Historic I.C. house awaits fate

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Cannon-Gay-McCloskey House has survived to see the city's West Side develop over the years. Now, development might be the reason the house has to move from its Melrose Avenue location. The house, 320 Melrose Ave., has been home to eight owners, and it is considered to be a historic landmark in Iowa City because the 118 year-old structure's builder, W.D. Cannon, is believed to be the first person of European descent to have been born in Johnson County, said Michael Maharry, the chairman of the Historic Preservation Commission. For the past few weeks, the two-story brick house has been the subject of controversy between UI officials and Iowa City city councilors because of its proximity to construction of the 200,000-square-foot Gerding Athletics Learning Center. At the city's request, UI officials earlier this month agreed to preserve the historic house according to the city's historic-preservation standards. One option would be to relocate the house, which stands one block west of the Boyd Law Building. "The optimal thing for it would be to leave it in its current location, but because the university's plans don't include the house being there, we feel it's an acceptable compromise to move it to a historically appropriate location," Maharry said. The house was built in 1884 by Wilbur and Delilah Cannon, a retired farm couple from the Solon area, according to Iowa City archives. The Cannons built an addition onto the house in 1905, possibly for use as maid's quarters.

In 1948, Charles and Dorothy Gay moved into the house, where their wedding reception was held, and lived there for 22 years. The McCloskey family moved into the Cannon-Gay House in 1980. The UI purchased the house for use by the law school from former UI economics Professor Deidre McCloskey when she left the university to teach at the University of Illinois-Chicago. ## Archiving the city's criminal history

BY GRANT SCHULTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

In many respects, Doug Harris' job is normal: He sits at a desk with a Gateway computer and filing cabinets, leans back in his rolling office chair, and gazes at the gold-framed pictures of his family on the wall.

Then he opens a shelf stuffed with illegal narcotics. Drugs, guns, and the occasional machete are common for the Iowa City police officer, who spends eight hours per day filing, retrieving, and organizing criminal material in the department's evidence rooms. The work is often messy — Harris deals with marijuana daily and cocaine two to three times per week — and time-consuming. Every morning, he unlocks the department's basement lockers and discovers a new batch of crime-related materials officers deposited the night before.

Some of that evidence isn't exactly conventional. "I've handled everything," Harris said, laughing as he sat in front of the computer that tracks all of the city's evidence information by case number, officer name, victim name, defendant name, and type of crime. "Christmas decorations, yard equipment, power tools — I don't think there's anything that we have not had in evidence."

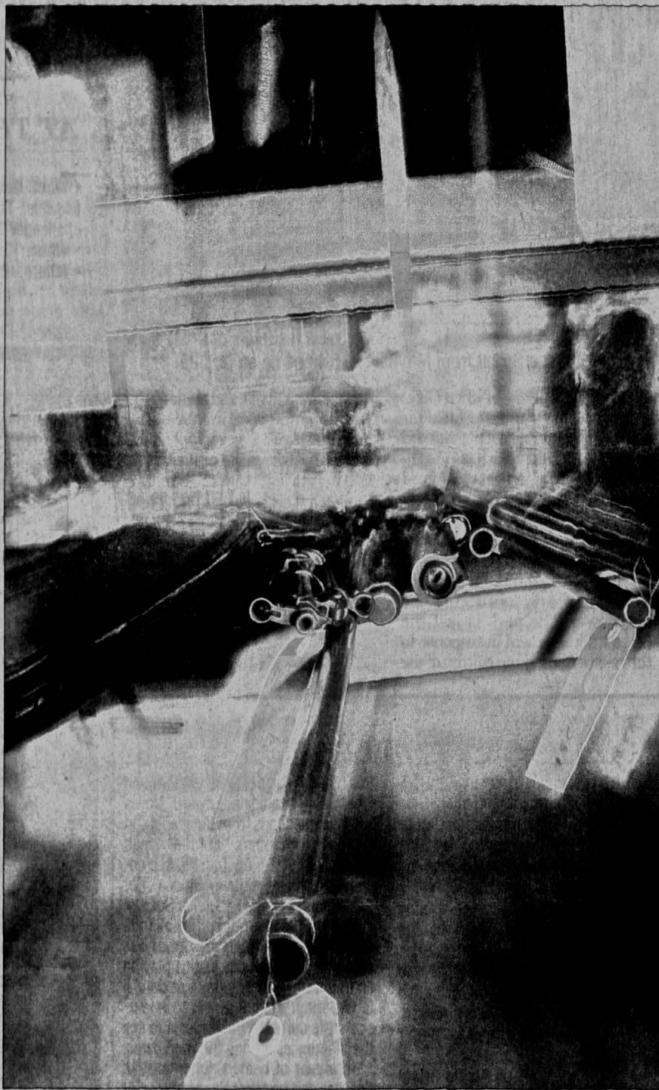

The police store evidence in one of two locations, depending on an item's size or amount.

Smaller items, such as marijuana pipes and handguns, sit on shelves in Harris' office in the department's basement. Less than 10 feet away in the cramped room is a katana, a Japanese long-sword used by martial artists, and nunchaku (two short sticks connected by a chain). A three-foot-tall golden cross stands on top of a shelf to the left of his desk, a remnant of a crime that occurred in 1997, the year Harris began work in the room.

"An officer picked up a gentleman one morning at 5 a.m. at the intersection of Burlington and Gilbert streets who was directing traffic with it," Harris said. "I called every church in an eight-block radius of that location, but we were never able to find out where it belonged."

A larger, off-site storage room, known as "the cave," contains such items as rifles, larger quantities of drugs, and an assortment of boxed clothing from sex crimes. Police granted a tour of the off-site room on the condition that The Daily Iowan not reveal its location.

Illuminated by scattered bare light bulbs, the off-site storage area's lower level smells musty, like a basement. Country music from KHAK — Harris' favorite station — wails in the background, echoing

Russian gas attack killed 116, officials admit

BY JOHN DANISZEWSKI
AND DAVID HOLLEY
LOS ANGELES TIMES

MOSCOW — The hostages had feared their lives would end in gunfire or the explosion of suicide bombs. Instead, Russian health officials acknowledged Sunday, 116 of the 118 captives who died after a theater was freed from Chechen rebel control succumbed to the effects of a powerful gas that rescuers pumped into the auditorium through air ducts.

Announcing that the toll in Moscow's 58-hour hostage siege and rescue had climbed by 28 to the new total of 118, the chairman of the City Health Committee said for the first time that only two victims died from gunshot wounds.

The rest, he said, perished because of the effects on their weakened systems of the mysterious, fast-acting gas chosen by Russian authorities to knock out the Chechen militants before they could begin killing hostages.

Officials so far have refused to identify the gas, but they compared it Sunday with a surgical general anesthetic.

Survivors of the rescue operation spoke of the gas' powerful and almost instantaneous effect. As hospital discharges began Sunday, they also expressed gratitude for their rescue mixed with sadness that so many of their fellow hostages had lost their lives.

Health Committee Chairman Dr. Andrei Setsovsky appeared to bend over backward to avoid saying at a sometimes testy news conference Sunday that anyone had died of gas poisoning.

Rather, he argued, the gas exacerbated existing infirmities, such as heart and lung problems, in a group that spanned all ages and had been held prisoner for 2½ days under extremely stressful conditions, with inadequate sleep, food, and water.

Setsovsky added that 645 ex-hostages remained hospitalized, 150 in intensive care and 45 of those in critical condition.

"So what you're saying is that if we put the gas in here, with healthy people, everyone would be fine?" one journalist inquired with skepticism. The physician answered: "I can't say."

As to the nature of the gas, Dr. Yevgeny Yevdokimov, the city's senior anesthesiologist, called it a narcotic substance "basically similar to a general anesthetic in surgery. As you increase the dose ... bodily dysfunctions occur."

A doctor who treated dozens of hostages, who permitted himself to be identified only as Valery, told the Los Angeles Times that most of those killed had died of "exacerbation of their chronic diseases and hypoxia [lack of oxygen] from overdosing on the gas."

Dems plead for Mondale to enter race

BY JANET HOOK AND MIGUEL BUSTILLO
LOS ANGELES TIMES

WASHINGTON — Former Vice President Walter Mondale, responding to emotional pleas from Democrats, is expected to replace the late Sen. Paul Wellstone as a candidate in Minnesota's hotly contested Senate race.

Mondale, who will turn 75 in January, has said he will not announce his plans until after Tuesday's memorial service for Wellstone, who died Oct. 25 in a plane crash. But party officials say they believe Mondale is willing to accept the nomination, which the party is expected to ratify Wednesday. Republicans already are criticizing his record.

"The vice president, I believe, if asked by the party, would be willing to seek the election Nov. 5," Mike Erlandson, the chairman of the Minnesota Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party, said at a news conference Sunday. "Mr. Mondale is the choice of the Wellstone family. Mr.

Mondale is certainly the sentimental choice of many Democrats across the state."

Democratic officials see Mondale, with his years of political experience and household-name status, as their best hope for beating GOP nominee Norm Coleman in the few days left in the campaign.

Victory in Minnesota is crucial to Democrats' broader battle to preserve their fragile 51-49 majority in the Senate.

It would be a remarkable twist of political history if Democrats were rescued from losing control of the Senate by the man who led the party to a crushing defeat in the 1984 presidential election, when he lost to Ronald Reagan

Pierce prosecutor used to big cases

BY TONY ROBINSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Anne Lahey has received numerous death threats because of the job she loves.

But the assistant Johnson County attorney said receiving malicious letters and media photographs of herself marked with large red X's has not discouraged her from prosecuting criminals.

"It's just something that comes with the territory," said Lahey, who has been a Johnson County prosecutor for 23 years.

Lahey, who is second-in-command at the office, recently took over the responsibilities of Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White, who is recovering from heart surgery. In addition to balancing an average of 40 cases simultaneously, Lahey fields media questions and assigns cases to the 12 other assistant county attorneys.

But now her attention is primarily focused on prosecuting UI men's basketball player Pierre Pierce, who is set to go on trial Jan. 6 on a charge of third-degree sexual abuse.

Some experts say Lahey faces an uphill battle in the case because defense attorney Alfredo Parrish is expected to present the alleged rape as consensual sex. But experts acknowledged that Lahey has already cleared a major hurdle — persuading the alleged victim to pursue criminal charges.

Pierce accepted his right to a speedy trial last week, giving Lahey less than three months to prepare the victim, who sources say is a female UI athlete. But Lahey says she is confident that she has adequate time to put together a strong case against the sophomore guard.

Catholics welcome rosary changes

BY LAURA JENSEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Roman Catholic Church changed its most well-known prayer, the rosary, for the first time in centuries by announcing a new set of mysteries to meditate on while praying.

Pope John Paul II announced the change in an apostolic letter on Oct. 16, declaring the period between October 2002 and October 2003 as the Year of the Rosary and adding the mysteries of light, or the luminous mysteries, to the rosary. Church officials said the changes are aimed at re-connecting Catholics to the rosary and encouraging them to pray it more often.

"The rosary uses what we call mysteries to reflect on the important events of Christ's life," said Father Ed Fitzpatrick, the director of and campus minister at the Newman Catholic Student Center, 104 E. Jefferson St. "I think that it's a great new reflection."

