 10 hours on Mondays," said Kelly Fink, Amber's mother. "The rest of the time she goes to preschool and plays like any other little girl."

Monson and Biderman are aiming to raise $6,400 through the Team In Training program run by the Leukemia Society.

"The money will be used for financial aid dispersed to families in need," said Carol Tebockhorst, the campaign manager for the Iowa Chapter. "They can receive up to $500 a year for travel, medicine, phone cards, and whatever they need to help out."

While Biderman and Monson are raising funds for Amber, they also need to raise enough money to pay their expenses for the trip.

"We get ... hotel [discounts] from Team In Training, so that helps," Biderman said. "We are both on the rugby team, and all the guys have been supportive in donating and helping us raise money." Biderman says the Sports Column has also helped.

Together, they have raised $1,500 thus far, but with many donations expected this week, they hope to surpass their goal.

"If we can raise enough money, we want to be able to fly Amber and her mother to Hawaii to watch the event," said Monson. "We've exchanged letters but never have actually met her in person."

Fink said that although her daughter is affected by this disease, she plays and acts just like other children.

"She is very outgoing and happy all the time," Fink said. "She is the youngest in her preschool class, yet she seems to be the leader of the group."

Standing 3 feet tall, with light brown curly hair, Amber says some of her favorite things are coloring, reading the "Three Little Pigs," and playing "Hospital" with the family. Amber likes to be the doctor.

Emission standards hold a compelling argument, he said. But they are ignored by both parties, the Republicans for their big business auto-manufacturing friends and the Democrats for their union ties.

Leach doesn't accept political action committee or out-of-state money, and he limits individual contributions to half of their constitutionally allowed levels.

exemplify the inspiration for a new student group, which is modeled after the Volunteer Illini Project at the University of Illinois and the Community Service Committee at the University of Wisconsin.

UI seniors Dan Rossi and Chris Loftus launched Volunteer for Iowa this semester to provide students with volunteer information and direct them to less well known organizations.

"A lot of time, people go to the Salvation Army, and it may be full, and they may not know about a smaller organization," Loftus said.

Rossi said the group has not considered any specific organizations yet, but it is working with Volunteer Administrators Network of Iowa City.

"We plan to expand off of [the network] to keep a finger on [the] pulse of what volunteers need," Rossi said.

The Big Brothers Big Sisters Program has approximately 50 to 60 UI student volunteers per semester, said Jill Kromminga, the program's director.

"It's nice because they bring a lot of energy, and second, the kids also really love to spend time with college-age students," Kromminga said.

As usual, the Women's Resource and Action Center's volunteer list is overflowing this semester, with approximately 60 names, said Monique DiCarlo, the center's director. Those who are denied may be disappointed initially, but DiCarlo encourages them not to give up.

"Anyone wanting to volunteer should ideally speak with someone face to face and explore what it is they're looking for in a volunteer experience," she said.

The first step that Rossi and Loftus have taken can go further, said DiCarlo, adding that she plans to start an organization this year that will have personnel to direct students toward the right volunteer opportunities.

Group pushing housing for mentally ill

CHATHAM

Friedrich's parents, Bruce and Rose Marie Friedrich of North Liberty, have been working to get the apartments built for almost a decade.

"The beauty of these apartments is that individuals could have their own private space and also have a commons area where they can socialize," Bruce Friedrich said.

The commons area will allow residents to watch television, play games, and share meals together at their will. This type of housing, say the Friedrichs and other parents of mentally ill adults, has been needed but long overlooked by the county.

A similar proposal presented in the mid 1990s was rejected by the Johnson County Board of Supervisors because Chatham Oaks was outside city limits at the time and lacked bus service, raising concerns that residents would have trouble traveling to work.

The facility is now within Iowa City boundaries, but bus service is still absent, forcing Chatham Oaks residents to rely on the facility for transportation.

Approximately 20 mentally ill Chatham Oaks residents live at the "total care facility," where they are closely supervised, while others with severe mental illness live on their own with very little if any supervision, compromising their health. The alliance is advocating for an option between the two extremes.

Rose Marie Friedrich, a retired psychiatric nurse at the UI College of Nursing with 29 years of experience, conducted a study in 1999 that showed severely mentally ill adults who lived alone experienced problems with nutrition, physical health, daily routines, and social isolation.

Alliance member Gene Spaziani, a UI professor emeritus, understands the isolation of the mentally ill. His schizophrenic adult son, Dan Spaziani, lives alone in an apartment in Marion.

"The [proposed] apartments would be beneficial principally because he would be among people he could relate to," Gene Spaziani said. "Because of his illness, it's hard for him to make friends."

Dan Spaziani has a part-time job and a support group, and he is responsible for taking his own medication. He's also suffered episodes that required hospitalization — a problem his father believes could be remedied with regular checkups by Chatham Oaks employees at the proposed apartments.

Johnson County Supervisor Terrence Neuzil, who serves on a subcommittee that is looking to develop the area, said the members should begin discussing the proposed apartments by the end of the month.

Neuzil is open to the project, he said, which he concedes has some positive points and has strong backing from Chatham Oaks representatives.

"It would help the people who get passed through the system," said Mary Donovan, the administrator about the facility.

Sniper-phobia stalks D.C.

BY CAROL MORELLO AND JAMIE STOCKWELL
WASHINGTON POST

With the manhunt continuing for a sniper linked by police to 10 shootings in the Washington area, a weekend without a new attack brought a mixture of relief and dread to people who went about normal activities with foreboding Sunday, wondering whether the bloodshed will resume.

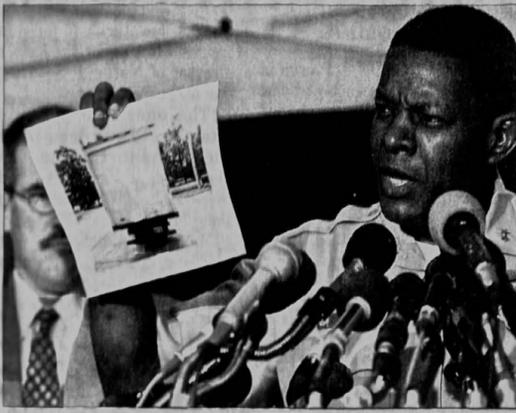

The last killing occurred on the morning of Oct. 11, when a 53-year-old father of six was shot while fueling his sedan in a gas station just south of Fredericksburg, Va. At the time, a state trooper stood just 50 yards away, investigating a traffic accident.

And on Sunday, even as people shopped, took their children to pumpkin patches, and attended football games, thoughts of the elusive sniper remained in the forefront of people's minds.

"People are very anxious about what the coming week may bring," said Sean Connaughton, the chairman of the Board of County Supervisors in Prince William County, Va., where one of eight victims killed by the sniper was shot at a gas station Oct. 9.

"They don't really know what to expect," he said. "While in general they're very confident that at some point the individual or individuals will be apprehended, the issue is how much more damage is he going to cause."

increasingly brazen sniper defended their meager release of information, saying Sunday they don't want the killer to know what they know.

Authorities pointed to the dangerous balance between pleading for public help and revealing too much.

"We don't want to release anything that may cause ... anyone to think he's a suspect," said Mike Bouchard of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms.

In Montgomery County, Md., today, school students will not be allowed to partake in any outdoor activities, officials said.

Similar restrictions will remain in place in Prince George's County, Md., schools, where all athletics events and practices have been suspended.

Sunday, a tip hotline set up by authorities was flooded with calls after police released composite images of a white box truck that witnesses reported seeing near more than one of four fatal shooting scenes in Montgomery County, Md., on Oct. 3. Authorities said they believe the truck had damage to its rear and had dull, oxidized paint, suggesting an older vehicle.

'Sopranos' rain on Columbus Day parade

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Michael Bloomberg marched with local officials in the Bronx on Sunday, a day before the city's main Columbus Day parade, which he planned to sit out because organizers would not allow him to walk with two cast members from "The Sopranos."

"It's great to be in the Bronx, and it's great to be at a parade where you can march with all your friends," Bloomberg said Sunday.

Organizers of today's parade in Manhattan say the hit HBO show perpetuates negative stereotypes of Italian-Americans.

The Columbus Citizens Foundation had sought a federal court order banning Bloomberg from bringing Dominic Chianese and Lorraine Bracco to the annual celebration. Chianese plays New Jersey mob boss Junior Soprano; Bracco plays a psychiatrist treating mobster Tony Soprano.

After both sides agreed that organizers had the right to invite or disinvite anyone to their parade, the judge said he had nothing to rule on.

Foundation Vice President Frank Fusaro said the group still wanted Bloomberg to march — by himself. But the mayor said he would instead have lunch with the actors today.

Bloomberg said he invited the pair to march because Bracco acts as a city spokeswoman on environmental issues, and Chianese makes a public service announcement for tourism.

"Everybody should lighten up a little," he said Sunday.

