Election nears; Iowa's races tight

BY CHUCK LARSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Touted as one of the most competitive political states in the nation, Iowans' votes Tuesday could determine which party controls the U.S. House. Iowa's unique system of redistricting has left incumbents in new and often unfavorable districts, persuading some to move and making four out of the five congressional elections competitive. Both parties view Iowa as election ground zero, as Republicans fight to improve their 15-seat majority in the House, and Democrats eye potential takeovers.

NEWS ANALYSIS

President Bush will stump for Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, Doug Gross, the GOP candidate for governor, and Greg Ganske, R-Iowa, Tuesday at the U.S. Cellular Center in Cedar Rapids, a sign that Iowa is still up for grabs and that no incumbent is safe. This is Bush's sixth midterm election campaign trip to the state he lost by 4,100 votes in the 2000 presidential election. It took President Clinton eight years to make one fewer trip to Iowa. Bush comes to Iowa's new 2nd District, a No. 1 priority for both Democrats and Republicans. Named as the House's most vulnerable incumbent, Leach moved to Iowa City and the 2nd District after re-districting placed him in the same district as Rep. Jim Nussle, R-Iowa. With the move, Leach lost his Davenport base and found his new district mostly Democratic — 30 percent to 26 percent. Leach's opponent, Dr. Julie Thomas, has raised close to $1

GOP looks to beat 'the curse'

BY DAVID ESPO
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Four years ago, Bill Clinton and the Democrats defied history and gained House seats in midterm elections. Now it's time for George W. Bush and the Republicans to try. Whatever their success, the midterm curse that has afflicted both political parties over the past century is waning, weakened this year by congressional redistricting that accounts for population shifts, as well as the terrorist attacks and even Bush's no-coattails victory of 2000. "We haven't beaten the curse yet," said Rep. Tom Davis, the Virginia Republican in charge of the House GOP campaign committee. "I remember working in the Nixon White House in the 1970s thinking we might pick up a handful of seats." It didn't happen. But whether the GOP wins or loses seats Tuesday — or holds or surrenders control of the House — not even the most partisan Democrat is forecasting a midterm swing that approaches the 30-seat average of the past century. Over that period, the only times the party in the White House gained House seats were 1902, Franklin Roosevelt's first midterm in 1934, and 1998, when voters rejected Republican efforts to turn the elections into a referendum on impeachment proceedings against Clinton. The party in power has suffered in the Senate as well but not as severely or as often.

Unusual mediation ends Pierce sex-abuse case

BY TONY ROBINSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Pierre Pierce admitted to assaulting a UI female athlete and pleaded guilty to assault causing injury as part of a plea bargain that allows him to rejoin the basketball team and not spend a night in jail. The agreement erased Pierce's original charge of third-degree sexual assault, which carries a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. If Pierce, 19, receives counseling and performs 200 hours of community service, the serious misdemeanor will be wiped from his record.

Inside:
• 6A: Students and women's rights advocates react to the case's abrupt end.

The UI Board in Control of Athletics lifted Pierce's suspension, which he was set to appeal, but he will redshirt for the 2002-03 season and watch the team from the bench.

Pierce also issued a written apology to the victim for "engaging in inappropriate sexual conduct" as a key part of the plea bargain.

The incident occurred in the early morning hours of Sept. 7 at Pierce's residence, 728 Orchard St. Court records show Pierce performed unwanted sex acts with the woman while holding her hands above her head and stifling her attempts to scream. The official charge states that Pierce had "unwanted intimate contact with the victim causing bruising and lacerations."

Johnson County Attorney J.

Charlie Neibergall/Associated Press

Des Moines attorney Alfredo Parrish, center, speaks to the media outside the Johnson County Courthouse after filing a written plea for Iowa basketball player Pierre Pierce on Nov. 1. Pierce pleaded guilty to assault causing injury as part of a plea bargain with prosecutors.

Patrick White said Pierce did not receive special treatment because of his stature on campus, but he admitted that the mediation process was unusual — mainly the victim's retention of attorney Jerry Crawford. Des Moines lawyer Roxanne Conlin was brought into the case by defense attorneys Alfredo

Parrish and Maggi Moss, who asked her to carry messages between Pierce's lawyers and Crawford. Conlin said she was asked to mediate the case because she is "good friends" with all three attorneys. After both parties agreed to reduce the class C felony to the serious misdemeanor — a move authorities called a "sacrifice" on the part of the victim to protect her identity — they persuaded prosecutors to accept the deal. Parrish, who appeared on Pierce's behalf in court Nov. 1, gave a short statement on the steps of the Johnson County Courthouse. Pierce was absent from all of the Nov. 1 events; he did not have to show up for court because the charge was a serious misdemeanor. "This has been one of the most, if not the most, difficult decisions of my legal career, to

Officials look to fountain of youth

BY MARTHA IRVINE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

The governor of Missouri is listening. So are several mayors across the country and any number of corporate executives.

They want to know what young people think. And increasingly, they're appointing teens and 20-somethings to advisory boards, councils, and cabinets to find out.

"A lot of adults have spent their time trying to figure out what it's like to be young but don't involve us," said Ben Smilowitz, a senior at Washington University in St. Louis.

When boards have included young people, too often they've only been "tokens," he said. But that's beginning to change.

Already an experienced youth activist at age 21, Smilowitz was drafted by Missouri Gov. Bob Holden to coordinate a youth cabinet, one of the first of its kind for a state government.

Applications flooded in over the summer. And this past week, Holden announced the names of 45 young Missourians to be assigned to state departments that deal with everything from transportation to poverty.

"I do not want these people to be out getting the mail or the coffee," he said. "I want them to be engaged."

He said he was inspired to create the cabinet by young people already involved in his state's politics — from Students Against Driving Drunk to the daughter of one state senator who spoke in favor of legislation that would allow people as young as 16 to donate organs.

Holden's wish for youth involvement also goes back to his own college days. He was one of several student leaders who fought, in the 1960s, to get a student on his university's Board of Regents — a "radical" idea at the time, he said.

Smelly tree ruckus rises again

BY ALEXIS GRUND
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI student leaders are coming up with a proposal to remove the smelly trees at the heart of the campus, but local environmentalists say the idea stinks.

The UI Student Government is working on what it has dubbed the Stinky Tree Project — a plan to remove the five female ginkgo trees spread throughout the Pentacrest. The ancient, seed-bearing trees release fleshy berries that drop to the ground in autumn. When squashed, the berries emit a distinctive and pungent odor that has become familiar to UI students.

UI sophomore Bian Li, a UISG senator who has been gathering public input on the project, said she has received mostly positive feedback from university staff and students about the trees' removal and replacement.

"The pungent smell is annoying, and everyone would like to see the trees replaced," she said.

In 1993, then-UI President Hunter Rawlings shot down a similar proposal, said UI junior Bryan Stacy, the UISG undergraduate executive heading up the project.

Facilities Services Group would be responsible for removing the ginkgos. Representatives from the department were unavailable for comment.

"I don't know what they will do with them, but I know they will not be replanted," Stacy said.

UISG research shows that each fall the university spends roughly $2,400 on the trees'

Harkin, Vilsack turn up the juice

BY CHUCK LARSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Sen. Tom Harkin and Gov. Tom Vilsack rallied their troops and emphasized the importance of get-out-the-vote efforts Sunday when their Democratic bus tour stopped in Iowa City.

"I can feel it coming on Tuesday — the greatest Democratic victory in Iowa history," said Harkin at the local appearance of the On the Road for Iowa's Future: Hope and Opportunity for Every Community tour.

Harkin and Vilsack appeared with a supporting cast of Democratic candidates and area politicians in front of a jammed-packed Johnson County Democratic Headquarters on the second floor of the Old Capitol Town Center.

The stop came in the middle of the bus tour that began at Harkin's home in Cumming, Iowa, Nov. 2 and will conclude Tuesday at Vilsack's Mount Pleasant home.

The tour across Iowa is part of a final push before voters head to the polls Tuesday in what has become a fiercely competitive and negative campaign as both parties battle for fate of the U.S. House and Senate, Iowa Legislature, and governorship.

Democrats are on the road to better education, jobs, family, farm structure, health care, and environment, said Harkin, who read off a laundry list of goals without elaborating on details.

Harkin has never won an overwhelming victory. He beat

Gov. Tom Vilsack and his wife, Christie, speak to supporters at a Democratic campaign stop in Iowa City on Sunday afternoon.

Jim Ross Lightfoot in 1996 with 53 percent of the vote and Rep. Tom Tauke in 1990 with 54 percent.

The latest Iowa Poll shows Harkin with a nine-point lead over his Republican opponent, Rep. Greg Ganske, 50 percent to 41 percent, with a margin of error of 3.5 percent. The same poll in September showed Harkin with a 20 percent lead.

Vilsack hushed the 150-member crowd's chants of "four more years" and said, "If you work hard for two more days, I'll guarantee we'll work hard as hell for four and six more years."

Vilsack said that if elected along with a Democratic Legislature, he would pass a prescription-drug plan, raise the minimum wage, and open up state regulations for people of all races, creeds, and sexual orientations within his first 100 days.

"That is what this election is about," he said.

Iowa's gubernatorial election has graced the record books as the most expensive contest for Terrace Hill in Iowa history. Vilsack and his Republican challenger Doug Gross have raised more than $12 million.

Vilsack leads Gross in the Iowa Poll by 12 points, 52 to 40 percent, down from an 18-point lead in September.

The event wasn't without protest; approximately a dozen Republicans waved Leach and Gross signs outside the glass windows of the headquarters. Democratic supporters were quick to cover the windows with massive Vilsack barn signs.

"Maybe you should put the signs down," Vilsack said. "Then we can pump the truth out there."

STATE BRIEF

Iowa's minority, poor students fall behind, report says

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa's minority and poor students continue to fall behind their peers, said the state's top education official.

"The achievement gap is still there, and in some cases, it's getting worse," said Ted Stiltwill, the director of the state's Department of Education.

A report, based on data from 1999-01, shows that when test results are broken down by ethnic and economic groups, the achievement gap has worsened.

For example, 75 percent of white eighth-graders were proficient in math, compared with under 38 percent for blacks in the same grade. That translates into an achievement gap of 37.4 percent, up from 32.4 percent a year ago.

Detailed information from the department's "Condition of Education Report" won't be officially released until Nov. 20.