The mysteries of light include Christ's baptism, his first miracle at Cana, his proclaiming the coming of the Kingdom of God, the transfiguration of Christ in front of three disciples, and the establishment of the Eucharist as a sacrament.

"I sense that the Holy Father is dismayed at the darkness in the world and wants us to pray for light with these new luminous mysteries," said Father John Stecher, a campus minister at the Newman Center.

Thomas Scheck, a UI graduate student in religion, said the addition is important because it diverts from the three standard mysteries.

"I think it's very significant because he is promoting the use of the rosary as a devotional tool for Catholics and is making these mysteries more focused on Christ's earthly ministrations," he said.

The rosary incorporates common Catholic prayers, such as the Lord's Prayer and Hail Mary, to meditate on the 15 mysteries of the life of Jesus Christ. The rosary includes the five joyful mysteries of Christ's birth, the five sorrowful mysteries of his crucifixion, and the five glorious mysteries of his resurrection.

The circle of beads ends in a crucifix and is divided into five sections, each consisting of 11 beads representing a mystery in one of the four different types of mysteries.

"The pope has had a lifelong commitment to Mary and the rosary and to helping Catholics to grow in personal holiness, prayer, and closeness to God," Scheck said.

"I think that he feels that he is nearing the end of his life and career and wanted to make another contribution to helping people on their path to holiness by improving the rosary for future generations."

Most Catholics seem pleased with the addition.

"I think these are an important part of the Bible and of religious history, [which] need to be taken into consideration," said Yoyo Aguilar, a Newman Center parishioner. "I'm glad that they did it."

Local skaters revel in city's newest park

BY RYAN PARNELL AND CATHY FLORY
THE DAILY IOWAN

The cold and drizzling rain didn't keep approximately a dozen skaters from grinding their boards in Iowa City's first permanent skate park on Sunday.

The Iowa City Skate Park opened Oct. 26 in Terrell Mill Park after three years of planning and months of construction and delays. Skaters packed the facility this weekend, jumping off ramps, grinding rails, and marveling at the $380,000 park.

"It was definitely a good idea," said Iowa City resident and skater Jordan Josephsen. "I've been here every day before it even opened, and there are usually around 20 to 30 kids skating the park."

The 11,500-square-foot skate park, filled with pyramids, spines, boxes, bowls, and rails, has earned the approval of most skaters who have visited the park, which is located across Dubuque Street from Mayflower Residence Hall.

"The city did a good job building it," Josephsen said. "It's a good location, and it has everything we need to pull tricks off our ability."

But some skaters have complained about a primer substance on the concrete that sticks to skateboards and interferes with tricks.

Bev Seeman, whose company, MBA Concrete Inc., built the park, said the problem is only temporary. The substance is a compound that protects concrete from heat, she said, adding that it can be washed off once the weather improves.

Iowa City's new skate park, located across Dubuque Street from Mayflower, opened up on Oct. 26.

The park could become a daily mecca for skaters who, in the pre-park era, found outlets in downtown Iowa City and on the steps of university buildings, some skaters said.

"It definitely gives us a place to hang out and skate together," said UI freshman and BMXer Brian Cerco. "All we need now is lights so we can be out here longer."

The park attracts skaters of all ages. Those without transportation say they wish it wasn't located on the periphery of Iowa City.

"I think the park is a little far away from where the actual youth live," said Dan O'Shaughnessy, 15, of Iowa City. "It's good that it keeps kids off the streets messing things up, but sometimes it's hard to get out here without a car."

However, Cambus has routes that regularly run to the Mayflower. The park is just the newest development in response to the re-emerging skate culture of the 1980s. Iowa City is also home to the Midwest's largest indoor skate park, Revolt, 91 Commercial Drive.

"The X-Games have a lot to do with it, bringing mass media attention to skating," said UI junior and skater Jeff Bell. "The industry really attracts the youth culture, especially with video games, television, and marketing. Extreme sports are more accessible for kids, and kids are where the money is."

CITY BRIEFS

Iowa City man arrested for robbery

Vincent Charles Allen, 36, 732 E. Davenport St., was arrested for allegedly robbing a convenience store after assaulting a female employee early on Oct. 26.

Allen was charged with second-degree robbery after entering the L&M Mighty Shop, 540 E. Burlington St., and fleeing with an undisclosed amount of money from the cash register. The incident is the third local robbery reported in the last few weeks.

The suspect reportedly entered the store around 3:56 a.m. and assaulted a female employee, grabbed the cash-register drawer, and fled on foot. Allen did not display a weapon. The employee refused medical attention.

While responding to the call, Iowa City police observed a man matching the robber's description near a Dumpster in the 500 block of East College Street. He was captured in the 500 block of East Washington Street after a short foot chase.

Items allegedly linking the man to the robbery were found near the first scene. The drawer and the money were recovered.

Alleged sexual assault under investigation

An unidentified man allegedly entered an unlocked apartment on South Johnson Street and sexually assaulted a female tenant early on Oct. 26, according to police reports.

The intruder allegedly entered the sleeping woman's apartment and sexually assaulted her until her roommate arrived home about 4 a.m., the reports show.

The roommate made the intruder leave the apartment and then took the woman to the hospital and contacted police, according to the reports. The woman sustained no injuries during the assault.

The assailant was last seen wearing light colored cargo-type pants and either a hooded sweatshirt or sweater. He is also described as a 30-40 year old white male, 5-10 to 6 feet tall, with a thin build, dark hair, and a dark complexion. The incident remains under investigation.

Attorney-general candidates to debate

Candidates running in the Iowa attorney general race will debate issues tonight at the Boyd Law Building.

Democratic incumbent Tom Miller,

Rep. David Millage, R-Bettendorf, and Libertarian candidate Edward Noyes will field questions from the media and audience members at the Levitt Auditorium at 7 p.m. The event is co-sponsored by the Iowa Student Bar Association and the Federalist Society.

Debate moderator Stephanos Bibas, a UI associate professor of law, said that with law and justice playing an important part of today's society, it is important for the public to understand the current legal issues and see the differences among the candidates. In a year of heated gubernatorial, Senate, and congressional races, UI law student Brent Walters, the co-president of the Iowa Student Bar Association, said the forum would bring exposure to a much-ignored race.

The debate is free and open to the public.

Officials jockey for sniper trial

BY BRIAN WITTE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCKVILLE, Md. — A growing number of officials said Sunday that the state of Maryland should defer prosecution of the two sniper suspects to another jurisdiction where the death penalty could be more easily applied.

A Justice Department official suggested Maryland should not be the first to try the case, and the top elected official in Maryland's Montgomery County, where six were slain, urged prosecutors to work together to choose the strongest venue.

John Allen Muhammad, 41, and teenager John Lee Malvo were to be charged today in Virginia, where three of the killings took place. The suspects already face multiple murder charges in Maryland and murder charges in Alabama unrelated to the sniper shootings. They also could be charged with federal extortion and murder counts that could bring the death penalty.

"They need to present a unified front to the public and say, 'Here's how we're going to handle this,' and wherever the case is strongest with the stiffest penalties, that's where they need to go," Montgomery County Executive Douglas Duncan told the Associated Press on Sunday. His comments were among the first from Maryland officials suggesting the possibility of another venue.

Montgomery County State's Attorney Douglas Gansler told the AP on Sunday that he still believes his state should prosecute the case first, but "we're open to discussions with all the jurisdictions."

He acknowledged that the toughest sentence Malvo could get in Maryland would be life without the possibility of parole, but he argued that his state has the strongest case because it suffered the heaviest losses.

The Justice Department suggested Sunday it is unlikely Maryland will be the first jurisdiction to try the sniper suspects, who remain in federal custody on federal firearms and material witness warrants issued before their capture.

Maryland "comes in dead last" in terms of the strength of its law on the death penalty, said the official, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

Virginia and Alabama may be more likely than Maryland to carry out executions. Maryland has put just three people to death, and all executions have been suspended under a moratorium imposed by Gov. Parris Glendening.

'1st Husband' often misfires with praise

BY JENNIFER LOVEN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush clearly adores his wife. But his efforts to put that admiration on public display do not always hit the mark.

Warming up an audience in Charlotte, N.C., the president praised Laura Bush's performance as first lady and offered an explanation for her absence. "It's been raining," George Bush said, "so she needs to sweep the porch" of their Texas ranch ahead of a visit by the president of China.

The comment apparently earned the president no points with his wife. Laura Bush, standing with the president on Oct. 25 on that very porch waiting for President Jiang Zemin, was asked if she appreciated it. She shook her head and mouthed, "No."

The president then passed the blame on to the press — which widely publicized the remark — for getting him in trouble at home. George Bush's joke last week got big laughs from his Southern Republican audience — so much so he repeated it at his two later speeches. But the remark — and other aspects of his standard refrain about his wife — hint for some at the bad old days of barefoot-and-pregnant references to women.

"It would have been funnier coming out of Bill Clinton's mouth than a George Bush, because we were all so aware of the work Hillary Clinton was doing," said Martha Burk, the chairwoman of the National Council of Women's Organizations. "Perhaps he's trying to avoid the so-called Hillary backlash. No one can argue with home, hearth, and family, and that's what this is all about."

When on the road — particularly in political settings — George Bush nearly always gives his audiences an update on his popular wife.

He starts out by telling the crowd they "drew the short straw" by getting him instead of her. He then likes to declare that he and the politician (usually a man) for whom he is campaigning both married above themselves and that people are probably surprised that Laura Welch said yes to his proposal.

The president also often offers a glimpse into her whereabouts: just talked on the phone with her, saw her waving from the White House balcony as he left, she is opening a museum.

He typically ends by recalling that when they dated, his now-wife was a public-school librarian who did not like politics and "didn't particularly care for politicians." Now, as he told a Republican rally Thursday in Auburn, Ala., "she is the first lady of the United States, and she is doing a fabulous job. I'm really proud of her."

Teenager goes on rampage, shooting 10

BY NICK TROUGAKOS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALLISAW, Okla. — A teenager apparently upset by complaints about his driving shot four neighbors, including a 2-year-old girl, then went on a 20-mile shooting spree, apparently targeting people at random, police said. Two of the victims died.

Daniel Fears, 18, was arrested after losing control of his pickup truck and crashing near a police roadblock, authorities said. As police cars surrounded him, he threw out a 20-gauge shotgun and surrendered, said Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation spokeswoman Kym Koch.

Authorities hadn't determined a motive for the Oct. 26 rampage, in which 10 people were shot in all, but police said they believed Fears became angry when a neighbor scolded him for driving recklessly in the middle-class neighborhood.

"A man got onto him for driving erratically because he said he almost hit some kids," Koch said.

Fears was to be arraigned today on two charges of first-degree murder, said Sequoyah County District Attorney Diane Barker-Harrod. She said prosecutors hadn't decided if they will seek the death penalty.

Some people in Sallisaw wondered if Fears was mimicking the sniper attacks in the Washington area.

"I think it's a copycat thing," said Camellia Conley, an employee at a Sallisaw hotel. "He's been a rebel without a cause. He was always a loner and always wore a black trench coat."

Koch said such speculation was premature. "It's way too early to say it's a copycat," she said.

