Police credit more enforcement for increased number of PAULA tickets

BY GRANT SCHULTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

More aggressive enforcement downtown has apparently fueled a 43 percent increase this year in the number of minors cited for underage drinking, police said Thursday.

With two and a half months to go in the year, police have made 1,741 arrests for possession of alcohol under the legal age, compared with 988 arrests in 2001 and 1,430 in 2000, according to a report released Thursday.

Often, the number of downtown PAULA arrests in a given year depends on which police officers are patrolling the area, said Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Brotherton. Officers switch their beats annually, and those currently patrolling downtown are writing more tickets, he said.

"Some officers take different approaches than others," he said, adding that in previous years before 2000, the arrest rates were higher. "Some choose to write tickets, others might simply stand in front of bars where there are a lot of minors."

Record freshman enrollment at the UI could also play a factor, he said.

UI Student Government President Nick Herbold said he is looking into ways to empower students who have been charged with PAULA but may not know their options. In some cases, he said, students have been charged with PAULA for sitting within an arm's length of an alcoholic beverage.

Sheriff dumps OWI program

Some drunk-drivers will be headed to jail for two days instead of education program

BY AMIR EFRATI AND
JESSE HELLING
THE DAILY IOWAN

The county's decision to drop a popular six-month educational program for some OWI violators is drawing criticism from both defense lawyers and activists against building a new county jail.

They contend that the move by Johnson County Sheriff Robert Carpenter is a pretext for support of such a facility.

Carpenter canceled an option last month that allowed first-time offenders who refuse a Breathalyzer or were convicted of operating with a blood-alcohol level above 0.15 to attend a class in lieu of serving a two-day jail sentence. Such offenders are ineligible for a deferred judgment.

The class remains open for offenders who register a blood-alcohol level below .15.

Defense lawyer J. Dean Keegan said he disagrees with the county's decision, arguing that the program generated positive feedback from his clients.

"Some people go into the program thinking it's a waste of time, but they come out saying they've had a meaningful experience," he said.

Offered by Kirkwood Community College, the program consists of a 48-hour class held at a Coralville motel. An average of 30 people have participated in each session since its inception several years ago.

The recent change excludes those most in need of the educational program — violators with higher blood-alcohol levels, Keegan said.

"They don't get education on the dangers of drinking and driving," he said, adding that

UI students are most receptive to such programs, and they will be adversely affected.

Keegan was denied a special hearing for one of his OWI clients earlier this week by Judge Sylvia Lewis in what he said was the first of many motions he anticipates to put forth to appeal the decision. Keegan's client was initially authorized to attend the program but has since been refused.

"I plan to continue pursuing this issue," Keegan said of the change.

Assistant Johnson County Attorney Iris Frost said the class was never an alternative jail program and contradicts a state law that mandates two days of jail time for first-time OWI offenders.

"Education is a valuable thing, especially for first offenders and students," she said. "But that's not the law."

Iowa City attorney Phil Reisetter defended a first-time OWI offender last month who was denied admission to the program because of the county's decision.

"It's unfortunate that the demise of the program would put more pressure on the jail," he said.

Carol deProse, a founding member of Citizens for Alternatives to a New Jail, said the county's decision to limit entry into the program will exacerbate existing overcrowding problems at the Johnson County Jail. Approximately 1,100 arrests were made for drunk driving in 2000.

"It seems to me that they want to fill up the jail as much as they can to convince voters we need to build a new jail," deProse said.

Get physical, panel urges

BY AMY JENNINGS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Extra jumping jacks and more gym laps may be in store for Iowa City students after a school nutrition task force recommended daily physical exercise classes in a report to the School Board Wednesday.

The 15-member task force emphasized increased physical activity and partial removal of unhealthy snacks from the district's 37 vending machines as measures the board should consider to improve health curriculum.

The report, which concentrated on improving student health through education and nutritious food selection, said increased funding and expanded staff may be necessary for some of the measures, discouraging at least one member of the School Board.

"The P.E. idea, while commendable, would be impossibly expensive and [distract] from the issue of nutritional choices in schools," said board member Dave Franker.

Iowa City high-school students currently attend at least one period of P.E. a week, a standard that is in compliance with state requirements.

Thompson: Congress needs to fix Medicare payments

BY PHIL DAVIDSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson said Gov. Tom Vilsack's lawsuit against the federal government for low Medicare payments is a problem Congress needs to address.

"It's not nice," Thompson said jokingly of the lawsuit during a visit and campaign stop for Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, at the UI Hospitals and Clinics on Thursday. "I think anytime you can highlight discrepancies is important."

Vilsack is suing the federal government for refusing to increase its minuscule Medicare payments to doctors, hospitals, and nursing homes in Iowa, which has the lowest reimbursement rate in the country at $3,053 per patient per year.

Thompson noted that Midwestern states in general, including his home state of Wis-

County restores Englert funding

BY LAURA JENSEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

A divided Johnson County Board of Supervisors agreed Thursday to restore $20,000 to the Englert Theatre project, ending weeks of speculation about its financial future.

The move means the project will be able to receive an $800,000 grant from the state's Vision Iowa board. The Vision Iowa grant was contingent on local support, which will be given over five years beginning in 2004.

The Englert project must still raise slightly more than $1 million from local sources by Jan. 15 to collect both grants; the group has collected $2.3 million.

"This is huge," said Mollie Schlue, an Englert spokeswoman. "This will allow us to really push forward on the fund raising."

Thursday's move ended a sometimes bitter fight between the supervisors and the state board that began when Vision Iowa demanded more local support.

The supervisors struck a compromise, announcing that

Conference aims to end isolation

BY CASEY WAGNER
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI will host the first Queer Iowa Student Conference this weekend to build alliances among gay and lesbian students in an effort to battle isolation.

The university's Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Allied Union expects 200 high-school and college students to attend the day-long conference Saturday in the Pappajohn Business Building.

Small-group workshops will discuss such topics as safe sex, issues about coming out, and domestic violence. A caucus, dinner, and dance will end the event. Establishing connections and a forum for communication to share ideas and information is the event's main focus, said gay-lesbian union representatives.

"It could just be phenomenal what we could do with those kind of relationships," said UI junior Rachel Tell, the co-chairwoman of the conference.

Communication among groups is rare, Tell said. To encourage connections, each group will nominate a representative during the convention's caucus to present their constituents, goals, and concerns.

One mission of the event is to establish a more accessible conference for Iowa students, said UI junior Dave Neyens, a member of the gay-lesbian union. Similar Midwest conferences are convened at inconvenient locations, making it unfeasible for a lot of local groups to attend, he said.

Larger conferences also are closed to high-school students.

"This is a way to lessen the feeling of isolation for a lot of these groups," Tell said.

Debra Davis, a Minnesota school librarian and a male-to-female transsexual, will serve as the conference's keynote speaker. Davis is the executive director of the Gender Education Center, a Minnesota-based nonprofit corporation dedicated to support, advocacy, and education in the transsexual community.

The gay-lesbian union received donations for the event from the Matthew Shepard Scholarship Fund, the Rich Eychaner Charitable Foundation, and the UI Lesbian, Gay, and Bisexual Staff and Faculty Association.

The conference will likely be held again next year, said UI senior Cianan Russell, the conference co-chairman, adding that it could be located elsewhere in the state.

CITY BRIEF

Nelson lawyer moves to suppress pretrial statements

The lawyer for Phyllis Nelson, 55, Iowa City, who is accused of first-degree murder in the December stabbing death of her husband, Richard Nelson, moved to exclude from the upcoming trial all statements the defendant made to police before she was informed of her rights on Dec. 12, 2001.

Richard Nelson, 54, died of a stab wound to the heart in his Cedar Rapids apartment. He was the executive dean of the UI College of Medicine.

Attorney William Kutmus said Nelson's 911 emergency calls and answers to police questions en route to and while at the police station that morning constitute "Miranda violations" protected by the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution. He said that "taken out of context," Nelson's comments on the morning of the murder "could be incriminating."

Kutmus will also seek to release any evidence by the state or witness statements that support the lawyer's claim that Richard Nelson's death occurred by accident or in self-defense. Kutmus also said he will soon decide whether to ask for a trial venue change based upon his own poll of potential Linn County jurors that proves there is high name recognition for his client.

Nelson's trial is scheduled to begin in Linn County on Dec. 9.

Altercation leads to alleged gunfire

BY KELLEY CASINO
THE DAILY IOWAN

A confrontation between two Iowa City residents Thursday morning ended with a shot being fired outside a downtown liquor store, one man in jail, and the other unharmed.

Hiram Alberto Ortiz-Gonzalez, 20, is being held at the Johnson County Jail on a $7,500 bond after a preliminary hearing Thursday afternoon charged him with assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying weapons, said Johnson County Sheriff's Lt. Jim Waldschmidt.

Ortiz-Gonzalez, 720 Gleason Drive, and Britton Dae More of Iowa City allegedly bumped into one another around 1:30 a.m. outside Ajaxxxx Liquor Store, 107 S. Linn St., where they proceeded to exchange words, police records show.

During the confrontation, Ortiz-Gonzalez allegedly produced a .380 caliber pistol he had concealed on his person.

Police records show that Ortiz-Gonzalez pointed the gun at More and fired one round.

Neither More, 25, nor any bystanders were injured during the incident, records show. The men are thought to be strangers, police said.

Responding to a third-party report of shots fired, Iowa City police arrived at the scene in time to stop a vehicle as it pulled away from the liquor store, records show.

Officers allegedly recovered the pistol from the car, and Ortiz-Gonzalez, a passenger in the vehicle, was later allegedly identified as the shooter. Police did not say who was driving the car or how many passengers were present.

Ortiz-Gonzalez was arrested and charged with the two aggravated misdemeanors, each punishable by a maximum prison term of two years and a mandatory fine of at least $500 but not more than $5,000. He was also charged with public intoxication and discharge of a firearm within city limits, both simple misdemeanors, each punishable by a maximum jail term of 30 days or a fine of at least $50 but not more

Undergrad enrollment hits 7-year high

BY PETER RUGG
THE DAILY IOWAN

CEDAR FALLS — Undergraduate student enrollment at Iowa's three public universities is at its highest in seven years with the UI leading the way, according to state officials.

