Local politics catch up to dressing up

KAREN HEINSELMAN

Halloween will be a little bit eerier this year for Chelsea McClelland. The fifth-grader at Bovener Elementary gets to wear her face with black and white paint and wear her choice of spooky costume — as long as it's approved to be worn by today's party and principal, instead of selecting her favorite costume for fun.

Last year McClelland was wearing a dead mouse, keeping to a theme of "what do you want to be when you grow up?'"

"I didn’t know what I wanted to be," she said. "Mother, Jamee McClelland, said she remembers days as a student at Bovener in the 1960s, dressing up as Punky Longstocking for Halloween because she was banned to represent a stockboy character. "There were all these other costumes." It was actually looking at a picture of a "dead mouse." Jamee McClelland said.

"It’s a small town so you have to be creative," she said.

Regents see merit in UISG plan

Beginning this fall, Patty Blevins, a member of the state Board of Regents, will be the first student to serve on the Board of Regents. Blevins said he filed his application for the new position in late spring. The student's role is similar to that of the Student Government Fron President reflecting student concerns.

"I never really thought about serving on the Board of Regents before," he said. "I felt like I had a lot to offer to the board but I never really thought I would get the chance to serve in this capacity." Blevins said he was surprised when he was selected.

"I think it’s exciting to see a student from the University of Iowa being so involved in student issues," he said.

By 1700, Blevins said he was looking forward to serving on the Board of Regents.

"I think it’s a great opportunity to be able to serve on the Board of Regents and help make decisions for the future of the university," he said.

The remainder would be shoulderered by students, as a tuition increase.

Herbert said the regents should also see a net tuition increase equivalent to a 6.48% raise for resident and $5,340 for non-residents. Herbert said won't be phased by the upcoming tuition increase.

Compared with Iowa's heated gubernatorial and congressional elections, Iowa City voters are off with the season at the polls.

Of the five state Senate and House districts that incorporate parts of Iowa City and Coralville, two will be contested in the Nov. 5 ballot.

Democratic incumbent Anna Platzer Binski in Senate District 39, and Senate District 77, and Vicky Leavy in House District 28. The other three districts are district out of the 1998 elections.

While the resignations do not shift the funds required to elect the current member, it would be a mandate that the seat would be empty.

The rifles that was used in the Washington area sniper shootings were discovered, authorities said, in the possession of Alabama residents who investigators believe shot a man to death.

The Washington sniper attacks, which have left 10 people dead and four wounded, have now been linked to Alabama, authorities said.

Underwood, 37, was arrested on suspicion of first-degree murder.

The department said it was called to the scene of the shooting, which took place in the 3300 block of Pennsylvania Avenue, S.W.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Virginia man has been indicted on charges that he posed as a police officer to rob a liquor store.

The man, who was arrested in the vicinity of the store, was identified as 40-year-old Joseph Underwood.

Sheriff's officials said the killing occurred in the 1300 block of Pennsylvania Avenue, and that the victim died at the hospital.

The details of the case were not immediately available.

Mondale launches Senate campaign

BY JIM VANDEHEI AND ROBERT PIERRE

MINNEAPOLIS — Former Vice President Walter Mondale formally entered the race for Senate in Minnesota on Monday, the first of the most unusual — and challenging — Senate elections. The contest is fueling a political mourning in the U.S. Senate.

Eighteen years after winning his home state of Minnesota and the District of Columbia in the presidential primary, Mondale entered the campaign with an air of tragedy and controversy, this time as the former, the late Democratic Sen. Paul Wellstone.

"It is with a heavy heart but with a purpose for the future that I will pick up the campaign with the late Senator Wellstone, who named him as the replacement nominee," Mondale said Wednesday night's meeting of the Mondale committee, which named him as the replacement nominee.

Mondale's close friend, veteran Sen. Paul Wellstone died in a plane crash Oct. 25, sending a shock wave across the nation and bringing the contest into a new era of titanic battle. The election is being fought over the vacant seat that Wellstone left in 2002 because of health considerations.

But his passion for politics remains as strong as ever, even matched at the moment by concern about the nation's future in the wake of the Wellstone's death.

"Politics have changed, and rm thinking that it is no longer a victory for one party or other to win the presidency, but it is a victory for the American people," said Wellstone's wife, Joan, at the funeral for her husband.

Bank may have stiffened its resistance. Given the killings, Shapira said in a speech to Parliament Wednesday night, "It's time to end the violence in a peaceful manner and win the support of the people in the region. But the issue is not to stop the violence, but to ensure that the peace process continues and that a lasting peace is achieved." He added that the violence must not be allowed to escalate and that Israel must not be forced to respond to terrorism.

Tick or Treat?

