Control of Congress up for grabs

BY DAN BALZ
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — The most competitive midterm election in half a century raced toward conclusion Monday with Republicans running uphill in their bid to retake control of the Senate and Democrats struggling to avoid losing seats to the GOP majority in the House.

President Bush, his personal prestige heavily invested in the outcome of today's balloting, blitzed four states with competitive House and Senate contests as both parties prepared the most extensive get-out-the-vote operations seen in any recent off-year contest.

Nine Senate races — four held by the Democrats and five by the GOP — remained in doubt on the next-to-last day of an election in which small shifts will produce a dramatic impact on the balance of power in Washington during the final two years of Bush's term.

With so many close races and the expectation that only a few seats will change hands in the House and Senate, Election 2002 appeared likely to become a reaffirmation of the 50-50 split within the country that produced the deadlocked election of 2000.

In the Senate races, strategists in both parties said Arkansas was CEDAR RAPIDS — In a final push for his Iowa colleagues Monday, President Bush urged more than 6,500 of the party faithful to get out the vote and help elect Republicans in today's midterm elections.

"These are good, honorable folks," Bush said of the slew of candidates who crammed the U.S. Cellular Center stage in Cedar Rapids. "It is in the best interest of your state and this country to elect them."

"As governor, you have to set priorities," Bush said. "I understand what it takes to be a good governor, and so does Doug Gross."

Bush said that with help from Ganske in the Senate, he would keep his tax cuts and push his judicial nominations through Congress.

"I need Greg Ganske in the Senate," Bush said. The president then said he couldn't imagine anyone in the 2nd District not voting for Leach.

"Leach is so honest he squeaks," Bush said. "You can turn to your kids and say, 'I'm proud of Jim Leach.'"

Much of Bush's 30-minute-long stump speech focused on homeland security, the war on terrorism, and Iraq.

"America's spirit says that when we're threatened, we respond," he said.

Leach, who was one of only six Republicans to vote against the President's Iraqi resolution, was expressionless as the crowd erupted in cheers during Bush's comments on Iraq.

"Our message is real firm: As long as it takes, we will defend freedom," Bush said.

While a visit from the president will have little effect on the actual vote, the stop shows Bush views the races as close, said UI

Vilsack hopes to escape tough challenger ELECTION 2002

BY AMY JENNINGS AND GRANT SCHULTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

The two front-runners for the state's top office square off today, the climax of a six-month race fueled by conflicting ideologies and more than $12 million in fund raising.

Gov. Tom Vilsack and Republican challenger Doug Gross will watch each county in Iowa tally their political fates from nearby hotels in downtown Des Moines tonight in a race that paints different economic and educational pictures of Iowa's future.

The latest Iowa Poll shows Vilsack leading Gross by 12 percentage points, but that gap could fluctuate given the state's nearly even political divide, said David Redlawsk, a UI assistant professor of political science. "I wouldn't say it's 100 percent certain," he said about Vilsack's projected victory. "But if Gross pulls it off, it will be by a razor-thin margin."

Redlawsk said the candidates clashed ideologically on campaign issues, where Vilsack concentrated on social programs and education and Gross promoted tax breaks for corporations to stimulate economic growth. "There is a clear ideological split here in a way that isn't seen as often in other elections," Redlawsk said, adding that Gross is an unusual challenger because of his inside connections at the state level.

2nd District crucial for control of House

BY CHUCK LARSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

If Democrats are going to control the U.S. House after today's midterm election, their victories need to begin in Iowa's 2nd District.

Since last year, the race between 13-term incumbent Jim Leach and his Democratic rival, Dr. Julie Thomas, has been publicized as one of the House's most competitive elections.

Both parties concur that Leach is a vulnerable incumbent. His new district leans Democratic, his personal stance forbids accepting out-of-state and political action committee money, and he faces a stiff challenge from Thomas and her fund-raising capabilities.

"This is the most competitive race that Leach has ever fought," said David Redlawsk, a UI assistant professor of political science.

Democrats view Thomas as one of their top priorities, and they have sent in several heavy hitters — including former Vice President Al Gore, Vermont Gov. Howard Dean, and Missouri Rep. Dick Gephardt — to campaign for Thomas.

ARH moves to ink paper deal

BY PHIL DAVIDSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI Associated Residence Halls Board voted on Monday to adopt a program that will provide students with copies of five local and national newspapers — an expense university officials initially said would not result in increased fees to students.

The program's approximate $50,000 cost per semester will partially be funded by raising the room and board fee by $10 to $20 a year per student, said the board, which consists of all students. They voted 16-9 in favor of the move. Two members abstained.

Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for Student Services, had previously told The Daily Iowan that the deal was an "added value to our students at no charge" and would not result in additional fees to students.

In an Oct. 22 letter to the editor, ARH President Scott Alvarado wrote, "This money would not likely appear as a fee increase or surcharge, but it does ultimately come from students. This money would come from student fees and rates paid for residence-hall room and board rates."

After a six-week trial this fall, the UI will implement the Collegiate Readership Program, making available the New York Times, Chicago Tribune, the Des Moines Register, the Iowa City Press-Citizen, and USA Today to students living in the dorms as early as next semester.

The papers will be available in the lobby of the Mayflower as well as the cafeterias in Burge and Hillcrest.

The program was originally designed in 1997 by Penn State University President Graham Spanier, said Tracie Sexton, USA Today senior account manager. USA Today participates in the program with more than 200 universities, she said.

Proponents of the initiative said the newspapers can function as an educational tool in or outside class as well as help students find their place in society and achieve better self-understanding.

"You can't find your place in this world if you don't know what's going on," said UI sophomore Jamie Sackett, a member of the UI Newspaper Readership Committee.

Those opposed to the program said there was a lack of evidence supporting its educational merits.

"There's no proof that this program will do anything besides provide free papers to students," said UI sophomore and committee member Zachary Miller.

Miller represented a minority, voicing concern that the fee increase is untimely in the face of tuition hikes.

Only 16 percent of approximately 6,000 students living in the residence halls will be able to pick up a copy of the approximate 1,000 papers available.

In a student survey conducted by USA Today, 54 percent said the trial was effective in enhancing the educational environment while 71 percent said they would be willing to shoulder the increased fee in the room-and-board rate.

The Iowa City man charged with setting an April 16 fire at the Hall Mall will plead guilty to charges of second-degree arson and burglary Friday. Robert E. Lee, 50, was set to go to trial Nov. 12, but defense attorney Dennis Cohen filed paperwork stating that the defendant will admit his guilt Friday at 10 a.m. Both class C felonies

Lee, who owned the Electric Head Tattoo Shop, which was located in the Hall Mall before it closed in February, allegedly admitted to forcing his way into the locked building, spreading an inflammable substance, and using a match to light the blaze, said Iowa City police. Authorities estimated that the fire caused $20,000 worth.

Despite pleas, council votes to vacate street

BY JAMES BAETKE
THE DAILY IOWAN

One day before Iowa City city councilors cast their final votes on clearing Grand Avenue Court of traffic for a UI construction project, a neighborhood spokeswoman on Monday urged the councilors to slow down their consideration.

But Jean Walker's pleas for the council to wait for the results of a traffic-flow study before granting the university's request went largely ignored. Councilors voted 4-3 during a special formal meeting to vacate the road for construction of the 20,000-square-foot Athletics Learning Center.

Mirroring their Oct. 29 votes, Councilors Steven Kanner, Dee Vanderhoef, and Ross Wilburn voted against vacating a 295-foot stretch of the road on the West Side of campus.

Walker, who lives in the vicinity and represents a group of neighbors, said she is also concerned with the university's desire to construct a pedestrian campus in that area.

"Once the study is done and if it becomes clear that [Grand Avenue Court] is not needed by the city, it can be vacated to the UI for its pedestrian campus," she said.

Walker also suggested the city and university compromise by making the road a one-lane, one-way street going south from Grand Avenue to Melrose Avenue, which would allow more room between the $4.6 million athletics facility and Grand Avenue Court. This would alleviate the traffic hold-up that occurs at the junction of Grand and Melrose avenues, she said, adding that one-way travel going north is provided by nearby Byington Road.

Vanderhoef agreed with Walker, saying that communication between the university and council has been lacking and that she would like to see results of a traffic study before vacating the road. It is essential to complete the study before further construction takes place to ensure "we have an [artery] that meets the needs of the people," Vanderhoef said.

The third vote, scheduled for tonight, will determine whether the city vacates the street. The traffic study will continue regardless of tonight's outcome, which will be decided after a public hearing on the matter.

The council initially voted Oct. 8 to wait six months before deciding whether to vacate the road. That decision was overturned Oct. 22 after the council received a letter from Doug True, UI vice president for Finance, strongly opposing the deferment. Some councilors also said the university's promise to preserve the 118-year-old Cannon-Gay-McColskey house, 320 Melrose Ave., also persuaded them to vote on vacating earlier than planned.

Councilor Connie Champion said tonight's vote is up in the air, although Vanderhoef predicts the council's stance on the issue is not likely to change.

"You never know with this council," Champion said.

2002 ELECTION

Last burst for Harkin, Ganske

BY PETER RUGG
THE DAILY IOWAN

As polls open today, Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and Republican challenger Greg Ganske will begin a last push to bring out their supporters.

Ensuring a high voter turnout is the most important goal in a race where neither candidate has been able to distinguish himself from the other, said UI political experts.

"Harkin's ahead in the polls, and Iowans aren't people who switch elected officials without a good reason," said Cary Covington, an associate professor of political science. "The best thing they can do now is make sure the people who would vote for them actually vote."

