Pierce plea bargains; sentencing today

BY PHIL DAVIDSON AND TONY ROBINSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI men's basketball player Pierre Pierce is expected to appear in District Court today to be sentenced on unknown charges, after lawyers on both sides of the sexual-assault case reached a plea agreement.

Judge Thomas Horan filed the paperwork Thursday, scheduling the sentencing for today at 10:45 a.m.

Pierce was charged on Oct. 1 with third-degree sexual assault after allegedly performing unwanted sex acts with what sources have identified as a UI female athlete.

According to court reports, when the woman tried to push Pierce away, he allegedly held her hands over her head.

When she tried to scream, the defendant allegedly held his hands over her mouth.

The original charge, a class C felony, carries a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Pierce entered a written plea of not guilty on Oct. 23, a day before his scheduled arraignment.

Attorneys did not return phone calls Thursday to comment on whether Pierce would plead guilty to that charge or a lesser charge as part of the plea bargain.

The alleged assault took place on Sept. 6 at Pierce's residence, 725 Orchard St., police said. The woman was at the house with some friends on that night, police said. Pierce and the woman were acquaintances.

University officials last week, for unspecified reasons, granted Pierce's lawyer and the UI Board in Control of Athletics a continuance in the appeal of his suspension from the basketball team.

University General Counsel Mark Schantz said Thursday there had been discussions among the board members regarding the possible plea, which factored into the postponement.

"The suspension that we put on was pending on an outcome of the criminal proceeding," he said.

Schantz said the board will wait to see what will be involved in the plea before making a decision on Pierce's suspension.

Pierce's abrupt plea resembles the case of former City High football star Hakim Hill, who was charged in April 2001 with sexually assaulting a 15-year-old girl at the high school. Hill filed a last-minute Alford Plea last February, meaning he did not admit guilt but acknowledged that prosecutors had enough evidence to convict him. Hill maintained his athletics scholarship at Arizona State University as a result of the plea.

Recalling a snowy, blustery November day

BY AMIR EFRATI
THE DAILY IOWAN

Each year, November's early twilight triggers painful memories for Iowa City writer Mary Allen as she remembers the day 11 years ago and the shooting spree that left five members of the UI community dead, four of them literally under her feet.

Allen was working on the fifth floor of Van Allen Hall on Nov. 1, 1991, when Gang Lu, a 27-year-old graduate student from the People's Republic of China who was enraged that he had not received a UI award, gunned down four members of the physics department two stories below: faculty members Christoph Goertz and Robert Smith, department Chairman Dwight Nicholson, and graduate student Linhua Shan. Lu then walked to Jessup Hall, where he killed T. Anne Cleary, the associate vice president for Academic Affairs, and wounded Miya Rodolfo-Sioson, leaving her paralyzed. Lu then killed himself.

"People here will always remember it," she said of the bloody, snowy day. "Our friends, our neighbors, our colleagues were murdered."

UI seeks darkroom solutions

BY PAULA MAVROUDIS
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI officials say improving ventilation in the Art Building darkroom could cost $60,000.

Although a project to update the system has not formally been proposed, the facility might have to be shut down as a last-resort if those funds are not found, said Ann Rosenthal, a UI senior engineer for the Facilities Service Group. Students would still be able to use at least two other darkrooms on campus, she said.

Rosenthal said any proposal for funding would be submitted upon completion of the field work she has been conducting during the past year in attempt to find the source of the darkroom's air problems, which have made some students sick.

She said it is possible the air feeder and the exhaust fan need to be replaced, which are parts of a project estimated to cost between $10,000 and $60,000.

"This is a priority for us, but we have a lot of priorities," Rosenthal said. "The budget is

City expands its haz-mat program

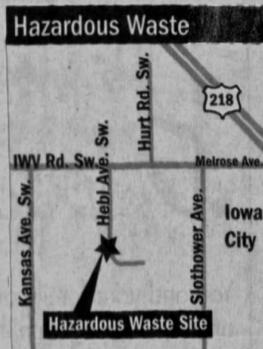

Iowa City opens the landfill to small business' waste

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

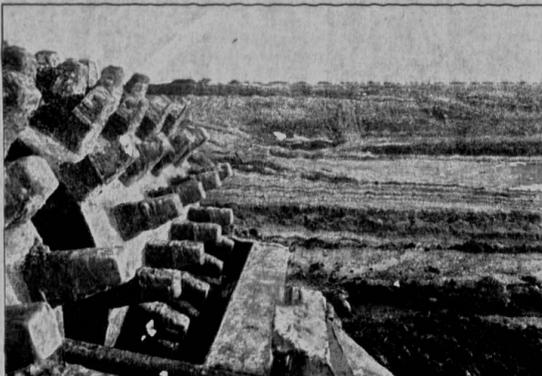

Small businesses that meet specific environmental standards can now dump hazardous waste at the city landfill under the final phase of a disposal program, officials announced Thursday.

Local businesses that do not produce more than 220 pounds of hazardous waste per month qualify for the new program because they fit into the Conditional Exemptions for Small Quantities category under Environmental Protection Agency regulations, said David Elias, the Iowa City landfill and recycling center's superintendent.

Machinery at the Iowa City landfill and recycling center. The landfill is launching a new program that will allow small businesses to use its hazardous-waste disposal services.

If businesses fit into the category, they must request an appointment to register with the landfill and show that they meet state and federal pollution regulations. The EPA can also inspect the businesses at any time to confirm whether they qualify within the agency's criteria. "If a business brings 300 pounds per month, it is out of the EPA category, and we are not authorized to handle it," Elias said.

ITC print credit now good for CDs, DVDs

Hundreds of thousands of dollars in leftover print credit can now be turned into recordable CDs and floppy discs at the Weeg Instructional Technology Center.

At the beginning of each semester, all UI students are issued $10 in free print credit for a total of $20 per year. However, the credit is only good until the start of the next school year. Based on fall enrollment numbers, 29,697 UI students are receiving $593,940 worth of free printing this year.

Last year, 9,573 students did not print at any of the 26 ITCs on campus, leaving a total of $191,480 in unused print credit. That figure does not account for students who only used some of their credit, meaning the total is likely higher, said Les Neu, Information Technology Services' ITC coordinator. "Obviously, there are some students that go

UI tuition hikes aiding Kirkwood

BY RYAN PARNELL
THE DAILY IOWAN

With a third substantial tuition hike looming at the UI, many students have found Kirkwood Community College a financial safe haven.

Enrollment has increased significantly over the past two years at Kirkwood's main campus in Cedar Rapids and expanded campus in Iowa City. This fall, the college experienced an 11 percent increase — 1,400 students — making the total enrollment 13,949, while it saw an 8 percent increase for the 2001-02 school year.

The rising cost of tuition at the state Board of Regents' three public universities — an almost 50 percent total rise in the past three years if the current 17.6 increase proposal is approved — is a main reason for the enrollment increase at Kirkwood, said Steve Carpenter, the school's public information director.

"People are finding Kirkwood a cheaper and more practical way to start their education," he said.

Kirkwood tuition for the 2002 school year runs $78 per credit hour for in-state students and $156 per credit hour for out-of-state students. Last semester, in-state students paid $69 per credit hour. That compares with the UI's per-semester costs of $2,095.50 for in-state students and $6,916.50 for out-of-state students per semester.

Students with plans to transfer to the UI say they find Kirkwood a more accessible option for them to complete their core classes. Kirkwood student Ryan Meeks is attending the community college now to take care of his liberal arts classes.

"It costs me a lot less than

UI admission officials said they have seen a continual increase in transfer students from community colleges over the past two years.

"Community colleges have always offered cost-effective education, and they will continue to be a great deal," said Michael Barron, the UI director of Admissions.

Despite tuition increases the past two years, the UI experienced record freshman enrollment for the 2002-03 school year.

Kirkwood's increased enrollment has administrators exploring possibilities of hiring more instructors and full-time faculty members, officials said. Carpenter said the average class size is still comfortable with around 24 students per class.

Along with incoming freshmen, some professionals are returning to school for refresher courses in their fields because of the poor economy, he said.

"We see people with B.A./B.S. degrees coming back for career-specific skill-building classes along with others who just want to explore new careers altogether," Carpenter said.

Brad Greiner, a UI junior and former Kirkwood student, said community college is a wise decision for anyone starting off, especially with more tuition increases on the way.

"Everything is cheaper, including books, and it is a great two-year program to get your general education classes out of the way," he said. "Besides the price, it isn't a hard jump from high school to college and that always helps."

UI junior hits sweet jackpot

BY CATHY FLORY
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI junior Emily Biscocho became $100,000 richer Thursday after winning the Walgreen Back-to-School Sweepstakes.

The Depew, Ill., native beat out more than a quarter million other entries to win the grand prize.

"When I entered the contest, I never thought I would win $100,000," she said. "The most I could have expected was to maybe win a computer."

Along with the grand prize of $100,000, two cash prizes of $25,000 and 20 computer and printer packages were given away in the annual nationwide sweepstakes.

"We try to generate excitement for the school year by having this contest," said Walgreen district manager Mark Hetzler.

Contestants entered the sweepstakes through fliers, online entries, and mail-in rebate forms. The contest started in mid-summer and ran through the end of August.

Biscocho was accompanied by her parents and brother when she received her grand prize at the Coralville Walgreen, 102 Second St.

"Hopefully, Emily can pay for her tuition now," said her mother, Glenda Biscocho. "But it's really up to her what she wants to do with it."

Emily Biscocho, who is studying speech and language pathology, hopes to continue her schooling and earn her master's degree after she graduates.

"It's still kind of funny to me," she said. "It hasn't really hit me yet, but I'm planning on paying for my tuition and then maybe taking a trip to the Philippines."

Group to study student arrests

BY JEFFREY PATCH
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI faculty and student leaders announced Thursday the appointment of a joint faculty-student task force to study undergraduate arrest rates, concentrating primarily on alcohol- and drug-related offenses.

Concern over undergraduate arrest rates increased last spring following reports that more than 10 percent of male UI undergraduates were arrested each year from 1997 to 2001 and that the UI led the nation in on-campus drug arrests in 2001, according to a Faculty Senate report.

Judy Polubbaum, an associate professor of journalism who will lead the task force, said the committee will spend more time researching the problem than discussing it in meetings. The committee will meet before Thanksgiving Break, she said, and will report its findings to the Faculty Senate by early next April.

"I feel like we have a lot of research to do," she said. "I see this as a workhorse committee."

UI Faculty Senate President Jeffrey Cox, who announced the appointment of the committee along with UI Student Government President Nick Herbold, said there is a great concern that a significant segment of the student things about arrests is that they go on students' permanent records, and they really affect their future," Herbold said.

Cox said the task force is focusing on arrests and is not investigating citations, such as speeding tickets or possession of alcohol under the legal age.

"Underage drinking is a citation, like a traffic offense," he said. "Other offenses, like public intoxication and marijuana possession, require a trip to jail and an official arrest record."

The methodology of the study and a possible thesis have yet to be determined, but task-force members say the high number of arrests warrants an investigation.

Polubbaum said she is concerned about the issue but that the task force has no preconceived conclusions on the matter.

"We thought it's something that definitely needs to be looked into," said Matt Blizek, the UISG vice president and a task-force member. "We're going to sit down and look at the effects of having an arrest record. We need to take this seriously."

An arrest record can affect students' options for education and employment opportunities, he said.

Many graduate schools question students about a possible arrest record, as do most employers, he said, adding that conviction of possessing even a small amount of marijuana is an automatic loss of financial aid.

Leach: Relations crucial

BY JOE NUGENT
THE DAILY IOWAN

The United States must recognize that a close relationship among business, politics, and international trade is necessary to prosper in the world after last year's terrorist attacks, Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, said Thursday.

When politicians and businesses cultivate good relations with other countries, that is good for the country, Leach told approximately 100 UI business students in the course Entrepreneurship and New Business Formation.

Leach, an Iowa City Republican, is seeking his 14th term, running against Democrat Julie Thomas, a Cedar Rapids pediatrician, in a close race that has attracted national attention. Visiting campus just five days before the Nov. 5 election, Leach said that this is a critical time for the United States.

"The Muslim world has become more antagonistic, our European allies are critical of our policies, and that's not good for our economy," he said. "We must listen to others. We don't want [to appear] unilateralist or hegemonic."

Leach said before Sept. 11 some in the U.S. government saw the country as the only "superpower left in the world" and made unwise decisions to pull out of some treaty negotiations.

Leach said U.S. relationships with other countries are like environmental ecosystems — every action affects something else.

He used President Bush's speech after the terrorist attacks as an example, saying while it was a good speech, some of the language was unfortunate. When the president described the "axis of evil," he called entire countries evil but should have only referred to their leaders, Leach said.

"That gave it religious overtones, and that caused problems in the Muslim world," he said. Also, the president's use of the word "crusade," which is used very loosely in the United States, has an entirely different connotation in the Muslim world, he said.

Leach also said the booming U.S. economy in the 1990s eventually damaged American prestige around the world because it was followed by corporate scandals involving Enron and other companies. An important change Congress made this year, he said, is legislation requiring CEOs to sign off on their companies' statements of earnings and losses. Because of the threat of prosecution, CEOs will now want to abide by the rules and put in systems to ensure accuracy, he said.

"Many companies have always done this so it's no problem, but others will have to change," Leach said.

Leach, Thomas spar over taxes

BY TODD DVORAK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CEDAR FALLS — Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, and Democratic challenger Julie Thomas disagreed Thursday over cures for the economy, Medicare, and taxes but found some common ground on U.S. policy toward Iraq.

The candidates, vying for Iowa's 2nd District seat, appeared together as part of a panel discussion on Iowa Public Radio.

Leach and Thomas agreed that they would urge President Bush to exhaust all peaceful and diplomatic efforts before America asserts its military might in Iraq, and then only with the support of other nations.

Leach broke with his party earlier this month in voting against a resolution authorizing

Bush to use force if necessary to overthrow Hussein's regime and lessen the threat of Iraq's cache of biological and nuclear weapons.

Thomas said she would have voted the same way.

"We need to work more carefully and strongly with the United Nations and in a multilateral way to approach this problem rather than doing anything unilaterally," Thomas said.

Leach, a 13-term incumbent, is locked in the political fight of his life with Thomas, a Cedar Rapids pediatrician who is making her first bid for public office.

The contest is being watched closely around the country and is one of four Iowa congressional races believed to be critical in both parties' efforts to claim the majority in Congress.

Thomas criticized Leach for supporting Bush's $1.3 trillion tax cut two years ago, saying it did more to help the wealthy than the middle-income wage earners. She said her goal would be to either repeal or restructure the tax cut, a move Leach implied would be similar to raising taxes.

"I would be very cautious about increasing taxes at this time," he said.

Leach said he would use another term to push for more free-trade agreements and giving the White House more authority to negotiate trade deals. Thomas has opposed those steps.

"In a competitive country, we have to compete. Free trade has to be fair trade, and that's why we seek agreements," Leach said.

The low Medicare reimbursement Iowa receives, the lowest in the nation, is a problem both candidates pledged to make a priority in office.

Dem: GOP trying to squash vote

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Iowa Democrats accused Republicans on Thursday of running a covert voter-suppression effort aimed at driving down turnout in next week's election.

Iowa Democratic Chairwoman Sheila McGuire Riggs held a news conference to play tape recordings of attack telephone calls made to Democratic households, techniques she said are designed to dissuade party faithful from voting.

"They target Democratic homes, hoping to keep Democrats home," she said. "Republicans should stop trying to suppress voter turnout."

The messages were left on the answering machines of Democratic activists in the 2nd and 4th Districts, where campaigns are competitive.

"I'm calling today to ask you to call Congressman Leonard Boswell and tell him to stop opposing lower taxes," says one.

"Call John Norris and ask him if he really cares about seniors," says another.

"The Republican Party of Iowa does not condone or participate in any such activity," said Joel Hannahs, a spokesman for the party.

This year's campaign features a high-profile fight for Iowa's U.S. Senate seat as well as the governor's office, and there are competitive battles in four of the state's five congressional districts. The campaign has been a hard-hitting one, with attack commercials flooding the airwaves for months.

Attack commercials are frequently employed as a tactic to drive down voter turnout, aiming to turn voters off of politics. Riggs said the telephone campaign being conducted by Republicans was clearly targeting Democratic activists, because only Democratic homes are being contacted.

She contrasted the effort with a drive by her party to encourage voter turnout.

"We are simply making the process more convenient and our Republicans counterparts are deliberately trying to interfere with the process," said Riggs.

She said the GOP effort was predictable, coming in the wake of public polling showing Democratic candidates at the top of the ticket beginning to develop an edge heading into the election.

Quake rocks Italy, killing 12

BY PETER W. MAYER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN GIULIANO DI PUGLIA, Italy — An earthquake jolted south-central Italy on Thursday, sending a nursery school roof crashing down on a class of preschoolers during a lunchtime Halloween party. At least 10 children in the school and two women in nearby homes were killed.

Driven on by faint voices coming from the rubble, frantic rescuers worked into the night to save more than a dozen children who remained trapped after the 5.4 magnitude quake struck the Molise region, shaking the town of Campobasso and surrounding villages northeast of Naples.