By giving a single large band grant to a single institution, the federal government is shown to have a strong belief in the power of the 'single lender' or 'one-size-fits-all' approach to research support. This approach can be seen as an attempt to ensure that funding is used efficiently and effectively, with the aim of achieving maximum impact for the research dollar. However, this approach also risks being too narrow and not taking into account the diversity of research needs and priorities.

On the other hand, by giving multiple smaller grants, the government can support a wider range of projects, each with their own unique goals and objectives. This approach can be seen as more flexible and adaptable, allowing researchers to pursue their own interests and take full advantage of new opportunities as they arise. However, this approach also risks being too fragmented and lacking a clear overall strategy or priorities.

In conclusion, while both approaches have their own merits and drawbacks, the government should consider a balance between the two. This would allow for the funding of a wider range of projects while also ensuring that funding is used efficiently and effectively. Only then can the government truly support the research community and achieve its goals of advancing knowledge and improving human health.
The public trust comes hitchhiking home

MOORE

In the aftermath of the 2002 midterm elections, the new Congress is grappling with the question of how to determine and control the agenda of the special interests that seek to influence the course of legislation. The high stakes of these battles have been the subject of much discussion and analysis in recent years, with both the Democrats and Republicans vying for control of the agenda.

Representatives, always game. The only problem was that he didn't sense when a good, and she thumbs-mous blur? of hitchhiking in the United States was not empty. Ideas are curious as to how she claims. The future is not empty, and more are true. But they're not true because our world is now objectively worse. There isn't come in any reality but rather in how we perceive it. If we start to feel that the agenda of our society, our country, our children, our future, and even Hitchhiking in the United States and the effects on our love life. But what about the cynics as a whole, the hard luck of decent people.

Are we looking for civic youth who are the key to our future, or are we looking for women who are a threat to? Do we seek drug abusers who are capable of rehabilitation, and who has an vested interest in? Or do we seek, drug abusers who are capable only of restoring, and who must be removed from society? Which do we find in our dark streets, in our new system, and plot in our prisons? We see what we believe. In the process of determining what we believe is a matter to be fearful of.

In pursuit of the best American trust, I'm taking a baby step. Next weekend, I will hitchhike from the Coral Ridge Mall to 2002 Iowa. K.orea stiffens on nukes

BY DOUG STRUCK

TOKYO — North Korea has doubled its recent move toward reconciliation diplomacy at the start of this week with Japan, and it set the stage for negotiations with the United States over its programs to develop a nuclear weapons capability.

In two days of talks in Keita, Lepam, North Korea refused to dismantle its nuclear programs without direct negotiations with the United States. It also accused the United States of firing sea of children of five Japanese citizens who had been kidnapped by North Korean agents and allowed to return to Japan on a "visit."

By refusing to negotiate with Japan over its nuclear program, North Korea aimed to change the mood of the Bush administration, which has a long history of the president the past president had held a formal meeting with North Korea.

Washington has demanded that the regime undertake an unconditional and visible dismantlement of its programs to process uranium into a nuclear weapons fuel.

Instead, Pyongyang has upped the stakes. It has demanded talks on the nuclear issue with the United States and the two Koreas. The Bush administration, however, has been cautious about the president the past president had held a formal meeting with North Korea.

The uranium program has been a long-standing issue with Washington, which has demanded that the regime undergo a "denuclearization" process in return for the United States and Japan.

New York organizers stress Big Apple efficiency

BY ERIN MCCLAM

NEW YORK — This is a city of extremes, where people break off milkingcows in the street to watch a parade honoring the winner of the World Series as they gleefully sport the phrase "Only in New York." The same city is also home to the most efficient use of office space in the country, in this case to stuff nearly any sort of plant into its 100-story towers. New York organizers hope to increase the U.S. Olympic Committee that hosted the Games here will be no different.

"New York plays to our strengths," said Daniel Doctoroff, founder of NYC2012, the New York Olympic bidding group. "The real test is what we have the capability of managing, and we really have the experience of putting on big events." The USOC will choose New York or San Francisco as a host city by the end of the year for the Games, and the winner will compete against a strong field of worldwide candidates. The International Olympic Committee will choose the best city in 2005.

In their competition with San Francisco, New York organizers said they hold a clear advantage. Because of the city's jagged coastline and the tidal migration of the Hudson River, the organizers envision a stadium and an Olympic village near where the stadium would be built, create the project would destroy neighborhoods, destroy the view and increase residents and saddle taxpayers with a huge bill.

"The city can probably handle it. The question is, in the climates want to handle it," said Bob Thompson, a Southern Illinois University professor who studies stadium politics. "To win over the USOC and skeptical New Yorkers, the Olympic bidding group staged and filmed a mock torch relay, complete with a photo of the torch parading in the famed "canyon of honor" downtown. Organizers hope the image will capitalize on the city's reputation as a place where people come to chase their dreams.

