Hawk apparel flying as high as Hawks

BY ALEXIS GRUND
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Hawkeye logo is in high demand from companies all over the country rushing to put it on everything from apparel to beer steins and teddy bears this Christmas season. Those companies, hoping to cash in on the buzz created by the football team's great year, are flooding the UI Licensing Department with phone calls for permission to use the university's federally registered trademarks.

"Business has been nuts," said Dale Arens, the director of the department. "The impact of the team being so good has had a ripple effect on the travel industry, clothing vendors, everyone."

It also might mean more money for the university, which receives 7.5 percent of merchandise sales involving one of its logos. Between 400 and 500 companies typically have licensing agreements with the university, netting around $500,000 per year. If a license between two or more vendors is involved, royalty rates can be higher, Arens said. Companies must get license approval from both the UI and the Big Ten to create and sell a product using images associated with each organization.

The football team ended its regular season with an 8-0 conference record, guaranteeing the Hawks at least a tie for the Big Ten championship.

Last weekend's victory over Minnesota, which improved the Hawkeyes' chances for a Rose Bowl appearance, fueled already high local sales of Hawk merchandise.

George Herbert, the general manager of the University Book Store in the IMU and the Hawk Shop in Coralville, said enthusiasm has skyrocketed for Big Ten championship apparel.

"We've definitely seen a pick-up in sales," he said. "Our merchandise is up everywhere — on our Web site, on-campus, and off-campus. We've even run out of some sizes and styles in clothing already."

Frat starts holiday early with free bird

BY LAURA JENSEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Gathered in the basement of the Wesley Center for an early Thanksgiving dinner, underprivileged members of the community feasted on a free meal of turkey and green-bean casserole provided by the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity.

Ollie Habhab, a homeless Iowa City resident who ran for City Council in 2001, occasionally eats lunch at the center and said he thinks the Thanksgiving dinner is a "really good idea."

The Gary, Ind., native is a World War II Navy veteran who moved to Iowa City in 1998 to receive kidney treatment at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center.

The seventh-annual dinner, which was open to everyone, ran from 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. At noon, approximately 20 people ate their meals and casually socialized. The fraternity expected anywhere from 50-200 attendees.

"This is the first time I've been to the Thanksgiving dinner, and they have very good food," said Devine Axton, who is a regular at the Wesley Center's daily free meals. "They've also got some really nice people working here."

Other patrons echoed Axton's sentiments, except for one who said the turkey was a "little dry."

The Wesley Center runs a free-lunch program every day, and it allowed Phi Beta Sigma to use the building and take the service over for the day.

Five members of the fraternity spent the afternoon handing out the dinner they prepared themselves. Phi Beta Sigma received help from one other fraternity, Sigma Lambda Beta, and two sororities, Sigma Lambda Gamma, and Zeta Phi Beta.

"I like seeing the smiles on their faces," said Mitchell Blackburn, a fraternity member who passed out food. "They see food that's homemade and food that's good, and they appreciate it. I think it makes their day."

The fraternity holds a sleep-out each year on the Thursday and Friday of

Bono to speak on AIDS at UI

BY AMIR EFRATI
THE DAILY IOWAN

International humanitarian and award-winning musician Bono will speak at the IMU Main Lounge on Dec. 2 at 7 p.m., the University Lecture Committee announced Thursday.

In a speech titled "Heart of America: Africa's Future and Ours," the Irish-born singer will discuss the HIV/AIDS crisis in Africa, committee members said.

Starting today at 11 a.m., 1,600 free tickets to the event will be given away — one per person — at the University Box Office, committee members said.

In recent years, Bono has become a highly respected and shrewd political advocate for numerous causes.

"Most musicians have a cause, but Bono pursues his more aggressively and realistically," said Dan Rossi, the committee chairman, citing the singer's recent tour of Africa with U.S. Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill.

The UI Hospital and Clinic's connection with AIDS research was a possible reason that Bono chose the UI during his brief U.S. tour, Rossi said.

Lecture Committee event coordinator Patrick Finn said Bono has used the name recognition from his Grammy-award winning rock band, U2, to raise awareness about Third World suffering. In March, President Bush pledged $5 billion in aid to the world's poorest countries, signifying an important political victory for Bono and AIDS activists who had fought for the aid package.

"He's pushing countries to change their policies to place AIDS and Third World debt at the forefront of their agendas," Finn said.

As ambassador of Jubilee 2000, a movement dedicated to erasing the public debt of 52 of the world's poorest countries, Bono has met with Pope John Paul II, former President Clinton, and U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan. In 2002, he founded DATA (Debt, Aid, Trade for Africa).

Ticket holders are not guaranteed seats in the Main Lounge on Dec. 2; they will be admitted on a first-come, first-served basis until the 1,100-seat capacity is reached. There is limited standing room.

An additional 800 people will be able to watch a live video feed in the IMU's second-floor ballroom, and the committee is working to transmit the feed to additional rooms in the IMU. Details of the lecture, including other possible speakers that night, are still being worked on, committee members said, adding that some seats at the Main Lounge will be reserved for state and local AIDS activists and researchers.

Bono, who will be the guest on "Larry King Live" on Dec. 1 to mark World AIDS Day, will not charge an honorarium fee for the lecture.

NATO reorganizes for global war on terrorism

BY KAREN DeYOUNG AND KEITH B. RICHBURG
WASHINGTON POST

PRAGUE, Czech Republic — The North Atlantic Treaty Organization formally left behind the 20th century Thursday, as leaders of the military alliance signed off on a major transformation designed to confront the 21st-century threats of terrorism and the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction far beyond the West European borders that NATO was created to defend.

In a second stage of post-Cold War enlargement that will expand the alliance's frontiers to the shores of the Baltic and Black Seas, the summit also invited seven East European nations to join, including Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia, the first former Soviet republics to join.

Reflecting their new priorities, NATO leaders issued a

Free speech collides with slurs at Harvard

BY JENNIFER PETER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Harvard Law School is considering a ban on offensive speech after a series of racially charged incidents, raising fears that the rules will inhibit the kind of sharp-edged intellectual combat so famously depicted in the movie The Paper Chase.

In the meantime, the school is also offering first-year students a new course to help them "manage difficult conversations" and learn how to speak with sensitivity on touchy issues such as ethnicity and sex.

The speech-code proposal has stirred an intense internal debate about the commitment to freedom of expression at a school whose illustrious alumni have helped define the nation's free-speech rights. Some are wondering whether a campus renowned for its bare-knuckled, confrontational style of teaching is getting a little touchy-feely.

"What I do find amazing is that it should be considered at a law school, any law school, because one thing that law schools do is study the constitution, and these codes are clearly in violation of the First Amendment," said Harvey Silverglate, a Harvard Law graduate and civil-liberties litigator.

Members of the Black Law Students Association, which called for the policy, say it is possible to curb chronically offensive behavior without infringing on the First Amendment.

"We've called for a discriminatory/harassment policy that would basically punish or at least give the administration some way to review harassing behavior," said Joshua Bloodworth, a third-year student and the president of the organization. "We're not trying to stop free speech."

The Committee on Healthy Diversity — made up of six faculty, six students, and three law-school staff members — will make its recommendations in the spring. Any code would be subject to approval by the full faculty.

There are approximately 1,800 students at Harvard Law; around 28 percent are minorities.

Sharing, interacting guide confab

BY JOE NUGENT
THE DAILY IOWAN

Sharing black history and culture will be the central theme for students attending the Second Annual Black Student Union Conference this weekend at the UI.

"Bigger, Better, Blacker" includes student workshops today and Saturday and a keynote address by Tracie Melvin, the manager of the African-American Cultural Center, at 1:15 p.m. Saturday. All events take place at the IMU.

The workshops will feature important aspects of black culture and practical advice for black students, Melvin said.

"There's a little bit of everything, like how to survive on a predominantly white campus, career options, how to handle your finances, and how to handle yourself if someone makes a racist comment," she said.

Krystal Jossell, the president of the Black Student Union, said the workshops will try to foster more involvement and input from black students to further strengthen the black community at the UI.

The workshops will be led by university professors who are black and black professionals employed at local businesses, Melvin said. The "Know Your Heritage Bowl," at 8 p.m. today, is a chance for students to win prizes for answering questions related to black history and culture, she said.

Melvin called it "frustrating" that the campus is full of people from all ethnicities but there is not much interaction. She said black students usually participate in events like UI Homecoming, but white students often don't attend events sponsored by the Black Student Union.

"I don't think African-American students are experiencing racism on campus," she said. "But white students often don't have experience interacting with us. Sometimes they don't want to say anything wrong, so they don't say anything at all. That causes feelings of isolation for black students."