San Giuliano Di Puglia, a village of 1,195 people, was the hardest hit. Anguished parents kept a vigil outside the yellow schoolhouse, where 56 children had been celebrating Halloween when the quake struck. Workers guided by flashlights and floodlights carried six dust-covered children and a teacher from the rubble after night fell. They were sent to nearby hospitals.

So far, 26 children and three teachers have been rescued.

Italian news reports said approximately 20 children and one adult remained in the rubble 12 hours after the quake struck.

The bodies of 10 children and two adults were being housed in a makeshift morgue at the town's sports center, where family members came to identify the dead, carabinieri officials outside the center said.

Applause burst from the tense crowd after one difficult rescue late Thursday. Residents cried, "Giovanni! Giovanni!" when the little boy was brought out on a stretcher.

"As soon as he came out he called me 'Papi' like he always does," the boy's father told RAI state television, which did not give the man's name.

"I immediately saw he was in good condition. He told me there are many other children still alive, a little shocked but still alive, so the hope is still there that they can save more."

"I thank God for this gift he has given me," he said.

Rescuers used cranes, blowtorches, and their bare hands to claw at the debris Thursday night, removing roof tiles and slabs of concrete while listening for the faint sounds of children trapped inside.

"That's what we're basing the search on. We're still hearing voices," Police Col. Antonio Ianuzzi said late Thursday.

One girl named Lilia told Italian television from her hospital bed, where she had her left hand in a small cast, that the children were drawing Pinocchio pictures, getting ready for their Halloween party, when the quake struck.

"I heard it crumble, and we screamed," she said. She said she hadn't heard news her friend Melissa. "She wasn't near me. I didn't even hear her voice. I don't know if she's still alive."

Paramedic Antonio Licursi, covered in dust as he emerged from the pit, said he believed at least another dozen children were still trapped.

Tearful parents stood nearby, blocked from the site by a police barrier, sometimes calling out the names of their children. Others waited at nearby hospitals.

"They were all together in the school because they were having a Halloween party," said Tonino Scarlatelli, an official in the Molise regional president's office.

Pitt accused of hiding info

BY LAURIE KELLMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Securities and Exchange Commission ordered an investigation Thursday into allegations that Chairman Harvey Pitt concealed from commissioners information on the corporate ties of William Webster, his choice to head a new accounting oversight board.

The disclosure once again thrusts Pitt in the middle of a political maelstrom, even as the Bush administration seeks to restore investor and consumer confidence in the roller-coaster markets just days before the midterm elections.

Publicly, the administration strongly backed Pitt.

"Chairman Pitt has done a good job in cracking down on corporate wrongdoing and the SEC has a very strong record under his leadership," said White House spokeswoman Claire Buchan. "We support him."

At the same time, White House spokesman Scott McClellan acknowledged, "We don't have all the facts."

SEC spokeswoman Christi Harlan said the agency's inspector general, Walter Stachnik, would conduct the internal investigation. Pitt and other commissioners requested the probe.

"This is simply a look at the process, and it is not a review of Judge Webster," Harlan said. SEC spokesman John Heine insisted it was not an investigation of Pitt either.

Neither Pitt nor Webster returned repeated calls for comment.

The accounting oversight board was created in the wake of the accounting scandals that led to the downfall of Enron and other large corporations.

Top Democrats, seeking to paint President Bush as an ally of big business and not corporate responsibility, renewed calls for Pitt's resignation just 14 months after he took the job.

"Mr. Pitt not only deprived his fellow commissioners of vital information about one of the most important appointments they would ever make, he knowingly endorsed a candidate for chairman of the accounting oversight board without seriously investigating the matter," said House Democratic leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri. "I again urge President Bush to ask Harvey Pitt to step aside from his post today."

"President Bush made this unfortunate appointment; he should fire him," Rep. Ed Markey, D-Mass., said of Pitt.

The SEC voted 3-2 along partisan lines on Oct. 25 to approve Webster's appointment as head of the accounting oversight board. The commission's two Democrats had supported another candidate, pension fund administrator John H. Biggs; they believed Biggs would advocate tough regulation of the accounting industry.

In an interview with the New York Times, Webster said he told Pitt and Robert Herdman, the SEC's chief accountant, days before the vote that he had led the auditing committee for U.S. Technologies, a company facing investor lawsuits alleging fraud.

"I told them that people are making accusations," Webster told the newspaper. "I said if this is a problem, then maybe we shouldn't go forward."

He said Pitt assured him SEC staff had looked into the issue and it would not pose a problem.

U.S. Technologies' former accounting firm, other auditing committee members, company executives, and investors told the Times no one at the commission contacted them about Webster's appointment.

Webster said he called Pitt again Monday, three days after he was appointed, saying he had heard over the weekend that the government had begun to investigate possible fraud by U.S. Technologies' chief executive, C. Gregory Earls.

Pitt did not tell other commissioners about Monday's conversation either, SEC officials told the Times.

Gov't indicts Enron's ex-CFO

BY CARRIE JOHNSON AND PETER BEHR
WASHINGTON POST

A federal grand jury in Houston on Thursday indicted Andrew Fastow, the former chief financial officer at Enron Corp., on dozens of fraud, money laundering, and conspiracy charges, the latest move in the active government probe into wrongdoing at the bankrupt energy trader.

The charges against Fastow, who allegedly masterminded a complex web of partnerships that disguised Enron's financial woes and funneled millions of dollars into his own pockets, were filed four weeks after he surrendered to the FBI and was released on $5 million bond. He's the highest ranking Enron official to face criminal charges.

The 78-count indictment closely tracks allegations that prosecutors leveled against Fastow in a sworn statement by an FBI agent at that time. The court papers also include a new claim: that Fastow attempted to block investigators by persuading his top aide, Michael Kopper, to tamper with laptop and desktop computers in the late summer of 2001. That was shortly after Enron executive Sherron Watkins raised questions about Enron's accounting practices, but before the company's financial woes became public.

The obstruction count is significant because it challenges Fastow's claim, as cited by his lawyer, John Kecker, that he "never believed he was committing any crime."

"The natural question is, why would you try to influence someone to cover up or destroy evidence if you thought you did nothing wrong?" said Thomas Ajamie, a Houston defense lawyer. "That's a question the jury will face."

Fastow, 40, is scheduled to appear in a Houston courtroom Nov. 6 to enter a formal plea to the charges. He faces as many as 20 years in prison under the money-laundering counts alone.

Andrew Weissmann, the deputy director of the Justice Department's Enron Task Force, said outside the courthouse Thursday that Fastow isn't cooperating with prosecutors or providing evidence about other Enron misdeeds. Asked whether the potential for steep fines and prison time would induce the defendant to change his mind, Weissmann said, "If you do the math ... these are significant charges that carry significant jail terms."

Keker said in a statement: "These charges are full of sound and fury, but the truth about Enron has yet to be told. When that truth is told, to a jury of 12 honest Americans, Andy Fastow will be set free."

Deputy Attorney General Larry Thompson said, "The investigation into Fastow's illegal activities continues. We will use every appropriate measure to recover the ill-gotten gains of these corporate schemers."

In a sign of the continuing investigation, the same Houston grand jury heard testimony last week about stock sales by former Enron Chairman Kenneth Lay before Enron's collapse, said lawyers involved in the case. Michael Ramsey, a lawyer representing Lay, said his client behaved appropriately when he sold Enron shares.

Suicide bombs a war crime, group says

BY TRACY WILKINSON
LOS ANGELES TIMES

JERUSALEM — A leading human-rights organization charged Thursday that Palestinians who order and dispatch suicide bombers are guilty of war crimes and should be brought to justice.

In a comprehensive, 170-page report, the New York-based Human Rights Watch also said Palestinian Authority President Yasser Arafat bears "significant political responsibility" for the "repeated deliberate killing" of Israeli civilians in the last two years of blood-soaked conflict.

"The scale and systematic nature of these attacks in 2001 and 2002 meet the definition of a crime against humanity," the report stated. "When these suicide bombings take place in the context of violence that amounts to armed conflict, they are also war crimes."

The report is a departure from most human-rights investigations into Israeli-Palestinian violence that focus on the Israeli army, including the killing of civilians, demolition of houses, and other forms of collective punishment.

Israel is a member state of the United Nations and signatory to a number of international conventions and as such can be held accountable for its army's actions.

Human Rights Watch asserts that although Arafat's Palestinian Authority is not a state, it aspires to becoming one, has made international commitments, and cannot evade similar responsibilities.

Instead, the scathing report said, Arafat and the Palestinian leadership have failed to prevent suicide bombings, refused to arrest terrorists, and declined to defuse the radicalized political and social climate that encourages attacks on Israeli civilians. Blaming Israel's harsh occupation of Palestinian territory, the leadership has, to the contrary, allowed the attacks to flourish, the report charged.

The report focused on the history and activities of four factions that have claimed responsibility for 52 suicide bombings since January 2001 in which an estimated 250 civilians have been killed and an additional 2,000 people injured.

In all, approximately 2,200 people have been killed, about three-quarters of them Palestinians, since the intifada, or uprising, erupted 25 months ago.

Three of the factions cited by Human Rights Watch — the militant Islamic Hamas movement, the Palestinian Islamic Jihad, and the secular but radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine — have an adversarial relationship with Arafat. But the fourth, the Al Aqsa Martyrs Brigade, professes loyalty to the aging leader while operating with a great deal of local discretion, the report said.

Hamas founder Sheik Ahmed Yassin is among the senior leaders who could be investigated on war-crimes charges, said the report's author, Joe Stork, the director in Washington of Human Rights Watch's Middle East and North Africa division.

Hamas and Islamic Jihad defend and celebrate the use of suicide bombers, boast of the method's efficacy, and make no distinction between Israeli civilians and combatants, according to the report — all which qualify as crimes against humanity.

Sharon chooses hard-line general

BY LAURA KING
LOS ANGELES TIMES

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Ariel Sharon on Thursday picked as his new Defense minister a former army chief of staff who takes an even harder line toward the Palestinians than the Israeli leader.

Lt. Gen. Shaul Mofaz, whose selection as Defense chief is expected to be officially unveiled next week, caused a stir last spring when he was caught on an open TV microphone urging Sharon to expel Palestinian Authority President Yasser Arafat.

As chief of staff, Mofaz presided over Israel's seizing of West Bank cities and towns in response to a string of suicide bombings and other attacks launched from the Palestinian territories by militant groups.

As Sharon moved Thursday to replace ministers from the left-leaning Labor Party who had abandoned his governing coalition a day earlier, a thunderous explosion rocked a crowded neighborhood in Gaza City, killing at least three members of the military wing of the militant Islamic group Hamas, one of them a senior figure in the organization.

Six people were reported wounded, four of them civilians who lived nearby and the other two members of Hamas. The blast was an apparent "work accident" — the term used by both sides to describe explosives going off prematurely while being assembled or transported.

The choice of Mofaz as Defense minister could be an early signal of what analysts have predicted will be a pronounced move to the right by Sharon's government in the absence of Labor's moderating influence. Sharon is expected to turn to far-right and religious parties, most of whom oppose any peace overtures toward the Palestinians, to regain a parliamentary majority in the 120-seat Knesset.

NATION BRIEF

Economy bounces back, somewhat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy, powered by strong auto sales, rebounded to a 3.1 percent annual growth rate in the summer as business investment, which had been the major no-show in the current recovery, turned up for the first time in two years.

The third quarter increase in the gross domestic product, the broadest measure of economic activity, was hailed by a campaigning President Bush as a sign of better days ahead for an economy that has been battered by a recession, terrorist attacks, corporate accounting scandals, and a plunging stock market.

"We're kind of moving our way toward a time when people can find work, but there's more to do," Bush told a campaign audience in South Dakota.

But Democrats, who have sought to make the weak economy an issue in the battle over control of Congress, said the summer strength had already faded and warned that the economy is once again flirting with a possible recession.

"Substantial job losses continue, and the economy is sluggish at best," said South Carolina Rep. John Spratt, the top Democrat on the House Budget Committee. "The economy is currently weak and vulnerable to a renewed downturn."

Local writer recalls Nov. 1, '91, massacre at Van Allen Building

Allen, who finished her second book Monday, spoke in a nervous yet cheerful tone as she explained the sense of release she felt by including the murders in her 1999 literary memoir The Rooms of Heaven.

"It gives you an outlet, a way to process and make sense [of the tragedy]," she said in the living room of her cozy Iowa City home.

In the three-page excerpt from her 320-page book, Allen describes the "strange way" in which her job at the physics department ended. The confusing sounds she initially heard took on greater meaning as that afternoon wore on:

"I heard a little sound, pop-pop-pop, and then I heard something that sounded like a lot of furniture being moved around. I thought that was the sound of someone rearranging the desks or something, but it turned out it was the sound of people tipping over chairs, shoving tables aside, scrambling for cover."

A reflection of a "dark year in my life," the book focuses primarily on Allen's struggles with her boyfriend's 1991 suicide.

"For me, the tragedy in the physics department was part of a larger tragedy in my own life," she said, explaining that the experience was less shocking for her because it happened after the suicide.

While preparing for trick-or-treaters, Allen said she wrote about the murders partially as a response to her friend Jo Ann Beard's essay "The Fourth State of Matter," which was collected in her 1998 memoir, The Boys of My Youth. Allen and Beard were editorial assistants for the Journal of Geophysical Research in the physics department when the tragedy occurred.

"I find that amazing," Allen said, adding that retelling her version of the story proved cathartic for her and Iowa City readers. "People appreciate having the shootings remembered in a permanent way."

She and Beard, who now lives in upstate New York, often help each other remember the tragedy by talking about Christoph Goertz, the editor of the physics journal, who was killed in the attack.

"It was a terrible loss for them," said Gerald Payne, a professor of physics and astronomy who was in Van Allen Hall during the massacre. Payne said his therapy came from rebuilding a broken physics department when he became the chairman after Nov. 1, 1991.

Allen's second memoir is The House of Dreams, for which she received a $20,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. She periodically teaches creative nonfiction as a visiting faculty member in the UI English department.

UI dept. searches for darkroom solutions getting smaller, and we have to look at the big picture. There's no easy solution to this."

To find the root of the problem, facilities services removed asbestos insulation from the building and cleaned the airhandler this past summer. Rosenthal said all parts of the existing exhaust system were working properly. Facilities services plans to evaluate the origin and quality of air filtering into the room, because it could be part of the problem, she said.

The UI Health Protection Office, which makes weekly visits to the darkroom to collect waste chemicals and make sure the chemicals are properly stored and labeled, also surveys the air quality of the ventilation system, but only if a faculty member reports a concern.

In April 2001, Jim Snitzer, an associate photography professor, called the health office to report concerns about the air quality after many students complained of having headaches and sinus infections from the chemical fumes, records show. The health office took six air tests in the most concentrated areas of the darkroom, looking for high amounts of acetic acid, which is the most hazardous among photographic chemicals, said Robin Lindenboom, an industrial hygienist for the health office. The darkroom air contained only 2 part per million of acetic acid, much lower than the maximum allowable amount of 15 parts per million in a darkroom, he said.

"We found that the air did not appear to be hazardous," Lindenboom said. "Some people are just more sensitive to the chemicals than others."

Though facilities services has tried to alleviate the problem, many students say they believe they are still being neglected. Last year, approximately 40 students petitioned for a better ventilation system after complaining of feeling ill from exposure to the toxic chemicals used in the darkroom.

"It seems that other departments are the university's top priorities, while we have to work in a place that is a health hazard with equipment that is duct-taped together," said UI junior and darkroom monitor Jennifer Johnson.

"The sales have been pretty good to this point," said Marcy Olson, an ITC technology consultant. "The CD-Rs and floppies have been the most popular by far."

Weeg is the only ITC offering the sales because it is the only one equipped to change print balances. The cost is debited directly from the student print balance accounts, which can have funds added to them beyond the $20 provided by the UI.

"If you're in [Weeg] and need a disc, we've got them available for you," Neu said. "It's really a convenient service, because if you wanted cheap prices, you could get blank CDs practically for free anywhere."

The ITCs are moving away from the Zip drives formerly found on all computers and making the transition toward optical disc burners. Providing the blanks makes sense for the ITC, Olson said.

Students praised the initiative, saying that options to spend the leftover funds are always welcome.

"I'll definitely have to take advantage of the credit this year," said UI senior Mike Pollock, lamenting his lost $12 print credit last year. "If you've got it, you might as well use it."

Mondale opens up last-second campaign

BY RICHARD SIMON
LOS ANGELES TIMES

MINNEAPOLIS — On his first full day running to reclaim the Senate seat he held 26 years ago, former Vice President Walter Mondale started the morning by doing something fitting for this unusual campaign — delivering the weather report.

"Clear and 19 degrees at Gunther's grocery store in Elmore," he said at his first stop, a Minneapolis radio station.

He also visited with the late Sen. Paul Wellstone's campaign staff and two sons and appeared on a college campus, in front of students who would have been babies and toddlers in 1984, the last time he was on an election ballot.