In an effort to spur on turnout, after voting himself at 10 a.m., Harkin will spend today calling Democratic bases around Iowa, encouraging voters to cast their ballots. Ganske is scheduled to vote at 7 a.m. and make several stops in Central and Eastern Iowa to rally his supporters.

Both men will end their days in Des Moines, and both hope to attend a victory party later, said their representatives.

"We feel good heading into Election Day, and, of course, we want as much support as we can get at the polls," said Joe Shanahan, a spokesman for Citizens for Harkin. "It's a coordinated effort in terms of getting support from every possible outlet."

Shanahan added that Harkin's camp is very optimistic but is not taking anything for granted.

Ganske's campaign is hopeful it can oust the incumbent senator, said Ann Warren, the communications director of Ganske for Senate.

"The energy over the past month has been incredible," she said. "More and more people have been coming in asking what they can do, and we think we have a chance. Harkin's never won by a large margin, and it gets smaller every time."

Harkin won his original 1984 Senate bid with 55 percent of the vote. He won with 54 percent in 1990 and 52 percent in 1996.

"Whatever happens, it's been a very exciting time," Warren said.

Both camps doubted allegations that a Harkin campaign manager taped a closed-door Ganske session would affect the public's vote.

"That incident is completely out of the way," Warren said. "It's about issues now."

Even if Ganske is able to unseat Harkin, he may not be able to garner national attention for Iowa, said UI political science Professor Alfonso Damico.

"The Senate is a place where seniority matters, and if the Senate remains a Democratic majority, Harkin will be in a better position to shape national and foreign policy," Damico said. "Ganske would be a junior senator, and it would take years for him to get the influence Harkin has now. Iowa might not get much attention as a result."

UI markets predict divided Congress

BY JEFFREY PATCH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Traders in a small-scale political futures market forecast a Democratic-led Senate and a Republican-run House, a continuation of the current status in Congress.

Market conditions early Monday showed an 85 percent probability of Republicans maintaining a majority in the House and a 70 percent probability that Democrats will hold onto control of the Senate following today's elections.

The Iowa Electronic Markets provide people interested in politics an opportunity to predict whether the Democratic or Republican Party will control the two chambers of Congress.

UI economics Professor Forrest Nelson, who founded the markets in 1988 along with Professors Bob Forsythe and George Neumann, said the market boasts a low percentage of error of 1.37 because "markets work."

"A market setting is a beautiful place for people to exchange information," Nelson said. "They work to aggregate information."

Thomas Rietz, an associated professor of finance, said the market is accurate because people are more honest than they are in polls because their money is involved.

"People are putting their money where their mouth is," he said. "Unlike a poll, which says who would you vote for today, we're asking people what they think would happen in the future."

Six professors at the Tippie College of Business operate the real-money market, which is used as a teaching and research laboratory. Students and investors from anywhere in the world can play political pundits and buy future contracts worth up to $1 in the markets based on different election outcomes. Investors can spend anywhere from $5 to $500.

The professors say the markets are a unique educational tool.

"It's a way to get students involved with a hands-on learning exercise," Neumann said. "It's more effective than the traditional chalk-and-talk method."

The markets have 1,500 users prognosticating today's election. Professors said 7,500 traders participated in 2000, the most ever.

Initial funds for the markets, nearly $500,000, were provided by grants from the U.S. Department of Education and the National Science Foundation, totaling $130,000.

At the close of trading on Thursday, traders will receive a sum between $1 and nothing per contract, depending on the value of the future.

Leach-Thomas race crucial for House

records, Thomas has raised more than $1.1 million, outstripping Leach 2 to 1.

Republican and special-interest groups made up the difference by dumping hundreds of thousands of dollars into the district on behalf of Leach, leveling the pairs' air time.

No official polls have been released, and all media polls show the race too close to call.

Both candidates need to cash in on the 163,199 voters without a political party — 44 percent of the district — if they are going to win. Thomas hopes to improve on the 30 percent Democrat vote, while Leach needs assistance with the 26 percent Republican vote.

Leach won endorsements from the League of Conservation Voters and the Iowa State Education Association, both typically pro-Democrat groups.

He is also pro-choice on abortion and believes in removing U.S. food and medicine sanctions on other nations, both Democrat-embraced ideals.

Thomas offers herself as a better alternative for moderate voters, while reminding voters that a vote for Leach is a vote for Republican leadership.

Even as a busy pediatrician, Thomas has been involved in state and local politics, pushing through state legislation that allows new mothers to stay in the hospital for 48 hours after childbirth and introducing Medikids, a bill granting health care for all children, into Congress.

"One of the core values of the Democratic Party is health care," said Rod Sullivan, the chairman of the Johnson County Democrats. "Julie Thomas has focused her life around this issue and is a genuine Democratic candidate."

Because House re-election rates haven't dipped below 85 percent since 1964, Thomas has faced an uphill battle from her start.

But challengers usually have a hard time raising money, a hill Thomas has conquered with ease.

2002 ELECTION

Some U.S. races down to the wire

the most probable candidate for a Democratic pickup, with Missouri as the likeliest gain for the GOP. Other Republican vulnerabilities include Colorado, New Hampshire, North Carolina, and Texas. The other vulnerable Democratic seats include South Dakota, Minnesota, Georgia, and Louisiana, where Sen. Mary Landrieu needs to win 50 percent to avoid a Dec. 7 runoff.

"It is amazing that we are within striking distance on the eve of this election," said Sen. Bill Frist, R-Tenn., the chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee. He said that, although history is against the GOP, "if we get an even share of the breaks in these very close elections, we will retake the majority by netting one seat up."

Jim Jordan, the executive director of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee said, "Predictions are fairly meaningless when a dozen races are within the margin of error," but added, "We're confident we'll win the close ones on the ground."

Rep. Tom Davis of Virginia, the National Republican Congressional Committee chairman, sounded the most bullish note of the day by predicting the GOP would pick up House seats in defiance of history's record of the party holding the White House almost always suffering losses in a president's first midterm. "How many remains to be seen," he said. "It could be a really good night, but a good night is five seats."

acknowledged that the climate has not been as good for Democrats as she had hoped but said she believed there were enough close races to make it possible for Democrats to retake the majority. Predicting surprises, she said, "I still think we'll do very well."

Tom Mann of the Brookings Institution called Election 2002 the most contested since 1954, when a slim GOP majority in the Senate turned into a slender Democratic majority, and Democrats also retook the House.

Strategists poured over weekend polls, public and private, to discern any movement nationally or state-by-state. Republicans took comfort from several national polls showing the party has an advantage in the generic question of which party voters plan to support in House elections.

That question can be an uncertain predictor of elections, but it suggested again that there is no national mood that strongly favors Democrats. "The Democrats needed a wind at their backs to accomplish what they needed to pick up the House," one Democratic strategist said. "At the very least, if you believe those generic trial numbers, they make it clear there's no wind."

In many individual Senate races, however, there was conflicting evidence from surveys, enough to give both sides hope that most of the nine competitive races could go either way. The lone exception was Arkansas, where Republicans privately expressed pessimism about their chances of preventing Sen. Tim Hutchinson from losing to attorney general Mark Pryor despite a visit from Bush on Monday.

political-science Professor Arthur Miller. Bush's stop could fire up loyal partisans, he added. "But it can have a backlash effect," Miller said. "It can also fire up Democrats."

A similar visit by President Clinton in 1996 assisted in victories for Sen. Tom Harkin over Jim Ross Lightfoot and Rep. Leonard Boswell over Mike Mahaffey, but the exact effects are unknown.

Bush arrived in Cedar Rapids on Sunday night as part of his campaign blitz across the country. His campaign trail blazed through Missouri and then Arkansas before ending at Bush's Crawford, Texas, ranch Monday night.

In the last three weeks, the president has visited 19 states with tight races that could help his party remain in control of the House and win a majority in the Senate.

mismanaging the state's budget, contending that he overspent and was too slow to react to the national recession. Vilsack says he balanced the budget, kept his priorities, and never raised taxes.

Dwindling state revenues hit a 50-year low and forced Vilsack to slash the budget seven times during his four-year term. Reduced state funding then hit the UI, and students watched their tuition rise each year Vilsack has been in office.

While he has never held a public office, Gross is no stranger to the inner operations of the governor's office. His eight-year experience in helping to run the Statehouse as the top aide to Republican Gov. Terry Branstad formed the lifelong Iowa resident into the more qualified candidate, Gross supporters said.

The Des Moines lawyer, who Vilsack has accused of using government connections to land multimillion dollar state contracts for private clients, is trying to ease his lobbyist image by touting his Iowa roots.

The father of five who grew up on a farm in Defiance, Iowa, told voters that Vilsack's extremism is to blame for the budget crises. "Vilsack has been Rip Van Winkle on Iowa's economy for his entire term," said Gross campaign communications director Eric Woolson. "When Vilsack came into office, he outlined 77 priorities. When you have that many objectives, you're not going to accomplish anything."

Gross will spend the final day of his campaign scurrying across the state to meet voters, starting in Cedar Rapids and moving through Iowa City, Davenport, and Waterloo before settling in to receive the results in Des Moines.

Vilsack, who has campaigned on a four-day, 26-city bus tour with Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, spent Oct. 29 visiting large cities, including Cedar Rapids and Waterloo, said Vilsack spokesman Joe Householder. He will vote today at 8:30 a.m. in the Methodist church across from his Mount Pleasant home, spend an hour visiting with the town's citizens, then hit the road to thank campaign volunteers in Coralville, Iowa City, and Altoona before returning to the governor's home at Terrace Hill, Householder said.

"We are at the point now where we've done about everything we can do," Householder said. "We know it's been a tough race."