Donna Inzano of the Bronx agreed.

"It's a TV series," she said. "They're not really in the mob. They're only actors."

Election-day registration worries officials in Colorado, California

BY COLLEEN SLEVIN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — An expansion of democracy or an invitation to fraud?

Those are the competing arguments as voters in Colorado and California consider questions on the Nov. 5 ballot that would allow people to register to vote literally at the last minute — at polling places on Election Day.

Six other states already have taken that step. They have reported relatively high voter turnouts and no serious problems with fraud.

Supporters of the two proposals — Colorado's Amendment 30 and California's Proposition 52 — say the measures will produce similar results in their states, helping the many newcomers who often forget to register in advance.

Registration now ends 15 days before Election Day in California and 29 days in advance in Colorado. The result, said pro-amendment spokesman Dave Minshall in Colorado, is to disenfranchise hundreds of thousands of voters.

Critics in both states, including the secretaries of State and other elections officials, say the changes could open the door to fraud by allowing criminals and non-citizens to vote. They say it would be nearly impossible to investigate whether a person voted illegally.

"This isn't Iowa. This is California, and the idea that a polling worker would know that voter is supposed to vote there is a quaint idea," said Dave Gilliard, the director of Citizens & Law Enforcement Against Election Fraud in Sacramento.

Maine and Minnesota began allowing same-day registration in 1973; Idaho, New Hampshire, Wisconsin, and Wyoming have followed. North Dakota doesn't require voters to register at all; they simply need to show a valid ID if asked.

Minnesota Secretary of State Mary Kiffmeyer supports the same-day system but wants stronger safeguards, such as requiring a photo identification or Social Security number. Minnesotans now can vote merely by having a pre-registered voter vouch for their residency.

Iraq set for 'election'

BY ELLEN KNICKMEYER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD, Iraq — The victory rallies are set, and the tributes are ready. In an Iraqi yes-or-no vote on re-electing Saddam Hussein, the only cliffhanger in Tuesday's vote is whether the two-decade Iraqi leader will beat his last showing: 99.96 percent.

In Iraq, where many believe war with the United States is coming, that 1995 result for Saddam is now seen as somewhat tepid.

"This time, 100 percent!" worker Mayad Aiwan cried Sunday. "Because the Iraqi people love our leader!"

But as the ballot on which only Saddam's name appears suggests, it's not as if Saddam's people have much choice.

Shopkeepers hung banners on dreary storefronts Sunday, the new white sheets and cheerful red, green, blue, and yellow lettering the only bright spots in a smoggy city choked by a decade of international isolation and sanctions on Saddam's regime.

"Yes, yes, yes Saddam!" "Iraq will win, God save our leader!" the banners in Arabic proclaimed, in slogans repeated with modest variations on posters nationwide.

"Yes, yes, yes Saddam! No, no, no USA!" declared one such sheet, in English, on a school wall on the road to a complex that Washington has targeted as an alleged nuclear site. Girls in braids and scarves played in the schoolyard.

In what human-rights groups universally call one of the world's most oppressive regimes, it is difficult to determine how ordinary Iraqis truly view the ballot.

On Baghdad's streets, people voiced support for Saddam similar to that found on the slogans.

Jassim Mohammed/Associated Press

A man works on one of the statues of President Saddam Hussein at the Academy of Fine Arts in Baghdad on Sunday. The statue is one of many erected for the upcoming referendum day on Tuesday.

All were questioned Sunday in the presence of a government-appointed minder, officially required of all foreign press.

"This vote will be the challenge of the Iraqi people to the United States," engineer Achmed Abdul Sahib said outside a city bus station. "More than last time. More than 99 percent."

But there was only silence after an awkward question was posed in the presence of the minder: Why the 0.04 percent "no" vote in the last Saddam election?

Curious soldiers stopped and clustered behind the minder, who froze in hesitation at the question and sagged in relief after being told he didn't have to answer.

Iraq's media estimate more than 11 million Iraqis will cast ballots on Saddam's election.

Most polling places are schools. Iraqis ages 18 and above will enter with their voter cards, and be handed the ballot with the "Yes" or "No" boxes.

Iraq already has announced celebrations "like a wedding night" for Saddam's election victory.

Artists tell newspapers what tributes they will present the victor.

Anti-Iraq coalition builds slowly

BY SANDRA SOBIEAJ
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush promises to be at the helm of a "vast coalition" against Iraq. Unlike his father's 31-nation force for the Persian Gulf War, however, it is a coalition slow to gather and lacking in marquee players.

Bulgaria has anted up an airport. Romania guaranteed air bases and airspace rights to U.S. fighter jets. Qatar is upgrading its al-Udeid air base and letting the Pentagon set up a command center and pre-position armored brigade equipment there.

While the lineup looks like small-fry now, some experts expect that to change soon.

With Congress' overwhelming vote to authorize a military strike if necessary to disarm Iraq and remove President Saddam Hussein, the U.N. Security Council and skittish would-be coalition members will fall into line, said Bill Taylor, the former director of National Security Studies at West Point.

"The ones who pay any attention to our democracy understand that the hand of the president is strengthened enormously by Congress going along," he said.

"You're seeing the trickle right now, and he's having a much tougher time than his father, but he's going to pull it off."

Today's big bench-warmers — Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Turkey, Greece, Canada, and others — can be counted on to enlist if and when Bush commits the full force of the U.S. military to wiping out Saddam and his weapons programs, agreed Ivo Daalder, who was an adviser to President Clinton's National Security Council.

Sweet Home Alabama

Where:

Reese Witherspoon stars as fashion designer Melanie Carmichael. Melanie becomes engaged to Andrew (Patrick Dempsey, left), but first she must divorce her redneck husband, Jake (Josh Lucas, right).

There used to be a time when a movie's success or failure was generally dependent on a combination of factors, including script, direction, cinematography, and editing. These days, it seems entire films can be carried strictly by the charisma of its lead actors. Such is the case in Sweet Home Alabama, a flick that boasts the always watchable Reese Witherspoon as its main attraction.

Melanie Carmichael (Witherspoon) is luckier than most folks — she's a successful fashion designer in New York City and her rich boyfriend, Andrew (Patrick Dempsey), not only looks like JFK Jr., he's also the World's Nicest Guy. When Melanie accepts his marriage proposal, she goes home to Alabama to clear up one tiny detail — she's still married to good ol' boy Jake Perry (Josh Lucas). Jake still isn't pleased that his wife abandoned him to get a fresh start in the Big Apple, and he takes every opportunity he can to avoid giving her a divorce.

Of course, anybody with any training in Romantic Comedy 101 will see where this is going. The script by C. Jay Cox borders on a sitcom sensibility, and the narrative is strictly connect-the-dots. Too many plot points work only based on coincidence or out-and-out implausibilities.

Director Andy Tennant, a longtime veteran of television shows ("Brisco County, Jr.," "Sliders") and middling romance flicks (Fools Rush In, Anna and the King) gives Sweet Home Alabama all the oomph and originality that its screenplay deserves (that is, hardly any). There is one delicious overhead shot that takes place mid-beerswig that recalls more madcap comedies, but it's isolated in an otherwise muddled landscape of unnotable cinematography.

Oh, a word to fans of Deep South rock 'n' roll — this movie features Jewel's cover of Lynrd Skynrd's classic song, and it's conceivably one of the worst crimes perpetrated by a human on fellow humans.

Film: Sweet Home Alabama
Director: Andy Tennant
Writers: C. Jay Cox
Starring: Reese Witherspoon, Josh Lucas, and Patrick Dempsey
Length: 108 minutes

Luckily, there's a bevy of interesting performances in the movie, and that more than keeps things watchable ... even very, very likable.

Witherspoon, who has carved a name for herself in the oaken trunk of Hollywood by taking on a variety of fascinating projects, treads water just a bit in this fairly standard tale. However, Sweet Home Alabama hardly does a thing to diminish her enormous allure. It's difficult not to enjoy what she does with the part of the woman who gets back to her roots whether she likes it or not. Her haughty behavior gives way to some surprising outbursts that Witherspoon gives the perfect spin.

Her chemistry with co-star Lucas is excellent. One almost has to root for them to put aside their bad history and get together, even though the standard, stupid, old-hat story of the exes' reconciliation has been done and overdone since its greatest instance in 1940's His Girl Friday. Part of this success is Lucas, who has a blue-eyed, unshaven Southern charm to him — a better version of Matthew McConaughey. His performance begins as a redneck stereotype, but by the film's end, he's one of the more appealing male romantic leads in recent history.

Sweet Home Alabama also benefits from the Embry Effect. In a small role, Ethan Embry (That Thing You Do, Can't Hardly Wait) shines through with his typical delivery of barely contained dopey enthusiasm. I don't know what it is about him — it's not like he can ACT. Maybe it's just the fact that his eyelids look like they're permanently stapled to the tops of their sockets. Embry just contributes something extra-special (and extra-bizarre) to everything he does.