Melvin said the events this weekend would be a good way for students of all backgrounds to gain a better understanding of blacks.

"Some students might feel they shouldn't come to an event called 'Bigger, Better, Blacker,' but everyone is welcome," she said.

City puts new water plant through its paces

BY GRANT SCHULTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Start-up plans for Iowa City's new water-treatment plant are in the works as utility workers ready the facility for public use, the city manager announced Thursday.

City officials initiated preliminary tests on the plant's equipment approximately two weeks ago, ensuring that the system works properly, and they will soon begin cycling water through the plant from and back into the Iowa River, said City Manager Steve Atkins. The city will not release the water into its main supply, however, until a later, undetermined date.

"We run each system independently and then together to ensure that everything works," said Atkins, adding that the process could take several months. Rushing the process could affect water quality, he added.

Set for completion within

the next 30 days, the plant, 2551 N. Dubuque St., was built in an effort to protect the city's water and was placed strategically near several underground water sources and the river. A manmade lake on the plant site will also act as a source.

The $25 million state-of-the-art facility, part of a $90 million water-improvement package that also replaces sewer pipes and drainage systems, will purify water through a lime-softening system that will reduce minerals such as calcium by half. The process also reduces herbicides and pesticides while eliminating tastes and odors.

Chuck Schmadeke, the city's public-works director, said he doesn't anticipate any problems with the testing process or scheduled opening.

"Construction went smoothly, and I don't foresee delays," he said. "We're just getting ready to go."

City officials have also created a public-information campaign for the facility, including posters, handouts, displays, videos, bill stuffers that highlight anticipated water-quality changes, and Internet information about the anticipated effects, Atkins said Thursday in a memo to the City Council.

Sometime in the future, as the tests are completed and any necessary adjustments are made, the city will notify residents when they can expect the newly treated water, Atkins said, adding that no exact date is available.

Most UI buildings receive water from the university's treatment plant, but a few buildings, such as the Mayflower Residence Hall, tap into the city's supply because of their location away from the plant.

The city's Water Division serves approximately 62,000 people with more than 21,000 customer service connections. Historically, the city has used the Iowa River as an important source, but the new facility will draw a larger percentage of its supply from nearby aquifers.

Jury convicts Foster of burglary, deadlocked again on sex abuse

After roughly five hours of deliberations, a 12-member jury convicted Antonio Foster of second-degree burglary but remained deadlocked at 10-2 on a felony sexual-abuse charge.

It is the second time that Johnson County jurors have ended with a hung jury in this case. The alleged victim said she would be willing to go through another trial.

A date for a possible third trial had not been set as of Thursday afternoon.

Foster, 30, will be sentenced on Jan. 10 for the burglary charge; he faces a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

He was accused of raping a Ramada Inn hotel clerk in July of 2001 and stealing $50 from her purse.

The Coralville man is accused in a string of sex-related offenses in the area, including incidents at the UI Field House and Barnes & Noble Booksellers in the Coral Ridge Mall.

POLICE LOGS

William Jeffery Shockley, 18, Cedar Rapids, was charged Thursday with unlawful possession of a prescription drug. The incident allegedly occurred at 12:13 a.m. at the intersection of Clinton and College streets.

Tyra Tashelle Pittman, 18, 2430 Muscatine Ave. No. 28, was charged Thursday with assault causing injury stemming from an alleged incident at the Senior High Alternative Center. Pittman allegedly began arguing with a 17-year-old student over a boyfriend and struck her once before teachers intervened. The girl sustained a swollen, red left eye, according to court reports.

Rachel Carman, 18, 10 Ealing Drive, was charged Thursday with second-degree theft. Carman was a cashier at Target in the Coral Ridge Mall from July until August of 2002. She allegedly stole $1,806 from her drawer and allegedly admitted to taking money after she was captured on video.

CITY BRIEF

Co-op wrestles with worker/director issue

The New Pioneer Co-op Board of Directors met Wednesday to discuss whether a new board member, also a store employee, has conflicting interests and should be permitted to keep his seat.

Newly elected board member Mike Brannin now works as the food-service manager for the natural-foods store.

"In principle, it's a good thing," said board member Shelton Stromquist.

"It's just new territory."

In 1997, New Pioneer employee Cynthia Kay was elected to the board but resigned her position as a cashier in order to serve as a director.

Attorney John Hayek, representing Brannin, told the board that nothing in the governing laws prevents an employee from serving as a board member, he said.

Brannin said 60 to 70 percent of the country allow staff members to serve on the board of directors. However, he admitted that there are a couple of areas where he'll have to recuse himself because of conflicts of interest. One such area is the board's oversight of New Pioneer's general manager, Brannin's superior.

New Pioneer Board President Derek Maurer appointed a subcommittee to propose a set of guidelines on how to deal with the situation. The committee's findings will be presented at the next board meeting on Dec. 18.

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, an alleged key planner of the attack on the USS Cole and one of the most wanted Al Qaeda fugitives, has been captured and is undergoing interrogation by the United States at a secret location abroad, government officials said Thursday.

Al Nashiri, also known as Abu Asim al Makki, is described by U.S. government officials as a 15-year associate of Osama bin Laden and a mastermind of attacks at sea. In addition to the October 2000 Cole bombing, which killed 17 U.S. sailors, he is suspected of plotting attacks on the USS Sullivans the same year and on U.S. and British warships in the Strait of Gibraltar earlier this year. Both operations were thwarted.

Al Nashiri was apprehended three weeks ago and is under CIA control, senior administration officials said. They would not disclose where al Nashiri had been captured, but one knowledgeable source said he was taken into custody outside Yemen, where U.S. and Yemeni counter-terrorism forces had mounted a determined hunt for him.

News of al Nashiri's capture comes less than three weeks after a dramatic precision missile attack from an unmanned CIA drone that killed another Yemeni-based Al Qaeda leader.

Abu Ali al-Harithi and five associates were killed Nov. 3 as their vehicle sped along a remote highway in Yemen.

Government sources disclosed last week that a high-level Al Qaeda operative had been captured. But sources said that al-Nashiri's identity and details of his apprehension were not disclosed then because he had information about recently planned terrorist strikes and the whereabouts of other key operatives whom the government wanted to quietly pursue.

Al Nashiri's apprehension and Harithi's death mark important successes in the U.S. war on Al Qaeda's leadership, terror experts said, at a time when Democrats and others have questioned the effectiveness of the administration's war on terror. While a recent audiotape appears to confirm that bin Laden is still alive, other leaders may be forced to keep moving because apprehended Al Qaeda members have been providing information about them, officials said.

Among the key figures in custody is Ramzi Binalshibh, one of the coordinators of the Sept. 11 attacks on the United States, who was captured in Pakistan in September. Sources said he is providing information about Al Qaeda operations coordinator Khalid Sheik Mohammed, considered a top planner of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

Chilly group protests Wal-Mart labor practices

BY PAULA MAVROUDIS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Shivering protesters picketed outside the Coralville Wal-Mart Super Center on Thursday night as part of a nationally recognized day to campaign against the retailer's business practices.

The activists, dressed in warm clothing topped with yellow vests advocating their cause, called for better wages, benefits, and equal treatment of workers and maintaining a safe working environment. The group also wants the $218 billion company to engage in fair business practices by not setting predatory prices that drive competitors out of business and to end its trade in goods with those who employ child, forced, and slave laborers.

Patrick Hughes, the president of the Iowa City Federation of Labor, which led the picket, said this protest is only the first step in a long battle against the company.

"We've been asked by the [United Food and Commercial Workers] to be here," Hughes said during the protest, dubbed People's Campaign-Justice @ Wal-Mart. "We will do what they need done until they reach a nationwide response."

Hughes clutched a "Code of Ethics" outlining the group's demands of the discount chain, a corporation that advertises with yellow smiley faces.

"I can't stand what Wal-Mart has done to their workers," said protester Roberta Till-Retz. "We are trying to shame Wal-Mart and alert the public—in a nonviolent way."

Wal-Mart managers refused comment.

The company has been the target of lawsuits alleging unfair treatment of its workers for years. The stores are battling nearly 40 state and federal lawsuits filed by workers, which accuse the company of making employees work overtime without pay. None of the approximately 1 million workers at Wal-Marts across the country belongs to a union.

The activists, which started out with 12 members, began protesting around 4 p.m.; they were asked by store management several times to leave the storefront. Each protester held a sign, reading "Provide Equal Treatment" and "Engage in Fair Business Practices."

"We had an agreement with Wal-Mart that we'd be allowed to picket in front of the store," Hughes said. "But the manager

They moved into the parking lot and eventually to the sidewalk across the street from Steak N Shake, at which point a Wal-Mart manager approached the freezing group and offered cups of hot chocolate.