Fears was described as a polite student who worked part-time at a Wal-Mart store and lived with his mother in Sallisaw, a town of approximately 8,000 people near the Oklahoma-Arkansas state line.

On Oct. 26, after neighbor Greg Caughman complained to Fears about his driving, Fears broke into his father's house and stole a shotgun, Koch said.

Police say he then shot Caughman, who was in a nearby yard, hitting the man in the back and in the neck, and wounding his 2-year-old daughter, who was sitting in a truck nearby. Both were hospitalized.

Fears then shot two other neighbors, Patsy and Elvie Wells. Patsy Wells, hit in the face and leg, died. Her husband was hit in the chest and was hospitalized in fair condition Sunday.

Police said Fears then got into his pickup and headed east on U.S. 64 to a car dealership, where customer Reba Spangler, 68, of Fort Smith, Ark., was killed.

Authorities on Sunday didn't know if Fears had any connection to the dealership or the victims.

Ronnie Boswell of Muskogee, the owner of the dealership, said salesman Jim Nunn of Muskogee tried to get away, but the gunman "shot him in the chest and knocked him off the curb into the street and then shot him in the back." Nunn was hospitalized in fair condition.

through a corridor that holds, among other items, tennis rackets, an empty lava lamp, a vacuum cleaner, a large-screen Sony television, 18 kegs, and half a dozen bicycles. Walking through isn't difficult, but most of the shelves are cluttered with boxes and garbage bags.

Police keep most evidence for three years before destroying or taking it to auction. They must hold evidence from sex crimes for 10 years. Homicide evidence is kept forever. Food is videotaped and then destroyed. While Harris has never had an animal brought in as evidence, he said, authorities would likely keep it in Iowa City's animal shelter.

Once evidence has spent the required amount of time in storage, police dispose of it in a number of ways. They cremate drugs at funeral homes, bury drug paraphernalia in landfills (two officers must be witnesses), and, if applicable, return miscellaneous belongings to victims, defendants, and witnesses.

"Crowding is an issue all the time," Harris said, adding that police call an exterminator every few months to prevent rodents and bugs from potentially damaging evidence. "It all stems from a backlog in the court system."

Organization is a must. Each item of evidence is given a five-digit number tying it to a case, which Harris in turn plugs into a database program. Precise measurements of drugs are kept on file; they cannot vary by more than a few grams at trial. And every time evidence is transferred, Harris and whoever transfers the items must sign a check-out sheet to create a paper trail.

"If you mishandle evidence or make the wrong measurements, your case is pretty much shot," said Harris, who has worked as a police officer and dispatcher since 1966. Before he arrived in the evidence room, his duties were handled on a part-time basis by shift commanders.

As part of the effort to ensure organization and efficiency, Rick Wyss, the lieutenant in charge of investigations, conducts monthly random checks of the rooms. He randomly pulls 10-15 files from the department's case load, and Harris must locate them all without difficulty. Capt. Tom Widmer, who heads administrative services, makes a similar check four times per year.

If the inspectors asked for evidence in the first-degree murder case against Jonathan Memmer, Harris would direct them to the more than 300 pieces of evidence police collected in the aftermath of the 1999 slayings. Only 168 of those items were actually used in the trial. Memmer was convicted Oct. 22, 2001, of murdering two women in an Iowa City apartment. Police contended he set the building on fire to cover up the evidence.

Two shelves down sits the black guitar allegedly used by Joshua Daniel Johannes, a.k.a. "Anthony Carter." Johannes escaped from custody in Travis County, Texas, in October 2001, where he was being held for murder. An Iowa City resident spotted Johannes at Kum & Go, 323 E. Burlington St., and recognizing him from the show "America's Most Wanted," called police. Johannes was arrested shortly after.

With the Roland Thomson case, police collected approximately 14,000 child-pornography video tapes and around 15 boxes of explicit pictures, Harris said. Thomson was sentenced in March 2000 to one year in federal prison and two years in state prison for taking sexually suggestive photographs of students at Lucas Elementary School, 830 Southlawn Drive, in 1998.

Upstairs, on the off-site room's second floor, rifles are stacked in the corners and on shelves, near a faded blue couch. In the corner, stacked four high in two rows, sit 63 seven-gallon buckets and at least four garbage bags full of marijuana — all from one bust.

Kevin Emmett Toomey, the man charged in connection with the drugs, was allegedly growing and processing the marijuana in a barn in Solon when authorities arrested him Oct. 18, 2001. He faces federal charges for manufacturing the drug and not affixing a proper drug tax stamp.

"It filled pretty much the entire room and was knee-deep," Harris said. "That's a lot of pot."

Ex-VP Mondale expected to join race for Senate

MONDALE

in a landslide. What's more, Mondale is a paragon of the kind of liberalism that many Democrats — other than Wellstone — have tried to move the party away from in the decades since he topped their ticket.

But in Minnesota, old-style liberalism still has great appeal, and Mondale is an icon to many. Mondale, who now practices law and teaches in Minnesota, represented the state in the Senate from the end of 1964, when he was appointed to fill the vacancy left by Hubert Humphrey's election as vice president, to 1976, when he became vice president for one term under Jimmy Carter. In 1984, he was the party's ill-fated presidential nominee, who chose Geraldine Ferraro — the first woman on a major-party ticket — as his running mate. President Clinton appointed him U.S. ambassador to Japan in 1993, a position he held until 1996.

"There's such a tremendous reverence for him," Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said Sunday on CBS News's "Face the Nation." "He would be the great unifier, and I think there would be overwhelming support in Minnesota for his candidacy."

Even though Mondale has not officially agreed to enter the race, Republicans began picking apart his record Sunday — including a famous line in his 1984 speech accepting the presidential nomination when he candidly acknowledged that, as president, he would raise taxes.

"If you want a big tax-increase person with a long history of raising taxes, Walter Mondale's perfect," former House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said on NBC's "Meet the Press." "People ought to vote on how [candidates] vote, not the emotions of this week."

The Minnesota race long has been considered pivotal to deciding which party will control the Senate. The GOP targeted Wellstone as one of the Democrats' most vulnerable incumbents. President Bush personally recruited Coleman — a former mayor of St. Paul, Minn., and a former Democrat — to run, and Republicans were increasingly confident that he could win.

Democratic officials have until late Thursday to name a replacement for Wellstone, and the party will convene its 875 delegates Wednesday. State officials said they expect only one name to be put forward — a clear sign that the party was ready to unite behind Mondale.

Any support for other candidates apparently was put to rest over the weekend when Wellstone's son David, who had been touted by some as a potential candidate, met with Mondale and top members of the Wellstone campaign and personally threw the family's support behind the former vice president.

during August 2000, said Grace Newby, a College of Law secretary.

Two women faculty members now reside in the quiet house for the fall 2002 semester, she said.

UI Facilities Services Group officials have not determined the type or extent of work needed to preserve the house.

"We do not have accurate assessment of preservation needs at this time, so it would be hard to predict," said Dave Jackson, assistant to the group's director.

The city's Historic Preservation Commission has set guidelines for preservation of the historic house. One requires that if the university chooses to move the house, it must find an area that is historically compatible, said City Councilor Connie Champion.

The new location for the historic home may be in the immediate area; the brick house cannot be moved far because of its size and the prevalence of power lines, Maharry said.

Lahey has history of sex-abuse cases

LAHEY

Pierce, 19, is charged with performing unwanted sex acts on a woman at his 725 Orchard St. residence. According to police reports, he held her hands above her head and stifled her attempts to scream.

Lahey has specialized in similar cases involving sexual abuse since her arrival in Johnson County; she also prosecutes child-endangerment and domestic-abuse cases.

"I like working cases with victims because it is a chance for me to help people get justice," she said.

Lahey is known for establishing a good rapport with the victims, said defense attorney Crystal Usher, who went up against Lahey in a week-long sexual assault trial last month.

"She doesn't treat people as clients, but real people," Usher said. "Anne takes the time to keep her clients aware of what is going on."

After graduating from the Creighton University Law School, Lahey worked for two years as an assistant to Nebraska Supreme Court Justice Thomas White before coming to Johnson County in 1979.

In three of Lahey's recent sexual-abuse cases, defense attorneys argued that sexual contact was consensual:

- Antonio Foster's trial ended with a hung jury, 11-1 to convict. He is charged with second-degree sexual abuse and second-degree burglary after he allegedly raped an employee at a Coralville hotel.

- Alexander Lemus was acquitted on third-degree sexual abuse and first-degree kidnapping charges.

- Former City High football star Hakim Hill reached a plea bargain after being charged with raping a then-15-year-old girl in a classroom.

Brazil elects leftist in landslide

BY HAROLD OLMOS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAO PAULO, Brazil — Former union boss Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva won Brazil's presidential election runoff by a landslide Sunday, marking a historic shift to the left for Latin America's largest country.

Ruling party candidate Jose Serra conceded defeat, hours after Lula's Workers Party had declared their candidate the winner.

"The voters have decided that Brazil during the next four years will be governed by my rival," Serra told supporters at his campaign headquarters in a statement broadcast live on national TV.

"I wish the winner good luck in leading the destiny of Brazil," a somber-looking Serra said.

With 95 percent of the vote counted, Lula — a former shoeshine boy who rose to become the head of a labor union — had 61.5 percent to Serra's 38.5 percent, the government Supreme Electoral Tribunal announced.

Thousands of Lula supporters gathered in the streets of Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, waving his party's red flag in celebration.

"This is our opportunity to consolidate our hopes for a Brazil that should be more just and care more about the needs of the people," said Marcos Xavier, a university professor who stood amid some 1,000 Lula supporters on Sao Paulo's main avenue.

Roberto Candia/Associated Press

Supporters of Brazilian presidential candidate Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva celebrate at Copacabana beach in Rio de Janeiro on Sunday. The leftist rolled over his opponent, Jose Serra of the ruling party.

While the votes were still being counted, the White House offered its congratulations to the winner.

"The president congratulates the winner of the election and looks forward to working productively with Brazil," said spokesman Ari Fleischer, speaking to reporters aboard Air Force One while returning from an economic summit in Mexico.

Lula's criticism of free-market policies is at odds with Washington. His election could complicate President Bush's goal of creating a hemispheric free-trade zone by 2005. But the administration has been careful not to criticize Lula during the campaign, aware that any comment could be seen as interference.

At summit, Bush wins some, loses some

BY RON FOURNIER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CABO SAN LUCAS, Mexico — A weekend of urgent diplomacy produced some modest gains for President Bush, although he left this sports-fishing resort Sunday with a string of disappointments in his bid to disarm North Korea and Iraq.

The two-day Asian-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum yielded the United States a show of unity against North Korea's nuclear-weapons program, a fresh round of promises to combat terrorism, and a valuable opportunity to lobby 21 Asian leaders on Iraq.

But Bush's toughest challenges went unmet.

Many Asian leaders still reject Bush's zero-tolerance approach to Iraq, and administration officials grimly acknowledged that a strong U.N. resolution to force Saddam Hussein to disarm may elude them this week.

South Korea and Japan still oppose Bush's isolation policy for North Korea.

U.S. officials still have reason to question the commitment of Muslim-dominated Pacific Rim nations to the war against terrorism.