POLICE LOGS

Joshua James Hill, 23, 2728 S. Riverside Drive, was charged Sunday with domestic assault causing injury. Police responded to a call at 12:46 a.m. Sunday at the same address.

Tyler John Anderson, 23, Ellsworth, was charged Nov. 2 with possession of controlled substances, one without a prescription, and public intoxication. Anderson was cited on the intersection of Kirkwood Avenue and Gilbert Court.

Phil Edward Barker, 19, Marshalltown, and Micah Clark Engle, 21, 409 S. Dodge St. Apt. 4, were charged Nov. 2 with first-degree burglary at 511 S. Johnson St. Apt. 7.

Franklin Louis Keschull, 40, address unknown, was arrested Nov. 1 on a Sept. 25 charge of assault causing injury. The incident allegedly occurred at 402 S. Gilbert St.

Homeland official touts reorganization

BY PHIL DAVIDSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

A top Homeland Security official spoke in Iowa City on Sunday about the office's proposal for the largest reorganization of the federal government since World War II.

Susan Neely, the agency's senior director for communications, said the proposed rearrangement would essentially stitch together 22 government agencies. The restructuring will be voted on in the Senate on Nov. 12.

"We're confident the bill in Congress will be passed," said Neely, a UI graduate. "We're hopeful that the Senate moves forward with it."

Neely, who is also a special assistant to President Bush, was the keynote speaker at the Council for International Visitors to Iowa Cities' annual luncheon. Her speech, "Keeping America's Doors Open," focused on new security measures being undertaken after the 9/11 attacks.

Neely said the focus of her office is to safely and effectively keep the flow of people, commerce, and ideas in the country. Former Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Ridge was sworn in on Oct. 8, 2001, as the first Office of Homeland Security adviser in U.S. history.

"The key to the strategy is the principal of risk management," Neely said, pointing out that 65-year-old women in airports are significantly less of a terrorist risk than persons convicted of falsifying documents.

The office now has "watch out" lists of individuals who are seen as potentially threatening to the United States. Neely said the agency is working on a system that would integrate the 55 databases, thus allowing law-enforcement agencies all over the country to review the same information.

Neely said another plan involves moving the Immigration and Naturalization Service from a paper-based to an electronic system. One shortcoming of the current system is that anyone can present a piece of paper claiming he or she is a legal immigrant.

Neely said it was wonderful to be back in Iowa City. She got to spend the weekend with her parents, who celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary, before traveling to Brussels, Belgium, with Ridge.

Neely's former West High principal, Ed Barker, was in attendance. He said that while he did not foresee Neely in a government career, she was a fine student.

"We knew she would be successful in whatever she chose to do," he said.

Fanning the spirit of Coke

BY CATHY FLORY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Approximately 50 Hawkeye fans auditioned on Nov. 2 to take part in a 2003 Coca-Cola ad campaign exploring Football Town USA.

The soda company screened creative, passionate Iowa fanatics who exemplify why Iowa City deserves to be part of its print or TV ad campaign during football season next year.

"Even when we lose, we still booze, and what goes better with Coke than a bottle of Jack Daniel's?" said UI freshman Dave Keitel at his audition before the Nov. 2 Iowa-Wisconsin game.

Each of the auditions, which were held south of Kinnick Stadium, lasted 15 seconds. They varied from wild students plastered with black-and-gold face paint to young children bashfully whispering, "Go Hawks." All participants were videotaped; they can be seen online at www.football-townusa.com.

"We came to Iowa City because you're having a great year," said Roman Blahoski, a Coca-Cola public-relations manager. "Iowa City has had a great tradition way back to Hayden Fry, and we are trying to find someone who can tell us why Iowa City is Football Town USA."

Coca-Cola started its search in Atlanta on Sept. 6; company representatives have traveled more than 10,000 miles to approximately 50 football games to select a number of cities for its campaign.

"I just auditioned for the fun of it," said Iowa City resident Breanna McFarland. "But I think I did badly."

She cheered on the Hawks and expressed enthusiasm about hopes of beating Wisconsin. The Hawks defeated the Badgers, 20-3.

Coca-Cola has not decided if the ads will run on TV or in print, Blahoski said.

"We definitely had some great auditions from Iowa City that will make the ad, but I don't have the final say," he said, adding that finalists for the ad campaign won't be selected for some time.

Those who do make the cut will receive approximately $10.

"We will start going through the auditions in early January, but it will take a while. There are a lot of auditions," Blahoski said.

Other memorable acts throughout the national search, typified by face-painted fans and foam heads, include a grandmother who sang "Who Let The Dogs Out" and a fan who just danced on stage for 15 seconds.

The search for Football Town USA will end Dec. 23 in Tampa Bay, Fla., at the Steelers versus Buccaneers game.

Islamic-oriented Turkish Justice and Development Party members celebrate on Sunday outside their party's headquarters in Istanbul after the first results showed the party leading the parliamentary vote.

Islamists win in Turkey

BY KARL VICK
WASHINGTON POST

ISTANBUL, Turkey — A party with roots in political Islam won a landslide victory in Turkey's national election Sunday, presenting a possible challenge to a long secular tradition in a key strategic ally of the United States that Washington holds up as a democratic example to the Muslim world.

The Justice and Development Party, known by its Turkish initials AKP, drew 34 percent of the vote with 97 percent would allow it to govern without a partner. The only other contender assured of winning seats in Parliament was the Republican People's Party, created by Kemal Ataturk, who founded the modern Turkish state on rigidly secular terms. It garnered approximately 19 percent of the vote. Ten percent is required for representation in Parliament.

At a huge celebration at the Justice and Development Party headquarters, party leader Recep Tayyip Erdogan told supporters, "We will not spend our time dizzy with victory. We will build a Turkey where common sense prevails."

Turkey, which straddles Europe and Asia, has looked to the West since it was founded in 1923 after the collapse of the Ottoman Empire, the ruler of the Muslim east for 500 years. As a member of NATO, it was a crucial U.S. ally in the Cold War, and it would be asked to play a key role in any new military campaign against neighboring Iraq.

Yet the meddling role the military has played in politics, especially against religious parties, has damaged Turkey's dimming prospects of membership in the European Union, an effort the country has pursued with increasing vigor since its economy nearly collapsed early last year.

CD burners burn sales of CDs

BY RON HARRIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — The growing popularity of CD burning and illegal song-swapping over the Internet has cut into online music sales, sending them tumbling 25 percent this year, according to a new survey.

Internet sales of prerecorded music, such as CDs and cassette tapes, reached $545 million through the third quarter, well behind last year's total of $730 million for the same period, according to the study conducted by research firm comScore Networks.

The study found former Napster users flocked to alternative file-sharing networks such as KaZaA and Morpheus after Napster went offline in the summer of 2001. Morpheus' user base grew from fewer than 1 million in June of that year to 7.2 million by March 2002, comScore said.

Consumers increasingly are seeking the instant gratification of free downloads, and the ability to burn those downloads to blank CDs offers even more personalization and choice, said Phil Leigh, an analyst for Raymond James & Associates.

"The primary message of the CD burner is the consumer doesn't want to be straightjacketed into buying a prepackaged CD," he said. "I think what we're seeing is not only the death of the physical form factor but the death of the prepackaged concept."

There are legitimate ways to buy downloads online, such as Listen.com's Rhapsody service, as well as MusicNet and pressplay; two joint ventures launched by the major recording companies to counter illegal song-sharing.

But those services have yet to release any figures on how many people have actually signed up, and it is hard to gauge their popularity in the face of free downloads from Morpheus and Gnutella network programs.

The comScore study only considered online purchases of recorded media such as CDs and tapes and did not look at paid music downloads.

Netanyahu pushes for early vote

BY GREG MYRE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Ariel Sharon sought to keep his imperiled government afloat Sunday by bringing former Premier Benjamin Netanyahu into the Cabinet, but Netanyahu set a tough condition for joining: early elections.

Israel's two leading right-wing politicians, Sharon and Netanyahu, are trying to work out an alliance while also battling each other to lead the Likud Party into the country's next general election.

The election must be held before November 2003, but it could be brought forward to early next year if Sharon resigns or if his fragile coalition collapses in the coming days or weeks. That could plunge Israel into even greater turmoil as the Israeli-Palestinian conflict drags on and with the threat of a U.S. war with Iraq on the horizon.

In the complex rivalry between Sharon and Netanyahu, both stressed their efforts to resolve the current political crisis, and they played down any suggestion they were jockeying for advantage in the next election.

"I told [Sharon] that I'll be happy to serve as foreign minister on condition that we go to early elections," Netanyahu told Israeli television. "The right thing is to immediately go to new elections," he added, predicting that Likud would double its current 19 seats in the 120-member Parliament.

Sharon wants Netanyahu in the government, a development that could help stabilize the coalition. In addition, Netanyahu would presumably be subject to the discipline of Cabinet decisions rather than having the freedom to criticize the government from the outside.

Sharon "praised the decision in principle by Mr. Netanyahu to join his government," the prime minister's office said in a statement. Netanyahu's demand for early elections was "being examined," Sharon's office added.

Netanyahu could harm his image if he flatly refused to join the government at a moment of crisis.

But analysts said he is reluctant to serve under Sharon as the race for party leader intensifies.

Sharon is the current Likud leader, but a party primary must be held before the next general election.

Some polls have shown Netanyahu winning a head-to-head contest. He would then be positioned to become the next prime minister, according to the polls that show Likud winning the largest number of seats in the next election.

In Israel's chronically unstable political system, the winner of any election will have to work out alliances with a host of smaller parties. Such governments fall regularly; the country has had five prime ministers in the past seven years.

Bush stumps in Minnesota, S. Dakota

BY MIKE ALLEN
WASHINGTON POST

ST. PAUL — President Bush acknowledged Minnesota's mourning Sunday and then plunged his prestige into the race to succeed the late Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn., topping off an unprecedented presidential investment in a midterm election.

Bush's aides had hesitated to inject him into the six-day campaign between former Vice President Walter Mondale, who replaced Wellstone on the ballot, and the Republican recruited by Bush last year, former St. Paul Mayor Norm Coleman.

Sunday's long-planned get-out-the-vote rally for Coleman was briefly scratched from Bush's itinerary after Wellstone's plane crashed. But White House trepidation about politicking in such a delicate environment was erased by the backlash Democrats suffered because of the raucous Republican-baiting at Wellstone's memorial service, which Bush did not attend. "Just nine days ago, you lost a principled senator along with his wife and daughter and five other fellow Americans," Bush told more than 6,000 giddy Republicans who packed an ice-hockey arena. "Paul Wellstone was respected by all who worked with him. He'll be missed by all who knew him."