"Wal-Mart gave in to our first demand; they brought us hot chocolate," Till-Retz said. "Now, we need to get our other demands met. They need to treat their workers like human beings."

Miss World comment sparks riot

BY GLENN MCKENZIE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAGOS, Nigeria — Angry mobs stabbed and set fire to bystanders Thursday in rioting that erupted after a newspaper suggested Islam's founding prophet would have approved of the Miss World beauty pageant. At least 50 people were killed and 200 injured, Nigeria's Red Cross president said.

The violent demonstrators in the northern city of Kaduna burned churches and rampaged through the streets until hundreds of soldiers were deployed to restore calm and enforce a dusk-to-dawn curfew.

"A lot of people died. We don't know yet exactly how many... more than 50," said Emmanuel Ijewere, the president of the Nigerian Red Cross.

Street demonstrations began Wednesday with the burning of an office of ThisDay newspaper in Kaduna after it published an article questioning Muslim groups that have condemned the Miss World pageant, scheduled to be held Dec. 7 in the Nigerian capital, Abuja.

Muslim groups say the pageant promotes sexual promiscuity and indecency.

"What would [the prophet] Muhammad think? In all honesty, he would probably have chosen a wife from among them [the contestants]," Isioma Daniel wrote in a Nov. 16 article.

The newspaper ran a brief front-page apology on Monday, followed by a more lengthy retraction on Thursday, saying the offending passage had run by mistake.

In Thursday's rioting, more than 50 people were stabbed, bludgeoned, or burned to death, and 200 were seriously injured, Ijewere told the Associated Press.

At least four churches were destroyed, he said.

Many of the bodies were taken by Red Cross workers and other volunteers to local mortuaries. Many people remained inside homes that were set afire by the demonstrators, Ijewere said.

Vilsack: Iowa schools face tough choices in lean times

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Gov. Tom Vilsack warned local school officials that "difficult choices" lie ahead because of the state's budget crunch, but he said he would protect education from the worst of the cuts.

"Our top priority from a budget standpoint is going to be the education of our children," Vilsack told a convention of the Iowa Association of School Boards. "There's not a great deal of certainty I can provide."

Early estimates warn that the state may face a budget shortfall of up to $400 million when the Legislature convenes in January, and both Vilsack and Republicans, who have a majority in the Legislature, have ruled out a tax increase.

That makes another round of budget cuts a virtual certainty, and with education amounting to 60 percent of the state's budget, schools can't escape entirely.

"I can't and I won't tell you that there aren't going to be difficult choices we have to make," Vilsack said.

The governor will work over the next six weeks on a proposed state budget to be delivered to the Legislature shortly after it convenes Jan. 13.

Vilsack said the budget crunch facing Iowa is not nearly as deep as that facing other states, many of which have raised taxes or completely depleted reserve funds.

The governor used his speech to push his plan to set a goal of having 90 percent of the state's work force have at least two years of post-high school training.

The governor also said he was setting the same 90 percent goal for children to have access to preschool programs, building on the successful expansion of all-day kindergarten.

A dozen years ago, 24 percent of the state's children attended all-day kindergarten and the state launched an effort to expand those offerings. Currently, more than 90 percent of the state's kindergarten students attend all day, and Vilsack said that's paying off.

"It is now reflecting itself in better performance in those early grades," he said.

He cast the expansion of college offerings in economic-development terms, saying upgrading the state's work force is key to luring new high-tech industries to the state.

"Just think what that would do to the economy of this state," Vilsack said. "What a tremendous boost that would give."

Reject status quo, leaders say

BY MIKE GLOVER

DES MOINES — Urban business leaders asked the Legislature on Thursday to revamp the state's highway funding, increase economic development spending, and expand the Vision Iowa program.

"We think we can be a catalyst for change," said Dan Huber of Davenport, one of the leaders of the Iowa Chamber Alliance. "We need to reject the status quo and accept some calculated risk."

The group, which represents Chambers of Commerce in 17 cities, held a Statehouse news conference to outline its agenda for the next legislative session, which convenes in January.

The business leaders say the state's population has become stagnant and new priorities need to be set to encourage economic growth.

Perhaps the most controversial proposal would scrap the state's highway-funding formula and spend more money on high-traffic highways. That would drain money from rural-road projects.

"The basic idea is simple," said Ron Corbett of Cedar Rapids, a former House Speaker. "Shift more dollars to frequently traveled roads, with fewer dollars going to less-traveled roads."

He rejected suggestions that would aggravate a rural-urban rift in the Legislature, saying the major highway corridors link the state together.

"Those corridors are so critical," Corbett said. "They link rural and urban Iowa together."

Currently, 47.5 percent of the state's highway construction spending goes to state highways. The business group wants that increased to 50 percent.

The formula for spending highway construction funds — largely coming from gasoline-tax dollars — was approved in 1949 and hasn't been changed significantly since that time, Corbett said.

"Roads should be where the traffic demand is," he said.

The state's Vision Iowa program uses gambling profits to help local officials build big new tourism projects, and the business leaders called for an additional $30 million to be invested into the program.

They also said local governments should be streamlined and economic development spending increased to help jump-start the state's economy.

"Iowans need to be able to create new, different types of local governments, not just fewer of the same local governments we have now," said Suki Cell of the Cedar Rapids Chamber of Commerce.

Mike Blouin of the Greater Des Moines Partnership said the business leaders will be active in pushing their agenda when lawmakers convene in January.

"We're very serious about these four initiatives," he said.

MADD lowers Iowa's OWI grade

BY MIKE GLOVER

DES MOINES — The state's ranking in efforts to combat drunk driving and underage drinking fell slightly in a new report from Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

The state earned a "C" for its efforts, down from a "B-" in a similar report in 2000. MADD cited Iowa lawmakers' refusal to lower blood-alcohol levels that bring automatic drunken-driving convictions and called on lawmakers to toughen penalties for repeat offenders.

"Our state's lower grade reflects the critical need for attention and action to a problem that affects us all," said Bill

One third of Americans will be involved in an alcohol-related crash at some point in their lives.

Jan Beckstrom
GuideOne Representative

Shackelford of the Polk County MADD group.

Gov. Tom Vilsack got the highest grade in the group's ranking, getting a "B+" for his efforts to combat drunk driving. He has pushed to toughen the blood-alcohol level that brings an automatic conviction from the current 0.10 percent to 0.08 percent.

The governor has pushed that level throughout his first term, and he has said he will again include lowering the blood-alcohol level in his next legislative package.

The group noted that 155 people were killed last year in alcohol-related crashes in Iowa.

The ranking was released at a Statehouse news conference; the effort was partially underwritten by West Des Moines-based GuideOne Insurance.

"One third of Americans will be involved in an alcohol-related crash at some point in their lives," said Jan Beckstrom of GuideOne.

Biopharmaceuticals spark criticism

BY AMY LORENTZEN

AMES — A public forum on whether pharmaceutical crops should be grown in the Corn Belt pitted farmer against farmer and government official against scientist Thursday at Iowa State University.

In what was sometimes a heated exchange of questions and comments, government officials and academics tried to clear up what newly proposed federal guidelines could mean for farmers, the agriculture industry, and Iowa State's research into the bioengineered plants, which can be used to produce medicines.

The proposed guidelines were issued jointly in September by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service and the Food and Drug Administration. They call for farmers and drug manufacturers to not plant the pharmaceutical crops in regions of food and feed production to prevent contamination.

"We are looking at this as serious pharmaceutical manufacturing, not just growing food crops," Keith Webber, with the FDA's Center for Biologics Evaluation, told the group of approximately 150.

He was grilled on how the crops would be kept from contaminating food- and feed-producing plants.

He called the government's stand on the proposed guidelines a "zero-tolerance policy."

However, questions remained whether the crops can be grown safely even with government guidelines.

"Growing crops anywhere in the Corn Belt means they are going to get into the food supply," said George Naylor, a member of the National Family Farm Coalition. "I question the ability of the government to regulate it properly."

Naylor, who farms 470 acres of corn and soybean near Churdan, said he already has other types of biotech corn from his neighbors' fields contaminating his own and feels that the same would happen with the pharmaceutical crops.

NATION BRIEFS

Economy may be stabilizing, U.S. says

NEW YORK (AP) — A yardstick of U.S. economic activity was unchanged in October, halting a decline that began in June and suggesting the nation's poor financial health may be stabilizing.

Separately, the Labor Department said Thursday that weekly jobless claims fell to their lowest level in four months.

The news helped the Dow rise more than 222 points to close at its highest level in three months.

The Dow closed at 8,845.15, up 2.6 percent, after its biggest one-day gain since Oct. 11. The Nasdaq had an even bigger percentage gain, rising 3.4 percent to 1,467.55.