Together, the cast members (including a nicely Southern Fred Ward and Mary Kay Place as Melanie's parents) overcomes every single inadequacy thrown at them. Most of the actors avoid playing caricatures (and the ones who do are funny as hell). Sweet Home Alabama manages to stay out of the depths of forgettable star vehicle mediocrity and aspires to be a cool diversion that anybody can enjoy. Ya'll go see it now, y'hear?

Caring, sharing

Fall is not only the season for autumn colors, the World Series, and college football. Fall is also the time of year when most workplaces conduct their charitable giving campaigns. As both the federal and state governments continue to cut funding for social, health, and welfare programs, many nonprofit organizations have become more dependent on financial support from individuals to carry out their programs.

Iowa Shares is a federation of 24 Iowa nonprofit organizations that address issues involving human need, social justice, cultural awareness, women's issues, the environment, health care, and gun violence. Member organizations in the Iowa City/Cedar Rapids area include Environmental Advocates, Public Access Television, Women's Resource and Action Center, Iowa United Nations Association, Linn County United Nations Association, Iowa Renewable Energy Association, and Iowans for the Prevention of Gun Violence.

Iowa Shares campaigns are currently underway, or scheduled to be conducted, at the UI, the Iowa City School District, and federal workplaces. We encourage employees at these workplaces to consider Iowa Shares when making their charitable giving decisions. A unique feature of Iowa Shares is that donors may choose to designate that their contribution go to one or more Iowa Shares member organizations. They may also exclude an organization from sharing in their contribution. Iowa Shares believes that people donating money to a charity have a right to give to the organizations or issues of their choice. Nondesignated contributions are shared equally among all Iowa Shares member organizations.

Unfortunately, many workplaces do not offer the Iowa Shares option to employees in their campaigns. People who would like to make an individual contribution to Iowa Shares may do so by going to our Web site at www.iowashares.org.

When a community cares, Iowa shares.

up myself." Now, I don't know much about the Add Sheet people, whether or not they get paid to stand there for many hours every Wednesday, rain or shine, handing out advertisements for local businesses. But they remind me of the people I worked for when I was in high school.

I was employed at a place called New Hope Village in Carroll, Iowa. There, they strive to enhance the lives of mentally ill patients by offering them support, care, and opportunities to interact with the community. One program finds employment opportunities for higher-functioning persons with disabilities. They sort recyclables at the Carroll Recycle Center, do janitorial work at Pella Corp., mow lawns for private homeowners, etc. These may seem menial or semi-menial tasks, but it gives them an opportunity to earn some income and provides some purpose to their life.

So on Wednesdays when I run into an Add Sheet guy or an Add Sheet lady, I take an Add Sheet, and I thank them. And when I run into another that day, which I inevitably will, I decline and say that I already have one, and I thank them again. Because they're just doing their job and doing it very well, which warrants appreciation.

Besides, what would Wednesdays in Iowa City be like without the Add Sheet people?

It all Adds up

First, I would like to commend the Opinions section of The Daily Iowan this year. Never previously a newspaper reader, I've become a huge fan of The Daily Iowan and an avid reader of most Opinions columns printed nearly every day. I think your staff is incredible, and I enjoy in sharing some of their opinions. It is one of the main reasons I read your paper.

Another reason that I read The Daily Iowan is the for the Daily Break page with the Ledge and the comics. It's just quick and easy when you're in a hurry. Banishment would be a more suitable punishment for Lindh Rather than face an uncertain trial and a long list of charges, John Lindh, "The American Taliban," has entered a plea of guilty in exchange for U.S. officials dropping the most serious charges against him. For being a member of the Taliban, Lindh was sentenced to 20 years in prison. While many Americans surely feel that he deserves punishment, it is obvious that he is being singled out and unfairly punished because of his American citizenship.

Lindh's sentence is grossly disproportionate to his crime. According to statistics published by the Department of Justice, most violent offenders get sentences of less than 10 years. These people cruelly and intentionally destroy the lives of their fellow human beings. Lindh, however, fell in with the wrong crowd while trying to find himself. He was drawn into an evil organization much like many young men and women find themselves pulled into religious cults. He must be held responsible for his actions, but he cannot be held responsible for the actions of those around him. Twenty years in prison for guilt-by-association is simply excessive.

In reality, the only reason he received such an extreme sentence was his American citizenship. There was no proof that Lindh took part in any terrorist plots and no proof he was involved in Lindh has been singled out for punishment based on the place of his birth, not the caliber of the crime he committed.

the prison riot in which a CIA operative was killed. Simply put, he behaved as an enemy soldier. According to the Geneva Convention, prisoners of war cannot be charged for taking part in combat. They may only be tried for war crimes. Because there is no proof that Lindh committed any war crimes, he should be reasonably free from prosecution. However, his infamy as "The American Taliban" and his American citizenship open a new door for the Justice Department. Rather than treat him as a POW or an "unlawful combatant" like his Taliban brethren, officials decided to treat him as an American citizen and charge him in criminal court. This is tantamount to selectively punishing him based on his birthplace.

Perhaps the greatest punishment of all would be to give Lindh exactly what he thought he wanted. He took up arms against the United States and fought against his former homeland. For his actions, he should be banished from the United States and never allowed to return. He willfully joined a group of thugs and terrorists, and he should be treated exactly as such. However, it is completely unfair to rob him of 20 years of his life for choosing the losing side in a war.

Some smart solutions to a smokin' problem

One-half of me is an English major. (The other half is a political-science major.) This means that I spend one-half of my class time in the English-Philosophy Building. But I also work in the English department, which means that I spend at least another 15 hours each week in EPB. I say "at least" because I like the people I work with and sometimes spend my free time between class in the office, because I'm already in the building.

All this adds up to a lot of time in EPB. And EPB, if you didn't already know (although I'm sure you do, because EPB is infamous for it) is surrounded by smokers. Always. There is a billowing cloud of smoke encompassing each entrance that each non-smoker must begrudgingly make her or his way through.

I hate smoking — and I know hate is a strong word — and I would even go so far as to say that I hate smokers. I do. They're inconsiderate. They place the importance of their habit above the well-being and preferences of others and set such considerations aside just so they can get their fix. I have no qualms over showing my distaste for this group, either — in the form of a deeply held breath or a loud cough. It's the least they deserve.

My hatred for this habit is deep-seeded. My dad was a smoker. He smoked almost the entire time I lived at home — 17 years by my count. Five and a half years ago, he quit, cold turkey. Granted, I wish he would have quit sooner, but at least he did it (a note to the EPB pack: It can be done). Nevertheless, I had to endure road trips in the winter with the windows rolled up and smoking in the house for many years before my sister developed allergies.

My experience growing up made me determined never to smoke — never to try smoking. And I haven't. I have successfully made it through three years of college without touching one cigarette to my lips. I don't think that's something many college students can say.

So, with all of these things in mind — and of course, the facts that smoking causes thousands of deaths each year, turns teeth and skin yellow, causes bad breath, and just a horrible smell all around — I've come up with a few ideas about what to do with all the world's inconsiderate smokers.

First, I propose that the Iowa City City Council and other city and state governing bodies go ahead and make all public establishments non-smoking — even bars. Why not? I would love to go out for one night in this town and not come home smelling like I spent the night dancing in an ash tray.

Really, I'm not sure why smoking isn't already illegal in all public places. Actually, I'm sure it's because of the influence of Big Tobacco in Washington, but that is another story for another day.

California eliminated public smoking, and it works well there. Of course, they have wonderful weather year around, but you see smoking idiots standing outside in the winter here, puffing away, anyway. I'm sure they wouldn't mind banishment from a few more buildings.

And to deal with smoking outside — on sidewalks and surrounding the entrances of buildings — I suggest that we implement some sort of smoking boxes, similar to the smoking rooms in some airports. Smokers are already exiled from many public buildings. If they're forced outside already, we may as well herd them into 5-by-5 boxes to collectively partake in their habit. That way, the rest of us are spared from breathing in their toxins, and they have a place in which to meet friends.

Finally, I suggest that we do one of two things (or both). Either lawmakers raise the legal smoking age to 21 or legalize marijuana.

If there are going to be inane laws that require U.S. citizens to be three years over the legal voting age to drink, we may as well make it the same age for smokers. Drinkers already have to congregate in one place to do what they enjoy, and generally, no one holds their breath as they pass a group of drinkers.

And let's get one thing straight: Cigarettes cause cancer. Marijuana is used to ease the pain of cancer. Is there any doubt which one should be legal?

Every piece of legislation to restrict the rights of smokers that can be passed should be. It's the least they deserve.