Bush barely paused as he went on solemnly. "Now a vote is coming on," he said. "Even though your state is still in mourning, I'm here to remind people from all political parties that you have a duty to vote. In spite of the fact that people still mourn, Republicans and Democrats, independents, people who could care less about political parties have an obligation in the land of the free to go to the polls."

Coleman's campaign has been playing up the candidates' 21-year age difference by talking continually about the future, and Bush adopted that tactic in rare departure from his standard stump speech. "Believe me when I say we need fresh air in the United States Senate," he said.

"The future of Minnesota rests with Norm Coleman," Bush, as is his habit, did not directly mention the Democrat in the race.

Don't get us wrong. We are not in favor of drug use. However, Prohibition taught us making drugs illegal doesn't make people stop using them. But it does keep criminals in business by keeping prices and profits high. In Holland and other countries, legalization has not only decreased crime, but addiction levels as well. Something the hundreds of billions we've spent on the war on drugs hasn't accomplished.

The way to win this war is to understand who the real enemy is: not the people who take drugs, but the lawmakers who turn them into criminals by passing anti-dug laws. We're not looking to turn our country into dopeheads. We'd settle for getting the dopes in Des Moines and Washington to stop legislating peoples' lives and realize there are better ways to spend our tax dollars.

Russia lashes back at Chechnya

BY PETER BAKER
WASHINGTON POST

MOSCOW — Russia launched what it called a massive retaliatory military operation in Chechnya on Sunday to avenge the seizure of a Moscow theater, and Chechen guerrillas responded by shooting down another Russian military helicopter in the breakaway republic.

Sergei Ivanov, the Russian Defense minister, announced that he had suspended long-planned troop withdrawals from Chechnya after reports that more "suicide-terrorists" were being trained in preparation for strikes against civilians similar to the theater siege that led to the death of at least 119 hostages last month.

"In recent days, we have been receiving more and more information about preparations for perpetrating new terrorist actions under way in the territory of the Chechen republic — and not just there," Ivanov said in televised remarks. "In some settlements, mercenaries, including suicide bombers, are being recruited — being turned into zombies, I would say. As of today, the forces of all the power structures quartered in Chechnya are carrying out a large-scale, tough but targeted special operation in all the regions of Chechnya."

What that meant on the ground was difficult to determine. Russia has approximately 80,000 troops deployed in Chechnya; despite periodic claims of victory, it has not established uncontested control over the republic. Ivanov's decision to suspend troop pullouts, however, represented a departure for a government that until recently had insisted it no longer needed as many forces to keep order.

The escalation of fighting could mark a new phase in a conflict that has raged off and on for the last eight years, and it underscored the dramatically fading prospects for peace since several dozen Chechen guerrillas seized the Moscow theater on Oct. 23.

Holding more than 800 people hostage, the guerrillas demanded an end to the war in Chechnya, but Russian commandos stormed the theater after pumping a gas into the ventilation system intended to put the hostages and their captors to sleep. The commandos succeeded in recapturing the building, killing nearly all the guerrillas, and saving most of the hostages, but 117 of the 119 slain hostages died as a result of the gas, since identified as a derivative of the opiate fentanyl. The estimate of guerrillas killed has been lowered to 41 or 42, from 50.

Ivanov's announcement Sunday drew a prompt response from rebels in Chechnya. Within hours, they shot down an Mi-8 helicopter flying outside the capital of Grozny, killing nine men aboard, including a deputy commander. This was the second helicopter shot down in a week and the latest of a half-dozen blown out of the sky in the last three months. The deadliest incident was in August, when 119 soldiers and crew aboard an overcrowded transport helicopter were killed.

Military authorities told Russian television that the helicopter that was hit Sunday was struck by a rocket launched from a ruined five-story building in the outskirts of Grozny. Authorities reported cordoning off the area and killing two Chechen fighters in the area afterward.

In the days after the end of the hostage crisis, President Vladimir Putin promised a broader, U.S.-style war on terrorism that could extend beyond Russia's borders. But Ivanov's statement indicated that attention first would be paid to Chechnya. Russian officials have ruled out any peace talks since the theater siege.

The claim of a new, tougher operation in Chechnya, however, left some analysts baffled. "The statement suggests that there had been self-imposed constraints they've been operating under before in terms of military targets," said Robert Nurick, the director of the Moscow Carnegie Center, a research organization. "They've never suggested that before. I can't imagine what they are. If what it means is they're going to be less careful than before in who they go after, it's hard to believe this is going to be any more successful than what they'd been doing."

Pitt in White House dog house

BY MARCY GORDON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush and top aides are losing patience with Harvey Pitt but have not decided whether to seek his ouster as Securities and Exchange Commission chairman, a senior White House official said.

Support for Pitt among Republicans, who had been steadfastly backing him amid Democrats' calls for his resignation, eroded as Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., criticized Pitt's handling of the selection of former FBI Director William Webster to head a new accounting-oversight board.

Pitt is facing an investigation by the SEC's inspector general into whether he concealed from his fellow commissioners information about Webster's watchdog role at a company facing fraud accusations before they named him to head the new board.

"I find Chairman Pitt's decision not to share this information troubling," Shelby said Nov. 2. "It is vitally important right now that we restore confidence in the capital markets, and to do that, we must have disclosure, transparency, and honesty in our oversight of the market."

Shelby will become the senior Republican on the Senate Banking Committee in January after Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, retires from the Senate. If the GOP regains control of the Senate in Tuesday's elections, Shelby would become the committee chairman.

Shelby said he supported calls by Democratic lawmakers last week for hearings by the committee on Webster's selection.

Plea bargain concludes Pierce case

PIERCE

enter this plea on behalf of my client," Parrish said, refusing to comment further.

Moments later Assistant Johnson County Attorney Anne Lahey exited the courthouse visibly upset by the ruling.

"I am merely the messenger today," she told a swarm of reporters. "That doesn't mean I had any input in the resolution nor that I believe in the resolution."

Lahey added that the state has sufficient evidence to prosecute Pierce, but the victim and her family wanted to end the case.

"In my experience, this is somewhat unusual, but not unheard of," she said of the ruling. "She wanted to protect her privacy."

White became involved in the case on Sept. 11, when he interviewed the victim and her parents and requested a criminal investigation. At first, the family was apprehensive that the victim's name would be made public but consented to pressing charges as long as prosecutors respected her wishes at every step.

"We would not have [accepted the plea agreement] if we didn't have the advocacy and support of the victim or if [Pierce] had a previous criminal record," White said on Nov. 1 in a teleconference from his home, where he is recovering from heart surgery.

White also admonished UI men's basketball coach Steve Alford for maintaining Pierce's innocence since his Oct. 1 arrest on the sexual-abuse charge. Alford was "absolutely wrong," and his comments were "extremely hurtful" to the victim, White said.

"Steve Alford's comments illustrate some of the difficulties in sexual-assault cases," White said. "Whether or not he was not informed or naïve, I don't know."

After the case was resolved Nov. 1, Alford continued his support for Pierce and his family and also apologized to the victim and her family in a written statement.

"Pierre has admitted his mistakes and is prepared to accept his punishment," he wrote.

While redshirting this season, Pierce will retain his scholarship and be allowed to eat, practice, and travel with the team. However, he did not attend the Black and Gold Blowout on Nov. 1, a promotional Hawkeye scrimmage.

Judge Thomas Horan also prohibited Pierce from having contact with the victim, because the two athletes use some of the same equipment on campus. Conlin said the Athletics Department has a confidential plan to ensure that Pierce abides by the no-contact order.

Conlin told reporters during a press conference Nov. 1 that the UI was not involved in negotiations but was periodically contacted to make sure lawyers were not in violation of university rules.

She persistently told reporters that the victim's confidentiality was the largest factor in the case.

"This is what both students wanted — both students," Conlin said. "The victim and her family think it's fair. The county attorney thinks it's fair. The judge thinks it's fair, and I think this is fair."

Major quake shakes Alaskan wilderness

BY DAN JOLING
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — A major earthquake rocked a sparsely populated area of interior Alaska early Sunday afternoon, damaging supports to the trans-Alaska oil pipeline and opening 6-foot cracks in highways and roads.

The magnitude 7.9 quake, centered 90 miles south of Fairbanks, was strongly felt in Anchorage, approximately 270 miles to the south. It hit at 1:13 p.m. Alaska Standard Time, said Bruce Turner of the West Coast and Alaska Tsunami Warning Center.

"It shook for a good 30 seconds," he said; it did not generate a tsunami.

Only one injury was reported; a 76-year-old woman in Mentasta broke her arm after slipping on stairs, State Trooper spokesman Greg Wilkinson said. Support structures were damaged on the trans-Alaska oil pipeline, but the pipeline itself was intact, said Mike Heatwole, a spokesman for the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.

The quake triggered a detection system, and operators manually shut down the pipeline around 2 p.m., he said.

In five locations, vertical support members, the H-shape devices that hold the above-ground portions of the pipeline, were damaged. In eight locations, the "shoes" that connect the pipeline to the vertical support members were on the ground, leaving the pipeline suspended, Heatwole said.

Repair crews were working to reduce stress on the pipeline. "We'll also be mobilizing several additional crews at first light," Heatwole said.

Heatwole said company officials should know by mid-morning today how long it will take to restart the pipeline. He did not know whether North Slope crude-oil deliveries would be disrupted.

Pierce sentence too light, many locals say

Some worry that it might have an effect on future cases

BY MARIEL MAUCK
THE DAILY IOWAN

Some UI students and officials say Iowa basketball player Pierre Pierce's plea bargain, which dropped his class C felony charge to a serious misdemeanor, was too lenient and may pose a threat to future sexual-assault cases.

Linda Kroon, a program assistant in the Women's Resource and Action Center, said the outcome of Pierce's case could cause rape victims to think twice before reporting crimes. Authorities said the plea bargain was reached to protect the victim, a UI female athlete.

"Trials are never an easy process for victims of sexual assault cases," Kroon said. "Allowing perpetrators to bargain their way out of it has the potential to deter recent and future survivors of sexual assault about coming forward and pressing charges. It makes trials seem like another episode to be victimized."

The assault causing injury charge will be wiped from Pierce's record if he successfully completes counseling and 200 hours of community service.