The nation's gradually improving employment outlook helped offset weaker consumer attitudes last month, leaving the Conference Board's Index of Leading Economic Indicators flat at 111.4. It fell a revised 0.4 percent in September.

Kennedy pitches health-care plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Renewing his call for universal health care, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., is offering a plan to provide coverage to millions of uninsured Americans.

"It is unacceptable that any American is uninsured. Quality, affordable health insurance for every American is a matter of simple justice," Kennedy said in a speech prepared for Thursday night at the Harvard School of Public Health. "The time is long overdue for America to join the rest of the industrial world in recognizing this fundamental right."

Kennedy said he planned to introduce legislation when the new Congress convenes in January that would require all employers with more than five workers to provide health insurance for employees and their dependents. The coverage would have to be as good as that provided for federal employees. For those with low incomes, the government would offer subsidies to help pay premiums.

Kennedy's office estimated that the employer requirement would insure 80 percent of the nation's 41 million uninsured. For those who work for extremely small companies or are unemployed, Kennedy's proposal sets up a program similar to Medicare to offer coverage. Co-payment would be based on an individual's ability to pay.

U.S. Army soldiers drive a Humvee along the highway south of Kuwait City, near the area where two American soldiers were shot by a Kuwaiti policeman earlier on Thursday.

Kuwait attack injures 2 GIs

BY PETER BAKER
WASHINGTON POST

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — A Kuwaiti policeman shot and seriously wounded two U.S. soldiers Thursday while they were driving between bases in the strategic Persian Gulf state, calling renewed attention to the region's building tensions over the prospect of war against Iraq.

The police officer opened fire on the soldiers about 10:30 a.m. after pulling them over on the highway between their main headquarters at Camp Doha and Arifjan, a Kuwaiti base where U.S. forces have been deployed. The U.S. soldiers, who were armed, did not return fire, a U.S. military spokesman said. They drove the rest of the way to Arifjan, where they were taken by helicopter to a military hospital. The soldiers, whose names were not released, were listed in serious but stable condition.

"One of the soldiers was shot in the face and the other in the shoulder," the spokesman said by telephone from Kuwait. "Neither of the injuries appears life-threatening."

The spokesman said no motive was established for the attack, but a joint investigation was begun with Kuwaiti authorities. Approximately 10,000 U.S. troops are stationed in Kuwait; they would play a critical role in any invasion of Iraq.

The incident was the latest in a string of attacks on American or other Western targets in the Middle East. In recent weeks, attackers have bombed a French oil tanker off Yemen, shot and killed a U.S. Marine in Kuwait, and assassinated a U.S. diplomat in Jordan. Here in Saudi Arabia on Wednesday, a gunman burst into a McDonald's restaurant a few miles from a base used by U.S. forces and set it afire during daylight hours, when Muslims fasting for Ramadan would not be there. No one was injured, Saudi authorities said.

At the NATO summit in Prague, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld speculated that it was possible the incident in Kuwait had nothing to do with the escalating confrontation with Iraq. But Kuwaiti Defense Minister Jabir Mubarak Hamad Sabah seemed to assume the incident stemmed from a strain of anti-American sentiment in a country that has been a strong U.S. ally since the United States led an international coalition to liberate it from Iraqi invaders in 1991.

"This incident is alien to Kuwaiti society, and the people share the government's position about seeking help from the American forces to bolster Kuwait's security and independence," the minister told the state news agency. "No individual or individuals involved in criminal acts can change this fact and impose their sick objectives on Kuwait."

Relatives of 13-year-old Hodaya Asaraf cry as her body is taken away for burial at a funeral home in Jerusalem on Thursday. She was one of the 11 passengers killed when a Palestinian man wearing a bomb belt blew himself up a Jerusalem city bus.

Bus bomber kills 11 Israelis

BY NICOLE WINFIELD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — A 13-year-old Israeli girl who loved to draw was buried at sunset Thursday on a Jerusalem hilltop, one of 11 people killed when a Palestinian man blew himself up on a crowded bus. Four of the dead were children.

It was the first attack in Jerusalem since August, and the bomber's hometown — Bethlehem — braced for retaliation, which began early today when Israeli troops moved into the city, surrounding the Church of the Nativity. Israeli military spokesman Doron Spielman said the goal was to prevent gunmen from seeking refuge in the church.

Hours earlier, the army ordered residents of about 30 homes in el-Khader, on the outskirts of Bethlehem, to leave their homes so the army could take up positions, residents said.

Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, who met with his Defense minister and other officials, decided the army would carry out a "pinpoint operation," which would include entering Bethlehem, Sharon adviser Raanan Gissin said.

Two militant Islamic groups claimed responsibility for Thursday morning's bomb attack: Islamic Jihad and Hamas. Gissin said Hamas would be the group targeted.

Hamas participated in talks with Egypt and Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement to negotiate a freeze on Palestinian attacks at least until Israel's Jan. 28 election. A first round of talks in Cairo ended inconclusively.

A continuation of bombings and shootings would strengthen Israel's right-wing parties going into the elections.

The four dead children were two 13-year-olds, an 8-year-old boy who died along with his grandmother, and a 16-year-old boy whose mother also was killed.

Hodaya Asaraf, an eighth-grader at a Jerusalem arts school, was the first to be buried. Shortly after sunset, the 13-year-old was laid to rest at a hilltop cemetery amid the wails of her mother.

"Her friends said the last thing she drew were leaves," said a teacher, Chena Ben-Yaakov. "The leaf has fallen."

Passengers and police said the bomber boarded bus No. 20 and detonated the explosives belt about 7:10 a.m., as the bus was stopped in Jerusalem's Kiryat Menachem neighborhood, police said.

The blast blew out the bus windows and sent glass shards and body parts flying. Hours later, a man's arms dangled from a broken bus window, and a torso was covered with a blue and white checkered blanket.

Maor Kimche, 15, was among those on the bus, which was jammed with high-school students, soldiers, and the elderly.

"Suddenly, it was black and smoky. There were people on the floor. Everything was bloody. There was glass everywhere and body parts," Kimche said.

The 10th grader jumped out of a bus window and was scooped up by a taxi driver who took him to Hadassah Hospital, where he was treated for a leg injury.

He said he'd ride buses again. "How else will I get to school?" he asked.

Eleven people were killed, and at least 48 were wounded, eight of them seriously. Israel Radio said many of the casualties were students, though hospital officials declined to give a breakdown.

'Leader' in Bali bombing nabbed

BY ELLEN NAKASHIMA
AND ALAN SIPRESS
WASHINGTON POST

Samudra suspect

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Police on Thursday captured an Afghan-trained militant and the alleged ringleader of the group behind the deadly bombings of two nightclubs last month in Bali.

Authorities hope that the arrest of Imam Samudra will lead to the capture of the remaining suspects in the country's worst case of terrorism and also help in the hunt for senior operatives suspected of orchestrating the Bali bombing and other violence in Southeast Asia.

Police arrested Samudra, 35, on a bus Thursday afternoon as it was pulling up to a ferry at Merak port in West Java, 60 miles from Jakarta. The ferry was bound for the neighboring island of Sumatra.

"He's a big fish," said Maj. Gen. I Made Pastika, the chief of the international police investigation into the Oct. 12 bombings, which killed almost 200 people, most of them Australians. "We hope to go from this to other fish so we can solve the case, at least by the end of the year. As long as these people are out there, the danger is still there."

Indonesian security officials said that Samudra was acting at the direction of superiors within Jemaah Islamiyah, a militant network that Western and Asian intelligence experts say is active in several Southeast Asian countries. The group has cooperated with Al Qaeda activists in the past, but investigators have yet to prove a link between Osama bin Laden's organization and the Bali attack.

Samudra's capture follows the arrest more than two weeks ago of another suspect, an Indonesian motorcycle mechanic named Amrozi, who told police he owned the minivan used in one of the nightclub bombings. Police Thursday also announced the arrests of two other men who investigators say were Samudra's bodyguards.

However, Samudra's arrest is the most significant one police have made since they spread a dragnet following the attacks.

Though investigators said they believe at least three other suspects remain at large, security officials' attention is increasingly turning to Jemaah Islamiyah leaders.

According to a high-ranking Indonesian security official, Samudra was following the orders of an Islamic teacher named Mukhlas, also known as Ali Ghufron, a senior Jemaah Islamiyah strategist and an older brother of Amrozi. Security officials said Mukhlas has replaced Hambali, Southeast Asia's most wanted militant, as the leader of a major network cell in the region that includes Singapore and Malaysia. Also known as Riduan Isamuddin, Hambali is an Indonesian who intelligence officials say is the main link between Jemaah Islamiyah and Al Qaeda in the region.