Mondale's day was far less rigorous than that of the Republican candidate, former St. Paul mayor Norm Coleman, who was on a five-city tour. Still, Mondale captured the spotlight. He sounded at times like a history professor, talking about his ill-fated 1984 presidential campaign and referring to Presidents Richard Nixon and Jimmy Carter. He sprinkled his comments with references to Wellstone, whom he described as a dear friend and whose causes he pledged to pursue passionately.

Mondale's first TV ad also began appearing.

"I know our state and I know the Senate," he says in the ad. "I'll continue Paul's fight for people."

Separately, the United Steel Workers and Service Employees International Union, with 40,000 members in the state, began running a radio ad saying, "There really isn't a better person than Walter Mondale to pick up Paul's banner."

Mondale was officially chosen by Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party delegates Wednesday to replace Wellstone in the Senate race. Wellstone, along with his wife, his daughter, three aides, and two pilots, died Oct. 25 in the crash of a small plane in northern Minnesota.

Coleman, who was hand-picked by President Bush to run for the Senate, hopes to get a big push for his campaign with visits today by Vice President Dick Cheney, Saturday by Laura Bush, and Nov. 3 by the president. The most recent statewide poll showed Mondale with an 8-percentage-point lead.

As Mondale hit the campaign trail, the Minnesota Supreme Court ordered that new absentee ballots be sent out to any voters who request them.

Election officials had ruled that any absentee ballots cast for Wellstone not be counted, a policy that Democratic officials asserted would give an unfair advantage to Coleman. Democratic officials had wanted new ballots sent out to all absentee voters.

Mondale appeared comfortable back on the stump, although he said it was a "strange moment" out of a Shakespeare play for him to lose a friend and find himself on the ballot, with only five days to campaign.

"This is tough on you, and it's tough on me," he told students at Macalaster College. "This was not my idea. My idea was to elect Paul Wellstone back to the United States Senate. But I think somebody had to carry Paul's torch."

Mondale, long a critic of the corrupting influence of big campaign contributions, seemed relieved about one thing: "I'm not going to make one phone call for money."

Although Mondale shares many of Wellstone's liberal views, the former vice president has become a bit more moderate over the years.

"In some sense, the aging Mondale has become a New Democrat," said Dan Hofrenning, the chairman of the political-science department at St. Olaf College. "Like Bill Clinton, the quintessential New Democrat, he supports free trade. Wellstone opposed free trade and was in some sense more of an old Democrat than Mondale."

But in other ways, Mondale follows in Wellstone's footsteps. Mondale speaks about "giving voice to the voiceless and taking care of the less fortunate. These are the high notes of Wellstone's legacy," Hofrenning said.

City expands haz-mat disposal at its landfill

WASTE

Before the program's implementation, small businesses had to call a private hazardous waste-storage company to dispose of materials — which often proves to be costly, Elias said.

A renewable permit that the landfill obtained from the state approximately two years ago has allowed city employees to handle certain amounts of hazardous materials themselves, Elias said.

"It's been a service people have been calling for," he said. "It will be an environmental benefit to the community."

Allowing small businesses to dispose of limited amounts of hazardous waste completes a year-old program that had previously only served households. A grant from the Department of Natural Resources funded the program, Elias said.

"We've got the experience and procedures down effectively," he said. "We're ready to go."

Six to eight landfill employees have been trained to handle hazardous waste. A modernized facility built one-and-a-half years ago, designed with hazardous waste specifically in mind, means that the city more equipped to handle the materials, Elias said.

"People are surprised what it takes to get rid of this nasty stuff," he said.

Stuck in the Foo Fighters

BY DAN MALONEY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Dave Grohl of Nirvana and Foo Fighters fame must have been one of those kids you saw in junior high who constantly got dunked into toilets and tripped mischievously in hallways. But rather than biting the bullet and accepting his fate, Grohl takes his hardships on the chin with a smirk, insinuating, "Bring it on, assholes."

In the span of mere months, Grohl has dealt with Nirvana lawsuits, recording and performing with Queens of the Stone Age and Tenacious D, as well as honing his craft with the release of the Foo Fighters' fourth studio album, One by One.

The opening guitar riff on One by One's "All My Life" rings like Arena-rock guitar tones with simplistic lyrics in the chorus demonstrate that Grohl was raised on REO Speedwagon and Journey.

On the next track, "Low," Grohl and Co. continue the buzz saw-driven guitar rock. The melodic hook common in most Foo material isn't evident until the middle of the song, but the sing-a-long part makes its appearance. Grohl struggles through his lyrics, romantically pleading, "As low as you go" over and over like he's singing from the shoulder of a best friend.

The catchy rock trend continues with tracks "Times Like These," "Overdrive," and "Burn Away." The guitars on "Times Like These" complement each other in a dueling lead riff-off. On "Overdrive," Foo again conjures a song with both rock and pop aspects that will appeal to guys who want to smash it up in the pit as well as the girlfriends/girlfriends who want to quietly bob and hear about hearts being broken and love being found. Immersed in the track "Burn Away," the group shows a dose of its classic-rock roots. Arena-rock guitar tones with simplistic lyrics in the chorus demonstrate that Grohl was raised on REO Speedwagon and Journey.

Sadly, where there are Foo Fighting highs, there are also suck-sinking lows. Tracks such as "Disenchanting Lullaby," "Tired of You," and the last song, "Come Back," show the cloud around the silver lining. The overproduction on "Disenchanting Lullaby" places it a tad above a Third Eye Blind supermarket ballad, and Grohl's moans are echoed over a sophomoric guitar riff that could have been written by your roommate in the dorm. On "Tired of You," Brian May of Queen is called in to bring his guitar virtuosity, but the song is not strong enough to complement his playing. And if it couldn't get any worse, "Come Back" emerges as a nearly eight-minute-long sappy piece of drivel. Say it isn't so, Dave.

If there were a way the Foo Fighters could have released two versions of One by One, one containing the classic Foo songs, and the other with the marketable radio disposables, I wouldn't have felt so cheated.

One more time with feeling

BY DAN MALONEY
THE DAILY IOWAN

After months of litigation and mudslinging among members of Nirvana and Courtney Love, Nirvana's optimistically tragic last song, "You Know You're Right," has finally been released.

The vehicle for "You Know You're Right" is a Nirvana greatest-hits compilation simply titled Nirvana. Prior to the release of the album, "You Know You're Right" leaked onto the Internet while legal battles among Love and members of Nirvana raged on, botching a chance of the song having a legitimate release. However, the wait is over, and Kurt Cobain's last recorded plucks on the guitar are hauntingly documented as if Cobain knew it would be his last song.

As a compilation, Nirvana is a healthy dose of material spanning the band's four albums and MTV unplugged performance.

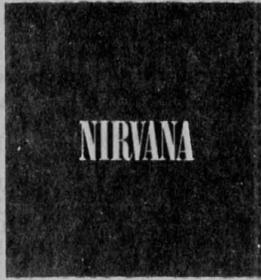

The opening track, "You Know You're Right," leads off like any typical Nirvana tune — a slow-building, finger-plucking guitar part with Cobain's voice groaning solemnly until the explosive chorus comes in, and drummer Dave Grohl explodes, bam-bam style. The guitars scream through distortion, and Cobain's voice rises in anger. More interesting than the music are Cobain's lyrics, which eerily proclaim, "Things have never been so swell/And I have never felt this well." No Kurt, things obviously haven't seemed too swell. But, I suppose the joke is on us.

The next three tracks, "About a Girl," "Been A Son," and "Sliver" all come from Nirvana's Bleach period and have pre-Grohl drumming. The songs show Nirvana's early period of punk rock laced with pop hooks and harmonies, with the bouncy "About a Girl" being a stand-out track.

Rounding the Nevermind-era are tracks "Smells Like Teen Spirit," "Come As You Are," "Lithium," and "In Bloom." Debatably Nirvana's golden age, these songs register just as well as any Beatles classic, and most likely they will be a cornerstone on the radio if there is ever a 20-something/slacker oldies station. The edgy hook in "Teen Spirit," the anthem "Lithium," and the flannel swingin' "In Bloom" all show off Nirvana's strengths as a band.

Encompassing the In Utero-era are tracks "Heart-Shaped Box," "Pennyroyal Tea," "Rape Me," and "Dumb." During this period, the band hired indie-rock production-snob Steve Albini to man the boards, and Nirvana achieved a underground sound for a mainstream audience.

The last two tracks, "All Apologies" and "The Man Who Sold The World," come from Nirvana's unplugged performance on MTV. Both songs are beautiful minimalist demonstrations of how Nirvana can strip everything down and still show its talent. The addition of strings by Lori Goldston gracefully lift the songs, and Cobain comes alive like never before.

As a whole, Nirvana may not be worth it for fans who already own all Nirvana's albums, but it's a good start for the post-grunge class of rockers. As for the true Nirvana enthusiasts, download "You Know You're Right," and keep your fingers crossed for the rumored Nirvana box set.

WANTED: HOMELAND FOR 2 MILLION PALESTINIANS

Soon we will be commemorating the Balfour Declaration of Nov. 2, 1917. In this declaration, then British Foreign Secretary Arthur Balfour promised the support of his government for the "establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people" in what had been Arab Palestine since the Islamic conquests of the seventh century. This support was conditional "that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine." Looking at the current situation in the West Bank — the bombings, assassinations, and occupation — nothing seems further from the truth.

The noble goals of the Balfour Declaration were further iterated on July 24, 1922, in the British Mandate for Palestine issued by the League of Nations, which President Woodrow Wilson had helped found and for which he received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1919. In that declaration, "the Mandatory shall be responsible for placing the country under such political, administrative, and economic conditions as will secure the establishment of the Jewish national home and also for safeguarding the civil and religious rights of all the inhabitants of Palestine, irrespective of race and religion." Notwithstanding the above assurances, Palestine is currently made up of the world's 13th-richest state (Israel) and one of the world's poorest peoples (the Palestinians).

The turmoil and violence begotten by the above two resolutions was fueled further by the U.N. General Assembly Resolution 181, issued Nov. 29, 1947. This resolution called for the creation of Arab and Jewish states within Palestine. However, the "City of Jerusalem shall be established as a corpus separatum under a special international regime and shall be administered by the United Nations." This resolution, though passed, was by no means unanimous. There were 33 votes in favor including the United States, Soviet Union, France, and Canada. The United Kingdom, which was assigned the Mandate for Palestine, was one of the 10 abstentions. There were 13 votes against the resolution, including Lebanon, India, Greece, and Pakistan.

Today, Israel controls all of the West Bank, Jerusalem, and the Golan Heights. In spite of all the promises of the above resolutions, the Palestinians do not enjoy independence or secure borders, but in fact live under a brutal Israeli occupation. Two million Palestinians continue to live in refugee camps scattered throughout the Middle East supported by the United Nations. Furthermore, in spite of U.N. Resolution 181, on Sept. 30, President Bush signed a State Department Authorization Act recognizing Jerusalem as the capital of Israel. Until we Americans are ready to enforce the principles and borders called by the above resolutions, until we uphold the rights of all peoples irrespective of their religion and ethnicity, Israel and the Palestinian state will never achieve the peace and security within recognized borders they were envisaged to have.

Editorial

UI may soon be unaffordable

UI tuition is on a fast track to unaffordability. In a recent report from the College Board, the cost of UI tuition and fees ranked above the national average for four-year public institutions; this announcement's timing is appropriate, considering that the Board of Regents is expected to raise in-state tuition and fees by 19.1 percent at a meeting this month. In the wake of this announcement, the regents need to start working with and lobbying the state Legislature for more funding; if they don't, Iowa residents may soon be unable to send their children to college.

For the 2002-03 academic year, the average cost of four-year public institutions went up 9.6 percent, reaching $4,081. Resident tuition and fees at Iowa adds up to slightly more — $4,191 (don't forget nonresidents will pay $14,634). Though this is not yet exorbitant in comparison with the average, the annual increases are UI tuition skyrocketed 18.7 percent last year, making the national average of 9.6 percent look minuscule. This year, the proposed 19.1 percent increase in tuition and fees will compound previous increases, vaulting the UI's even higher above the national average. If the regents do pass the proposed increase, UI tuition will have increased nearly 50 percent since 2000; if this trend continues for long, the university may soon lose its spot in the middle of the affordability spectrum.

Steve Parrott, the director of University Relations, said, "We are still close to the average, and we are still considered one of the best values." Though this may be true for now, the regents can only stack 20 percent increases on top of each other for so long before the university loses its reputation as one of the best deals in the Big Ten.

In recent years, the university has lost more than 100 faculty because of budget cuts, proving that as tuition goes up, budget cuts still drag the school down. The number of classes may slowly begin to dwindle as another result of budget cuts (for instance, physical-education course offerings are down from 196 last fall to 158 this fall). So even while students are paying more, they have fewer courses to choose from and fewer professors to teach them; unless the regents come up with a better solution soon, the university may eventually be faced with both unaffordability and low quality.

Schools in the UI's peer group, such as University of Nebraska and Kansas University, are less expensive than the UI, costing approximately $2,600 and $2,300 for residents respectively, not including fees. As these schools' tuition remains reasonable, the UI's continues to increase exponentially while not even fully compensating for budget cuts.

While Parrott may read this year's record enrollment of freshmen as a sign that students are not deterred from attending the university because of tuition hikes, students may feel differently. In today's world, a college education is necessary for people to achieve their goals. Consequently, they are willing to accumulate debt in order to receive an education; the state and the regents should do everything in their power to prevent this.

As tuition prices race inexorably down the fast track to unaffordability, it is up to the regents to put on the brakes before we zoom right past any possibility of affordable education.

Bigger isn't necessarily better

When I was in Japan 10 years ago, I came to the realization that everything in the United States was enormous. Too enormous. Absurd, actually.

I was starving and a bit apprehensive about my first taste of authentic Japanese food. I was sitting at a tiny table with another American and the Japanese family that I was to live with during my time in Kofu, a city approximately five hours away from Tokyo. A plate was set down in front of me with a bit of rice and a sliver of fish on it. I licked my lips and devoured what was before me. To be honest, I felt pretty full, but I never listened to my stomach. I was expecting a second course, maybe even a third. That was all I had to eat that night, and I went to bed with my stomach full, but my mind hungry for more.

The next couple weeks proved to me that everything in Kofu was on a much smaller scale than the United States. I began to wonder, though, if the scale with which my country measured with was a bit excessive. Take, for example, the houses. Japanese residences were certainly not crammed or unbearable in any way, it was just that every space was used and lived in. This was much different from anything I had ever seen back in my own country. Guest bedrooms, libraries, and playrooms for little children didn't seem to exist in Kofu. The more I thought about it, the more I realized I couldn't remember the last time I had set foot in our sun-room or when we had last used our dining room.

The cars seemed miniature in comparison with the gigantic Jeep that my mother drove back home. They did the trick, though, and the Japanese never insisted on anything larger than a car with more room than they could fill.

My realization in Japan regarding my country's attempt to satisfy an endless desire for more was only reinforced when I traveled to Europe. I arrived with a gigantic bag and a small backpack and found myself unable to fit into the elevator when I first arrived at my apartment. It was actually hilarious because there was not another individual in the elevator with me. I couldn't even turn around.

I used the elevator every day (my apartment was on the seventh floor) and found it to be quite strange when there was another individual in there with me. Our arms would surely be touching and our noses inches away from each other. After much time in the elevator, I realized that being this close to another individual did not hurt me and that I should not let it faze me, as it certainly did not bother the people who lived in the building.

As for the clothes I bought, I was flabbergasted to find that I could not fit one thigh (forgot two) into any of the skirts or pants. A size large would have fit my 6-year old cousin. I imagine this is because Americans are physically bigger. And we just might be that much bigger because we constantly feel as though we need to feed ourselves more to satisfy a craving that can never be fully satisfied. What we need to do is acknowledge what we have right under our noses.

Let me explain the beds in Europe. I am used to sprawling out in my double bed with two comfy blankets and six pillows. (My roommates think I am a bit of a princess. After contemplating this idea, I am afraid they might be right.) It was a rude awakening to be given a tiny bed and a single pillow in Spain. But you know what? I slept like a baby every night. Maybe even better there than I do here. This forced me to realize that extravagance certainly does not fulfill what it is we are looking for in life.

When we consider the reality of gigantic stores such as Sam's Club, one that seems to define a culture where you can never get enough, we must ask ourselves, "Will we truly use that 10 pounds of relish, or will it sit in our pantry for a year along with everything else we forget about back there?"

Germany may deny U.S. bases

BY PAUL RICHTER
LOS ANGELES TIMES

WASHINGTON — Chilled by a frigid reception from the Bush administration during a visit here, German Foreign Minister Joschka Fischer said Thursday his nation hadn't decided whether U.S. forces would be allowed to use bases in Germany if the United States launched a war against Iraq.

It would be almost unthinkable for such an important NATO ally to deny the United States access to bases that have played a key role in U.S. military action in the Middle East in recent decades. But Fischer's comments underscored how little progress Berlin has made toward repairing relations ruptured after German Chancellor Gerhard Schröder made statements during his re-election campaign opposing a war with Iraq.