"This may also affect how seriously the perpetrators and society could view such crimes, if people can bargain their way to an easier sentence," Kroon said.

Pierce was also ordered not to contact the victim as part of the deal.

Some UI students said they believe the sophomore guard received special treatment because he is an athlete. Pierce, who was suspended from the team by Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby, will be allowed to practice, eat, and travel with the basketball team this year while retaining his scholarship. He will redshirt during the 2002-03 season.

"Just because you are good at a sport doesn't mean you don't have to accept the consequences like everyone else does," said UI junior Ellen Samuel.

Some students said they were distracted about how the situation was handled by the judicial system and the university.

"The university is helping him more than it would help anyone else, and that just isn't right," said UI senior Bryan Shepherd.

Even devoted Hawkeye fans were quick to say Pierce's punishment didn't fit the offense, and some say their disillusionment with the player will likely spread to the rest of the team as well.

"It was a violent, despicable act, and now he gets to do community service like someone charged with [drunk driving] or something," said UI freshman and Hawkeye fan Libby Krueger.

million and is outspending Leach 2 to 1.

Nationwide, Iowa is unique: The state uses a nonpartisan state agency to draw new legislative and congressional districts after each census.

In several other states, the parties in control of the legislatures and governorships draw lines often favorable to their own party.

Iowa's system has been praised through the country as an asset to democracy, leaving incumbents to face new constituents.

In Iowa's new 1st District, Nussle leads his Democratic opponent, Ann Hutchinson, in the polls, but as a former Republican, Hutchinson is seen as a moderate. As mayor of Bettendorf, she has represented a 10-percent chunk of the area.

Rep. Leonard Boswell moved from Davis City to Des Moines and the new 3rd District after his former district turned into the Republican-heavy western 5th District.

The three-term Democrat now has a slight advantage — 34 to 33 percent of registered voters — but his opponent, Stan Thompson, hails from Des Moines, a city that makes up almost 30 percent of the district.

After Boswell moved to Des Moines, John Norris moved into Ames and the new 4th District to face Rep. Tom Latham.

Latham has represented only 50 percent of the new district. Both candidates have raised $1 million apiece.

The only safe district is Iowa's 5th, where Republican Steve King and Democrat Paul Shomshor face off for the open seat in a district that leans Republican, 41 percent to 24.

GOP hopes to maintain control

MIDTERM

There, the average loss is four seats, and the potential for a large shift is diminished because only one-third of the seats are on the ballot at a time. The party in power has gained Senate seats seven times at midterm since 1902.

"From a historical perspective, the parties are much more at parity than they have been for some time. You have roughly a 50-50 country in which large swings are less likely," said Howard Wolfson, the executive director of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

Additionally, said Wolfson, Davis, and several strategists in both parties, incumbents in both parties used congressional redistricting to create hundreds of safe seats, reducing the likelihood of a large swing for the next decade.

"Redistricting has become such a computer-driven process and an incumbent-driven process," said Geoffrey Garin, a Democratic pollster. "And it has produced a situation in which now a competitive district is very much more than exception than the rule."

Most of the party-financed campaign advertising has been conducted in 40 or so districts around the country, a signal that neither side ever thought a large swing of seats was possible.

In California, where Democrats gained five seats in the 2000 elections, redistricting produced one competitive race at most out of 53 seats. New York, a strongly Democratic state with 29 seats, has only one where a switch in party seems possible.

Redistricting resulted in the shift of seats to states more receptive to the GOP, providing a further cushion against a large midterm loss, according to Republican pollster Tony Fabrizio.

Bush has maintained high approval ratings, and the terrorist attacks and debate over possible war with Iraq have complicated Democratic efforts to turn the election into a referendum on economic issues.

"For several months after Sept. 11, we were essentially operating on a unity government, which doesn't favor the party out of power," Wolfson said.

"When you look back at a lot of those midterms, some were directly related to events that were going on nationally," Fabrizio said.

upkeep, although attempts at controlling the smelly berries have failed. According to a local nursery, removing the trees would cost the university around $225 per tree, a cost that would pay for itself in a year by eliminating the cost of maintenance.

Diana Horton, an associate biology professor, said she is outraged by the plans to remove the ginkgoes, which are rare in North America.

"This is very shocking that in a university, of all places, individuals would display such ignorance to something like this," she said. "The female ginkgoes are unusual to see. We are lucky to have them."

The Pentacrest is one of the few places the female ginkgoes stand in Iowa City, Horton said, calling them "living fossils with a fascinating story." The trees have a longer history than most plants on Earth, she said. The tree's fossil record stretches back 100 million years, and their plant division's fossil history reaches back up to 200 million years, she said.

Iowa City resident Jamie McKinstry also said the removal of the trees is horrible.

"I've never noticed the smell, and personally cigarette smoke would bother me more than the smell from the trees," she said. "The trees should be left alone. They are gorgeous, and they show how historic the university is."

Removing the trees, some of which could be more than 100 years old, might lower their chances of survival because of their large underground root systems, Horton said.

"It's so interesting to see the rare seeds of the ginkgo trees," she said. "And it's all the more reason to protect and celebrate them."

Letters to the Editor

Funding from us

I have read with dismay a letter from an Iowa City resident regarding the Domestic Violence Intervention Project losing all government funding (DI, Oct. 28). Before I begin, let me say that I support the mission of the project and other charities, but what dismays me is the attitude implied in the letter that government should be responsible for funding a private charity.

Consider: At the last census, there were 44,080 households in Johnson County. Now, if each of those households had just $10 per month going to a centralized charity foundation in our county, that would total $440,000 per month or $5.28 million per year for charities based in and serving the population of Johnson County.

Ah, but I hear you saying, "That's unrealistic. Not every household will contribute to such a fund." Sadly, you're probably right. It's a pity that the womb-to-tomb social programs of the last century have brought us to the point where we, as a society, no longer care enough about the less fortunate among us to spare a mere 10 bucks a month to help them out. But how about an incentive? If such a fund were instituted in every county in the state (dare I say, country?), every charity would have enough money to do their work without having to depend on the whims of slaves to a platform. And best of all, if charities had all the money they needed, we wouldn't have to fund the government to take care of those things. I had more than $300 in taxes taken out of my check last month. I'd be more than happy to give back even 10 percent of that amount if it meant it would never happen again. But that's not going to happen with the Republican/Democrat status quo. Maybe we should consider a better way?

Traffic problems

Everyone who drives on Grand and Melrose avenues should contact the Iowa City city councilors today or Tuesday to ask them to postpone the decision to vacate Grand Avenue Court and give it to the UI. E-mail council@iowa-city.org, phone 356-5000, or go to the council meetings at the Civic Center on the days when the final votes will be taken.

Here's why: The UI wants a pedestrian campus at the east end of Melrose. Its plan is to close Grand Avenue Court and part of Grand Avenue itself — a major part of an important east-west arterial and the current access to the UIHC emergency room. That would leave Melrose Avenue as the sole part of the arterial. Melrose is only two lanes at its east end, and widening Melrose in its current alignment there would be difficult because of steep elevations.

Thus, Councilor Dee Vanderhoef suggested a six-month study of the area's traffic flow before the council votes on vacation of Grand Avenue Court. This delay is of vital importance because the study might show that the best solution is to change the alignment of Melrose to a more northerly route, taking it through part of the court. If the court is given to the UI before the study is done, the city cannot reclaim it ever again because the UI is under state rather than local laws.

By voting prematurely to hand over the street to the UI, the council would curtail the city's options for the best alignment of streets in the area.

If Grand Avenue is not closed, Grand Avenue Court must be left open. The UI says that the street is unimportant to local traffic, but it is used by many people going to the law building, the daycare centers, the cultural centers, the Mormon institute, and Lucon Drive. With the court closed, these people must go to the Grand Avenue/Melrose intersection. As they wait to turn east, they hold up all the traffic trying to turn west. That's bad on a major arterial.

The UI started building the Athletics Learning Center very close to the court without waiting for the city's vote to vacate the street, but it has said that it can complete the building where it is and still leave the street passable. So vacation is not essential for building the learning center.

The traffic hold-up at the Grand/Melrose intersection could get a lot worse if the court is permanently closed before a study is done and an alternative implemented. So contact your councilors now to ask them to do what is best for all of the citizens of Iowa City — before it is too late.

Coffee activists using wrong method to implement policy

If local social activists get their way, alcohol will not be the only beverage that police write tickets for downtown. Instead, certain coffee blends will be placed on the list of banned substances, and retailers would have to pay a fine for selling the proscribed beans.

These social activists are championing the goals of protecting the environment and helping small farmers around the world by restricting the coffee available in Iowa City to organic, Fair Trade, and shade-grown blends. However, instead of the traditional route of sit-ins at the Pentacrest, these activists headed straight to the City Council with a proposal for an ordinance that includes criminal charges and fines for violators. Unfortunately, the activists fail to see that while promoting coffee produced in a socially responsible way is a noble aspiration, education, not legislation, is the key.

There are many reasons that legislation and enforcement of food laws is best left to federal agencies such as the Food and Drug Administration. Local officials do not have the time to learn and examine all the various arguments surrounding these complex issues. In the end, they would be writing an ordinance based on hearsay and incomplete information. In addition, local law-enforcement officials have better things to do than catch coffee bandits. Most people would rather have the police arresting drunk drivers than running around town playing "Coffee Cop."

By taking the legislative route first, proponents of socially responsible coffee are bypassing a much more powerful tool: education. The socially responsible coffee movement is fairly obscure and unknown to many coffee drinkers in Iowa City. Just as it took time and effort to educate consumers about clothing produced in sweatshops, it will require patience to educate people about the plight of small coffee farmers around the world.

To begin with, activists can choose to patronize and support only retailers who offer the new coffee blends and encourage others to do the same. Once a large number of people begin regularly asking for it, retailers will quickly see the economic incentive in selling this type of coffee. Obviously, when dealing with business, economic incentives are much more effective than legislation and prohibition.

There are already enough people drinking beverages illegally in Iowa City without adding coffee to the list. With the PC coffee already easily available, there is no need for any new legislation. Instead, activists should make sure that the residents of Iowa City are aware of the social issues involved every time they buy a cup of java. Local citizens have shown time and again that they are willing to champion virtually any worthy social cause. And, if activists manage to reach the coffee drinkers of Iowa City but retailers refuse to offer the new coffee, there will be thousands of caffeine-starved social-activists roaming the streets. In the end, that sounds much scarier than any ticket the police could write.