A report submitted at Wednesday's state Board of Regents meeting showed combined enrollment at the universities is 71,521 undergraduates, up 860 from last year.

"We're receiving more applications now than we ever were," said UI interim President Sandy Boyd, who attended the meeting at the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls. "Especially in the liberal arts and sciences."

While the UI reported a 4.5 percent growth in its incoming freshmen this year compared with the fall of 2001, both Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa reported declines. ISU's class dropped 9.3 percent, UNI's 11.4 percent.

New freshmen enrollment at the UI rose from 4,005 to 4,184 this fall. New freshmen enrollment at the university has increased annually since the fall 1990, when total freshmen enrollment was 8,083.

All three universities reported an increase in minority students, with 5,370 registered undergraduates — up 186 from last year. The number is still 1 percent lower than the 8.5 percent minority enrollment goal set by the regents in 1992.

One reason for the increase in enrollment is that the university has maintained a reasonable tuition said Doug True, the UI vice president for Finance, who attended the regents' meeting.

"We've made great advances in recruitment," he said. "One of our drawing points is that we're still an affordable institution for the quality of education we provide."

The cost of education might rise soon; the regents proposed a 17.6 percent tuition increase depending on next year's economy. The move would raise in-state tuition by $650 and out-of-state by $1,300. That means in-state students would pay $4,342, out-of-state $14,634.

Pierce's hearing to be on campus, UI officials decide

BY TONY ROBINSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI officials approved a request by defense attorneys Thursday to move the hearing for Pierre Pierce's appeal of his suspension to an on-campus location in order to ensure that university student witnesses can attend.

Des Moines-based lawyer Alfredo Parrish, who is representing the 19-year-old sophomore basketball guard accused of sexual assault, filed the motion to move the hearing from the Oakdale campus to a location that witnesses had access to, which would reduce the disturbance to their classes.

The hearing in front of the UI Board in Control of Athletics is slated for Monday at 1 p.m. in the Seaman Center.

UI interim President Sandy Boyd also shot down the defense's request to open the hearing to the public Wednesday. Board chairman Nicholas Colangelo initially denied the request, and then Pierce's attorneys appealed it to Boyd.

Boyd could not be reached for comment.

During a closed-session interview on Wednesday, Pierce answered questions from the lead investigator and Assistant Johnson County Attorney Anne Lahey about the alleged Sept. 7 assault for the first time regarding the case.

Pierce answered "any and all" questions thrown at him when giving his side of the story during the conference, and he will be available for any follow-up questions, said Parrish, who was also in attendance.

"For whatever reasons, an earlier interview didn't work out," Parrish said. "His previous attorney was a public defender who may not have had the experience that Pierre needed — so he wanted to remain cautious."

Pierce is expected to release a statement this weekend or immediately before the hearing.

The Athletics Board has the burden of proof in the appeal hearing, so it will present its case first. Pierce's attorneys will then have an opportunity to cross-examine the board's witnesses and call their own.

"We will bring about several witnesses because we don't believe this was a fair decision," Parrish said. "The accusations alone are not enough to remove a young man from playing. The presumption of innocence should be applied across the board."

Pierce, who is from Westmont, Ill., was suspended indefinitely from the UI men's basketball team on Oct. 1 after appearing in District Court on a charge of third-degree sexual abuse. He allegedly performed unwanted sex acts with a UI female athlete in the early morning of Sept. 7 at his 725 Orchard St. residence.

According to court reports, the victim struggled as Pierce allegedly held her hands above her head and stifled her attempts to scream for help. If convicted, Pierce faces a maximum of 10 years in prison and a $15,000 fine in connection with the class C felony.

Kicking up a storm for young kids

BY NICK MUELLER
THE DAILY IOWAN

Juvenile delinquency, take warning: Martial artists around the nation are about to kick you 5 million times in one hour.

This Saturday starting at noon, martial artists of all disciplines will get together at their respective schools and take aim at the world record for most kicks performed simultaneously in a one-hour "Kick-a-thon."

The event, which coincides with National Martial Arts Day, will donate all pledge earnings to Project Action, a charity that pays for disadvantaged children prone to delinquency to participate in martial arts, gymnastics, and dance.

Master Chol Choe of Choe's Iowa City U.S. Tae Kwon Do, Iowa City's representative in the nationwide activity, said the Kick-a-thon is a great event for the martial arts and kids.

"Some people cannot pay the tuition for these activities," he said. "This is a great opportunity for kids like that."

Project Action, founded in 1991 in Seminole, Fla., is designed to keep disadvantaged kids from getting involved in the juvenile justice system by keeping them busy with more productive pastimes. The method of the group is to raise money and use it to pay children's way into gymnastic studios, dance studios, and martial-arts schools, with the end result of more well-rounded, well-behaved children.

Bettina Armstrong, whose 7-year-old son, Wesley, has been learning tae kwon do at Choe's for two years and will participate in the Kick-a-thon, said the effect that activities such as martial arts can have on a child's demeanor and behavior are nothing but positive.

"The things it really does reinforce in the kids are respect and discipline," she said.

Along with the privilege of Project Action sponsorship comes responsibility. As a condition to a child's participation, the program monitors a child's grades, attendance, and behavior in school, making students earn their participation with good performance in each category.

The Kick-a-thon is the latest effort of Project Action and the National Association of Professional Martial Artists to raise the money necessary to get kids into such programs. Last year, Kick-a-thon raised $135,000 in the name of the Ronald E. McNair Martial Arts Scholarship Fund, which is administered by Project Action. McNair, an astronaut who died in the Challenger disaster, was a fifth-degree black-belt karate champion.

The old world mark, set in October 2000, stands at 4.7 million kicks in one hour. Participants this year hope to raise that number to 5 million and to pull in a donation for every kick performed.

The amount of money raised is hard to predict, because donors set their own level of giving, Choe said.

Choe said all money raised in a community is used within that community — an incentive for area martial artists to pitch in.

Truly trucking art to the people of Iowa

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Nearly three years ago, local artist Rod Patterson began his mission to bring art to the people of Iowa by strapping a nude woman to the roof of his truck.

Receiving stares and photographs, the North Liberty resident chalked up mileage cruising throughout Iowa and surrounding states with a 125-150 pound mythological sculpture Isis rising from her dream of Osiris with conception of Horus atop of his Silverado.

"I like traveling with a companion that reaches out and introduces me to people," Patterson said. "It is like escorting a celebrity."

The piece, sculpted out of clay and cast in bronze powder, depicts the goddess Isis reclining with the face of Horus in the back of her head and Osiris' face accompanying it.

The Isis sculpture has gained a number of admirers on the road, yielding pictures and questions from interested individuals, Patterson said.

He recalls only one negative incident when his wife drove the Isis truck to work and found a note on it when she returned. Although some may find certain types of modern art offensive, it provides an alternative to the other images saturating the mainstream media, Patterson said.

"People are starving for this stuff with the smut on the Internet and MTV," he said. "It is an unanswered need in culture."

Patterson's large studio adjacent to his self-built house overlooking the Coralville Reservoir is strewn with sculptures, molds, photographs, art supplies, and books. His education background in design, mythology, psychology, and anthropology has provided inspiration for his work.

"Mythology is part of our hard-wiring," he said. "People all over the world tell the same stories and jokes."

The proximity of Patterson's northern Illinois hometown to the Chicago art museums sparked his interest in art. The sculptor has images spread throughout the Midwest, in Florida, and New York City, and a piece overlooking a California beach.

His latest piece stands in the center of the studio next to his workbench, a man with outstretched arms bent over, screaming in horror. The concept for that particular sculpture is based upon Taoism and thinking outside the box, Patterson said.

"It is based on the teaching that we must keep changing," he said. "The man is trapped by his own imagination."

Apples of his eyes produce

THE DAILY IOWAN

Standing in the crisp air surrounded by varying shades of amber-orange leaves, the apple trees of Wilson's Orchard are growing ever closer to the end of their season.

The 8,000-tree orchard located on the northern outskirts of Iowa City is enjoying its last month of business for the year.

"It's getting cold out, and business is starting to slow down," said owner Chug Wilson, 73. "We're open August till October, every day, 10 a.m. till dusk, so it's about time."

Wilson, who was formerly the co-owner of Wilson's Sporting Goods, and his wife, Joyce Wilson, 70, purchased the land at 2924 Orchard Lane N.E. in the spring of 1980.

"It was all open land originally, and we just started planting," he said.

The Wilsons are the only full-time employees of the orchard, relying on approximately 15 part-time workers and some volunteers.

The orchard, which includes a small bakery and souvenir shop smelling of cinnamon, offers more than 130 different types of apples as well as frozen apple pies and turnovers. Pumpkins, gourds, Indian corn, and preserves are also available.

"It's hard work," said Iowa City resident and employee Judy Cilek about her job: picking and peeling apples, making dough, and assembling turnovers.

The orchard offers daily tours for elementary-school children, starting at 10 a.m. Monday through Thursday, and it entertains approximately 1,000 visitors on a typical weekend.

"We have a rock-bottomed creek we call Niagara Falls West, and I tell the kids we have alligators living in there to have a little fun," Chug Wilson said.

During the end of October, he heads a mowing, pruning, and machine-repair operation to keep the orchard in working order.

"I have to keep the grass short in the orchard to keep the deer away," he said. "They are a major threat to the lives of the trees if they come around looking for food."

The daily demands of the orchard keep him busy year-round and rouse him from bed at 7:30 a.m. each day.

"I have to get the trash out, fix anything broken, prune the area, and get apples picked for the weekend sales," Chug Wilson said. "By the time I'm all done, my wife and I don't make it in till 10 p.m. to have our dinner."

Working all day, every day, for three months during apple season saps his energy. Topping his list of winter plans: catching up on sleep.

Harkin enlists 'Superman' aid

BY NICK MUELLER
THE DAILY IOWAN

Be ready for a drop in crime this weekend ... Superman is coming to town.