Police suspect Samudra and Isamuddin have worked on previous plots together. Both have been named by Indonesian authorities as suspects in a series of church bombings on Christmas Eve 2000 in Jakarta and elsewhere across the Indonesian archipelago. A police detective said the two men were also involved in an August 2001 bombing at a Jakarta shopping mall.

Rohan Gunaratna, a South-east Asian terrorism expert in Singapore, called Samudra's arrest "very significant" and said that he believed the operation's mastermind was Hambali.

It was reported in October that at a meeting in Southern Thailand in mid-January, Isamuddin made the decision to shift from traditional targets such as embassies to "soft" targets such as nightclubs in the region. Gunaratna said he believes it was at that meeting that the seeds of the Bali operation were planted, though a specific target or location was not mentioned. The Thai prime minister has denied such a meeting took place.

It fell to Samudra to select the precise target and timing, Indonesian police said. Beginning with a meeting in the central Java city of Solo, he planned the Bali bombing with a small circle of fellow Indonesian militants, according to Pastika. Samudra is an "intellectual" who has a university degree in engineering, Pastika said. He probably learned to make bombs while in Afghanistan in the mid-1990s, police said.

American nurse killed in Lebanon

BY HUSSEIN DAKROUB
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SIDON, Lebanon — A gunman fired three bullets into the head of an American missionary Thursday at the clinic where she worked as a nurse. It was believed to be the first targeted killing of a U.S. citizen in Lebanon in more than a decade.

Bonnie Penner, 31, was slain at the Unity Center, which houses a Christian chapel and a clinic.

Investigators said they believe the gunman knocked at the door of the clinic and shot Penner in the head with a 7mm pistol. A colleague found the woman's body lying in a pool of blood, police said.

The center's director, the Rev. Sami Dagher, said there were no threats before the killing and the motive was not known. The clinic provides medical care and help to local people and Palestinian refugees in a nearby camp in southern Lebanon.

"Bonnie died because she loved the people of Sidon," Dagher told reporters.

"May God forgive them," he said of the attackers.

The killing occurred around 8 a.m., just after Penner opened the center.

Penner, a nurse married to a British citizen, Garry Whitherall, had worked for about two years for the Christian and Missionary Alliance in Lebanon, said officials from the U.S. and British embassies. She was originally from California, but her hometown was not available.

School records in Vancouver, Wash., show Penner attended Walnut Grove Elementary School in 1977 and graduated from Fort Vancouver High School in June 1990.

U.S. Embassy officials emerged from the clinic later Thursday with Penner's husband, who hid his face and declined to talk to reporters. He left in an embassy vehicle.

U.S. Ambassador Vincent Battle met in Beirut with Interior Minister Elias Murr to discuss the killing. No details about the meeting were disclosed.

The U.S. Embassy issued a warning on its Web site asking Americans in Lebanon "to remain vigilant with regard to their personal security and to exercise caution."

Prime Minister Rafik Hariri condemned the killing, saying "there is nothing to justify this heinous crime." He said the killing was designed to undermine Lebanon's security and hurt its foreign relations, according to a statement issued by his office.

WASHINGTON — The ink is barely dry on the new Homeland Security Department legislation, but corporate lobbyists are already chasing the pot of gold it offers.

One German-based contractor has started a political action committee and recruited budget experts to help its pitch for U.S. anti-terror money. Microsoft has hired a former Coast Guard commander to oversee its homeland bidding.

And several firms are creating special units to help companies compete for billions in new national-security spending.

"It's our intent to become a politically sophisticated player here," said Gregg Ward, the head of the Washington lobbying office of German-based Siemens AG, whose business includes medical systems, information technology, energy, transportation, and communications.

The bill approved this week to create a domestic-security department offers high-tech companies a chance to share in at least $500 million a year in research and development grants. And they hope that's just for starters.

The new department will give industry a front-row seat as it sets its priorities. The legislation calls for "private sector advisory councils" composed of industry and trade group representatives who will advise the department on security products, services, and policies.

The government's anti-terror spending could reach into the billions in coming months — an enticing prospect for many companies as the faltering economy makes new business hard to find.

Siemens is sharing a $1.37 billion federal contract with Boeing to install and maintain explosive-detection equipment in airports and to train baggage screeners.

The company is using the U.S. contract, awarded in June by the Transportation Security Administration, as a selling point as it seeks similar work in other countries, Ward said.

Siemens is seeking to raise its profile in Washington through a PAC funded by its employees and through its new procurement office. The company is hiring four or five people specifically to pursue government contracts, and it is looking for those with experience in appropriations in government, said Ward, an assistant secretary in the Energy Department during the first Bush administration.

Siemens is also trying to win state business. Its health-care information technology company won a contract from Pennsylvania to link hospitals so they are alerted whenever an emergency-room physician reports potential bioterrorism-related illnesses such as anthrax or smallpox.

"For most companies, the private market is relatively flat right now and has been for a little while," Ward said. "The public procurement and public accounts are that much more attractive ... particularly in the security area and the defense area, obviously the budget continues to increase."

Siemens is far from alone in realizing that.

CIA frets about too much info

BY CURT ANDERSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Broad new surveillance powers granted to the Justice Department come with a risk for investigators: There could be such an information overload that agents could overlook a critical fragment of information that would prevent a terrorist attack, a senior CIA lawyer said Thursday.

Provisions of the USA Patriot Act, passed by Congress after the Sept. 11 attacks, permit the FBI and Justice Department to share with the CIA previously off-limits information gathered in secret grand-jury proceedings and through wiretaps and other domestic eavesdropping.

This already is producing an avalanche of information that poses new challenges for analysts at the CIA and other intelligence services, said John Rizzo, the senior deputy general counsel at the CIA.

"One thing I am concerned about: What do we do with all that information?" he told an American Bar Association conference on national security. "We be it for us if we lose one shard of information that in retrospect would have been key if, God forbid, we had another terrorist attack."

This week's ruling by a secret U.S. Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court of Review enhances the government's domestic-surveillance powers to track suspected spies and terrorists.

CIA Director George Tenet has repeatedly said that to succeed against terrorism, the agency must recruit and adequately pay more talented people, including intelligence analysts.

Another change for the CIA will come with establishment of a Homeland Security Department, which will provide its own analysis of intelligence data from multiple sources and, for the first time, connect state and local law-enforcement officials with the CIA.

"CIA has never dealt with state and local officials. We will have to learn to do so," Rizzo said.

The CIA's concerns come as the FBI struggles to shift its primary mission from solving traditional crimes to detecting and stopping would-be terrorists. Rizzo said the CIA has assigned 30 officers to help the FBI improve its analytical intelligence capabilities.

"It will be, frankly, a daunting task for FBI agents," Rizzo said. "It will not be easy, and it will not be quick. But everyone agrees it's time for this to happen."

The FBI itself shares that concern. In a recent e-mail to all 56 field offices, FBI Deputy Director Bruce Gebhardt urged special agents-in-charge to "instill a sense of urgency" in the counterterrorism mission and make sure all information is shared with FBI headquarters in Washington.

"You are the leaders of the FBI," the e-mail said. "You cannot fail at this mission."

FBI spokesman Bill Carter said Thursday that Gebhardt regularly communicates with FBI field agents to "emphasize or re-emphasize" points considered to be important by senior bureau officials.

FBI Director Robert Mueller last week sent a message to all employees, from file clerks on up, reinforcing counterterrorism as the bureau's top priority, Carter added.

Incest, Thanksgiving, a fiancée & the Kennedys

BY TED UTOFT
THE DAILY IOWAN

Many UI students will return to warm homes full of steaming food and eagerly awaiting, smiling relatives next week in order to celebrate Thanksgiving. Overflowing plates of home-cooked delicacies will replace the dreaded dorm food and ramen noodles.

Such is the picture most students are expecting for their long weekend at home. But that is not at all the picture painted for the characters in the play The House of Yes, by Wendy MacLeod, running this weekend in the Theatre Building.

In this disturbing comedy, Marty Pascal (UI junior John Sullivan), returns to his Washington, D.C., home for Thanksgiving amid a hurricane, with his new fiancée, Lesly (UI senior Katherine Ross), in tow. The future in-laws Lesly will meet are not your average All-American family.

Marty's quirky and overbearing mother, Mrs. Pascal (graduate student Dana Hardy), poses as the perfect hostess, but the audience soon learns she has an agenda of her own.

Anthony, Marty's younger college drop-out brother (UI sophomore Anthony Werner), immediately takes more than a liking to the seemingly innocent Lesly.

The House of Yes, running this weekend in the Theatre Building, is the twisted story of a dysfunctional family.