Warnings preceded Bali blast

BY DANA PRIEST
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — For the past month, the level of terrorist threat against Americans at home and overseas has remained higher than it was around Sept. 11, but U.S. intelligence agencies have been unable to narrow the threat to particular geographic locations, and they did not detect any heightened terrorist activity preceding the weekend's deadly bombing in Indonesia, U.S. intelligence officials said Sunday.

While the perpetrators of the attack on the island of Bali have not been identified, U.S. officials said it appeared that the bombing represents the latest in a new wave of attacks being carried out or directed by a partially intact Al Qaeda leadership and their sympathizers.

CIA stations around the world and foreign intelligence agencies working more closely with their American counterparts than at any time in recent history have received a flood of information about threats to Americans. But the information is usually so general or cryptic that it cannot be used to thwart a specific act.

"This has been coming in for a while now, people have been warning of all kinds of attacks," said one U.S. official with access to daily intelligence reporting.

A recorded call-to-arms broadcast on the al-Jazeera network Oct. 8 by the second-ranking Al Qaeda leader, Ayman Zawahiri, threatened attacks "on America and its allies." The tape was released one day after an audiotape of the voice of Osama bin Laden was aired and in the midst of a string of attacks of a level unseen since Sept. 11, 2001.

They include what is now believed to be a terrorist bombing Oct. 6 on a French oil tanker near Yemen, the Oct. 8 shooting death of a Marine in Kuwait, the bombing death of Army Special Forces soldier on Oct. 2 in the Philippines, and other recent attacks against French and German targets in the Middle East. Law-enforcement officials also have not ruled out the possibility that the Washington area sniper attacks, which have killed eight people and wounded two others, are connected to international terrorism.

The ranking member of the U.S. intelligence committee, Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., said Sunday he believed the world may be witnessing a second wave of attacks by a reinvigorated Al Qaeda. But, he added, the attacks are likely "to manifest themselves in a different way" given that the organization is smaller and operating in a more decentralized fashion.

Shelby, who is regularly briefed by intelligence officials, said the level of "chatter" or communications being picked up from suspected terrorists and cells around the world indicate the likelihood of more attacks, including large-scale ones, possibly on U.S. soil. He said the Indonesia attack was not surprising — "we know there are cells there."

But, he added, the Bali bombing should be understood "in the context of recent events," other bombings in Yemen, Indonesia, and elsewhere. "I'm sure there will be more."

Intelligence officials said they did not know who was behind the Bali bombing, in which at least 187 people died, but were certain its aim was to kill Westerners and hurt the robust Western-based tourism on the lush, largely Hindu island.

Phone bomb kills official; Palestinians blame Israel

BY MOLLY MOORE
WASHINGTON POST

JERUSALEM — A Palestinian identified by Israeli authorities as a militant leader was killed Sunday night when the public telephone he was using exploded. Palestinian television described the death as an Israeli-planned assassination.

Mohammad Shtawi Abayat, 27, of the Bethlehem area, was one of six Palestinians killed Sunday in violent incidents across the West Bank and Gaza Strip, according to Palestinian media reports and Israeli officials.

Abayat was a member of a prominent Bethlehem-area clan, many of whose members have been exiled, arrested, or killed by Israeli security forces since the Palestinian uprising began two years ago.

He reportedly was talking on a pay phone outside the main hospital serving the community of Beit Jala, adjacent to Bethlehem, when the telephone exploded, a technique Palestinians say has been used in the past by Israel to assassinate militants.

The Abayat family has said that at least 15 members of the clan have been killed by Israeli forces during the conflict, and many more have been arrested or exiled, including seven members who were inside Bethlehem's Church of the Nativity during the Israeli army's 39-day siege there last spring.

An Israeli military spokeswoman had no comment on Abayat's death. Two Palestinian television stations in Bethlehem said the explosion was an assassination.

Israeli officials have said previously that several members of the family were leaders or members of the al Aqsa Martyrs Brigades, which describes itself as the militant wing of Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement.

The U.S. ambassador to Israel, Daniel Kurtzer, sent a strongly worded message to Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's office over the weekend, saying Israel had not met promises to ease tough restrictions imposed on the Palestinians, a diplomatic source said.

The move comes as Sharon prepared to depart for the United States today; the Israeli leader will meet with President Bush on Wednesday.

Kurtzer's letter called for Israel to ease its military grip on the West Bank Palestinian cities it occupied after suicide bombings in June, allow Palestinians greater freedom of movement, and turn over withheld taxes that Israel collected on behalf of the Palestinians, according to the diplomatic source and Israeli newspapers.

Low turnout nullifies Serb vote

BY DUSAN STOJANOVIC
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Serbia's first presidential elections since Slobodan Milosevic was ousted from power were ruled invalid Sunday because of low turnout, independent vote monitors said.

Widespread voter apathy — triggered by the slow pace of reforms, quarreling among pro-democracy leaders who ousted Milosevic, and low living standards — produced a turnout of 45.5 percent, according to the independent Center for Free Elections and Democracy.

The legal minimum for valid elections was 50 percent.

"Definitely, there is no possibility that these elections succeeded," said Zoran Lucic, a spokesman for the group. "We have not reached our goal with these elections, and we did not elect a president."

Lucic said that exit polls showed that Yugoslav President Vojislav Kostunica won 66.7 percent of the votes and that deputy Prime Minister Miroslav Labus had 31.3 percent. But with Sunday's vote invalid, Serbs will have to re-launch the election process by Jan. 5, 2003.

Official turnout figures and results were not expected before today.

In 1997, a vote for the Serbian presidency failed because of low turnout. A new round of voting the same year led to the election of Milan Milutinovic, the current Serbian president and a former Milosevic ally. Milutinovic — who kept a low profile after Milosevic's ouster — is wanted by the U.N. tribunal for alleged war crimes in Kosovo.

Kostunica on Sunday criticized the Milosevic-era election law that requires large turnouts and two rounds of voting, calling it "irrational."

He has said repeatedly that a failure to elect the Serbian president would inflict "instability, tensions, and chaos" on the republic and jeopardize unfinished reforms.

Kostunica, a moderate nationalist, finished first in the first round of the elections on Sept. 29, but he failed to get a majority needed for outright victory. Kostunica succeeded Milosevic as Yugoslavia's president, who was ousted in October 2000.

Turnout was 55 percent in the first round, but Milosevic's allies — including ultranationalist leader Vojislav Seselj — who failed to make it to the runoff urged their supporters to boycott the vote.

"It's a pity that these elections did not succeed," said Slobodan Samardzic, an adviser to Kostunica, blaming the outcome on the "outdated" election law that requires a high turnout.

Ultrnationalist leader Vojislav Seselj, who failed to advance beyond the Sept. 29 first round of the elections, had urged his supporters to boycott the elections. But many Serbs had other reasons to stay home.

Many in Serbia had hoped for a faster improvement in living standards after the Milosevic era ended. Average salaries have gone up, but they have barely kept pace with soaring prices despite the relative stability of the national currency, the dinar. Unemployment stands at a staggering 40 percent.

Galvanizing voters into action was a challenge for Kostunica and Labus. Both advocate economic reforms, membership in the European Union, and cooperation with the West, but they disagree over the best way to achieve those goals.

Arabs urged to shrug off bin Laden

BY DONNA ABU-NASR
ASSOCIATED PRESS

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Mosques in Saudi Arabia are not allowed to preach extremism or recruit for Saudi dissident Osama bin Laden, a senior member of the Saudi religious establishment said Sunday.

Young Arabs, including Saudis, should not obey bin Laden's militant Islamic message because the world's most wanted man does not have the qualifications to speak in the name of Islam, Tawfeeq al-Sediry, the deputy minister of Islamic affairs, told the Associated Press.

"A man like him, who has specialized in business administration and economics, may be pious, may love Islam, or may be generally familiar with Islam, but that does not qualify him to issue edicts and talk about big issues that determine the destiny of people," said al-Sediry.

Al-Sediry insists that the 15 Saudi hijackers among the 19 Arabs who carried out the Sept. 11 terror attacks in the United States were not a product of Saudi schools and mosques but were indoctrinated in Afghanistan by unlicensed clergymen.

Islam and the way it is practiced in the Arab world, especially in Saudi Arabia, came under scrutiny following the attacks. Bin Laden, the main suspect in the attacks, has called on Muslims to rise against the West in defense of Islam.

Some in the United States have blamed Saudi Arabia's heavy religious environment, inspired by the ascetic teachings of an 18th-century clergyman Muhammad Ibn Abdel-Wahhab, for breeding the likes of bin Laden and the 15 hijackers.

They have pointed to anti-Western passages in textbooks, similar references in some mosque sermons that also attack Jews as the "sons of monkeys and pigs," and an adherence to one school of Islam that shuns more flexible and open ones.

Saudis have said that Muslim militancy is foreign to Abdel-Wahhab's teachings and is a result of ideas that thousands of Egyptian, Syrian, and other Muslim extremists brought with them to Saudi Arabia when they fled persecution at home in the 1960s and 1970s.