And the meeting, created by the first Bush administration to liberalize trade, became a forum for Asian leaders to accuse the second Bush White House of protectionist practices.

"I think the president got some of what he hoped for, some of what he expected. But far less than he had hoped," said Bill Taylor, the director of political-military studies at the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington.

The weekend got off to a shaky start when Bush, a stickler for punctuality, was forced to cool his heels for 30 minutes because Chinese President Jiang Zemin arrived late for Oct. 25 talks at the president's Crawford, Texas, ranch.

"We could be fishing," Bush said — probably not the last time he muttered the phrase over the weekend.

After more than an hour of talks, Jiang handed Bush a diplomatic success in the campaign to rid North Korea of its recently disclosed nuclear-weapons program.

"We Chinese always hold the position that the Korean Peninsula should be nuclear weapon-free," Jiang said.

But the Chinese leader failed to deliver a stern condemnation of North Korea's actions. U.S. officials said they expect to endure weeks of negotiations before Beijing might be ready to play a more forceful role.

It didn't get much better for Bush at the summit. At the conclusion, Mexican President Vicente Fox, reading a summary of the communiqué with Bush and other leaders at his side, did not even mention North Korea and only briefly touched on terrorism.

When the president flew here, a senior administration official told reporters aboard Air Force One that the first step in Bush's strategy was to isolate North Korea. The official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the United States expected South Korea and Japan to condemn Pyongyang in joint statement on Oct. 26.

Bush appeared to lose on both counts.

After meeting with the U.S. president, South Korean President Kim Dae-jung and Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi called upon North Korea to "dismantle this program in a prompt and verifiable manner." But they, like Jiang, stopped short of condemning North Korea's actions.

And while Bush refuses to allow U.S. talks with North Korea, fearing the step would reward Pyongyang for its illicit behavior, he acquiesced in the desires of Japan and South Korea to continue dialogue.

U.S. troops 'rough it' at Afghanistan base

BY CHRIS BRUMMITT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANDAHAR AIR FIELD, Afghanistan — They sleep in air-conditioned comfort and have their hair cut by female stylists flown in from Kyrgyzstan. They will soon have a 24-hour cinema to catch the latest films.

The main task for the 4,500 soldiers based in this southern Afghan base is tracking down and capturing Al Qaeda and Taliban stragglers in the country's dusty south. But while not at work, troops are relaxing in ever-increasing style.

The range of the facilities on the base could also be a sign that Washington is not planning on withdrawing or cutting back on its forces in the country anytime soon, despite the increasingly slow pace of the war.

Less than a year after U.S. troops first arrived in this former Taliban stronghold, the still-growing base at an American-built airfield outside of Kandahar has taken on a routine feel.

Soldiers say the detention center for captured fighters, which was once full of prisoners awaiting transport to mission headquarters at Bagram in the north of the country, has not seen an inmate for six weeks or more. Contact with the enemy in the surrounding area has all but petered out, they say.

On Oct. 26, soldiers stood in line at the PX in the heart of the camp. Some struggled out with large bags of charcoal for cookouts planned for sundown. Others wandered the aisles, choosing between a large selection of candy bars, TV sets, PlayStation consoles, and CDs.

Signs call for chess players to join a Sunday evening meet and volleyball players to compete in an inter-unit tournament. Elsewhere, soldiers cycle the miles of dusty paths on imported mountain bikes, passing their colleagues reading newspapers in front of rows of white tents used for living quarters.

Unlike last summer, when soldiers returning from night patrols had to sleep under sweaty tents that trapped the daytime desert sun, quarters for many troops stationed in Afghanistan have been air conditioned. The units also double as a heater, essential for the upcoming winter, when icy temperatures make for uncomfortable nights on the desert plain.

NATION BRIEF

Doctors iffy on reporting system for health-care errors

DENVER (AP) — Most physicians believe that reducing medical errors should be a national priority, but they are much less likely than the public to believe quality of care is a problem, according to a new survey.

The study in today's issue of the Archives of Internal Medicine also found that nearly all physicians believe fear of medical malpractice is a barrier to reporting of errors and that greater legal safeguards are needed for reporting systems to be effective.

Congress is considering a bill by Rep. Nancy Johnson, R-Conn., that would create a voluntary, confidential system for reporting medical errors, but so far no action has been taken.

Experts said the study underlines the difficulties in creating such a system.

"There is widespread fear that reporting of errors would lead to more medical malpractice. I think physicians are always practicing with some unconscious fear of being sued because it's very prevalent," said Dr. Michael Fetters, an assistant professor of family medicine at the University of Michigan whose area of expertise is errors in primary care.

"There would have to be protections against legal repercussions for reporting" for a new system to be put in place, he said.

The study was conducted with a mail survey of 1,000 Colorado physicians and 1,000 other physicians across the United States, as well as a telephone survey of 500 Colorado households.

Good and bad news

The good news is, it appears that Alfred E. Neuman is a real person who is alive and well. The bad news is, it appears that he is the Republican candidate for Senate in Iowa.

Here is someone, who has:
 • Invited a former employee of his opponent to a "Top Secret Strategy" session.
 • When that former employee let people know about the meeting he was invited to, the Republican candidate tried to make a federal case of it.

• After he was laughed out of every law-enforcement office, from the city to the federal level, the candidate announced he was going to file a civil suit against his opponent (it seems the people suing fast-food places for fat people had some free time). Of course, this is the same person who has been using his position as a congressman to protect doctors and HMOs from being sued (if a quack takes out your liver, instead of your appendix, that's the breaks, but if my idiot staff invites the wrong people to a meeting, get me my lawyer).

• Then he had a commercial, meant to deflect criticism of his attempts to have Social Security privatized; in the commercial, he states, "My mother and father depend on Social Security." Yeah. He's making more than $100,000 per year as a congressman (a pay cut from his plastic-surgery practice), and we're supposed to believe mom and pop are an Enron away from Meow Mix?

• Now, he's trying to use the deaths of 11 human beings whose sole crime was trying to find a better life for political gain. Seriously, get a copy of Mad magazine and then imagine Ganske without his glasses. What, me worry?

Ending an epidemic

I have been reading the last few weeks about the Domestic Violence Intervention Project being singled out to lose all government funds. This is shocking to me and shows some very upsetting truths about the state Legislature. That a majority agreed that domestic-violence shelters should lose all funding shows several disturbing facts. A majority of our elected officials agree that it is all right for women (and men) to be beaten, abused, and assaulted, and given nowhere to go that is safe. It means that the health, well-being, and sometimes the very lives of their constituents does not matter to them. And it means that an organization that is geared primarily towards the needs of women is given lower priority, no matter how vital a service that organization provides.

Domestic violence is a crime that affects everyone. I have read statistics that say that anywhere between one in seven and one in two women will fall victim to battering sometime in her life. I have also read statistics that say women who try to leave an abusive situation but have to return because they have nowhere to go have a 75 percent chance of being murdered by their abuser and a 100 percent chance of the abuse becoming worse.

As a resident of Iowa, I feel that battered women in our community need somewhere to go, rather than back to their abuser. I feel that women should be free from harm. Our legislators need to know that we, as Iowans, will not accept violence in our community, either on the streets or in the home. I encourage you to write your legislators and inform them, especially because we are so close to elections. I would also be interested to hear from others in the community who want to end the epidemic of abuse.

Where do you sit?

Next time you go to Kinnick Stadium, take a look around the crowd of 70,000 people. Are you one of the 500 wealthiest people in the stadium? If so, then by all means, enjoy your press-box seat and vote Republican.

If you are like me and the rest of the 69,500 in the crowd, you do not benefit from Republican politics. There is class warfare going on in this country, and it is being waged by the wealthiest people in this country on all the rest of us. Face it, corporate CEOs earning millions of dollars do not give a damn about you and me.

They want one thing, and that is to get themselves richer. These are people who are setting the Republican agenda.

Think about the thousands of local folks who cannot afford a $28 football ticket. Think of all the low-income people in this country. We are all in this together. We all want the same things: good jobs, health insurance, and good schools for our children. A vote for the Democratic Party is a vote for this kind of world.

I am proud to be a Democrat. I am proud to support the party that stands for the working women and men of this country. I urge all of you to vote for Sen. Tom Harkin, Gov. Tom Vilsack, Dr. Julie Thomas, and all the other Democratic champions of working women and men.

Press box or bleachers? You make the call. Go Hawks, and Go Dems!

Timing and execution of decision on ending OWI program raises questions

It is no question that jail overcrowding is a major problem in Johnson County. In fiscal year 2002, the county spent $300,000 transporting prisoners back and forth from the Linn County Correctional Facility in Cedar Rapids. In 2003, the projected cost is $500,000. Obviously, something must be done.

Many Johnson County officials support the obvious solution: building a new jail. Such a facility has a projected cost of $22 million, but it would definitely solve the problem. A recent decision by the Sheriff's Office casts doubt on whether officials are truly willing to consider any alternatives to this option.

Without warning or a clear explanation, Sheriff Robert Carpenter drastically altered an alternative to jail for OWI violators. Now, the program is only open to violators with a blood-alcohol content of 0.15 or less.

The program in question is a popular alternative in which participants spend a weekend at a Coralville hotel for a 48-hour educational program, instead of the mandatory two days in jail.

The program was recently relocated to the Heartland Inn in Coralville, which is in the vicinity of many bars and gas stations. Carpenter argues that it would be tougher to keep track of the program's participants in the new location, and the department does not want a repeat of an incident in which several people smuggled alcohol into the program for a party this summer.

Just as talk about possibly building a new jail heats up, one of the leading proponents cancels a popular alternative to jail time for OWI offenders. Politics seem to be at play.

While we would like to think Carpenter's head is in the right place, the timing and execution of the decision definitely calls his motives into question.

After voters defeated the 2000 jail initiative, officials were forced to either accept the defeat and pursue alternatives or find another way to make a new jail look like a more attractive option. The recent move by Carpenter seems like an attempt at the latter. By timing the program cutback to coincide with a study on the feasibility of alternative programs versus a new jail, the alternatives are made to look ineffectual and inadequate, thereby strengthening the argument for a new jail. In addition, all the people denied access to the OWI program are thrown in jail, perhaps inflating the overcrowding statistics.

Unfortunately, it seems as though Carpenter is willing to sacrifice the rights of these people in order to make his point. Even though some have entered plea agreements with the county in return for admission to the alternative program, they are now being denied access. The county entered these agreements in good faith and now is attempting to back out.

Without a better explanation, Carpenter's move sends a clear message to the people of Johnson County: We want our new jail and will do whatever it takes to get it.

Of journeying off the well-worn path

Imagine someone walked across the grass. Imagine miles of concrete stretched out in curving, even paths. Then imagine the grass. No pre-made passages, no set directions, no cracks to skip. No concrete. Only grass — between your toes, under your shoes. Someone said, "Don't walk there." That's what sidewalks are for. But imagine someone walked across the grass.

Imagine a voice crying out: a message of dissent. Imagine many voices, for we do not all speak with the same one. Some will tell you that we do. Some will tell the entire world that we do. We do not. There are voices among us — voices of dissent. And there are many of them. In fact, if you look around — go ahead — those voices may be the majority.

But someone (perhaps the leader) said, "Don't speak out." We are united, the united states, one nation under God, with liberty and justice for all. We speak with one voice.