The real fun begins when Lesly has the pleasure of meeting Marty's twin sister, Jackie-O (UI senior Monica Edwards). Jackie-O's reaction to the engagement announcement is not exactly what poor Lesly had in mind — her obvious and immediate cynicism and jealousy are quite apparent.

Jackie's obsessions with soap operas, the Kennedys, and her brother's affection have driven the young woman to hysterics. She has recently returned from "the hospital," which audiences soon learn was more of an asylum, and she refuses her family's advice to not drink her favorite drink, rum and Pepsi, on top of her medications.

The familial tension rises as the hurricane causes a power outage and Anthony's passes at Lesly become more evident. The incestuous nature of Marty's and Jackie-O's relationship is too much for Lesly to handle, and she retreats to the guest room. The chance for the twins to be alone only serves them in returning to their twisted childhood ritual of re-enacting the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

"I'll be her, you be him," says Jackie as Marty assumes the position, waving in full parade form.

The dysfunctional family spins out of control as the night progresses.

Edwards came upon the script while looking for a monologue last year; instead, she found a scene she wanted to use for a directing class. She eventually became attached to the script and wanted to see the play performed in full on the stage.

Edwards pitched her idea to graduate student Mollie Mook, and the two proposed the idea as a workshop for this year's season. Mook would take a first stab at directing at the university with help from UI student Chad Larabee.

"Chad has such an eye for blocking, and I think I can rely on his strong acting notes," said Mook as she described their differing perspectives.

"The challenge with this show is making incest sympathetic and finding levity in some serious issues," Larabee said.

Hardy brings expertise and leadership to the green cast — three of five actors are appearing in their first university production.

"Their freshness is inspiring," Hardy said. "And while playing their mother, there is some mentorship — I think it instinctively comes out of me."

Audiences may recognize the show from a 1997 film of the same title, starring Parker Posey and Freddie Prinze Jr. "The movie takes a very different take on the script than we do," Edwards said.

statement of "full support" for the resolution on Iraq that the U.N. Security Council unanimously adopted two weeks ago. Thursday's four-paragraph statement committed the 19 current NATO members to "take effective action to assist and support" U.N. efforts to ensure Iraqi disarmament, and noted the resolution's warning that Iraq will "face serious consequences" if it does not comply.

White House National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice called the statement "very powerful." But European NATO diplomats, noting that Europe is still divided over what to do about Iraq and that some NATO members remain concerned about U.S. talk of war, emphasized that it "does not specify any kind of action" beyond what the resolution itself says and commits NATO members to nothing more than supporting it.

The administration, which first proposed the Iraq document Tuesday at NATO headquarters in Brussels, "wanted a strong statement, but they wanted a united statement," one European diplomat said. "They did not try to pick a fight."

President Bush, in comments to reporters Thursday morning before meeting with British Prime Minister Tony Blair, said his "expectation is that we can do this peacefully, if Saddam Hussein disarms." While repeating that the United States, "with our close friends," will use military force if Saddam balks at new U.N. weapons inspections, Bush continued his emphasis of recent weeks on a peaceful outcome in Iraq.

"Our first choice is not to use the military option," he said. "Our first choice is for Mr. Saddam Hussein to disarm. And that's where we'll be devoting a lot of our energies." In avoiding a contentious debate over Iraq, NATO leaders were able to focus on what all agreed was an historic summit. Its main order of business was major transformation of the 53-year-old alliance, set up to counter a feared invasion of Western Europe by the Soviet Union, into a larger yet leaner and more mobile military organization with a new writ to confront terrorist and other threats anywhere in the world.

The decisions made here, said NATO Secretary-General George Robertson, "will strengthen NATO as we confront the challenges of post-Sept. 11 security."

The summit convened when many defense analysts are questioning NATO's usefulness and even relevance in a world no longer defined by the old East-West rivalry and where the possibility of a large-scale conflict on the continent is seen as remote to nonexistent. At the same time, a gap in resources and technology has been widening between the United States and its allies, and few NATO members have been willing to finance their own modern, full-service defense operations.

The seven-page Prague Summit Declaration adopted Thursday is designed to address both the changing threat and the divergent capabilities.

To deal with terrorism and other emerging threats, summit leaders approved the creation of a NATO Response Force, a joint 21,000-troop land, sea, and air unit with high-tech weaponry designed for quick deployment anywhere in the world. The leaders directed that the force "have its initial operational capability as soon as possible but not later than October 2004" and for it to be fully operational two years after that.

The declaration also adopted a plan by NATO defense ministers to streamline the alliance's military framework, dividing it into two commands — one for operations, headquartered in Brussels, and a new "transformation" command, headquartered in the United States.

Leaders also endorsed a new division of labor, with individual members committing themselves to focus on and improve capabilities in one or more of eight specific areas: chemical, biological, radiological, and nuclear defense; intelligence; air-to-ground surveillance; command, control, and communications; combat effectiveness, including precision guided munitions; long-range transport of troops and equipment by air and sea; aerial refueling; and deployable combat support units.

Nathan Bowman, the manager of UniversiTees, a clothing retailer in Old Capitol Town Center, said he has also noticed an increase in Hawk sales over the past couple of weeks and anticipates more sales if Iowa makes it to the Rose Bowl.

Customers have been coming in looking for anything mentioning the UI and the Rose Bowl, Bowman said. He said the store wouldn't have the bowl apparel until the Bowl Championship Series releases the university's final standing, but that it would most likely have it ready a couple of days following the announcement.

"As soon as the rumor of the Rose Bowl was in the air and the chances of us making it got greater, people were coming in for anything Rose Bowl," Bowman said.

Free speech v. slurs at Harvard Law

Law school Dean Robert Clark created the committee last spring in the wake of an escalating series of race-related controversies over the past year, triggered by a student's use of the slur "nig" in a course outline posted online.

During the ensuing uproar, a second student sent an e-mail to one of his protesting peers, saying that "if you, as a race, want to prove that you do not deserve to be called by that word, work hard, and you will be recognized."

That, in turn, led a professor to step down from teaching the class, a first-year course on tort law, and offer to defend the e-mailer in a mock trial. The mock trial was never held.

The Black Law Students Association also asked for a reprimand of another professor who was quoted as saying in class that "feminism, Marxism, and the blacks have contributed nothing to tort law." (That professor, David Rosenberg, has said he was referring to a body of legal thought known as critical race theory.)

This past week, several students and professors, including Clark, expressed discomfort with the idea of a speech code.

"There are many on the faculty, including myself, who have grave reservations about heading in this direction," Clark said in a statement.

Law-school spokesman Mike Armini characterized the speech-code discussions as very preliminary. It is not clear yet whether the speech code would apply just in the classroom, or outside it, too.

Harvard Law School alumni have frequently been at the forefront of efforts to expand constitutional protections on speech.

Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes coined the fundamental definition of free speech in a 1919 dissent when he created the "marketplace of ideas" metaphor. Supreme Court Justice William Brennan broadened free-speech protections in a 1964 decision when he created the "actual malice" standard for cases of libel against public figures.

Law Professor Alan Dershowitz, who is a member of the diversity committee, said the perception that classroom debates have become less spirited at Harvard is on target.

"I think there are a lot of professors who are afraid to confront students," he said. "A lot of professors are afraid to take controversial views on any hot-button issues."

Lacey Schwartz, a third-year student and member of the diversity committee, acknowledged that the school may no longer resemble its depiction in 1970s pop culture.

"But the idea that we should do everything like we did back then is a little bit ridiculous," she said. "We always have to be completely re-evaluating and re-examining ourselves to make sure that we are approaching the study of law in the best, most effective, and most representative manner."

On Tuesday, Harvard English professors reinvented an Irish poet to speak on campus, one week after his appearance was canceled because of his anti-Israeli comments. Tom Paulin has likened U.S.-born settlers in the West Bank to Nazis and said they "should be shot dead."

"Free speech was a principle that needed upholding here," Professor Peter Sacks said. "This was a clear reaffirmation that the department stood strongly by the First Amendment."

Without jury to bias, Nelson 911 tapes should be released to public

At last, the public may have a chance to learn more regarding the death of Dr. Richard Nelson, the former executive dean of the UI College of Medicine. From initial reports, it appeared that his wife, Phyllis Nelson, had stabbed him to death during an argument. However, her attorney, William Kutmus, soon announced that the incident was a "tragic accident" and not murder.

Key evidence in the trial includes the 911 calls that Phyllis Nelson placed on the night of the stabbing. So far, the contents of the tapes have been largely a mystery. Although the Cedar Rapids Gazette requested that the tapes be made public, Judge Thomas Horan refused. Horan, with the support of both the prosecution and defense, argued that Nelson's right to an impartial jury outweighed the rights of the media. While The Daily Iowan supported the initial ruling, it appears, in light of recent developments, that the tapes should be released.