Making a presence

Iowa climbs polls to No. 15 with tough defensive win Saturday

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

Michigan State wide receiver Charles Rogers did a lot of talking during the first half of the Spartans' game with Iowa Oct. 12, but he didn't have much to say afterwards.

Rogers was in no mood to do any more trash-talking after Iowa demolished the Spartans 44-16, instead choosing to issue a statement to members of the media.

"[Iowa] did a great job, not only of stopping the run but also a good job in pass support," he said.

The Hawkeyes on defense didn't need to issue a similar statement; they made theirs on the field. Rogers was held to just 78 yards on five receptions and failed to score a touchdown for the first time in 13 games, and the Spartans were held to just 249 yards of total offense.

"The story of the game was our defense," said Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz, whose 6-1 Hawkeyes climbed two spots to No. 15 in this week's AP Top 25.

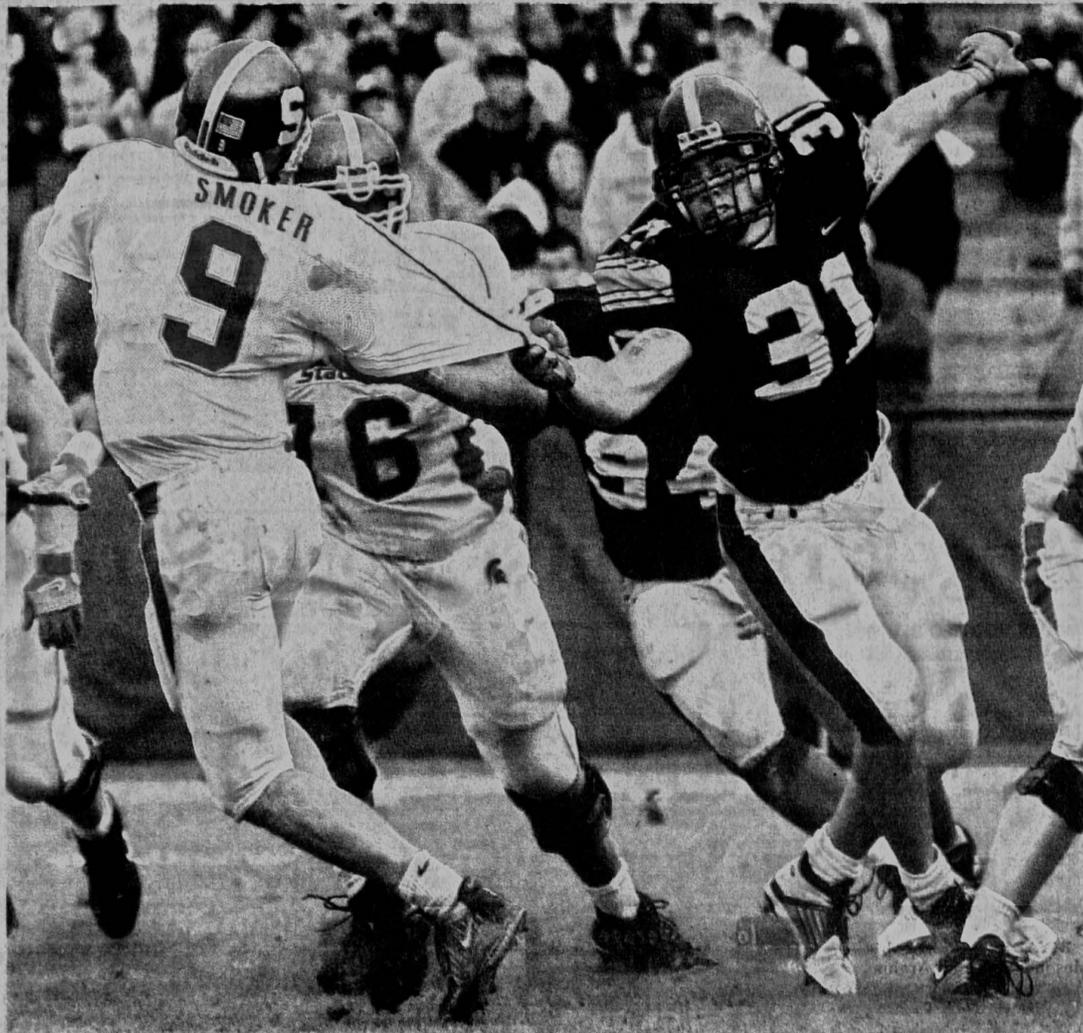

Iowa's opponents had been averaging well over 300 yards passing per game before the dominating defensive performance against the Spartans. The change was a combination of utilizing time in the film room leading up to the game and then constantly keeping pressure on Michigan State quarterback Jeff Smoker.

"I think we're all realizing watching films and having great practices are a big part of winning," strong safety Bob Sanders said. "We knew exactly where they were going."

The Hawkeyes intercepted Smoker twice and backup Damon Dowdell once, turning two of those picks into points. The first, a Sanders snare of a sideline pass for Rogers by Smoker, set up the first of three Nate Kaeding field goals. Derek Pagel returned the second interception 62 yards for a touchdown in the final 30 seconds of the first quarter.

"It was very, very hard to play over the number of turnovers we had," said Michigan State coach Bobby Williams.

The Spartans also had three fumbles, two of which were lost to the Hawkeyes. Defensive end Jonathan Babineaux forced one fumble on the Spartans' first possession of the second half, which eventually led to a 6-yard touchdown run by Fred Russell. Dowdell coughed the ball up on a vicious hit by Matt Roth on Michigan State's next possession, leading to a 28-yard Kaeding field goal.

"Coming in, we knew we had to get to them up front," said Roth, who finished the day with a team-high three sacks.

"They didn't dominate us from a physical standpoint," Williams said. "We turned the ball over too many times; we had a lot of passes over thrown." The constant presence of Iowa's defensive line also slowed a potent Michigan State ground attack as well. The Spartans managed just 55 yards of rushing against an Iowa team that boasts the second-best run defense in the nation. Tailback Dawan Moss, who ran over Northwestern for 191 yards during Michigan State's Big Ten opener Sept. 28, was held to just 24 yards on 16 carries. He scored the team's only touchdown on a 2-yard run during Michigan State's opening possession.

"The guys up front dug in and did a great job," Ferentz said of the defensive line's efforts.

It was the first time this season Iowa's defense had overshadowed one of the highest scoring offenses in the Big Ten.

Volleyball ends losing streak

BY ALI NOLLER
THE DAILY IOWAN

The smiles were the same, the results different.

After struggling in the first two weeks of Big Ten competition, the unfaltering and motivated Iowa volleyball team came away with a pair of dominating wins over Illinois and Purdue.

Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett had reason to praise her Hawkeyes, who improved to 8-8, 2-4 in the Big Ten.

"I'm so proud of my team," Buck-Crockett said Oct. 11 after beating Purdue in four games. "I feel really good about tonight. They pushed Purdue, and Purdue pushed back. They play hard, but when they pushed us, we didn't fall. That's the difference. This team is not letting someone crack them."

And did they ever push back hard.

Outside hitter Kelli Chesnut had another dynamic performance in front of the hometown crowd, electrifying the court with a team and career-high 17 kills and nine digs.

"I want to win," an exuberant Chesnut said following the match. "We went out with the attitude they weren't going to take anything away from us."

The Iowa City native, who has limited appearances left in front of her loyal fan base, is emphatic that the turnaround the team experienced over the weekend is more than simply luck.

"I don't want to walk off the court with anything in me," she said. "I want to leave it all there."

Chesnut was not the only Hawkeye to come alive — Renee Hill had 15 kills and 14 digs on the night, while Laura Simpson added 11 kills and nine digs, and Jitka Stehnova led the team in assists with 50.

Pam Kavadas collected 20 digs on the evening, leading the team, after a slow start by the Hawkeye sophomore.

"Coach said if I couldn't do it, she was going to take the [libero] jersey off me," Kavadas said of her struggling play.

In the first game, it was a battle for every point before Hill put the game away with an ace to bring the Hawkeyes a game closer to another conference win.

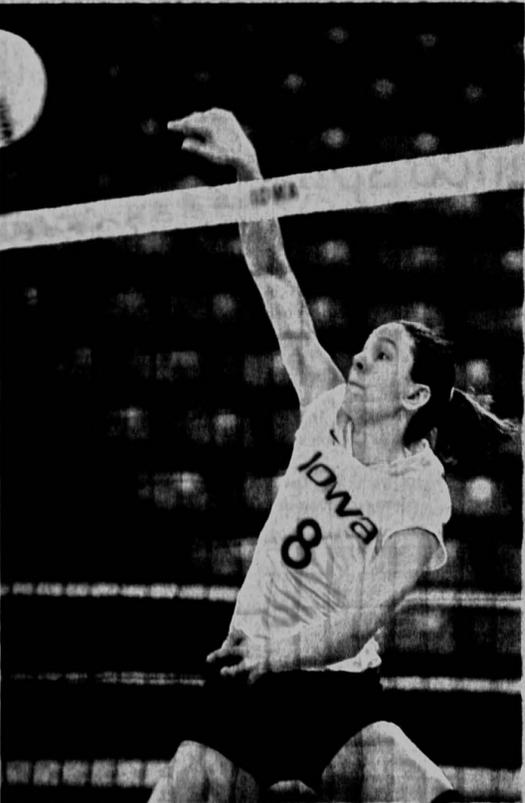

The Boilermakers came out strong in the second game, jumping to an 8-4 lead before Stehnova stepped up for a kill to swing things in Iowa's favor. Purdue would answer with three before another Stehnova kill returned the ball to Iowa.

