Teamwork & coffee sustain surgeons

Putting in grueling hours is part of the job, doctors say

BY CHRISTY B. LOGAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

An itchy nose is the bane of surgeons. Expert assistants and coffee — no cream, no sugar — is the saving grace for the hundreds of doctors who routinely spend hours at the operating tables of the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Stephen Rayhill, a UI professor of surgery, performed several liver transplants in 36 hours during his residency. The specialist in liver, kidney, and pancreatic transplants takes short naps in his office and downs cups of black Starbucks coffee between procedures — which on occasion have kept him in the operating room for up to 17 hours straight.

"Just put one foot in front of the other and just keep going," he said about his approach.

The National Sleep Foundation released a report earlier this year showing that the American public is in favor of limiting the work hours for professions requiring sustained alertness on the job to ensure the public's health and safety. An overwhelming number of respondents in the study said they would feel anxious if their surgeons were on duty for 24-consecutive hours.

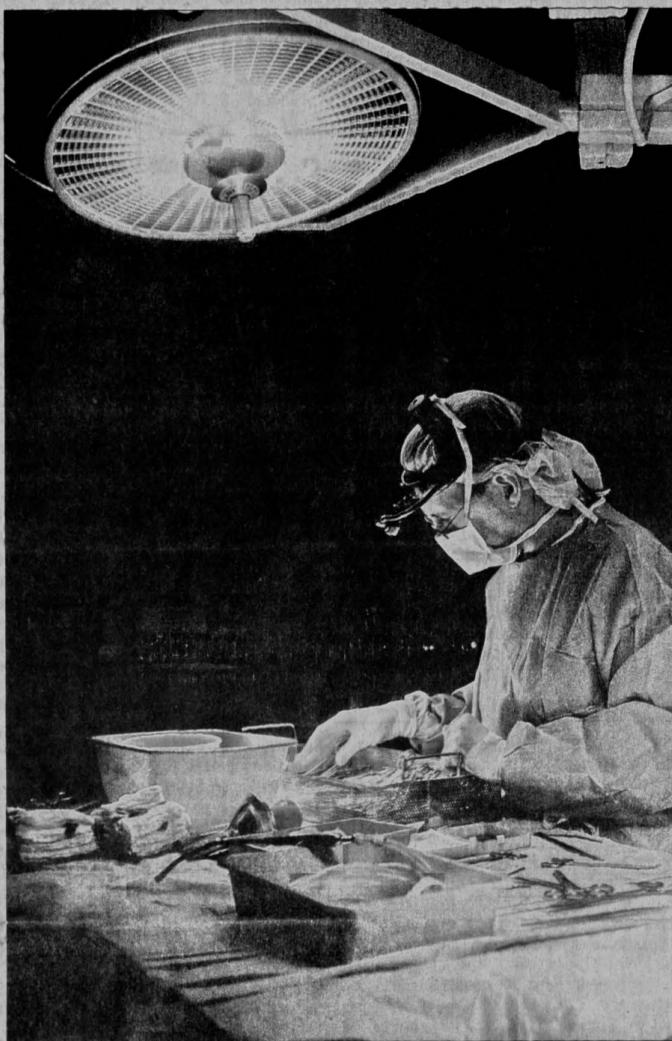

According to a recent study by the U.S. Bureau of Labor, almost one-third of physicians worked 60 or more hours a week in 2000.

UIHC surgeons say they rely on the teamwork and support of highly skilled nurses, technicians, and anesthesiologists to withstand long, complex surgeries.

"Good nurses make all the difference. They know the procedure, they follow the case, and that makes things go smoothly," Rayhill said. "Things can get very busy and intense ..."

To prepare for such a workload, most surgeons visualize their procedure — running through the steps, the anatomy, and the particular difficulties they might encounter, said Dr. Carol Scott-Conner, the UIHC head of surgery. Coping with the high mental and physical stress levels only comes with time, she added.

"The adage is, a full stomach and an empty bladder," Scott-Conner said about preparing for surgery.

New extensions clogging traffic, IC residents say

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

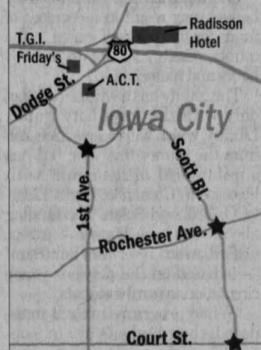

Some Iowa City residents say the recently opened Scott Boulevard and First Avenue extensions have created a need for better traffic controls at three East Side intersections, prompting discussion of a possible traffic study to be completed within a year.

Dozens of residents are asking traffic officials to install either four-way stop signs or traffic signals at the First Avenue/Scott Boulevard, Scott Boulevard/Rochester Avenue, and Scott Boulevard/Court Street intersections, which are now controlled by two-way stop signs. The First Avenue and Scott Boulevard extensions, which opened for use Nov. 1, are causing traffic delays, residents have said in roughly 15 phone calls and 20 e-mails to the city's Traffic Engineering and Planning Department.

While city officials say they recognize delays might be a problem at the crossroads, which are located in the eastern and northern Iowa City, they are unsure if other control methods need to be implemented.

From flunking out to teaching speed

BY CHOYON MANJREKAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

Once a college flunk-out, a UI alumnus says he now holds the key to tripling reading speeds, boosting grade-point averages, increasing retention power, and taking efficient notes.

Although reclusive about his methods, Jeff Kapec said all will be revealed during the classes he's making available this fall.

Thursday night, in an introductory session to what he calls the "ultimate learning system," Kapec spoke about his experience as a student and how he went on to develop his course, which he has been teaching for 20 years.

"I discovered that the answer was not hard work but smart work," said Kapec, who was studying instructional design and technology at the UI before flunking out his freshman year. "I learned how to study more efficiently and to my full potential and went back to college and grad school."

Among the audience Thursday night was UI Student Government President Nick Herbold.

"I'll definitely try out what the course has to offer and see if I like it," he said.

Others, such as freshman Sarah Maktabi, seemed a bit more skeptical.

Iowa delegation remains men's club

BY JOE NUGENT
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa repeated history in Tuesday's mid-term election, mirroring itself in a tradition of electing only men to national office.

With Jim Leach's defeat of Dr. Julie Thomas in the 2nd District and Anne Hutchinson's loss to Jim Nussle in the 1st District, Iowa remains one of six states that has never elected a woman to the Congress. The other states are Alaska, Delaware, Mississippi, New Hampshire, and Vermont.

"It's abysmal," Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, said of the situation during a UI campaign stop before the election.

Eight Iowa women, including Thomas and Hutchinson, have now unsuccessfully run for Congress.

"There will be no glass ceiling broken tonight. One of us, one day, will break through," Thomas said after her loss Tuesday.

David Redlawsk, a UI assistant professor of political science, said Thomas and Hutchinson lost because of the strength of the incumbents — not because of their sex.

"I don't think it's a reflection on Iowa," he said, adding that an incumbent's name recognition carries a lot of weight. "Challengers not only have to convince voters they are good candidates, they also have to persuade people to vote against someone they have supported in the past."

The situation for women is different on the state level, however; many have served in high positions. Sally Pederson won re-election to a second term as lieutenant governor Tuesday, Joy Corning was sworn in as lieutenant governor for part of Terry Branstad's tenure as governor in 1991 and was re-elected in 1994, and Elaine Baxter served two terms as Secretary of State from 1986-94.

UISG mulls bar ads on Cambus for SafeRide

Leaders want to expand late-night Cambus service

BY AMY JENNINGS
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI student leaders are contemplating using dollars collected at downtown bars and other businesses to fund a safety initiative that would extend the hours of a late-night student bus service.

The initiative, which would double SafeRide's annual budget from approximately $20,000 to $40,000, would extend Cambus hours on the Red and Blue routes from midnight to 2:30 a.m. Sunday through Thursday in the spring 2003 semester.

UI Student Government President Nick Herbold said he has toyed with the idea of asking downtown businesses to help fund the program by either donating a portion of money collected from cover charges or buying advertisements to be posted in the buses.

Herbold has discussed the extension with university officials, but they have taken no action.

"Because this would help students, I don't think anyone will have a problem with bar advertisements on the buses, as long as they don't include drink specials," Herbold said. "The advertisements would be just the logo for the restaurant or bar."

Members of the Stepping Up Program, a group dedicated to curbing underage and binge drinking in the local bars, said they are in favor of safe transportation for students but would not support bar advertisements on Cambuses.

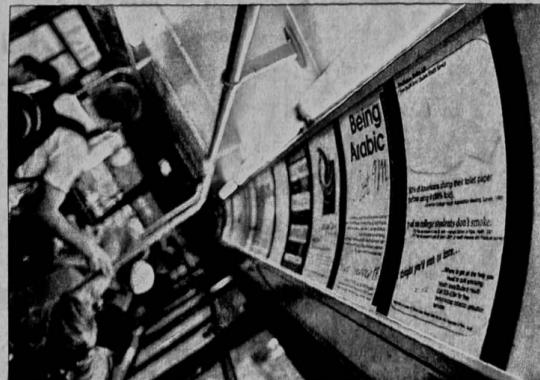

"I completely agree with Nick's idea, but bar ads on the buses, no matter how restrained, I think are an inappropriate use of the UI transit system," said Stepping Up member James Clayton.

The program would have to see a proposal for the bar advertisements in a finished form before deciding whether to actively oppose the measure, he said.

DI staffer wins national award

BY GRANT SCHULTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

A UI senior was named 2002 Reporter of the Year last week by the Associated Collegiate Press, an organization that promotes excellence in college journalism. Chao Xiong, the managing editor of The Daily Iowan, won the honor for the four-year college newspaper category in Orlando, Fla., on Nov. 2. Judges selected the journalism and art double-major for the top prize — $1,000, an award plaque, and public renown — from a nationwide pool of 174 applicants. "I was ecstatic, but at first I was convinced I wasn't the first-place winner," said Xiong, who spends approximately 35 hours per week working at The Daily Iowan in addition to his 16 semester hours in class. The contest, co-sponsored by Knight Ridder/Tribune Campus, announced that Xiong was one of three finalists Oct. 1; news that he had placed in first was released at the association's National College Media Convention.

The articles that won him the contest were features about a transgendered UI student, a plastic surgery trend among Asian Americans, and migrant workers who come to Iowa for work.

Xiong, who has interned for the Des Moines Register and Minneapolis Star-Tribune, wrote his first story for The Daily Iowan — an article about freshmen moving into dorms — the day before he started college.

"He was always very professional," said Maureen McCarthy, Xiong's boss at the Minneapolis Star-Tribune, adding that his articles never needed much editing. "He pushed himself with his writing, and he had a very good grasp of what makes a newspaper work."

After he graduates in May, the Des Moines native said he is considering another internship or touring southeastern Asia before progressing eventually to magazine writing.

Before and during his tenure at The Daily Iowan, Xiong has collected many awards, including Iowa's Young Journalist of the Year, the Laurence Fairall Scholarship, courtesy of the UI School of Journalism, and The Daily Iowan Scholarship, a four-year, full-tuition award for outstanding high-school journalists who commit to working for the paper. During his sophomore year, Xiong wrote a story about the pros and cons of building a new jail in Johnson County that won second place in the Roy W. Howard National Writing Competition.

Xiong, 22, began his journalism career as a writer for his high-school newspaper, The East High Scroll. As a staff writer for the DI, he covered the Iowa City City Council, police, women and minorities, and environmental issues.

Throughout his career, Xiong has lent a fresh, unique perspective to the newsroom with ideas that often stray from standard mainstream coverage, said Daily Iowan Editor Ryan J. Foley, citing the articles that won the association's contest. Xiong always delivered when pressed on a deadline, but he remains quiet about his achievements, he said.

"To know Chao is to know his modesty," Foley said. "If he had his way, we wouldn't even be writing this story."

County may have to cut libraries' funds

BY LAURA JENSEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Shortages in the Johnson County budget may result in a decrease of funds for five public libraries in the county, possibly leading to reduced hours and materials.

The county has a written contract only with the Iowa City Public Library, which will receive $288,258 from the county this year, but has similar oral agreements with libraries in Coralville, North Liberty, Oxford, and Solon. The funding allocated to each library — except Oxford, which receives a lump sum — is based on the previous year's circulation to rural residents.

"When programs are not mandated, their budgets are in jeopardy," said county Supervisor

Terrence Neuzil at the Board of Supervisors meeting Thursday morning. "We have to look at every single line item because if we don't, then it isn't fair to everyone who saw cuts."

Jeff Horne, the county's budget coordinator, said the main problem is that library costs are growing faster than the rural tax base, forcing the supervisors to determine how much money it wants for it to continue funneling into the program.

Possible changes include implementing a new funding level or formula, choosing fewer libraries to fund based on their availability to rural residents, and reimbursing residents for their library cards.

"I don't think that anyone is suggesting paying only the minimum," Neuzil said. "We are just trying to give the libraries a heads up that this program, along with all of the county's non-mandated expenditures, could see cuts."

Neuzil said the library budget was one of the only non-mandated areas that increased significantly while the majority of budgets suffered decreases. If the library budget continues to rise at its current rate, the county's contribution would inflate to more than $500,000 in three years.

According to a report prepared by public libraries in the county, rural residents checked out 175,689 items last year, or 8.2 items per resident.

The report also noted that this year's per capita expenditure is $19.17 for rural residents compared to $48.10 for urban residents. The rural per capita price is less than some counties with similar demographics, like Story and Polk counties, and is just slightly more than others, like Linn.

Susan Craig, the director of the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., said any significant cuts could mean a reduced level of services for all users including urban residents.

"I don't think that any library in the county could continue to operate at the current level without county funding," she said. "If we had to close for a night or cut our materials budget, that would cut services that everyone has access to."

CITY BRIEFS

Police group proposes college incentives

Representatives from the Police Labor Relations Organization of Iowa City proposed an annual incentive for employees who earn various levels of college education.

Permanent employees who hold a college degree or complete 60 hours of higher educational courses at an accredited university or college would receive an annual educational bonus under the proposal.

An associate's degree or 60 hours credit, bachelor's degree, and master's degree would receive 1, 2, and 3 percent increases respectively to the annual base rate of pay.

In addition, the proposal asks the city to reimburse officers 60 percent of the costs of tuition, books, and supplies associated with attending any course up to a maximum of $2,000 per calendar year. The officer must successfully complete each course with a minimum grade of "C" to receive the funding.

Lt. Dan Sellers said the department operated a similar program that ended during the mid-70s.

"It encourages officers to pursue a college education," he said.

Poetry Slam moves

The Poetry Slam held at Morgan's Bar & Grill is moving to the Green Room, 509 S. Gilbert St., starting Nov. 20, said organizer Joe Mirabella. Mirabella said the decision came after he received complaints from bar patrons that the event was too crowded for the limited space available at Morgan's.

"We're moving to the Green Room because it is a better performance venue than the bar, not because of the suspension," Mirabella said. "The stage is much larger, and I know we can at least double our audience if we have more room."

Morgan's and the Sheraton were set to serve a 90-day liquor license suspension beginning Oct. 26 following three violations of Iowa liquor laws, but they filed an appeal on Oct. 21, delaying the suspension, said Lynn Walding, the Iowa Alcoholic Beverages Division director.

"We should have a decision within the next couple of weeks," he said. "This appeal is just putting the suspension off for a little while."

Florida-based attorney Elizabeth DeConti is representing the hotel in an attempt to separate the Sheraton from the bar so the hotel can serve alcohol during the suspension.

"We are working successfully to reach a settlement so that previously booked events at the hotel can move forward," she said.

City Council to hear Kanner appeal

Iowa City city councilors acknowledged Councilor Steven Kanner's request to appeal their Oct. 8 decision to remove him from a county board.

A public hearing on the matter will be held at the next regular City Council meeting, Nov. 19.

Kanner filed the Nov. 6 appeal after the City Council voted to remove him from the Johnson County Council of Government for violating a city voting policy. Kanner voted against a project previously approved by the council that would allow Southgate Development to build a street between Gilbert Street and Scott Boulevard.

Kanner contended, shortly after the vote, that he believed he upheld the city's decision.

"I think we've wasted far too much time worrying about how Steven votes," said Councilor Mike O'Donnell. "We passed a resolution that going to [the board], he would represent council's will, and he did not."

Mayor Ernie Lehman said the public hearing later this month will provide Kanner and the council an opportunity to present witnesses to determine whether or not he voted in violation.

"The only issue that will be relevant at the public hearing is whether the vote he placed at the meeting was in violation of council policy," said Lehman. The council will then vote to reinstate Kanner or uphold its previous decision.

"It's a black-and-white issue in my perspective" Lehman said. "There's no grey area. I don't think there's any question."