Leaving U.S. behind, or, all dopey on the Eastern Front

Marc and I used to discuss the Supreme Court. We used to debate legislative strategy, public education, and foreign policy. Since he left Iowa City a year and a half ago — a few months after Bush and friends came to power — in the few short moments we get to share our thoughts with each other, we talk war. Scanning the newspapers, eavesdropping in diners, and following campaigns, I get the impression that our situation is not unique. Indeed, any respectable citizen, journalist, or politician who wishes to be taken seriously nowadays must, apparently, focus the entirety of her or his energies on Iraq. It all makes me feel a lot like Mexico.

I don't mean that I feel like returning there; I mean I feel like I am Mexico.

Two years ago, when the election dust cleared — or at least when enough dust was thrown up in the air that Bush and the Supreme Court were able to bum-rush the process — and the current administration came to power, I was disappointed with the poisonous national polarization. Fortunately, I told myself, our new president is a Uniter, not a Divider.

Furthermore, I was thrilled at the prospect that relations with our neighbors to the south would become stronger than ever. Even if the policy itself was to have a decidedly conservative-businessman slant to it, still, we would at least be talking with one of our greatest potential allies, a country rich in culture and resources that we have for too long misunderstood, mistreated, or ignored.

Mexico, however, no longer exists on the administration's radar. Neither does Cuba, or Turkey, or Indonesia, or Zimbabwe, or Brazil, let alone the seemingly endless parade of smaller emerging nations such as Bahrain that — like each of these other countries — have either problems or potential of utmost significance to global and U.S. interests. Most recently, we are giving Germany, the country with the most to offer us in terms of assistance in any sort of international undertaking, the cold shoulder. And for participating in the same sort of exploitative election politicking as we do. How dare they. How dare anybody ... unless they are Bush.

George Bush — as a symbol of the White House administration and, unfortunately, the whole of the United States of America — foments contempt at home and abroad because to "negotiate" with him, to participate in a dialogue, is to play by his rules or not at all. Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., of the Judiciary Committee said last week of Bush's annoyance with the process of appointing several new federal judges: "The president's idea of 'compromise' on judges basically says, 'Give me everything I want.' Right now, Bush wants Iraq. (Whether his intentions are honest or suspect — I personally believe that, in his mind, they are more idealistic than most liberals give him credit for — is beside the point. Intentions do not an effective implementation make.) Iraq is on the administration's radar, and it is the only thing on the administration's radar. Tellingly, Iraq is not even blipping as a result of Bush himself so much as the Four Force-men of the Apocalypse: Cheney, Ashcroft, Rumsfeld, and Wolfowitz, a lineup that might sound a bit like a law firm if it weren't so vehemently opposed to the international and domestic rule of law.

In the meantime, back home, the masses and the vast majority of the political and military experts who have actually dealt with warfare before are getting restless. It's not that everyone everywhere disagrees with the proposal to go to war; it's that genuine questions about the national interest and the future of the affected region from all sides of the political spectrum are being ignored. Economies are tossed by the wayside, civil liberties are sniveled at if paid any attention at all, and important inquiries are derided as anti-American.

If the Bush administration is going to desert the United States and its principles, let's at least make it official. Let's keep intact the much needed middle and lower ranks of the Department of Defense (DoD), separating from those valuable civil servants the militarily and diplomatically inexperienced Department of Offense (DoO) and Department of Pre-Emptive Yahoos (DoPEY). Let's build the latter two groups, composed of a powerful few, a very sleek-looking pirate ship and send them to sea.

While you're gone, we'll say to them, we'll take care of the country. We'll be figuring out where we stand on education and welfare, religion and immigration, urban reform and farm subsidization, business, and — as opposed to foreign subjugations — foreign relations. Remember those issues? You may see it as the least classically heroic of tasks, the day-to-day management of a complex and frustrating country. But we see it as a necessary and noble undertaking. Good luck on your manifesting destinies. Write when you find war.

I wish we could say that, but our time and tongues have been cut short. There was something I meant to mention about Marc and about Mexico, but these visions of imperialists are now all that remain.

Mark Wahlberg and Thandie Newton star in The Truth About Charlie, a remake of the 1963 caper Charade.

Who the hell does Mark Wahlberg think he is?

Last year, he took on Charlton Heston's role in the Planet of the Apes remake. In 2003, he'll pretend to be Michael Caine in The Italian Job. And right now, he's committing a huge blunder by trying to fill the shoes of Hollywood legend Cary Grant in this remake of the 1963 caper Charade.

Regina Lampert (Thandie Newton, in a part originally essayed by Audrey Hepburn) comes home from vacation to find her husband's been murdered and his assets liquidated. Enter Joshua Peters (Wahlberg), an attractive stranger who isn't who he seems to be. Regina's caught up in a plot involving stolen government money and a set of mercenaries intent on stealing it.

What's really irksome, though, is that Wahlberg's not the worst replacement actor. Newton (last seen in the middling Tom Cruise vanity project Mission: Impossible II) has the GALL to try to emulate Hepburn. Although the African-born British actress is appropriately waif-like, she has almost none of the inherent charm of her predecessor. When she mangles a classic line such as "You know what's wrong with you? Absolutely nothing," it becomes an internal struggle not to jump over the plush stadium seating and rip at the screen.

The worst part of it all is that, like Charade, The Truth about Charlie chooses to hang much of its plausibility on the charisma of its leads. Unfortunately, they don't have any this time around.

Film: The Truth About Charlie
Director: Jonathan Demme
Writers: Demme, Steve Schmidt, Peter Stone, and Jessica Bendinger
Starring: Thandie Newton, Mark Wahlberg, and Tim Robbins
Length: 104 minutes

Director Jonathan Demme should be smacked against the back of the head. This is the man responsible for some of the better films of the '90s, including Silence of the Lambs and Philadelphia, but give him what is supposed to be a lighthearted romp, and he turns it into a souless piece of tripe where the most unlikeable person is the hero. Hell, the climax (if you can call it that) completely ignores Newton's character and involves the world's most tedious foot race, not to mention a lackluster multi-gun showdown.

On top of that, the cinematography is among the most annoying of recent years. Indeed, a few early sequences border on nausea-inducing because the quick-cuts mixed with the panning camera movements wreak havoc on the inner ear.

The Truth About Charlie, which seems mostly content to be a shallow little thriller, toys with moments of misplaced humor. It's as if the makers were trying to twist the basics of Charade into a completely different film but weren't ready to drop its most appealing elements — which then become wholly unappealing, because they weren't properly integrated into the feel of the flick.

There are some bright spots. The villains aren't all clichés — for once we have an Asian character who doesn't know martial arts. Tim Robbins, who shows up as a secret agent, is fairly amusing (despite his muddled Bahstahn accent). Plus, one has to admit, Wahlberg looks very cool in a brimmed hat.

I'm usually an opponent of looking down upon a remake simply because it doesn't match up to its source. In this scenario, though, I spent 100-odd minutes wishing I was seeing a classier, older film. Charade has often been compared with Alfred Hitchcock's lighter work. The Truth About Charlie deserves to be placed with the remnants of Hitchcock's lighter meals: in the trash.

When the beat doesn't go on

BY LARRY MCSHANE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — As one of the forefathers of rap, with a history of social activism, Run-DMC's Jam Master Jay was an unlikely target for the kind of violence that killed rappers Tupac Shakur or the Notorious B.I.G.

He was married with three kids, and a fixture in the Queens neighborhood where he grew up. Yet authorities have been searching since Oct. 31 for the gunman who killed the 37-year-old disc jockey with a gunshot to the head inside his recording studio.

"Jam Master Jay was a longtime family man and one of the founders of the group that knocked down all the doors for hip-hop, and a dear friend of mine," said Russell Simmons, the hip-hop impresario whose brother Joe was Jay's bandmate.

"I loved him," said a devastated Simmons. "I will miss him. He is irreplaceable."

Chuck D, frontman for rappers Public Enemy, agreed with that sentiment.

"You draw the comparison with when John Lennon was shot," he said. "It's an enormous loss to the genre."

The DJ — whose real name was Jason Mizell — was the man behind the music, working the turntables as Joe "Run" Simmons and Darryl "DMC" McDaniels rapped over his hard rock beats on such hits as "Rock Box," "King of Rock," and their Top 40 cover of Aerosmith's "Walk This Way."

"He was family to me," McDaniels said. "He stuck to the true essence of what a DJ in a hip-hop performance should be. The whole music industry has lost a great talent."

He spun and scratched records on twin turntables simultaneously, creating a new style and sound that was copied by endless disc jockeys. "If Grandmaster Flash was the first famous DJ, Jay had to be the second," said Andre Harrell, a Mizell contemporary who now heads Nu America Music.

While breaking new ground, Run-DMC made hip-hop commercially viable, becoming a platinum-selling act that earned a 1987 Grammy nomination.

In a 2001 interview with the Associated Press, Mizell talked about how some people initially said rap was a passing fad.

"I hated that, because even before we were making records, I knew it couldn't be a fad because it was the biggest thing in the world to me," he said.

Run-DMC created opportunities for untold rappers to follow, expanding their work into movies and a line of clothing.

"It's a terrible loss," Adam Horowitz of the Beastie Boys, who joined Run-DMC on a national tour in the mid-1980s. "If Jam Master Jay and Run-DMC hadn't looked out for us way back when, I don't know where we'd be now."

Run-DMC, three friends who hailed from the Hollis section of Queens, was always about the thuggishness that later came to dominate hip-hop. "It's not like we just have scrambled brains and gold chains," McDaniels once told the AP.

Last year, Simmons said: "We never talked about nothing that was ungodly — too much anyways. Run-DMC was no thugged-out gangsta killers, cursing all over their records."

It was the only rap act at Live Aid, the fund-raising concert for African famine victims, and they joined Little Steven Van Zandt for the anti-apartheid anthem Sun City. It also contributed the track "Christmas in Hollis" to the Special Olympics project A Very Special Christmas.

Run-DMC did anti-drug concerts, established scholarships, and set up voter registration booths at its live shows.

"They represented everything good and positive about hip-hop," remembered Simmons.

The band achieved a level of fame previously unheard of for rappers. Its list of firsts is staggering: first rappers with a gold album, first with a platinum album, first on American Bandstand, first on the cover of Rolling Stone.

Its videos became MTV staples. And though its record sales had waned in recent years, it remained a formidable concert draw: The group recently completed a tour with Aerosmith and Kid Rock.