A trio of kills by Chesnut brought Iowa ahead, followed soon after by a mauling kill by Hill.

But the Boilermakers outlasted the Hawkeyes in the second game, evening the match at 1 with a 30-27 win.

A pair of aces by Stehnova started game three, as a post-intermission renewed Iowa squad jumped to a 22-10 lead

Angels reach first World Series

BY RONALD BLUM
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Once Adam Kennedy and Anaheim broke out their own Thunder Stix, there was no doubt — the Angels were going to the World Series for the first time.

Kennedy hit his third homer of the game in the seventh inning Sunday, and the Angels erupted for a 13-5 victory over the Minnesota Twins to win the AL championship series in five games.

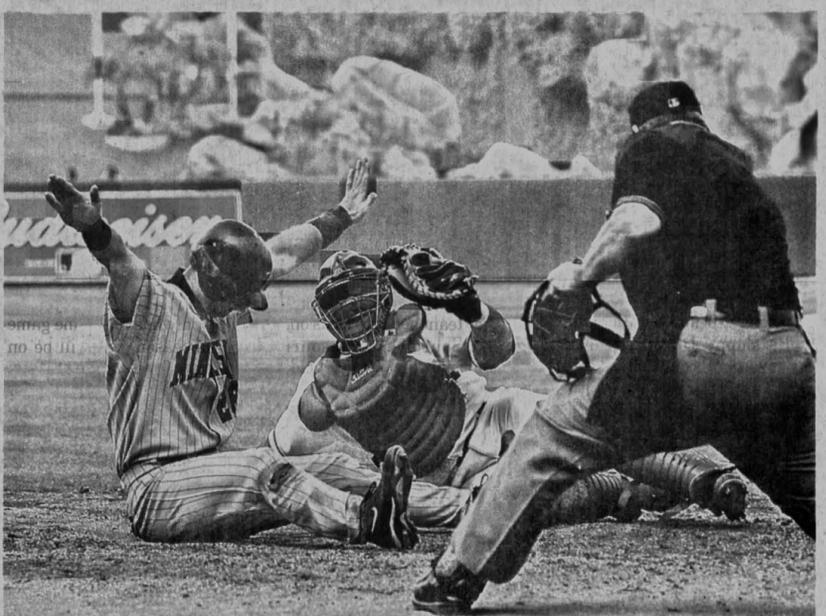

His final homer brought Anaheim back from a 5-3 deficit in a 10-run inning and made him just the fifth player to homer three times in a postseason game.

"Oh, man. This is tremendous," Kennedy said. "We worked hard the last few years to bring it all together and we finally got it done."

The Angels, who joined the major leagues in 1961, blew past the New York Yankees to win their first-round series 3-1, then humiliated a Twins team in a seventh inning that saw 15 Anaheim batters come to the plate against Santana, J.C. Romero, LaTroy Hawkins, and Bob Wells. The 10 runs tied the postseason record.

Anaheim, which had been one of only seven major-league franchises without a pennant, will open at home Saturday against the NL champion, San Francisco or St. Louis.

"It's the biggest game of my life," said Kennedy, who has 23 regular-season homers in his career and four in this year's playoffs. "I'm going to enjoy this for a while and then get back to work."

Mark Terrill/Associated Press

Minnesota Twins' A.J. Pierzynski is safe at home as Anaheim Angels catcher Bengie Molina shows the umpire his glove in the seventh inning of Anaheim's 13-5 win.

San Francisco 4, St. Louis 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds strolled to the plate, and St. Louis manager Tony La Russa never hesitated, putting four fingers in the air for an intentional walk.

It seemed like a good idea — until Benito Santiago connected. Santiago followed the walk with a tiebreaking two-run homer with two outs in the eighth inning, leading the San Francisco Giants to a 4-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals on Sunday night in Game 4 of the NL championship series.

"I was looking for that type of pitch. He got me out with that pitch. I guessed right this time," Santiago said.

Bonds, who scored the tying and go-ahead runs, is now one win away from his first trip to the World Series.

Robb Nen nearly blew it in the ninth, throwing a third-strike wild pitch to the leadoff hitter and allowing a one-out RBI single by Jim Edmonds.

But with runners on first and third, Nen recovered to strike out Albert Pujols and J.D. Drew for his third save in the series.

The Giants can win their first NL pennant in 13 years with a win at home Monday night and set up baseball's first all-wild-card World Series.

With two outs and nobody on in the eighth, Bonds stepped to the plate. Left-handed specialist Steve Kline was ready in the bullpen, but La Russa decided to stay with righty Rick White and walk Bonds intentionally.

Soccer earns weekend conference split

BY KATIE LOW
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The women's soccer team split a pair of Big Ten matchups on the road this weekend, defeating Ohio State and falling to No. 13 Penn State, last year's Big Ten champions.

The Hawkeyes (7-5-1 overall, 2-4-1 conference), recorded a decisive 3-1 victory over Ohio State (3-8-1 overall, 1-4-1 conference) on Oct. 11. Iowa started extremely strong, scoring all three goals in the first half. Oddly enough, the Buckeyes outshot Iowa, 29-10.

Senior forward Sarah Lynch scored the first goal of the game from 30 yards outside the net over OSU goalie Jen Heaney. The Hawkeyes' second goal came from star sophomore forward Katelyn Quinn, who was assisted by senior Jamie Jorgensen. Junior Courtney Wilkerson scored her fifth goal of the season to cap off the Iowa scoring drive.

After the three-goal first half, Ohio State switched goalies from Heaney to Emily Hayman who recorded four saves to stop the Hawkeye offense in the second half.

Ohio State's only goal came in the second half from Colleen Hoban. Iowa goalie Britta Vogeles grabbed 11 saves, compared with a total of six for both of Ohio State's goalkeepers.

Iowa continued its aggressive play from last weekend, racking up 15 fouls while Ohio State recorded only seven.

The Hawkeyes' 4-2 loss to Penn State (11-2-1 overall, 6-1 conference) on Oct. 13 proved to be a disappointing defeat.

Iowa matched up well against the nationally ranked Nittany Lions in the first half. The game went into halftime with the score tied 2-2. However, the Hawkeyes were not able to keep up the momentum and were shut out in the second half while Penn State scored twice.

After a game-opening Penn

State goal, Quinn scored her second goal of the weekend on an assist from Kitty Montgomery and Lynch. Penn State answered less than five minutes later on a goal from Joanna Lohman. Quinn scored her second goal of the game, and third of the weekend, a little more than 20 minutes later on an assist from Julie Atkocaitis. Quinn now leads the team with eight goals on the year.

Nittany Lions junior Heidi Drummond dominated the second half of the game. Drummond scored twice within a minute and a half, lifting Penn State up by two goals. Iowa was never able to recover, ending the weekend road trip on a sour note.

However, Vogeles shined in the loss, boasting 15 saves, tying her for the most ever in a single game in Iowa history. Penn State goalies Amanda Brown and Jamie Stich recorded only three saves between them.

The Hawkeyes tapered off a bit on their aggressiveness, committing 11 fouls to Penn State's eight. However, Iowa's Atkocaitis and Avery Bang both received yellow cards in the second half.

The Hawkeyes will begin a four-game homestand this Friday when they take on Indiana at the Iowa Soccer Complex at 7 p.m.

Battered Rams surprise Raiders for first win

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis got its first victory of the season thanks to third-stringer Marc Bulger, who threw three touchdown passes and ran for another score to lift the Rams past previously unbeaten Oakland, 28-13, Sunday.

Marshall Faulk, who was slowed by back spasms against the 49ers last week, showed his familiar form by running for a season-high 158 yards. His darting 32-yard run, which followed Damione Lewis' interception of Rich Gannon's pass, put the ball at the Oakland 1 with 11:20 left.

Bulger, a sixth-round pick in 2000 who started in place of injured second-teamer Jamie Martin, scored on the next play to give the defending NFC champions (1-5) a 28-6 lead.

Warner, who's out with a broken finger, was the first person to hug Bulger as he trotted off the field.