Michigan penalizes hoops team

BY LARRY LAGE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

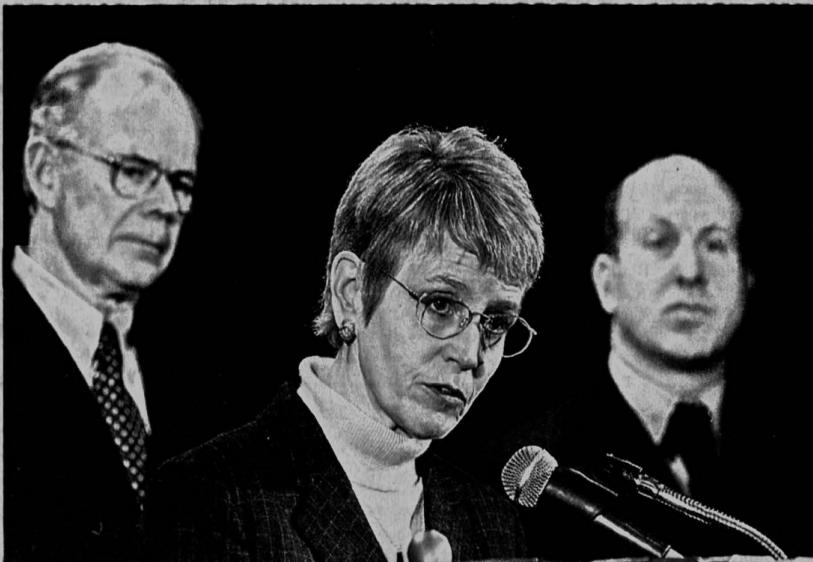

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — They forfeited the victories and ordered the championship banners taken down, and they can't play in the postseason.

The Michigan Wolverines, who became one of college basketball's most successful programs during the "Fab Five" days of the 1990s, endured what the school's president called a "day of great shame" Thursday.

The university punished its men's basketball program after a federal investigation revealed that former booster Ed Martin had given a total of $616,000 to Chris Webber and three other ex-Michigan players.

Michigan announced it would prohibit the team from playing in either the NCAA Tournament or the National Invitation Tournament after the upcoming season. The team also will forfeit victories from five seasons, as well the 1992 Final Four appearance.

The effect of the sanctions isn't limited to paper programs and media guides, which no longer will mention the names of Webber, Robert Traylor, Maurice Taylor, or Louis Bullock. Fans will notice immediately, because four banners will be taken down at Crisler Arena: for the 1992 and 1993 Final Fours, the 1997 NIT title, and the 1998 Big Ten Tournament title.

University of Michigan President Mary Sue Coleman, flanked by Athletics Director Bill Martin (left) and general counsel Marvin Krislov, addresses the media in Ann Arbor, Mich., on Thursday.

Michigan also said it would return to the NCAA $450,000 — money it earned for appearing in the postseason — and go on probation for two years.

"There is no excuse for what happened. It was wrong — plain and simple," Michigan President Mary Sue Coleman said. "This is a day of great shame."

The school announced the penalties in a letter to the NCAA on Thursday, after it received a formal letter of inquiry from the NCAA on Oct. 29. By imposing the sanctions, Michigan hopes to head off more severe action by the NCAA.

"We will now ask to get on the schedule for a hearing with the infractions committee as soon as possible," Michigan Athletics Director Bill Martin said. "We hope it will be very soon."

Michigan hopes to meet with the NCAA in December, but it may have to wait until February. Six to eight weeks later, the school will find out whether the NCAA accepts the self-imposed sanctions or will add more.

Priest, friend get time in GHB case

BY MIRANDA LEITSINGER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAVENPORT — A Roman Catholic priest and a friend who were sentenced Thursday for making the date-rape drug were weightlifters who initially took the drug to bulk up and then became addicted, the friend said.

"One thing that bothers me is that everybody sees this as a date-rape drug and a priest being involved," said Timothy Shawn O'Brien, 34, of Davenport. "We were weightlifters."

In a court appearance before U.S. District Judge Harold Viator, O'Brien was sentenced to 10 years and one month in prison, the Rev. Jeffery Windy, 31, of Sheffield, Ill., was sentenced to five years, 10 months in prison, and Timothy John Greenlee, 22, of Davenport, was sentenced to four years, nine months.

Three others in the case were sentenced separately: Joseph Francis Crane, 24, of Davenport, and Bradley David Bush, 26, a former Rock Island, Ill., firefighter, were each sentenced to two and a half years in prison, while Kevin Dean Honaker, 36, of Davenport, was sentenced to four years.

All six men had pleaded guilty to conspiracy in manufacturing and distributing the banned depressant gamma hydroxybutyrate, GHB.

O'Brien's mother, Barb O'Brien, said her son had been taking the drug for as long as 12 years. She said Windy was taking it, too.

"They were into weightlifting and using GHB to build mass," she said.

GHB is known as the "date-rape drug" because it has been used to incapacitate people, leaving them vulnerable to sexual assault. But it also has been used by bodybuilders as an athletic enhancer.

Windy's attorney, Doug Scovill, referred to his client in court as a bodybuilder.

Before sentencing, Windy began reading a prepared statement but broke down sobbing after just a few sentences. He said he had been a priest for seven years and considered himself to be growing "strong and prudent."

"My dreams have now been shattered," he said, unable to continue.

Scovill finished reading the statement, in which Windy said "the last 10 months have been the darkest days of my life."

He said he had been taken away from his parish without explanation, leaving questions unanswered, and had contemplated suicide. He also said he didn't ask for help because he was afraid about going to authorities.

"Now I can't forgive myself for being such a fool," Windy said in the statement.

Terri Randone, O'Brien's cousin, said Windy was "an integral part of the family." Barb O'Brien said Windy had a key to her son's home, and he would stay there when he pleased.

"I think he encouraged some of the behavior," she said, referring to Windy.

Barb O'Brien said her son's troubles with GHB began when he started to make it himself. She said he passed out twice in 2001 — at a convenience store and in his car a few blocks from his Davenport home.

"Unfortunately, it just encompassed his entire life," Randone said. If O'Brien's drug use had continued, "we would have been burying him."

Windy admitted making and distributing GHB between Jan. 1, 2001, and December 2001. He also helped O'Brien make the drug.

State GOP officials sound conciliatory note

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Iowa Senate Republicans gave their top leaders another term Thursday and vowed to forge compromises with Democratic Gov. Tom Vilsack, also given a new lease by voters.

Sen. Stew Iverson, R-Dows, was elected to another two-year term as majority leader, while Sen. Mary Kramer, R-West Des Moines, won another term as Senate president.

"It has been very partisan," Iverson said of the tenor at the Statehouse during the legislative session preceding the election. "The election is over, and it's time to govern."

Both sides won in the election, with Republicans retaining a 29-21 majority in the Senate, precisely the edge they had before the election, and Vilsack comfortably winning a second term in office.

On Thursday, Republican senators met privately for more than two hours, electing leaders and beginning to sketch out an agenda for the upcoming session beginning in January.

"Can we get along with the governor? Of course we can," Iverson said.

The first test will come with a state budget, which is likely to be a problem. The economy has begun to pick up a bit, but it's still relatively weak, and tax revenues have not yet rebounded.

That could leave lawmakers and Vilsack scrambling to find ways to trim up to $400 million from an already tight state budget.

"The cookie jar is empty, and we need to be prepared for that," Kramer said.

Iverson said the shortfall will have to be covered by spending cuts.

"We have all agreed in both parties that we are not going to raise taxes," Iverson said. "The biggest problem we face is the budget."

Republicans also retained their control of the House by a 54-46 edge, slightly smaller than heading into the election. House Republicans will meet Nov. 12 to elect their leaders, with Majority Leader Chris Rants, R-Sioux City, the favorite to take over as House speaker, though he will have competition.

City mulls controls for extensions changes created by the extensions, he wrote in a memo to city officials released Thursday.

A traffic study could be conducted in the next six to eight months to examine traffic volume at the intersections, how much delay is involved, collision history, and pedestrian issues, such as the location of school crossings, Davidson said. Four-way stops could serve as temporary solutions if problems are confirmed by the study. Traffic signals for a single intersection cost $75,000; they would be implemented only if the city finds it necessary after drivers have adjusted to the extensions, Davidson said.

"We think that's a ways off," he said.

Installing traffic signals would reduce right-angle collisions in the intersections, but they could possibly instigate other problems, primarily increased rear-end collisions, Davidson said.

"You don't want to trade one problem for another," he said.

The First Avenue extension was first proposed in 1996, soon becoming the topic of heated debate over the safety of schoolchildren and the preservation of nearby Hickory Hill. The project failed in a 1997 referendum; 56 percent of voters approved the extension in 2000.

Steve Dolezal, a resident of Rochester Avenue near its intersection with Scott Boulevard, said the extensions are a positive move on the city's part.

Some Iowa City city councilors said they expect to see a traffic signal at those intersections eventually, but they will wait on the outcome of a traffic study before making a recommendation.

"I'm sure the thing will mellow out," said Councilor Mike O'Donnell. "We've got an excellent staff looking at that."

Stop signs tend to be ineffective after awhile because people often ignore them, said Councilor Connie Champion.

"If we did anything at [Scott and Rochester], it would probably be a stop light," she said.

Once again, no Iowa women in Congress

CONGRESS

And although several Iowa City women have won election to the state House and Senate, including Minnette Doderer, Mary Mascher, and Vicki Lensing in Iowa City, none have been able to pierce the upper echelons to attain the state's highest elected position. Branstad defeated Roxanne Conlin for governor in 1982 and Bonnie Campbell in 1994.

Doderer, now retired after 36 years as a state legislator, said Thursday it is only a matter of time before Iowa sends a woman to Congress.

"Julie Thomas was a good candidate, but she lost to a tough Republican opponent who gets a lot of Democratic votes," she said.

A solid background in politics and name recognition are integral factors for a female candidate's victory, Doderer said.

"It's disappointing we haven't done it already," said Thomas' campaign manager, Holly Armstrong. "I think it's unfortunate for Iowa's women and girls. It's going to be tough because Iowa tends to return incumbents unless something egregious happens. I think we can and will get it done."

She said it will take more voter-education efforts to get Democrats who voted for Leach to vote for their own candidate instead.

"I hope to see it in my lifetime," said Rep. Lensing, D-Iowa City. "I don't think Iowans look at it as being a man or a woman. Name recognition helps, and I think if Julie Thomas chose to run again in two years, she would be warmly received."

The Red and Blue routes, which stop near all residence halls on campus, now operate until midnight Sunday through Thursday and until 2:30 a.m. on 58 Fridays and Saturdays during the academic year. The expansion would provide service until 2:30 a.m. seven nights a week.

Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for Student Services, said he is waiting to hear from UISG about the program or funding options.

"Those are Herbold's ideas, and they will be discussed," Jones said.

Some local bar managers said they would be willing to help fund the program.

"We'll do anything to help keep our customers safe, and it would be good to keep people from loitering in the downtown area for long periods of time," said Brad Norton, the general manager at The Summit Restaurant & Bar, 10 S. Clinton St.

Having foreseen the skeptics, Kapec has issued a challenge: He is going to select one student with a mediocre GPA after a round of interviews and personally tutor her or him to an A level for free. The two-day seminar costs $145.

The Mount Pleasant resident's sources seem unconventional. His speed-reading technique is a combination of the best qualities of the speed-reading industry, which consists of infomercial products and reading courses, he said.

Linda Fielding, an associate education professor who specializes in reading courses, said a person's ability to read fluently is more important than speed.

"One needs to learn how to group phrases together and get the expression of the text in order to construct more meaning," she said.

Kapec derived his memory-enhancing skills using ayurveda — the ancient Hindu science of health and medicine — and other Hindu scriptures.

"A true vedic memory practice is harder than most American students are used to," said Frederick Smith, an associate professor of Indian religions. "It requires con-

Surgeons often operate through long hours

SURGEONS

Operating teams usually consist of one or two senior surgeons, several nurses, and an anesthesiologist. Complex surgeries may also include radiologists, intensive-care physicians, respiratory technicians, and physical therapists.

Most surgeons will work for approximately six-straight hours before taking a brief break, which are often spent speaking to a patient's family members. However, there are always surgeons in the operating room in case of an emergency.

"You just have to bite the bullet and keep going," said Carolyn Elliot, a UIHC registered nurse. "You have somebody else's interest at heart. [Patients] are the priority, not you."

Preparation for long and sleepless hours at the operating table are honed in the field during residencies, where medical apprentices first get their taste of the real world. Officials at the UI's Carver College of Medicine said it's common practice not to teach medical students how to endure long operations.

But for Rayhill it's all a matter of routine.

"You just do it," he said.

From the dimestore to the country, Jessen twangs on

BY RICHARD SHIRK
THE DAILY IOWAN

Like me, the man walking into the normally sedate George's didn't expect the wall of noise from the 40 football fans crowded around beer and $2.50 burgers.

Tom Jessen recognizes me from the tape recorder and the beat-up copy of his latest album, Night (East Elm) that sits on the scratched surface of the Formica tabletop. The Iowa City local will release Night, his first album since 1996, at Gabe's on Saturday.

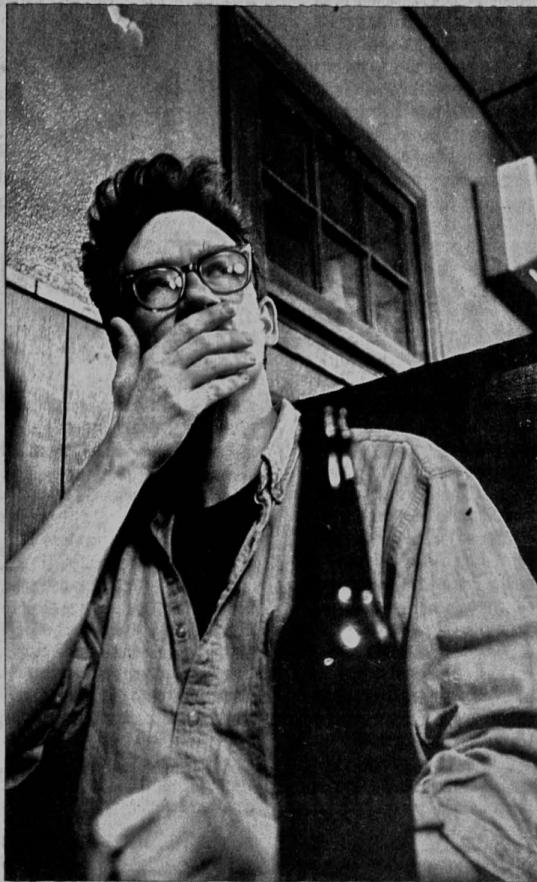

Talking to Jessen about the his album quickly turns into talking Iowa City rock 'n' roll — a topic that inevitably turns to dead venues, disbanded bands, the Record Collector, and great shows witnessed over the years.

Jessen has been in those broken-up bands, played at dead venues, such as the Yacht Club, and scanned the Record Collector bins before the store was replaced by a parking garage. Used CDs were still a novelty. Arriving in town as a UI student, his nights were spent at Gabe's watching bands or being a part of them. His bands Peterbuilt and Devastation Wagon played in the late-80s and early '90s with car-crash rock 'n' roll that siphoned the drunk-punk energy of a band such as the Replacements into 40-minute sets and five-chord songs.

These bands are a far cry from what Jessen's music would eventually evolve into over the years. The stacks and stomp boxes have long since been traded in for pedal-steel guitars, and his newfound singer/songwriter-oriented material has earned a place on bills with Wilco, Junior Brown, and Son Volt.

My introduction to Jessen's music was an extended solo opening set that turned the disappointment of a canceled Jay Bennett show in August into a hijacked showcase for his twanging pop songs. Unflatteringly humble, Jessen is more comfortable talking about Iowa City's roots-rock tradition or Joe Strummer's solo albums than his own work. For Jessen, Night, even though his own music, is not for him to decipher.

"People are always going to approach [music] with their own emotional baggage and perspective," he said. "Ever since I made the first one, I am really under the opinion that ...

Curtis Lehmkuhl/The Daily Iowan

Local musician Tom Jessen, who will release his album Night at Gabe's on Saturday, sits in George's on Nov. 2.

I make these songs and put this effort into it, and when I'm done with it, I'm done with it. I have to cut the umbilical cord and really can't say anything more about it."

The songs on Night, however, seem to fill in any gaps and connect any dots as I talked to Jessen about growing up in Strawberry Point, Iowa (population 1,336), his brief time in a seminary, and his sudden move to Portland on a whim. Besides existing as finely crafted examples of Jessen's studio perfectionism and talent as a lyricist, Night is deeply imprinted with a subtext of locality, restlessness, and a definite Midwestern perspective.

When Jessen sings "I'm buried in a crowd of sliding poker faces ... and I knew somebody else was putting thoughts in my head/well, we hang around this town like cobwebs/dusting off conversations and compliments" in "Go Easy On My Eyes," the sincerity in his voice is not debatable. The vocal harmonies and subtle keyboards (courtesy of the Diplomat's Nate Bassinger) of "Go Easy" are upbeat sonically yet lyrically resigned, if not downright bleak.

"All Those Treasure Daggers" and "Eulogy" carry on this dichotomy, while "River" and "Let Me Let" are unabashed shit-kicker ballads. There is pedal steel, gentle fingerpicked guitar, and a twang in Jessen's voice, but this is a style of insurgent country written more from the blueprints of XTC or Squeeze albums than Hank Jr. tapes.

With this fresh take on the often homogenous alt-country/roots-rock scene, Jessen has penned an album that not only stretches the boundaries of this talent-rich facet of Iowa City music but manages to do so while ignoring the rules of the genre.

Puttin' the power back in pop

BY DAN MALONEY
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Mayflies USA of North Carolina are rejuvenating the retro musical trend known as power-pop — a term that the band hates.