Vilsack, who defeated Republican gubernatorial hopeful Jim Ross Lightfoot in 1998, is running on a K-12 educational and economic platform, touting a campaign promise to boost early student reading scores and raise the state's minimum wage from $5.15 to $6.15 per hour over the next two years. Other campaign promises include plans to strengthen the university work-study programs and offer interest-free college loans to students who stay in Iowa after graduating in an effort to stimulate economic development.

Gross does not support raising the minimum wage or increasing taxes to balance the state budget. Instead, he is promising to create Iowa jobs by providing targeted tax incentives to companies looking to invest in the state.

In addition, he pledges to protect education by holding tuition below the price index and making schools the top recipient of extra state dollars.

Rocket kills top Al Qaeda official

BY JOHN J. LUMPKIN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — U.S. forces killed a top associate of Osama bin Laden in Yemen in a missile strike, expanding the war on terror with America's first overt attack on suspected Al Qaeda operatives outside of Afghanistan, a U.S. official said Monday.

Qaed Salim Sinan al-Harethi was one of several Al Qaeda members traveling by car in northwest Yemen when a Hellfire missile struck it Sunday, killing him and five others. The official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the attack was believed to have been conducted by a CIA aircraft, possibly a missile-carrying Predator drone.

The official Yemeni news agency, local tribesmen, and the U.S. official confirmed the strike killed al-Harethi. Witnesses said they saw an aircraft, possibly a helicopter, in the area. Hellfires can also be launched by attack helicopters.

The others killed were believed to be low-level operatives. The attack occurred in the northern province of Marib, approximately 100 miles east of Yemen's capital, Sana'a, where Al Qaeda is considered active.

U.S. counterterrorism officials have said al-Harethi, also known as Abu Ali, was Al Qaeda's chief operative in Yemen and a top target of U.S. anti-terrorism efforts. An associate of bin Laden since the early 1990s in Sudan, al-Harethi is a suspect in the bombing of the destroyer USS Cole in Aden, Yemen, on Oct. 12, 2000.

The CIA declined to comment. On Monday, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld told a Pentagon press conference, "It would be a very good thing if he were out of business."

A Yemeni official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said,

"Authorities have been monitoring this particular car for a while, and we believe those men belonged to the Al Qaeda terror network."

Many Al Qaeda operatives fleeing the U.S.-led war on Afghanistan have joined comrades in Yemen. After the United States detected growth in Al Qaeda presence there this spring, hundreds of U.S. troops deployed to Djibouti, the tiny African nation facing Yemen across the Gulf of Aden, officials said. The Marine amphibious assault ship Nassau recently replaced the USS Belleau Wood in the waters between the two nations.

Ventura names fill-in, skewing Senate power

BY ASHLEY H. GRANT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. PAUL, Minn. — A steaming-hot Gov. Jesse Ventura appointed a fellow independent to temporarily fill Sen. Paul Wellstone's seat Monday, while Walter Mondale went on the offensive against Republican Norm Coleman in the only debate of their compressed Senate campaign.

Ventura's choice of Dean Barkley, a major figure in Minnesota's third-party movement, leaves the balance of power in the Senate up in the air. The two major parties now have 49 members each, with two independents.

One of those independents, Jim Jeffords of Vermont, routinely votes with Democrats. Barkley said he is not sure which way he would lean.

"I can get along with moderate Democrats and moderate Republicans," he said. He later noted that Jeffords told him in a call, "Don't commit to anything." Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott also called in a bid to court the newest senator.

It is unclear how long Barkley will serve. An attorney general's opinion said the winner of the Senate election will replace Barkley once the winner is certified in mid-November. But Senate rules suggest Barkley's term will run into early January, until the new senators arrive.

It also remains unclear whether the Senate will hold a lame-duck session between Election Day and January.

For Ventura, the timing of his angry announcement was a bit of mischief: It came just as the Coleman-Mondale debate got under way. The governor said he was upset that his Independence Party's Senate candidate, Jim Moore, was excluded from the televised event. Moore has polled in the low single digits.

"Today, three very powerful institutions, the Republican Party, the Democratic-Farmer-Labor-Party, and the Minnesota media are conspiring to limit the hard-earned rights of ordinary citizens," Ventura said.

In the debate, Mondale — the 74-year-old former vice president and senator who came out of political retirement after Wellstone was killed in a plane crash Oct. 25 — questioned how independent a voice Coleman would be as a senator. The two also laid out different stances on issues such as abortion, prescription-drug benefits, and Social Security.

Barkley
Senator

"Mondale came out swinging and showed himself ready and willing both for a fight and for public life, which is a lot of what people were wondering about," said Lilly Goren, a political-science professor at College of St. Catherine's in St. Paul.

Much of the first part of the debate focused on whether Coleman, the former mayor of St. Paul who was picked for the race by President Bush, would be a puppet for the Bush administration.

Mondale called Coleman's campaign "the poster child for what is wrong in politics," citing its reliance on money from corporations and special interests.

"I can be independent," Mondale said. "I owe no one when I go to Washington."

Coleman said he disagreed with the White House on issues such as keeping Cuba cut off from trade with the United States and opening up the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to drilling.

"If I win on Tuesday, the president is going to owe me big-time," Coleman said. "We walked through fire to get here."

Coleman also pointed out several times that federal taxes were raised when Mondale was vice president in the late 1970s.

Ventura's choice of Barkley to temporarily fill the seat angered Minnesota Democrats.

Shortly after Wellstone's death, Ventura said he preferred to appoint a Democrat to hold the seat because Wellstone was a Democrat. When a memorial service for Wellstone turned raucously partisan, though, Ventura stormed out and said he would consider appointing an independent.

Guest Opinion

The right formula for tuition

Right now, the state Board of Regents is deciding how much tuition should go up next year. The regents are deciding this now because Iowa law mandates they make a decision on tuition increases by their regular meeting in November — Nov. 13 and 14 this year. The decision should be postponed until after the state decides how much it is going to allocate to public universities. The Legislature, which works with the governor to make the state's budget, would be the one to change this law, and it does not reconvene until after the November meeting.

This law should be changed because the role of tuition has changed. Historically, the state budget has reflected Iowa's support for public education by fully funding the state universities; this meant tuition went up with inflation or in response to quality improvements. Now, state support is no longer predictable, and tuition is the only substantial source of revenue that can be increased in order to make up for the state's decrease in funding. Because tuition revenues need to make up for the state cuts, it is necessary to know what the state is going to allocate before tuition is set. This would allow the universities to continue operation, while keeping tuition as low as possible.

Most people point their finger at the regents when tuition goes up, but the state's decreases in funding are the real problem. The current law allows the state to blame the regents for tuition increases and then quietly cut their funding when the Legislature passes the budget later in the year. Then, the next year when the regents raise tuition because they fear another cut, legislators criticize them for the tuition hike and then quietly cut the regents' funding. Unless something changes, this vicious cycle will continue indefinitely.

This year, I am asking the regents to stop this cycle by passing my conditional tuition proposal. The proposal would involve passing a formula rather than a percentage increase (as they did last year) or a dollar increase (what is proposed this year) in tuition. This formula would make a decision on tuition increases as much as the regents are capable of making a decision at this time. The regents would be set the amount of additional revenue needed for the operation of the three universities, $39 million, and the amount paid by tuition will be contingent on state support.

The $39 million figure comes from the revenue produced by the current proposal in front of the regents. It is hard to dispute that this money is essential to keep the university operating; $39 million does not even come close to the amount of money cut from the regents' budget over the last two years. This money would mostly go toward replacing professors.

Similar to the current proposal, the conditional tuition proposal would produce $39 million, through the use of the formula, from a combination of state funding and tuition money. For example, if the state gave an additional $9 million, the tuition increase would need to be $500 for in-state students and $1,000 for out-of-state students (to produce the remaining $30 million). Similarly, if the state gave an additional $18 million, the tuition increase would need to be $350 for in-state and $700 for out-of-state (to make up for the other $21 million). Finally, if the state gave an additional $30 million, then the tuition increase would be $150 for in-state students and $300 for out-of-state students (to account for the other $9 million).

Along with the formula, the regents would include both a floor — $150 increase for in-state students and a $300 increase for out-of-state students and a ceiling — the current proposal. This would set minimum and maximum limits for next year's tuition increase.

A creative approach, such as this conditional proposal, is the only way to break the cycle of decreasing state support. The gubernatorial candidates, as well as others, have both come out against the regents' current proposal and have promised to fight it if elected. If the regents passed a conditional tuition proposal, the newly elected/re-elected representatives would not be able to fight it; however, they would be able to pay as much as they wanted into the formula, which would directly decrease the amount of the tuition increase.

Political rally in place of mourning does little to legitimize candidates

Something has gone wrong when a memorial service turns into a charged political rally, complete with the boing of Republican attendees. Last week, a gathering for the late Minnesota Sen. Paul Wellstone took such an inappropriate turn.

For at least the first couple of hours, the service for 20,000 people took on a solemn tone of remembrance for Wellstone. That mood evaporated, however, when Wellstone's campaign treasurer, Rick Kahn, took the podium. Whereas other speakers had maintained the dignity and focus of the service by recounting fond stories of Wellstone, Kahn quickly steered the focus to electoral politics. He implored the crowd to continue Wellstone's legacy by voting for his replacement in the pending election: "We can redeem the sacrifice of his life if you help us win this election for Paul Wellstone," he exclaimed.

To exacerbate his already inappropriate message, Kahn then called on Republicans to help salvage the senator's legacy. "Can they not one time, just one time, step forward for Paul and honor that friendship?" Kahn asked. "That's what we're asking. That they go out there and say Paul Wellstone did this wonderful work, and we need to keep his legacy alive by sending his successor to his seat."