But America is a melting pot. Even in a literal sense, we do not all speak with one voice, one language. We are Muslim, Christian, and atheist. We are black, white, and shades of in-between. We are rich and poor, intellectual and lay. But one thing is certain: We do not speak with one voice.

We are allowed a voice of dissent, a freedom of speech. The Constitution guarantees it, and no president riding the coattails of terrorism into the next election can take it away. Imagine someone walked across the grass.

Imagine a woman, scared and silent. She has been raped. She has been violated by someone she knew, someone she trusted. And now, she is afraid. Afraid no one will believe her. Afraid they will say, "How could such a nice young man do such an awful thing?" No, there's no way. He wouldn't have. Couldn't have. No.

But that's what she said. She said, "No." Screamed it, in fact. But he didn't listen.

AMANDA MITTLESTADT

He said, "With that shirt you were wearing — you were begging for it." Or, "We've done it before. You can't say no." Or, "Your eyes have been saying yes all night." Or something else. But he didn't listen.

Now imagine that same young woman, angry and empowered. Imagine her taking ownership of her body. Yes, it happened. But no, it wasn't OK. And imagine her speaking out, identifying her rapist, testifying against him. Humiliating him like he humiliated her that night. She said no then, and she will say no again. No, it wasn't all right. No, he cannot force himself on women — even on women he knows. He must learn what no means. No, it wasn't OK.

Imagine that one woman's courage stiffens the spines of others. Change happens. Change can happen. Courage is contagious. Imagine someone walked across the grass. Imagine that a father who forbade his child to watch violent TV shows didn't beat that same child when he disobeyed.

Imagine making the world a more beautiful place by one small contribution. Imagine taking action instead of complaining about others' inaction.

Imagine lending a hand where others walk on by — to an old, homeless man or a small, lost child. Imagine a smile on someone's face — and imagine you put it there.

Imagine a day in which you say, "I am going to be happy." And your happiness depends on no one but yourself.

Imagine love instead of hate. Imagine acceptance instead of judgment.

Imagine wandering off the well-worn path. Imagine the grass. No pre-made passages, no set directions, no cracks to skip.

No concrete. Only grass — between your toes, under your shoes. Someone said, "Don't walk there." That's what sidewalks are for. But imagine someone walked across the grass.

When the horror flick becomes the horror show

FILM REVIEW

by David Fulco

The Ring

When:
1:15, 4:15, 7, and 9:40 p.m.
Where:
Coral Ridge 10
★ 1/2 out of ★★★★★

The very best horror films have the uncanny ability to seep into our subconscious and fester into our worst fears. Above all other genres of film, the horror movie finds ways of pulling its audience into the picture so that viewers actually begin to live in the fears of the protagonists long after the lights have come up.

It is because of this reason that people peep out of their shower curtains after watching Psycho, stay out of the ocean after viewing Jaws, and look out for escaped psychopaths on the 31st of every October after watching Halloween.

But while some horror movies succeed admirably in bringing to life the nightmares and terrors lodged deep in the human heart, others are mere nightmares themselves. For every one successful horror movie that blends terror and chills, there are at least five that fail to even bring goose bumps to the skin. Dream-Works' new picture, The Ring, is one of these horror films that fails; in its wake, it leaves the remnants of one of the most well-intentioned but poorly executed horror films in recent memory.

Rachel Keller (Naomi Watts) is a take-charge, no-nonsense newspaper reporter whose niece has died in a bizarre "accident." When doctors are unable to discover the cause of death, Keller takes over the case and promises to find out who or what is responsible.

She soon finds a videotape that her niece and friends were watching, an eerie black-and-white montage that reminds one of a Nine Inch Nails music video. Once the videotape is seen, a phone call tells the viewer that he or she has only seven days to live. Keller, who obviously watches the tape in full (can a female protagonist in any scary movie not resist doing what she is not supposed to?), enlists the help of her ex-husband, video guru Noah (Martin Henderson) to discover the secret of the video. But when Keller's telekinetic son, Aidan (David Dorfman), inadvertently watches the tape, the stakes become higher, and Keller finds that she is dealing with a phantom whose thirst for death is unquenchable.

Director Gore Verbinski (The Mexican) does what he can to add shivers of fear through his audience. Rachel is filmed walking up creepy staircases, meeting strange psychotic men, and getting accosted by a horse — all of which could be scary in their own right. But what Verbinski seems to have missed in his direction is that regardless of how scary the setting might be, if the story is not credible or cannot easily be understood by the audience, it will fail to be frightening. The story is so garbled and senseless that there aren't enough dark shadowy alleys with knife-wielding madmen in the world that could save this tale.

The Ring marks Watts' first film since her Academy Award-nominated turn as Betty in David Lynch's haunting 2001 film Mulholland Drive. But where Mulholland Drive gave Watts the ability to showcase her acting talents by playing a character whose range ran the gambit of the emotional spectrum, The Ring hardly asks Watts to do much more than look scared.

Her character, whose intelligence and independence are supposed to be seen by the audience as commendable, continuously is put into the same run-of-the-mill horror predicaments that date back well before Jamie Lee Curtis first took on baby-sitting roles. Watts can't seem to make up her mind how to properly play this character, and because there is no background information or juicy tidbits to be learned about Rachel, Watts is destined to fail at bringing this character to life.

The Ring is based on the hugely popular Japanese film Ringu, directed by Hideo Nakata. Ringu, whose American release was held up in order to make way for The Ring, also influenced the atrociously bad feardotcom, which came out earlier this year. Neither film can properly capture the magic that Ringu brought to its Japanese audiences, and the American translation is hollow and trite.

The Ring is worthless as both a movie and a horror film and should quickly find its way out of the theaters and into a video store near you. The movie claims that images on videotapes have the ability to kill. Well, after watching this film, one might just have to agree.

Idolatry set for smashing return

BY MIKE HOUSEHOLDER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — No need to worry. All of the ingredients that made "American Idol" this summer's television sensation appear to be in place for next year's second installment.

Acid-tongued British record producer Simon Cowell is back as a judge, as are singer-dancer Paula Abdul and industry veteran Randy Jackson. Los Angeles-based radio disc jockey Ryan Seacrest will return as host.

However, a few tweaks became known Oct. 25 as the three judges and Seacrest took time out from judging talent in Detroit. Auditions started Oct. 21. Detroit was the first of seven cities in which auditions are being held.

Original co-host Brian Dunkleman won't be back, Seacrest said. And the show's producers have added a fourth judge, rapper and radio personality Angie Martinez.

Cowell didn't appear to have missed a step from the first season.

When Abdul said, "I fear Simon is rubbing off on me," Cowell cocked his head to the side, stared at her and asked, "You're becoming intelligent?"

Cowell also didn't mince words when asked about the auditions he'd seen in Detroit.

"Some of the stuff I heard out there simply can't be described as singing. I mean it was terrible," he said. "It never ceases to amaze me. It's like they're deaf, because what I'm hearing is something very different from what they're hearing."

Jackson also wasn't very kind about Detroit's offerings.

"We're really just trying to see if there's any 'Mo' left in this town," he said.

Sweetness out; Smith claims record

IRVING, Texas — Emmitt Smith cut left, saw a hole and plunged ahead. When an arm smacked his legs, and sent him stumbling, Smith put down his right hand to keep his balance and rumbled for an 11-yard gain.

And the NFL career rushing record.

With that fourth-quarter run Sunday, the Dallas Cowboys running back reached 16,728 yards, passing the late Walter Payton to become No. 1 on the all-time list and accomplishing a goal he set for himself before his rookie season.

Although Smith ended the drive with a game-tying 1-yard touchdown run, he stood grim-faced minutes later when Seattle's Rian Lindell kicked a 20-yard field goal with 25 seconds left to give the Seahawks a 17-14 victory.

While the loss put a damper on the day, it couldn't overshadow what Smith had done — on Sunday and during his prolific career.

Smith finished with 109 yards on 24 carries, both season highs. He had six runs of at least 10 yards — with a long of 14 — and extended his NFL record for rushing touchdowns to 150.

Midway through his 13th season, Smith has 16,743 career yards. Payton finished his 13-year career in 1987 with 16,726. Smith broke Payton's record for career carries earlier this season and topped his yardage totals in his 193rd game.

Win has some Hawkeyes smelling roses; Iowa ranks No. 9 in AP

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — The only smell inside Iowa's locker room was an eclectic mix of musty equipment and assorted colognes, but wide receiver C. J. Jones conceptualized a sweeter, much more pleasant odor.

"I'm smelling the roses," he said.

Jones may have been quick to intimate a trip to the Rose Bowl and Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz may not have appreciated the reference, but Jones and his teammates said more about a possible trip to Pasadena in January on the field than they could have in any interview. Iowa's 34-9 romp over No. 8 Michigan on Oct. 26 inside the hallowed walls of Michigan Stadium had the look of a Big Ten championship-caliber performance.

"If you're in the Big Ten Conference, it sure helps to beat Michigan," said Ferentz after the Hawkeyes improved to 8-1 overall and 5-0 in Big Ten play. The Hawkeyes didn't just beat the Wolverines — they humiliated them by handing them their worst home loss since 1967, a performance worthy of Iowa's jump to No. 9 in this week's edition of the AP poll.

Iowa's new ranking is its highest since the week of Dec. 1, 1991, when the Hawkeyes were No. 7 in the nation.

A victory over Michigan certainly isn't a guarantee of a berth in the Rose Bowl, but if history is any indication for the Hawkeyes, it goes a long way. Iowa's last three visits to Pasadena — in 1990, 1985, and 1981 — all came during seasons in which the Hawkeyes defeated the Wolverines.

"[Beating Michigan] gives you a better chance to get there because they're typically in the race and they always have something to say about it, but there's so much football ahead for our team," Ferentz said. "We're not a talented enough team to even think about things like that."

Ohio State also keeps Iowa's bowl picture from becoming too rosy at the moment. The Buckeyes are the only other Big Ten

Movie star ending for Angels

BY BEN WALKER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANAHEIM, Calif. — This is definitely movie material — and the stars are the never-say-die Anaheim Angels.

They came out of nowhere to reach their first World Series, rallying past every team in their way.

Their rookie pitcher wins Game 7.

And the best hitter in the world watches from the losers' dugout, knowing he was once just six outs away from winning the only title he has ever wanted.

John Lackey, Garret Anderson, and the Angels made it all come true, beating Barry Bonds and the San Francisco Giants, 4-1, Sunday night for the franchise's first championship in 42 years.

Plus the most amazing thing — the Angels didn't even need to rely on their Rally Monkey. Anaheim third baseman Troy Glaus was voted MVP after hitting .385 with three home runs and eight RBIs.

"I can't believe it, man," Anderson said. "It's been a long year — a testament to the guys who never gave up."

Still, the highest-scoring Series in history came down to pitching, as it always seems to do in October. Behind Lackey and the bullpen, Anaheim had too much to win baseball's first all-wild-card matchup.

The Angels became the eighth-straight home team to win Game 7 of the World Series. History was on their side from the start and so was an ominous skywriting plane put a gigantic halo over Edison Field before the first pitch.