Power-pop, mostly popular in the '70s with such bands as Cheap Trick and Big Star, is music that embodies the use of punchy melodic harmonies and crunchy distorted guitars. Just as synth-rock and new wave are making a comeback in recent mainstream music, a fair number of bands are bringing back the sounds of power-pop. Huzzah.

On the Mayflies USA's newest disc, Walking in a Straight Line (Yep Roc), the group is kicking with an excessive dose of catchy pop rock with infectious sing-along choruses. The source of this excess is on the title track, "Walking in a Straight Line," where call-and-response guitars punch in and out like a faulty phone line. Matthew McMichaels' vocals resemble the voice of a modern-day Alex Chilton (of Big Star) with harmonies that would make Brian Wilson blush.

The catchiness continues on the tracks "The Greatest Thing," "Can't Stop Watching," and "The Good Girls Goodbye." The core of "The Greatest Thing" bounces like a mid-tempo Paul Westerburg song, as the guitars zig-zag to complement each other. On "Can't Stop Watching," the thunderous beat of drummer David Liesegang sets the tone for a bunny-hop bopping number that provides a perfect hook for radio circa 1974. The harmony on "The Good Girls Goodbye," between bass player Adam Price and McMichaels, is astounding, and the production from Keith Cleversley (Flaming Lips fame) provides a song that has dirty guitars but bleach-clean vocal tracks. The Flies starts to mix it up with tracks like "So Young," "You Won't Find Me," and "Written on Every Hour," all slowly driven and leaving room for lush acoustic and clean, reverberated guitars that leave the distortion pedals mostly on idle. On "So Young," a synth-sounding string section is cued through a slow tempo song with bittersweet vocals. On "You Won't Find Me," acoustic guitars, a touch of piano, and percussion instruments are brought in to provide a vacation mood.

A new wave of nominees

BY DAVID BAUDER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Three British exports from rock's "new wave" of the late 1970s — the Police, the Clash, and Elvis Costello and the Attractions — will join the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame next year.

They'll be inducted along with the Righteous Brothers, blue-eyed soul singers of "You've Lost That Lovin' Feelin'," and Australian hard-rockers AC/DC.

The 18th annual Hall of Fame induction ceremony will be held March 10 in New York and televised later on VH1.

The Police's relatively short career included such hits as "Roxanne" and "Every Breath You Take." Lead singer Sting maintains an active solo career.

The politically charged quartet the Clash broke in as punk rockers and expanded its sound to take in reggae and urban influences. Its biggest radio hit was "Rock the Casbah."

Costello, a prolific genre-hopper with such hits as "Alison," "Pump it Up," and "Veronica," led the tight trio, the Attractions, for more than a decade. He still performs with two of its members, keyboardist Steve Nieve and drummer Pete Thomas.

The Righteous Brothers were Southern California crooners Bill Medley and Bobby Hatfield, who also sang the hits "Unchained Melody" and "You're My Soul and Inspiration."

The bone-crunching riffs of Angus and Malcolm Young lead AC/DC, who are still active. The 1980 hit "You Shook Me All Night Long" is a band highlight.

As is often the case with the rock hall, the ceremony has the potential for some tense reunions in tuxedos. Costello feuds with Attractions bassist Bruce Thomas, and both the Police and the Clash had acrimonious breakups.

Earlier this year, Talking Heads re-formed to perform at its rock hall induction after years of bitterness.

Additional inductees in the "sidemen" and nonperformer categories will be announced later.

Iowa needs to continue its efforts to elect a woman representative

Though Dr. Julie Thomas did not win the 2nd District on Tuesday, her strong campaign was a huge step forward in curbing a disturbing trend: the lack of Iowa women in national politics.

"There will be no glass ceiling broken tonight," said Thomas on Tuesday night, referring to her failure to become the first Iowa woman elected to Congress (Iowa is one of six states that have never elected a woman). However, Thomas should consider her strong campaign a moral victory for Iowa women in politics.

Iowa's failure thus far to elect a woman representative does not necessarily note a lack of progress. When one looks at the other states with whom Iowa shares this stigma (Alaska, Delaware, Mississippi, New Hampshire, and Vermont), an obvious pattern emerges: These states simply have fewer seats to fill in Congress than other states and thus, fewer opportunities for new candidates.

Although The Daily Iowan did not endorse Thomas in this year's race, her talent and promise as a strong competitor against the formidable and popular incumbent Jim Leach were recognized by many, as evidenced on Election Day, when she garnered 46 percent of the 2nd District vote. Ann Hutchinson also put up a strong showing in Iowa's 1st District, winning 43 percent of the vote against While Thomas' candidacy is a step forward for Iowa women in politics, the state still hasn't had a woman in Congress.

Jim Nussle, another strong incumbent.

Given that women make up more than half of the world's population, it would seem logical that female representation in the government would be more prevalent. Though this is not the current situation, the tide is slowly beginning to turn. Since the first woman, Jeannette Rankin, served in Congress in 1917, more than 200 females have followed in her footsteps. In the 107th Congress, 59 women served in the House and 13 served in the Senate.

In order for Iowa to open the door for women and break away from its pattern of male-dominated representation, it should continue on the path that Thomas and Hutchinson have forged this year. This process begins at the grass-roots level with diligent recruiting and nominating of intelligent and qualified women in local politics.

It is key that we continue to encourage strong female candidates in Iowa if we are to elect a woman representative anytime soon. Of course, we shouldn't nominate people based only on their sex; but surely there are qualified women in Iowa who would be willing to step forward and make history as our first woman in the U.S. House or Senate.

While being one of the final six states to send a woman to Congress is not cause for panic, Iowa should not be content to be the last.

Letters to the Editor

Proceed with caution

As a UI graduate and a prosecutor, I have read the news accounts in regard to Pierre Pierce with great interest. Too often, I note that the newspaper accounts of a case differ considerably from the facts known to me. They may differ greatly from the facts known to the reporter. The presumption of innocence in the criminal-justice system places a burden on law enforcement to prove guilt, yet the general public is free to think whatever it may based on loosely connected gossip and innuendo. How many versions of this story has each of us heard? Very few people know what really happened in this case.

A basic part of the prosecutor's job is to discern whether charges can be proven based on the evidence available. Sometimes there is no evidence. Sometimes going forward with the charge may do greater harm to the victim or competing law-enforcement goals. At other times, the reporter has a motivation to bring meritless charges, so that they are in a better position in a civil case or merely maliciously. Prosecutors cannot rely on presumptions and prejudices about the way that certain "types" of people act. It is one thing to hold private biases about the way men, women, or scholarship athletes act, it is quite another to pillory people based on certain outward characteristics.

I, as much as anyone, want to see justice done for the victims of sexual assault. The position some have taken in this case seems to be that anyone accused of a crime is guilty of the crime charged. This is either naïve or coldly indifferent to reality and justice. Subtle differences in communication and context can make huge differences legally. Somebody going into your garage to take your tools may be a burglar — or may be a good neighbor. It is not weakness to proceed according to the facts and evidence, nor to make punishments fit the offense.

Marc R. Wallace
Des Moines resident

We deserve better

As a rape survivor, I was disgusted by the plea agreement the Johnson County attorney reached with Pierre Pierce. Its leniency appalls me and illustrates society's complacent attitude towards sex-based crimes and the tacit cultural acceptance of the prevalence of violence against women.

According to the U.S. Department of Justice, a woman is sexually assaulted somewhere in America every two minutes. Think of three women you know and contemplate this: Odds are one of those women will be sexually assaulted in her lifetime.

Every time our justice system fails to mete out punishment that is proportionate to the crime, it not only fails the individual victim, it acts in collusion with the perpetrator to excuse and minimize the criminal behavior. Sex crimes go notoriously underreported. The Justice Department estimates that only one in every three sexual assaults comes to the attention of law-enforcement officials. Victims typically do not come forward because they fear both loss of privacy and retaliation from the perpetrator. Unfortunately, our system of justice does little to shield sexual-assault victims from the scrutiny and publicity that such allegations elicit.

The UI and the Athletics Department's complete and utter failure to penalize Pierce sickens me. The anemic message is all too clear — sexual assault is no big deal at the university. You can keep your scholarship, you can stay on the basketball team, your coach will defend you in spite of all evidence against you, you'll not spend one second in jail, and as long as you stay out of trouble for a year, we'll all pretend that none of this ever happened.

Such leniency does little to encourage sexual-assault victims to come forward and does not act as a deterrent to other offenders.

As a society, we cannot afford to ignore the prevalence of violence against women. For survivors who look to the law as their only opportunity for vindication, we have to do better. Think of your mother, your sister, your wife, your girlfriend, or your daughter and know this: WE DESERVE BETTER.

The problem facing the world's dictators

The current Middle East politics have created additional problems for the United States in its effort to remove Saddam Hussein from power in Iraq. Obviously, many Arab countries are against the removal of Saddam, an act that may lead to the establishment of democracy — or something that looks like it — in Iraq. It is not just the Middle East nations; many Islamic states are strongly against the U.S. action.

Even within the United States, there are those against going to war with Iraq. There is support for regime change in Iraq, provided that certain conditions are met. Consultation with the U.N. Security Council is one condition. Whereas America does not need other nations for a successful prosecution of war against Iraq — the outcome of which is not in doubt — it does need other nations in a successful pursuit of a peaceful post-Saddam governance of Iraq.

There are questions about who would be responsible for footing the bill for the war and the peace that might follow. There are questions about possible casualties on both sides and questions about the Iraqis who would assist in the initial stage of setting up democracy and national reconstruction in Iraq. Based on the 1991 experience, the cost of regime change in Iraq may reach $100 million, some experts estimate. In today's economic climate, the American people feel that the cost is prohibitive.

The most adamant non-Islamic countries against regime change in Iraq are Germany, France, and Russia. Germany is opposed for domestic political reasons. France has insisted that Iraq should be given every opportunity to change its behavior without threat of U.S.-led military action. To effect this, France wanted two separate resolutions in the Security Council. One would ask Iraq to abide by the U.N. mandate. If and when that fails, there would be another resolution for the enforcement of the first. Russia, on the other hand, is more interested in business connections with Saddam. Russia recently signed a multibillion-dollar agreement with Iraq and does not want a disruption of that transaction because of war.

Among the objectors, Russia seems to be the only honest one. It is clear that the only interest that Russia has is a business one, and it does not hide that motive. In contrast,

BODE OLAKANMI

Germany's Gerhard Schröder only objected to win an election, while France pretends that its objection is genuine and in the interest of international law. But France is only holding on to past glory. The global influence of France has been decreasing for decades. Outside of Quebec and France, French people have watched French international importance diminish. Even within Europe, France is losing out to the united Germany. The only place where France could still flex its muscle is in the Security Council. It should not be surprising, then, that France wants to be reckoned with.

The map of Organization of Islamic Conference member states by Dushkin shows that it includes 42 countries. Except for Indonesia, Senegal, and Turkey, the nations are ruled by kings (Middle East), theocracy (Iran), military junta, or a strongman (all others). It would be convenient to assume that most members of the group are poor countries with low levels of education. That may be true among the black African nations, but not for most others outside the sub-Saharan region. Even countries such as Egypt and Pakistan with high levels of education and long histories have yet to find the right formula for democratic rule.

Middle Eastern countries have real reasons to oppose Saddam's removal. Looking at the map of the area, not one country outside of Israel is a democracy. Some dabble in democratic ideas. Iran has some elements of democracy in its theocracy. Egypt pretends that voting for one candidate, a soldier-turned-president, is a democracy. The anger of many disenfranchised youths in these countries is directed toward their own inflexible rulers as much as to the West, which supports many of these rulers. It is obvious that these rulers have realized that democracy, as inaugurated in Afghanistan, might happen in a post-Saddam Iraq. For the sake of self-preservation, these kings and strongmen have to go against a tide that might sweep them into oblivion.

This doesn't mean that the United States has the right to topple the administration of another country. But this is not the point of this argument; I have only considered the faces behind the veils of objection. And when thought about in the context of the rest of the countries in the area, it is indeed, a dictator's conundrum.

Confident Bush demands action

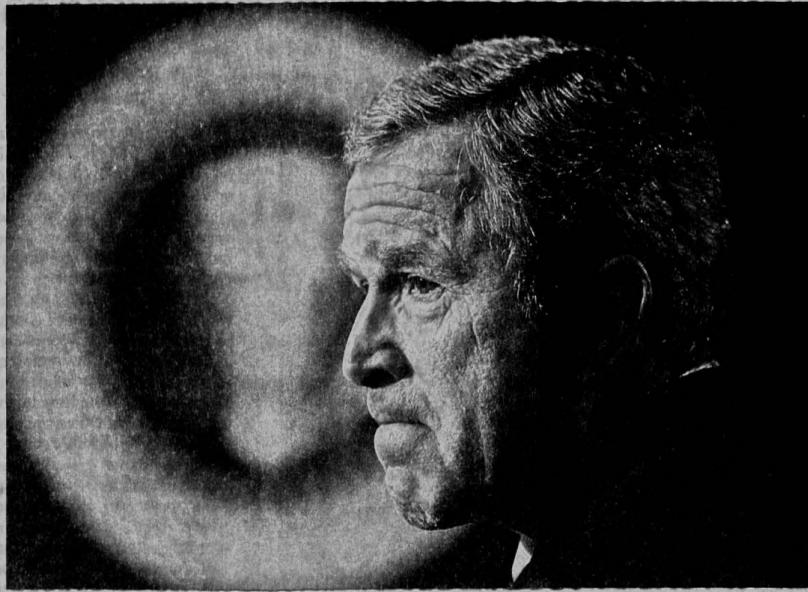

BY DANA MILBANK
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — A confident President Bush Thursday savored the power he gained from the Republican midterm-election triumph, demanding international action against Iraq's Saddam Hussein and congressional action on administration priorities that had been delayed by partisan discord.

The president insisted on immediate action from the current Congress on legislation creating a Cabinet-level Department of Homeland Security. Floating an array of policy ideas from tax cuts early next year to the partial privatization of Social Security, he also urged the Senate to reconsider previously rejected judicial nominees.

"If there is a mandate in any election — at least in this one — it's that people want something to get done," the president said in a press conference, his first public appearance since Tuesday's elections. Emphasizing the point, he repeated: "I think the way to look at this election is to say that people want something done."

In addition, Bush made clear for the first time that Vice President Dick Cheney would be on the 2004 ticket with him. "Should I decide to run, Vice President Cheney will be my running mate," Bush said. "He is a superb vice president, and there's no reason for me to change."

Ron Edmonds/Associated Press

In his first public appearance since Republican victories in Tuesday's midterm elections, President Bush ponders a reporter's question at a press conference at the White House.

Cheney, who has heart disease, had said he would serve if his doctors and the president permit. "I'm confident that he will serve another term," Bush said, apparently ending widespread speculation about possible vice presidential replacements.

In a 47-minute session in a theater in the White House complex, Bush said he would not be dissuaed by hostile international opinion from taking action against Saddam. "I don't spend a lot of time taking polls around the world to tell me what I think is the right way to act," Bush said. "I just got to know how I feel."

The president was categorical in demanding Senate action on a Homeland Security Department in the "lame duck" session of Congress that begins next week. "It's imperative that the Congress send me a bill that I can sign before the 107th Congress ends," Bush said, calling the legislation "the most important thing to get done" even while acknowledging that it may take some time.

U.S., France agree on Iraq resolution

BY KAREN DEYOUNG
AND COLUM LYNCH
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — President Bush and French President Jacques Chirac agreed Thursday on final wording for a U.N. Security Council resolution on Iraq, clearing the way for a vote on the measure today and the possible dispatch of weapons inspectors to Baghdad within weeks.

Bush said in a news conference that the resolution, which required nearly eight weeks of administration arm-twisting, cajoling, and concessions, met all his specifications. "It talks about material breach and inspections and serious consequences if Saddam Hussein continues to defy the world and not disarm," he said.

A Chirac spokeswoman said that there was a "positive dynamic" during a telephone call Chirac placed to Bush on Thursday morning and that France now hoped for consensus among the council's 15 members.

The administration believes that Russia will also ultimately support the resolution, although Bush apparently failed to cement a similar agreement during a call he made to President Vladimir Putin. A senior official said the administration has concluded that Russia will not abstain, and there is "not much chance" it will veto the measure.

Despite the lingering uncertainty over Moscow, Bush expressed confidence he was on the verge of achieving the goal he set out in a Sept. 12 speech to the United Nations — making the international body "relevant" by forcing it to confront Iraq's obstruction, and rejection over the past four years, of resolutions since 1991 ordering weapons inspections and disarmament.

"It took a while, but we've been grinding it out, trying to bring a consensus, trying to get people together, so that we can say to the world the international community has spoken through the Security Council of the United Nations. And now, once again, we expect Saddam to disarm," Bush said.

Bali-bombing suspect confesses

BY RICHARD C. PADDOCK AND SARI SUDARSONO
LOS ANGELES TIMES

JAKARTA, Indonesia — The owner of a minivan used in the deadly car bombing of Bali nightclubs last month has confessed that he took part in the attack, police said Thursday, as evidence mounted that the blast was linked to Al Qaeda.

In a major breakthrough in the investigation of the bombings, which killed at least 191 people, Indonesian police arrested the suspect Tuesday after tracing the ownership of the destroyed van through its chassis number. He has been identified only as Amrozi.