In a breakfast with reporters, Fischer stressed his hopes for an improvement in relations. But when asked about use of the U.S. bases, he noted that Germany had said it would "play no role" in military action, adding that the question is at this point a "theoretical one" that must be "discussed and decided when we reach the situation."

Fischer's visit, the first by a high-level official since the German elections in September, was expected to be a fence-mending session. But although Secretary of State Colin Powell was supportive after the two men met Wednesday, the White House delivered a highly public rebuff by refusing Fischer's request for a meeting with top-level presidential aides.

As Fischer left Thursday, administration officials said they wanted to send a message that

Lawrence Jackson/Associated Press
U.S. Secretary of State Colin Powell and German Foreign Minister Joschka Fischer, left, answer questions outside the State Department on Wednesday immediately following their meeting.

the United States would not sit still if foreign leaders sought to build political support by turning to the kind of anti-Americanism that they said Schröder displayed during his campaign.

Schröder was re-elected after declaring that Germany should not take part in a war against Iraq he considered unnecessary. Those comments, combined with reports that Schröder's former justice minister, Herta and Paul Amirian, told a crowd that Bush was like Hitler in trying to distract his public from economic problems with a foreign war, enraged the Bush administration. Daeubler-Gmelin subsequently denied making the Hitler comparison. Nonetheless, Bush refused to make the usual congratulatory phone call to Schröder when he was re-elected. Fischer, before leaving Berlin, told reporters that the trip to Washington was "no pilgrimage of repentance."

Several analysts said that because Schröder campaigned against joining the U.S.-led war, Fischer couldn't say that the Germans would allow use of the bases without damaging the government's credibility.

If Bush receives U.N. support for a campaign against Iraq, Germany would be unlikely to forbid use of the bases, they said.

Sniper suspects linked to Baton Rouge killing

BY GAIL GIBSON
BALTIMORE SUN

The cross-country death toll that police attribute to an Army veteran and his teenage traveling companion reached 13 Thursday as authorities in Baton Rouge, La., linked the rifle used in the Washington-area sniper slayings to the unsolved killing of a beauty-shop worker in late September.

Law-enforcement officials say the number could continue to climb. Police across the country are reviewing unsolved crimes to see if they could be the work of the two suspects in the sniper case who authorities say left a deadly trail in five states and

Washington, D.C., as they traveled from the West Coast to Maryland.

The new discoveries could allow police to solve cases gone cold, but they further complicate the work of Justice Department officials in Washington, who are determining where John Allen Muhammad, 41, and Lee Boyd Malvo, 17, should stand trial first. The pair now face a long list of state and federal charges that could bring the death penalty.

U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft said investigators "are not ruling out" the possibility that other people could be involved in the shootings or that the two suspects had committed other crimes.

"We will proceed deliberately, cautiously and not jump to any conclusions," Ashcroft said in Washington. "The facts and the evidence will determine the final outcome, and we intend to follow the facts wherever they may lead."

Louisiana — Muhammad's home state — became the latest to stake a claim to the suspects.

Baton Rouge Police Chief Pat Engle said first-degree murder warrants were issued Thursday for Muhammad and Malvo in the killing of Hong Im Ballenger, 45, on Sept. 23 — two days after a similar attack linked to the pair in Alabama and about a week before a string of sniper attacks began terrorizing the D.C. area.

Stakes on abortion high, groups say

BY DAVID CRARY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

National security and a fitful economy are debated constantly on the campaign trail these days, but an issue barely mentioned by the major parties — abortion — is proving to be among the most divisive in several Senate races that could affect the future of abortion rights.

With control of the Senate up for grabs Nov. 5, both sides in the abortion debate consider the stakes momentous. A return to Republican control, they agree, could result in the next Supreme Court vacancy going to a justice who would tilt the court toward more restrictions on abortion.

"For Americans who are pro-choice, it's a very scary thought," said Mary Jane Gallagher, the executive vice president of the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League, which has spent $3.5 million on campaign ads in recent weeks.

"If we lose the Senate, we're going to lose the Supreme Court, and then a woman's right to choose is clearly at risk," Gallagher said.

Ken Connor, the president of the conservative Family

Research Council, said the pro-choice group and its allies have succeeded in raising money by "creating an atmosphere of hysteria."

Yet he shared the group's view about the election's high stakes.

"The pro-abortion lobby is concerned that the right to abortion is in jeopardy, and it may well be — if President Bush succeeds in appointing judges who interpret the Constitution rather than rewrite it," Connor said.

He envisions a Republican-controlled Senate confirming a Bush nominee to the Supreme Court who would then help overturn the 1973 Roe v. Wade ruling that legalized abortion nationally. That would return the matter to state legislatures to make their own decisions.

With both major parties wooing middle-of-the-road voters on economic and security matters, abortion is among a relatively small group of issues producing stark contrasts between candidates in pivotal races.

Among the neck-and-neck Senate contests, those in New Hampshire, Colorado, and Missouri pit a Democrat who supports abortion rights against a Republican who opposes abortion in most or all cases.

The same pattern holds true in several other states where one candidate has an edge but the race is still considered competitive — including Georgia, Iowa, North Carolina, Oregon, and Texas.

Sen. Paul Wellstone, the Minnesota Democrat killed in a plane crash last week, was one of the abortion-rights movement's staunchest supporters. His replacement, Walter Mondale, also backs abortion rights, while the Republican candidate, Norm Coleman, quit the Democratic Party partly because he opposes abortion.

Of the Democrats in close Senate races, Arkansas Attorney General Mark Pryor has probably struggled most with the issue. He described himself as "pro-choice" in 1998 but said this year he won't accept any label because abortion is complex. Sen. Tim Hutchinson, the Republican incumbent, said Pryor is taking "four sides on a two-sided issue."

In New Jersey, Republican candidate Douglas Forrester also has struggled to define his stance. He describes himself as supporting abortion rights, but has drawn fire from groups like abortion-rights league because he opposes public funding of abortions.

ONE OF OUR GOALS IS TO

YOU'D LIKE TO JOIN?

Don't get us wrong. We are not in favor of drug use. However, Prohibition taught us making drugs illegal doesn't make people stop using them. But it does keep criminals in business by keeping prices and profits high. In Holland and other countries, legalization has not only decreased crime, but addiction levels as well. Something the hundreds of billions we've spent on the war on drugs hasn't accomplished.

The way to win this war is to understand who the real enemy is: not the people who take drugs, but the lawmakers who turn them into criminals by passing anti-dug laws. We're not looking to turn our country into dopeheads. We'd settle for getting the dopes in Des Moines and Washington to stop legislating peoples' lives and realize there are better ways to spend our tax dollars.

No plans to replace Kinnick Stadium

There are no plans to replace Kinnick Stadium in the foreseeable future, Athletics Director Bob Bowsby said Wednesday in his report to the Board in Control of Athletics.

However, Bowsby laid out preliminary plans to renovate the 74-year old structure.

Although the stadium's electric, sewage, water, and concession needs all will eventually be addressed, the most pressing issue is the south end zone seating area, Bowsby said.

Bowsby

A wood-and-brick structure erected in 1956, the south bleachers need to be replaced within the next three to five years to meet building code.

Bowsby estimated the cost of such a venture to be around $20 million. To help pay for the renovation, additional premium private seating could be built where the press box currently sits.

Bowsby put to rest any rumors of a new football stadium, saying that the $350 million to $400 million such a facility would cost to build is prohibitive. "We have no desire to move anywhere else," he said. "We'd rather refurbish than rebuild whenever possible."

Emotional high

No. 9 Hawkeyes will be more than ready for rival Wisconsin

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
 THE DAILY IOWAN

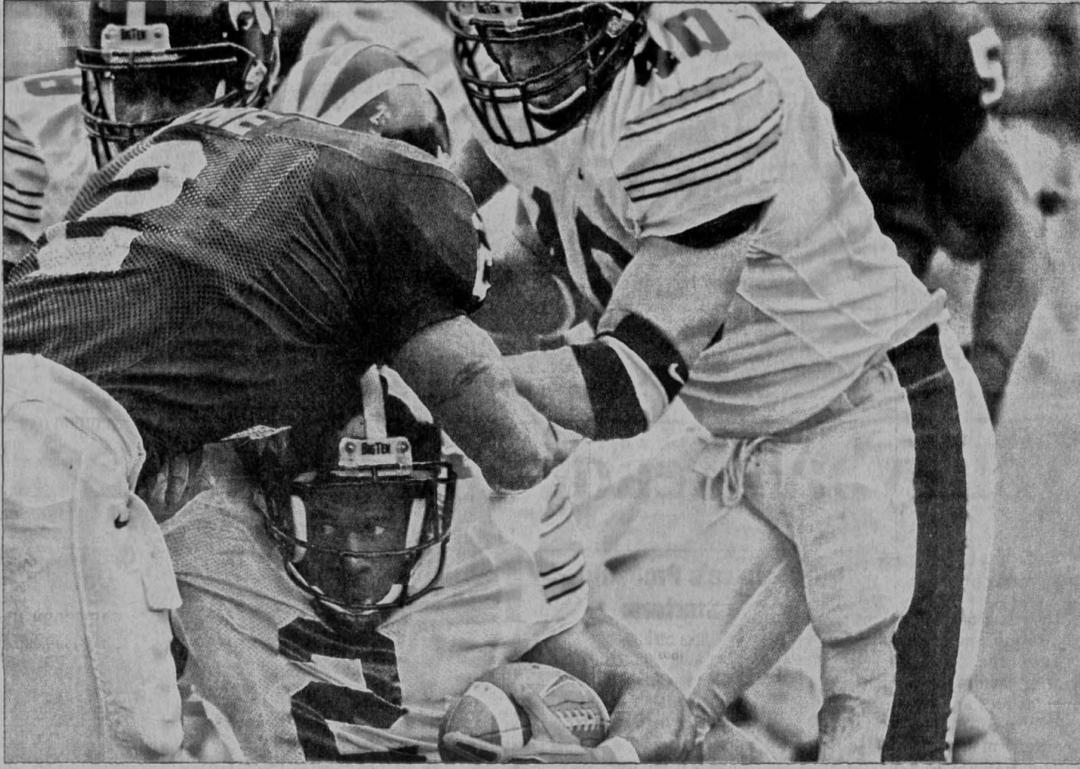

Iowa defensive tackle Colin Cole said no one gave Iowa much of a chance to beat Michigan Oct. 26.

Well Colin, everyone agrees the No. 9 Hawkeyes have much better prospects this week against Wisconsin. Coming off the emotional high of beating the Wolverines on the road, could that lead to a letdown against the Badgers?

"I don't think so at all," Cole said. "We all have the same goal in mind and we know every day, every time we step on the field, every time we go into the weight room that it is a chance to get better and we have to utilize every chance we have to get better."

"We're not the top team in the nation right now and to get there we have to do all we can to prepare."

Sounds like the Hawkeyes will be more than ready to play when their heated rivals from Madison take the field at Kinnick Stadium Saturday morning. And that's a good thing, given that if there's one team in the Big Ten that has proven it has Iowa's

Robinson debuts with 30 points in Atlanta victory

ATLANTA (AP) — Glenn Robinson scored 30 points and Jason Terry added 21 points and 13 assists as the Atlanta Hawks beat the Utah Jazz 105-98 in their home opener Thursday night.

Robinson, who came to Atlanta in an offseason trade with Milwaukee, had 34 points, 10 rebounds and eight assists in his Hawks debut Wednesday night — a 104-95 loss at New Jersey in the season opener.

Shareef Abdur-Rahim, who missed the opener with a sore back, scored 10 of Atlanta's points in a 15-6 run at the start of the third period for a 65-52 lead.

The Hawks had their largest lead at 75-57 on a basket by Theo Ratliff with 3:39 left in the third and led 77-63 entering the final period.

The Jazz never got closer than seven points at 101-94. That came with 37 seconds left on a 3-pointer by John Stockton.

Karl Malone led Utah with 20 points. Matt Harpring added 19 and Jarron Collins had 18.

Robinson scored 18 points to help Atlanta take a 50-46 halftime lead.

Jordan shakes off rusty start for 21 points in 21 minutes

WASHINGTON — Michael Jordan and the Washington Wizards handed the Boston Celtics their worst defeat in franchise history.

Jerry Stackhouse led the Wizards with 22 points and 10 assists.

Shaking off a rusty performance that made him look his age the night before, Jordan scored 21 points in 21 minutes as the Wizards beat the Celtics 114-69 Thursday night.

The 45-point loss topped Boston's previous worst of 42 points, a 128-84 loss at Portland on Jan. 4, 1977. It was the third-biggest margin of victory in Wizards history.

Jordan capped the first half with a flourish. He made his second free throw, raced to his right to steal the inbounds pass, pumped and made a 21-foot jump shot — complete with a little cancan kick — just before the halftime buzzer. He left the court with a big smile to thunderous applause.

In the second half, he helped

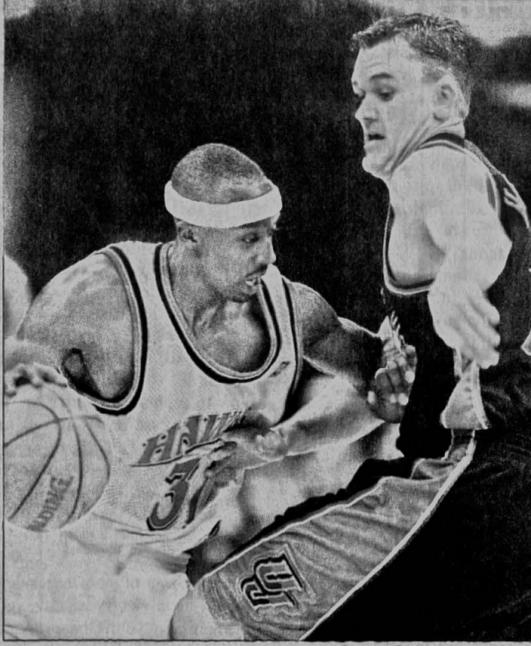

Washington rub it in.

Jordan scored just eight points and missed a dunk in the second half of Wednesday's season-opening loss at Toronto, but he passed that tally in the second half alone against the Celtics. The 39-year-old guard shot 8-of-15 from the field and 5-of-5 from the free-throw line. He had four rebounds and five assists.

Kwame Brown, a disappointment as the No. 1 overall pick in the draft a year ago, had his second solid game in a row. He set the defensive tone with four blocks in the first quarter and finished with 20 points, six rebounds and six blocks.

The Celtics shot just 30 percent one night after they lost their opener at home to Chicago. Antoine Walker scored 12 points and was just 5-16 from the field, and Paul Pierce scored 12 points and was 3-16. Walker is 10-39 in two games.

The Wizards missed their first six shots and trailed by seven early, but it was the Celtics who couldn't hit a basket most of the game. Boston chucked long ones and watched them clank off the iron.

Atlanta's Jason Terry drives past Utah's Matt Harpring during the first quarter at Philips Arena in Atlanta.

CROSS-COUNTRY BIG TEN CHAMPIONSHIPS

Iowa women prepared to make conference impact

BY MICHELLE YONG
 THE DAILY IOWAN

It's finally time.

The Iowa women's cross-country team has been waiting all season for the Big Ten championships. Last year the Hawkeyes finished their season with an unsettled feeling in their stomachs after finishing last in the Big Ten.

Not only are the Hawkeyes going into the championships with high hopes, they have something to show for their season thus far. After placing seventh at the Auburn Invitational on Oct. 19, Iowa broke into the 10th place ranking in the NCAA Midwest Regional poll.

Coach Wayne Angel feels the Hawkeyes are ready to race and move up in the Big Ten.

"They are in the best shape of their lives," Angel said. "Their attitudes are great and their confidence levels are high."

In order to move up in the Big Ten, the Hawkeyes will have to defeat a handful of teams that are ranked in the top 30 of the Finishlynx NCAA women's cross-country national poll.

The top teams include Wisconsin (No. 9), Indiana (No. 18), Michigan State (No. 23), Michigan (No. 24), and Northwestern (No. 27). Michigan State was last year's Big Ten champion.

Wisconsin coach, Peter Tegen is looking for his team to use their heads during the race.

"We have to use some novel approaches to racing," said Tegen. "We will have to do some very, very smart racing. I do not necessarily think it is going to come down to whoever is actually physically best suited to win the championship. I think it is going to be up higher than the legs. It is

Men in search of at-large points at championships

BY JEROD LEUPOLD
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Hawkeye runners look to tackle a stacked field of Big Ten titans this weekend at the Big Ten championships in West Lafayette, Ind., on Nov. 3.

The Big Ten boasts seven top 30 teams in the nation, including a solid No. 29 Iowa.

"It looks good for us," coach Larry Wiecek said. "We're going in there with a fighting chance. That's all you can ask for. It's a real dogfight."

Iowa will be grappling with the Badgers, Wolverines, and Gophers — the top three teams in the conference at Nos. 11, 12, and 15 nationally. Further tightening the field is Illinois, which finished only 100 points behind Iowa at the Roy Griak Invitational.