A day after they blew a 5-0 lead in the seventh inning, the Giants never got close to winning their first title. Bonds went 1-3 with a walk to close out one of the most dominant Series performances ever, yet it wasn't enough.

When it ended, Bonds walked down the dugout and picked up his glove. He walked back, tapped his son on the back and walked down the runway as the Angels celebrated on the field.

Lackey wasn't even with the Angels, stuck in Triple-A, when they went 6-14 for the worst start in team history. But with both staffs worn down, the 24-year-old righty gave Anaheim exactly what it needed with five innings of one-run ball.

Anderson, finally due to get the recognition he's always deserved, hit a three-run double off Livan Hernandez in the third for a 4-1 lead. The monkey mascot made a brief, early appearance on the video board to celebrate the moment, then sat back and let the sellout crowd of 44,598 bang their ThunderStix like crazy.

"Well, I just wanted to get into a situation where I'd be able to hit my pitch, not do too much," Anderson said.

Brendan Donnelly, Francisco Rodriguez, and Troy Percival closed it for manager Mike Scioscia's bunch. Percival escaped a two-on, one-out jam for his third save of the Series.

Inclement weather doesn't deter dominant rowing team

BY JEROD LEUPOLD
THE DAILY IOWAN

Drizzle and freezing rain couldn't deter the determined Hawkeye rowing team in its last fall competition. On Sunday, Iowa competed against Minnesota, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Kansas, and Drake at the Head of Iowa.

"This is pretty good weather," coach Mandi Kowal said. "The water is flat, good for racing. I feel sorry for the people who didn't dress for it and have to stand around."

Despite the 43-degree chill, Iowa pulled hard for high places.

In the women's open 2+ the Hawkeyes swept the top three spots with boats A, B, and C. They continued to dominate in the open 8+, placing Nos. 1 and 4.

The only stumbling block came in the open 4+. Iowa grabbed fourth with boat A and seventh in the B boat.

"We did really well [in the open 4+]," Kowal said. "Our second eight was competing versus a Minnesota and Kansas first eight."

Each team is divided into groups of eight. A squad's best rowers are Nos. 1 through 8, the next best are

Nos. 9 through 16 and so on.

Even Iowa's second eight performed at a high level.

"We stepped up for this meet," senior Julia Kirkham said. "There are a lot of seniors on the team. We won't race in Iowa again."

Some teams rocked the boat in the smooth waters. Minnesota boat B, which had the fastest time in the women's open 4+, was disqualified. In the same race, Wisconsin failed to yield and dropped to No. 28.

"It's rare that you don't get any violations," Elisabeth Farwell, second bridge referee said.

"They are truly accidents, sudden gusts of wind and strong currents can affect a boat."

It was no accident Iowa captured such good times.

"We feed off each other with our desire for nationals," sophomore Dorian Pielh said. "We have very good chemistry. The hard work is easier."

Unfortunately, that intensity must wait another four months until the conference season begins in the spring.

"Nobody likes training in the off-months," Kirkham said.

Field hockey loses OT heartbreaker

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
THE DAILY IOWAN

After a 3-1 victory on the road over Indiana on Oct. 25, the Iowa field-hockey team suffered a tough 1-0 loss in its home turf to Ohio State in double overtime.

Emotions ran high after the game, especially for the senior class. In addition to the loss, the game was the Hawkeyes' last regular season matchup at Grant Field this season.

"This was very emotional," junior Jess Zosky said following the game. "That we lost in double overtime is just really upsetting right now."

Although Iowa lacked in scoring, it did not lack in scoring opportunities. The Hawkeyes took 21 shots on goal in the game, along with 12 penalty corners.

"We had a lot of chances. We just didn't capitalize," Zosky said. "There were a lot of times the ball went across an open goal."

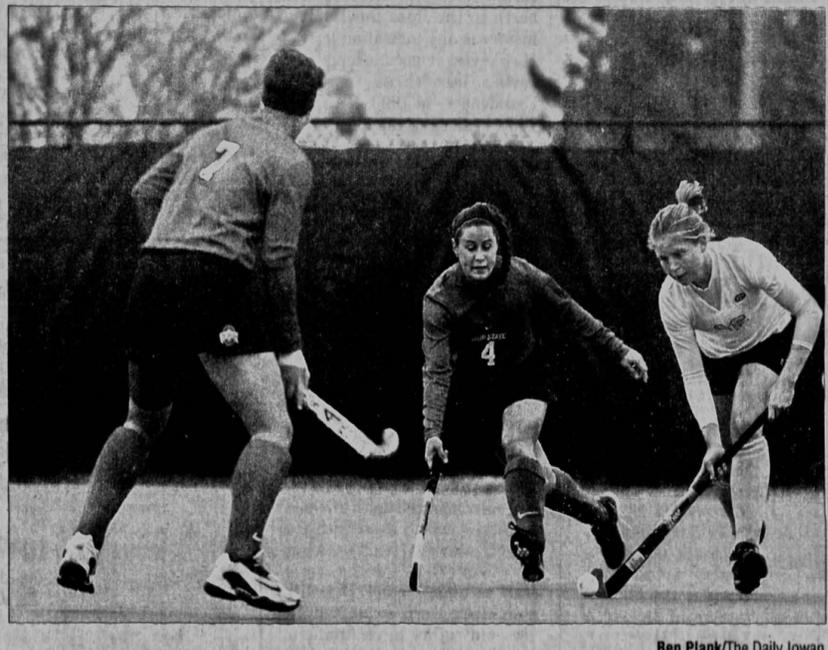

Ohio State had trouble capitalizing as well. It wasn't until more than 91 minutes into the game that Mariana Solozzano knocked in the game-winning goal off of a penalty corner in the second sudden-death overtime period.

The Buckeyes took 13 shots on goal and also had 12 penalty-corner opportunities.

Iowa goalkeeper Barb Weinbeg made six saves in the game; opposing goalie Lara Koole had nine.

Starting defenders Lauren Stiver and Shelby Roche sat out the last two games for Iowa because of leg injuries, causing some changes in the Hawkeyes' lineup.

"We have people that have practiced and trained to step into those roles," Iowa coach Tracey Griesbaum said. "There's no reason that we couldn't have won the game today."

Iowa's Lauren Stiver weaves her way through two Ohio State defenders during the Hawkeyes' final home game of the year on Sunday afternoon.

The Hawkeyes defense has proven to be solid this season, giving up one goal or less in 10 of its 15 games. Although Iowa held Ohio State to one score, it was only the second time this season that the Hawkeyes suffered a shutout.

"We definitely did make changes even from Friday's game against Indiana," Griesbaum said. "But to not reap the benefits from it is disappointing."

The loss drops Iowa, previously ranked No. 11 in the National Field Hockey Coaches Association poll, to a 9-6 overall record (2-3 in the Big Ten).

"It hurts us bad," Griesbaum said. "A win here would have put us in a situation heading into Penn State that we could have been in third place pretty much by ourselves."

Prior to the loss, Iowa handily defeated Indiana, 3-1, on Oct. 25, outshooting the Hoosiers, 17-6.

Pattie Gillern made assists on two goals scored by Sarah Dawson — her fourth of the season — and Adria LaSavage. Iowa's final goal came from Lindsay Miller off of a Tammy Leister assist.

With under five minutes to play, the Hoosiers' Jaime O'Pray knocked in her team's lone goal.

The Hawkeyes take on Penn State in the final game of the season on Nov. 3.

Michigan has already clinched the Big Ten regular season, and Michigan State is close behind on the charts. Penn State is the only other team ahead of Iowa, so a win over the Nittany Lions would be very important going into the Big Ten Tournament.

NBA BRIEF

Miller to miss first two weeks of season

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana Pacers guard Reggie Miller will miss at least the first two weeks of the regular season as he continues to recover from a deep bone bruise to his right ankle.

Team President Donnie Walsh won't speculate about the time the 16-year veteran could miss until speaking with Miller, which he said he will do by today.

The Pacers will open the season Wednesday at Conseco Fieldhouse against the Houston Rockets.

Miller didn't play in the preseason, which concluded with a 111-76 loss to the Minnesota Timberwolves on Oct. 25. He sprained his ankle Aug. 25 in an exhibition game with the U.S. team for the World Basketball Championship.

BIG TEN MEDIA DAY

Ryan, Monson stand by Alford through adversity

TODD BROMMELKAMP
Asst. Sports Editor

"Steve's a leader," said Ryan, who in his first season with the Badgers a year ago used only an eight-man rotation because of the small roster he inherited. "He'll get his guys to play well, and they'll accept the challenge and compete at a very high level."

Maybe even at the level the Badgers did a year ago, overcoming the odds to finish 11-5 in the conference and grab a share of the league's regular season title.

Ryan, who coached against Alford when both headed up Division III programs, was this year's media darling at the O'Hare Marriott — a far cry from last season, when he was just the new guy looking around and hoping he fit in. Alford has never enjoyed such anonymity, and this year was no different. As soon as one reporter would leave his table, another would take his place and invariably ask the same questions about Iowa's troubles.

At one point Alford recounted the many times he looked in the mirror over the course of the last year and said such phrases as

"why me," "it's so unfair," and "this shouldn't be happening to me." It was during such moments when help was only a phone call away.

Monson's voice was one Alford found waiting on the other line. The pair has had a mutual respect for one another since they met several years back in Alaska while Alford was at Southwest Missouri State and Monson was coaching with Gonzaga. It's not strictly a professional relationship, their wives have become friends as well — but the two often talk business — and the trouble trade is something Monson learned to deal with well in Minneapolis.

The two entered the Big Ten in 1999 and while his Iowa counterpart was busy putting in place the foundation he hoped would build to a championship, Monson was busy just shoring things up with the Gophers. Minnesota's new coach had no time for self pity when staring NCAA sanctions in the face over academic misconduct allegations left waiting for him by his predecessor Clem Haskins. Through trials and tribulations and plenty of tough moments, the Gophers are now on sure footing heading in to the 2002 season.

"It means a lot when they'll call you and see how you're doing," Monson said of his league counterparts. "We have a certain amount of empathy for each other because you know how tough these things are."

Monson and Alford sat at neighboring tables Sunday, and as Minnesota's coach got up to leave the room he looked over at Alford holding court with several writers. He lightheartedly asked if any of us had more Steve Alford questions.

"Same number of problems, just different problems," Alford jokingly explained of the inquiries about him.

Yes, but at least he knows help is only a different set of numbers away.

CHICAGO — Wisconsin coach Bo Ryan knows a thing or two about rebuilding a program and exceeding expectations.

Minnesota's Dan Monson takes that one step further. Not only has Monson experienced the rebuilding process firsthand, he did it in the face of adversity in the form of an NCAA investigation.

No small wonder then that Ryan and Monson are two of Iowa coach Steve Alford's closest companions among the Big Ten coaching ranks. They don't exactly plan island holidays together for their families or spend the weekend at one another's houses watching football and drinking cold ones, but what they do is talk. And talking to an understanding colleague is something Alford has felt the need for since his program seemingly imploded midway through last season.

"I think that's the neatest thing about this league as a coach," Alford said during the Big Ten's annual preseason media gathering Sunday. "All of us end up hurting at some point in our careers."