"They're the Rolling Stones of rap," Ice Cube said recently.

In a 1987 interview with the AP, the trio sipped tea in a Manhattan hotel room. The band revealed, giggling, why they decided to bring Aerosmith singer Steven Tyler in for their remake of "Walk This Way": because none of them knew the lyrics.

Mizell recalled scratching the song for Tyler, repeating guitarist Joe Perry's riff without ever getting to the vocals — evidence of their fascination with beats over lyrics.

In Queens, fans had created an impromptu memorial to Mizell outside his recording studio, just a short distance from the neighborhood in which he grew up.

"We've lost a legend," said fan Terrence Chadwick, 37, standing outside the studio. "Jam Master Jay was truly a legend to this community."

Lewis arrested
Iowa win Sunday

IOWA CITY — Iowa back Jermelle Lewis, arrested for disorderly conduct and criminal mischief Sunday.

Lewis, 20, was arrested at the Pedestrian Mall Sunday. He was found fighting with a man, Peter Ebot, 24.

Sgt. Vicki Lalla said Lewis started in an alleyway and kicked Ebot's car, causing $1,000 in damage, estimated in excess of $1,000.

The incident happened about 10 hours after Lewis rushed for 81 yards in a 20-3 win over the Hawkeyes. He was released from Johnson County Jail Sunday, officials said.

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz instituted a discipline plan for the fall that focuses on academics and education, said Ferentz. Lewis would be handled by the program and Lewis.

"I'm looking into it. Based on what I know at this time, the matter will be handled internally," Ferentz said in a prepared statement. "I'm not minimizing what happened, but it appears to be just a matter between two people."

"Unless new information comes to my attention, we'll proceed," Ferentz said.

Lewis arrested after Iowa win Sunday

IOWA CITY — Iowa running back Jermelle Lewis, right, was arrested for disorderly conduct and criminal mischief early Sunday.

Lewis, 20, was arrested near the Pedestrian Mall after police found him fighting with another man, Peter Ebot, 24.

Sgt. Vicki Lalla said the fight started in an alley after Lewis kicked Ebot's car, causing damage estimated in excess of $200.

The incident happened approximately 10 hours after Lewis rushed for 81 yards in 25 carries in a 20-3 win over the Badgers. He was released from the Johnson County Jail later Sunday, officials said.

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz, who instituted a discipline policy this fall that focuses on punishment and education, said the matter would be handled between him and Lewis.

"I'm looking into the matter. Based on what I know at this time, the matter will be handled internally," Ferentz said in a prepared statement. "I'm not minimizing what happened. But it appears to be just a minor spat between two people."

"Unless new information comes to my attention, that is how we'll proceed," he said.

Iowa's defensive dominance up front snares 6-0 start, No. 6 in polls

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa may not be sitting atop either national poll at the moment, but it is the best in the nation when it comes to one thing — stopping the run.

With their 20-3 victory over Wisconsin, which saw the Hawkeyes limit the Badgers to just 78 rushing yards, Iowa moved past Virginia Tech to become the nation's most effective run-stopping defensive unit. Through 10 games, Iowa has allowed opponents an average of just 63.9 yards rushing this season.

That defensive dominance up front has helped the Hawkeyes get off to their best Big Ten start ever at 6-0 and has helped keep Iowa atop the Big Ten standings. It has also helped ensure a steady climb up the national rankings, this week to No. 6 in both major polls.

How dominant was Iowa's defense against the Badgers? Well, Iowa held running back Anthony Davis to a career-low 16 carries for 34 yards. And Davis isn't just an ordinary back — the sophomore topped the 1,000-yard mark for the second-consecutive season with his effort.

The performance directly correlates to a not-so-new mentality that the Hawkeyes have adopted this season.

"Our guys like to hit," Ferentz said. "That's been a Hawkeye tradition, one that we're starting to pick up again."

In fact, Iowa hit so hard against the Badgers they knocked both starting quarterback Brooks Bollinger and his backup, Jim Sorgi, out of the game. Bollinger took a helmet-

Iowa's Jermelle Lewis breaks through the pack on Nov. 2 against Wisconsin. Lewis finished the game with 81 yards rushing and five on one reception in his start over the injured Fred Russell. Russell was out of the game with a sprained wrist.

Kobe scores triple-double, leads Lakers to OT victory

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Kobe Bryant had his second straight triple-double, and Devean George scored six of his career-high 25 points in overtime Sunday night as the Lakers rallied for a 98-95 victory over the Trail Blazers.

Bryant had 33 points, 14 rebounds, and 12 assists to become the first Lakers player with consecutive triple-doubles since Magic Johnson in March 1991.

Two baskets by George and a 3-pointer by Brian Shaw gave the Lakers a 92-85 lead with 3:13 left in overtime.

But the Blazers fought back, and a three-point play by Derek Anderson with 1:48 remaining drew them within one.

Bryant made a basket, and Anderson, who scored eight of his 24 points in overtime, made two free throws before George hit a pair of foul shots with 16.7 seconds left to complete the scoring.

The Lakers again played without Shaquille O'Neal, on the injured list while recovering from surgery on his right big toe, and Rick Fox, suspended for six games for his fight with Sacramento's Doug Christie during the preseason.

The Blazers were without Arvydas Sabonis, who strained his right hamstring Saturday night in a 96-79 loss to Denver.

Los Angeles 74, Detroit 72

LOS ANGELES — Michael Olowokandi had 19 points and tied a career-high with 20 rebounds to lead the Clippers over the Pistons for their first victory of the season.

Elton Brand added 17 points and 13 rebounds for the Clippers, who avoided their second 0-3 start in five years.

Richard Hamilton led Detroit, which had won two straight, with 25 points. Clifford Robinson added 13 points, but missed a 3-pointer at the buzzer that would have won the game. Ben Wallace had 16 rebounds.

Wang Zhizhi, the 7-foot-1 Chinese center, got his first extended playing time for the Clippers, scoring five points in 10 minutes of the second half.

Los Angeles didn't lead until Keyon Dooling's 3-pointer with three-tenths of a second left in the third quarter made it 58-55.

Miami 88, Sacramento 78

MIAMI — Reserves Mike James and Vladimir Stepania sparked a 12-0 run in the fourth quarter that helped the Heat hand the Kings their first loss.

Miami won for the first time, and coach Pat Riley avoided the first 0-3 start of his career.

Keon Clark scored 19 points for the Kings (3-1), who were again without three regulars and shot just 36 percent.

Starters Bobby Jackson and Predrag Stojakovic were a combined 6-for-30, and Sacramento went 2-for-14 from 3-point range.

Malik Allen had 15 points against the Kings, who released him before the season two years ago. Eddie Jones led Miami with 16 points, and Brian Grant had 10 points and 14 rebounds in 28 minutes.

Seattle 91, Utah 77

SEATTLE — Gary Payton scored 18 points on 9-of-12 shooting, helping the SuperSonics to a 3-0 start.

Karl Malone got into early foul trouble and went scoreless on 0-for-7 shooting, the first time he's been shut out in his 18 NBA seasons.

Andre Kirilenko scored 17 points for the Jazz, while Matt Harpring had 16 and Scott Padgett 10. John Stockton finished with eight points on 1-of-4 shooting with five assists.

Malone's previous career low was two points on Dec. 18, 1985, his rookie season.

MENS & WOMENS CROSS-COUNTRY

Hawkeyes hampered by injuries, hesitations

BY JEROD LEUPOLD
THE DAILY IOWAN

Sometimes the wage for sports competition is blood. Hawkeye top-tier runner Matt Esche received six stitches after being spiked Sunday at the Big Ten meet in West Lafayette, Ind. Only 500 meters into the 8,000-meter race, redshirt freshman Esche, with the fastest Iowa time of the season, went down. "I got knocked down three times by other runners," Esche said. "They didn't see me. You don't expect someone to pop up in front of you during a race." Esche couldn't finish the race and Iowa couldn't seize the day. The Hawkeyes finished in seventh place, 29 points behind No. 22 ranked Michigan State. Wisconsin was led by last year's Verizon cross-country Athlete of the Year Matt Tagenkamp. Tagenkamp helped his team to No. 1 in the Big Ten and its fourth Big Ten championship. Indiana, Michigan State, and Iowa kept their rankings of Nos. 4, 6, and 7. Ohio State dropped to fifth, while Michigan and Minnesota jumped to No. 2 and 3. Illinois, Purdue, and Penn State round out Nos. 8, 9, and 10. "It was disappointing," sophomore Tony Rakaric said. "But, we had great individual performances." Rakaric is referring to Stephen Traphagen and Ben Lloyd, who finished Nos. 6 and 7 for the Hawkeye squad. Normally, teams may field only seven runners. The Big Ten allows nine, and that gave both Traphagen and Lloyd a chance to prove themselves with season-best times. Micah VanDenend and Joe Welter were the only Hawkeyes to finish with sub-25 minute times. VanDenend led Iowa with a finish of 27th place with Welter close behind at 31. Esche pointed to the breakdown of pack running, attributing to Iowa's finish. The Hawkeyes try to run together, to help push each other. "When one person waits and doesn't make the pass, it stretches a team out," Esche said. "Those hesitations kill you." Despite the missed opportunity for national rank improvement, the Hawkeyes remain confident. "It didn't help us or hurt us," coach Larry Wiecezorek said. "We held onto our ranking." The Hawkeyes get a crucial two weeks to recuperate mentally and physically before regionals. "It gives us time to shift focus," Wiecezorek said. "And to recover psychically and help us tune up." Esche will remain on crutches until he feels healthy and is ready to run. Team haunted with an 11th-place finish What seemed like a not-so-difficult task on Nov. 1 turned into a nightmare for the Iowa women's cross-country team. The Hawkeyes traveled to West Lafayette, Ind., for the Big Ten championships with hopes of moving out of the last-place finish last season. Instead of moving up three or four spots, as coach Wayne Angel had hoped, it seemed the ghosts of Big Ten championships' past came back to haunt Iowa. The Hawkeyes remained in the same position they ended in last season — No. 11. Michigan won the contest with 70 points, and Michigan State placed second with 73 points in the smallest margin of victory in Big Ten cross-country history. The top two runners in the race came from Michigan State. Michelle Carson finished first for the Spartans and in the championships with a time of 17:24. Angel was disappointed with Iowa's finish because he knew the Hawks were capable of running better. "We have been doing so well, and I think they had a mental block," he said. "I do think they ran badly; the difference between this meet and our last meet at Alabama was that they knew all these teams and they may have thought that last place was where they were supposed to be," he said. Sarah Arens was the Hawkeyes' top runner for the 11th meet in a row. Arens finished No. 58 with a time of 18:58. The Hawkeyes' next best finisher was Katie Donion, who completed the race at No. 80. The meet marked the end of the cross-country season for the Hawkeyes. Although the season ended on a bad note, Angel hopes the Hawkeyes will learn from the breakdown. "Hopefully, we will learn to get over our mental block, and we will eventually compete well at the Big Ten championships," he said. — by Michelle Yong