This is also the third matchup against nationally ranked rivals No. 20

Ohio State and No. 23 Michigan State. The Hawkeyes have split 1-and-1 with both teams.

Iowa senior Joe Welter said that it never matters whom they race: The Hawkeyes always try their best.

Iowa must finish high to keep accumulating at-large points. The Big Ten is a unique conference because it's divided into three regions. Most conferences, like the PAC-10, fall completely in one. This gives the Hawkeyes another go at out-of-region opponents, which is essential for at-large points. Enough points will improve on Iowa's standing for NCAA championships and get them back to Terra Haute for the national race.

As it stands, Iowa is No. 3 in the Midwest Region, trailing Minnesota and Oklahoma State. While the Hawkeyes

Volleyball ready for second half

BY ALI NOLLER
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Despite a notable vacancy in the lineup, the Iowa volleyball team surges into the second half of conference competition tonight as they travel to Purdue for a 6 p.m. matchup with the Boilermakers.

The Hawkeyes have faced each of their Big Ten foes at this point in the season, and bring a 2-8 record to tonight's duel. Gone from the Iowa arsenal is junior Renee Hill, who suffered a season-ending knee injury early in game three of Iowa's Oct. 27 match with Ohio State. Hill has been a potent force for the Hawkeyes in each of her three years at Iowa, leading the team in kills this season with a 3.76 average per game.

Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett said despite the loss of Hill, she still remains confident that her team can win Big Ten matches.

"The team has been responding well to the adjustments we have had to make," Buck-Crockett said. "We are definitely going to feel that Renee is not there, but this is a time for our other team leaders to step up."

Luckily for the Hawkeyes, their weekend competition is with a pair of teams they have defeated this season.

The Hawkeyes downed Purdue in Iowa City in four games, and had a similar outcome against Illinois in their earlier season matchup.

Hill will be replaced by a collection of Hawkeye athletes: Echaka Agba will slide over to take her outside hitter position, Amoreena Reynolds will step in to aid the offensive attack, and Evelena Orenelas will take over Hill's defensive specialist duties.

Buck-Crockett said this group of players can combine to dilute the loss of Hill, who will remain in Iowa City over the weekend to undergo an MRI to determine the severity of her injury.

In addition to the lineup changes, the Hawkeyes will look to sophomore Laura Simpson, who had a strong outing with Indiana Oct. 25. Simpson tallied 17 kills and 11 digs for her third double-double of the season, while teammate Pam Kavadas leads the team in digs with 3.53.

Other key players necessary for an Iowa victory include veteran hitter Kelli Chesnut and setter Jitka Stehnova. Chesnut has been a force in the front row for the Hawkeyes all season, and Stehnova is averaging 11.51 assists per game for Iowa.

 Iowa's Lauren Simpson spikes the ball in the Hawkeyes' Oct. 16 loss to Minnesota at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Boilermakers are 9-13 overall, and recently suffered losses at Michigan and Michigan State to stretch their conference losing streak. Purdue is led by hitter Joanna Lowry, who is currently averaging 3.88 kills per game. Following this stretch of road games, the Hawkeyes will return to Iowa City on Nov. 8 against Wisconsin.

Singh inches away from hole-in-one, tied for lead

BY DOUG FERGUSON

ATLANTA — Vijay Singh hit a 5-wood within 8 inches of a hole-in-one on East Lake's tough finishing hole Thursday, giving him a 5-under 65 and a share of the lead with Steve Lowery after the first round of the Tour Championship.

Singh's score wasn't as good as the course-record 63 he had four years ago in the first round of the season-ending tournament, but he had no complaints — especially with his finish.

The 232-yard hole is uphill and played into a cold, stiff breeze.

"I didn't know if I could get there," Singh said. "I hit it dead straight, hard and hoped. And it went dead straight, hard, and I stuck it."

It was one of only two birdies at the par-3 18th. The other belonged to Charles Howell, who had a 66 in his Tour Championship debut.

Scores figured to be low because of heavy rains in the Atlanta area and because the PGA Tour's best 30 players were allowed to lift, clean, and place their balls in the fairway. That was the cause of low scoring on tour the last two weeks.

Cold, swirling winds kept it challenging through a sunny day, and made it particularly frustrating for Tiger Woods.

His 3-iron into the 18th came up 80 feet short, and he missed a 6-foot par putt. That gave him a 71, the first time in 21 rounds he has failed to break par dating to his 81 in the third round of the British Open.

Worse yet was his 7-iron from 162 yards on the par-3 sixth that bounced off the back of the green and into the lake and led to his first double bogey since the third round of the Buick Open, ending a streak of 328 holes with nothing worse than a bogey.

"I got fooled," Woods said.

Woods played with Phil Mickelson, No. 2 in the world and on the PGA Tour money list, for the first time this year. Mickelson didn't fare much better, making bogeys on two of the last three holes for an even-par 70.

The last time Woods and Mickelson played together is believed to be the final round of the 2001 Masters, when Woods won his fourth-straight major.

The round began with laughter.

The starter was reading off all five of Woods' victories on the PGA Tour this year when Mickelson playfully cut her off. "All right, all right," Mickelson said, acting as though he had heard enough.

Neither produced flawless golf, although it was entertaining. Woods made a 15-foot birdie from the collar of the rough on No. 5 by using his 3-wood, a two-stroke swing when Mickelson flubbed a flop shot into the rough and made bogey.

Lefty came back with a three-shot swing on No. 6 when he holed a 15-foot birdie putt after Woods hit his tee shot into the water.

Lowery's excitement came even before he teed off.

He missed the cut last week in the Buick Challenge and worried that he might not even qualify for the Tour Championship. He wound up dropping only one spot on the money list to No. 29, came to East Lake and then shot a 60 during the soggy pro-am Tuesday.

"I shot 29 on the back and 31 on the front," Lowery said of the pro-am. "I shot 31 on the front again, but I could not find that 29 today."

Still, it was good enough for a 65, a good start for one of six players in the field still searching for their first PGA Tour victory this year.

Singh already won in Houston, but he has a score to settle with East Lake.

He was poised to win the Tour Championship in 1998 until his tee shot on the 72nd hole went over the green and into thick rough, leading to a bogey. Hal Sutton beat him on the first playoff hole.

"It took me a while to get over that one, especially the shot I hit on 18," Singh said. "I would like to win this event, especially, and on this golf course, because I've had two good finishes. We'll see on Sunday what happens."

Singh and Howell were the only players without a bogey at East Lake.

Howell looked like he might stumble on 17 until he two-putted from 65 feet, holing a 7-footer for par. He hit 2-iron to the 18th and made a 20-foot birdie putt.

"The two-putt at 17 was more important than the birdie at 18," Howell said. "It was really tough to read that putt with all the shadows. We might have taken three minutes to read that putt and I still didn't get it exactly right."

Fred Funk had a 67, while Shigeki Maruyama had 68 despite bogeys on his last two holes and that he hadn't played in six weeks because of a shoulder injury.

Defending champion Annika Sorenstam of Sweden shows her dejection after an upset 2 and 1 loss to Japan's Chieko Amanuma at the Ladies Match Play Championship.

Sorenstam, Pak upset in Ladies Match tourney

BY JIM ARMSTRONG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NARITA, Japan — Annika Sorenstam and Se Ri Pak tumbled out of the World Ladies Match Play Championship on Thursday, losing first-round matches to lightly regarded Japanese opponents.

Sorenstam, the 2001 champion who has nine LPGA Tour victories this year, lost 2 and 1 to Chieko Amanuma, ranked last among the 16 Japan LPGA Tour players in the 32-woman field.

"I just didn't make anything today," said Sorenstam, who had three bogeys and one birdie in 17 holes. "In match play, you've got to make birdies, and I just didn't make them."

Sorenstam lost Nos. 11 and 13 to fall three down. She cut the deficit to two with a birdie on the par-3 16th, but lost the match when Amanuma matched her par on No. 17.

"I hit the ball well today but just didn't make a single putt," Sorenstam said. "I wish I had an excuse, but I don't."

Pak, coming off her fifth tour victory of the year last week in her native South Korea, lost 1-up to Japan's Takayo Bandoh.

Pak won the 17th hole to pull within one, but Bandoh ended the match with a 15-foot birdie putt on No. 18.

After the first nine holes, Pak saw that Sorenstam was on her way toward losing her own match.

"It's just too bad for both of us," Pak said. I think we're tired after last week, and the grass here is different, so that makes things change. I don't know what I'm going to do here the rest of the week."

LPGA Tour and Japan LPGA players faced each other in all 16 first-round matches, with the LPGA Tour's Karrie Webb, Rosie Jones, Hee-Won Han, Laura Diaz, Lorie Kane, Kelly Robbins, Cristie Kerr, Michele Redman, Carin Koch, and Grace Park advancing.

Webb, the Australia star seeking her third victory of the year, beat Taiwan's Hsui Feng-tseng 3 and 2 to set up a second-round match with Park, a 4 and 3 winner over Japan's Mikino Kubo.

"There were a little bit of nerves early. It took me a few holes to settle in, but I came back and won the next three holes, which helped me settle down," Webb said.

Yuri Fudo, the Japan LPGA's top-ranked player, beat Beth Bauer 3 and 2. Fudo will play the winner of a match between Australia's Rachel Teske and Taiwan's Yu-Chen Huang. They were all square through 27 holes when play was stopped because of darkness.

Jones and Kane routed their Japanese opponents, with Jones beating Mihoko Takahashi 5 and 4, and Kane topping Orié Fujino 7 and 6 on the Narita Golf Club course.

Badgers' QB Bollinger utilizes talents

number, it's Wisconsin. "We're going to have to be real smart about how we play," said Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz, who is 0-3 against the Badgers since being named head coach in 1999. In fact, the Hawkeyes have not beaten the Badgers in their last five meetings, dating back to 1996. That fact doesn't sit well with Iowa's seniors who already will close out their careers never having beaten one of their rivals, Iowa State. That has given the Hawkeyes yet another bit of incentive to work hard during the week in hopes of avoiding a breakdown this weekend. "We've certainly been in some games [with Wisconsin] where we felt like we were capable of winning but for whatever reason they made the plays and we didn't," said Iowa center Bruce Nelson. Wisconsin comes to Iowa City on the heels of what many feel was a breakthrough game for the 6-3 Badgers after handing Michigan State a 42-24 defeat in East Lansing. Much of Wisconsin's recent success involves the reemergence of senior quarterback Brooks Bollinger. Bollinger tossed three touchdown passes against the Spartans and ran for two more. He certainly poses a problem for opposing defenses when it comes to lining up against him. "Bollinger can run, he can run and he does," Ferentz said. "We probably can deal with that a little better than in the past but he sure plays well every time he sees us." Bollinger may opt to throw the ball against the Hawkeyes rather than face the nations second best run defense, but running back Anthony Davis doesn't have that luxury. Davis, who compiled 142 yards against Iowa last season during Wisconsin's 34-28 victory over the Hawkeyes, is just 33 yards from surpassing the 1,000 yard mark this season. "I really think Anthony is running very, very hard and seeing things very well," said Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez. The same could be said about Iowa's Jermelle Lewis, who may find himself starting in the place of the injured Fred Russell this weekend. Lewis, elevated to the No. 2 spot following the departure of Aaron Greiving, rushed for 109 yards in relief of Russell against Michigan. Russell's status remains questionable due to an injury to his right hand and a sore left shoulder. "Fred's our starter," Ferentz said. "If he's ready to roll, we'll put him out there." As for Lewis, the coach said while he has made some rookie mistakes the sophomore will be a more than capable replacement for the Big Ten's fourth leading rusher if need be. "The good thing is that he learns from things that go against him. If players are demonstrating that they are learning from their experiences, it's hard to complain about that." Wisconsin notes: Managers from both teams will compete in a football game this evening for "The Rusty Toolbox." Iowa's manager's have won the last three meetings ... The Badgers have not won three consecutive meetings against the Hawkeyes in Iowa City since winning contests in 1912, 1925, and 1928 ... A victory Saturday would make the Badgers bowl-eligible... If Davis reaches the 1,000 yard mark this season he would join former Heisman Trophy winner Ron Dayne as the only UW players to reach the mark in their first two seasons of play ... Wide receiver Jonathan Orr has a touchdown catch in each of the Badgers' last five games making him the first player to do so since former NFL All-Pro Al Toon in 1983 ... Wisconsin's seven turnovers lost this season are tied for fewest in the nation.

Field hockey readies for tournament time

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa field hockey team is nearing the end of the road on their regular season schedule.

Sunday the Hawkeyes will travel to State College to take on Penn State for their last game before the Big Ten tournament.

Depending on this week's outcome in the final week of Big Ten competition, Iowa could have as high as a No. 3 spot in the conference, or as low as a No. 5 seed. If the Hawkeyes come away with a win, and Ohio State suffers a loss to powerhouse Michigan State, then the Hawks will grab the No. 3 conference rank.

"[The ranking] will make a huge difference," said junior Pattie Gillern.

Beating the Nittany Lions will be no easy task, however. The No. 6 ranked team stands at 13-3 overall (3-2 in the Big Ten), and is coming off a huge upset victory over the No. 1 team Old Dominion last weekend.

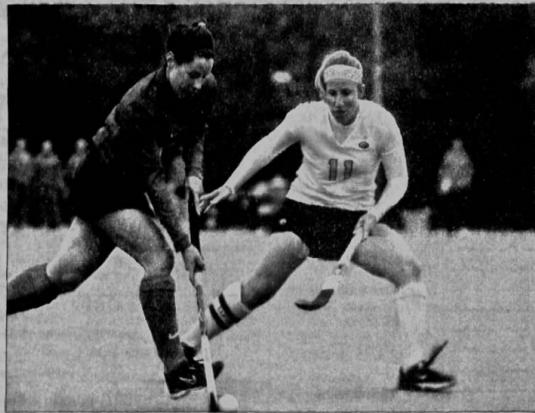

The No. 13-ranked Hawkeyes are on the opposite end of the spectrum. Iowa suffered a 1-0 double overtime loss to unranked Ohio State in their most recent game on their home turf.

"So far we've had our ups and downs, but we're improving with losses," Gillern said. "Especially since Ohio State we've made a lot of improvement."

Gillern has proven to be a strong offensive threat for the Hawkeyes this season, with five goals and two assists on the season.

The Hawkeyes have high hopes for the Penn State game, especially after a good week of practice.

"We had two really good practices," said coach Tracey

Ben Plank/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Tiffany Leister defends against an Ohio State player during the first half of Iowa's final home game of the year.

Griesbaum. "They know they still have another chance to beat a top six team in the country."

Out of the Hawkeyes' six losses this season, five have been to ranked opponents.

The Penn State offense contains a strong balanced attack, with six players in the double-digits in points. Heather Conroy leads the way with 35 points on 15 goals and five assists. She is the Big Ten's leading scorer with 11 points.

The defense is led by 2001 Big Ten Defensive Player of the Year Jill Martz. Goalkeeper Annie Zinkovich boasts a 1.31 goals allowed per game average.

If they Hawkeyes come away with a win, they will face either Northwestern or Indiana, the two lowest seeds in the conference, in the first round of the Big Ten Tournament.

"We know we need to win this game," said Iowa's junior Lindsay Miller. Miller quietly helped take charge of Iowa's offense. Although she has only taken 20 shots on goal, only the fourth most on the team, she is tied for second with 12 points on four goals and four assists.

Although they will not be playing at home, the Hawkeyes expect a good-sized crowd, since a majority of the players are from the East Coast.

A win for the Hawkeyes would make for a good ending to their regular season.

"I think there's a big difference between 3-3 in the Big Ten and 2-4," said Griesbaum. "I just think it sounds different."

The matchup against the Nittany Lions begins at 11 a.m. on Sunday.

Big Ten tournament play begins Nov. 8-10 in Columbus, Ohio.

O'Keeffe looks for Bagi to lead swim team this weekend

BY DREW MANROE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Junior Michelle Bagi's stand-out performance for the Iowa women's swimming team against Wisconsin on Oct. 25-26 has not gone unrecognized.

Bagi was the Hawkeyes' only non-diver to win an event — the 100-butterfly — and coach Garland O'Keeffe rewarded her with the Hawk of the Week award.

"I was so excited that I got Hawk of the Week," Bagi said. "I've never gotten it before. [O'Keeffe] told me, 'You're our new go-to person on butterfly.' It's really exciting that I'm swimming so fast this early in the season."

O'Keeffe is looking for another solid showing from Bagi tonight when the Hawkeyes face Purdue and Miami of Ohio at 6 p.m., in Lafayette, Indiana.

"Michelle winning that 100-fly was an outstanding swim for us," O'Keeffe said. "She's been practicing real well, and we're going to count on her in the 100-fly now."

The Hawkeyes said tonight's match would be more even than the 225-127 rout the Badgers inflicted on Iowa last week.

Wisconsin finished third in the Big Ten championships last year, and returned almost all of its key swimmers. The Boiler-makers finished 6th, just one spot ahead of Iowa.

But the Hawkeyes are still expecting a difficult meet.