What should have been a somber remembrance of Sen. Paul Wellstone turned into a Republican-bashing rally.

At several points during Kahn's remarks, the monitors displayed Walter Mondale, who attended the service and would shortly be named Wellstone's replacement. When Kahn bluntly stated, "We are begging you to help us win this Senate election for Paul Wellstone," one could easily infer his silent "Vote for Mondale."

Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin reinforced Kahn's speech when he shouted, "Let's all get on that bus together — that green bus!" and roused chants in support of Mondale from the crowd. Equally telling of the evening were the boos showered upon Republican Senate leader Trent Lott and Minnesota Gov. Jesse Ventura.

With so many important issues on the plate for this election, it would have better suited the partisan mourners to remain somber to legitimize themselves to voters.

But by the end of the three-and-a-half-hour service, Democrats had successfully transformed the ceremony from a respectful Wellstone memorial to a rallying cry for his successor. The next day, apologetic organizers admitted, "It probably would have been best not to get into politics and elections in the way it was done."

Unfortunately, no measure of apology can erase the fact that Democrats de-legitimized what ought to have been a respectful tribute to a beloved leader.

Scratch a Republican, and you find, surprise, a Republican

So let me see if I've got this right. Republicans have been criticizing Walter Mondale, the emergency Democratic candidate for Senate in Minnesota, saying he's too old at 74 to handle the job.

On the other hand, when William Webster was selected to be the SEC's chief oversight guru for the accounting industry, all of the GOP nation rushed to applaud the selection. Webster is 78.

Um ... right. Maybe what the Republicans actually meant was that Mondale was too young to handle the job.

It's hard to tell with Republicans; so often they say one thing and then do something 180 degrees the opposite. Take Selected President Bush, for example. Candidate Dubya, hoping to win some Soccer Mom votes, promised in the 2000 campaign to tighten the standards for carbon-dioxide emissions. White House resident Dubya pooh-poohed any such notion and then bolted from the Kyoto Protocol, effectively saying that the world's greatest offender wasn't going to do diddy about greenhouse-gas emissions because it was more important to make money than it was to save the planet.

A sensible person might ask, How is anyone going to make any money if the planet croaks, but you have to realize that "sense" and "Republicans" do not easily co-exist. Exhibit A might be Tom DeLay. Or Harvey Pitt.

This failure of coexistence permeates the selection of Webster as the chief watchdog of the accounting industry — which, you might have noticed, needs some accountability. Enron springs to mind with less than any effort, as does WorldCom. Not to mention the infamous Arthur Andersen, the accountants of choice if what you want is no accounting for taste or much of anything else.

In the wake of the tsunami of corporate scandals, Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., sponsored a bill to establish a board to oversee the accounting industry. The Bush/Stealth President administration initially opposed the measure, but after checking the opinion polls, it pulled a Republican 180 and went along with the political prevailing west-erlies.

All fine and well, right? Well, maybe. Many observers at the time pointed out that the true test for the Bush administration and Republicans in general would be whom the administration appointed to head the accounting board.

The early favorite was John H. Biggs, but the accounting industry had a problem with him: It thought he would be too tough.

Enter Pitt. The SEC chairman has been under fire for quite awhile now for being too close to the accounting industry, for which he used to be a lawyer and lobbyist. In fact, when the Clinton administration tried to clamp down on the accounting industry with proposed reforms, Pitt was the point man lobbying the Republican Congress to reject the measure — which it did. We'll never know if the Clinton reforms would have prevented the Enron/Arthur Andersen fiasco, thanks largely to the efforts of Pitt.

Pitt, heading the cries of anguish from the accounting industry, passed on Biggs and championed Webster to head the accounting-oversight board, and Webster was confirmed by a 3-2 vote. However, it turns out that Pitt, maybe through oversight, neglected to inform his fellow commissioners that Webster had some accountability problems in his past.

Webster was the head of the auditing committee for U.S. Technologies, which, after an outside accounting firm pointed out financial problems in the company, fired the accountants. Well, that makes sense. You get some bad news, you kill the messenger, and the bad news goes away, right?

Unfortunately, no. U.S. Technologies is being sued for fraud by investors.

The point is not that Webster might be corrupt, which nobody has suggested. The point is Pitt hid crucial information from the SEC commissioners, information that surely would have influenced their decision. It's rather typical of the way Republicans operate.

Which brings us to Jim Leach. Nobody would ever suggest that Leach is anything less than honorable, and a lot of Democrats around here vote for him because he has a decent record on the environment, among other things.

However, he is a Republican, and as such, he votes in the Republican caucus, which means that such right-wing mossbacks as Tom DeLay maintain positions of great power. And that can't be in the interests of anyone with an iota of sense.

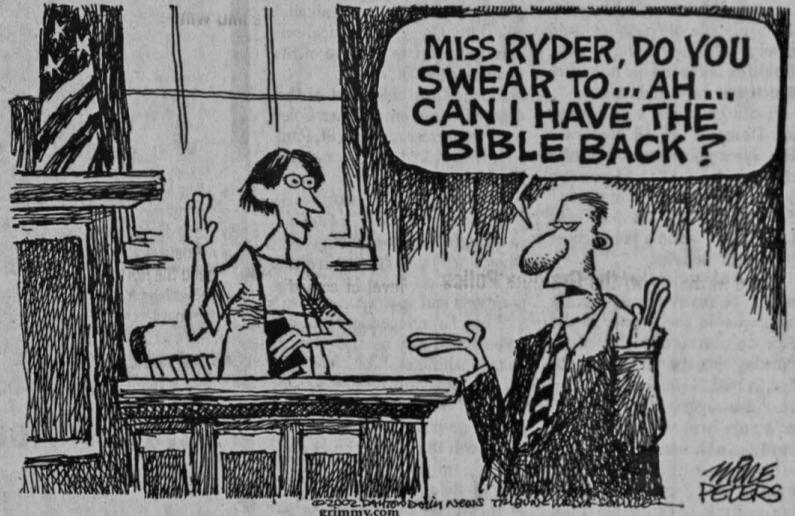

And then there's the matter of how Leach votes when it's not a warm and cuddly issue such as the environment. Take, for example, last July, when the House was voting on a Democratic measure to ban off-shore tax havens for corporations. This should be a no-brainer, right? Why should corporations avoid paying taxes by establishing a post office box in the Caribbean?

Leach initially voted against the measure, apparently believing that corporations and off-shore tax havens are a good marriage. In the last minute of voting, DeLay realized that his side couldn't win, so he released his troops, and Leach joined a stampede of 100 Republicans who rushed to change their votes to support the bill.

In other words, Leach toed the Republican line until DeLay let him cast a vote that would play better in Iowa City.

Scratch a Republican, and you find — a Republican. And that makes sense.

Call the police – laughter on the loose in Iowa City

BY RICHARD SHIRK
THE DAILY IOWAN

Like most other people in this town, I've often thought that the last thing we need is more police on campus.

Hearing the news that the Gramma Police were going to appear in the IMU Wheelroom on Oct. 24, the issue became even more enshrouded in mystery. Is this a covert police subdivision? A promo street team for a new WB crime-drama series?

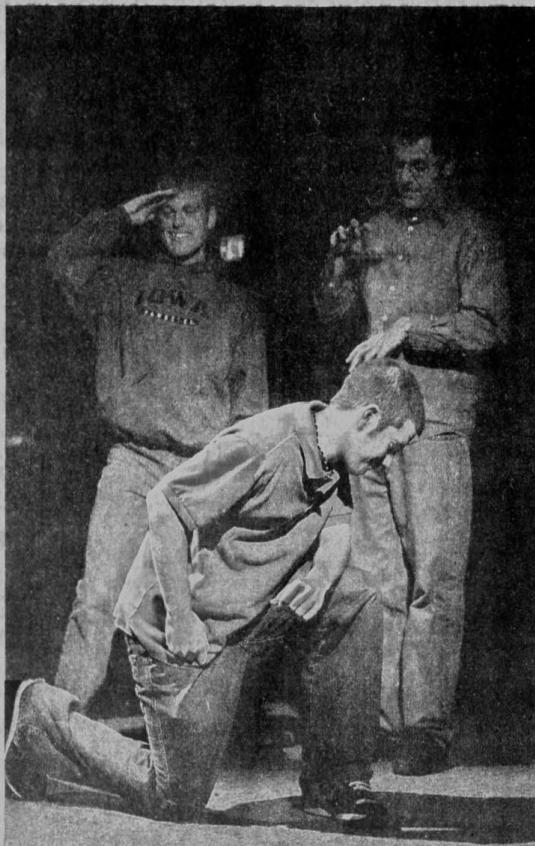

Upon arrival at the darkened Wheelroom on said Thursday, what I found was Iowa City's newest comedy troupe. Keen in the perilous practice of exhibitionism known as improv comedy and consisting of UI students Joseph Verstynen, David Fishel, Amanda Burk, and Sam Rosenberg, plus Steve Gatz, the ensuing hilarity was welcomed by the recently mid-term-beaten audience.

Aside from Verstynen, who previously contributed to Chicago's Second City Theatre, the remaining four members may seem familiar to anyone who witnessed the many performances of previous local improvisational comedy troupes such as IC Improv or Big Jim — groups that regularly entertained at such venues as the Mill and the Green Room.

Unlike Iowa City's only other current comedy outlet, No Shame Theatre, this is not a scripted performance. A Gramma Police sketch is something entirely spontaneous. The characters, story, and humor of a piece begin, develop, and conclude all in the space of the two to 10 minutes allowed in the nine-segment itinerary.