Actor Christopher Reeve, who was paralyzed in a 1995 equestrian accident, will speak with Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, at 3:30 p.m. Oct. 20 in the IMU Main Lounge. The stop is in support of incumbent Harkin's campaign against Republican challenger Greg Ganske.

Mayrose Wegmann of the University Democrats, which is sponsoring the event, said Harkin's work for the Americans with Disabilities Act has made Reeve a supporter. Harkin helped to write the bipartisan bill with Republican Bob Dole and others in 1990.

The act offers support to more than 57 million Americans with physical and mental disabilities, improving such things as accessibility and employment opportunity.

Wegmann said that Reeve would speak about the importance of the ADA and his support for stem-cell research, which he sees as potentially helpful to himself and others in his situation. Harkin is also a supporter of the research.

Since his injury, Reeve has served disabled people all over the nation as a spokesman of sorts. After being completely paralyzed in the accident, he is starting to regain feeling in his legs, and sources say in the near future he will be able to move his legs again — something no one would have expected seven years ago.

Throughout his career, he has held leading roles, including such films as Superman and the Oscar-nominated Remains of the Day. His autobiography, Still Me, was published by Random House in 1998 and spent 11 weeks on the New York Times Best Seller List.

Wegmann said that the close races in this year's congressional campaigns provide a great opportunity for Democrats to oust some long-standing Republicans, such as Jim Leach, a point that will be driven home during the talk. Leach, a 13-term incumbent, is opposed by Cedar Rapids pediatrician Dr. Julie Thomas. At this point, only a narrow margin separates the two.

"We have a really good feeling that we're going to take that seat with Dr. Thomas," Wegmann said.

University Democrats say they are planning another campaign stop on the UI campus in the near future. While the specifics are as yet unknown, the keynote speaker is expected to be a high-profile person from the Hollywood area.

ID papers found on rail-car bodies

BY DAVID PITT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Documents with the bodies of 11 people found this week in a rail car in Denison indicate two were from Mexico and two from Honduras, an Immigration and Naturalization Service official said Thursday.

Some of the papers were government issued, but it's conceivable that these people could have been carrying someone else's identification, said Jerry Heinauer, the INS Iowa-Nebraska regional director.

"The documents on some of the victims were pretty specific and will be able to be verified," Heinauer said.

Iowa Medical Examiner Dr. Julia Goodin was cautious.

"We do have some identification cards with some of the bodies but we haven't confirmed any of those yet," she said. "As you know, some people have identification cards that may not actually be [theirs]."

The bodies were found Monday by workers cleaning rail cars at a grain elevator in Denison, approximately 60 miles northeast of Omaha.

Goodin said the seven men and four women died of overheating and dehydration. It was difficult to tell how long the bodies had been in the rail car, she said.

Goodin said a forensic anthropologist will help determine the ethnicity, stature, and any other identifying features of the bodies that could be used to help in identifying them.

"It's always complicated when you have persons who are from another country and always complicated by the fact that they're decomposed," she said.

Heinauer said none of the documents indicate that the people were lawfully in the United States.

Iowa officials have received a number of calls from relatives of people who were expected to arrive in the United States but have not, he said.

"We will continue to work with the Mexican Consulate and the Honduran government and persons who might be family or friends here in the United States that might have anticipated someone's arrival that hasn't happened," Heinauer said.

U.S. floats compromise on Iraq

BY COLUM LYNCH
WASHINGTON POST

UNITED NATIONS — Bush administration officials undertook a final attempt today to bridge differences with France over the fate of Iraq, offering a compromise resolution that would increase the role of the U.N. Security Council and arms inspectors in assessing Iraqi cooperation while preserving Washington's authority to determine whether to go to war with Baghdad, according to administration officials and U.N. sources. The new American resolution also drops some of the administration's most controversial inspection demands, including proposals to provide armed support for U.N. inspectors and to grant the five permanent members of the council the right to direct inspections, according to diplomats. But administration officials said that the United States will continue to demand that U.N. inspectors be permitted to conduct interviews with Iraqi scientists outside the country. Washington hopes that the new proposal can break an impasse with the French, setting the stage for the swift passage of a resolution that will test Iraq's willingness to meet its obligations to eliminate its alleged chemical, biological, and nuclear-weapons programs. If France rebuffs the latest American offer, Washington is preparing to distribute its new resolution to the council's five veto-bearing members as early as Saturday in an effort to build support for the initiative from the rest of the council, according to sources. American and British diplomats have warned Paris that the Bush administration may walk away from negotiations at the United Nations and build a coalition to attack Iraq if it fails to gain passage of a resolution that threatens consequences against Iraq should Baghdad continue to defy the United Nations.

"If the French are sensible, they will see this as a serious compromise and accept it," said a diplomat from a country allied with the United States. "If they squeeze the United States for more concessions, there is a real risk that Washington will say, 'You're not serious' and walk away from it."

Dan Loh/Associated Press

Prosecutor Joel Rosen speaks to reporters outside the Philadelphia Criminal Justice Center after the jury delivered a guilty verdict against Ira Einhorn on Thursday.

Einhorn convicted in Philly homicide

BY JOANN LOVIGLIO
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Ira Einhorn, the '70s hippie guru who fled to Europe and lived like a country squire after being charged with murder, was convicted Thursday of killing his girlfriend and stuffing her corpse in his closet a quarter-century ago.

The 62-year-old Einhorn showed no emotion upon hearing the first-degree murder verdict, which brought an automatic sentence of life without parole and smiles to the family of his victim, 30-year-old Holly Maddux.

After the verdict, the district attorney and the judge himself mocked Einhorn and his role as an Age of Aquarius wise man. Judge William Mazzola called him "an intellectual dilettante who preyed on the uninitiated, uninformed, unsuspecting, and inexperienced people."

One juror, Tracy Garrett, said he was angry that Einhorn couldn't get the death penalty. "He had a warped mind," Garrett said. "Even on the stand, it was like he thought he was God."

Defense attorney William

Cannon said Einhorn would appeal.

The verdict, reached after 2½ hours of deliberations, capped a stunning fall for the counterculture figure who once held "be-in" events and counted Yippie Jerry Rubin and rock star Peter Dinklage among his acquaintances. After fleeing the country, Einhorn lived in the south of France for years, appearing on television shows as he fought extradition, posing naked in his garden for Esquire.

Einhorn insisted he was innocent and maintained he was framed by the CIA because of his knowledge of secret mind-control experiments. He said he last saw Maddux in 1977 as she left to make a phone call. He said he had no idea how her body turned up in a locked steamer trunk in his Philadelphia apartment.

Prosecutors, however, said Einhorn was a loutish womanizer who turned violent whenever a girlfriend wanted to leave him. They had him read to jurors from his poems and diary entries, in which he wrote "to kill what you love when you can't have it seems so natural" and "violence always marks the end of a relationship."

Bush stresses diplomacy in dealing with N. Korea

BY PETER SLEVIN AND GLENN KESSLER
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Thursday he would use diplomacy to avert a crisis over North Korea's surprise admission that it has been operating a covert nuclear-weapons program, as senior U.S. officials worried that a confrontation with the isolated Stalinist government could destabilize Asia as the administration pursues plans to disarm Iraq.

South Korea and Japan, two influential U.S. allies in the region, said they would press ahead with their policies of engagement with the government in Pyongyang, which has reached out to its two neighbors in recent months. Officials from the two countries said they regarded North Korea's disclosure as a positive sign that it wanted a diplomatic resolution to the issue.

U.S. envoys were dispatched to the world's principal nuclear powers and North Korea's neighbors to find a response to North Korea's revelations that it had been working secretly for years to develop nuclear weapons. In Washington, where the administration released news of the Oct. 4 admission Wednesday night, officials used measured language.

"The president believes this is troubling, sobering news," White House spokesman Scott McClellan told reporters as Bush flew to Atlanta. "We are seeking a peaceful resolution. This is best addressed through diplomatic channels at this point."

U.S. officials said they have taken a cautious stance because the danger posed by North Korean weapons and the ramifications of the disclosure remain unclear. While many in the administration, including the president, view the situation as an opportunity, officials said, they also believe that this will force a fundamental rethinking of all previous agreements with the North Koreans, including promised aid for their civilian nuclear-reactor program.

While Japan and South Korea have much invested politically and emotionally in an opening to North Korea, administration policymakers said they believe North Korea's admissions may present a dramatic setback. The disclosure threatens China's relationship with North Korea and raises questions about the regional balance of power, they said.

These considerations, on top of a looming conflict with Iraq and an ongoing global war against terrorism, persuaded the White House to move with deliberation and to keep the lid on the North Korea news. Only when the story threatened to leak to the news media did the administration brief reporters.

On Capitol Hill Thursday, members of Congress called for a fresh evaluation of the administration's North Korea policy. Some lawmakers called for immediate censure of North Korea, while others suggested the door remained open to cooperation.

The United States should halt economic aid to North Korea — apart from food and medical supplies — and try to block assistance from international lending institutions, said Reps. Edward Markey, D-Mass., and Rep. Christopher Cox, R-Calif., in a statement. They called for U.N. Security Council action to condemn North Korea.

Diplomacy is the tack most likely to work with North Korea, said Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Neb., who has pushed for such an approach toward Iraq. "It's the same approach you need to take on North Korea," he said. "You can't bluster on it alone."

The different approaches to Iraq and North Korea also forced the administration to explain why it was using dramatically different responses to two countries accused of developing weapons of mass destruction. "International pressure may have an effect," on the North Korean government of Kim Jong Il, said National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice on ABC's "Nightline." "We've tried everything with Saddam Hussein. Nothing has worked."

Bombs kill 6 in Philippines

BY PAT ROQUE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ZAMBOANGA, Philippines — Muslim militants linked to Al Qaeda may be responsible for bombings Thursday that killed six people, injured 144, and devastated two department stores in this Christian city, the military said.

Suspicion fell on Abu Sayyaf because of similarities to an Oct. 2 blast that killed four, including an American Green Beret. That explosion was blamed on the Muslim extremists notorious for kidnappings and murders. TNT was apparently used in both attacks.

Thursday's bombings, 30 minutes apart, came less than a week after three bombs exploded on the Indonesian island of Bali, killing 183 people.