The Raiders (4-1), who entered the game leading the NFL with 40.5 points and 461.5 yards a game, had only two field goals and 229 yards through the first three quarters.

On his 40th birthday, Jerry Rice caught seven passes for 133 yards.

Green Bay 28, New England 10

FOXBORO, Mass. — Brett Favre outplayed New England's Tom Brady, throwing three touchdown passes to lead the Packers to their fourth straight victory.

Favre now has 301 TD passes for his career, moving him past John Elway into third place on the career list. Only Dan Marino (420) and Fran Tarkenton (342) have more.

Favre also made his 163rd straight start, a record for NFL quarterbacks.

San Diego 35, Kansas City 34

SAN DIEGO — Drew Brees threw a 2-yard touchdown pass to rookie Reche Caldwell with 14 seconds left as the Chargers overcame five turnovers and beat the Chiefs with a wild finish.

The victory wasn't secured until linebacker Donnie Edwards — who was cut by Kansas City in March — intercepted Trent Green's desperation pass at the Chargers 2-yard line as time expired.

Indianapolis 22, Baltimore 20

INDIANAPOLIS — Mike Vanderjagt kicked his fifth field goal from 38 yards out with 4 seconds left, but the Colts' defense did much of the heavy lifting.

The unit held Jamal Lewis to 75 yards rushing, forced three turnovers and sacked Baltimore quarterback Chris Redman five times to help Indianapolis (4-1) win its third straight.

Dallas 14, Carolina 13

IRVING, Texas — Quincy Carter turned a broken play into an 80-yard touchdown pass to Joey Galloway with 3:55 left, then threw a 24-yard TD pass to rookie Antonio Bryant with 56 seconds to go as Dallas rallied from a 13-0 deficit.

Emmitt Smith had 59 yards, leaving him 175 yards from passing Walter Payton on the career rushing list.

Minnesota 31, Detroit 24

Iowa dissatisfied after losses

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
THE DAILY IOWAN

After a 2-0 loss to Michigan and a sloppy 1-0 victory over Southwest Missouri State, the Iowa field hockey team wound up unsatisfied.

The Hawkeyes took on the national defending champion Wolverines, who are ranked No. 2 in the National Field Hockey Coaches Association Poll, on Oct. 11 at Grant Field.

After a scoreless first half of play, Michigan's April Fronzoni scored both of her team's goals in the second half to improve the Wolverines record to 11-1, including the best record in the Big Ten at 3-0.

"They're really strong, but we're really strong as well," said Iowa junior Adria LaSavage, who is a Michigan native. "They came up with it at the end."

The Hawkeyes' goalie Barb Weinberg was kept busy with six saves from Michigan's 12 shots at goal. The Wolverines' goalkeeper Molly Maloney recorded two saves as the Hawkeyes took eight shots on goal.

"We're disappointed because I think we were in the game," Iowa coach Tracey Griesbaum said. "It was a little disappointing in that they scored in ways that we were basically prepared for."

According to Griesbaum, sticking to the game plan is something her team needs to focus on. Against Southwest Missouri State on Sunday at Grant Field, the Hawkeyes pulled off a 1-0 win, but there is still much room for improvement.

"We were a little disappointed with the discipline," Griesbaum said. "They didn't stick to the game plan, and it's something we've addressed for a long time. They just didn't do it."

Less than five minutes into the first half in the game against the Bears, junior Lindsay Miller knocked in her third goal of the season. Lauren Stiver picked up her first assist of the season on the goal, which came off of a penalty corner.

"She has great game sense, great poise with the ball, and she's really smart," said Miller of her teammate.

That would be the last goal for the Hawkeyes and their opponent in a game that seemed far from pretty.

"I think they underestimated their opponent," Griesbaum said. "They weren't sharp enough and that was something that was pretty disappointing to watch. We were much more capable of a better performance."

Weinberg recorded three saves and her fifth shutout of the season for the Hawkeyes.

Iowa only has one home game left this season, but will be on the road for the next two, including the game against Michigan State on October 19. Although the Hawkeyes are ranked No. 13 in the NFCA poll and hold a respectable 8-4 overall record (1-1 in the Big Ten), Griesbaum still feels there is much to work on.

"They'll get it back," Griesbaum said. "They just have to come back to the drawing board and know that we have to get back on track in the Big Ten."

Men's golf swings into second place

BY DREW MANROE
THE DAILY IOWAN

A strong second round resulted in a second-place finish for the Iowa men's golf team at the Big Four tournament in Cedar Rapids on Oct. 12.

The Hawkeyes were in last place after the first round of the 36-hole tournament. But they out-performed the competition by a good margin in the second round, shooting a 304, eight strokes ahead of Drake.

Drake held on for the victory, finishing with a 599, two strokes ahead of Iowa.

Seniors Aaron Krueger and Bo Anderson and sophomore Luke Miller each finished in the top five to lead the Hawkeyes.

Krueger fired a four-over par 148 to finish in a third-place tie, while Anderson and Miller were close behind, carding 149s and fifth-place finishes.

Senior Mike Tapper finished 15th with a 156, and junior Erik Feldick shot a 158, finishing 18th.

Behind Iowa in the team standings were Iowa State, which won the tournament last year, and Northern Iowa, with scores of 605 and 607, respectively.

Drake's Derek Butts shot a 142 to take the individual championship.

The Hawkeyes will compete in their last tournament of the fall season today and Tuesday at the Xavier Invitational in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Tennis improves at Boilermaker Invite

BY KAVITHA THIMMAIAH
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa men's tennis team took a step forward this weekend.

The Hawkeyes completed the Boilermaker Invitational Sunday, taking home third- and fifth-place finishes.

"We've definitely improved since our last tournament," coach Steve Houghton said.

The top team finish came from senior Hunter Skogman, who took third with a win over Purdue's Troy Haven, the Boilermakers' top player and the 2001 tournament champion. After battling the nation's top players at the All-American Tournament, Skogman found this weekend's matches to be easier.

"I got some good wins, but after the national exposure of the All-American Tournament, the competition wasn't as intense," Skogman said.

Without seniors Stuart

Waters and Pete Rose the team was forced to experiment with new pairings. The teams of Skogman and Johan Bergenas and freshman duo Chaitu Malempati and Parker Ross won a match each, both finishing the day at 1-2.

Despite disappointing doubles, Houghton was impressed by the two freshmen's singles performance. Malempati finished 1-2, the losses coming in three hard-fought sets.

Instead David Freijd defeated Andrew Bartish (Butler) for fifth-place, and Ross pulled a win over Toledo's Todd Wojtkowski.

Although he recognizes the progress, Houghton sees room for improvement.

"We need to do a better job of closing matches. I think we were in all the matches, but it's a matter of converting matches into wins," he said.

GAME NIGHT

Iowa faithful attend opener

BY JEROD LEUPOLD
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Hawkeye faithful turned out, halfway, on Oct. 11. Fewer than 50 percent of the 15,500 seats at Carver-Hawkeye Arena were filled to enjoy an activity-packed Iowa men's basketball opening night.

The evening started off with the top two intramural 3-on-3 teams vying for the championship game—a shot to face a team made up of Iowa basketball coaches.

While the 3-on-3 teams battled, cheerleaders flung T-shirts into the crowd. Whoever nabbed one was eligible for a free-throw knock-out tourney. Bearded and Hawkeye but-toned freshman Ryan Kraft was one of the lucky contestants.

"I'm gonna wait for the misses," he said. "I've played a game or two of knockout in my day." Kraft was dismissed in the opening round.

The crowd cheered on the oldest and youngest shooters equally. Then, it was time for the 3-point contest. The winner of the contest fell to a perfect top of the key performance from Steve Alford. Other contestants were the pop-a-shot and hot-dog eating.

Kraft even got a free left-over hot dog.

The only act that distracted from the night was a hotly contested 3-on-3 final with the coaches. Stiff forearm screens and ball slapping elicited boos from the crowd. The youngsters were the obvious favorites, but they lost in overtime as the coaches nursed a 2-point lead by stalling.

In addition to the fan events, Flexx, the rubber boy contortionist, amazed the crowd. Hundred of oohs and aahs echoed when Flexx slipped a shoulder joint and squeezed his whole body through a tennis racket and then a toilet seat.

Before the 2002-3 Hawkeye basketball team was introduced, pyrotechnics flashed and boomed in Carver. The team members were greeted with waves of gladiator-like approval when they entered. After a Survivor Island-esque summer of altercations with Iowa City law enforcement, some Iowa fans still are hoping for the best.

"They won't be as good," Volney Ralston said. "Maybe Tom can walk on."

Eight-year-old Tom grinned from ear to ear at his grandfather's suggestion.

A group of pink T-shirted girls from Iowa City West signed at the thought of losing Luke Recker, Reggie Evans, and "the cutest" Duez Henderson.

But grandmotherly Eloise Stewart said she thought the Hawkeyes would surprise some teams.