"Amrozi was one of the main perpetrators of the Bali bombing," National Police Chief Dai Bachtiar said Thursday. "He has disclosed many things and admitted his acts in Bali ... We are pursuing his companions."

Bachtiar said Amrozi was among the people who planned and carried out the attack. Amrozi admitted that he was on the island of Bali at the time of the bombing, police said.

One of the prime suspects in the attack has been Jemaah Islamiyah, a regional terrorist group linked to the Al Qaeda network and allegedly headed by radical Indonesian cleric Abu Bakar Bashir.

Bashir is in custody but refuses to answer authorities' questions about a string of bombings in Indonesia.

Indonesian Muslim students visit the blast site in front of the Sari Club in Kuta, Bali, on Thursday. Indonesian police on Thursday said a suspect in the bombing had confessed.

He denies any part in the Bali bombings or other terrorist acts.

CNN reported Thursday that Al Qaeda has claimed responsibility for the Bali attack through an Arabic Web site. The group said it had targeted "nightclubs and warehouses" in Indonesia and boasted of its aim to hit inside Arab and Islamic countries that are part of what it called a "Jewish-Crusader alliance." The Bali attack hit the world's most populous Muslim country, but many of the dead were young Australian tourists.

Al Qaeda has previously used the Web site to claim responsibility for other attacks, including a synagogue bombing in Tunisia and two attacks on ships in Yemen.

Amrozi, 35, was arrested in East Java province and taken to Bali for questioning. He had been living in the town of Tenggulun, where he grew up.

Indonesian television reported that Bashir spoke at least twice at the Pesantren Al Islam, an Islamic school in Tenggulun. A school official said Amrozi attended Bashir's lectures, but it was unclear whether the two knew each other.

Church chooses FBI official for child unit

BY JOHN RIVERA
BALTIMORE SUN

The highest-ranking woman in the FBI has been hired to police the Catholic Church as it enacts policies aimed at preventing a repeat of the sexual-abuse scandal this year that removed hundreds of priests and undermined parishioners' trust.

Kathleen McChesney, 51, who has led the agency's efforts to improve relations between federal and local law enforcement agencies, was named on Thursday to be the director of the U.S. bishops' Office of Child and Youth Protection.

The creation of the office was a key part of the sexual-abuse policy adopted by the bishops in June and revised last week by a joint committee of bishops and Vatican officials. The bishops will vote on the revised policy next week in Washington.

At a news conference Thursday at the Washington headquarters of the U.S. bishops' conference, McChesney drew a parallel between the crisis in the Catholic Church and recent scandals that have beset the FBI.

"I believe the Catholic Church has suffered because of acts of a few. I come from an institution where we have suffered for the acts of a few," she said.

It is vital to the mission of both institutions to maintain the faith of the people they serve, she said.

"Because of the acts of a few, the others who are affected by it, who the reflection is cast upon, must work very hard to restore the trust and credibility and faith," she said. "And I hope I can help to do that."

McChesney's principal duties include helping the nation's Catholic dioceses follow the sexual-abuse policy once the Vatican approves it. She will be expected to produce an annual report documenting adherence to the policy, singling out any diocese or bishop who, in her opinion, is not in compliance.

In addition, she will work with the National Review Board, chaired by Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating, to produce a report analyzing the causes of the sexual-abuse crisis.

To produce that report, McChesney and the review board will investigate "exactly what happened and why it happened, where there have been deficiencies and where improvements can be made," said attorney Robert Bennett, who chaired the search committee. "And all of this will be a matter of public record."

McChesney named director

Catholic sexual-abuse victims praised the bishops for selecting someone from law enforcement to head the child-protection office.

"It is important that the individual who looks at abuse cases for this commission be an independent professional with experience in investigating crime and a healthy degree of skepticism toward those who have concealed crimes," said Janet Patterson of Conway Springs, Kan., a member of the Survivor's Network of those Abused by Priests.

But the Rev. Robert Silva, the executive director of the National Federation of Priests Councils, who has been critical of zero-tolerance policies that offer little protection for the rights of priests, said he was troubled that the bishops turned to someone in law enforcement to oversee their new policy.

"I hope that she will be able to balance that aggressive investigative side with a sense of church discipleship and the mission of reconciliation," he said.

McChesney leaves an agency where she has worked nearly 25 years, where she rose through the ranks to become the No. 3 official overseeing the activities of 4,700 employees and budgets exceeding $1.1 billion.

"Kathleen brought to the FBI the personal and professional qualities that we hold highest," said FBI Director Robert S. Mueller III. "She will be missed."

But McChesney said her sadness over what the scandal has done to the church, to which she has belonged since birth, spurred her to accept the new position.

Virginia 1st in line for sniper suspects

BY JOSH WHITE
WASHINGTON POST

The two suspects in the Washington area sniper attacks will be tried first in Virginia, where they could face the death penalty if convicted, Attorney General John Ashcroft announced Thursday afternoon. He said the decision was based on the jurisdiction "that offers the best law, best facts, and best range of available penalties."

John Lee Malvo, 17, will be tried in Fairfax County, and John Allen Muhammad, 41, will be prosecuted in Prince William County, Ashcroft said. Federal prosecutors this morning dismissed a 20-count complaint against the suspects, clearing the way for the pair to be transferred to state custody. They were then transferred from federal custody in Baltimore to state custody. Detectives from Prince William County took Muhammad into custody this afternoon and brought him to the jail in Manassas, where he is expected to have a preliminary court appearance at 9 a.m. today. Malvo was being held at the jail in Alexandria.

The decision by federal authorities comes a day after Fairfax authorities filed capital murder charges against Muhammad, 41, and Malvo, 17, in the Oct. 14 shooting of FBI analyst Linda Franklin outside a Home Depot store in Seven Corners. On Oct. 9, Dean Harold Meyers was shot and killed while he was pumping gas at a Sunoco station in Manassas, the only shooting in Prince William.

In a press conference at the Justice Department this afternoon, Ashcroft read the names of the 10 victims of the "brutal random acts of murder." Three other people were injured during the three-week sniper spree that terrorized the Washington area. He was flanked by members of the sniper task force including Fairfax Commonwealth Attorney Robert Horan Jr., Prince William Commonwealth Attorney Paul Ebert, Montgomery County Executive Douglas Duncan, and Police Chief Charles Moose. Montgomery County prosecutor Douglas Gansler, who filed the first charges in the sniper case, was not at the press conference.

Horan said he was gratified that he had been chosen to prosecute the case, adding that the decision was "totally evidence driven," but he declined to elaborate on what evidence he had on Malvo.

The pair has been charged in killings in Alabama and Louisiana, and they are suspects in killings in Washington state and Arizona and other shootings in the D.C. area. That list grew today when police in Atlanta said this afternoon that ballistics tests connect Muhammad and Malvo to the September shooting of a man outside a liquor store.

Million Woldemariam, 41, was shot and killed on Sept. 21 when he walked out of the store where he worked to check on a suspicious car, police said.

Later that day, one woman was fatally shot and another wounded in a hold-up attempt outside a liquor store in Montgomery, Ala., approximately 150 miles away.

Death-row Pakistani opposes attacks

BY BILL BASKERVILL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHMOND, Va. — A day after the government warned that the execution of a Pakistani could result in attacks against Americans, the condemned man said he does not support any retaliation by his fellow Muslims.

"I'm against attacks on civilian Americans. They are not responsible for my execution," Aimal Khan Kasi told the Associated Press in a telephone interview Thursday from death row at a state prison in Waverly. "I'm not encouraging attacks against anybody."

Kasi killed CIA communications worker Frank Darling, 28, and CIA analyst and physician Lansing Bennett, 66, as they sat in their cars at a stoplight outside CIA headquarters in McLean, Va., on Jan. 25, 1993. Three other men were wounded as Kasi walked along the row of stopped cars, shooting into them.

He is to be executed by injection Nov. 14.

On Wednesday, the State Department warned that the execution of Kasi could result in retaliation against Americans around the world.

Officials said Americans should "increase their security awareness" when they visit places where fellow countrymen congregate, such as residential areas, clubs, places of worship, schools, and hotels.

"I was expecting that," Kasi said. "You know, particularly in Pakistan, people like me very much."

Kasi, 38, who said he earned a master's degree in English literature in Pakistan, insisted he is not a terrorist. "What I did was a retaliation against the U.S. government" for American policy in the Middle East and its support of Israel, he said. "It had nothing to do with terrorism."

Kasi said he did not agree with the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center. "They were totally wrong. They were attacks against civilian people."

He refused to condemn the attack on the Pentagon "because the Pentagon is an agency involved in attacks against Muslim countries."

He said he has no regret about the killings he committed.

"I'm not sorry for attacking the CIA," he said. "You know, I feel sorry and sad for the families of the victims. I don't say that I feel happy or proud for it."

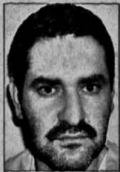

After the CIA killings, Kasi fled the country and spent most of the next 4½ years hiding in and around Kandahar in southern Afghanistan. He was caught in a hotel while visiting Pakistan. He was tried and convicted in November 1997.

Kasi said he is continuing his daily routine on death row — praying, exercising, and watching the news on TV. He is observing the Muslim holy month of Ramadan by fasting from daybreak to sunset.

Kasi said he does not fear execution. "I'm not concerned about it so much. Naturally, I don't like somebody killing me. I believe [that] what God wants, that's going to happen."

Kasi has an appeal pending with the U.S. Supreme Court. He said his lawyer will submit a clemency request to Gov. Mark Warner.

Virginia Attorney General Jerry Kilgore is opposing Kasi's appeal. In an earlier statement about the Kasi case, he said "the rest of the terrorist world must know that we will severely punish those who engage in such acts of violent cowardice."

Giants' Baker out on the market with offers

BY JANIE MCCAULEY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Dusty Baker felt unwanted. San Francisco didn't think their manager wanted to return.

Now, each can try to find a better fit.

Less than two weeks after losing the World Series and just hours before his contract expired, the Giants said Baker would not be back — the culmination of an acrimonious relationship between the manager and owner Peter Magowan.

Baker

"I never thought it was going to come to this," general manager Brian Sabean said Wednesday.

Baker became the first manager to leave a team right after reaching the Series since Dick Williams retired following Oakland's 1973 championship.

Chances are, Baker won't be out of work for long.

The Chicago Cubs are interested in the three-time NL Manager of the Year. They are among 10 teams that will have new managers next season, but only Chicago and the Seattle Mariners still have vacancies. And the Mariners said Wednesday they're not interested in hiring Baker to replace Lou Piniella.

The Cubs planned to set up a meeting with Baker as soon as possible, a source familiar with the team's plans told the New York Times. The team also hoped to hold a conference call later Thursday to discuss their interest in the manager.

"At this point, the door's been swung open, and we'll be listening to interested organizations," said Baker's agent, Jeff Moorad. "We have not had any discussions with any organization thus far."

"I know there's been a lot of speculation about Chicago. As much as we would like the process to be a quick and expeditious one, I also want Dusty to take his time and choose his next organization carefully."

The Giants said Baker told them he would not be available to comment until next week.

Baker's differences with Magowan simmered all season, mainly about who deserved the most credit for the franchise's recent success.

Baker was credited by many observers for his ability to handle a difficult clubhouse that included feuding stars Barry Bonds and Jeff Kent. One person who also will be missing from the Giants' dugout is Baker's 3½-year-old bat boy son, Darren.

NORTHWESTERN AT IOWA, 11:05 P.M.

Role reversal

No. 6 Hawkeyes enter Saturday's game with memories of 1999

BY TODD
BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

The moment is as vivid in Iowa linebacker Fred Barr's mind as it was the day it happened three seasons ago.

Searching for their first Big Ten win under coach Kirk Ferentz, the Hawkeyes were leading Northwestern 21-16 with just minutes remaining in the game.

Quarterback Zak Kustok led the Wildcats down the field on a last-ditch effort to find the end zone, culminating when Kustok rolled right for a four-yard score with just four seconds remaining in the game to give the Wildcats a 23-21 victory.

Iowa went on to finish the season 1-10, winless in the Big Ten.

"That was a very heartbreaking loss," Barr said.

But he also averted the focus on that game when questioned about it. Why? Because this weekend the lowly Wildcats (3-7, 1-5) enter Kinnick Stadium facing a situation very similar to the one Iowa faced in 1999.

"They don't have anything to lose," Barr said. "I remember being on a team like that, just going out there, playing, and giving it all you got."

And that is certainly what Northwestern will be looking to do this weekend, especially now that the sixth-ranked Hawkeyes have gone from being the hunters to the hunted.

"Before it's like you've got nothing to lose going out and trying to knock off a big team, but the roles have been reversed," said Iowa safety Derek Pagel. "This is a great feeling, this is where I wanted to be as a team, and I think we understand what the other team coming in is trying to do to us."

"It's to the point now where it's obvious everybody knows what's going on here."

Iowa is still undefeated in Big

Scouting report week 10: Northwestern at Iowa

BY DONOVAN BURBA

OFFENSE

Iowa's Brad Banks is tops in the conference in both total offense and pass efficiency. His 20 touchdown passes also leads the Big Ten.

The Wildcats rely on halfback Jason Wright to move the ball. Wright averages 177.2 all-purpose per game, fifth-most in the nation.

DEFENSE

The Hawkeyes boast the best rush defense in the country, yielding just 63.9 yards per game on the ground. The pass defense is coming around but is still last in the conference.

Northwestern has the Big Ten's best pass D but allows 330.9 rushing yards per game.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Northwestern kickers David Wasielewski and Brian Huffman have missed eight-straight field goals going back to Oct. 5.

The Hawkeyes have scored four special-teams touchdowns, and placekicker Nate Kaeding is 19-20 on field goal attempts this season.

OVERALL

Iowa is playing as well as any team in the nation right now. The Hawkeyes have dominated in their last three games, outscoring their opponents, 78-20.

Northwestern has struggled all year, and Kinnick Stadium is not the place to try to turn around a season.

Hills' absence opens positions

BY ALI NOLLER
THE DAILY IOWAN

While one dominant player has stepped down from the Iowa volleyball team because of a season-ending injury, a star has emerged in her place.

Freshman Echaka Agba, who took over Renee Hill's role as a versatile outside hitter, has been tough lately, to the satisfaction of her coach.

"Echaka has really come up and has been doing an awesome job," Rita Buck-Crockett said. "She is definitely one of the best two freshmen in the Big Ten. She's been put into a primary role — passing, playing all six positions — and I am really happy with her performance."

Agba's numbers reflect her turnaround. The Illinois native put up 21 kills against Purdue, a career high.

A big performance from Agba will be key in tonight's home match with No. 13 Wisconsin, the Hawkeyes' first home game without Hill in three seasons.

"We are definitely playing better than we were the first time we played Wisconsin [earlier this season]," Buck-Crockett said. "We don't have Renee, but the team has been doing very good things in practice this week."

Also playing strongly for the Hawkeyes is sophomore Amoreena Reynolds, who has re-entered the lineup after being sidelined with an early season injury.

Reynolds shattered her previous season best of 14 kills with a record-setting 27 kills against Purdue, while hitting at a .457 clip.

Buck-Crockett has made a few minimal changes to the lineup to make up for the loss of Hill, their leading hitter, but she has seen good things from her other veteran hitter, Kelli Chesnut. Chesnut notched a career best four service aces and collected 12 digs in last weekend's outing with Purdue.

"She's very positive and is coming off a very good match against Illinois," Buck-Crockett said.

Iowa has its work cut out for it when Wisconsin comes to town. The Badgers are 17-6 overall and are No. 3 in the conference with an 8-4 mark.

Senior Erin Byrd leads the team in kills with 4.16 per game, while freshman libero Beth Haberli is averaging a team high 3.21 digs.

The Badgers recently notched wins over Indiana and Ohio

Season end bitter for Iowa

BY KATIE LOW
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa women's soccer team ended the season on a disheartening note as it just missed the opportunity to compete in the Big Ten tournament.

"It was a good season, it's just very disappointing that we didn't make the tournament," forward Katelyn Quinn said.

The Hawkeyes ended the season 11-7-1 overall and 3-6-1 in the Big Ten. Their final record tied them with Illinois, and the team's hopes of playing in the tournament were dashed when Illinois defeated No. 13 Purdue in a make-up game on Sunday.

"I hated waiting to see if we would go," Quinn said. "I hate relying on other people."

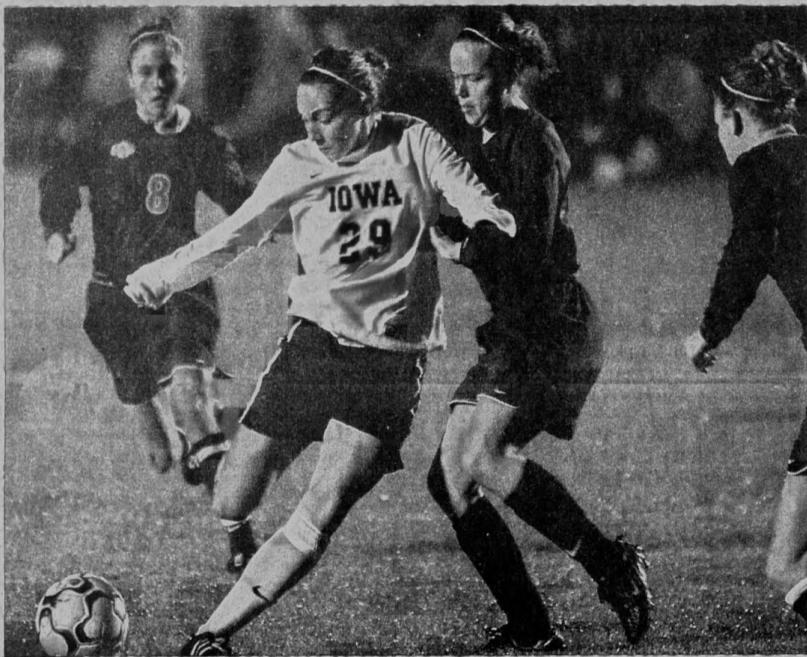

Quinn, a redshirt freshman, was a scoring leader on the team, netting a team-high 11 goals on the season. She was followed closely by fellow forward, senior Sarah Lynch who recorded 10.