There was no claim of responsibility for the attacks in Zamboanga, but military spokesman Lt. Col. Danilo Servando said suspicion fell on an Abu Sayyaf faction headed by Khaddafy Janjalani, one of five leaders of the group indicted by Washington for a mass kidnapping last year that left 18 hostages dead, including two Americans.

Government officials have said Abu Sayyaf may have links with Jemaah Islamiah, another Islamic militant group in Southeast Asia that allegedly has ties with the Al Qaeda terror network.

Days before the Oct. 2 bombing, Abu Sayyaf had threatened attacks in retaliation for a military offensive against it.

Two students, right, help security guards on Thursday carry a wounded man following a bomb blast in the southern port city of Zamboanga. Two bombs exploded at midday, killing six people and injuring at least 144.

Qaeda, Philippine officials have cited alleged attempts by Osama bin Laden's lieutenants to provide the guerrillas with training on explosives and weapons-handling in past years.

Thursday's attack turned the usual early afternoon bustle of Zamboanga's downtown area into a gory scene of debris, blood, and chaos. Panicked shoppers scattered as police cars and pickup trucks became ambulances to ferry wounded people to hospitals, which were quickly overwhelmed.

Nervous police bomb squads blew up five suspicious packages, but further examination found they contained no explosives.

President Gloria Macapagal

Arroyo condemned the latest terrorist strike to hit her impoverished country, a key supporter in the U.S. war on terrorism.

Some 260 American troops are in Zamboanga, a predominantly Christian city of 600,000 in the violence-wracked southern Philippines, after a six-month counterterrorism training exercise to help local troops fight the Abu Sayyaf.

No foreigners were believed to have been injured in Thursday's bombings.

National Security Adviser Roilo Golez refused to speculate on possible links to the deadly bombings on Bali, saying officials were looking at the Zamboanga attack as "a local concern."

Indonesia to interrogate leader

BY SLOBODAN LEKIC
ASSOCIATED PRESS

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Indonesian authorities moved against the spiritual leader of an Islamic militant group Thursday, and President Megawati Sukarnoputri won critical parliamentary support for emergency anti-terrorism laws following the Bali bombing that killed at least 183 people.

The suspicions against Abu Bakar Bashir of the Jemaah Islamiah group relate to a series of attacks on Indonesian Christian churches in 2000, not to the weekend bombing on the resort island, Deputy National Police Brig Gen. Edward Aritonang told the Associated Press.

Still, in announcing that Bashir would be summoned for questioning Saturday, the Indonesian authorities appeared to be responding to intense international pressure to crack down on terrorism and go after Jemaah Islamiah.

Bashir, who lives openly in the town of Solo, approximately 250 miles southeast of Jakarta, could not be reached for comment. But he has repeatedly denied any involvement in the church bombings or the Bali attack.

The Christmas Eve church bombings in Jakarta and nine other cities and towns killed 19 people and injured dozens.

Aritonang said police decided to declare Bashir a suspect in the church bombings after Indonesian investigators returned from questioning Omar Al-Faruq, a suspected Al Qaeda operative in Southeast Asia who was arrested in Indonesia in June and handed over to U.S. authorities.

Earlier, Security Minister Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono said he did not rule out a move against Bashir over the Bali attack, "but we are still unable to say which organization is behind this."

Speaking late Thursday on

El-Shinta radio, Bashir's lawyer, Mohamad Mahendradatta, confirmed without elaboration that Bashir is being accused of responsibility in the church attacks and that he could face the death penalty.

Her organization opposed the 2000 initiative to build a new $20 million facility, a measure defeated by voters in a referendum that November.

"People with substance abuse problems don't belong in jail," deProse said.

Maj. Duane Lewis of the county Sheriff's Office said there is "no validity" in the assertion that jail overcrowding will increase as a result of the program's elimination.

"These people in this program weren't creating the overcrowding problem in jail," he said.

He said the decision was motivated by last month's relocation of the class from the Express Way Motel to the Heartland Inn, both in Coralville. He said the move, made without the department's knowledge, created security problems. The new location made it difficult to keep track of those in the program because the hotel was more centrally located than Express Way and located near alcohol vendors, Major Lewis said.

During one of the sessions on June 23, eight participants smuggled two bottles of vodka into their motel and were caught either drinking or intoxicated.

Dick Gibson, the chairman of a task force researching the feasibility of a new facility and alternatives, said eliminating the program could increase overcrowding at the jail. The jail has space for 92 inmates. A holding cell for intoxicated offenders can accommodate up to 12 more for short periods.

"These facilities are inadequate for the needs of the county," said Bill Dorst, a member of the Jail Space and Services Task Force. "We probably need more jail space."

He said the panel will likely suggest jail alternatives while also recommending that the Board of Supervisors approve building a new facility.

The task force considered 46 jail alternatives during its meeting earlier this month — ideas that it plans to continue discussing during its November meeting, Dorst said. It also learned a new facility that would hold 220 prisoners could cost the county $22 million.

Although alternatives to jail can alleviate overcrowding, Dorst said, not all programs such as the one in question are appropriate.

"Jail alternatives can mean a whole bunch of different things," he said. "There is a population that can't or won't qualify for jail alternatives."

"I don't think there has been more drinking than before," he said. "I think more people are going downtown than 10 years ago because of the alcohol ban in fraternities. Students are less spread out, and that gives police a way to find underage drinkers."

Police cautioned that the numbers do not accurately represent the effectiveness of a year-old ordinance designed to curb underage drinking.

Officer availability, grant funding, and calls for service elsewhere "affect the officers' ability to devote time and effort to the liquor-license establishments at any given time," Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake wrote in the report. "The PAULA arrest numbers cannot be used to make a judgment with respect to effectiveness of any local ordinance or state code."

PAULA arrests tend to occur most frequently in August and September, with an average of 248 and 223 offenses, respectively, over the three-year period, the report shows. During that time, the department often uses state and federal grant money to send officers to many bars.

"I think the increase [in PAULA arrests] comes mainly because of the enforcement of existing laws," said Councilor Connie Champion. "I still consider the [alcohol] ordinance ineffective."

Two weeks ago, City Attorney Eleanor Dilkes said the part of the ordinance concerning administrative penalties for establishments that serve underage patrons is having its intended effect. She warned that the initiative should be periodically rechecked, however, because it has only been enforced for seven months. Of the 46 citations filed against employees, 18 have pleaded guilty. Fifteen are set for trial, according to data from early October.

child obesity is a national problem, and we need to teach kids how to exercise right," said City High P.E. teacher Keith Branstetter, who felt a substantial number of students would favor more exercise time.

The task force, composed of parents, teachers, students, and health experts, suggested that schools provide more low-fat, low-sugar foods to students along with more fruits, vegetables, and dairy products.

"We are not in favor of taking away choices from students, but we are trying to offer balance to students," said Deb Wretman, the Southeast Junior High principal and a task-force member.

The report suggested replacing 20 oz. containers of soda pop with 12 oz. cans and requiring that 50 percent of vending machine snacks be of high nutritional value. District vending machine revenues, which totaled approximately $41,404 last year, could decline if some items are removed.

Task-force members, who researched school nutrition for six weeks, recommended establishing a permanent committee to monitor student health.

"Based on what we accomplished, we feel that there is more that could be done," Wretman said. "We certainly haven't exhausted all the possibilities."

A final review of the report at a private meeting Tuesday night was cut short after reporters from the Iowa City Press-Citizen and The Daily Iowan demanded entrance and caused the meeting to be disbanded. The Press-Citizen plans to file a complaint with the county attorney alleging the closed meeting was in violation of the state's open-meeting law.

In what he said was a personal favor to Leach, who is seeking his 13th term in Congress, Thompson visited the UIHC's General Clinical Research Center to examine its smallpox-vaccine trials.

"I have become a lay expert on smallpox vaccines," he said, adding that he recently spearheaded the purchase of 85 million doses of a smallpox vaccine for $12 million because of the war on terrorism.

Patricia Winokur, a UI associate professor of internal medicine, is heading a team of UI researchers who will administer diluted doses of the vaccine to patients to determine if smaller doses are effective. Researchers will begin testing 150 patients next week. The university is one of three research institutions involved in the project.

Thompson said he hopes researchers can dilute the vaccine 1 part to 10, multiplying the available doses to 850 million. Although the vaccine is not licensable by the FDA, he said, it could be used in an emergency with a patient's permission.

Thompson also examined other UI projects funded by the National Institutes of Health.

During his hour-long stay, he visited with UIHC patient Roger Boelman to discuss his cochlear implant — something that interested the partially deaf Thompson. Boelman, a Belmond, Iowa native, was completely deaf in his left ear until he received the implant, which converts sounds into an electrical code and sends it to the auditory nerve.

"I owe everything to this hospital," he said, instructing Thompson to never stop funding the research center.

In a press conference after the tour, Thompson stumped for Leach, praising his ethics and principles.

they would give the project $20,000 only if Vision Iowa provided $1 million. When Vision Iowa announced last month it would give $800,000 to the project, the supervisors' pledge was withdrawn.

But on a 3-2 vote, with Supervisors Pat Harney and Carol Thompson voting nay, the board restored the money.

"I think that it will help the restaurant and motel economies with out-of-town visitors and will create some full- and part-time jobs," said Supervisor Mike Lehman, who cast the deciding vote. He was the only supervisor without a clear stance on the issue prior to the meeting.

Lehman said the theater will benefit rural residents and people who don't regularly attend art events by stimulating the county's economy.

Thompson and Harney both said they support the group's efforts and that their votes against the resolution do not reflect their feelings about the project.

"I don't believe that [the Englert] is an essential purpose of county government," said

Thompson, adding that she feels uncomfortable spending money on a new project when a tight budget is forcing cuts in many areas.

Harney echoed Thompson's sentiments and said he is disappointed with Vision Iowa, which donated less than the requested amount because its policy is to avoid being the primary donor.

Englert representatives are soliciting donations; they said they expect to receive the bulk of funding from local corporate entities and wealthy private citizens. Several fund-raisers are planned for the near future.