IOWA WEEKEND ROAD BRIEFS

Hawkeyes lose in OT

The Iowa field-hockey team suffered its second-consecutive overtime loss in its last game of the regular season against Penn State in State College, Pa. The No. 6 ranked Nittany Lions defeated the No. 13 Hawkeyes, 3-2, ending the game in under four and a half minutes overtime on a goal from Heather Conroy. Penn State got off to an early lead after eight minutes, 20 seconds with a goal from Timarie Legel. At one point, however, the Hawkeyes held a 2-1 lead after Pattie Gillern and Sarah Dawson each knocked in second-half goals. Gillern now leads the team in points with 14 and is tied for first with Tiffany Leister with six goals. Lauren Edwards was credited with the assist on Gillern's goal. The lead did not last long as Penn State's Sara Cahill tied things up with under 10 minutes to play in regulation. The remaining minutes of the half were scoreless, forcing overtime where Cahill's goal, which came on the only shot by either team in the extra-frame, handed Iowa the loss. The Hawkeyes led in shots on goal, 13-11, and in penalty corners, 12-10. Junior goalkeeper Barb Weinberg made four saves for Iowa. — by Brian Triplett

Hawk's defense shines despite losses

The Iowa volleyball team suffered a pair of road losses over the weekend, playing for the first time without standout Renee Hill, who suffered a season-ending knee injury on Oct. 27. Despite the loss of their leading hitter, the Hawkeyes reaped top-notch performances from Amoreena Reynolds and Echaka Agba, who attacked for a ### combined 48 kills in Iowa's 3-2 match loss to Purdue on Nov. 1.

Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett said that while it is difficult to lose Hill's consistent play, there were positive aspects of the weekend. "The defense played very well, and Amoreena and Echaka had an excellent night [against Purdue]," Buck-Crockett said. It took the Boilermakers five games to defeat the Hawkeyes, with Iowa winning the second and third games. Iowa could not hold on to the lead in the fourth game, losing narrowly, 30-28. In Iowa's Nov. 2 outing with Illinois, the Hawkeyes' biggest opportunity for a victory came in game three. Iowa took a 26-23 lead, before the

Safin beats Hewitt for Paris Masters title

PARIS (AP) — Marat Safin won his first title of the year, easily beating Lleyton Hewitt (7-6 [4], 6-0, 6-4) on Sunday to win the Paris Masters for the second time.

Safin closed the straight-set victory against the world's No. 1 player with a service winner. Hewitt seemed to show little effort during the second set in which he failed to win a game.

"I have to thank the public, it was wonderful today," said Safin, who clapped his hand against his racket. "But I don't think the French want me to play well in a few weeks."

The third-seeded Russian is almost certain to represent his country in the Davis Cup final against defending champion France this month.

"Safin's been too good for everyone this week," Hewitt said. "He thoroughly deserves this."

Safin was a runner-up at this year's

Australian Open and a semifinalist at the French Open. This week, he seemed back to the form he enjoyed in 2000, when he won the U.S. Open and the Paris Masters.

In the first set, Hewitt lost the tiebreaker by netting a forehand. Safin then blanked the Wimbledon champion in the second set. In the last two games, Hewitt stood still while Safin hit a backhand winner for his third-straight break.

The Aussie ended snapped Safin's seven-game winning streak by holding serve in the opening game of the third set. But he was broken in the fifth game.

Serving at 5-3 down, Hewitt survived three match points. He moved ahead 30-0 in the last game, but Safin evened the score and closed the match with two service winners.

Hewitt made only 42 percent of his first serves to Safin's 58 percent. The Russian also hit 40 winners to Hewitt's 23.

Both players will take part in the season-ending Masters Cup in Shanghai, China, this month. At the elite eight-man event, Hewitt will try to extend his lead in the ATP Champions Race.

Park wins LPGA tour title

NARITA, Japan — Now Grace Park is ready for the LPGA season to end.

Park won the World Ladies Match Play Championship on Sunday, beating Japan's Midori Yoneyama with a 12-foot birdie putt on the 22nd hole.

"It's been a long year," said Park, who has a victory in each of her three seasons on the LPGA Tour. "I was waiting for this season to be over."

"I played well in the first part of the season, but fell apart since August. I had been playing better since then, but just couldn't get over the hump."

"I came here, played solid, except for today, hung in there, and won. I couldn't be happier."

Yoneyama, ranked 15th among the 16 Japan LPGA players who began play in the 32-woman field, blew a chance to end the match on the 20th hole when her 2-foot par slid by the hole.

"I thought it was over then," said Park, who salvaged a bogey on the hole after hitting into the trees at the side of the green. "I guess I was getting a little tired and it was fortunate when Midori missed that putt. But that's the way it goes."

Yoneyama also had a chance to win on the 18th hole, but her long birdie putt stopped an inch short — sending the players to extra holes on the Narita Golf Club course.

Park dropped the third and fifth holes with bogeys, but closed the gap to one with a 6-foot birdie putt on No. 9 and tied it on No. 13 when Yoneyama missed a 5-footer for par.

Park, the 1998 U.S. Amateur champion as a freshman at Arizona State, also beat Japan's Mikino Kubo, Australia's Karrie Webb, and Japan's Yuri Fudoh en route to her third LPGA Tour title in three seasons.

Some 30,000 runners from all over the world competed in the annual 26.2-mile New York City Marathon on Sunday.

Runyan finishes as top U.S. woman

BY HOWARD FENDRICH
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — About 10 miles into the New York City Marathon, Marla Runyan and European champion Maria Guida crossed paths, bumping and stumbling a bit.

A short while later, Guida dropped out. Not the legally blind Runyan, who never had run a marathon until Sunday. She kept going, her fluid strides leading to the top U.S. finish — fifth overall behind women's winner Joyce Chepchumba of Kenya.

"I'm very pleased with how I did," said Runyan, the first Paralympian to compete at an Olympics. "You never know if you prepared properly, how the weather will affect you, how the distance will affect you."

With temperatures in the 40s and a slight headwind, Boston Marathon champion Rodgers Rop overcame pain in his side to finish in 2 hours, 8 minutes, 7 seconds, helping Kenya gain its first sweep of the men's and women's titles.

Christopher Cheboiboch (2:08:17) — also second in Boston — and Laban Kipkemboi (2:08:39) gave Kenya the first 1-2-3 men's finish for a country since the United States did it in 1975.

Olympic bronze medalist Chepchumba ran the 26.2 miles in 2:25:56 — and was first across the finish in Central Park, because the elite women started about 30 minutes before the men. Los Angeles Marathon champion Lyubov Denisova of Russia was 21 seconds behind. Olivera Jevtic of Yugoslavia was third, despite cutting and bruising her elbows and knees in a late fall. Esther Kiplagat of Kenya was fourth.

Runyan was next in 2:27:10, 36 seconds ahead of defending champion Margaret Okayo, who set the course record last year but had lower back problems.

Runyan's time was the 10th fastest ever in a marathon by an American woman, all the more impressive considering she's accustomed to running much shorter distances. She was eighth in the 1,500 meters at the 2000 Olympics, broke the U.S. record for the indoor 5,000 in 2001, and won the U.S. outdoor title at 5,000 in 2001-02.

"I really enjoyed it — until 24 miles," the 33-year-old Runyan said, laughing. "It surprisingly didn't feel as long as I thought it would. I felt very good even through 11 miles, 14 miles. The pace was conservative, and that was probably ideal for me."

A degenerative eye condition known as Stargardt's disease limits her sight to about 15 feet, although she can't read a watch, for example, while she is running.

Organizers arranged for a cyclist to ride near Runyan, telling her split times and when turns were coming. During the race, the yells could be heard: "We're approaching the bridge in 150 meters!" or "The pack is intact!" or "Your bottle is there at the end!" Runyan did have a problem finding drinks along the route.

Iowa notes

Both teams struggled in the first half. The Hawkeyes got on the board first with a field goal by Nate Kaeding. The Badgers kicker Mike Allen tied up the game shortly after for Wisconsin's only points on the day. Mo Brown and Dallas Clark gave Iowa two touchdowns.

QUOTES

You hate to give them momentum with an easy touchdown. That's the way I felt at halftime. But we were still in the football game for sure. Iowa is surely deserving of being a top 10 team.

— Barry Alvarez, Wisconsin coach

Our guys like to hit. That's been a Hawkeye tradition, one that we're starting to pick up again.

— Kirk Ferentz, Iowa coach

Cortez helps 49ers to OT win

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — After missing a short kick as regulation ended, Jose Cortez redeemed himself with a 23-yard field goal in overtime as the 49ers beat the Raiders, 23-20, Sunday.

Jeff Garcia and the San Francisco offense held the ball for the last 6½ minutes of regulation and all of overtime.

Garcia was 25-of-36 for 282 yards, completing 17 of his 19 passes after halftime to keep the 49ers moving relentlessly downfield. Terrell Owens caught 12 passes for 191 yards, including several third-down grabs.

The 49ers (6-2) won the coin toss and kept the ball for 8:41, with Garcia completing more than a dozen consecutive passes.

Falcons 20, Ravens 17

ATLANTA — Atlanta squandered a 14-point lead but bounced back to win its fourth straight over Baltimore.

Michael Vick completed only 12 of 24 passes for 136 yards. The second-year quarterback also was sacked three times, had negative yards rushing, fumbled twice, and threw his first interception of the season.

Cincinnati 38, Houston 3

HOUSTON — Cincinnati guaranteed its first victory of the season, then went out and routed Houston to get it.

The Bengals were energized by a 102-yard interception return by Artrell Hawkins and four touchdown passes by Jon Kitna.

New England 38, Buffalo 7

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — A year after taking away Drew Bledsoe's starting job when both players were with New England, Tom Brady outdueled his former mentor.