"We were gaining on Purdue the last day [of last season's Big Ten championships] and they're the next Big Ten team we're looking to take on," O'Keeffe said. "But Purdue's a tough, tough team. They always race tough, especially early in the year. In the past, we've improved throughout the year and we get closer to them come Big Ten time. We always seem to have a hard time with them early in the season."

"But then again, we've started out a little bit faster than we typically have, so I think it's going to be a really good meet."

Purdue just competed against Notre Dame on Oct. 30, tying the Fighting Irish 150-150, and O'Keeffe hoped this would work in the Hawkeyes' favor.

And while the Hawkeyes expect their greatest competition to come from Purdue, O'Keeffe didn't underestimate Miami of Ohio's ability to stick with the Big Ten teams.

"Purdue's a stronger team," O'Keeffe said. "But Miami of Ohio won the Mid-American Conference last season, and their dual-meet record was 14-1. It's not going to be an easy meet ... I think this is going to be a pretty even match for all three teams."

Senior Erin Strub said this meet should help the team's underclassmen understand the immense potential she sees in the team.

"Purdue's very good," Strub said. "But I think we're going to amaze ourselves this year. I don't think our freshmen and sophomores realize what we can do."

"We can beat anybody." E-MAIL: DI REPORTER DREW MANROE AT: DREWMANROE@YAHOO.COM

Men's swimming tries to rebound

BY KATIE LOW
THE DAILY IOWAN

The men's swimming team hopes to get on the winning track this weekend as they travel to Indiana and Purdue for two important Big Ten matchups.

The Hawkeyes were unable to contain a fiery Wisconsin team last weekend when they fell to the Badgers, 211-140.

"Our guys performed well against a tough Wisconsin team," coach John Davey said. "We are swimming faster than we were at this time last year. That means training is going well."

Iowa's only victory against Wisconsin came in the 3-meter diving event. Iowa's Roberto Gutierrez, Timo Klami, and John Singer swept the event. Iowa did, however, record 11 second-place finishes. Junior Jason Snider swam well, securing second in the 200-butterfly, the 100-butterfly and the 200-individual medley. Snider was also a member of the 200-freestyle relay, the 200-medley relay, and the 400-medley relay, each of which finished second.

Iowa faces tough competition again this weekend in Indiana and Purdue. Both teams have been strong in the past and are expected to remain a force in the Big Ten again this season.

Indiana boasts a record of 2-0 coming into the meet with Iowa. The Hoosiers defeated non-conference rival Evansville, 135-106 in Bloomington. They also defeated Michigan State at home Oct. 25, 129-104, capturing first in 12 of 13 events.

"Indiana has historically been a very strong swimming team and this year is no exception," assistant coach Aaron Hawks said. "From the sprints to the distance events to the diving, they do an excellent job of preparing for each weekend. We are just going to try to match up with them the best we can on Friday. Our guys took some steps forward last weekend, but there is a lot of swimming to do before the Big Ten and NCAA Championships."

Purdue also enters the weekend undefeated, as they defeated Ball State to win the Indiana Intercollegiate championship Oct. 26.

"Purdue also presents multiple challenges for our team," Hawks said. "Their breaststrokers are some of the best in the Big Ten Conference and they always swim well at home."

Flyers run up the score against hapless Coyotes

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Michal Handzus and Kim Johnsson scored 2:05 apart in the second period, leading the Philadelphia Flyers to a 6-2 victory over the Phoenix Coyotes on Thursday night.

Eric Desjardins, Mark Recchi, Dennis Seidenberg, and Jeremy Roenick also scored for Philadelphia.

Flyers goaltender Robert Esche had 18 saves to beat his former team. Brian Boucher was shaky, allowing six goals on 35 shots.

Trailing 2-1 midway through the second period, the Flyers tied it when Johnsson lifted a shot over Boucher's shoulder. Handzus then made it 3-2 with a shot through Boucher's five-hole.

Philadelphia put the game away with two goals in the first 1:12 of the third period.

Toronto 3, Atlanta 3, OT

TORONTO — Backup goalie Pasi Nurminen made 32 saves as the winless Atlanta Thrashers avoided their 10th-straight loss with a 3-3 tie against the Toronto Maple Leafs on Thursday night.

Patrik Stefan scored the tying goal at 15:26 of the third period for Thrashers (0-8-1), who are in the throes of a 19-game winless streak that dates to last season.

Atlanta coach Curt Fraser benched star winger Ilya Kovalchuk because of poor defensive play and started Nurminen instead of a struggling Milan Hnilicka.

Nurminen made a spectacular save with 34 seconds left in regulation. Allyn McCauley's shot looked to be going in, but a sprawled Nurminen kicked his leg up and kept the puck out.

Tie Domi, Mats Sundin, and Travis Green scored power-play goals for the Maple Leafs.

Minnesota 2, San Jose 1, OT

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Sergei Zholtok scored his second goal with 9.1 seconds left in overtime to give the Minnesota

Phoenix Coyotes goalie Brian Boucher makes a glove save on a first-period shot by Philadelphia Flyers' Justin Williams.

Wild a 2-1 victory Thursday night over the San Jose Sharks.

Wes Walz's cross-checking penalty with 1:03 left in regulation gave the slumping Sharks a power play for nearly the first minute of overtime, but the Wild killed it.

Minnesota (8-1-2) leads the NHL with 18 points after finishing last in the Northwest Division last season.

With less than 10 seconds remaining, Zholtok jumped on a loose puck and sent it past San Jose goalie Evgeni Nabokov for the win.

Dwayne Roloson made 19 saves for the Wild.

Chicago 2, Los Angeles 1, OT

CHICAGO — Phil Housley scored a power-play goal 1:35 into overtime to give the Chicago Blackhawks a 2-1 win over the Los Angeles Kings on Thursday night.

Housley beat Felix Potvin on a screened shot from the top of the slot as Chicago won its third straight and extended its unbeaten streak to four games.

Rookie Tyler Arnason scored for Chicago with 35 seconds left to force the overtime. Jaroslav Modry scored for the Kings in the second period.

Arnason spoiled Felix Potvin's shutout bid when he swatted in a loose puck from a scrum in the crease. Chicago goalie Jocelyn Thibault was on the bench for a sixth attacker.

Thibault was forced to make several tough saves to keep it 1-0 through two periods.

Anaheim 4, Boston 1

BOSTON — Paul Kariya scored three goals and set up the other as the Anaheim Mighty Ducks beat the Boston Bruins 4-1 Thursday night.

The Ducks grabbed a 1-0 lead on Kariya's power-play goal 6:05 into the opening period when he pushed a shot past goaltender Steve Shields from a scramble in front.

Boston tied it 23 seconds later on Jozef Stumpel's backhand shot off goalie Jean-Sebastien Giguere's back.

Three minutes later, Kariya lifted a backhand shot under the crossbar, making it 3-1 at 15:24. He completed the hat trick on a power play with 2.3 seconds left.

Patriots meet their old quarterback

BY DAVE GOLDBERG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

This is supposed to be a grudge game: Drew Bledsoe and the Buffalo Bills against New England, which traded him away after he lost his job to Tom Brady last season.

But it really isn't. In fact, with the Patriots having lost four straight after starting their post-Super Bowl season with three wins, there are plenty of people in New England who'd like to have Bledsoe back. Even the man who traded him is saying nice things.

"I've always had affection and admiration for Drew," says Patriots owner Robert Kraft. "Except, of course, when he's playing against us."

Kraft might end up admiring Bledsoe anyway when the Bills host the Patriots (3-4). Buffalo is 3-3 after going 3-13 last season, and a victory Sunday might just bury New England in the AFC East. The Bills are favored by 2 1/2 points.

The Bledsoe storyline will be played up right until kickoff, but in the game the quarterback might take a back seat to his running back, Travis Henry. New England is second in the NFL against the pass, but 29th against the run.

Buffalo's defense? The Bills don't play much of that.

Consider this the opposite of the theory about teams with winning streaks. A team that isn't bad enough to lose five straight won't.

Yao Ming disappoints fans in NBA opener

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — In a fitting beginning for soft-spoken Yao Ming, the 7-foot-6 Chinese rookie had a quiet start in his first regular-season appearance for the Houston Rockets.

Yao failed to score, had two rebounds, was called for three fouls and had two rebounds in 11 minutes.

Hornets retire Pete Maravich's jersey

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Hornets played their first regular season game in their new home and retired Pete Maravich's jersey at halftime.

Limo driver's family hits Williams with suit

FLEMINGTON, N.J. (AP) — The family of a limousine driver shot to death inside Jayson Williams' mansion filed a wrongful death lawsuit against the former basketball star.

Nelsons throw season opening part at eatery

DALLAS (AP) — Mavericks head coach Don Nelson and his son, assistant coach Donnie Nelson, served the first night of a two-game suspension dressed in prison "chain gang" uniforms as they watched the season-opener with fans at a restaurant.

The NBA suspended the Nelsons for attending two private workouts in Yugoslavia that included players not eligible for the draft.

Ex-NFL player says league not ready for openly gay members

BY STEVE WILSTEIN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — On too many desperate nights in a life of lies as a gay player in the NFL, Esera Tuaolo drank himself to sleep, hoping he wouldn't wake up.

There were times when he sped away from nightclubs, hating the pretense — the smiling Mr. Aloha, hugging and kissing the ladies in a grand show — thinking as he drove crazily at 100 mph that he could end his torment so easily just by turning the wheel.

Those days are over now that he's come out, telling his story, he says, "so I can live in my truth."

The mammoth, 34-year-old former defensive lineman wants people to accept him for who is and to accept his family in the suburbs of Minneapolis — partner Mitchell Wherley and their 23-month-old twins, Mitchell and Michele, adopted from Tuaolo's native Samoa when they were a week old.

"It's a quest for happiness," he said Wednesday in an interview with the Associated Press. "I want my children to know when they grow up that their father is comfortable with who he is and we don't have anything to hide. It's like a mountain was lifted off my shoulders when I came out. But then I jumped on the scale this morning and I'm still 310 pounds."

Tuaolo's coming out tour of TV shows, newspapers and magazines, two years after retiring from a nine-year career, is more than a personal liberation. He wants to "put a face on the gay football player, break stereotypes, and make people talk." He encourages other gay athletes to reveal themselves when they're ready, though he cautions active NFL players to stay in the closet.

"I really don't think they should come out," he said. "I don't think the NFL is ready for an openly gay player."

Coming out is a tough, deeply personal decision that involves risks for any athlete, especially in team sports. Tuaolo feared that if he had done it while playing he would have been cut and blackballed or become a target for cheap shots on the field, from teammates and opponents.

None of his former teammates have called him since he came out a few days ago on HBO's "Real Sports." Sterling Sharpe, a teammate with Green Bay, told the show that if Tuaolo had come out while playing, "he would have been eaten alive, and he would have been hated for it."

Virtually every part of society has accepted homosexuality but there is not one openly gay player in pro football, basketball, baseball, or hockey. Nothing has changed in those sports, even 25 years after Dave Kopay chronicled his life as a gay NFL running back in the 1960s and early '70s.

As ridiculous and antiquated as it may seem, Tuaolo said, most coaches and players still believe that a gay player would jeopardize team unity and undermine the macho image of the gladiator.

"For those who are still playing in the NFL and struggling with their sexuality, I understand their pain, and I understand why," Tuaolo said. "I never had any opportunity to think that I could come out."

Tuaolo heard the usual locker room jokes about gays, the comments equating weakness with homosexuality, and he would bite his lip and retreat deeper into the closet. To thwart suspicions that he was gay, he acted like the straight jocks, going to strip clubs, parties, making sure somebody saw him kissing women or leaving with them.

"Inside, it hurt," he said. "It was a lot of show."

Tuaolo had homosexual feelings as long as he can remember, even as far back as 5, when he was attracted to boys. He had his first gay affairs when he was in college, but was afraid to develop a steady relationship until 1997, when a friend in Hawaii gave him Kopay's book.

"I broke down," Tuaolo said. "I saw myself. It helped me make a decision that I didn't want to live in fear like that. This wasn't a lifestyle for me, it was a life, my life."

Iowa vs. Wisconsin

COMMENTARY

On Election Day: Kirk for governor

On Nov. 5, a small handful of Iowans with nothing better to do will select one of these fine men to continue driving young people away and the state's economy into the ground.

Tom Vilsack or Doug Gross? Is it just me, or are these two choices for governor both, well, gross?

Have no fear, fellow jaded Iowans, as a political-science major I offer this far-fetched solution — Kirk Ferentz. Hey, Dan Gable not so semi-seriously considered entering the race many moons ago so why not Ferentz? Could he be all that worse than the current choices?

There isn't much time to spare — and because many of you insist sportswriting just isn't working out for me — I'll volunteer my efforts as campaign manager. We face many great obstacles in this race but together we can overcome the odds and make this a reality.

Let's face it, our fair state is in the doldrums right now. People are losing their jobs left and right and afterward are fleeing the state like rats from a ship. This is where Kirk — it's more folksy than using a last name — makes the difference.

When he came to Iowa in 1999, the program was in a state of disarray. Did he go out and lobby for giant hog confinements or throw bags of money in his spending truck and drive around the state flaunting it? No! He has the program on track for its best finish in more than a decade.

In the face of such a brutal economy and budget cuts galore, this state's future leaders are pouring across the borders in droves. A serious problem when you consider that some of the states Iowa borders include Missouri and Nebraska.

But Kirk has brought dozens of young people to Iowa. Look at this year's roster. We've got kids from Florida, Texas, California, and 14 other states. Those are results and not empty promises.

Budget cuts? Not a problem. Kirk is already a state employee and understands what tight times his fellow workers are under. That's why he's willing to take a pay cut by becoming governor while giving the rest back to the hard-working Iowans who need the money.

Crime? Kirk has shown he can be tough but forgiving when it comes to people making mistakes.

Totally nude dancing? Sorry, that was the last election.

People, we can make this happen. If Dan McCarney agrees to run on this ticket as lieutenant governor, we would have a strong Hawkeye-Cyclone coalition that would garner support from Mason City to Davenport and all points in between. Picture it, Democrats, Republicans, and "others" coming together as one for the sake of Iowa.

The "Ferentz solution" as it is being referred to by those in the know provides thousands of Iowans with a honest, credible, choice when they head to the polls to cast their ballots next week. Granted his name won't be offered as an option but that's just because the powers that be are scared. Simply take your pencil, unknowingly provided to you by the establishment itself, and write in your choice under those other so-called candidates for the state's top office, turn in your ballot, and walk out knowing you helped send a message to Des Moines.

Would this be a wasted vote?

Well, when you consider the alternatives ...

IOWA FOOTBALL

Suddenly famous

Iowa QB Brad Banks is enjoying his time in the limelight

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

Brad Banks says he couldn't ask for anything more at the moment. At his current pace, the senior quarterback may not have to ask for anything — good things seem to find him on their own.

Banks was recently named the Big Ten's co-offensive player of the week for the second time this season after throwing for 222 yards and three touchdowns in No. 9 Iowa's 34-9 victory over Michigan Oct. 26. He also earned the designation after leading the Hawkeyes to victory over Penn State on Sept. 29.

And what exactly was his reward? A "little certificate," as he puts it. "I can put it up on the wall or something," Banks said of his recent prize, grinning sheepishly.

If Banks keeps it up he may have to find a bigger wall. After all, he's well on his way to turning in one of the best seasons ever by an Iowa signal caller. Right on par with Matt Rodgers, Chuck Hartlieb, and even — gasp — Chuck Long. But mention any of these names around Banks, and his response isn't exactly overwhelming.

"I don't know much about Iowa history," he said. "I just try to stay focused and do my thing."

Whatever Banks' thing is, he does it effectively. In Big Ten action, Banks leads the league in total offense, accounting for 245.8 yards per game. His passing efficiency rating of 163.0 in Big Ten play is also tops in the conference. He has thrown 18 touchdown passes this season and just four interceptions.

"I wouldn't expect that out of anybody," said Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz, who credited Banks' heady play to a combination of confidence and experience. "He's done so many things decision-wise that have kept us out of bad plays."

"I can't say enough about him."

And while Banks is certainly confident in the huddle and on the field, you could hardly tell it from his demeanor away from it. When Banks isn't laughing at something, he at least has a smile on his face, especially when addressing questions about his new-found fame. Newspapers from San Francisco to New York have written about Banks, and ESPN filmed a segment for its College Game Day show with Banks and Iowa running back Fred Russell to be broadcast before Iowa's game against Michigan.

"It's fun to get all this attention," Banks said grinning ear to ear. "I just try to take it one day at a time."

Is he even remotely caught off guard by the interview requests and television packages on him? "Ahhhh, I wouldn't say surprised," he says, throwing his head back and laughing at the suggestion he is a celebrity. He does get noticed a little more on campus and some of his friends do call him from back home in Florida, but for the most part Brad Banks remains Brad Banks.

Just as Banks hasn't been ambushed by the spotlight, he finds opposing teams have continually made it a part of their game plan to stop him. Not that it always works.

"They give him a chance to get out in space with a lot of naked and bootlegs where, if nothing is there, he can pull it down and run," said Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez, who faces the daunting task of trying to contain Banks and the Hawkeyes this weekend. "Even if someone is there to contain him, most guys are not athletic enough to get him down or get a hand on him."