As long as Nelson was facing a jury trial, the tapes' potential to bias jurors was simply too great. According to reports, the material on the tapes is very inflammatory, including Phyllis Nelson allegedly answering police questions while her husband moans in the background. Any juror hearing such material before the trial would be hard pressed to put aside her or his preconceptions and impartially listen to the defense's arguments.

Now that the case is being tried before a judge, the public has a right to hear the tapes.

Now, however, the situation has changed. Nelson, in consultation with her attorney, has decided to waive her right to a jury trial. According to her attorney, too many people already know the details of the case, and Nelson would be put in a position of having to prove her innocence, rather than placing the burden of proof on the prosecution. Nelson's fate will be decided not by a jury trial, but instead by Horan himself.

Obviously, without the need to preserve impartiality, there is no reason not to release the tapes. The tapes' release will not influence Horan, because he made the initial ruling to restrict access and has, of course, already listened to them. Both the prosecution and defense are surely intimately familiar with their content. Clearly, releasing the tapes cannot conceivably affect anyone involved in the trial. One hopes Horan, when he makes his decision next week, can see that keeping the tapes under wraps no longer serves any meaningful purpose. He should be commended for preserving Nelson's right to a fair trial, but now that her rights are no longer at issue, the principle of a free press require that the tapes be released to the public.

Say it loud — I'm black and I'm proud

I have been living in the United States for several years and have often thought about the trend in racial designation. As long as I can remember since my arrival, whites have always been "white." Chinese, Italians, Russians, and everyone else — all these names have remained the same. Besides the American-Indians/Native-Americans, the only other changing racial designation is Afro/black/African-Americans.

When I arrived in New York in the '70s, people who looked like me (I emigrated from Nigeria) were called Afro-Americans. I was told that "Negro" was derogatory, despite the fact that my anthropology class still classified us as Negroid. On the streets of New York, I was brought up-to-date on why Negro was not acceptable: The offensive slang "nigger" came from it. Even whites stopped using the "n" word, at least in public.

Most people referred to us as Afro-American. We developed a special hairdo (the Afro) and a special hair tonic (Afrosheen) to take good care of it. The hair was tall and bushy. I watched people pick their hair with pride, using wooden combs in front of mirrors in public. Angela Davis, as well as other well-known intellectuals, and Hollywood actors and actresses — all wore Afros. Straight hair was for lesser people. We developed a special walk (Afro walk) in which we leaped to accentuate our gaiety. We felt proud of who we were now that we had progressed to Afro-American. Afro was a name given to us, by some of us.

Just when I was getting used to Afro-American, Afro suddenly became derogatory, and black was fashionable. We had a lot of pride in being black. We sang about it. James Brown urged us to "say it loud, I'm black and proud." Fela Ransome Anikulapo Kuti of Nigeria declared, "Nobody could tell me my dark skin color is not good enough" (translation from Yoruba).

Our pride in the pigment of our skin improved our psyche. It entered into our souls. We ate soul food. We danced to soul music on "Soul Train." Dashiki (a common Yoruba dress, danshiki) became fashionable; the word is now in the English dictionary. Soon, we were so black that no one remembered that we were Afro just a few years before. Black fit so well; it differentiated native black people in America from newly immigrated blacks. Unlike when we were Afro and some of our older generation still stuck to Negro, black was universal. Perhaps because it was opposite of white, it gave black people in America a unique identity. It also made sense. After all, white people are called whites. And they are no whiter than the blacks are black. Everyone accepted that black people in America were black. But all of a sudden, our black leaders decided that the name had to change. Again! Now, we are African-Americans. Of note, the African-American designation is used mostly among our black political leaders, and some white people in official positions who want to be politically correct. In today's America, political correctness is very important, as demonstrated by the uproar created by recent movie, BarberShop. But as if in rebellion, some of our rap artists and our youth suddenly went back to using the "n" word. To black inner-city youth, "nigger" is no longer derogatory. To them, the zenith of being cool is "nigger." "What is in a name?" one might ask. Some people may say that it doesn't matter what black people in America are called. For one thing, black people came here from Africa (mostly from the western part), so any name that includes Africa has to be appropriate. Unlike non-black people who came here begging and pleading, black people were dragged here kicking and screaming. Therefore, it seems to matter what black people are called.

In my unqualified judgment, the current African-American designation seems least appropriate. First, it is confusing. Many American blacks don't know where in Africa he/she came from. Without a specific location in Africa, the less-educated among us sound ignorant.

Second, it displeases most recently emigrated Africans. "African-American" connotes the idea that Africa is a small village rather than a continent, 2 million square miles larger than North America. Besides, there are no other continental Americans!

Third, Africa is not the homeland of only black people. Inhabitants of northern Africa identify themselves as Arabs, not Africans. But they come from Africa nonetheless.

Fourth, it makes it difficult to differentiate the newly naturalized immigrants from various parts of sub-Saharan Africa, many of whom would rather claim their country of origin rather than the continent.

I believe that we can be proud of our heritage without the label or the need for ever increasingly better fitting, new and improved names. Maybe, we should just go back to being black with the logic, legitimacy, and pride that came with it.

Boycott punishes innocent players

I understand what it means to stand up for something but Calvin Hennick's "Boycott" article (DI, Nov. 20) was barely worth the ink or the paper. Why should anyone boycott the Rose Bowl, if we are invited? Our football team members have worked their collective asses off for the championship of the Big Ten and the suggestion that they be punished for the actions of a basketball player makes about as much sense as cutting off your head to clear up an acne problem.

I feel for the victim from the Pierce case, and yet I wonder why she let Pierre off so easy. The papers say that she had some reservations about the plea agreement, but if she did, she should have never accepted it. The case could have gone to trial, and Pierre could have been sentenced to 10 years. I would love to know why she accepted the settlement, but I also know that it was her decision.

The big questions that Hennick and others should ask themselves:

Do you want to punish Brad Banks, Bob Sanders, Colin Cole, Dave Porter, Derek Pagel, Dallas Clark, Fred Russell, Jermelle Lewis, Kirk Ferentz, and the rest of the team because of something Pierre Pierce did? Should Chauncey Leslie, Glen Worley, Jared Reiner, Sean Sonderleiter, Jeff Horner, and Greg Brunner be punished because of Pierce? Alford did a poor job of handling this situation, but he was in a "damned if you do, damned if you don't" situation. Think about it: What should Alford have done?

Pierce is the accused in this case. Alford did not hold his hand while he committed the crime; Pierce did it on his own. If the university concludes that Pierce should be dismissed, then so be it, kick him out. Do not punish all athletes because of what one person did.

Banks For Heisman — cast your vote

Hawk fans! Are you interested in helping Brad Banks win the Heisman Trophy this year? Suzuki, as the official sponsor of the Heisman, will be allowed to cast a single first-place vote in this year's race. Suzuki will vote for the candidate who receives the most support on its Heisman Web site, <http://www.voteheisman.com>. Iowa fans should be ashamed that Penn State running back Larry Johnson, currently leads Banks by 0.9 percent of the vote.

Banks is currently leading the ESPN media poll, but he is trailed closely by Ken Dorsey and Willis McGahee of Miami. In a close Heisman race such as this year's, one first-place vote, worth three points, could be a big factor in determining the winner. Banks has given the Hawk fans so much to cheer for this year; the least we can do is take a minute to show our support by earning him an extra first-place vote. Don't let our quarterback lose the Heisman race by one or two points because you were too lazy to vote.

More oil threatens coast

BY MAR ROMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NOIA, Spain — Waves of black sludge from a major oil spill washed ashore amid high winds and driving rain Thursday, tarring new stretches of northwest Spain's scenic coastline and further threatening the region's multimillion-dollar fishing industry.

The regional government extended a ban on fishing and shellfish harvesting that was declared on Nov. 16, when oil from the tanker Prestige first reached land.

The widest ban now covers more than 186 miles of Galicia coastline from Ferrol south to Ribeiro.

Approximately 2.7 million gallons of fuel oil leaked from the Bahamas-flagged tanker in several spills starting Nov. 13, when it cracked its hull in a storm.

The ship finally broke in half and sank Tuesday approximately 150 miles off Cabo de Finisterre — which translates to Land's End Cape — carrying most of its 20-million-gallon cargo to the ocean floor.

On Thursday, fishermen harvested mussels, oysters, and other commercially valuable shellfish ahead of schedule from estuary beds that risked contamination. Authorities deployed more oil-blocking barriers outside ports and rivers open to the ocean. Soldiers in protective gear joined environmentalists and volunteers in shoveling toxic oil from beaches.