As skits such as "Town Meeting" introduced the problems of the marauding pigs let loose in the city square ("They can talk. They talked to me," deadpanned Verstynen), and the charade-like "Gameshow Olympics" illustrated just how hard it is to pantomime the subject of Ghost Buster Cereal, time became irrelevant, if non-existent, for all present.

Like most (good) improv comedy, the audience members during a Gramma Police performance are more than just spectators. As UI student Tom Tortorich found out as he was picked to pantomime scenes from Gatz's and Burk's family jaunt to Atlantis during the "Vacation Slides" segment, the audience is often as integral to the humor of the performance as the players on the stage.

To ensure the level of comedic stamina necessary for inventing genuinely amusing scenarios on the fly, the Gramma Police was assembled through exhausting try-outs — 20 aspiring comedians auditioned for six roles.

The process seems to have worked — Burk's wide-eyed goofiness, Verstynen's dry wit, Rosenberg's straight-guy demeanor, and Fishel's and Gatz's character-oriented approach fit together like complementary pieces in a very funny puzzle.

"I feel like I just drank a lot of Coca Cola — I think it was a success," said Verstynen, enjoying a moment before joining his fellow policemen in tearing down the stage on Oct. 24.

Suicide bomber hits Israeli mall

BY LAURA KING
LOS ANGELES TIMES

JERUSALEM — A Palestinian suicide bomber made his way to the edge of an open-air shopping mall in a leafy Tel Aviv bedroom community at dusk Monday and detonated a bomb strapped to his body, killing two Israelis and injuring at least 15 others, including two infants.

A security guard, who was one of those killed, managed to block the bomber from entering the mall and causing many more casualties, authorities said.

The latest violence came against a backdrop of political drama triggered by the collapse last week of Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's alliance with the left-center Labor Party, which pulled out of his coalition and left him without a Parliamentary majority.

Sharon's minority government survived a succession of three no-confidence votes in the Knesset, Israel's Parliament, only moments before the suicide attack in the central city of Kfar Sava, six miles from Tel Aviv. It was the second suicide bombing aimed at Israelis in six days.

The parliamentary proceedings, said Cabinet Minister Danny Naveh, were held "in the suffocating atmosphere of a new attack... a new reminder that we are still facing a war of terror."

Initial reports of the suicide blast were just filtering in as Lt. Gen. Shaul Mofaz, the architect of some of Israel's harshest measures against the Palestinians, was sworn in as Sharon's new Defense minister.

Mofaz's term as military chief of staff ended in July, raising unease in some quarters that the transition period was too short between his army career, in which he oversaw day-to-day Israeli operations in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, and his new Cabinet position, in which he will be involved in making policy regarding the Palestinians.

"It is totally unhealthy," said lawmaker Yossi Sarid, whose left-leaning Meretz Party led the fight against Mofaz's confirmation and also spearheaded the no-confidence votes against Sharon. "Orderly countries know that military men, especially if they took off their uniform only three months before, are not appointed to the position of Defense minister, creating the impression that Israel is supposedly ruled by a military junta."

In what might have been a continuation of a controversial policy that flourished under Mofaz, a member of the militant Islamic group Hamas and one other Palestinian died in an explosion that ripped through the van they were driving in the northern West Bank city of Nablus.

Palestinians denounced the incident as an assassination — one of dozens of targeted killings in the last two years of Palestinian militant leaders blamed for planning or carrying out attacks against Israelis. The chief of Palestinian intelligence in Nablus, Mouin Sakaran, said he believed the vehicle had been booby-trapped and blown up by remote control.

Look who's No. 2 in the new Bowl Championship Series standings.

Ohio State, helped by a big quality win over Washington State earlier this year and Miami's drop in the Associated Press poll, has overtaken the Hurricanes in the standings released Monday.

The Buckeyes jumped three spots and nudged past defending champion Miami, which stayed unbeaten while posting its school-record 30th-straight win on Nov. 2, 42-17 over Rutgers.

But the Hurricanes had to rally in the fourth quarter, and that cost them. Oklahoma remained No. 1, while Ohio State moved into second with 5.57 points, 0.44 ahead of Miami.

The top two teams in the final BCS standings released Dec. 8 will play in the national title game at the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., on Jan. 3.

"We are proud of what our young men have done to date," Ohio State coach Jim Tressel said. "But we know if we don't play our best road game of the year at Purdue, we won't be No. 2 next week."

Ohio State has a 6.17 composite total, compared with Miami's 6.01. But the Buckeyes got a 0.6 deduction for a 25-7 victory over Washington State on Sept. 14. Miami has no bonus-point deductions.

The quality win deductions were added last year after Miami failed to make the national championship game over Florida State following the 2000 season despite beating the Seminoles earlier in the year.

The Hurricanes' struggles against lowly Rutgers dropped them to No. 2 in the AP media poll. A component of the BCS standings includes the average of the AP media and the coaches' poll. Miami is No. 1 in the coaches' poll, giving it a 1.5 poll average.

If Miami had stayed No. 1 in both polls, its poll average would have been 1 — putting the Hurricanes 0.06 points ahead of the Buckeyes.

"I can't be overly concerned about what the pollsters do," Miami coach Larry Coker said Monday about the AP media poll. "First of all, it will be easy to rate us if we don't play better. The thing we have to do is make sure we get it corrected and win the games. If we do that, the polls will take care of themselves."

"I know that sounds like a broken record, but I really believe it's true."

Miami (8-0) trailed 17-14 entering the fourth quarter at Rutgers. Oklahoma (8-0), meanwhile, dominated then-No. 13

Smashing start

Favre makes strong comeback, keeps Packers on pace

BY ARNIE STAPLETON
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Brett Favre had a much better return than Cris Carter.

Favre didn't seem bothered much by his sprained left knee as he guided Green Bay to a 24-10 victory over Miami on Monday night.

Favre, who was knocked out of his last start, extended his NFL record for consecutive regular season starts by a quarterback to 165. He overcame an early interception in the end zone to lead the Packers to their sixth straight victory.

The Packers, who have the NFL's best record at 7-1, also recorded four more takeaways to increase their league-leading total to 27 and held Miami running back Ricky Williams to 47 yards on 14 carries.

Favre was 16-25 for 187 yards with one touchdown pass.

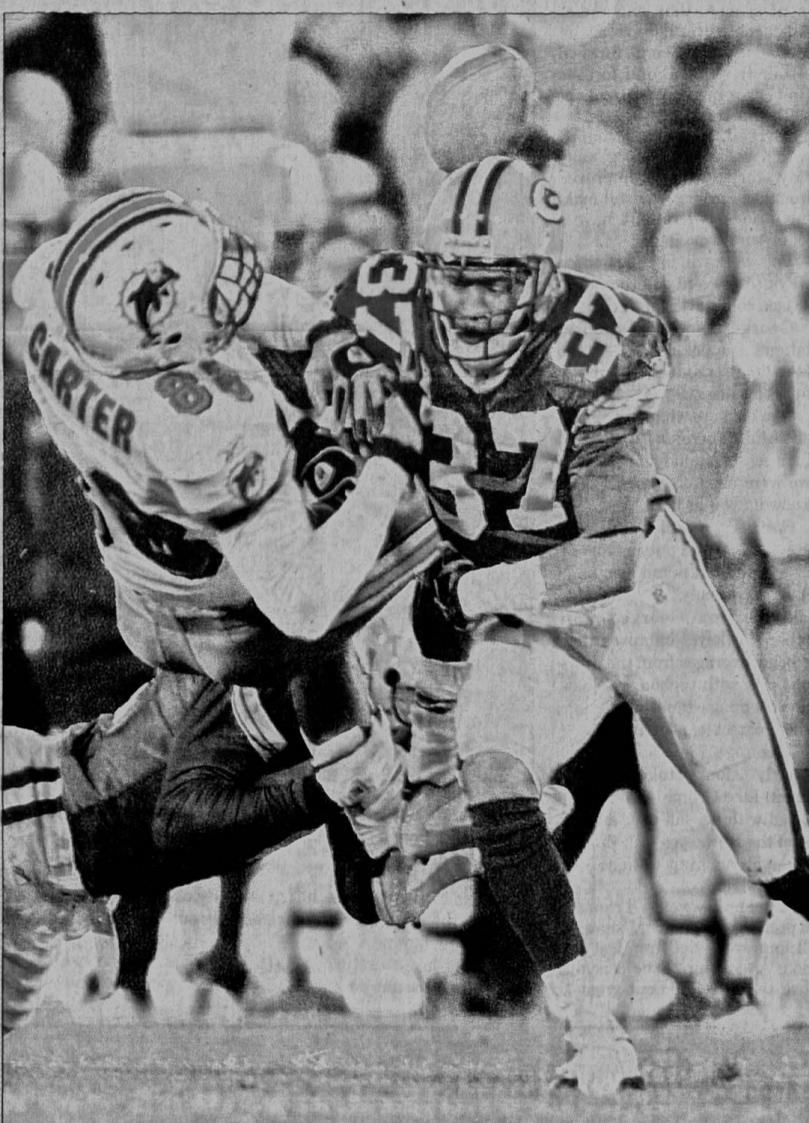

The Dolphins (5-3) had hoped Carter would provide a similar spark as he came out of retirement in hopes of helping them to a championship.

But Carter fumbled away his first reception, leading to Green Bay's first touchdown, and he was the intended target on an interception by Nate Wayne in the second half. He finished with three inconsequential catches for 31 yards.

Darren Sharper stepped in front of a pass by Ray Lucas and returned it 89 yards for a touchdown as the third quarter expired, giving Green Bay a 24-0 lead.

Olindo Mare kicked a 46-yard field goal in the fourth quarter and Miami finally got into the end zone on Lucas' 1-yard keeper with 1:31 left — the first TD in eight quarters against Green Bay's defense.