As a fund-raising effort, Universal Studios has agreed to hold the Nov. 12 premiere of The Emperor's Club at the Campus III in the Old Capitol Town Center. The movie, starring Kevin Kline, is based on a short story by Writers' Workshop Professor Ethan Canin.

Starting today, the Englert will collect proceeds from a costume sale. It will also hold a New Year's Eve fund-raiser, Englert Night Out, with several performers at different venues.

"We have a formal plan, and we think we can do it," Schlue said.

Task force not against detox center idea

The author of the Oct. 10 editorial advocating a detox center is unclear about who is supposedly to blame for failure to pursue this alternative to jail time in an effort to reduce the requirement for a new jail.

I want to assure residents of Johnson County that this is not a position of the Johnson County Jail Space and Services Task Force. The task force is and will continue to consider every reasonable alternative to jail consistent with prudent public-safety considerations. Discussion of the detox center alternative did not occur at the Oct. 9 meeting as the task force was focused on alternatives once a person is in the justice system. As I understand the concept of a detox center, and there are many variations, it would be an alternative to entry into the justice system, not a variation within the system, a very important distinction.

The task force has not reached consensus on any alternatives thus far.

Richard Gibson
chairman, Johnson County Jail Space and Services Task Force

Don't enable Leaching

The Oct. 4 Daily Iowan contained a letter from a student who was a "registered Democrat" who was voting for Republican Rep. Jim Leach. She cited Leach's environmental record, even sometimes in opposition to his own party. Though Leach does have a fairly good environmental record, what is not discussed are the disastrous ramifications of a vote for Leach. Leach is an enabler of the continued control of the House of Representatives by right-wing Republicans.

A vote for Leach helps the Republicans maintain their control of a very narrowly divided House. The party that wins the majority of the 435 House seats gets to pick the representatives who actually control what legislation is brought forth to the entire House to be voted on: the speaker of the House, the majority leader, and the heads of each of the 19 standing House committees.

On the environment, a vote for Leach enables James Hansen, Republican of Utah, to remain as chairman of the House Resources Committee. His record with the League of Conservation Voters is 7 percent. The ranking Democrat, Nick Joe Rahall of West Virginia, had a League of Conservation Voters record of 64 percent. If Julie Thomas, Leach's opponent, and six other Democrats take Republican House seats, Hansen will no longer head the resources committee.

A vote for Leach enables Don Young, Republican of Alaska (and strong supporter of drilling in the Arctic wilderness), to continue as chairman of the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee — League of Conservation rating, 7 percent. The ranking Democrat, James Oberstar of Minnesota — League of Conservation record of 71 percent.

A vote for Jim Leach enables Tom DeLay to become House Majority Leader; League of Conservation rating, 0 percent (and Christian Coalition rating of 100 percent). The ranking Democrat, Dick Gephardt — League of Conservation record, 93 percent.

A vote for "moderate" Leach, however well-intentioned, is a vote for an enabler — a Republican who is crucial to the Republicans with their right-wing committee leaders and their right-wing majority leader. If we truly want to change the direction of the House, it must start right here in Johnson County with a vote for progressive Democrat Julie Thomas.

I'm satired of Todd

Todd, give me a break! The Hawkeyes are having their best football season in more than 10 years, and the best you can do is write a column about them that is 100 percent satire (DI, Oct. 15). The sports section at the DI is bad enough with its two full pages of classified ads without you wasting space reserved for football by "trying" (and I use that term loosely) to be funny.

Maybe your satire would have been appreciated in a year when the Hawks were lousy, but what real fans want right now is hard-hitting, intelligent football news. Even if you're just doing an opinion column, how about giving the team the respect it deserves by doing serious pieces? If I want laughs, I'll go rent Tommy Boy at the video store. But when I want football ... I guess I can't turn to The Daily Iowan, huh?

Research-only faculty idea not in best interests of undergraduates

Recently, in a meeting with UI faculty, interim President Sandy Boyd put the brakes on a plan that would create research-only positions for university faculty members. Boyd has every reason to advise caution on this possibly historic change that would potentially decrease the quality of education.

Some of the supporters of the plan argue that the change would bring in more top researchers and more funding for the university to work on more important projects. However, this may not be the case. The UI chapter of the American Association of University Professors has recently released a nine-page report speaking out against the idea of creating a research-only faculty track. In fact, one of the few positive aspects the faculty group cites is that it "would allow the university greater flexibility to adjust the number of faculty in the face of changes in external funding." Essentially, this means that these research-only positions will come with very little job security; such a plan is hardly likely to attract top researchers.

Furthermore, this plan seems to disregard that which Boyd holds as the cornerstone of the university: the students. Already, undergraduates are feeling neglected because of the high number of classes taught by non-faculty members; how are we to expect the students to feel if we spend the money to hire more professors but don't require them to teach classes?

Much has been made recently of the UI's problems with binge drinking; however, the university didn't even make it onto the Princeton Review's list of top 20 party schools. The list on which we rank No. 3? "Professors make themselves scarce." It seems the university should focus more on student-faculty interaction rather than creating new positions for which no interaction is required.

If this plan is to even be considered, the following provision should be enacted: Research-only faculty should be required to take a specific number of undergraduates under their wings as research assistants each semester. That way, students will in some way be benefiting rather than paying professors they never see to do research in which they have no part.

Boyd is right to express his doubts about this proposition; any plan enacted by the university, whether it concerns tuition, construction, or faculty, should be based on the philosophy that students are the heart of the university.

To women's mags: Let us eat doughnuts

It was just the other day that I was lying around, perfectly content in my sweatpants, with some of those little powdered doughnuts. I was having a marvelous time. I felt pretty amazing. A chaotic week of midterms was behind me, and I could finally kick back and relax.

It was then that I saw it, out of the corner of my eye — a Cosmopolitan magazine staring back at me, taunting me to flip through its pages. My greatest fear had confronted me. A guide on how to be the perfect girlfriend, how to lose 10 pounds in a week, and how to correctly apply eyeliner dared me to be the next victim.

I panicked. I pulled the blanket over my head and screamed for my roommates to save me and take the magazine away. There was no answer. I was doomed. I peeked out from under the blanket and was horrified to see the magazine laughing at me. I became irate. Without thinking of the consequences of my actions, I jumped up and marched over to where it lay. I seized it and just as I was about to chuck it out the front door, I felt a strange sensation of some sort of magnetism that would not allow me to part with the magazine.

The headlines bombarded me in an attempt to convince me that I would be a beautiful, successful, and satisfying woman if I only put my guard down and read the magazine. I tried to resist, I really did, but in the end I surrendered, exhausted after trying to resist the temptation that such magazines work so hard to produce.

My eyes stared at the cover in disbelief. I was overwhelmed by the headlines that read "His Secret Moan Zone" and "85 Ways to Wow a Man." Could this be true? I pondered the idea and became terribly excited that such a magazine could transform the life of an individual. I was hooked.

The very first page was an advertisement for perfume. The model was without clothes. A single line read, "The Essence of a Woman." "Really?" I thought. I put the box of doughnuts down. The next page was for the same kind of perfume, but this time created for a man. He was also naked. I read the words, "The Nature of Man." These ideas that were presented to me contradicted everything I had previously thought before. It was printed, though, so I imagined it must be true. Right?

KATHERINE PETERSON

I flipped to the next page. Bam! I saw another advertisement of a woman removing her shirt. It was for a silkening moisturizer that apparently improves dry skin and leaves you looking perfect. I felt my face and was a bit embarrassed that I had never used such a product. I made a note to buy some the next day.

The next page had yet another advertisement. At first glance I was quite relieved to see a woman lounging in her pajamas. My heart dropped though when I realized I looked absolutely nothing like the model first thing in the morning. Her teeth were glowing white, her hair golden and styled, and of course she lacked morning eye-boggers. I looked down at myself and realized I needed a bit of a makeover.

Next I observed an advertisement for blue jeans. It read, "Jeans should flatter the leg line. Accentuate the curves. Increase the compliments." This suggests that these particular jeans are made for the interest of a man. What about comfort? Durability? Price? Once again, the magazine convinced me that looking sexy is the only way to survive as a woman in this society. I decided I would rush to the mall the following day, purchase a pair of these incredible look-at-my-ass jeans, and be set.

Finally, I came across some articles and was a bit disappointed that the content in all of them revolved only around men. After reading through them, I was certain it would be impossible to survive without a man in my life. I considered the fact that I was single and decided I would make a conscious effort to find a boyfriend immediately.

I moved on to the fashion section. The title read, "Six Wow-Him Outfits." Not only was I lucky enough to be informed about what was trendy this season, I also was also fortunate enough to be let in on how I can put together a look he would love. I pushed the box of doughnuts a little farther away.

Then I got hungry and came to my senses. I grabbed the box of doughnuts and ate six of them right there on the spot. Tossing the magazine aside, I realized that this particular medium was spreading a false idea: the idea that women should use their energy only to pursue and satisfy men. Then, I grabbed another doughnut.

Some of the best dramas in the world involve a set of damaged people and a single event that sends them on a quest for either self-discovery or self-destruction. White Oleander plays with both goals and succeeds, however brutally.

Innocent teenager Astrid (Alison Lohman) idolizes her artistic mother, Ingrid (Michelle Pfeiffer), a free spirit who will use whatever means necessary to protect her personal integrity. Ingrid is sent to jail for poisoning her lover with the plant of the title, and Astrid is sent to the oblivion of Social Services.

Buffeted from one foster mother to another (including Robin Wright Penn and Renee Zellweger), the lost girl struggles to forge an identity for herself. At every turn, though, she's ripped away from any possibility of happiness by circumstance or catastrophe.

Oleander is not an easy film to watch by any means. Most, if not all, of the characters are hurt in one way or another. Ingrid, the only person with strength, is conniving and cruel, and other people make some personally damaging decisions and then live with the all-too-harsh consequences. There's nothing simple about this movie.

Screenwriter Mary Agnes Donoghue (Beaches), who adapted the novel by Janet Fitch, throws a lot of story at the audience. Astrid goes through four major episodes in her tragic arc, during which four different sets of relationships have to be established. On top of that, Ingrid is still an integral part of her daughter's life throughout the narrative. Interestingly, we're actually told progressively less about each new situation, leaving the interpretations in the hands of director Peter Kominsky.