"I've had season tickets since my children went to school here," she said. "I'm going to make it to every game this year and enjoy them."

Three-year Game Night veterans Megan and Shawn Steffer said they thought the Hawkeyes would be good. Little Megan is still missing teeth, but she — and her dad — haven't lost faith in Alford's crew.

"We've been coming ever since Alford was hired," Shawn Steffer said. "They'll be all right. They're good kids. Alford is a good coach."

Weekend leaves coaches wondering

BY RICHARD ROSENBLATT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Let's all take a deep breath. Nice and easy now. Exhale. Feeling better?

Florida State coach Bobby Bowden isn't. Neither is Texas coach Mack Brown, or Penn State's Joe Paterno, to name a few.

The day after a breathless Saturday of college football, some coaches are still gasping for air — and answers — after devastating defeats left them wondering what went wrong.

Others, like Miami's Larry Coker, were just relieved Sunday, their national title hopes still alive following a frantic finish, a great escape or a plain ol' lucky victory.

"It's a situation that we didn't play great, but you better enjoy the wins," Coker said. "I don't care if they're one point or 50 points. You better enjoy those."

Top-ranked Miami beat Florida State 28-27 only because Xavier Beitia's 43-yard field-goal attempt sailed wide left as time expired. Of course, Coker wasn't sweating Sunday.

Neither was Oklahoma's Bob Stoops, who said he never fretted before his second-ranked Sooners scored 24 straight points and turned an 11-point deficit into a 35-24 win over Texas.

"We knew if we did what we were capable of we'd be in good shape," Stoops said. "There was just a good, positive feeling on our sideline all day long."

And then there's Bowden. His Seminoles (5-2) were not only knocked out of the national title hunt for a second-straight year, but it's the fourth time since 1991 he lost to Miami when a field-goal attempt in the final seconds could have either won or tied the game.

"I simply can't believe we lost the game like that again," Bowden said. "I can't stand it."

Paterno was so disappointed after his team's 27-24 overtime loss at Michigan, he refused to let his players be interviewed. The Lions fell to 4-2 and 1-2 in the Big Ten.

And after Texas' third straight loss to Oklahoma, Brown had to deal with questions regarding his 2-7 record — and quarterback Chris Simms' 0-4 mark — against top 10 teams.

Total chemistry meshes for Hawkeyes

IOWA FOOTBALL

Iowa managed just 284 yards against the Spartans and scored just three touchdowns. Wide receiver C.J. Jones had touchdown receptions of 62 and 25 yards in addition to Russell's touchdown run. Special teams accounted for 16 points, with Kaeding's three field goals and an electrifying 94-yard kick return by Jermelle Lewis following Moss' touchdown.

"The chemistry was great today," quarterback Brad Banks said of the seemingly perfect mesh of offense, defense, and special teams. "It makes everything easy."

Banks had another solid day for the Hawkeyes, completing 8-19 passes for 154 yards and rushing nine times for 36 yards.

Iowa now faces back-to-back Big Ten road tests at Indiana this weekend and Michigan Oct. 26.

that it never surrendered, dominating Purdue, 30-17.

In the final game, with the Hawkeyes up one, 28-27, a Chesnut ace set Iowa up for game point.

As nearly all of the fans in attendance rose to their feet, the Hawkeyes sealed the game and the match, 30-27, for their second conference win of the weekend.

Their first win came against Illinois on Oct. 10, again beating the competition in four games. Against the Fighting Illini, the second game was again problematic for the Hawkeyes, winning 30-25, 24-30, 30-22, 30-27.

The Hawkeyes found success just in time — they host the two toughest teams in the Big Ten this week as No. 6 Minnesota and No. 9 Penn State travel to Iowa City. The two teams rank first and second in the conference.

Iowa's Wednesday matchup with the Gophers is scheduled for 7 p.m.

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Tom Kite won his third title of the year on the Senior PGA Tour, shooting an even-par 72 Sunday for a one-stroke victory in the Napa Valley Championship.

Kite, a 19-time winner on the PGA Tour who has six victories in three seasons on the senior tour, had a 12-under 204 total on the Silverado Resort's South Course. He earned $195,000 to jump from sixth to fourth on the money list with $1,570,147.

"Sometimes you just got to gut it out," said Kite, who earned his PGA Tour card in the 1972 qualifying tournament on the South Course. "I hit the ball quite nicely today, but I was shaky on the greens. I putted very well the first two days, but for some reason I just didn't trust my stroke today."

Phil Taturangi of New Zealand watches his tee shot on the 14th hole during the Invensys Classic at Las Vegas on Sunday.

Taturangi wins first PGA title in Las Vegas classic

BY TIM DAHLBERG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Phil Taturangi didn't think he had a chance to win his first PGA Tour title Sunday. Even after shooting a 10-under 62 to come from five shots behind to win the Invensys Classic at Las Vegas he had trouble believing it.

Taturangi swept past fourth-round leader David Duval with five birdies on the front nine, then added the same number on the back to get to 29 under.

Then he waited nervously on the driving range as Stuart Appleby, Jeff Sluman, and Jim Furyk all missed birdie tries on the 18th hole that would have forced a playoff.

"I didn't think for one moment I was going to win the golf tournament today," Taturangi said.

The New Zealander, who has struggled both with his game and his health, earned $900,000, more than he had won his entire career before this year. He's the 15th first-time winner this year, breaking the record set in 1991.

Taturangi did it by making five birdies on the first seven holes of the back nine, then adding routine pars on the last two holes.

"I worked hard to get in a situation like this, and I wasn't going to throw it away," Taturangi said.

Taturangi said he was simply following a game plan to play aggressively and didn't even know where he stood after finishing the 18th hole. He didn't look at the leaderboard and didn't know how much money he had made, even after being presented an oversized check on the 18th green.

His win not only secures his tour card for two years, but will likely put him in the Masters after he moved to 33rd on the money list.

"I've never played the game to make a lot of money," Taturangi said.

Appleby had the best chance to tie after nearly making a hole-in-one on the 17th hole. But he missed badly a 10-footer for birdie on the last hole that would have gotten him to 29 under.

Appleby finished with a 66, while Sluman shot a 67 but could not make a chip on 18 to force a playoff.

"I really wanted that one on 18," Appleby said. "I just lost my momentum on the front nine. You just can't stall, and I got stuck on the front nine."

Duval, who had a one-shot lead going into the final round and was trying to win for the first time since last year's British Open, shot himself out of contention with a 1-over 37 on the front nine and finished four shots back after a 71.

Duval's chances basically ended when he hit a wedge into the front bunker on the par-5 ninth hole for a bogey.

Furyk, who had won three of the last seven Vegas tournaments, had a three-shot lead after seven holes and had yet to make a bogey.

horoscopes

Monday, October 14, 2002 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Problems will continue if you don't sit down and have a heart-to-heart talk with the one you love. You have probably neglected your family in order to get ahead professionally. Now's the time to make up for your absence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do something special with the whole family. You need to spend time together. Whether your outings are of an educational nature or strictly for exercise, everyone will benefit.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Children's activities may cost you dearly. Remember, you don't have to spend a lot to have fun. Some of your new friends may not be that trustworthy. Stay alert.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You should take time to do things with children. Uncertainties about your relationship may play on your mind. Consider all the alternatives. You may want to get some legal advice.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may feel a little under the weather. Don't exert yourself. Stay home and help youngsters prepare for festivities. Do a bit of research on a project you've been working on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get busy. You should be making as many of your Christmas gifts as possible. You can save a bundle, and you can get the kids involved as well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may be overly sensitive to criticism of your home. You aren't the neatest individual, but you do appreciate nice surroundings. It may be time to put some energy into a little redecorating.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It's time to discard old junk. Have a garage sale, and put the money you make into a travel fund. This is an ideal time for you to take a relaxing trip or a ride on a scooter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may have to make a fast financial decision. Don't involve too many others in your planning, or it could slow you down. Set a cash figure in your mind, and refuse to go over that amount.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't let your partner goad you into pouring your heart out. Try to find a place where you will not be disturbed by anyone. You need more time to think this through.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It's time for you to shake things up a little, not only for yourself, but also for others. Whether you decide to entertain at home or plan an excursion, it will be exciting for all.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lending and borrowing may present a problem. A friendship will suffer if money becomes an issue. Your desire to get away may lead you into greater debt.

Advice for Al Gore for his speech today at the IMU

- Shave the beard.
- Keep the sighing to a minimum.
- Tout your nifty, new invention: the Internet.
- Kiss Tipper, for a long, long time.
- Do not rely too heavily on consultants and pollsters.
- Be sure to distance yourself from Bill Clinton and those eight years of economic prowess.
- Make sure you indeed want to call for another recount before actually doing so.
- Do not bring Albert III; he'll get in trouble in this town.
- Don't be a sore loser, man.
- Remember: It is not a science, bee. Speak in environmental terms we know.