And make no mistake about it, the string of transfers, allegations, academic problems, and legal troubles the Hawkeyes have suffered since January have Alford smarting. Iowa has just nine scholarship players this season, including Pierre Pierce, who remains suspended pending the outcome of his high-profile sexual assault trial.

BY ROSEANNA SMITH THE DAILY IOWAN

CHICAGO — There will be no grace period for Minnesota.

The Gophers were tabbed third in the Big Ten preseason women's basketball poll by both coaches and media Sunday even after the best season in school history was marred by coach Brenda Oldfield's decision to leave the team for a more lucrative position at Maryland.

"We were all heartbroken and upset," said forward Janel McCarville, who was tabbed 2002 Freshman of the Year. "I'm sure everyone is still upset deep down. She was a great coach, but the feelings are starting to fade. It's going on six months now, and we want to forget about it and move on."

And though the Minnesota team turned a 2000-01 season of 1-15 into a 22-8 finish last year, the Gophers return every starter from last year's squad, including McCarville and Big Ten Player of the Year and All-American Lindsay Whalen.

Whalen led the Gophers from the start of her career at Minnesota, and averaged 24 points and seven assists last year against nationally-ranked opponents. Whalen set school records as the fastest player to reach 1,000 career points last year as well.

But new coach Pam Borton, who helped Boston College to three NCAA Tournament berths in five years as a recruiting coordinator and assistant, said there would be no excuses about transition years.

"The same players are here," Borton said. "I don't think we want to take a half-step backward. I think we want to keep pushing forward."

"The only way they've gotten through the last two years is each other. They're a solid-rock family — nothing fazes them anymore. They're very strong mentally and they've built a hard shell. Nothing is going to come between us and winning."

Penn State, the No. 1 preseason favorite, has the same mentality but is in a different situation. The Nittany Lions return eight letterwinners from their 2001-02 campaign which included a 23-12 record, Big Ten runner-up accolades, and a regional semifinal berth in the NCAA Tournament where Penn State lost to eventual champion UConn.

The Lions' strength, however, lies mostly in the success of Kelly Mazzante, who was chosen as Preseason Player of the Year. She shared the honors last year with Wisconsin's Jessie Stomski, and was named 2001 Freshman of the Year. Last year, Mazzante broke 31 conference, school and facility records, and led the NCAA with an average of 24.9 points per game.

Teammate Jessica Brungo, who has a lethal 3-point range as a forward, said Mazzante neither the high preseason rank or her teammates' accolades would change the reality of what could happen.

"Preseason polls don't mean anything unless you prove them right. Having the same team back will really help a lot. [Kelly's award] is special, but at the same time, she's going to be the same player she's always been."

"It can only help with motivation."

In the No. 2 conference position, Purdue doesn't need much motivation.

Purdue won its second outright Big Ten title in a row in 2001-02 and went 24-6 overall. A new freshman class will be balanced by the experience in Shereka Wright, Mary Jo Noon, and Erika Valek.

And though the Boilermakers lost 2002 Big Ten Defensive Player of the Year in starter Kelly Komara, Purdue returns with what coach Kristy Curry regards as most important — hope.

"We knew at one point in time, we wouldn't have a lot of old [players] and we'd have to go through some growing times. This year we'll be able to see."

Ferentz says Hawkeyes have many obstacles to face before a bowl team besides Iowa which remains undefeated in conference play; Ohio State also went unblemished during its non-conference schedule. If both teams run the table and Ohio State doesn't finish in the top two spots of the Bowl Championship Series rankings, the Buckeyes would likely claim the coveted berth.

The Buckeyes play No. 23 Minnesota this week while the Hawkeyes host rival Wisconsin in Kinnick Stadium.

"We have more challenges in front of us," Ferentz said. "But we played a good football game today."

Iowa held the Wolverines to just 171 total yards of offensive output in front of 111,496 people in Ann Arbor, including representatives from the Fiesta Bowl, which will serve as this season's national championship game, the Capital One Bowl (formerly the Citrus Bowl) which has the second choice of Big Ten bowl-eligible teams, and the Rose Bowl.

"Nobody gave us anything coming in to this game," said defensive tackle Colin Cole, who recorded four stops including three for a loss in the victory.

While Iowa may not have gotten much respect prior to the game, Cole and his teammates can rest assure they will get plenty of attention from their remaining three opponents, all of whom would love to derail Iowa's Rose Bowl hopes.

That includes Wisconsin, who despite a slow start in the conference, will be up for its heated rivals this weekend.

"Right now we're smelling Badgers," Cole said.

Cole's level-headed approach exemplifies what Ferentz would like the Hawkeyes' mentality to be during the waning weeks of Big Ten play, but perhaps his olfactory nerves were damaged against the Wolverines.

"Right now it's smelling real good and it's looking real good," Jones said. "I just hope we get [to the Rose Bowl]."

Big Ten dreams may come true

BY KATIE LOW
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa women's soccer team is back in the Big Ten Tournament hunt after a 2-0 shutout win against Illinois on Oct. 25 and also defeated nonconference opponent Baylor, 1-0 over the weekend.

The Hawkeyes will know for sure if they will go to the tournament after Illinois and No. 13 Purdue play on Nov. 3. Illinois and Purdue's earlier conference matchup was rescheduled for Nov. 3 after it was called off because of inclement weather. If Purdue wins or ties, Iowa will receive a bid to the conference tournament.

The Hawkeyes are counting on a win from the nationally ranked Boilermakers to secure them a bid.

"In my opinion, we're already going to the conference tournament," coach Carla Baker said.

According to forward Sarah Lynch, the impending doom of being eliminated from the tournament was admittedly a factor in the team's effort against Illinois.

"We knew we had to win so it was an added incentive," Lynch said. "We played our game and we played to win."

The Hawkeyes dominated the Fighting Illini for the entire 90 minutes of play. Illinois (6-10-0 overall, 3-6-0 conference) took 22 shots on goal but was still not able to finish an opportunity and score. Iowa goalie Britta Vogeles grabbed 13 saves in the shutout.

"Britta has to play well in order for us to be successful," Baker said. "If Britta doesn't come up big, we don't have a chance to win. She did a good job and so did our defensive four."

Lynch scored first, on a pass from sophomore Katie Clymer. Lynch's shot deflected off the Illinois goalie's hand and into the net, giving Iowa the lead.

Redshirt freshman Katelyn Quinn added an insurance goal on an assist from freshman Jill Pardini at the 40:51 mark in the first half. The goal was Quinn's ninth of the year.

Holmes, Chiefs hand Raiders third consecutive loss

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Priest Holmes totaled 184 yards running and receiving, and the NFL's lowest-rated defense held the league's highest-rated offense to one touchdown as the Chiefs beat Oakland, 20-10.

Kansas City (4-4) had lost five straight to the Raiders (4-3), who have lost three in a row. Mike Maslowski forced Jerry Rice to fumble and recovered the ball on the Oakland 22 with 4:39 left, setting up Trent Green's 4-yard touchdown pass to Tony Richardson with 1:55 to go.

Oakland's Rich Gannon was 35-55 for 334 yards and joined Steve Young and Kurt Warner as the only players in NFL history to pass for more than 300 yards in six-straight games.

Atlanta 37, New Orleans 35

NEW ORLEANS — Jay Feely kicked a 47-yard field goal as time expired, giving Atlanta the victory in a game either team could have won.

The Saints (6-2) kicked a field goal with 3:33 remaining to cut Atlanta's lead to 34-28. On the Falcons' next drive, Warrick Dunn fumbled for the second time in the game, and New Orleans took possession at the Atlanta 28.

Deuce McAllister ran 16 yards for a score to put the Saints up 35-34 with 2:20 left.

That was enough time for Michael Vick, who drove Atlanta into Feely's range.

Vick completed 16 of 24 passes for 195 yards. He rushed for 91 yards, including a 32-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Tampa Bay 12, Carolina 9

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Martin Gramatica kicked three of his four field goals in the fourth quarter — including a 47-yarder with 5 seconds to play — helping Tampa Bay win the battle between two of the NFL's best defenses.

Gramatica also made field goals of 52 and 53 yards in the fourth quarter, the second one with 1:55 to play to tie the game at 9.

Buffalo 24, Detroit 17

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — The Buffalo Bills allowed Detroit to drive to their 20 before linebacker London Fletcher tackled James Stewart behind the line of scrimmage on fourth-and-inches with 1:52 left.

The Lions (2-5) let Buffalo run off 17-straight points, but they got into position for the tie by recovering Travis Henry's fumble at the Buffalo 29.

Bledsoe finished 21-36 for 302 yards and a touchdown.

Joey Harrington, who last week rallied the team to a 23-20 overtime win against Chicago, went 20-42 for 199 yards.

Cleveland 24, New York Jets 21

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Four days after the death of team owner Al Lerner, the Browns rallied from an 18-point deficit. Phil Dawson completed the comeback by kicking a 35-yard field goal with 3:30 left.

The score capped another long second-half drive directed by Tim Couch, who finished 33-for-49 for 307 yards.

New York (2-5) was outgained 93 yards to 2 in the third quarter. Chad Pennington was 19-of-26 for 183 yards, two TDs and an interception.

Minnesota 25, Chicago 7

MINNEAPOLIS — Playing patient offense and surprisingly tough defense, the Vikings handed the Bears their fifth-straight loss.

Daunte Culpepper was 22-29 for 216 yards passing, a touchdown, and no interceptions.

Randy Moss had nine receptions for 119 yards, and Michael Bennett ran 29 times for 106 yards to lead the Vikings (2-5).

Pittsburgh 31, Baltimore 18

BALTIMORE — Tommy Maddox completed his first 11 passes, and the Steelers scored touchdowns on their first four possessions to beat the Ravens.

Maddox left with a sprained left ankle midway through the third quarter but returned with 11 minutes remaining and finished 18-24 for 172 yards and two TDs. He is 3-1 as a starter since replacing Kordell Stewart.

Amos Zereoue, filling in for the injured Jerome Bettis, ran for two scores for the Steelers (4-3), who have won four of five after an 0-2 start.

1:08 to play, preserving the Titans' victory over the Cincinnati Bengals.

After getting to the 1, Cincinnati (0-7) decided to run to the right with Dillon, who took the handoff and tripped over pulling guard Matt O'Dwyer. Three Titans dove on Dillon as he lunged for the goal line.

The officials ruled that his knee hit at the 1, a call that was upheld upon review.

That prompted fans to throw cups and several plastic beer bottles on the field. Security officials escorted the officials off.

Blue Jackets lay down the hurt on Los Angeles Kings

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Tyler Wright scored two of his three goals in the third period Sunday, leading the Columbus Blue Jackets to a 5-1 victory over the Los Angeles Kings.

Wright completed his hat trick with 28.1 seconds left. They were his first goals of the season.

Geoff Sanderson and Hannes Hyvonen each added a goal and an assist for Columbus. Adam Deadmarsh scored for the Kings with just more than 11 minutes to play.

Blue Jackets goaltender Marc Denis had 24 saves, handing the Kings their first road loss of the season.

Less than two minutes into the game, Sanderson opened the scoring with his fourth goal in four games. Andrew Cassels won the faceoff and Sanderson sent a shot from the left circle through Storr's pads.