Lynch said that ending the season without having a chance at the tournament was hard for her to take in her last year of collegiate soccer. However, she said she enjoyed not knowing that the team's last regular season game against Iowa State would be her last. The Hawkeyes ended their season before they knew the final outcome of the Illinois-Purdue game.

"It was definitely a disappointment," Lynch said. "But you just have to look at the positive aspects. We went 4-0 in our last four games and that was a great ending for our team."

Coach Carla Baker also applauded her team's efforts for the season.

"I was very happy with my student-athletes for the way they handled themselves," she said. "They came together very well and the chemistry they had at the end was the best I've seen in my years as a college coach."

However, Baker admits that there were some pervasive problems that prevented the Hawkeyes from getting a bid to the tournament.

"There were games we should have won but we couldn't get the results," she said. "There were some very valuable lessons learned for future teams."

Iowa started out the season well, winning their first three matches before falling to Boston College. They defeated non-conference rival Idaho, before dropping the first three Big Ten games to Michigan, Michigan

State, and Northwestern. Iowa was able to obtain wins over Minnesota and Ohio State and earned a tie against Wisconsin.

The Hawkeyes then lost momentum, dropping another three straight to Penn State, Indiana, and Purdue. They won their last conference game against Illinois, but it was not enough to carry them to the tournament.

Even after a disappointing season, Iowa has high hopes for the program.

"We need to re-evaluate where we are, but the expectations will be the same," Baker said. "We want to finish in the top half of the Big Ten and win the tournament. I think after this season we have more of an understanding of who we're up against and how we can compete."

Even though Lynch will depart, she believes that Baker will continue to head a winning team.

"The team will be very successful next year," Lynch said. "It's her first year, and Carla's a great coach. She'll take this program to a new level. I really think you can expect good things from the team next year."

Northwestern hopes rejuvenated

Ten play; with just two conference games remaining for the 9-1 Hawkeyes, Pagel and his teammates realize that a championship is within reach. But before there can be any talk of ring sizes and Rose Bowl berths, there must first be talk of Northwestern.

Coincidentally, an Iowa victory over the Wildcats in 2000 was one of two losses that kept then-No. 12 Northwestern from making the trip to Pasadena.

"They're a very, very dangerous team," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said about the current edition of the Wildcats. "They keep you on your toes."

The Wildcats, who picked up their first and only Big Ten victory last weekend against Indiana, enter Saturday's contest with renewed hope they can salvage their remaining two contests this season and build on their performance for the 2003 season.

"Guys just decided, 'Enough's enough. We've got to win. We'll do whatever it takes. Let's turn the corner here,'" said Northwestern center Austin King.

That's a scary sentiment coming from a team that still has a bitter taste in its mouth from last season's 59-16 Iowa victory in Evanston, a game in which the Hawkeyes rolled up 602 yards of total offense against the Wildcats.

"They have absolutely nothing to lose," Barr reiterated. "They can throw the ball deep on every play if they want to."

And Northwestern may do just that with freshman quarterback Brett Basanez back in the starting lineup after battling injuries. Basanez, who beat out backup Tony Stauss in the battle to replace Kustok, has thrown for 1,647 yards and five touchdowns this season.

Ferentz said Basanez caught his eye while watching film of Northwestern and that he may be one of the more dangerous quarterbacks the Hawkeyes face this season.

It was also hard for Ferentz not to notice running back Jason Wright, this week's offensive player of the week. Wright accumulated 219 rushing yards in Northwestern's victory over Indiana and has already eclipsed the 1,000-yard mark this season.

"He makes some cuts and some decisions, and you go 'Wow, that was really good,'" said Northwestern head coach Randy Walker.

But Iowa will more than counter Wright with its duo of Fred Russell and Jermelle Lewis. Russell, who should start after not dressing for last weekend's 20-3 victory over Wisconsin, and Lewis should have no trouble piling up big numbers Saturday. Northwestern's league-worst defense allows an average of 498.7 yards per game, including over 340 yards rushing in conference games.

"My legs feel fine," Russell said. "The week off really helped my body get healthy."

Russell had been cleared to play by doctors last week, but Ferentz held him out of action because he felt it was in the "best interest of all parties." Lewis rushed for 81 yards on 25 carries against the Badgers.

Northwestern notes: Iowa holds a 44-18-3 advantage in the all-time series with the Wildcats, including a current two-game winning streak ... Northwestern has not won in Iowa City since a 40-13 romp in 1996, and it has lost in 14 of its last 15 trips to Kinnick Stadium ... Basanez has thrown the fewest interceptions among Big Ten quarterbacks with three ... Six starters on the Wildcats' defensive front seven are underclassmen ... Safeties Mark Roush and Dominique Price and linebacker Braden Jones are expected to return from injuries this weekend ... Before becoming coach at Northwestern in 1999, Walker spent eight seasons as the head coach at Miami University, a team Iowa defeated 29-24 earlier this season ... Tickets still remain for the game.

Owner Magowan laments decision to wait

"Dusty's a good friend of mine, a good friend of the family," Bonds said Thursday in Tokyo, where he's preparing for an All-Star series. "I wish him all the best. He's a great man, and I'm sure he'll manage again because he's a great manager. But I'm a Giant and will stand by my team."

Magowan and Sabean met with Baker last week. "However, his public disparagement of the organization has continued," the owner said.

"As a result, Brian and I didn't believe we could reconcile the differences with Dusty and it wasn't practical to go forward," he said.

Sabean, who said talks with Moorad were going nowhere, recommended to Magowan that negotiations end. Baker's contract expired at midnight Wednesday.

"As late as last night, we were told there would be an offer forthcoming," Moorad said late Wednesday. "There obviously was a change of heart during the morning ... That isn't what we expected, but we certainly understood it was well within the Giants' discretion."

Baker's public statements angered the team, but Magowan said the parting was not based on personal issues.

"I have the highest respect for Dusty as a person and a manager," Magowan said. "He told me in our meeting last week that he had high respect for me. I don't think it was personalities. There were issues on both sides."

Sabean will form a short list of candidates immediately.

Baker will be missed by his players and fans.

"It's emotional. I don't know about sad," Sabean said. "The guy's had a great career here. He's going to go off to greener pastures in his mind, a pot of gold."

At 53, Baker just completed his 10th year with the Giants. He led San Francisco to its first World Series since 1989.

Baker apparently felt slighted because Magowan always pointed out everybody else's contributions when asked what he thought of Baker's role in the team's success.

"If somebody wanted me back, a lot of times they wouldn't wait until the last minute to tell them," Baker said before Game 7 of the World Series.

Baker also became angry when Magowan said in spring training that this was the best team the Giants had fielded in his 10 years of ownership. Baker thought that put too much pressure on the players.

Magowan said he regretted the timing of those comments so shortly after Baker's fight with prostate cancer.

In spring training, Magowan said he would wait until after the season to address new contracts with Baker and Sabean.

Sabean agreed to a multiyear deal Oct. 31.

"Any time a team gets to the seventh game of the World Series, a lot of things have to be working," Giants third baseman David Bell said Wednesday night. "A lot of things have to be going in the right direction. Dusty was the leader of that. The biggest part of all that was Dusty."

"I definitely wanted it to work out for Dusty. I enjoyed playing for him, but maybe it will work out better for him now. I can't imagine what not only Dusty, but the people around him for 10 years, are feeling right now."

State, and they are hungry to edge forward in the rankings.

For the Hawkeyes, tonight's match with Wisconsin and Saturday's outing with Northwestern pulls them one game closer to the end of the season.

Iowa will return to Carver-Hawkeye Arena one more time following this weekend's competition, taking on Ohio State and Indiana in front of the home crowd.

Buck-Crockett said that if the team plays up to its capabilities, it can come away with two wins this weekend.

"We play very well at home — it will be nice to play in front of our fans," she said.

The match will begin at 7 p.m. Admission is $3.

NEW YORK — Oakland's Barry Zito edged Boston's Pedro Martinez to win his first American League Cy Young Award on Thursday.

Zito, who went 23-5 with a 2.75 ERA to help the Athletics win the AL West, received 17 first-place votes, nine seconds and two thirds for 114 points from a panel of the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

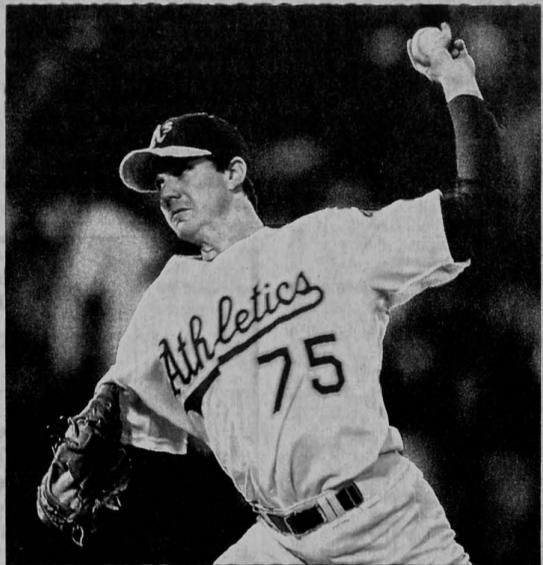

Martinez, a three-time Cy Young Award winner, got 11 firsts, 12 seconds, and five thirds for 96 points after going 20-4 with a 2.26 ERA.

Boston teammate Derek Lowe, 21-8 with a 2.58 ERA, was third with 41 points, and Anaheim's Jarrod Washburn (18-6, 3.15) got one point.

Zito, a 24-year-old left-hander, led the AL in wins, was third in ERA behind Martinez and Lowe, and tied the Yankees' Mike Mussina for third in strikeouts at 182 behind Martinez (239) and New York's Roger Clemens (192).

Opposing batters had a .185 average with runners in scoring position against Zito, the lowest in the AL.

Montreal Canadiens Chad Kilger (25) knocks New York Islanders' Radek Martinek to the ice in Montreal's 3-0 victory.

Canadiens shut out Islanders as Theodore makes 42 saves

MONTREAL (AP) — Jose Theodore made 42 saves for his first shutout of the season to lead the Montreal Canadiens to a 3-0 victory over the New York Islanders.

Theodore got his 16th career shutout.

Craig Rivet, Jan Bulis, and Doug Gilmour scored for the Canadiens. New York held an 11-4 margin in shots in the first, but Rivet scored the period's only goal on a power-play 7:50 on what proved to be the Canadiens' first shot.

Montreal had already killed two penalties when the Islanders' Steve Webb was sent off for charging at 6:18.

The Canadiens had little offense going on their first power-play opportunity as Rivet fired a dump-in shot from center ice off the glass above the left-wing boards.

Islanders goalie Chris Osgood left the crease to get ready to play the puck behind the net, but Rivet's shot caromed off a metal stanchion between two panels of glass directly into the vacated net.

Washington 2, Florida 1, OT

WASHINGTON — Jaromir Jagr scored a shorthanded goal at 3:56 of overtime and Olaf Kolzig made 32 saves in his first game back from injury to lead the Washington Capitals to a 2-1 victory over the Florida Panthers.

With Kip Miller in the penalty box, Jagr chased down a clearing pass from Jeff Halpern and beat Jani Hurme on his backhand for his eighth goal of the season.

Kolzig returned after missing five games because of a wrist injury. He hadn't played since Washington's 3-2 loss at Tampa Bay on Oct. 25, but wasn't really challenged through the first two periods. But early in the third, the Panthers started to get quality scoring chances.

N. Y. Rangers 1, Calgary 0, OT

NEW YORK — Brian Leetch scored 51 seconds into overtime to give Dan Blackburn his first NHL shutout and lift the New York Rangers to a 1-0 victory over the Calgary Flames.

Blackburn stopped 26 shots. Leetch swooped in to the right of goalie Jamie McLennan, as Mark Messier sent a pass across the goal mouth, and tapped in his second goal of the season.

New Jersey 1, Philadelphia 0

PHILADELPHIA — Jamie Langenbrunner scored with 7:43 left and the New Jersey Devils snapped the Philadelphia Flyers' six-game winning streak with a 1-0 victory in the first meeting of the season between the Atlantic Division rivals.

The Flyers are off to a 9-2-2 start under new coach Ken Hitchcock. New Jersey is 8-3 under its new coach Pat Burns.

Detroit 2, Boston 1

DETROIT — Sergei Fedorov's goal 2:08 into overtime gave the Detroit Red Wings a 2-1 victory Thursday night over the Boston Bruins.

Fedorov beat John Grahame low on the short side with a slap shot from the top inside edge of the left circle.

Nicklas Lidstrom, who assisted on Fedorov's game winner, tied it 1-1 with 9:43 left in the third period with a power-play goal. He put in a one-timer from the slot after working a give-and-go play with Henrik Zetterberg.

The goal snapped the Red Wings scoreless streak of 121:36.

Columbus 5, St. Louis 2

ST. LOUIS — Andrew Cassels scored twice and Ray Whitney added a goal and two assists as the Columbus Blue Jackets beat St. Louis, 5-2, to snap the Blues' nine-game winning streak.

The Blue Jackets scored power-play goals in the second period to take a 3-1 lead. Derrick Walser beat goalie Fred Brathwaite on a slap shot from the point at 9:21, and Cassels scored when the puck deflected in off his skate at 17:57.

Carolina 2, Buffalo 0

RALEIGH, N.C. — Jeff O'Neill and Craig Adams scored for Carolina, and Kevin Weekes recorded his first shutout as the Hurricanes beat Buffalo, 2-0, extending the Sabres' winless streak to seven Thursday nights.

O'Neill's fifth of the season late in the first period was the game-winner. Weekes stopped 26 shots for his ninth career shutout.

Buffalo had plenty of chances in the second period trailing 1-0, but managed two shots during a two-man advantage that lasted 1:35 and didn't come close to getting a shot on its final power play of the period as the team's offensive frustration mounted.

And Vaclav Varada kicked in the puck with 10:14 left in the third for a disallowed goal when he couldn't get his stick free in the crease.

Adams clinched it when a replay showed his goal crossed the line before the net came off its pegs with 2:14 remaining.

Garnett and Szczerbiak combine to drain Bucks

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Kevin Garnett had 28 points and 24 rebounds, and Wally Szczerbiak returned to the lineup with 19 points as the Minnesota Timberwolves beat the Milwaukee Bucks, 114-110.

Garnett tied his own career high and franchise record for rebounds. Minnesota overcame 22 first-half points from the Bucks' Sam Cassell and 18 third-quarter points from teammate Ray Allen. Cassell finished with 32 points and Allen had 27.

Garnett's biggest rebound came in the final seconds, an offensive board with the Wolves leading 112-110. Troy Hudson clinched the game with two free throws with 0.7 seconds remaining.

Szczerbiak returned to the lineup and shot 6-13 in 35 minutes of action.

Szczerbiak's 3-pointer with 8:18 remaining gave the Wolves a lead for the first time in the fourth quarter at 93-92. The two teams traded leads eight more times before Garnett hit two free throws with 3:09 remaining to put Minnesota up 101-100.

Boston 98, Los Angeles 95, OT

BOSTON — Paul Pierce scored 28 points, including a 3-pointer with 1:54 left in overtime that gave the Celtics the lead for good Thursday night as Boston beat the depleted

Los Angeles Lakers.

Kobe Bryant had 41 points on a hot-and-cold night in which he hit just 4-15 in the first half, scored 18 in the third quarter, and then missed 10 consecutive field-goal attempts in the fourth quarter and overtime.

Tony Delk scored 26 for Boston, making a pair of free throws with 9.3 seconds left to make it 98-95. Bryant's 3-point attempt to tie it with 1 second remaining bounced off the front of the rim.

The Lakers had just 35 points at the break. But Bryant was hot in the third quarter, scoring eight in a row as Los Angeles rallied from a 15-point halftime deficit to take the lead.

But that's when he started missing again.

NFL ratings up as scoring, overtime action increases

BY HOWARD FENDRICH
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The highest scoring in 35 years. More overtime games. A new team in a big market.

Whatever the reason, the NFL is a TV hit halfway through the season.

The league's games are drawing an average of 14.1 million people per telecast, 9 percent higher than in 2001 and 2 percent higher than two years ago.

And the networks with NFL deals are sharing the rewards. ABC, Fox, CBS, and ESPN all have increases in viewership, which eventually should translate into more advertising dollars.

"The final chapter hasn't been written, and we're not celebrating yet," Fox Sports President Ed Goren said Thursday. "Still, it's been a great nine weeks so far."