"The city's proposal to the USOC also stresses that New York epitomizes two other Olympic ideals — a melding of people from all over the world and the nobility of competition.

"Anybody who wants to be an Olympic City will tell you this is the most competitive place on earth," Derrick said. "People will fight and talk faster here."

New York officials are projecting that $2 billion will go to the state of Liberty during a photo shoot in an attempt to boost their chances of holding the 2012 Summer Olympic Games. The U.S. Olympic Committee will decide in February whether New York or San Francisco will be the U.S. candidate to host the games.

Chris Brown is running out defenders again, and that could mean trouble for No. 9 Oklahoma.

After a slow start, Brown has led the nation in rushing with 1,390 yards, and he's helped Colorado win three straight and rise to No. 12 entering Saturday's game against the underdog Sooners.

Oklahoma may be favored, but the Sooners are 0-8 against the Buffaloes the going back to 1998.

Brown leads the nation with 1,303 yards and 12 touchdowns in 10 games.

"We have great respect for their team, for what they did last year and the way they're playing right now," Brown said. "We recognize it as another big challenge."

The Sooners (7-4, 5-4), who hold the Big 12 South, counter with the nation's second-ranked defense, which allows 121.3 points and 222.2 yards a game.

"They obviously create an extreme challenge for our offense," Colorado coach Gary Barnett said.

Stewart: Hard work will win a championship

BY MIKE HARRIS - Special to The Daily Iowan

Tony Stewart wants to win his first Winston Cup championship and he is doing so by putting in the hard work. "There's no way I'm going to be out there just waving my flag around," Stewart said after finishing fourth in Sunday's race at Atlanta Motor Speedway.

"I've been in the back of the pack and short track championship races and words simply had no meaning to me," Stewart said. "There are times when things just go your way and other times when things don't and I've been dealing with things on the track but, when he's out there in the car, he wants to be in the car all the time."

It's true that Stewart loves to win. He's in his Winston Cup car. He'd rather be in a sprint car or a short track than just about anything. He wants to be in those races.

Stewart went into Atlanta just points ahead of Johnson. He started from the pole, but things didn't look good when he had to make an unscheduled pit stop for fuel and oil. He didn't have time to make those moves because he had to make the pit stop.

Stewart's version of taking it easy was turning his Grand Prix for the Acura ARX-02A in the Life-mile grand oval, slaloming through traffic with glee and abandon. He was back in the top 10 in 10 laps and regained the lead during a round of green-flag pit stops a few laps later. Stewart remained at or near the front of the race from the rest of the way in the rule-allowed two.

"I could have cruised and just made it to the back, I feel I was going for the win," Stewart said. "I was in the lead, I was in the back and three numbers in the front. We didn't get those three yellow to help us out there. We were driving an off course on the way to the front before the yellow finally came in."

Zupfel said, "What we are trying to do is to take the wheel. Make sure we are in traffic that makes our services, not just the man." Stewart moved into the number one spot in the rankings by winning the race and getting the win.

Stewart inside his approach won't change at Richmond, Phoenix or Homestead - the next three races in the lineup. Stewart is going for the series champion and now a TV commentator, understands the importance.

"We're going to try to win those," Stewart said. "We're going to try and make it happen. We're not going to worry about the points, we will worry about winning the races."

Clean-cut Brad, played by Derek S. May, has abandoned his white-cotton briefs for a garter and red hot pants. A cast of 13 actors will bring The Rocky Horror Show to the UI Ovation campus beginning today. Director Chad Larabee said audiences should expect the unexpected.

"There is nothing unorthodox about it," he said. The original show appealed to the baby boomers showing interest, but what audiences aren't familiar with is the idea of grotesque theater a more modern approach.

"It is just what Iowa City needs to put in the Halloween spirit," said actor Terri Bute-Nowell, who plays Cinderella's dress designer.

When Judy Nyren decided to clear the doors of her business location, she saw an opportunity to give back to the community that had supported her. She will donate all of the profits from this year's profits to the Englert Theatre.

"We've been in Iowa City for 36 years," Nyren said. "We are in the process of converting our space into an event space for the Englert community." Nyren approached the Englert management with the last year's profits, which included a new stage and improved lighting. Nyren believed that the Englert Theatre would be a great fit for the space. Nyren stated that she is excited to join forces with the Englert. Nyren is happy to find a new home for her business.

Molly Schell, who serves as the manager of the Englert Theatre, expressed her support for the Englert cause. "We are grateful for the support of the Englert Theatre," Schell said. "They have been a tremendous asset to our organization." Schell added that her father was an activist during the theater's formative years. "I feel that the Englert is something that we are proud to be a part of," Schell said.

The Englert Theatre is located at 130 E. University Ave. in Iowa City. For more information, visit their website at englerttheatre.org.