Getting a hand on Banks is a lot like trying to catch the elusive rabbits he chased through the sugar cane fields of Belle Glade, Fla., as a youngster. Iowa wide receiver C. J. Jones, Banks' cousin, said the unique pastime kept kids occupied when there was nothing better to do. That and they make a tasty meal.

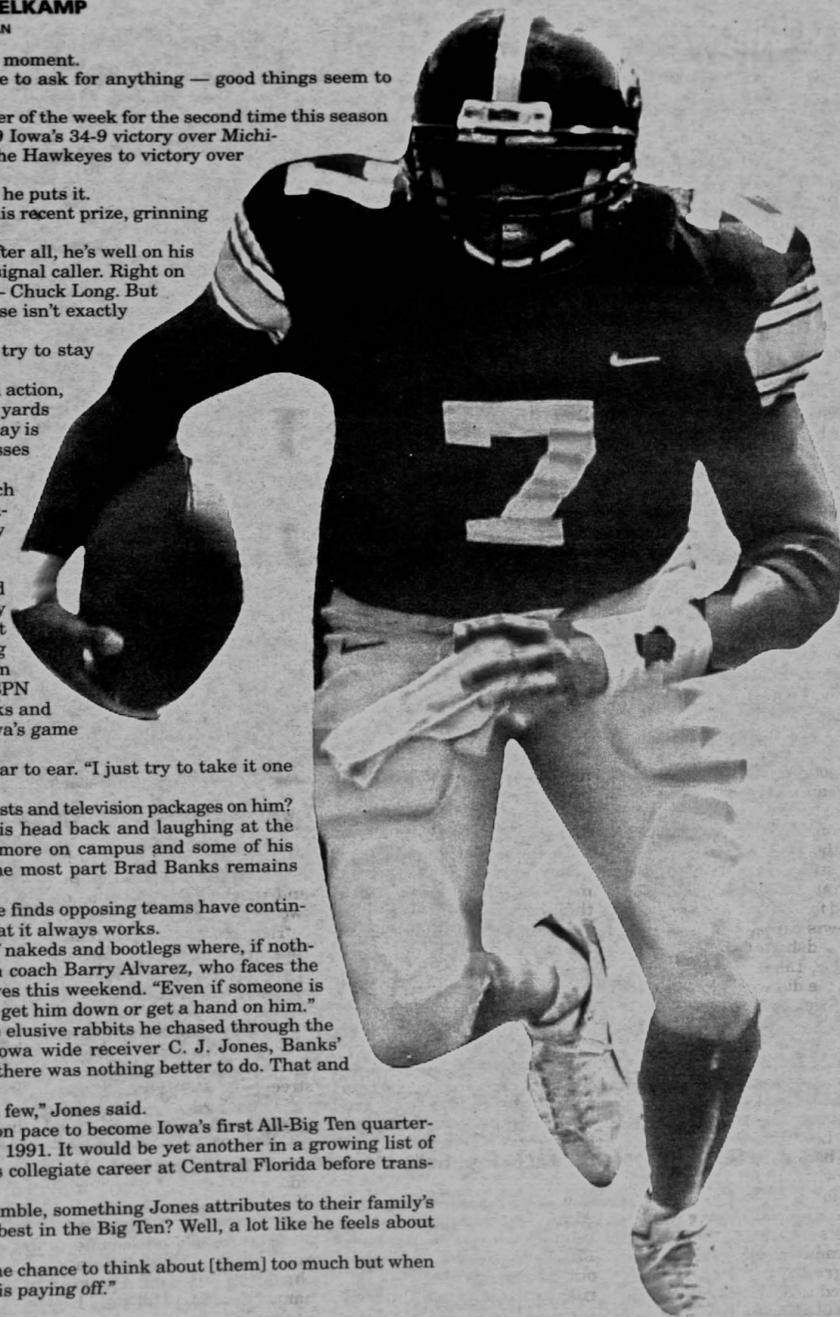

"I never caught any, but I think Brad may have gotten a few," Jones said.

With three regular-season games remaining, Banks is on pace to become Iowa's first All-Big Ten quarterback since Rodgers earned the honor for a second time in 1991. It would be yet another in a growing list of accolades and accomplishments for Banks, who began his collegiate career at Central Florida before transferring to Hinds Community College.

Through all the attention Banks remains happy yet humble, something Jones attributes to their family's ethic, but how would Banks feel about being named the best in the Big Ten? Well, a lot like he feels about everything else.

"I like [awards] a lot," he admits. "You really don't get the chance to think about [them] too much but when you do you're like 'Wow.' That shows that your hard work is paying off."

Naturally, he was smiling.

COMMENTARY

Michigan carrying vendetta, Wildcats lurk

BY DONOVAN BURBA
THE DAILY IOWAN

No. 19 Minnesota at No. 4 Ohio State

The Gophers, at 7-1, have emerged as the second-most surprising team in the Big Ten behind Iowa. They have a chance to help the Hawkeyes out today by beating Ohio State.

A Buckeye loss puts Iowa on the inside track for the Rose Bowl, and today's battle may be the best chance for that to happen.

Minnesota leads the conference in rushing, which doesn't come as too much of a surprise, but it also has the stingiest defense (314.6 yards per game allowed), an unexpected success. Stopping Ohio State comes down to stopping freshman halfback phenom Maurice Clarett.

Cincinnati and Penn State both almost pulled off upsets with Clarett out. He's questionable for the game with a shoulder injury, but you can guarantee if things get tough, Ohio State coach Jim Tressell will have his star in the game. But Minnesota is primed for a big win, and OSU has won too many close wins to pull out another. Hawkeye fans will be happy with this one.

Minnesota 27, Ohio State 21

Michigan State at No. 13 Michigan

Usually you can throw out all the record books when these rivals meet, but this year, Michigan State also threw out its starting quarterback.

Josh Smoker is suspended indefinitely for violating team rules and probably won't play against the Wolverines. The Spartans have Charles Rogers, the Big Ten's leading receiver, but he can't throw the ball to himself (if he can, he gets my Heisman vote).

Clarett Ohio State RB Smoker Michigan State QB

Michigan looks to avenge last weekend's humiliating 34-9 loss to Iowa, its worst at home since 1967. Who beat them that year? Michigan State. What does that mean? Nothing.

The Wolverines aren't going to win any titles this year, but they still have loads of talent. Even with Smoker, MSU would have a tough time of it, and without him, they don't have a prayer.

Michigan 42, Michigan State 17

Indiana at Northwestern

Northwestern has had today circled on its calendar all season. Why? Because it's their only real shot at winning a conference game all season.

The Wildcats give up twice as many points as they score, not a recipe for success. Their lone bright spot is halfback Jason Wright, who has broken the 100-yard mark five times this year.

Indiana's ground game has struggled all year (116.9 ypg), but look for the Hoosiers to keep the ball on the ground. Northwestern is actually capable of stopping the pass, the only thing that will keep it in the game.

Indiana has no motivation going into today: It's out of the bowl picture, it has a conference win, and NU isn't a big rival. All signs point to a big day for the purple and black in Evanston.

Northwestern 41, Indiana 38

Illinois at No. 21 Penn State

If it weren't for Michigan State's spectacular collapse, Illinois would be the front runner for the Big Ten's Most-Disappointing-Team mantle.

Instead, Ron Turner's squad gets to languish in purgatory, hoping for a longshot bowl bid.

To do so, the Lions must win the rest of its games. The Illini's next three opponents: Penn State, Wisconsin, and Ohio State.

Better buy a winter jacket, Ron; Champaign gets cold in January. Penn State is out of the conference race but still harbors bowl hopes.

A win today would make them eligible, and it seems unlikely that they'll lose at home to a team of Illinois' caliber.

A bumpy ride

Jermelle Lewis' road to success has been anything but painless

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Anything Jermelle Lewis does is for the team. Just ask two of the people who know him best, his coach and his mother, and that's what they'll say.

The sophomore running back has been given a few opportunities this season to show what he can do for the Hawkeyes, but mostly he has been waiting patiently on the sidelines for his turn.

That opportunity could come on Saturday with yet another twist in the running-back situation.

Last season, starting running back Ladell Betts went down, and backup Aaron Greving got a chance to shine in the Alamo Bowl. This year, Greving got hurt, and Fred Russell showed what he could do. Now that Greving has left the team, and Russell is potentially out for this weekend's game with a sore right hand, Jermelle Lewis could be in the spotlight.

Granted, Lewis has already produced three 100-yard rushing games this season, along with eight touchdowns, but he has yet to see the starting nod.

"I gotta do what I gotta do for the team," he said. "If it means for me to step up and start, then I'm gonna have to do that."

Although Lewis is enjoying a successful 2002 season, the road to that success has not been paved for the Connecticut native.

Lewis came to Iowa in 2000 and redshirted his freshman season. Like a typical freshman, he did what he needed to do to get by with his schoolwork, but then things took a turn for the worse. In the fall of Lewis' sophomore year, his scholarship was taken away because of academic struggles.

"It was like an empty feeling," Lewis said. "I don't want to go back there anymore."

Lewis was away from football for the 2001 season, but with encouragement from those surrounding him, Lewis overcame his struggles and got his grades back where they needed to be. He began playing football again for the Hawkeyes in the spring of 2002 and regained his scholarship.

At a glance

Number: 29
 Position: Running back
 Year: Sophomore
 Hometown: Bloomfield, Conn.
 Height: 5-11
 Weight: 208
 This season's: 446 yards on 65 carries (6.9 per carry); Eight touchdowns — six rushing, one receiving, one kickoff return; three 100+ yard games.

"Football's just something I can't walk away from, so I had to do what it takes to be out there," Lewis said.

"It looked kind of dark for a minute, but my teammates stuck by me 100 percent. Coach Ferentz stuck by me 100 percent, like we're gonna make it through this."

Offensive lineman Robert Gallery is one of those teammates that stuck by Lewis' side.

"It's something that we've all been through ... those down times," Gallery said. "I just took him aside and told him things are gonna get better because I know he's a great worker."

The appreciation goes both ways. Lewis says his teammates were one of the reasons he wanted so badly to get back out on the field and play.

"I just wanted to be out here with these guys," Lewis said. "They worked so hard to get me back, so I feel like I owe them something."

Lewis will definitely have the chance to help pay back his teammates with his production on the field, especially if he gets the start Saturday.

"There's no doubt in my mind he's gonna be ready," said quarterback Brad Banks.

Although Lewis has only carried the ball 65 times all season, he has been very effective, leading the Hawkeyes with 6.9 rushing yards per carry.

Lewis rushed for 124 yards and two touchdowns against Akron in the season opener behind Russell, who rushed for 170 yards. He also had breakout games against Utah St., rushing for 109 yards, including Iowa's longest run from scrimmage this season — a 75-yard touchdown — and against Michigan where he repeated his 109-yard output and reached the end zone on two occasions.

"He's been fantastic," said coach Kirk Ferentz of Lewis. "He's an aggressive runner. He wants to fight for that extra yard."

Lewis has known all about fighting for those extra yards ever since his days of playing tackle football on the snowy streets of Connecticut.

"We'd let the snowplow come by and build up all the snow on the sides. Then we'd get in the streets and play football ... sideline crack and everything. We loved football."

In high school, Lewis started all four years for Bloomfield and was part of three state champion squads. He was named first team all-state his junior and senior years, rushing up nearly 4,000 yards and 54 touchdowns.

Besides a strong football game, Lewis also has a strong character. His mother told a story of how one of Jermelle's teammates in high school was struggling to make it, so Jermelle took him aside and asked him if he was trying the absolute best he could. When his teammate responded yes, Jermelle gave him a pep talk saying that was all anyone could ask for.

"Jermelle didn't tell me this," said his mother Cathy Andrews. "The mother of his teammate told me. That's just the way Jermelle is."

Whether encouraging teammates or breaking tackles for touchdowns, Lewis has proven to be an effective contribution to the Hawkeyes in their 8-1 season.

Although competition has been strong between the Iowa running backs, Lewis says there are no hard feelings between him and Russell.

"We're like brothers back there," Lewis said. "He points out my mistakes. I point out his mistakes. We try to help each other to be the best backs in the Big Ten."

Hopefully, the positive relationship between the two will last, with each potentially being around for two more seasons as Hawkeyes. Recently, Russell was given an additional year of eligibility for a medical redshirt.

Which one will be the more prolific running back is up for grabs.

"I guess everybody says Fred's a slasher, a quicker back than I am," said Lewis when asked to compare the two. "I could never tell anybody how I run."

Lewis' performance on the field will have to do the talking.

Want roses? We need the W in Wisconsin

The smell of roses may be penetrating the nostrils of Hawkeye fans and even some players, but the season is far from over, and if Iowa loses any of its three remaining games, Iowa City will take on a whole different smell. While wins over Wisconsin, Northwestern, and Minnesota don't carry the same glamour as those over Michigan and Penn State, they're still necessary. The game against the Wisconsin Badgers will go a long way in showing if the Hawkeyes have what it takes to close out the conference season as well as they've started it. One of Iowa's themes this year is revenge. The Hawkeyes have already avenged 2001 losses to Purdue, Michigan State, and Michigan, and they look to do so again Saturday. Last year, Wisconsin eked out a 34-28 thriller at Camp Randall Stadium in Madison, a game that featured no scoring in the fourth quarter.

Iowa already has one advantage: the absence of Wisconsin's star wideout, Lee Evans. Rather than jump to the NFL after his junior year, Evans stuck around. During the team's spring game in May, he tore ligaments in his left knee. Initially, he hoped to be back in October; instead, he'll miss the rest of the season. That's bad news for Wisconsin but good news for the rest of the conference, especially Iowa. In last year's contest, Evans caught seven passes for 175 yards. Although the Hawkeye secondary has progressed in leaps and bounds since the beginning of the year, no one in black and gold is sad to see Evans on the sidelines. The Hawkeye's convincing 34-9 win over Michigan on Oct. 26 confirmed what coach Kirk Ferentz and his staff already knew: Brad Banks is the best quarterback in the Big Ten. He rushed for 53 yards and threw for 222 more and three touchdowns at the

DONOVAN BURBA Columnist

Big House, showing none of the big-game jitters that seemed to rattle him against Iowa State in September. When Fred Russell's running game bogged down in the first half against Michigan, it was Banks' feet and arm that kept Iowa in the game until they could break it open after the break. Russell is still suffering from a sore hand received in the Michigan game, and he may not be as effective as usual. Fortunately, Jermelle Lewis proved again that he's no schlub at backup. Lewis carried the ball 18 times for 109 yards and a touchdown, and he also caught a touchdown pass. Preseason starter Aaron Greving quit the team Oct. 24 and was not missed. But the most encouraging development for Ferentz is the play of the much-maligned secondary. Although still 116th out of 117 nationally, the unit shut down Michigan State star Charles Rogers on Oct. 12, then held Michigan to 149 passing yards two weeks later. Wisconsin's pass offense, led by quarterback Brooks Bollinger, averages 183.0 yards per game, 10th in the conference. Although teams tend to pass more against the Hawkeyes, given the secondary's reputation, the Badgers may be forced to turn to the run. And that's fine with them. Sophomore tailback Anthony Davis is averaging 107.4

yards per game; last year against Iowa he put up 132 and scored what turned out to be the decisive touchdown. The Hawkeye defensive line anchors the second-best rush defense in the nation, yielding 2.1 yards per carry. There aren't many offensive lines as big or as talented as Wisconsin's, but Iowa's defensive front four are still better. Right now, Iowa is playing as well as any of the nine teams ranked ahead of them. The Hawkeyes have an explosive, big-play offense and a defense that is only getting better. On top of that, Wisconsin has to take them on at legendary Kinnick Stadium. Today's game isn't a lock, but it would take an Iowa State game-esque collapse to get the Badgers the "W." And as Ferentz's team has proven week in and week out, they're better than that. Iowa 38, Wisconsin 21

Experience beginning to show on the Iowa secondary

linebacker

When Iowa linebacker Fred Barr walked off the field Oct. 26 at Michigan Stadium, his uniform top was white as a freshly fallen snowflake. In fact, the senior's name didn't even appear in the defensive statistics following Iowa's 34-9 victory over the Wolverines.

"It was kind of frustrating," Barr said. "I wish I could have hit a few more people."

Michigan quarterback John Navarre was equally frustrated, but he hardly had any sympathy for Barr or his counterparts on the Iowa defense.

"They pinned their ears back and came at us all day long," Navarre said of Iowa's gritty defensive performance.

The emergence of Iowa's pass rush in its last several Big Ten games is due largely to the growth and development of a defensive line, which began the season with just one returning starter — Colin Cole. More than midway through the Big Ten portion of Iowa's schedule, the defensive line is no longer a worry.

"There were some question marks coming into the season," tackle Jared Clauss said. "The key is that we're getting experience, and it's starting to show."

While Iowa's front four may not be as large as years past, they are quicker and just as strong, something that has kept opposing teams on their toes this season.