The jump for the NFL comes in a year that Major League Baseball had its lowest-rated World Series, following regular-season numbers even with last year's.

Nielsen Media Research only measures what people watch, not why, so it's tough to know the causes of ups and downs.

But John Madden, the announcer whose move from Fox to "Monday Night Football" gets some credit for ABC's ratings rise, offers a simple take: unpredictable outcomes on the field.

"NFL sometimes stands for 'Never Figure League,'" Madden said. "What you think will happen doesn't."

Now perhaps more than ever, there is a sense that any team can win any game. That gives fans — and bettors — hope week after week and draws them to watch games.

That's what the networks were hoping for when they agreed to pay a total of $17.6 billion from 1998-05. Fox and CBS get regular-season games primarily on Sunday afternoons, ESPN has Sunday night games, and ABC has "Monday Night Football."

They have had varying increases, when compared with last season through Week 9: ABC's ratings went from 11.2 to 11.5 (2.7 percent), Fox's went from 9.7 to 10.2 (5.2 percent), CBS's went from 8.9 to 9.3 (4.5 percent), and ESPN's from 5.8 to 7.3 (25.9 percent).

Ratings are the percentage of all homes with televisions, whether they are in use or not. For ABC, Fox, and CBS, each rating point represents a little more than 1.06 million TV homes. For ESPN, each point translates to 870,000.

More good news for the league and networks: Ratings among men aged 18-34 are up 19 percent from 2001, 8 percent from 2000.

Football ratings were down last year because of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, TV sports consultant Neal Pilson said.

Still, as CBS Sports President Sean McManus put it: "Any time ratings are up, it's a victory."

Four of the top 13 TV shows, when ranked by total viewers, are NFL games.

"The ratings reflect great interest across America in exciting, unpredictable football with lots of talent — both veterans and newcomers — in every game," NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said.

What might be producing that interest? Some theories:

• The 43.9 points per game are the most since 1967.

• More games have been decided by a touchdown or less than last season, and the 13 overtimes so far match the total for the entire 2000 season.

• The Houston Texans joined the league, putting a team in the country's 11th-largest TV market.

• It's become a pattern that teams come from nowhere to reach the Super Bowl; the last three champions were a combined 17-31 the season before they won.

Right now, anyone seems to be able to beat — or lose — to anyone.

The St. Louis Rams, many pundits' pick to win the Super Bowl; started 0-5; then won three-straight games. The Oakland Raiders started 4-0, then lost four in a row.

"Parity" is a word that's been misunderstood and misinterpreted, said Al Michaels, Madden's partner on "Monday Night Football," which airs for the 500th time next week. "People think it means everyone is 8-8. What 'parity' really has become, because of free agency and some other things, is that you can finish 4-12 one year and 12-4 the next year."

Big Tens loom for field hockey

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
THE DAILY IOWAN

This weekend will be a true test for the Iowa field-hockey team as it heads to Columbus, Ohio, to take part in the Big Ten Tournament.

A loss to first round opponent Ohio State (7-9, 2-4) at noon Eastern Time today would put an end to the Hawkeyes' season, but if Iowa wins the tournament by recording three wins in three days, the team will earn an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament.

There could still be a chance, however, for the Hawkeyes to make the NCAA Tournament despite not winning the conference tournament, but coach Tracey Griesbaum feels her team must go undefeated.

"I think we have to win three games and win the tournament," she said.

With a 2-4 Big Ten record this season (9-7 overall), the Hawkeyes take the No. 5 seed out of the seven teams in the conference. Michigan, ranked second in the nation, earned the top spot in the Big Ten, and it will be the only team with a first round bye.

The Hawkeyes' opening round opponent Ohio State, the No. 4 seed, has not gotten the best of Iowa in their last two meetings.

In the final home game of Iowa's regular season, the Buckeyes came to Grant Field and handed the Hawkeyes a 0-1 overtime loss.

"It's kind of personal for me," senior Tiffany Leister said. "It was our last home game on Grant Field, and they came in and took it to us."

On top of that, in last season's Big Ten Tournament, it was Ohio State who knocked off the Hawkeyes in the finals with a 2-1 victory.

Iowa will have a chance to pay back the Buckeyes, especially with Ohio State hosting this year's tournament.

"We've got a lot of revenge going on for us," Leister said. "It will be a little bit of revenge to take it back to them on their home field."

If the Hawkeyes do get past their first-round opponent, Michigan will be waiting for the Hawkeyes on Saturday.

Iowa suffered a 0-2 loss to the Wolverines at home earlier this year.

On the other side of the bracket are the No. 2 and 3 seeds Michigan State and Penn State, two teams that Iowa lost to by a single goal this season.

Iowa remains confident though, and with Griesbaum's "One game at a time" theme, the Hawkeyes promise not to look past anyone.

"We're definitely expecting to play those three games," junior Pattie Gillern said. "But we still can't get too far ahead of ourselves because we have to win Friday."

Gillern, who leads the team this season with 14 points on six goals and two assists, proved to be very effective in last year's Big Ten tournament.

In the Hawkeyes' two overtime victories against Penn State and Michigan State, it was Gillern that was responsible for both game-winning goals.

"Even this year I think she's progressively gotten better," Griesbaum said. "Her presence on the field has increasingly gotten better so hopefully she can continue."

Gillern, despite her efforts in last year's tournament, was not rewarded with an All-Big Ten tournament team selection. Though that did not bring her spirits down.

"Whatever. You gotta look at it this way. If it happens, it happens," Gillern said. "I just want the team to do well. It's all about the team."

Notes: Four Hawkeyes were named to the all-Big Ten team. Tiffany Leister and Barb Weinberg earned first-team honors, and Lindsay Miller and Lauren Stiver were named to the second team ... Iowa finished the regular season with a No. 14 ranking in the National Field Hockey Coaches Association poll ... Iowa played in the finals of five of the eight Big Ten Tournaments, including last season in which it lost to Ohio State.

Women's tennis hits road for 'hidden' tournament

BY KAVITHA THIMMAIAH
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa women's tennis team looks to shake things up at this weekend's Wisconsin Invitational in Madison, Wis.

"We've been getting better over the fall, and this tournament allows us to play around with our lineup in singles and doubles," coach Paul Wardlaw said.

"I don't know what the line-up is like, last year [Wardlaw] alternated the top three positions," junior Cassie Haas said.

Unlike most tournaments in the fall that focus on the individual, this season-closer is formatted as a hidden dual tournament, which means the Hawkeyes will have a chance to compete as a team against each of the other three schools in the tournament. The women will face defending Big Ten champs, Northwestern, No. 27 Wisconsin, and always-competitive DePaul.

Despite the tough competition, spirits on the team remain high.

"I'm fairly confident we'll do well. Northwestern is always a top 10 program, but I'm optimistic," Haas said. Haas leads the Hawkeyes this fall with the best record of 6-2.

The Hawkeyes do catch a break in the Wildcats line-up, however. Top players Marine Pirou and Christelle Grier are in Dallas, competing in the Omni Hotels National Intercollegiate Indoor Championships.

Big Ten-foe Wisconsin will also offer tough competition. The Badgers welcome back all 20 of their singles players from last year's Big Ten runner-up squad, including Linde Mues, ranked No. 100 in the ITA pre-season poll. The tandem of Haas and Deni Alexandrova will look to avenge the 8-1 third round loss handed to them by Badgers Mues and Katie McGaffigan at the Midwest Regionals Oct. 29.

"I want to beat Wisconsin. I think if we believe in ourselves, we'll do well. We are well prepared," Alexandrova said.

Haas echoed her teammate's sentiments. "This is our last tournament, so I'm definitely less nervous. I have the mindset of taking home three [singles] victories this weekend," Haas said. The Dubuque native is also expecting strong hometown support, as Madison is only a two-hour drive from the state-borderline town.

"I always play well in Wisconsin because I get a lot of fans out to watch me. I know my family will be there too," Haas said.

This will be the Hawkeyes last competition until they host the Hawkeye Invitational on Jan. 24. Wardlaw and the Hawkeyes are looking to use the Wisconsin tournament as a catalyst to succeed in the spring season.

"This is a good way to wrap-up the fall season; it gets us back into the team format which is what we'll be facing in the spring," Wardlaw said.

Gamboa accepts apology from his juvenile attacker

BY DEANNA BELLANDI
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Kansas City Royals coach Tom Gamboa said he accepts the apology of a 15-year-old fan who attacked him on the field during a game and hopes the boy learns from his "tragic mistake."

Gamboa said Thursday he would like to see the boy receive probation and community service because he was already held for a month in juvenile detention after the September attack at Comiskey Park.

"I can't see a 15- or 16-year-old kid being thrown down the drain for making a tragic mistake," Gamboa said while testifying at the teen's sentencing hearing.

Gamboa, himself a father of five, added afterward: "I sure hope he turns out OK."

The boy apologized to Gamboa during the start of the hearing in juvenile court. The hearing is scheduled to resume Friday.

"Being incarcerated has made me realize how stupid my actions were," said the boy, whose name is being withheld because of his age.

The boy was released to his family last month after pleading guilty Oct. 21 to one count of aggravated battery and two counts of mob action in the Sept. 19 attack during a game against the Chicago White Sox. Gamboa was coaching at first base when it occurred.

The boy's father, William Ligue Jr., 35, also was charged. He has pleaded innocent to three felony counts of aggravated battery and one felony count of mob action.

Ligue has been in custody at Cook County Jail since the attack and on Thursday a judge agreed to reduce his bail to $10,000 from $200,000, said Jerry Lawrence, a spokesman with the Cook County State's Attorney's office.

A spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff's Office said Ligue had not posted bond by late afternoon.

In his apology, the boy, neatly dressed in a shirt and tie, told the court Gamboa did nothing to provoke the attack.

Following their arrests, the father and son, both shirtless, contended Gamboa had made an obscene gesture.

Gamboa said he was glad the boy's apology made it clear he had done nothing to antagonize them.

"That's just not a part of who I am," Gamboa said.

The coach talked about the attack that he said "felt like I got hit by a truck."

His head hit the ground so hard, he said that he temporarily lost his hearing. He also suffered cuts and bruises.

Gamboa, now the Royals' bullpen coach, said he hopes this incident is a wake-up call for the team.

"I hope this is the fork in the road that prompts him to go the right way," Gamboa said.

Rams ready for resurrection

BY DAVE GOLDBERG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

At the start of the season, it seemed far more likely that when San Diego visited St. Louis to start the second half of the season, the Rams would be 6-2 and the Chargers 3-5.

Instead, it's the opposite. Still, circumstances are changing. The Rams have won three straight after starting 0-5, and the Chargers, who started 6-1, were blown out 44-13 by the Jets at home last week.

"There's a lot of reasons why we lost that game," San Diego linebacker Junior Seau said. "We didn't play well, we didn't tackle well, we didn't protect the ball. We didn't do a lot of things. We couldn't even onside kick well. Those games happen."

The oddsmakers go with preseason perceptions: The Rams are favored by six, with Marc Bulger (3-0 as a starter) at quarterback instead of the still-injured Kurt Warner.

Warner's injury may be one reason the Rams are winning. Given Bulger's inexperience, coach Mike Martz has finally made sure Marshall Faulk is getting 30-odd touches a game and the results reflect it. Faulk has produced 703 yards in the three wins, 571 on the ground.

Two sure things:

1. The Chargers won't play another stinker. Marty Schottenheimer, who took the blame for the loss to the Jets, won't allow it.

2. St. Louis is a hard place to play when the Rams are playing as well as they are now.

RAMS, 24-20

Warner Schottenheimer

The picks:

Oakland (plus 5 1/2) at Denver

When you've lost four straight, as the Raiders have, you don't want to go to Denver on a Monday night. Especially when you've lost three eight-straight times.

BRONCOS, 24-13

Miami (plus 1) at New York Jets

If the Jets win, the AFC East could be close to a four-team deadlock.

JETS, 16-13

Detroit (plus 11) at Green Bay

If the Packers win, they could be within a week of clinching the first-ever NFC North title.

PACKERS, 27-16

Atlanta (plus 5 1/2) at Pittsburgh

Too bad Kordell Stewart's a backup now. Imagine Michael Vick on the same field with Stewart, Hines Ward and Antwaan Randle El.

STEELERS, 26-21

Indianapolis (plus 9 1/2) at Philadelphia

Tony Dungy never had much luck in Philadelphia with better teams than he has now.

EAGLES, 24-11

New England (minus 3) at Chicago

The Patriots are the NFL's best 4-4 team.

PATRIOTS, 16-10

New Orleans (minus 5) at Carolina

Despite league-leading sack man Julius Peppers, the Panthers continue to lose.

SAINTS, 25-9

Kansas City (plus 6 1/2) at San Francisco

Will the 49ers punt? 49ERS, 37-34 (overtime)

New York Giants (minus 1 1/2) at Minnesota

The Vikings are competitive at home, the Giants are inconsistent, but...

GIANTS, 27-20

Washington (plus 2) at Jacksonville

Plenty of folks in Florida think Steve Spurrier should be coaching the Jags.

JAGUARS, 19-18

Houston (plus 10) at Tennessee

The AFC South title is there for the Titans' taking.

TITANS, 30-10

Cincinnati (plus 5 1/2) at Baltimore

The Bengals' fun stopped in Houston.

RAVENS, 15-8

Seattle (plus 3 1/2) at Arizona

Jeff George could be one week away from starting for the Seahawks.

horoscopes

Friday, November 8, 2002 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Travel will be tiring but lucrative. Your intuition will lead you in the right direction. Follow it where business ventures are concerned. You may want to get some additional legal advice.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Past unpleasant memories may surface. Do your best to settle these issues once and for all. Put the past behind you, and focus on the present.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your emotional reactions may get you into hot water. Take a deep breath before you interact. Concentrate on work and steer clear of emotional confrontations. You are not seeing the whole picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may be having difficulty getting your point across. Take your time and be precise. The more complete your explanation, the easier it will be for others to support you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are more interested in entertainment and having fun than work right now. It may be time for a career change. Take a look at what you love to do, and see if there is a way to turn it into a lucrative career.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Past experiences that were stressful should be left alone regardless of how hard it is to say no. Just remember the anxiety you felt and be firm. Try to be disciplined.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can do some research today that will bring you new ideas. Place a call to someone who can't get out because of illness or old age. Your visit would be just the right pick-me-up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may find yourself doing a little traveling today. Visit friends and relatives whom you don't get to spend much time with. You should take the weekend to scout somewhere with your mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your contributions have not gone unnoticed. There are those in positions of authority who appreciate your efforts. Good news should come by phone or mail. Be eager to celebrate your good fortune.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Secret affairs may be exciting now, but the consequences will by no means be to your liking. Don't get drawn into other people's personal problems. You have enough to deal with.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): This is not the day to ask for favors or loans. Others will not be convinced of your needs. You will have to go over your financial statements carefully and work out a budget you can live with.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can make professional gains if you play your cards right. Look for opportunities to climb the ladder of success by mingling with the hotshots. You will learn a great deal and may get some good leads.

Election Night surprises

- Walter Mondale loses both election and pants.
- Al Gore placed in mental hospital after election flash-back.
- Julie Thomas decries lack of women in House; Greg Ganske decries lack of ugly plastic surgeons in Senate.
- Gross finally admits to being from Planet Enron, lobbies for self to be deported.
- Florida election somehow manages not to be enormous debacle.
- Green Party and Libertarians split coveted "Crackpots on the Fringe" swing vote.
- No one from Harkin campaign tapes Ganske's concession speech.
- Candidates for Board of Supervisors ask Elaine Sweet to spend all of their remaining campaign money at last minute.
- Jim Leach graciously thanks "you Democrat bastards" for voting for him.

Northwestern holey, Iowa rolling: No contest

Saturday's matchup between the powerhouse Iowa Hawkeyes (sixth in both polls) and the timid Northwestern Wildcats has an eerie air of familiarity about it.

In 2000, the 'Cats came into Legendary Kinnick Stadium ranked 12th in the nation and looking for a Rose Bowl bid. Iowa, 2-8 at the time, dominated the game, shutting down Northwestern's high-powered spread offense.

This year, the tables are turned, with the Hawkeyes eyeing Pasadena and the Wildcats hoping to turn those California dreams into nightmares.

As in 2000, when Northwestern boasted a Heisman candidate in halfback Damien Anderson, Saturday's game features one of the premier skill players in the nation, Hawkeye quarterback Brad Banks. An outside contender for the Heisman himself, Banks has been the one constant of the Iowa offensive attack this season.

DONOVAN BURBA

Columnist

The two-time conference player of the week leads the nation in pass efficiency, posting a jaw-dropping 20/4 TD/INT ratio. Despite losing halfback Fred Russell to injury last week, the Banks-led offense ran up 405 total yards in a 20-3 win over Wisconsin.

Russell is expected to play today, despite not being 100 percent after straining his hand on Oct. 26 at Michigan. Russell is averaging 115.6 yards per game, but questions have arisen over his durability. If Russell struggles, Jermelle Lewis has proven himself a more than adequate backup. Lewis stepped in and ran for 109 yards on 18 carries against Michigan after Russell went down, and last week put up 81 more ground yards.