Ahman Green rushed 19 times for 72 yards and caught six passes for 71 yards. He accounted for all but 18 of the yards in the first half.

Green Bay's Tyrone Williams hits Miami receiver Cris Carter, forcing a fumble the Packers recovered.

Nelson illustrates story of successes

A two-page spread on walk-ons begins on page 76 of the 2002 Iowa football media guide. It contains the following passage: "At the University of Iowa, the walk-on football player is welcomed by every member of the coaching staff, starting at the top with head coach Kirk Ferentz. It is a policy that has rewarded the Hawkeyes handsomely over the years."

Consider Bruce Nelson the Brad Pitt of Iowa football.

As a center in charge of anchoring Iowa's offensive line, the former walk-on has perhaps the most un-sexy position on the team. It is one that requires a grotesque mix of agility and strength. Picture a ballerina with the body of a professional wrestler, and you have the prototype center. You have Nelson.

His is a story that — despite having been told over and over again — bears repeating because of the success of this season's team. Were it not for Nelson and players like him, perhaps none of what the Hawkeyes have accomplished to this point would have been possible.

"The cool thing is we grew up together," he said of his senior teammates after Iowa's 20-3 victory over Wisconsin on Nov. 2. "We got beat up together, and now, we're winning games together."

Few have taken more lumps than Nelson, who, after arriving at the UI from the northwestern Iowa football haven of Emmetsburg, faced an uncertain future as a walk-on in 1998. He endured the heartbreak of saying goodbye to the legendary Hayden Fry and the transition to Ferentz, who knew nothing about him.

But something in Nelson and his young teammates caused them to keep faith in the Iowa program.

Nelson, who has switched positions three times at Iowa, has started every game of his Iowa career since redshirting, a streak that will number 46 games when he takes the field against Northwestern this weekend. It ranks as the third-longest among offensive

MSU's Williams fired after loss to Michigan

BY DEE-ANN DURBIN
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Michigan State football coach Bobby Williams was fired Monday, two days after the Spartans dropped to 3-6 with their worst loss in 55 years.

Williams was informed of his firing after Monday's practice by Athletics Director Ron Mason.

Offensive coordinator Morris Watts was appointed interim head coach.

On Sunday, the university announced that suspended quarterback Jeff Smoker is battling substance abuse and has sought help. It also announced that tailback Dawan Moss was dismissed from the team after being arrested and accused of dragging a police officer with his car following a traffic stop.

A 49-3 loss at Michigan on Nov. 2 dropped Michigan State, which was ranked as high as 15th this season, to 1-4 in the Big Ten.

Williams has been under fire for weeks, with fans booing loudly during home games and calling for his ouster.

When Williams was asked Nov. 2 if he had lost his team, he said: "I don't know."

"If he wasn't sure, who was?" Mason said Monday. "To me, that was the most defining moment."

The Spartans' four-consecutive losses have been by an average of 28.25 points.

Smoker, the third-leading passer in school history, is one of two players suspended for violating team rules. Defensive end Greg Taplin was suspended Oct. 31 for an unspecified violation. Two others have quit voluntarily.

Moss was charged with a felony and two misdemeanors after police said he resisted arrest in Lansing. Williams dismissed him from the team Sunday.

The three remaining black head coaches are Notre Dame's Tyrone Willingham, San Jose State's Fitz Hill, and New Mexico State's Tony Samuel.

Willingham, who left Stanford to join Notre Dame before this season, were the first black football coaches in their schools' histories.

Willingham and Williams faced each other this season, when Notre Dame beat Michigan State, 21-17, on Sept. 21.

Since he replaced Nick Saban on Dec. 5, 1999, when Saban left for Louisiana State, Williams is 16-17 overall, 6-15 in the Big Ten and 1-9 in conference road games.

In August, hopes and expectations were as high with 16 returning starters from last year's team.

The Spartans began the season with five home games and they were ranked 18th at the start of the season.

 MSU coach Bobby Williams was fired Monday, two days after the Spartans dropped to 3-6.

Drury's late score puts Flames on top

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Chris Drury's goal 96 seconds into the third period helped the Calgary Flames to a 4-2 victory over the New York Islanders on Monday night.

The Flames took a 2-0 lead on goals by Craig Conroy and Mattias Johansson — who scored his first NHL goal when his wraparound attempt went in off goalie Garth Snow's stick at 2:37 of the second period.

Roman Hamrik and Alexei Yashin scored to tie it before the second intermission, but Drury's fifth goal of the season gave the Flames the lead for good.

Chuck Kobasew added an insurance goal with 6:25 left on a backhand off a turnover by Hamrik.

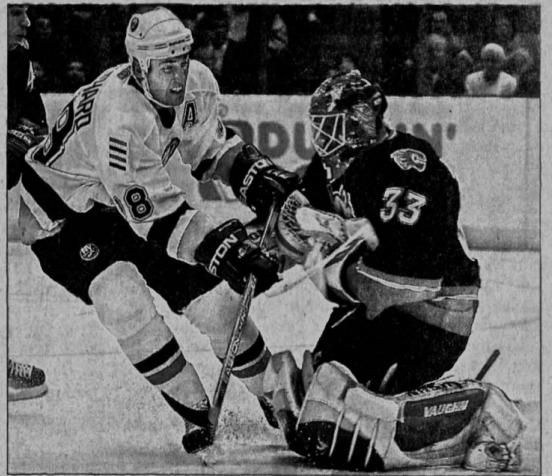

Jamie McLennan stopped 26

shots for his first win of the season.

Snow, who stopped 17 shots, remained winless.

Hockey Hall of Fame inductees Bernie Federko, Clark Gillies, Roger Neilson, and Rod Langway flip pucks off hockey sticks.

Gillies joins linemates in Hall of Fame

ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Clark Gillies was reunited with New York Islander linemates Bryan Trottier and Mike Bossy in the Hockey Hall of Fame.

"To be recognized as one of the great lines that was ever put together is very special," Gillies said.

The three helped the Islanders win four-consecutive championships from 1980-83. Bossy was inducted in the hall in 1991 and Trottier in 1997.

Gillies was enshrined Monday with Bernie Federko, the St. Louis Blues playmaker, and Rod Langway, the American who won a Stanley Cup with Montreal and twice won the Norris Trophy as best defenseman with Washington.

Roger Neilson, head coach of eight NHL teams and now an assistant in Ottawa, was inducted in the builders category.

Gillies, a tough, 6-foot-3 forward, finished with 319 goals, 378 assists, and 1,023 penalty minutes in 948 NHL games.

"I told somebody the other day, 'I'd have scored 50 goals if Trots was right-handed,'" the 48-year-old Gillies said after being presented with his navy blue hall blazer and ring. "But, nah, I knew my job on that line was pretty clear."

"The puck would come around the boards to me, I would throw it to Trots in the middle, and he'd throw it to Boss, and Boss would go in and score. That's not far from the truth."

He considers the 1980-83 Islanders "the greatest team that was ever assembled." Coach Al Arbour stressed the need for Gillies to stick to basics.

"He'd always tell me, 'I don't want you cutting through the middle or making fancy backhand passes. Your game is straight up and down the boards. Bang in the corners and get the puck out and get it to [Trottier and Bossy].'" Gillies recalled. "It worked very, very well."

Other Islanders in the hall are defenseman Denis Potvin (1991) and goalie Billy Smith (1993). Arbour (1996) and President Bill Torrey (1995) are in the builders section.

Gillies had been nominated twice before and fell short both times by one selection committee vote.

"I just kind of put it on the back burner, and it's been six or seven years now for this day to come up," he said. "It's a wonderful, wonderful thing. It's the ultimate reward for playing a game that was just a lot of fun."

The 68-year-old Neilson was the first NHL coach to use video as a teaching tool and also devised defensive systems still used today.

Neilson was diagnosed with multiple myeloma, bone marrow cancer, in December 1999. He underwent successful stem cell transplant in 2000. In January 2001, he was diagnosed with malignant melanoma, skin cancer.

"Right now the doctors are pretty happy," Neilson said. "They feel both (cancers) are under control. ... I feel like I may live forever."

Langway, like Gillies, had to wait for the Hall of Fame.

"I was disappointed not to have got the call last year — I have to be honest with you," he said. "I thought that, if I didn't get in this year, I might get overlooked."

Federko was the first to earn as many as 50 assists in 10 consecutive seasons.

"I was looked to as a guy who could carry the torch and I was proud to carry it for 13 years," said Federko, a TV commentator for the Blues. "As a player, you dream about winning a Stanley Cup. Unfortunately, we didn't get that but it wasn't for lack of trying. I just tried to be the nucleus of that hockey club for as long as I could."

Belichick does heavy lifting for team

BY JIM LITKE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Say this for Bill Belichick: Beneath that cautious exterior beats the heart of an accountant. It's hard to imagine his mouth writing a check that Belichick's coaching skills can't cover. That much was evident one more time Sunday as his New England Patriots humbled the Buffalo Bills, 38-7, as well as the All-Pro quarterback Belichick traded to his division rival only a few months ago.

His feud with Drew Bledsoe was all anybody wanted to talk about in the days leading up to the game.

But Belichick said as little about it as possible the few times he emerged from his coaching bunker during the week, and he made sure not to gloat afterward.

"There was a lot of hype for all of you guys on that," he told reporters. "But what's important for us is that we won the game. I'm glad that we played well against a division team, beat a division team on the road. That's what's important."

"I know everybody else wants to hype the rest of the story," Belichick repeated, "but the important part of the story for us is that we beat Buffalo in Buffalo."

One important part of the story, yes, but hardly the most important one.