Kominsky, who typically heads up television movies, uses a little bit of film to tell a lot about each character. Even though we're rarely treated to much time with any character except Astrid and Ingrid, Kominsky uses the time wisely, drawing subtle performances out of his cast. He often throws in flashes of the past to strengthen the storyline. The cinematography, often shaky and hand-held, also seems to draw out unspoken parts of the story.

If Donoghue's script is dependent on the wiles of Kominsky's direction, Kominsky would have certainly been lost without an incredible cast. Luckily, White Oleander is blessed with an incredible set of actors.

Pfeiffer is marvelous. There's not another word for it. She shows us yet another side of her considerable thespian talent, playing a pillar of manipulative, machinating strength. Her mind visibly overpowers those of her co-stars in many scenes, and when we do finally see her weaken, it's both a relief and painful.

Wright Penn and Zellweger, both interesting actors in their own right, give performances that rank among their best.

Wright Penn plays a trailer-trash foster mom who becomes jealous of the relationship her boyfriend, Ray (Cole Hauser), shares with Astrid. Her breakdown from cheery Jesus freak to raving alcoholic is quite convincing.

Zellweger plays a pathetic out-of-work version of herself who provides Astrid with some wonderful times but ultimately can't cope with her own issues, much less help out her foster daughter. Zellweger hasn't had a part this good since Jerry Maguire, and she invests her work here with a tragic subtlety.

The single best cast member, though, is Lohman herself. Perhaps one is forced to relate with her the most because we see her more consistently than anyone else. There are very few frames that do not contain her. She is the epicenter of the film, the person through which all other events filter. This young actor-to-be manages the task with aplomb; she is going to be one of the greats some day.

With all of these great female performances, it's less than surprising that the one pivotal male role is a little weak. Paul Trout (Patrick Fugit) is supposed to be Astrid's eventual salvation, but he's so awkwardly underwritten that his appeal is not apparent. He's simply the world's most decent guy. I'd like to think that this isn't Fugit's fault. Given that his work in Almost Famous spoke to me personally, I may be a little biased, though. Suffice to say, this lack of dimension in one character weakens the end of the film.

White Oleander is a risky film. The success of one element is wholly dependent on every other little thing, and it's a happy surprise that nearly everything meshes perfectly. I can't imagine being more fascinating by such broken people.

Don't answer the phone

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With a deadly sniper terrorizing the suburbs of the nation's capital, 20th Century Fox has decided to delay the release of a thriller about people being pinned down in a phone booth by a gunman they can't see.

Phone Booth, starring Colin Farrell as the shooter's target, was scheduled to open Nov. 15.

But the studio decided to delay its release after a sniper killed nine people in suburban Washington, D.C., said Flo Glace, a 20th Century Fox spokeswoman.

A new opening date has not been set.

Screenwriter Larry Cohen, who wrote Phone Booth three years ago, has said he wouldn't mind if the studio delayed release of the film in which the shooter lures victims inside a phone booth, then threatens to kill them if they hang up.

Another movie with a similar theme, Interview with the Assassin, will open as scheduled Nov. 15 in New York and Los Angeles, said Eamonn Bowles, the president of Magnolia Pictures, which is distributing the film.

The movie, about an ex-Marine who claims he shot President Kennedy, opens in more cities Nov. 22 — the 39th anniversary of the assassination.

"We're monitoring the situation, but right now, we plan to go ahead with the release," Bowles said Wednesday. "Basically we're playing it by ear, seeing what the mood of the country is like."

Splitting Lotus Land

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actors, cinematographers, costumers, and others from the entertainment industry said it would be harder to film in the Los Angeles area if Hollywood and the San Fernando Valley secede from the city.

On Nov. 5, voters throughout Los Angeles will cast votes on secession measures involving the San Fernando Valley and Hollywood. To secede, the initiatives must win a majority of votes in the proposed new cities and also must be endorsed by a majority of voters citywide.

Supporters of the breakup want more control and say the city as it stands is too large to deal with issues such as overcrowded schools, traffic congestion, and rising crime.

Representatives from the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, the International Cinematographers Guild, and the costumers union held a rally Monday in Studio City to fight the secession movement. About 24 people attended.

Guild officials said splitting up the nation's second-largest city would make the permit process for shooting in public locations more complicated.

"A united L.A. is a working L.A.," said TV federation President John Connolly. "It will be a terrible disaster for the working people of Hollywood to take apart Los Angeles."

If secessionists succeed, a production that wants to film in Los Angeles may have to deal with three separate municipalities with their own permitting fees and agencies, instead of just one under the present city system, said Bruce Doering, the national executive director of the cinematographers' guild.

Six supporters of secession attended the street corner rally and shouted slogans during the speechmaking. They dismissed the Hollywood unions' remarks as useless "scare tactics."

Vatican cold to portions of sex policy

BY VICTOR L. SIMPSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

VATICAN CITY — The Vatican has rejected some elements of the U.S. Catholic Church's new sex-abuse policy and advised American bishops against going ahead with them, church sources familiar with the response said Thursday.

In particular, the Vatican expressed concern over elements of the proposed policy that would violate the individual rights of accused clerics now protected under universal church law, the sources said.

A leading U.S. advocate for abuse victims accused the church of "pretty dangerous backsliding" on its promises to crack down on molesters.

"Bishops now have to choose: Do they keep kids safe, or do they make Vatican bureaucrats happy?" said David Clohessy, the national director of the Survivors Network of Those Abused by Priests.

The Vatican response, which is short on specifics, will be made public today. Bishop Wilton Gregory, the president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, and other American prelates met Thursday with Pope John Paul II to discuss the clerical-abuse scandal that has rocked the American church.

All along, some Vatican administrators and U.S. church lawyers have raised objections to the proposals, arguing that they may violate the due-process rights of priests.

However, Vatican officials and top American clergymen had said they expected the Holy See would go along with them anyway, on a trial basis.

The sources stressed that the entire plan has not been rejected and that it could be a work in progress to satisfy the various objections.

Nevertheless, the Vatican is recommending the bishops be cautious in implementing the more controversial sections of the policy, the sources said.

The sources, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, did not specify the various elements that the Vatican opposed. But they made it clear they dealt with provisions regarding the rights of priests under universal church law.

American bishops adopted the policy in June after a wave of sex-abuse allegations against priests and reports that their superiors tried to cover up wrongdoing by moving known offenders from parish to parish.

The bishops want Vatican approval so their policy has the full weight of Rome behind them. A full rejection would be an embarrassing blow to the U.S. bishops, who are struggling to restore credibility in the wake of the scandal.

The provisions in the new policy include requiring dioceses to remove guilty priests from church work and, in some instances, from the priesthood itself.

It also removes a statute of limitations for abuse claims, saying a guilty priest will be relieved of his ministry for "even a single act of sexual abuse of a minor — past, present, or future."

Church lawyers have questioned whether the plan conflicts with canon law and the due-process rights of accused clergy and whether the diocesan lay review boards mandated in the plan have too much authority.

Cardinal Francis George of Chicago, in an interview Sunday with the Associated Press after talks with cardinals in Rome, said he expected the pope would accept the policy and would grant the American church a waiver to get around aspects of church law that may conflict with the new rules.

In what was seen as a possible sign of the Vatican's willingness to back the U.S. bishops, the influential Italian Jesuit magazine La Civiltà Cattolica published an editorial Thursday stating the U.S. proposals without criticism and noting that the pope has said there is no room in the priesthood for clerics who commit crimes against young people.

Police: Sniper 'witness' made up story

BY PATRICIA DAVIS AND CAROL MORELLO
WASHINGTON POST

A man who claimed to have seen the sniper shoot his most recent victim made up the story, providing false descriptions of a gunman, a weapon, and a vehicle, police said Thursday as they discounted what had seemed to be some of their most promising leads in the case.

The witness's account led police to erroneously tell the public to watch for a cream-colored Chevy Astro van with a malfunctioning taillight and a ladder rack. The man also wrongly described the gunman and the rifle he used to kill Linda Franklin, an FBI analyst, as she stood at her car at a Home Depot store in the Seven Corners section of Fairfax County, Va., on Monday night.

"Information provided by one of the witnesses at the scene of the shooting in the Home Depot ... is not credible," said Fairfax Police Chief J. Thomas Manger. "In addition, there have been several media reports related to the description of the specific weapon and the suspect, and that information as well is not reliable."

As detectives checked and rechecked leads because of the false witnesses account, the search for the elusive sniper expanded internationally. FBI interrogators are questioning detainees at the U.S. military detention center in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, about whether they know of any specific Al Qaeda plans to launch sniper attacks in the United States, law-enforcement sources said.

Authorities continued to stress that no evidence has emerged that would link the sniper to foreign or domestic terror groups. Meanwhile, army surveillance aircraft that were supposed to assist in the hunt for the sniper have not arrived, a senior Defense official said Thursday.

Montgomery County, Md., Police Chief Charles Moose, who is heading the investigation into the string of shootings that has killed nine and wounded two others since Oct. 2, said the false witness accounts did not set back the investigation.

But Thursday, police cadets returned to the scene of Monday's shooting and scoured the grass and pavement across Route 50 from the parking lot where Franklin was killed by a gunshot to her head. Sources said police searched the area Monday night and Tuesday before the rain came but not as thoroughly as they did Thursday after they learned that the witness had provided false information.

The cadets did not recover a shell casing or other evidence, the sources said, and police now believe the shooter may have fired from approximately 100 yards away — more than twice the distance the witness had claimed.

Malone unofficially decides to retire

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone has "pretty much" decided whether to retire after this season but refused to say Thursday when he officially will announce a decision.

Malone, the NBA's second-leading career scorer, is entering his 18th season with the Utah Jazz. He will earn $19.25 million in the final year of his contract.

Jazz owner Larry Miller has said he doesn't plan to extend the 39-year-old Malone's contract or give him a raise before the end of the season.

Washburn out hunting big game in Anaheim

BY RONALD BLUM
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Instead of hunting big game this October, Jarrod Washburn is pitching in one.