While the Hawkeye offense has been consistently excellent all season, the pass defense has only recently emerged as a cohesive unit. Although still dead last in the Big Ten (284.7 yards allowed per game), Iowa's secondary shut down its last two opponents. Michigan's John Navarre could muster just 14 completions on 33 attempts for 112 yards, and Wisconsin's tandem of Brooks Bollinger and Jim Sorgi couldn't do much better, combining for just 130 air yards.

Northwestern's offense relies heavily on halfback Jason Wright, last week's Big Ten player of the week. Wright, who eclipsed the 1,000 yard mark on Nov. 2, is second in the conference and fifth in the nation in all purpose yards with 177.2 per game.

Against Indiana last weekend Wright rushed for 219 yards and caught three passes for 59 more in the Wildcats' first (and likely only) conference win of the season.

For all his ability, Wright can't play defense, and that's where Northwestern struggles the most. The Wildcats give up an average of (brace yourself) 506.2 yards per game, an astounding number for any team, much less one in the three-yards-and-a-cloud-of-dust Big Ten.

What's even more mind-boggling is that the 'Cats have the best pass defense in the conference. That's right, the rush defense yields 330.9 yards per game, over 100 yards more than the next-worse Big Ten team.

Iowa brings in a decided special teams advantage into today's game. Nate Kaeding's streak of 22 consecutive field goals made may have ended against Wisconsin, but he is still the best placekicker in the nation. The Hawkeyes have also blocked two punts, a field goal, and an extra point, all of which resulted in Iowa scores. Jermelle Lewis also returned a kickoff 94 yards for a touchdown against Purdue.

Northwestern, on the other hand, has struggled mightily with the kicking game. Starter David Wasielewski missed seven straight FGs before being replaced by Brian Huffman—who promptly missed his first attempt.

Looking past today's game would be a mistake, as anything can happen this time of year (just ask Notre Dame and Virginia Tech).

However, Northwestern has too many holes, and Iowa's got too much momentum, for this to be anything but an ugly afternoon. Iowa 56, Northwestern 14

With music, medicine, marriage, and football, Porter makes the grade

BY BRIAN TRIPLET
THE DAILY IOWAN

David Porter is not the typical college football player. The 6-7, 320-pound fifth-year senior has been a large contributor to the success of the 9-1 Hawkeyes and their offensive line, but it is off the field where Porter's story gets interesting.

Not only is he a pre-med student who plays five musical instruments, but the 22-year-old has a wedding ring on his finger as well.

Porter was born in Frankfurt, Germany, where both of his parents were stationed in the military. Growing up, he grew accustomed to moving, spending his junior-high days in California before moving to Illinois prior to high school.

As a fifth-grader, he began playing trumpet and developed a passion for music. Along the way he also learned to play the trombone, French horn, saxophone, and tuba.

In his freshman year in high school at Althoff Catholic in Belleville, Ill., Porter decided he wanted to go into medicine.

"A lot of my family is in the medical field," he said. "I got a pretty good taste of it early on."

After graduating from high school, where he was first team all-state in football his junior and senior seasons, Porter came to Iowa where he met Tara Fumerton in the spring of 1999. Nearly three years later, on Jan. 5, the two were married.

"I think they're a perfect couple," said Tara's father, Richard Fumerton, who is a UI professor. "He's just like a son to me."

Tara, who is older than David, will graduate along with her husband in December. The two actually share the last name Fumerton Porter, but David uses Porter for football, and Tara uses Fumerton for law.

If it weren't for Tara and her law background, Porter might be watching this year's Hawkeyes from off the field.

As a true senior last season, it seemed the team would lose Porter to graduation. But after reading through the NCAA rules and regulations, Tara, who was enrolled in a law school class called Legal Issues in Intercollegiate Athletics at the time, became convinced that Porter could earn another year of eligibility by taking a medical redshirt his sophomore season.

She took her case to the coaches, who put in the petition, and Porter eventually was granted the extra year.

"I'm not sure it would have happened if it weren't for her," Tara's father said.

Her father, along with his wife, Patti, says he liked David right from the start.

"I've always thought of him as a terrific guy," Richard said.

On top of that, they've also become big fans of their son-in-law and the Hawkeyes on the field.

"My wife didn't know much about football, but she is the biggest football fan in Iowa City right now," Richard said.

Both Fumertons have made it to every one of Iowa's home games this season.

"I wear his jersey to every game, and so does my husband," Patti said. "I'm really proud that he's my son-in-law."

Tara has attended every one of Porter's games this season, home and away.

She does not go easy on her husband, however, often finding room for improvement.

"She critiques me," Porter said. "She says, 'You're not aggressive enough. You should've finished on that play. What were you doing?'"

"I told the coaches, you guys are nothing compared with my wife."

On the other hand, Porter does not always let his wife get the best of him.

"I think he values my opinions on football," Tara said. "But he has no problem telling me I have no idea what I'm talking about."

Although Porter does have more responsibility than the average college athlete, and is very mature for his age, he still finds time to spend with his teammates.

"We all hang out together," Porter said. "We know when it's time to be serious, but most of the time, it's not time to be serious."

Offensive linemen Will Lack and Andy Lightfoot are also pre-med majors.

"It's going to be a long road," Porter said referring to medical school. "But I think it's going to be worth it."

Along with his hopes of a future in the medical field, Porter hopes for a possible NFL career.

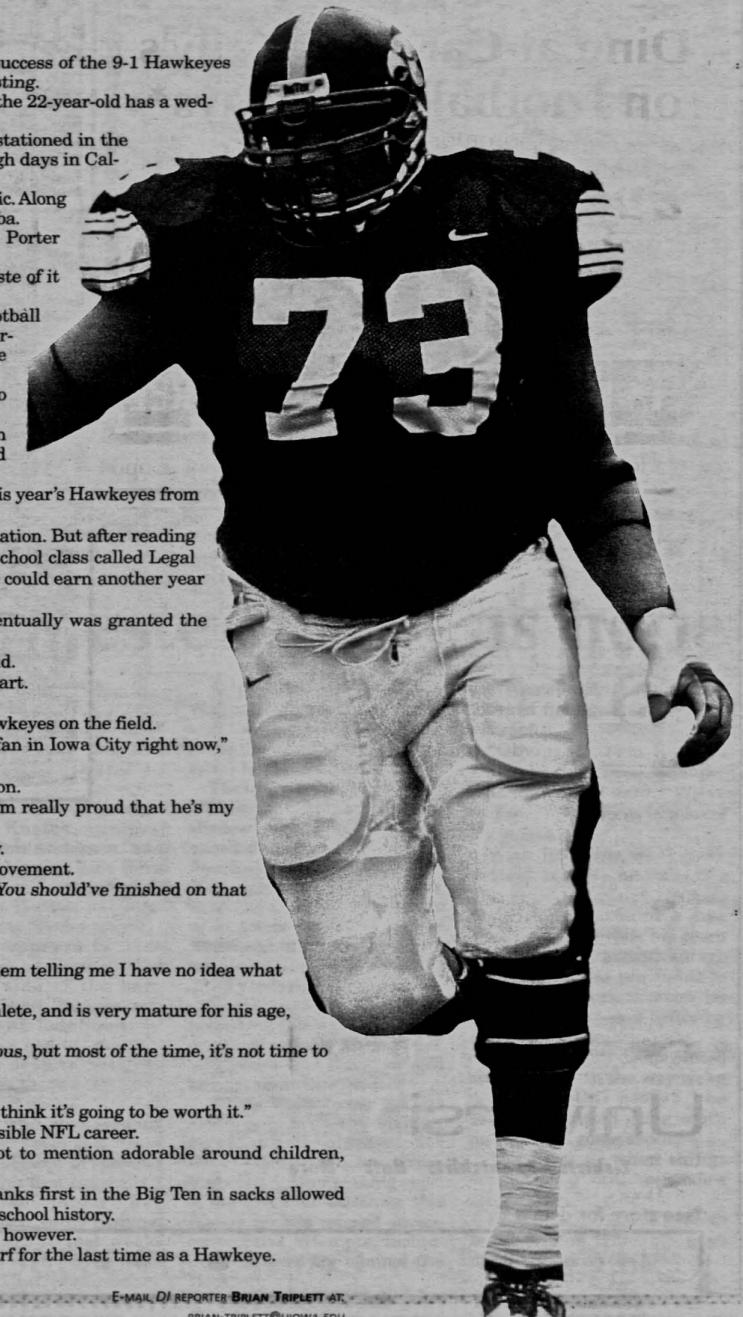

Don't forget that this musically talented, pre-med major husband — not to mention adorable around children, according to his wife — is gifted in football as well.

This season Porter is the starting right tackle for an offensive line that ranks first in the Big Ten in sacks allowed with 11 and is part of a team who is off to the best start in conference play in school history.

There is nothing his wife can do this time to bring him back one more year, however.

This weekend against Northwestern, Porter will officially set foot on the turf for the last time as a Hawkeye.

"The emotions that you feel, you can't even put them into words," he said.

IOWA FOOTBALL

A look back ... Iowa vs. Northwestern Nov. 10, 2001

Iowa's Joseph Uselman (right) and Derek Pagel bring down the Northwestern quarterback during last year's victory over the Wildcats.

The Hawkeyes turned in their most dominating performance of the 2001 campaign against Northwestern on Nov. 10 at Ryan Field.

Iowa jumped to a 21-0 first quarter lead and eventually went on to defeat the Wildcats, 59-16, to snap a two-game skid.

The Hawkeyes led 31-7 at halftime and scored four touchdowns in the third quarter to put to rest any doubts about the outcome of the game.

Northwestern, picked to win the Big Ten in the preseason, continued to struggle through conference play, allowing the Hawkeyes to run up 602 yards in total offense. The Wildcats went on to finish the season 4-7.

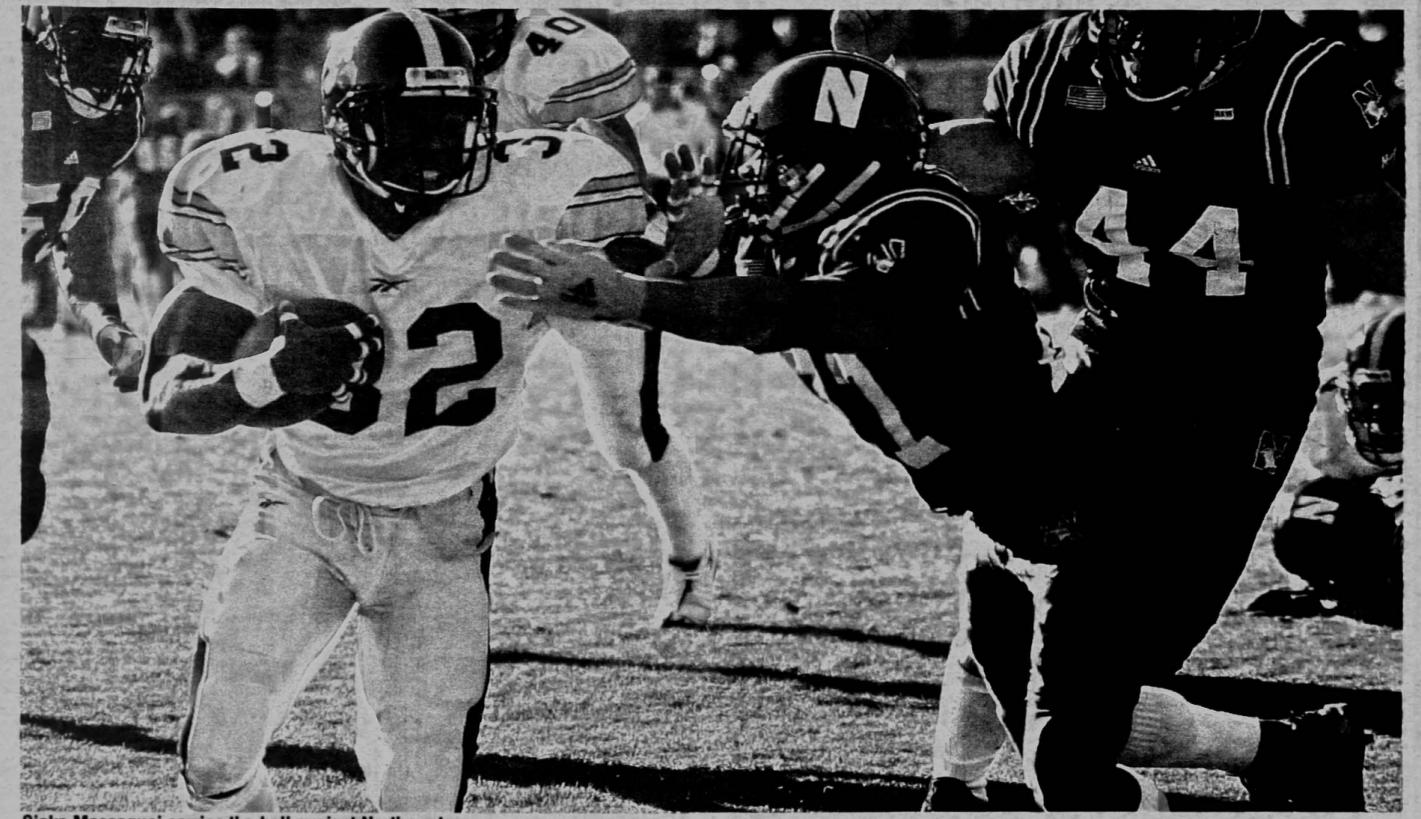

Ladell Betts, Aaron Greving, and Fred Russell all accumulated at least 50 yards rushing, and the Hawkeyes rolled up 297 rushing yards as a team.

Kahlil Hill and C.J. Jones combined for exactly 200 yards in receiving as both Kyle McCann and Brad Banks picked the Wildcats' defense apart.

Derek Pagel and Bob Sanders came up with interceptions on defense for the Hawkeyes, and Colin Cole recovered a fumble. Aaron Kampman led the Iowa effort on defense with 10 tackles, and the Hawkeyes held the Wildcats to just 256 yards of offense.

After time expired, a spontaneous celebration erupted in front of the Iowa fan section including high-fives from players and Banks waving an enormous flag emblazoned with the Tiger Hawk.

SCOUTING REPORT

Bottomfeeder Northwestern retains hope

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

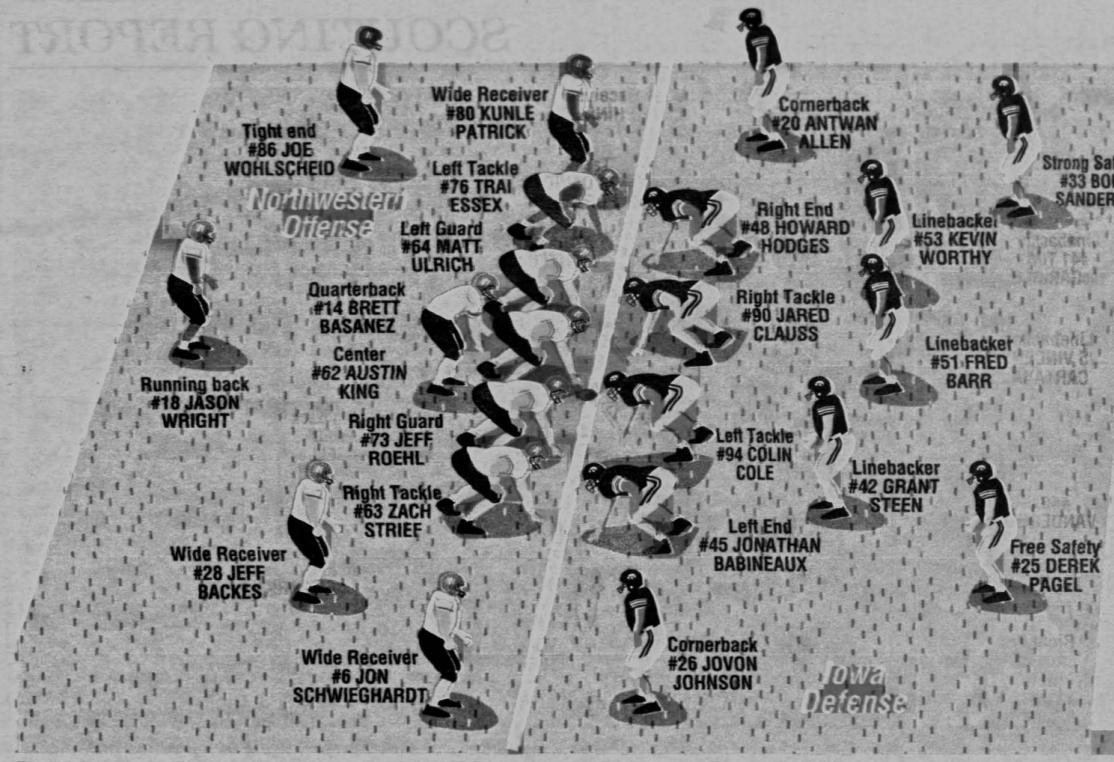

Better late than never. That seems to be the attitude Northwestern coach Randy Walker and the Northwestern Wildcats are taking during the waning weeks of Big Ten play. At 3-7, the Wildcats were the first Big Ten team to see their prospects for postseason play perish this season. Two non conference losses to Air Force and Texas Christian and an 0-5 start in league play ensured the Wildcats of that distinction. But there appears to be hope for Walker's beleaguered Cats. Northwestern broke out of its Big Ten funk last weekend to hang on for a gritty 41-37 victory over Indiana. Granted, at 3-6 the Hoosiers are far from a powerhouse themselves, but the victory did provide the Wildcats with a slight spark despite having just two games left to play in 2002. "In spite of ourselves, in spite of missing field goals, in spite of missing a point-after attempt — all this could have signaled a chance to decline, but it didn't," Walker said. "We did something about it." The missed field goal, a 22-yarder late in the game, and the missed extra point opened the door for a Hoosier rally but Indiana quickly went three-and-out on its next possession, and a poor punt handed the Cats the ball in Indiana territory. Five plays later, running back Jason Wright found the end zone, and Northwestern found a sense of relief with their first Big Ten victory. "We took some punches, but we answered back," Walker said. That bodes well for a Northwestern team that will need an all out effort when it faces off with No. 6 Iowa in Iowa City on Saturday. Still the late-season victory is a sign of hope for Walker, who will suffer his second-consecutive losing season in his fourth year in Evanston.