The Patriots arrived in Buffalo as a team in disarray. They were the losers of four straight, with Tom Brady, the quarterback who replaced Bledsoe, coming off his worst game of the season.

Besides being a division game, it also marked the first of five games for New England in 26 days, four of them away from home and three against weak NFC North competition — Chicago, Minnesota, and Detroit. If the defending Super Bowl champions were going to turn their season around, it came down to Sunday — or very likely not at all this season.

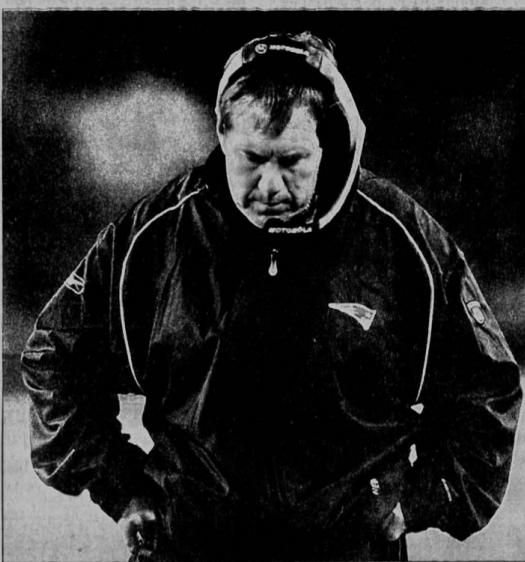

The only way to turn around a team that's sinking like a rock is for the coach to do the heavy lifting. He has to quiet locker-room dissent, reinforce discipline, and find a way to ignite the spirit that makes a team play better than the sum of its parts.

Belichick isn't good at any of those things. His own players will tell you he's too careful as a speaker, too controlling as a taskmaster, and too intense to take his own pulse, let alone that of his team.

But come up with a game plan to beat Bledsoe? Stop the NFL's hottest passer cold, derail a guy on pace to challenge the single-season record 5,084 yards set by Dan Marino nearly 20 years ago?

Now that was a check Belichick was prepared to write.

Trading a 30-year-old superstar to a division rival wasn't his first choice, and the move echoed more ominously around Boston.

But Bledsoe's complete recovery from injury, his $103 million salary, and the lack of serious offers from any team except the Bills made Buffalo Belichick's only choice. The timing for the grudge match was beyond his control — but not much else was.

As he had during his stint as defensive coordinator for the Jets, Belichick baffled Bledsoe almost from the outset.

He used an array of confusing defensive fronts and blitzes to pile up four sacks, reprising the unconventional, attacking stunts that upended the St. Louis Rams' offensive machine in the Super Bowl.

Hinske, Jennings named top league rookies

BY RONALD BLUM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Toronto third baseman Eric Hinske won the AL Rookie of the Year award Monday, and Colorado pitcher Jason Jennings was voted the NL's top rookie.

Hinske got 19 of 28 first-place votes and nine seconds to finish with 122 points in voting by a panel of the Baseball Writers' Association of America. He hit .279 with 24 homers and 84 RBIs.

Baltimore right-hander Rodrigo Lopez, who went 15-9 with a 3.57 ERA, was second with nine firsts, 17 seconds, and one third for 97 points. Orioles reliever Jorge Julio was third with 14 points after going 5-6 with a 1.99 ERA and 25 saves.

The 25-year-old Hinske is Toronto's first player to win the award outright. Alfredo Griffin tied Minnesota's John Castino in the 1979 rookie voting.

The 24-year-old Jennings went 16-8 with a 4.52 ERA and became the first Colorado player to win the award. He got 27 firsts and five seconds for 150 points.

Montreal outfielder Brad Wilkerson, who batted .266 with 20 homers and 59 RBIs, was second with two firsts and 57 points. Cincinnati outfielder Austin Kearns also got two firsts and had 40 points after hitting .315 with 13 homers and 56 RBIs.

Los Angeles left-hander Kazuhisa Ishii got the other first-place vote and tallied 14 points. He went 14-10 with a 4.27 ERA in his first season since leaving the Japanese leagues.

Hinske, a member of the all-star team that will tour Japan this month, had the most homers by an AL rookie since Boston's Nomar Garciaparra hit 30 in 1997. Hinske's first career hit and RBIs came on a two-run single off Red Sox star Pedro Martinez on opening day.

After making 16 errors during the first half of the season, Hinske had just four in the second half.

He'll get a $50,000 bonus for winning the award. His salary last season was $200,000, the major league minimum.

Jennings went from Double-A in 2001 to the Rockies in the final weeks of the season. He began 2002 as Colorado's fifth starter but was more consistent than more heralded pitchers on the staff, including Mike Hampton and Denny Neagle. Despite a 5.65 ERA in 17 starts at hitter-friendly Coors Field, he went 9-4 there.

Jennings, who made $206,000, did not have a bonus clause.

WTA in agreement on French Open: Equality

BY LISA DILLMAN
LOS ANGELES TIMES

LOS ANGELES — Three of the four women's quarterfinals in the French Open in June could have easily been finals in previous years: defending champion Jennifer Capriati vs. Jelena Dokic, three-time champion Monica Seles vs. Venus Williams, and former champion Mary Pierce vs. Serena Williams.

Femmes de Paris. Only the femmes were relegated to the secondary show venue at Roland Garros, Court Suzanne Lenglen. The WTA objected before, during, and afterward, and Capriati, Venus, and Serena criticized the decision. Serena called on the players to push the issue, saying, "It can't be one person pushing the boat; you have to have more."

Well, the hands on the deck got the job done. Kevin Wulff, the WTA's chief executive officer, told the Los Angeles Times in a recent interview that the tour reached an agreement with the French Open on the issue. At least two of the women's quarterfinals will be held on Center Court, he said.

"The French Open has agreed to treat the quarterfinals equal with the men's," Wulff said. "This is an important thing. They [the players] were supportive in making sure the tennis powers were very aware of it."

Paris is only one leading example of how the top players are stepping forward more often on key tour issues, realizing perception is sometimes as important as reality. Closer to home, this is what happened in March during an often-contentious fight to find a new home for the season-ending WTA Championships. The event moved from New York to Munich, Germany, last year, and attendance plummeted from 94,133 to 36,500.

Venus Williams skipped the event because of a wrist injury, and Seles has refused to play tournaments in Germany since her 1993 stabbing in Hamburg.

Once some of the marquee players realized there was a chance to elevate the WTA Championships, lifting it out of a secondary status, they got behind the effort to shift the event to Staples Center in Los Angeles. Among the most outspoken were Seles and Lindsay Davenport. The event, which starts Wednesday and finishes with the Nov. 11 final, features 16 singles players and eight doubles teams in a single-elimination format.

And the three who have come to Los Angeles for various appearances to drum up interest in the tournament have been Seles, Serena Williams, and Davenport.

Interestingly, all three are IMG clients. The management firm was the primary opposition behind the move to Staples, objecting to the proliferation of tournaments in Southern California. IMG has ties to the Indian Wells event in March and Manhattan Beach in August. Officials at the San Diego tournament, which is the week before Manhattan Beach, were worried about over-saturation, too.

But the three players, in particular, realized what is good for them could be beneficial for the tour. Serena Williams is interested in an acting career and will appear on the "The Tonight Show With Jay Leno" this week. Seles always wanted to finish her career by playing in the WTA Championships at least once more, and that, of course, wouldn't have happened in Germany.

Davenport can stay in her own home at Laguna Beach until just before the event. And she pointed out that it makes sense to be in a major U.S. market with so many Americans at the top of the world rankings. Officials for the event would not reveal advance sales.

"They've got some work to do," Wulff said recently. "They're less than they thought they'd be at this stage. They started off like gangbusters, and then it slowed down. We probably should have done more over the summer. It's solid. But they're used to selling out here."

"Momentum will pick up again. They're optimistic."

Tournament director John Arrix said that has happened in the last week. "Tennis is different from any other sport," he said on Nov. 1. "It's not going to be an instant success. It's not like a Rolling Stones concert, where people hit the phones. It's a long-term relationship."

Duke picked No. 1 in preseason

BY CHUCK SCOFFNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Duke is returning all five starters from a Final Four team. No wonder it's starting the season at No. 1.

The Blue Devils were an overwhelming choice for the top spot in the Associated Press preseason women's basketball poll Monday, the team's first No. 1 ranking.

Duke's women never had been higher than third.

"We see it as a great honor," coach Gail Goestenkors said. "We understand it doesn't mean anything. It's the post-season ranking we're after. However, it shows how far our program has come and that it is well respected."

Duke received 38 of 44 first-place votes from a national media panel for a total of 1,093 points. Tennessee was second with 1,049 points, LSU third with 941, and defending national champion Connecticut fourth with 873.

Tennessee, which has led the preseason poll a record 10 times, received four first-place votes. LSU and Connecticut each had one.

At No. 3, LSU has its highest ranking since the Lady Tigers were second on March 8, 1978.

Chuck Burton/Associated Press
Duke's Alana Beard and Krista Gingrich celebrate last year. In the preseason poll, the Blue Devils are ranked No. 1.

Fourth is the lowest for Connecticut since it was No. 4 in the final poll of the 1998-99 season.

Connecticut lost four senior starters from a team that went 39-0 and gave the school its third NCAA title. The Huskies had been No. 1 in 19-straight polls and 49 of the last 56.

Kansas State, which went 26-8 last season using freshmen and sophomores, was fifth, and Stanford was sixth. Texas Tech, Purdue, Georgia, and Notre Dame completed the top 10.

Texas was 11th, and Vanderbilt 12th, followed by North Carolina, Penn State, Minnesota, Louisiana Tech, Arkansas, Cincinnati, Colorado State, and Boston College.