Brady completed 23-of-27 passes for 310 yards and four touchdowns.

Detroit 9, Dallas 7

DETROIT — Jason Hanson's 43-yard field goal with 48 seconds left helped Detroit surpass last year's victory total.

Tennessee 23, Indianapolis 15

INDIANAPOLIS — Keith Bulluck returned a fumble 61 yards for a touchdown, and Peter Sirmon's interception led to another score.

The Titans managed just 198 yards, but the defense made sure it was more than enough.

Tampa Bay 38, Minnesota 24

TAMPA, Fla. — Brad Johnson threw for 313 yards and a career-high five touchdowns, and the Buccaneers appeared virtually unstoppable on offense.

Keyshawn Johnson had nine receptions for 133 yards and two TDs. Karl Williams, Rickey Dudley, and Mike Alstott also had touchdown catches for the Bucs.

Philadelphia 19, Chicago 13

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Shutting out Chicago in the second half and stopping a final drive, the Eagles' stingy defense preserved a win.

Hugh Douglas sacked Jim Miller on a third down from the Eagles 24 with 17 seconds to go. Miller then threw a fourth-down pass to the end zone that was too high for Marcus Robinson.

Pittsburgh 23, Cleveland 20

CLEVELAND — Tommy Maddox threw two touchdown passes, Amos Zereoue ran for a career-high 111 yards, and Pittsburgh's defense shut down the Browns completely.

With their fourth-straight win, the Steelers took command of the division race and hit the halfway point looking better than they have all season.

New York Jets 44, San Diego 13

SAN DIEGO — The Chargers came dressed in their powder-blue throwback jerseys and left looking like powderpuffs.

Chad Pennington threw for one touchdown and ran for another;

Oakland wide receiver Jerry Porter catches a touchdown pass over San Francisco safety Tony Parrish in the first quarter.

Santana Moss had a 52-yard punt return for a touchdown, his second in as many weeks; and Curtis Martin scored once.

Washington 14, Seattle 3

SEATTLE — Kenny Watson ran for 110 yards in place of injured starter Stephen Davis, and Shane Matthews had two touchdowns passes.

Matthews was hardly spectacular, completing 10-of-27 for 114 yards with one interception.

St. Louis 27, Arizona 14

TEMPE, Ariz. — Marshall Faulk rushed for 178 yards, including the clinching 13-yard touchdown with 1:53 to play, as the defending NFC champions won their third straight.

"If you play on defense and you're not a guy who likes to hit, you're on the wrong side of the ball," said defensive tackle Colin Cole.

The commanding performance by Iowa's defense was so thoroughly frustrating that it completely forced the Badgers to alter their game plan.

"We came in thinking we could run on them, but we could not," Alvarez said. "Plan B is if you can't run it, you try to throw. That didn't work, either."

The Badgers managed just 215 total yards against the Hawkeyes and became the second team in three games to fail to score a touchdown against Iowa. Wisconsin managed just a 26-yard field goal from kicker Mike Allen in the second quarter.

"The defense played great," said quarterback Brad Banks. "It takes a little bit [of pressure] off the offense when they play like they did out there."

Banks was nearly overshadowed by the defensive effort, but his numbers hardly went unnoticed. He finished the game with 296 yards of total offense, including a career-high 275 passing yards. He twice connected with wide-open receivers for touchdowns, a 21-yard strike to Mo Brown alone in the end zone near the end of the first half and a 23-yard toss to a streaking Dallas Clark midway through the third quarter to provide Iowa with its final score. # Oklahoma moves into No. 1 in poll

BY RICHARD ROSENBLATT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

A shaky win by Miami against one of the worst teams in the country became a big loss Sunday — the Hurricanes are out as No. 1.

Oklahoma replaced Miami as the top team in the Associated Press media poll, ending the Hurricanes' record run of 21-consecutive polls at No. 1.

Miami improved to 8-0 with a 42-17 win over Rutgers (1-8), but it trailed by three points entering the fourth quarter. Oklahoma moved to 8-0 with a dominating 27-11 win over Colorado (6-3), ranked No. 13 before the game.

Miami takes over the No. 2 spot formerly held by Oklahoma.

The defending national champion Hurricanes easily retained their No. 1 spot in the USA

Today/ESPN coaches poll. The split No. 1's, plus Nov. 2 losses by four previously unbeaten teams, could create a shake-up in the Bowl Championship Series standings, which will be released today.

The BCS rankings will keep Oklahoma first, but it's too close to call for second between Miami and Ohio State (10-0), which jumped from No. 6 to No. 3 in the AP poll.

Moss arrested after Michigan State loss

DETROIT — Michigan State tailback Dawan Moss was arrested early Sunday and accused of dragging a police officer with his car following a traffic stop.

The 22-year-old Moss was charged with fleeing and eluding a police officer as well as misdemeanor drunken driving and having an open container of alcohol.

If convicted of all charges, Moss could be sentenced to as much as two years in prison.

The arrest is the latest blow to the Spartans, whose season has deteriorated steadily since they started 2-0 and rose to No. 15 in the AP rankings. Their 49-3 defeat to Michigan on Nov. 2 was their most lopsided loss since 1947.

Rangers goalie Mike Richter watches helplessly as Blues' Martin Rucinsky scores Sunday. The Blues won, 3-2.

Blues extend winning streak to 8

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Scott Mellanby scored a goal and added an assist, and Doug Weight had two assists Sunday to lead the St. Louis Blues to a 3-2 victory over the New York Rangers.

Weight has 14 points in the last seven games for the Blues, who got 22 saves from Fred Brathwaite. St. Louis extended its winning streak to eight games and is unbeaten in nine. New York is 2-6 in its last eight games.

With Eric Lindros in the penalty box, Mellanby intercepted a clearing attempt at the left circle and beat Mike Richter to the stick side at 6:03 of the third period for his third goal of the season. Lindros, who saw limited ice time, was benched the rest of the way.

Brian Leetch lifted New York into a 2-2 tie with a power-play goal at 17:21 of the second period. Leetch pounced on the rebound of Ronald Petrovicky's shot and backhanded it into the top corner for his first goal of the season.

Columbus 3, Buffalo 2

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Derrick Walser's first goal of the season capped a rare third-period comeback as the Blue Jackets improved to .500 with a victory over the Sabres.

The victory improved the Blue Jackets to 5-5-1-0 — the latest into a season they have been at .500 in the franchise's three years.

Columbus weathered a 5-on-3 situation for 2 minutes late in the third period with goaltender Marc Denis stopping four shots and Rostislav Klesla and Jean-Luc Grand-Pierre each blocking shots.

Buffalo's winless streak was extended to six games (0-4-2-0).

Stu Barnes and Jochen Hecht scored to give the Sabres a 2-0 lead in the first period, but the Blue Jackets fought their way back.

Dallas 3, Detroit 3

DETROIT — Jason Williams' power-play goal with 6:19 left in regulation gave the Red Wings a tie with the Stars.

Williams tipped in a pass from the bottom of the left circle while Stars' forward Brenden Morrow was off for hooking. Nicklas Lidstrom and Pavel Datsyuk also scored for the Red Wings.

Ulf Dahlen gave Dallas a 3-2 lead 7:30 into the second period with a power-play goal. He put in a rebound for his second goal of the game while Henrik Zetterberg was in the penalty box for holding.

Dahlen also added as assist. Datsyuk had given the Red Wings a 2-1 lead when he tipped in a cross-crease pass on a 2-on-1 break 2:56 into the second period.

But Mike Modano tied it 2-2 with just eight seconds left in the second when he put in a rebound from the slot.

Phoenix 2, Nashville 1, OT

PHOENIX — Daniel Briere blasted a power-play goal past Nashville's Tomas Vokoun with 40 seconds left in overtime as the Coyotes earned their first home win of the season, beating the Predators.

Vokoun had 43 saves, but couldn't deny the Coyotes on their eighth power play after defenseman Andy Delmore drew a hooking penalty for wrestling Ladislav Nagy to the ice 3:32 into overtime.

It was the Predators' second overtime loss in as many nights, following a 6-5 defeat in Los Angeles on Saturday.

Nashville, the only NHL team without an overtime loss (5-0-13) last season, is 0-0-1-4 in overtime this season.

Denis Arhipov had a power-play goal for the Predators, and Landon Wilson scored for the Coyotes. Brian Boucher earned his 50th career win by stopping 24 shots.

horoscopes

Monday, November 4, 2002 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't discount any of your ideas. Past romantic partners may surface; however, you must remember why these connections dissolved before. Tread carefully, and stay open to new people.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't get emotionally involved with someone at work. Travel or lectures may have brought you in contact with individuals you can't trust. This is a time to remain alert and be discriminating.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Personal legal matters may be upsetting to you. Get as much information as necessary to have a fuller picture. Someone may be trying to mislead you. Be careful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Problems with your personal life may cause you to retreat into isolation. This would be a good time to get out with some friends and have a change of scenery. Someone you care about may be playing emotional games with you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't get stuck paying for other people's entertainment. Tempers may mount, but you must hold your ground. At this time, you need to look after your own best interests. You may find out who your real friends are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Busy yourself with domestic duties, or get out of the house altogether. Someone you live with may be on a rampage. Give her or him some space and time alone so that he or she can work through things.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't get involved in other people's affairs. Go about your business, and look out for your own interests. There is plenty you could be doing to enhance your life, but don't spend on unnecessary entertainment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may feel a little under the weather. Restore some order to your home environment and you will begin to feel better. An early evening should be in order.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Uncertainties about your direction may lead to sudden changes in employment. Don't overreact to the suggestions made by superiors. Listen carefully to what is being proposed and consider the possibilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Put your efforts into making the necessary changes at home. Don't expect any help. Life isn't always fair, so just do the very best you can. It will all work out.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will get along famously with people who can give you greater understanding of your direction. You can inquire about reference material that will help you determine your choices.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Older family members may need your undivided attention immediately. Take care of the situation the best you can, but don't allow it to take over your life.

The hazards of jumping in leaves

- The leaves could be concealing piles of not-so-pleasant surprises.
- Leaves violating your pants.
- You could land on a rake or a large pine cone.
- Leaves house spiders, worms, slugs, and other bugs you don't want crawling in your drawers.
- The ground is hard, your ass is not. Pain is inevitable.
- My grandma told me that's how you get ringworm.
- Eventually you're going to try something stupid like a backflip, and that's just asking for trouble.
- When you're done, you have to rake the damn things up again.