The 28-year-old left-hander will start the World Series opener for Anaheim on Saturday night against San Francisco's Jason Schmidt, far different from Washburn's usual autumn haunts.

He's from Danbury, Wis., a town so small that its 1,855 residents could fit into Edison International Field's left-field bleachers with room to spare.

"You hunt six days a week," Washburn said, "and watch the Packers on Sunday."

He loves to take his bow and arrow out during the offseason and go after deer, even goes to North Dakota to hunt with his dad. Even if the temperature is 40 degrees below zero.

"As long as there's no wind," he said.

Last year, he had a big decision to make after the season.

"I finally got a dish so I could watch the World Series," he

No looking ahead

Hawkeyes concentrate on Indiana without the threat of QB Randle El

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
 THE DAILY IOWAN

For the first time in four years the Iowa Hawkeyes enter their contest with Indiana without the worry of having to prepare for Antwaan Randle El.

But that doesn't make life any easier for the No. 15 Hawkeyes.

"We've got our hands full and our work cut out for us," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said of Iowa's meeting with the Hoosiers Saturday afternoon in Bloomington. "It's obvious [Indiana coach Gerry DiNardo] has got them playing really, really well and with confidence."

Even without the presence of the explosive Randle El, now a member of the NFL's Pittsburgh Steelers, the Hoosiers present plenty of challenges for the Hawkeyes. Indiana rallied from a 29-10 deficit last weekend to upset No. 23 Wisconsin 32-29 in Memorial Stadium.

As if Iowa didn't need any reminders not to look ahead to next weekend's highly anticipated meeting with No. 11 Michigan, the Hoosiers' performance a week ago hammered home the point.

"The moral of the story is, you better be ready every week," said Ferentz.

That means not ignoring the 3-3 Hoosiers, who have defeated the Hawkeyes three of the last four times the pair of schools have faced off.

"They're definitely a good team; we have to respect them," Iowa offensive guard Eric Steinbach said. "Each week anything can happen."

And last week it did, as Hoosier quarterback Gibran Hamdan masterminded Indiana's come-from-behind victory. Hamdan earned co-offensive player of the week honors from

Scouting report week 8: Iowa at Indiana

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP

OFFENSE

Indiana's Gibran Hamdan and Iowa's Brad Banks rank behind only Penn State's Zack Mills in total offense. Hamdan accounts for 251.5 yards per game while Banks produces 249.3 yards.

Wide receivers Glenn Johnson and Courtney Roby are both on pace for 1,000 yard seasons.

DEFENSE

The two teams differ by just a yard and a half when it comes to total defense. Indiana allows an average of 401.5 yards per game, Iowa 403.

Indiana has allowed conference opponents to convert on all nine chances in the red zone.

SPECIAL TEAMS

After converting on just two field goals a year ago, Indiana is 5-of-8 this season in attempts. Punter Ryan Hamre leads the Big Ten at 44 yards per kick in conference games.

Iowa has not recorded a special teams touchdown this season, while Iowa has three.

OVERALL

The Hoosiers are still coming down from last weekend's 32-29 come-from-behind victory over Wisconsin, but they'll be ready for the No. 15 Hawkeyes.

Iowa should overpower the Hoosiers but it could be more of a game than some experts think. Or it could be a blowout.

Quinn wants pair of victories

BY KATIE LOW
 THE DAILY IOWAN

When the Iowa soccer team squares off against Indiana and No. 16 Purdue this weekend, Katelyn Quinn hopes to once again lead her team, but this time, to two wins.

Quinn, a sophomore forward, scored three goals in last weekend's efforts against Ohio State and Penn State. The Hawkeyes (7-5-1 overall, 2-4-1 Big Ten) defeated Ohio State, 3-1, but were unable to contain a ranked Penn State team, dropping the match, 4-2.

"It felt good to score," Quinn said. "It always does."

Quinn isn't letting the split last weekend affect her positive attitude going into the Indiana (7-3-1 overall, 2-1-2 conference) and Purdue (9-3-1 overall, 4-2-1 conference) games.

"I think we're going to have a good weekend," she said. "They're good teams, and it'll be a challenge, but I think we'll come out on top."

According to Quinn, the team has focused on field positioning and how to avoid opponents who will try to steal the ball.

"We've mostly been working on the physical aspects of the game," she said.

The Hawkeyes will begin a four-game homestand starting with this weekend's games which Quinn thinks will help the team.

"It's nice to have the home crowd support," she said. "Traveling really takes it out of you. I like playing at home."

Coach Carla Baker finds benefits, as well as disadvantages, in the long homestand.

IOWA VOLLEYBALL

On a mission: Hawkeyes seek validation

BY ALI NOLLER
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa volleyball team demonstrated it could play with the top teams in the nation on Oct. 16, when they lost a hard-fought match to the No. 9 Minnesota Gophers.

Tonight, it has a chance to prove it.

The Hawkeyes face their second top 10 team of the week in No. 6 Penn State, which also boasts the top spot in the conference. The Nittany Lions' only loss came to then third-ranked Florida in five games; they remain undefeated in the Big Ten.

But despite Penn State's merit on paper, Iowa junior Renee Hill shot down the worth of rankings.

"They are going to have to play us full out if they want to win," Hill said.

If this aggressive hitter has anything to do with the outcome, the chances are good for the Hawkeyes, who are currently 8-9, 2-5 in the Big Ten. Hill has already tallied a team-high 193 kills on the season, and she leads the team in attack per game at 3.55.

"She has really taken this leadership role and run with it," coach Rita Buck-Crockett said of her veteran hitter. "I have been really happy with the way she's been playing lately."

A week ago, the Hawkeyes entered their second week of Big Ten competition winless in the conference, searching for respect. They got it with a pair of wins over Illinois and Purdue, and gained momentum by scoring 113 to Minnesota's 114 total points Oct. 16.

If the Hawkeyes play with the intensity and unity they have shown in the last seven days, Buck-Crockett is confident her team can contend with Penn State.

"Our confidence is getting better, which is allowing us to work on minor details," the Iowa coach said. "Some of our players tend to play tentative, but we're getting a lot better, and we keep progressing."

The Hawkeyes biggest challenges will likely come from senior Mishka Levy, who is averaging 3.84 kills per game, and Robyn Goukas, who is netting 1.39 blocks per game. The latest statistics verify the recent turnaround for Iowa. The team recorded a season-high 73 kills over Illinois on Oct. 11, and has tallied over 60 kills in each of their last three outings.

Also hot for the Hawkeyes is junior Laura Simpson, who had a career night against Purdue, recording her first double-double with 18 kills and 11 digs, and a career-best three service aces. Simpson followed up her performance with another dynamic outing against Minnesota, notching a career high 19 kills along with 10 digs.

For Hill, the recent overall improvement of the team will make today's match, set to begin at 7 p.m., another battle.

"We're playing more as a team now," Hill said. "We each have committed ourselves to our role, and we are playing as a system that will be hard to beat."

Bucs try to beat Philly jinx

BY DAVE GOLDBERG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers get at least one break when they visit Philadelphia on Sunday: The forecast calls for temperatures in the 50s. That's a lot warmer than it was the last two times the Bucs were in Philly, for consecutive playoff losses.

The Bucs, who never have won a game when it was colder than 40 degrees, have the better record (5-1 to 3-2). The Eagles have home-field advantage and those two straight playoff wins, so Philadelphia is a 3 1/2-point favorite.

But this seems to be a new Tampa Bay team under Jon Gruden.

It has allowed just 9.3 points a game, by far the best in the NFL, and has four defensive touchdowns, three on interception returns by linebacker Derrick Brooks. The offense, unfortunately, is still sluggish.

The Eagles, who have set their sights on nothing less than the Super Bowl, come off a bye with a somewhat odd record. They've crushed division rivals Dallas and Washington by a combined 81-20, but have lost to two AFC teams, Tennessee and Jacksonville.

Collins quits Huskers squad to help brother

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Thunder Collins has quit the Nebraska football team, citing a lack of money to take care of his younger brother.

The running back issued a written statement Wednesday night, saying he quit school and the team in order to take care of his 17-year-old brother, who came from Los Angeles to Lincoln to live with him.

Collins missed a third-straight day of practice Wednesday and issued the statement later.

"My decision to leave the football team is in no way related to football," Collins said in the statement.

Collins said a large cut in his $404 in monthly scholarship money after being suspended four games for violating NCAA rules prompted his decision.

Collins, who entered the season listed as a co-No. 1 with Darran Diedrick, was third on the team in rushing last year with 647 yards on 94 carries. He has 14 carries for 39 yards this season.

After serving the suspension, Collins dropped to the third team because true freshman David Home emerged as the top backup to Diedrick.

If Collins does want to return to the team, coach Frank Solich will listen. However, he said there would be disciplinary action if he agrees to let Collins come back.

"I would have to visit with him and see exactly what the circumstances are surrounding him not being here for three days," Solich said.

Bufs RB says he will remain in Boulder

BOULDER, Colo. — Injured Colorado running back Marcus Houston dismissed talk he will follow former quarterback Craig Ochs by considering a transfer.

"Right now, my commitment to this program is the same since it was from Day One," Houston said.

Houston will miss this week's home game against Baylor, his fifth missed game since suffering a partially torn posterior collateral ligament in his right knee Aug. 31.

Washburn plans to play smart

WASHBURN

said. "We don't have Fox where I'm from."
Nothing to think about this year. All he has to do is walk out to the mound, pick up the ball and throw the first pitch himself. "I can't wait for Saturday to come," he said Wednesday, standing by his locker.
"Your elbows are dripping down blood," Applier said, laughing.
Washburn admitted he didn't watch all of the games.
"Usually, I'd fall asleep before the end," he said.
Anaheim manager Mike Scioscia and San Francisco manager Dusty Baker have announced only their Game 1 starters, preferring to wait on setting their full rotations.
Washburn, 1-0 with a 2.84 ERA in three postseason starts, never had more than 11 wins in parts of four major league seasons. When Anaheim played Cleveland in the major league season opener March 31, the left-hander became the Angels' sixth different opening-day starter in six seasons.