Unlike last season, when the Wildcats struggled to a 4-7 finish despite being the preseason pick to take the Big Ten, the team was expected to struggle in 2002. The graduation of quarterback Zak Kustok, running back Damien Anderson, and defensive stalwarts Billy Silva and Napoleon Harris left plenty of holes Walker knew he would have to fill this season. And he appears to have them filled, at least on the offensive side of the ball. Freshman Brett Basanez won the battle with Tony Stauss for the starting nod at quarterback and, despite battling injuries, has thrown for 1,647 yards in eight games. Wright, who also returns kicks, has emerged from Anderson's shadow in splendid fashion. In his first season as a starter, the junior has amassed 1,106 yards rushing, including 219 in last weekend's triumph over the Hoosiers. That performance earned him Big Ten offensive player of the week honors.

"What can I say about Jason Wright? He's playing awfully well," Walker said. "He's just a heck of a football player; I swear he has four eyes." Their performance on offense has helped to overshadow a young and inexperienced defense that features four freshman and two sophomores in its front seven. Opponents have scored an average of 40 points per game against Northwestern this season and are averaging an astounding 330.9 yards rushing per game. Northwestern should be helped out this weekend by the return of safeties Mark Roush and Dominique Price, as well as linebacker Braden Jones. Where Walker may not get much help is in the kicking game, where place-kicker David Wasielewski has struggled of late. After making eight of his first nine attempts this season he has missed seven-consecutive attempts, including a 40-yard try against the Hoosiers. Punter Brian Huffman didn't fare much better after replacing Wasielewski, blowing the 22-yard field goal in his only attempt. "Obviously, [our kicking game] has not been what we want," Walker said. "We've had some big misses in a lot of big games now." With just this weekend's contest at Iowa and the Big Ten finale against Illinois sandwiched around a bye week, Walker hopes his team will be able to take advantage of the time it has remaining to continue to work through its problems in hopes of bettering itself for next season. "I've been very disappointed sometimes with the way we've responded this season," he said. "We started going south and we kept going south." "On [Nov. 2] when things started going south we made a couple plays." Plays the Wildcats hope to build on and translate in to more success on the field.

John Morscheiser, II, TE
 The LaSalle, Ill., prep product saw his first action as a Hawkeye last season in Iowa's victory over Minnesota, which brought Floyd of Rosedale back to Iowa City, but he did not have any statistics. A multi-sport star in high school, he was named first team academic all-state his senior season at LaSalle-Peru Township.

Bruce Nelson, C
 Nelson has started every game Ferentz has coached at Iowa, a streak that currently stands at 46. After walking on to the team as a tight end in 1998 and redshirting, Nelson broke into Iowa's offensive line as a guard in 1999. He was moved to center for the 2001 season and has blossomed into one of the best at that position in the Big Ten. Nelson was a high-school teammate of junior line-backer Grant Steen at Emmetsburg.

Will Lack, OL
 Like fellow offensive lineman Hoveland, Lack saw his first playing time against Miami last season and has played sparingly this year. Ferentz says Lack spends as much time in the weight room as any of the starting scholarship players and is one of the team's hardest workers. The Nora Springs, Iowa, product was named offensive scout team MVP vs. Wisconsin in 1999.

Eric Steinbach, OL
 The most decorated of Iowa's offensive linemen, Steinbach is projected to be a first-day pick in this season's NFL draft. Steinbach earned first team All-Big Ten accolades last season, starting nine of Iowa's 12 games at left guard. A dislocated elbow kept him out of the Hawkeyes' final regular season game last year, but he returned to action in time for the Alamo Bowl.

Andy Lightfoot, OL
 Lightfoot may be the most unheralded of Iowa's immensely talented offensive linemen, but Ferentz says he's the smartest player on the team. That has a lot to do with the fact Lightfoot, a fifth-year senior, missed last season's spring game to take the medical-school entrance exams. He was an academic All-Big Ten selection in 2000 and 2001. He has rotated at right guard with fellow senior Ben Sobieski for most of this season.

Pete Traynor, OL
 Traynor has spent the last two seasons behind Nelson on the depth chart at center, seeing limited action in several games in both 2001 and 2002. He made his Iowa debut during Iowa's 2000 season opener against Kansas State, seeing extensive playing time at guard. His younger brother, John, is a junior defensive lineman at Iowa.

Derek Pagel, DB
 Pagel is another walk-on success story who, like Boleyn, once thought of leaving the Hawkeyes. After cutting his teeth on special teams, Pagel saw some action in the Iowa secondary in 2000 before playing in all 12 of Iowa's games last season. This season Pagel has 65 tackles and a team-high four interceptions. He was named Big Ten defensive player of the week honors following Iowa's victory over Michigan State this season.

Scott Webb, DL
 Webb attended Iowa Central for one season before transferring to Iowa in 2000. He played in parts of nine games last season for the Hawkeyes and has one tackle in six games thus far this season. He is the younger brother of former Hawkeye defensive lineman Chris Webb.

David Porter, OL
 Granted a fifth year of eligibility because of injuries that hampered him during both 1999 and 2000. A legitimate NFL prospect, Porter has been an anchor on Iowa's offensive line this season, starting every game for the Hawkeyes at right tackle. He earned second team All-Big Ten honors in 2001 after helping lead Iowa to the school's first bowl berth since 1997.

Densmore Molinaro Payne Raih

Adam Densmore, OL; Ryan Molinaro, RB; O. J. Payne, OL; David Raih, QB

Ben Sobieski, OL
 Like Porter, injuries plagued Sobieski throughout his Iowa career, which began in 1997. The sixth-year senior was one of only four true freshmen to play for the Hawkeyes when they went 7-5 and reached the Sun Bowl, starting one game that season. He started all 11 games in 1998 but has not been completely healthy since then until this season. He has split time with Lightfoot at right guard this season, seeing action in all of Iowa's games.

Densmore, Molinaro, and Payne have decided to forego using their redshirt seasons, making this their final season of eligibility. Raih, a junior from Edina, Minn., missed this season due to reconstructive shoulder surgery and will not be able to resume his football career at Iowa. He will remain with the team as a student assistant coach.

Badgers want rejuvenated offense, big game

BY DONOVAN BURBA
THE DAILY IOWAN

No. 3 Ohio State at Purdue:

With each successive week, it becomes less and less likely that the Buckeyes will lose. Playing without star halfback Maurice Clarett, Jim Tressel's squad seemed primed for an upset against Minnesota on Nov. 2 but instead blew out the Gophers, 34-3. Clarett, who suffered a shoulder stinger on Oct. 26 against Penn State, is probable for today's game. That alone would have been cause for worry earlier in the season, but Ohio State has proved it can win without the phenom.

The Buckeyes defense yielded just 112 yards last weekend, and backup halfbacks Lydell Ross and Maurice Hall combined for 182 rushing yards and three touchdowns. Purdue is coming off a bye week, and it brings the Big Ten's leading offense (449.3 yards per game) into the contest. Sophomore Kyle Orton has been on and off all year, carrying a less than stellar 10-to-6 TD/INT ratio.

His favorite target is John Standford, who is second in the conference in receiving yards per game (104.1). Both teams' defenses are solid, and this game will be closer than the standings suggest. Ohio State 31, Purdue 28

Illinois at Wisconsin:

Both the Fighting Illini and the Badgers look to resurrect their offenses after low-scoring efforts last weekend (Illinois lost, 18-7, to Penn State, Wisconsin fell, 20-3, to Iowa). Wisconsin suffered a big loss when starting halfback Anthony Davis was stabbed in the thigh by his ex-girlfriend.

Even if Davis doesn't play, Illinois' rush defense is so porous (203.6 yards allowed per game) that backup Dwayne Smith should still do some damage. Illinois' pass attack is the best in the conference, but it certainly didn't show against the Nittany Lions.

Wisconsin 21, Illinois 10

Michigan State at Indiana

Before the season started, this game had all the makings of a blowout. Then Michigan State decided to flush itself down the toilet.

Head coach Bobby Williams was fired Monday, leaving interim replacement Morris Watts without quarterback Jeff Smoker (suspended for substance abuse-related violations) and halfback Dawan Moss (dismissed after a drunken altercation with a traffic officer; insert Randy Moss joke here). Indiana lost a shootout to Northwestern last weekend, and overall, it has performed as expected; that is to say, not particularly well. Watts should give the Spartans a shot in the arm, and playing the Hoosiers certainly helps. Michigan State 17, Indiana 14

Virginia at No. 19 Penn State

The Big Ten's only nonconference game gives the Nittany Lions the chance to clinch their first winning season in three years. Halfback Larry Johnson is the conference's surprise rushing leader, and the Cavaliers' rush defense allows nearly 210 yards per game. On the flip side, the Lions have an unspectacular pass D, which Virginia, second in the ACC in passing, can take advantage of. Home field advantage will be the difference in this one.

Penn State 38, Virginia 31

No. 11 Michigan at Minnesota

The Golden Gophers suffered a huge setback last weekend, getting blown out by Ohio State, 34-3. It only gets a little easier for coach Glen Mason's team today. Don't let Michigan's two losses fool you: It's still an elite team.

Quarterback John Navarre looked NFL-caliber in a 49-3 romp over rival Michigan State on Nov. 2. Michigan 34, Minnesota 21

IOWA FOOTBALL

Iowa senior C.J. Jones cuts through the Michigan defense during the Hawkeyes' victory on Oct. 26.

Seniors survive to finally flourish

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

They came from various backgrounds and will take many different paths once the season is finished, but for the many seniors on the Iowa football team, they have at least two things in common with one another.

All 24 members of the Hawkeyes who will take the field for their final home game against Northwestern on Saturday are a part of one of the greatest turnarounds in Iowa football history. And they will always be Hawkeyes.

"Hopefully, it's just going to get better when we leave," said offensive lineman Andy Lightfoot. "The young guys will step in there and be even better than we are."

That's hoping for a lot because it would be hard to imagine a group of players that could possibly have as big of an impact as the 2002 seniors did.

They arrived on campus at different times, most as red-shirts in 1998, some as true freshmen in 1999, and one — offensive lineman Ben Sobieski — has lingered in Iowa City since 1997. But all stepped in to the same situation, and it wasn't a good one.

Iowa went 3-8 in 1998 during the last of head coach Hayden Fry's 20 seasons. Kirk Ferentz, who was an assistant under Fry during the 1980's returned to Iowa City to begin the rebuilding process. It was slow and at times painful to watch.

A young, inexperienced squad took plenty of lumps during that season. Many of today's seniors, such as linebacker Fred Barr, were thrown to the wolves as true freshmen.

"We had nothing to lose," Barr said.

Except for games, of which Iowa lost all but one in 1999.

"Until you live through a season where you go 1-10 or 3-9 where you experience loss to the fullest, you can't really truly enjoy or understand the excitement of a victory," said Iowa center Bruce Nelson. "Or understand how much hard work went in to it."

And in the end it was the hard work players such as Nelson, who has started every game under Ferentz, put in that made the difference. It wasn't always apparent on the field, where the Hawkeyes were often overpowered and out-manned by the opposition, but it was there.

"That's what makes the victories now so special," Nelson said.

Iowa rebounded to go 3-9 in 2000 with Big Ten victories over Michigan State, Penn State, and Northwestern. It wasn't pretty, but it was progress.

The following season the Hawkeyes had plenty of ups and downs en route to a 7-5 finish. They finished on a definite up with a 19-16 victory over Texas Tech in the Alamo Bowl, with the 2001 seniors promising the best was yet to come.

And it was. With just two games remaining in the regular season the Hawkeyes are poised to garner their first Big Ten championship since 1990 and a lot of the credit goes to the seniors on the team.

From transfers such as quarterback Brad Banks and wide receiver C.J. Jones, who spent just two years at Iowa, to players such as Barr and Colin Cole, who played as true freshmen, they are hungry to finish what they started what seems like ages ago.

Each one has their own unique story. Barr and Cole nearly left Iowa as true freshmen, both homesick for their native Florida.

Safeties Derek Pagel and Scott Boleyn also had second thoughts about ending their walk-on careers before both decided to stick things out. Lightfoot and fellow offensive linemen David Porter are eyeing careers in the medical world.

Porter and Sobieski, both of whom could have left Iowa after using up their eligibility, instead chose to petition for medical hardship waivers.

The National Football League will most likely call on offensive linemen Porter, Eric Steinbach, and Bruce Nelson as well as other members of the team to play on Sundays rather than Saturdays.

Still others such as Will Lack and Jason Hoveland, both walk-ons who rarely if ever saw game action, played integral parts in Iowa's success through their performances in countless practices. They paid their own way and paid their dues and are every bit as responsible for the state of the program today as any player with a scholarship.

At one point in time, most likely during those lean years of 1999 and 2000, each and every one of the 24 players taking the field today must have asked themselves if it was all worth it. This season has provided them with a resounding answer.

But one lingering question remained. Would they trade all of their experiences, the good and the bad, for anything in the world?

"I can't imagine that," Lightfoot said.

Saturday will be an emotional day at Kinnick Stadium. Banks said he wouldn't be surprised if he "broke off a tear or two" when he walked down the steps from the Iowa locker room and the team formed "the swarm" one last time. Even Barr, perhaps the toughest man on the team, said a breakdown was inevitable.

Ferentz declined to heap accolades on the senior class, just as he has with any other group of men playing their final game for him.

"Our players have been fantastic," he said. "I'm sorry to see all of them go."

But these of seniors have proved time and time again they don't need words or anything else to justify what they have accomplished. Their progress says it all.

"I listen to a lot of people come back and speak and they have a lot to say," Barr said. "But I don't think many of them helped take a team from 1-10 and reverse that to where we could be 11-1."

One more game for the road ...

For the first time in a long time, it will be something other than the lingering effects of lingering a while too long at the Wig and Pen on a Friday evening that will cause me to not want to stumble out of bed Saturday morning.

TODD BROMMELKAMP
Asst. Sports Editor

Tomorrow, you see, will mark the end of an era for me. Just as Iowa's seniors will take to the field at Kinnick Stadium for one final (and hopefully) glorious time, so, too, will I. I won't be on the field per se, but I will be attending my final Hawkeye home game as a student and member of the press.

Andy Lightfoot told me on Tuesday he got goosebumps at the mere thought of walking down the stairs and swarming out of the Iowa tunnel with his teammates one last time. And I guess sitting here now, working all night on our final edition of PreGame, I can understand where he's coming from.

Three years later I watched from the press box as Marquise Walker made an amazing catch to once again allow Michigan to eek out a victory over the Hawkeyes, and I wondered if it could get any worse. It did, and it certainly didn't take long, just a short trip to Ames three weeks later.

I won't be flying out of any tunnel in front of a near-capacity crowd; more likely I'll be fighting to catch my breath after walking up the multiple flights of stairs leading to what, ironically, is considered the first level of Kinnick Stadium's press box. But I will have just a touch of that same feeling coursing through my veins.

And now I ask myself if it can get any better once more, and I know it can. It's hard saying goodbye to anything, or anyone for that matter, but Kinnick Stadium will be a unique case. It's not going anywhere, and this certainly won't be my last Iowa game, but I know it will be for a while, and that bothers me. And not just because it means no more free meals on Saturdays.

Kahlil Hill returned the opening kickoff against Central Michigan for a touchdown during the first play of the 1998 season in Kinnick Stadium. I was standing in the front row on the goal line wondering if it could get any better. It wouldn't for a long time.

Maybe it's having been able to see so many other stadiums with such different crowds? Two weeks ago in Ann Arbor, I found myself looking around Michigan Stadium asking myself "This is what all the fuss is about?"

Either way, I suspect it makes what has happened thus far in 2002 all the more special. Whether you're a senior on the field, in the band, in the stands, or in the press box, you can look back on the last four years and then to the current one and know that you witnessed something truly special.

Seasons like this one don't come around too often, unless you live in Ann Arbor or Columbus, and even then they're still special. Just the thought of having been able to be a part of it brings shivers down my spine. And the thought of it ending almost brings a tear to my eye. (Unless you are a sensitive, single young woman, in which case it most certainly did bring a tear to my eye.)

In conversing back and forth via e-mail with a former colleague of mine fighting to survive in the "real world," I commented on how this job drives me crazy sometimes. Her reply was simple, yet profound.

"Just remember you have the greatest job in the world," she told me.

I don't know about that, but this year it sure seems like it. At least for a few more weeks. Or until I have to climb those damn steps Saturday.