George Washington, Oklahoma, Iowa State, Mississippi State, and UC Santa Barbara held the final five spots.

Alana Beard, a first-team All-American as a sophomore last season, heads the returnees at Duke, which went 31-4 and earned its second Final Four trip despite having just eight players.

Seven of the eight return, and Goestenkors has added a touted recruiting class that includes high-school All-Americans Brooke Smith, Mistie Bass, and Lindsey Harding.

Goestenkors says without hesitation the Blue Devils' goal is the one thing they haven't accomplished in her tenure — winning the national championship.

"This team is very hungry to reach the very top," she said. "It was great for our young team last year to reach the Final Four, to have that experience, and to understand what it takes to get there. Now, we want to take it that next step and finish it off."

Duke became the 11th school to lead the preseason poll, which started in 1976. Fourteen teams ranked No. 1 at the start of the season finished on top. Eleven preseason No. 1 teams went on to win the national championship.

The Southeastern Conference, which had eight teams in the NCAA Tournament last season, has a poll-high six. There are five teams from the Big 12, and three from the Big Ten and Big East.

lineman in the country.

Consider him a walking testament to the transformation of this team — a living, breathing monument to the rebuilding process which Ferentz has been working on since day one.

Game No. 1: Nelson starts at guard against powerhouse Nebraska. Iowa is demolished, 42-7.

Game No. 3: Iowa defeats Northern Illinois, 24-0, for its only win of the 1999 season.

Game No. 17: Iowa earns its first Big Ten win under Ferentz, a 21-16 Homecoming thriller over Michigan State.

Game No. 22: The Hawkeyes follow up a 26-23 road victory over Penn State with a 27-17 win over No. 12 Northwestern for their third and final win of 2000.

Game No. 33: With Nelson at center since the start of the 2001 season, Iowa defeats Minnesota, 42-24, to become bowl-eligible.

Game No. 35: Behind the play of the offensive line, the Hawkeyes defeat Texas Tech, 19-16, in the Alamo Bowl.

Game No. 44: The Hawkeyes earn their biggest win in over a decade to remain atop the Big Ten with a 34-9 throttling of Michigan.

Nelson has seen it all, but the best is yet to come. As long as his streak remains intact — and it will, barring an appearance on the cover of Sports Illustrated or some other malevolent force of nature — Nelson will likely start

Game No. 48 on New Year's Day

— the most important Iowa milestone to date.

Through all the wins and losses, Nelson has persevered, personifying the spirit of Iowa football by always working harder and longer than need be, looking to find that extra advantage on film or in practice that will help to make the team better. He's gotten bigger, stronger, and like the rest of his veteran teammates, he's gotten better.

"It's been a real enjoyable season," he said. "I just hope we can ride it out."

For the sake of Nelson and his fellow seniors, so do a lot of observers.

Colorado, 27-11, and that was enough to change the poll.

The Hurricanes lost 27 first-place votes to Oklahoma and had their record run of 21-consecutive polls at No. 1 snapped.

"Nobody wants us in the national championship game," Miami tailback Willis McGahee said. "The minute we lose, we'll probably fall down to No. 10. I don't know why there are so many haters."

The BCS formula uses the AP media and coaches' polls, computer polls, strength of schedule, won-loss record, and a bonus-point system.

Oklahoma has 2.04 points —

1.5 for poll average, 1 for computer-rank average, 0.24 for strength of schedule, zero for losses, and a 0.7 deduction for a victory over Texas.

Ohio State has 5.57 points — 3 for poll average, 2.33 for computer-rank average, 0.84 for strength of schedule, and a 0.6 deduction for the victory over Washington State.

Miami has 6.01 points — 1.5 for poll average, 2.67 for computer-rank average, 1.84 for schedule rank, and no bonus-point deduction.

Texas is fourth at 10.03, followed by Washington State (13.05) and Georgia (15.03). Notre Dame dropped four spots to No. 7 with 15.33 points after losing to Boston College.

In the next few weeks, the Hurricanes have a chance of passing the Buckeyes. Their strength of schedule will go up with games at Tennessee (5-3) this week, then No. 22 Pittsburgh (7-2), Syracuse (3-6), and No. 8 Virginia Tech (8-1).

Big wins in any of those games could put them back at No. 1 in the AP poll as well.

Ohio State, meanwhile, has games remaining at Illinois (3-6) and against No. 13 Michigan (7-2).

Oklahoma looks like it is in the driver's seat, with games remaining against Texas A&M (5-4), Baylor (3-6), Texas Tech (6-4), and Oklahoma State (4-4). But then the Sooners have to play in the Big 12 championship game.

Hunter makes winning shot to beat Chicago

ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Lindsey Hunter made a jumper with 1.2 seconds remaining in overtime as the short-handed Toronto Raptors beat the Chicago Bulls, 109-105, Monday night.

Hunter and Voshon Lenard each scored 23 points for the Raptors, who were missing injured All-Stars Vince Carter (strained left quadriceps tendon) and Antonio Davis (strained left ribcage).

Carter and Davis are each expected to miss at least a week. Alvin Williams had a team-high 25 points for the Raptors, who have won 15 straight against Chicago.

Donyell Marshall had 32 points and 17 rebounds for Bulls, who have lost two straight after winning their first two.

After Hunter made his 15-foot jumper to give the Raptors the lead, Mamadou N'diaye fouled Marshall, but he missed his free throw with 0.4 seconds remaining to seal the victory for Toronto.

N'diaye, who hardly played last season, finished with a career-high 12 points and eight blocks.

Jalen Rose added 24 points for the Bulls, whose 23 turnovers led to 31 points for the Raptors.

The Bulls, down by 18 at the end of the third quarter, began the fourth on a 20-5 run as Marshall scored nine points.

Marshall later made a 3-pointer, cutting Toronto's lead to five with 2:06 left.

After Lenard assisted on N'diaye's lay-up, Rose made a 3-pointer to cut the lead to four.

Rose then made a jumper and a driving lay-up with 7.8 seconds left to tie it.

N'diaye appeared to make a tip-in to win it before the final buzzer sounded, but the officials said it was no good after checking the instant replay.

Jay Williams' 3-pointer in overtime gave Chicago a 101-99 lead with 1:15 left, but N'diaye made two free throws to tie it.

Rose then fouled Toronto's Morris Peterson, who made two free throws to give Toronto the lead with 49 seconds left.

After Alvin Williams made two more, N'diaye blocked Fred Hoiberg's layup attempt.

But Rose made a putback and a short jumper with 5.8 seconds left to tie it again.

Alvin Williams and Hunter combined for 26 points and eight assists in the first half as Toronto led 55-46 at the break.

Milwaukee 97, New York 88

NEW YORK — Sam Cassell scored seven-straight points for the Bucks after the Knicks came back from a 16-point deficit, leading Milwaukee over New York Monday night in front of the first non-sellout crowd at Madison Square Garden in nearly a decade.

A crowd of 18,100 — more than 1,600 short of capacity — watched New York's sellout streak end at 433.

After tying the game at 80 with 5:28 left, the Knicks allowed the Bucks to go on a 7-0 run to regain control. New York never got closer than three the rest of the way.

Cassell, despite missing his first five shots and sitting out most of the third quarter with foul trouble, led Milwaukee with 22 points — half of them coming in the final 12 minutes.

Allan Houston scored 28 for the Knicks.

Michael Redd added 19 and Ray Allen 17.

New Jersey 106, Minnesota 82

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Richard Jefferson matched his career high with 22 points and the undefeated Nets forced the Timberwolves into a team-record 29 turnovers in a 106-82 victory.

Jason Kidd added 12 points and 10 assists in only 30 minutes, and the Nets had three other players in double figures.

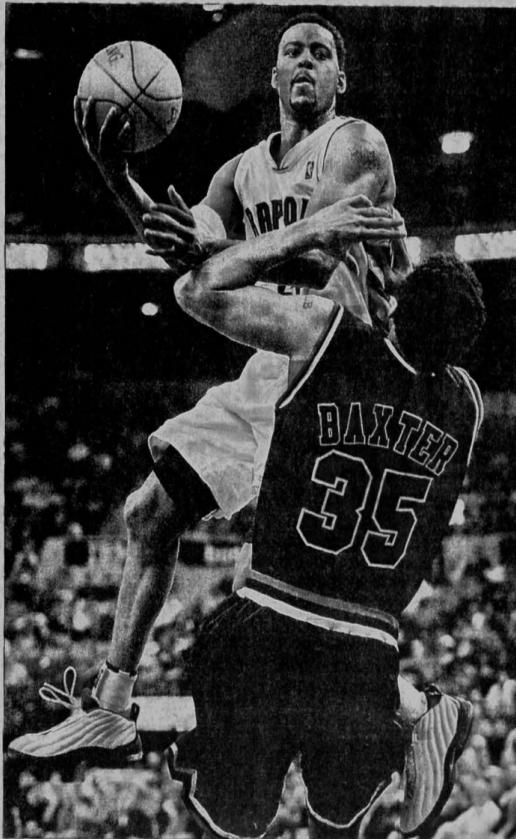

Kevin Garnett had 23 points and 10 rebounds for the Timberwolves. Minnesota had that many rebounds in the first half.

The turnovers led to 39 New Jersey points.

Jefferson woke up the crowd with 6:02 left in the second quarter by driving the baseline and throwing down a windmill jam over 7-foot center Rasho Nesterovic.

Jefferson bumped chests with teammates after the play, and that seemed to tick off Garnett. They were called for coincidental technical fouls just before halftime after exchanging words after Jefferson missed a free throw.

Jefferson scored 17 points in the third quarter, when the Nets outscored Minnesota 39-22 to take an 83-61 lead.