He gave up a two-run single to Milton Bradley in his very first inning of the season and lost the opener 6-0, but went on to go 18-6 with a 3.15 ERA, the most victories for an Angels pitcher in 11 years. From April 19 to July 21, he went unbeaten in 17 starts, going 12-0.
"He's a hard thrower," said Kenny Lofton, who has faced Washburn the most among the Giants, going 4-for-14 (.286). "He has really good stuff and good command. But if we do what we should, we can beat anybody on any given day."
San Francisco had better success against left-handers, batting .279 with a home run per 21.6 at-bats. Against righties, the Giants hit .263 with a homer per 30.6 at-bats.
Jeff Kent batted .366 against lefties, .297 against righties. Barry Bonds hit .384 against left-handers with 21 homers in 125 at-bats, and .363 against righties with 25 homers in 278 at-bats.
"You face guys like that all season long," Washburn said. "The Rangers have A-Rod [Alex Rodriguez]. Oakland has Miguel Tejada, the Yankees have Jason Giambi. I'm going to be smart about it. The situations in the game are going to dictate whether I attack him or pitch around him."

Scioscia said he wanted to see how his pitchers came out of the bullpen sessions before making his other rotation decisions. He must decide whether he'd rather have Ramon Ortiz (15-8) in Game 2 or at Pacific Bell Park in Game 3 — which would slot him to start Game 7 if the series goes that far.
Based on their postseason performances, it wouldn't be surprising if he moved rookie John Lackey (9-4), who turns 24 the day of Game 4, up ahead of Applier (14-12), who has been hit hard by Bonds (4-for-9, two homers), Rich Aurilia (6-for-8), Shawon Dunston (3-for-6), Benito Santiago (3-for-9) and Lofton (15-for-49).
Schmidt, a 29-year-old right-hander acquired from Pittsburgh in July 2001, is 1-1 with a 3.46 ERA in two postseason starts. He took a shutout into the eighth inning against St. Louis, getting the first postseason victory of his career.

Indiana, Purdue come to Iowa City

"I definitely think that playing at home is better for preparing our student-athletes for the game," she said. "However, they still have to go to class, which can be a con. But I think the pros definitely outweigh the cons."
Baker expressed respect for Iowa's opponents this weekend. "Indiana and Purdue are ranked above us in the conference right now," Baker said. "Indiana has a new coach, Mick Lyon, who was successful in his last program. He's a very good coach."
Lyon founded the women's soccer program at the University of Evansville where he coached from 1993-2001. Lyon led the Purple Aces to six straight Missouri Valley Conference Championships and a 107-65-18 overall record in his nine-year tenure at the University of Evansville. He was hired as the head coach at Indiana at the beginning of this season.
Purdue's national ranking is also a concern for the Hawkeyes.
"Purdue is ranked 16 in the country," Baker said. "What we can do is make them play against us. We need to continue to impose our style of play on them."
The Hawkeyes will attempt to do that this weekend with their powerful weapons — Quinn and goalie Britta Vogele.
Vogele, a sophomore, was named Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week on Oct. 14 for her record-tying 15 saves last weekend against Penn State. Vogele tied the record set by former Hawkeye Liz Hendel who also grabbed 15 saves in a match against Saint Louis on Sept. 10, 2000.
Vogele leads the Big Ten with 83 saves and 6.38 saves per game. She is also tied for fifth in shutouts with four. She is second on the list of most saves in Iowa history with 193. Gabe Mauren holds the record, compiling 203 saves during the 1997-98 seasons.
The Hawkeyes kick off tonight against Indiana at 7 p.m. in the Iowa Soccer Complex. They resume competition Sunday at 1 p.m. against Purdue.

SPORTS BRIEF

Watson's contempt charge overturned

CHESTER, S.C. (AP) — A good legal week got even better for former South Carolina runner Derek Watson after a circuit court judge threw out the player's 10-day jail sentence for contempt of court.
Judge Paul Short, in a ruling filed Wednesday, said Greenville Judge Matt Hawley failed to set deadlines or other requirements on the 240 hours of community service Watson got for a marijuana possession sentence in March.
Because "no deadline for the completion of these hours was imposed," Short wrote, "this contempt order must be reversed."
Watson was given credit for a disputed 82 hours of service that Hawley said in August he did not believe the football player performed. Short set a deadline of Dec. 2 for Watson to finish the rest of his service.
Watson's good legal news hasn't changed his status with South Carolina State, spokesman Bill Hamilton said Thursday. Bulldog coach Buddy Pough suspended Watson from the team in September after he was arrested for driving with a suspended license.

The running back remains suspended and is not practicing with the team, Hamilton said. He is working off his hours for the Orangeburg County Sheriff's Department, attending classes, and working out on his own, Hamilton said. Pough has given no indication when, or if, Watson will be reinstated to the team, he said.

Watson had to spend a night in jail two months ago when an angry Hawley sentenced him on contempt of court.

Watson's attorneys, Beattie Ashmore and Walt Tollison, and the man who supervised Watson's community service, Forrest Thomas, also had contempt charges given them by Hawley vacated by Short.

"That's definitely what we expected," said Patrick Yon, an attorney for Thomas. "We knew if we went before another judge, it would be reversed."

Hoosiers comfortable with DiNardo offensive scheme

FOOTBALL

the conference after posting career-highs with 310 passing yards and four touchdowns. Hamdan, who began the season as a backup to fellow fifth year senior Tommy Jones, completed 11-of-14 passes for 155 yards in the fourth quarter against the Badgers.
Hamdan feels he has yet to show his best effort on the field.
"I think that I can play quite a bit better and so can our offense," he said.
"It would be hard for Hamdan to top his numbers from a week ago, but with a pair of wide receivers like Glenn Johnson and Courtney Roby, it's possible. Johnson and Roby combine for an average of 8.7 catches and 171.1 yards per game, making them the most potent 1-2 punch in the Big Ten.
When DiNardo took over the Indiana program prior to the start of the season, he brought to Bloomington a wide-open style of play hardly seen at Indiana, which relied heavily on the run and Randle El's ability to scramble in past seasons. Ferentz said the Hoosiers look "totally different" from a year ago, thanks in large part to their new-found passing attack.

"Early on we didn't really know about the offense and how it was run because we weren't used to it, we were used to an option-based offense," Roby said. "As you get comfortable your play starts to pick up because you know what the offense is about and the key to the offense."
And while the Hoosiers are getting comfortable with their offense, the Hawkeyes are still becoming accustomed to the attention their 6-1 start has brought them.
"It's pretty tough right now because we have a good record and everyone is talking about how we're the best in the Big Ten," said Iowa wide receiver C. J. Jones.

Ferentz had no problem putting Iowa's climb up the national polls in perspective.
"It's a quick fall out, I know that," he said.
Indiana notes: Indiana trails Iowa in the all-time series 36-25-4...The Hoosiers own a six game winning streak in Memorial Stadium dating back to Nov. 3 of last season. It is the longest current home winning streak in the Big Ten... The combined record of Indiana's opponents so far this season is 21-2 and the Hoosiers' schedule ranks as the 23rd-toughest in the nation in the latest Sagarin ratings... The Hoosiers started eight freshmen last weekend against Wisconsin... Indiana has just 55 players on scholarship this season... Johnson and Roby are both on pace for 1,000 yard receiving seasons. The Hoosiers have had just two receivers reach the mark in the program's history... The Hoosiers have out scored opponents 60-19 in the second half this season.

Phelan M. Ebenhack/Associated Press

Tiger Woods hopes to take his sixth PGA Championship this weekend at the Disney Golf Classic starts Thursday.

Woods swings at another PGA title

BY DOUG FERGUSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Even by his own high standards, Tiger Woods has had quite a year — two majors, six victories worldwide, and only one mention of a slump.

That doesn't mean the year has been enjoyable.

Woods believes he has been targeted for criticism no matter what he says, when he plays, or what he wears.

The National Council of Women's Organizations hammered him for not taking a stronger position on Augusta National's all-male membership. Woods thinks Augusta should have a female member, but he also believes in the rights of private clubs to set their own rules.

He was roasted by the British press for playing an early practice round on the day before the Ryder Cup, finishing 18 holes before most fans were even on the course.

Woods also was amused at criticism that he wore a white turtleneck at the Ryder Cup while the rest of the U.S. team had red short-sleeved shirts.

"That was part of the team outfit," he said. "I thought that was kind of funny that they were picking on that."

"I think everyone wants to write something. Whatever the smallest issues are, that's what they are going to do."

There hasn't been anything small about his game, though.

Woods returned to the PGA Tour on Thursday at the Disney World Golf Classic having already sewn up his fourth consecutive PGA Tour money title.

His five PGA Tour victories this year are three more than anyone else. He became the first player since Jack Nicklaus in 1972 to win the first two majors of the year, the Masters and the U.S. Open. He also closed with four straight birdies at the PGA Championship and came up one stroke short of Rich Beem.

What impresses Woods the most is his consistency.

Dating to Doral in the first week of March, he has finished lower than fourth only three times — The Players Championship (tie for 14th), the Memorial (tie for 22nd), and the British Open, where he shot 81 in a cold, hard wind and wound up in a tie for 28th.

"In eight months, that's pretty good playing," Woods said.

He hopes to continue that over the next four days on the Palm and Magnolia courses, located just across the street from the Magic Kingdom.

Woods has won Disney twice, as a rookie in 1996 in only his seventh tournament as a pro, and in 1999, when he closed out the season with four-straight victories.

Others in the field are looking for their first victory of the year. They include David Toms, Davis Love III, and David Duval, who needs to finish first and second the next two weeks for any chance of getting into the Tour Championship.

While those three proven players have not won this year, there have been 15 first-time champions, a tour record.

"The tour is getting deeper," Woods said. "There are more players who are better. If you look at it from that perspective, that explains why those three haven't won."

They are among a dozen Ryder Cup players in the field. Phil Mickelson and Mark Calcavecchia are the only U.S. players taking the week off, while Bernhard Langer and Jesper Parnevik represent the European squad.

Woods said he had a 102-degree fever during the final two days of the Ryder Cup, where he went 2-2-1 and wound up on the losing side for the second time in three matches.