Chicago 3, San Jose 2

CHICAGO — Sergei Berezin scored twice on first-period power plays and Jocelyn Thibault stopped 34 shots Sunday night to lead the Chicago Blackhawks to a 3-2 victory over the San Jose Sharks.

San Jose goaltender Evgeni Nabokov made 18 saves in his first game since he ended a holdout last Tuesday by signing a two-year contract.

Tyler Arnason finished with a goal and an assist, and Alex Zhamnov had two assists for the Blackhawks, who snapped a three-game winless streak. Chicago was 3-for-8 on the power play.

Mike Ricci and Vincent Damphousse scored for the Sharks, who had won their previous two games.

Berezin opened the scoring with a power-play goal 2:33 into the first period. He made it 2-0 during a power play with 7:58 left in the first.

Minnesota 3, Colorado 3, OT

DENVER — Colorado's Eric Messier had the first two-goal game of his career Sunday night, helping the Avalanche to a 3-3 tie with the Minnesota Wild.

Trailing 3-1 in the third period, Minnesota scored two goals 3:15 apart.

Pascal Dupuis beat Patrick Roy on a breakaway at 11:35. Antti Laaksonen scored on a rebound of Willie Mitchell's shot from the slot at 14:50.

Minnesota's Dwayne Roloson had 42 saves and Roy had 13.

Colorado had a 15-4 edge in shots in the first period, but Minnesota rookie Stephane Veilleux got the only goal.

Blues goalkeeper out with strained tendon

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis rookie goaltender Curtis Sanford will be out two-to-three weeks with a strained Achilles' tendon in his left foot, forcing the Blues to go with their fifth goalie in just six games.

"I've never seen anything like this at one time, in such a short period of time," Blues general manager Larry Pleau said on Oct. 25. "But I think the team's working hard. I think [the injuries] are just part of the business. You just work your way through it."

Sanford was replaced by goalie No. 5, Cody Rudkowski, midway through the second period of the Blues' 2-1 win at Edmonton on Oct. 24.

Pleau said he didn't know yet who would be in goal for the Blues' next game, Saturday night at Calgary.

The outbreak of injuries forced St. Louis to reach a tentative deal with 18-year veteran Tom Barrasso, a 37-year-old unrestricted free agent.

"I'd be surprised if he's not in practice [today]," Pleau said.

Despite the injuries, St. Louis is off to a 4-1-1 start. Five of their first six games were at home, however.

Brent Johnson went down in the preseason with a high ankle sprain that forced him to begin the season on the injured list. That moved Fred Brathwaite into the starting slot, with Reinhard Divis making the team as the backup.

Brathwaite, the regular backup, started the first two games but injured his groin, forcing Divis to start. Divis won his first game, but injured his groin in his next outing, leaving rookie Sanford as the starter and Rudkowski the backup.

Brathwaite practiced this week for the first time since his injury. But Sanford started Oct. 24 before giving way to Rudkowski, who last season split between Worcester of the AHL and Peoria of the ECHL.

Byrd wins first at Buick

BY DOUG FERGUSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — Jonathan Byrd hit his fiancée with a tee shot and then hit pay dirt Sunday at the Buick Challenge, closing with a 9-under 63 to become the 17th first-time winner on the PGA Tour this year.

Byrd made five-straight putts on the back nine at Callaway Gardens, two of them for eagle, and was within range of the tour's 72-hole scoring record in relation to par. By the end of the day, he was simply thankful to get his first victory.

David Toms put together a strong rally and had an 18-foot birdie putt on the final hole to force a playoff, but it slid over the left edge of the cup.

Blame that on Byrd, who made 27 birdies and two eagles over four rounds on the rain-softened Mountain View course. Byrd finished at 27-under 261 and earned $666,000.

"You want it so bad because you always know you can do it," said the 24-year-old Byrd, in his first year on tour. "The greatest thing in the world is to hit great shots when you need them the most."

Along with getting a two-year exemption on the PGA Tour, Byrd became the top candidate to be rookie of the year, and moved up to No. 41 on the money list.

"My goals for the year were to finish in the top 40, and I wanted to win a tournament," Byrd said. "And now I've won a tournament."

He can thank his bride-to-be for some of that. She unknowingly saved him at least one stroke on the par-5 seventh, and possibly the tournament.

Amanda Talley was standing down the right side of the fairway when Byrd had his worst swing of the day, a drive that was sailing right toward a cluster of pine trees. His only option would have been to pitch sideways back to the fairway.

Thump! The ball struck Talley behind the left shoulder, bounced on the cart path and into a favorable lie in the rough, allowing Byrd to go for the green.

Her knees buckled and she quickly sat down, then walked into the woods so Byrd wouldn't see her and lose his focus on winning the tournament.

Men's swimming falls short

BY KATIE LOW
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa men's swimming team put up a good effort against Wisconsin this weekend, but was unable to pull out a win, falling 211-140 to the Badgers.

"This was our first Big Ten dual meet, and we had tough competition in Wisconsin," coach John Davey said. "It was a good test to give us an idea of where we are."

The Hawkeyes were not able to take first in any events except for 3-meter diving where Iowa's Roberto Gutierrez, Timo Klami, and John Singer swept the top three spots.

However, Iowa placed second in 10 out of other 17 events.

Snider

Jason Snider was one of the leaders for Iowa, second in the 200-butterfly and the 100-butterfly, as well as being a member of the 200-freestyle relay and the 200- and 400-medley relays, which all placed second.

"I see us sitting pretty well after this meet," Snider said. "We swam a lot better against Wisconsin this time than we did last year, and they came out and swam very well this weekend." Although the Hawkeyes were not able to place first in any events, they were able to place second through fourth in five of the races.

Davey said this was an indication the team is actually in better shape than the loss might show.

"We're just trying to get better and swim faster each and every week," Davey said.

Snider believes the team needs to concentrate on some of the more technical aspects of swimming to help it improve for the Hawkeyes' away meet against Indiana next weekend.

"We need to work on more of the little things," he said. "We need to tune up our turns and finishes to prepare for next weekend."

Indiana will be yet another tough team to beat, as the Hoosiers claimed victories in their first two match ups. Indiana defeated Evansville 135-106, on Oct. 19, and took out Michigan State, 129-104, this weekend. They will no doubt be looking to add the Hawkeyes to their list.

Iowa's team, however, will focus on the insight it has gained from this weekend's meet in order to make adjustments for the future.

"This weekend's been a good indicator of where we in regards to meeting our goal," Davey said. "That is to be a force in the Big Ten Tournament at the end of the season."

Wisconsin almost perfect against Hawkeyes in women's swim meet

BY DREW MANROE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Despite a 225-127 loss to Wisconsin, Iowa women's swimming coach Garland O'Keefe was pleased with her team's performance.

Wisconsin swept all but two events in the meet — Iowa's first of the season — which took place on Oct. 25-26 in Iowa City.

While the Hawkeyes' times didn't compare favorably with the Badgers', O'Keefe said her team swam much better than in its opening meet of the 2001-02 season, which was also against Wisconsin.

"I was hoping to win more events," O'Keefe said. "But overall, I'm very pleased with how we swam. I knew Wisconsin was going to be strong. They're even better than last year."

"But we also swam much faster than at this time last year. So we're ahead of the game."

Wisconsin won every freestyle event and finished third in the Big Ten championships last season, and the team returned most of its key swimmers, including sophomore Carly Piper.

Piper won three events against Iowa and nearly broke her Big Ten record in the 500-freestyle.

"She is absolutely unbelievable," O'Keefe said. "To be swimming the times she's swimming... she's really awesome."

It might not show in the score, but the Hawkeyes were not short on impressive performances of their own.

Sophomore Nancilea Underwood finished first in the 1-meter diving, scoring a 259.12, while junior Michelle Bagi won the 100-butterfly with a 58.42.

Bagi said her performance was a result of the optimism and excitement reverberating throughout the team this season.

"I swam off the momentum that's carrying this team," she said. "We're all really motivated and excited this year. Unfortunately, it doesn't show up in the points, but collectively we're so much further along than last year."

O'Keefe was thrilled with Bagi's performance.

"That was huge for us," O'Keefe said. "That was a breakthrough swim for her."

Sophomore Jennifer Skolaski also had a very strong meet.

Skolaski, an NCAA automatic qualifier last year, placed in the top three in five events. She said the team's experience and the comfort of competing at home played a part in the team's improved times this year.

"We were a lot happier with how we did [this year]," she said. "Last year, we had 12 freshmen, but we brought more leadership this time, and we were excited to be at home."

The Hawkeyes will look to continue their improvement at their next meet, at Purdue on Nov. 1.

Volleyball loses star, games

BY ALI NOLLER
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa volleyball team was spiked with a hard hit on the lineup Sunday as Renee Hill sustained an injury which will likely end the Iowa junior's season halfway through the conference schedule.

Hill is the undisputed leader of a Hawkeye team that has grappled to a 2-8 conference start — including a pair of losses to Ohio State and Indiana over the weekend. She led the Hawkeyes with 20 kills on Oct. 25 before suffering a blow to the knee that Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett said is "not looking good" for the rest of the season.

The final diagnosis by the team doctor was to be determined upon the team's return to Iowa City on Sunday, but Buck-Crockett speculated from early reports that the damage was a possible torn anterior cruciate ligament.

"We have a big player out right now, so it is even more important for everyone to play their part," Buck-Crockett said.

The loss of Hill came during a tough weekend for the Hawkeyes, as they dropped two more conference matches on the road to opponents who both have suffered their fair share of Big Ten matches.

Against the Buckeyes (9-9, 4-6 Big Ten), the Hawkeyes were able to set the pace for the majority of the match, but still came away with the loss, 3-1.

In game one, with the score tied at 19, Iowa continued to hold the lead until Ohio State took a 26-25 advantage, causing a Hawkeye timeout. The game remained tight, with the score tied at 29 before Ohio State pulled away to collect the final two points and a 31-29 win.

The tight battle continued at the start of game two, with neither team taking more than a three-point advantage, until the Buckeyes took a 16-12 lead. Ohio State continued to hold the lead, before Iowa fought back to tally six of the next seven points and close the lead to 25-24.

With the score tied at 32, the Hawkeyes took the final two points for the 34-32 victory.

But the momentum would swing out of Iowa's favor.

Hill's injury came in the third game, as the Hawkeyes' leading hitter was sidelined early and never returned as the Buckeyes squeaked by for the win, 30-28.

Buck-Crockett said Ohio State was able to take advantage of the departure of Hill in the final game, as they blanked Iowa with a 30-17 win.

The loss drops the Hawkeyes to 8-12 overall.

"It's disappointing, and it's hard, to almost win," Buck-Crockett said. "But if you look at the progress we've made, it outweighs the losses. We have to keep seeing the big picture and make some adjustments — everyone needs to take their part to heart."

Statistically against Ohio State, Laura Simpson led the Hawkeyes with 16 kills, Echaka Agba collected 13, and Pam Kavadas recorded 14 digs while Abby Tjaden had seven blocks.

The Hawkeyes will continue their Big Ten road swing next weekend, as they begin the second phase of conference competition. Iowa's lone wins in the Big Ten come from their looming competition. The Hawkeyes will face Purdue, Friday at 6 p.m., and Illinois, Saturday at 7 p.m.