"All four of those guys were digging out there, working hard, giving us everything they had," Iowa coach

Kirk Ferentz said.

A hit placed on Navarre by Cole during Michigan's opening drive set the tone for a very long day for the Wolverines, who managed just 171 yards of total offense. Defensive end Howard Hodges also found his way into the backfield several times against Michigan, registering three tackles for a loss, including a pair of sacks.

"There were times when I just gambled," Hodges said of his performance.

While Hodges and his teammates may take a chance now and then, it's nothing like the risks involved in attacking Iowa's defense, especially when it comes to running the ball. The Hawkeyes have made stopping the run their signature move this season. They rank second nationally, allowing an average of just 62.3 yards per game.

"Once we make you one-dimensional, you can't win," Cole said.

Michigan managed just 22 yards on the ground against Iowa. Iowa's other foes have had similar fates.

But while opponents have struggled to move the ball on the ground, they are also having a hard time doing so through the air. The Hawkeyes still give up plenty of passing yards — 301.1 to be exact — but as Michigan coach Lloyd Carr accurately warned prior to facing the Hawkeyes, Iowa forces teams to throw the ball where it wants, when it wants.

Iowa ranks fifth in the conference in total defense heading into this weekend's critical meeting with Wisconsin, but Ferentz implies the best may be yet to come.

"I do know this," he said. "We have to play better defensively down the home stretch."

Men, women focus on improving in Big Ten

BY DREW MANROE
THE DAILY IOWAN

After improving one spot to finish seventh in the Big Ten championships last season, the Iowa women's swimming team is hoping for more progress from this season.

The Hawkeyes only graduated three, but they are still an exceedingly young team. Of the 26 swimmers on the team, 13 are sophomores and seven are freshmen.

But these younger swimmers are still being looked on to contribute heavily to the Hawkeyes' success.

Sophomore Jennifer Skolaski amazed people last season, setting team records in the 100- and 200-backstroke. She was an NCAA automatic qualifier, and in Iowa's first meet of the season against Wisconsin on Oct. 25-26, Skolaski raced to five top-three finishes.

"To qualify for the NCAA's in four events as a freshman is pretty phenomenal," Iowa coach Garland O'Keeffe said. "She's a definite candidate to make the NCAA's again."

The plethora of freshmen is also impressing O'Keeffe this season.

Leading the pack are Kelly Werner and Andrea Hemphill, who posted five combined top-five finishes a week ago.

"We are strong in backstroke this season, and we're relying a lot on Kelly Werner," O'Keeffe said. "She's really stepped up."

"And I'm really pleased with how Andrea swam [last week]. She was leading for most of the 200-fly, but she got passed right at the end. She's going to be a key contributor for us."

Not to be lost in the midst of the Hawkeye's youthful successes is excellent swimming of the team's veterans.

Junior Christie Hooper set a Hawkeye record in the 200-freestyle last season, and she was barely edged out in the event against the Badgers last week. Senior Erin Strub got off to the fastest start of her Iowa career, garnering top three finishes in the 50- and 100-free against Wisconsin.

But perhaps the most surprising performance of the Hawkeyes' veterans was that of junior Michelle Bagi.

Bagi was the team's only non-diver to win an event last week, nabbing a victory in the 100-butterfly. This performance resulted in heightened expectations from O'Keeffe.

"That was a breakthrough swim for her," O'Keeffe said. "She's got some confidence now. She's always been a solid practitioner, but now she's carrying that into competition."

Strub said the team is tight-knit, and she hopes for more improvement in the Big Ten.

"We're a really close team," Strub said. "We have a lot of tight bonds, and we've improved so much from last year."

"If we moved up even one spot in the Big Ten, I'd be happy."

Men's team mostly young

The Iowa men's swimming team is looking to make itself a force in the Big Ten this season.

The team returns as a rather young squad, over half are underclassmen. The Hawkeyes, however, do not allow this statistic to worry them.

"It shows that our program is

Whitney Kidder/The Daily Iowan
Iowa senior Erin Strub practices at the Field House pool.

pointing in a good direction," junior Jason Snider said. "The freshmen from last year and the ones this year, are showing signs of improvement and they'll be good additions to the team."

The Hawkeyes have only competed in one conference meet so far. They took on Wisconsin last weekend, but could not hold on and dropped the contest, 211-140.

"I see us sitting pretty well after that meet," Snider said. "We swam a lot better than we did last year against Wisconsin and they came out and swam very well last weekend."

Snider is a main contributor for Iowa; he nabbed six second places against Wisconsin. Iowa swept the 3-meter diving event with Roberto Gutierrez placing first. The Hawkeye relay teams were also strong; one of their teams took second in every relay event.

Badgers, Bollinger need one win for bowl

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez looks at the Iowa Hawkeyes and scratches his thinning hair.

How does he stop one of the most explosive teams in the Big Ten?

"I do not know who you would load up on," Alvarez said Monday of Iowa's many talented players.

Devising a game plan for the No. 9 Hawkeyes is not an easy task, even for Alvarez, who owns a five-game winning streak against Iowa.

To the veteran Wisconsin coach, slowing Iowa means attempting to stop quarterback Brad Banks. Banks, a two-time recipient of the Big Ten's offensive player of the week honors, has given opposing defenses headaches all season with his lethal combination of pinpoint passing and mobility on the ground.

"He's the key," Alvarez said. "He is the one that gets the ball around and does it very accurately."

With so many targets at Banks' disposal, the question again becomes where to focus attention on Saturday. With no disrespect intended, Alvarez says that man is Iowa tight end Dallas Clark. Clark has plowed his way across the Big Ten this year on his way to another All-American season. It's enough to make Alvarez envious.

"If we had a tight end that could do what he can do, he would be playing," Alvarez said. "He is really an impressive player."

But Alvarez and the Badgers have a host of impressive players themselves, including quarterback Brooks Bollinger, one of the most efficient passers in the Big Ten. Much like Banks, his athleticism forces opposing defenses to be wary of his, leaving the pocket to scramble.

"He's definitely an elusive guy," Iowa linebacker Fred Barr said. "He takes away from the pass [defense] because of that."

The senior quarterback, who led Wisconsin to a Rose Bowl victory in 2000, appears to be hitting his stride at a crucial juncture in the Big Ten season. Bollinger threw for three touchdowns and ran for two more in Wisconsin's 42-24 victory over Michigan State Oct. 26, keeping the Badgers' bowl hopes alive.

"Some days you are really sharp, like Brooks was sharp the other day,"

Alvarez said. "It was not anything about their scheme, he was just sharp."

But Bollinger isn't the only weapon at Alvarez's disposal. Without wide receiver Lee Evans, who will miss his entire senior season recovering from surgery, the Badgers have relied heavily on the capable legs of running back Anthony Davis.

Davis, who rushed for 142 yards against the Hawkeyes last season in Madison, is just 33 yards shy of 1,000 yards this season. If he reaches that landmark, he would give the Badgers a 1,000-yard rusher for a league-record 10th-straight season. Davis has averaged 157 yards per game in Wisconsin's last two outings against the Spartans and Ohio State.

Only a sophomore, Davis would join former Heisman Trophy winner Ron Dayne as the only backs in Wisconsin history to eclipse the 1,000-yard mark in their first two seasons of play.

Alvarez said he is unconcerned with whether Davis reaches the 1,000-yard mark, a mark he will certainly hit this season barring a major catastrophe, as long as the team continues to run the ball well and play at its current level.

"I think we have established a tempo," he said. "We went into the [Michigan State] game deciding that that is what we wanted to do and that we were going to get it done."

That newfound tempo, which helped the Badgers overcome a three-game skid in East Lansing a week ago, may be in for quite a test against an Iowa defense, which ranks second in the nation in stopping the run.

Alvarez, who coached Iowa's linebackers from 1979-86, credits Iowa's defensive dominance over opponents to the veteran makeup of the unit as well as the aggressiveness of the defensive line.

"They run to the ball, that is what most defenses do," he said. "You do not see them [lying] on the ground."

Following this week's tilt, the Badgers close out the season by hosting Illinois, traveling to Michigan, and then welcoming Minnesota to Camp Randall Stadium for the season finale. Wisconsin must win at least one more game to become bowl eligible.

Men's expectations remain elevated for season

Iowa basketball coach Steve Alford understands little is expected from the 2002-03 Hawkeyes, but that hasn't affected his or the team's outlook on its forthcoming campaign.

"I know expectations are high in our locker room, and that's what matters," Alford said.

Fans wishing to get an early look at the newest edition of the Hawkeyes will get an opportunity to do so following Saturday's football game with Wisconsin.

Alford and the Hawkeyes will hold the team's annual Black and Gold Blowout at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The intrasquad scrimmage will begin roughly 45 minutes after the completion of Iowa's game against the Badgers.

The last several months have been trying for Alford and the Hawkeyes, given the program's battles, legal scrapes, and defections, but the fourth-year head coach remains optimistic about what to expect from his players.

"This has really been a resilient group, and that's what's got me excited about this group," he said. "With all the adversity they've faced the last four months, you'd think there'd be a day where you'd walk in the locker room and there would be some sulking going on, some self-pity, but it hasn't been that way."

With just eight players currently on scholarship and eligible to practice, Alford has spent the first couple weeks on the court sizing up his current charges. He most likely will use a seven-man rotation, possibly using a three-guard line-up with Brody Boyd, Chauncey Leslie, and freshman Jeff Horner. Forward Glen Worley and center Jared Reiner would round out the possible set.

Post player Sean Sonderleiter and freshman forward Greg Brunner are the next men off the bench for the Hawkeyes, with guard Josh Kimm and walk-on junior forward Kurt Spurgeon possibly making it an eight-man rotation.

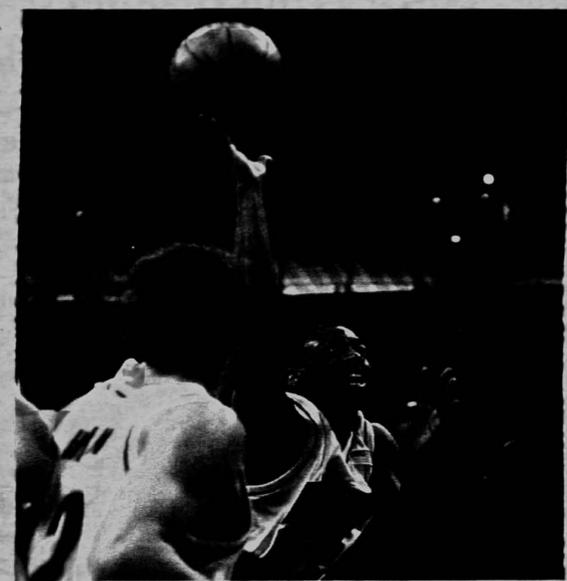

Alford said he has been most pleased with the leadership shown by Leslie, one of just two seniors on the team, as well as the improved play of Reiner and Worley.

After entering last season ranked in the preseason Top 10, the Hawkeyes begin 2002 in relative anonymity. That suits some of the veteran Hawkeyes just fine.

"I think there's a different enthusiasm [this season] because everyone is putting us down at the bottom, saying negative things about us, writing us off," said Worley, Iowa's leading returning scorer. "I think that makes people motivated and we're willing to work hard to prove people wrong."

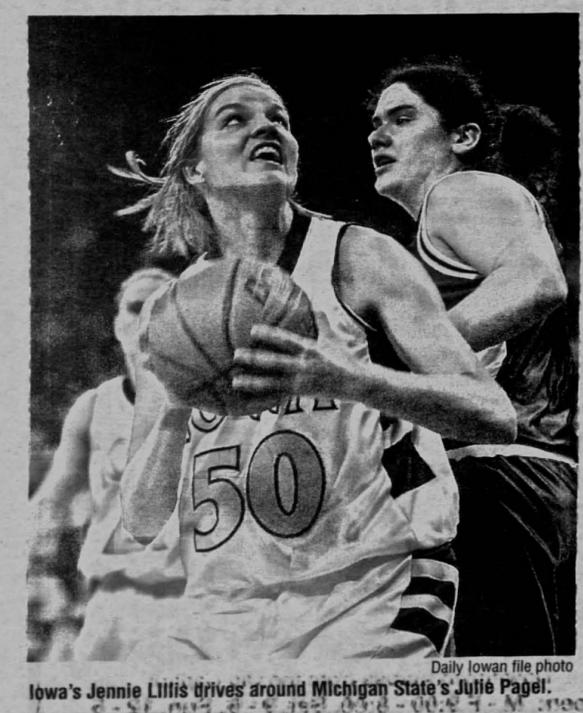

Iowa opens regular season non conference play Nov. 24 at home against Florida-Atlantic.

New, old faces start season with scrimmage

THE DAILY IOWAN

When the Iowa women's basketball team takes the floor on Saturday morning for the opening of the 2002-3 season, Lindsey Meder won't impress people with her point totals.

Jerica Watson won't elicit "ahhs" from the audience for her airtime, Beatrice Bullock won't be scrapping for a board, and Leah Magner won't be fighting incessantly on defense.

The familiar faces won't return, but the Hawkeyes hope to start building some new ones in their season opening debut "Hoop it Up" during an intra-squad scrimmage.

The faces of coach Lisa Bluder's eighth-best recruiting class in the nation will grace the floor along with returning starters Jennie Lillis and Kristi Faulkner.

"I think everyone thinks we lost a lot of players," Bluder said. "And we did, but we have a lot of good things still."

Among the good comes the rebounding force of Lillis, who averaged 4.8 points, six rebounds, and two assists per game last year.

Faulkner led the Hawkeyes last year at the point guard position, but she switched to off-guard after Meder's graduation, leaving room for April Calhoun and freshman Lindsey Richards to compete for the starting nod.

As a point guard last year, Faulkner led the team with 96 assists and ranked fifth in scoring. Calhoun finished the 2001-02 season strong and carried her success with her into the off-season, where she represented the Hawkeyes on the Big Ten Foreign Team Tour in Europe. Calhoun finished the tour third on the team in assists and steals.

Freshman Crystal Smith brings the Hawkeyes a new dynamic with quickness, and Bluder said the other freshmen will all be in contention for a starting spot when Iowa opens the season officially in the Gazette-Hawkeye Challenge on Nov. 23.

"It's really hard to get five people to understand what it's going to take to be successful at this level," Bluder said. "But the freshmen make up almost half the team, and they will be called upon ... One will probably get the starting nod, but I think all five will play quite a bit."

After three weeks of practice, Bluder said she was seeing positive signs from the returning players as well as the freshmen.

"The players work extremely hard and are focused," she said. "They're really fun to be around and it's a group of women I really enjoy seeing every day."

"Going to practice is not going to work. It's really what I look forward to every day."

The Hawkeyes will play two 20-minute halves, and athletes will be on the concourse after the scrimmage to sign autographs.

"Hoop it Up" begins at 9 a.m. on the main floor of Carver and is free.

IOWA FOOTBALL

A look back ...

Iowa vs. Wisconsin
Nov. 3, 2001

Iowa receiver Kahlil Hill goes up to catch a pass against Wisconsin.

For the second-straight week, the Hawkeyes lost a close Big Ten contest, falling to the Badgers, 34-28, in Wisconsin's Camp Randall Stadium.

Wisconsin ran up 434 yards against an Iowa defense that featured five new starters because of injuries suffered the previous week against Michigan. Wide receiver Lee Evans caught seven passes for 175 yards, and running back Anthony Davis posted 142 rushing yards on 36 carries.

A pair of fumbles deep in Badger territory helped turn a 14-13 lead in the second quarter into a 27-14 deficit.

Ladell Betts led Iowa's offense as the Hawkeyes scored all 28 of their points in the second and third quarters, but they could not complete a comeback attempt in the fourth quarter.

The Hawkeyes put together a 10-play, 71-yard drive capped by a one-yard touchdown run by Brad Banks to pull within six points but failed to score on their final possession of the game.

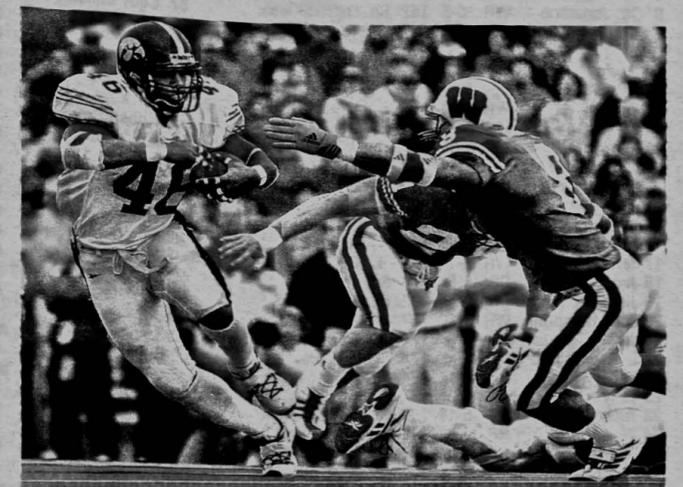

Free safety Derek Pagel led Iowa's defense with 14 tackles, and Colin Cole added 10 in the defeat, which dropped the Hawkeyes to 4-4 on the year.