Spain's environmental minister estimated economic damages and cleanup costs at $42 million so far.

Fishing and canning is a major industry here, generating around $330 million a year.

"We're afraid the 'black tide' will come here," said Maria Busto, 47, one of approximately 600 anglers standing knee-deep in the Noia estuary below Cabo de Finisterre, raking cockles and clams into pails.

The normal daily quota is 55 pounds, worth approximately $6 per pound. But that quota was set aside because of the threat posed to the unharvested crop.

By noon, Busto had harvested 64 pounds.

The miles of oil barriers deployed in recent days were ineffective against rough Atlantic seas, and the government lacks other resources — such as oil-skimming ships — to control the spill effectively.

EFE, Lavandeira/Associated Press

An unidentified resident walks through oil pollution on the Mar de Flora beach near Finisterre, Spain, on Wednesday. High winds and ocean currents are carrying another "black tide" of sludge from a major oil spill toward the shore.

Neighboring countries were sending cleanup vessels.

The beach at Mar de Flora, which escaped last week's first spill, was coated Thursday with thick, smelly oil that rolled in with the surf.

Onlookers sat in cars at beaches, watching black waves and tarred wildlife through the persistent rain.

Some sea gulls, cormorants, and other wildlife were dead. Others caught in the spill flapped away from volunteers trying to rescue them.

At least several hundred animals have died in the spill, governmental and environmental groups said.

At dusk in Corcubion, six miles east of Finisterre, civil-defense authorities deployed more than a mile of floating barriers to protect shellfish in the bay. An oil slick was projected to hit there within hours.

"The national government is not protecting us," complained Mayor Rafael Mouzo, who said the barriers were requested five days ago but just only had arrived.

Although high winds and 26-foot waves dispersed some floating oil in recent days, four slicks detected offshore were heading toward land. Residents fear more of the same in coming days, but there is little they can do to stop it.

"We're profoundly uneasy," said Muros Mayor Celestino Femoso.

Military and government authorities monitored the slicks at sea. Pits were dug and lined with plastic to receive any contaminated sludge, hundreds of volunteers were trained, and more soldiers were standing by for possible cleanup operations.

Officials and environmentalists were hopeful the oil that sank with the Prestige would solidify in the frigid cold and high pressure more than two miles down on the ocean floor. No plans have been announced to try to recover the oil, valued at $10 million.

Seeking to ease fears of a pending ecological catastrophe, the Interior Ministry claimed no more oil had spilled since the Prestige sank. The Prestige's cargo was more than twice the amount of crude oil spilled off Alaska by the Exxon Valdez in 1989, one of the world's worst environmental disasters.

1 million face jobless-benefits loss

BY JONATHAN WEISMAN
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — With congressional negotiations at an impasse and time running out, nearly 1 million jobless workers will almost certainly lose their federal unemployment benefits during the Christmas season.

The House of Representatives has one last chance to extend the expiring unemployment compensation program today, when a handful of lawmakers convene to approve technical changes to the homeland security bill. But House GOP leaders say they don't plan to bring up the Senate's version of an unemployment extension, and the White House is resisting Democratic entreaties to force the House to act.

That means approximately 830,000 people receiving federal benefits will be cut off on Dec. 28. Beginning the next day, another 95,000 jobless workers each week will exhaust their state unemployment benefits, with no temporary federal assistance to back them up, according to the Center for Budget and Policy Priority, a liberal think tank.

"I don't even want to think about it. I have a 12-year-old [daughter] to support," said JoAnne Hurlston, a Northeast Washington resident who lost her job as dean of career and student services at Washington's Marriott Hospitality Public Charter High School on June 11 and faces a benefits cutoff at year end.

The congressional clash over unemployment compensation centers on obscure funding formulas, competing visions of federal spending, and arcane issues with no direct connection to the unemployment program. But the consequences of congressional intransigence will be very real for people such as Hurlston, 47, who has had just two job interviews in the past five months and lives with her mother to make ends meet.

House Republicans and senators from both parties say they want to extend benefits, but they disagree on the scope and length of an extension. As a result, no one will receive an additional penny.

Last week, both houses of Congress approved two competing versions of an unemployment insurance extension. The Senate bill — drafted by Sens. Don Nickles, R-Okla., and Hillary Rodham Clinton, D-N.Y. — would extend the temporary unemployment benefit until March 29. Current recipients would get a three-month reprieve. Those laid off during that time would receive their full 13-week allotment, even if it extended past March 29.

The House took a more frugal approach. In its version, those receiving benefits on the Dec. 28 cutoff date who hadn't exhausted their full 13 weeks would continue to receive benefits until Feb. 2. Laid-off workers in "high unemployment" states would receive a blanket extension until Feb. 2. But by the House's formula, only three states — Washington, Oregon, and Alaska — would qualify.

Actresses appearing in a production called Sexy Girls Next Door are filmed getting out of a limousine on Sleepy Hollow Lane last week. The street shoot was illegal, according to filming permit officials.

'Pornucopia' irks neighbors

BY BOB POOL
LOS ANGELES TIMES

LOS ANGELES — As the leafy glen turns golden and bronze, and lengthening autumn shadows fall over leftover Halloween pumpkins, the new legend of Sleepy Hollow is being written in the city's San Fernando Valley area.

Washington Irving isn't penning this tale — even though his famed 182-year-old description of the "bevy of buxom lasses" and the "strange sights" that hold "a spell over the minds of the good people" living in a secluded "lap of land among high hills, which is one of the quietest places in the whole world" isn't far off the mark.

For more than three months, tiny Sleepy Hollow Lane in one of Los Angeles' most tranquil residential neighborhoods has been turned into an impromptu stage for adult filmmaking.

Nearby homeowners say they are forced to draw their drapes and lock their children inside their $1 million homes when porn movie actors and production crews show up for 12-hour film shoots at a handsome, white-stuccoed house on the end of the lane's cul-de-sac.

Since August, eight adult films have been shot there, according to filming permit records. On Wednesday, another production company, Video Bliss, showed up, to the dismay of neighbors.

Angry residents contend that city leaders and officials who issue film production permits have been slow to respond to complaints about the turmoil that the moviemaking is causing in the 45-year-old hilltop neighborhood.

Their grumbling has prompted the Entertainment Industry Development Corp., the quasi-public organization that issues the permits, to take a close look at the filming.

The owner of the house said he was unaware of his neighbors' unhappiness, however. He denied that the filming is having any effect on other people.

Lawyer Marc Smith said he and his wife decided to rent out their home for adult films on a whim after their three boys went off to college.

"It wasn't like we put an ad in the paper, 'House Available for Porno Shoot.' They came to us. I'm not in that business. Somebody came months ago and solicited us," Smith said.

But the Sleepy Hollow Lane dispute illustrates the continuing balancing act that Angelenos, entertainment industry workers, and city officials must perform in order to keep filming activity in Los Angeles — and at the same time keep residents happy.

After a decline in filming last year, local production has rebounded, according to the film agency. As many as 200 location shoots a day take place outside studios. Officials say they do not know how many of the 40,000 or so Los Angeles shoots a year take place in residential areas.

Mainstream filmmakers say they pick neighborhood backdrops because of the architectural style or the type of trees growing there.

Adult-film production crews apparently like the modern interior look of the Smiths' house, which the owner said can be filmed so that it resembles such settings as a corporate boardroom or a nightclub. The home's secluded and opulent back yard swimming pool is also an attraction.

The back-yard is apparently not isolated enough, however. One film company reportedly ordered a 10-year-old girl playing in a neighboring yard to go into her house before the cameras started rolling for one explicit scene.

"She could see what was going on through the fence. I had to explain to her what a porn movie was. She said she didn't know they made movies like that ... she's a kid," said the girl's mother, who asked not to be named.

Another neighbor, Val Cowley, objected to scantily clad actresses going in and out of the house and occasionally being filmed on the small front lawn.

Scientists eye new form of life

BY PAUL RECER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — By modifying a simple microbe, scientists hope to create a new form of single-cell life that could lead to new and cleaner energy and perhaps play a role in biological warfare. But there are safety and ethical concerns in this new world of biology, experts say.

A group led by J. Craig Venter, the director of a private program that mapped the human genome, has received a $3 million Department of Energy grant to make a new type of bacterium using DNA manufactured in the lab from basic chemicals.

The goal, Venter said, is to build a bacterium that is capable of making hydrogen that could be used for fuel or to develop a microbe that could absorb and store carbon dioxide, thus removing a surplus of that greenhouse gas from the atmosphere.

Along the way, he said, scientists will learn on a molecular level the minimum genes a cell needs to thrive and reproduce and how to artificially make those and other genes.

"This is true basic science," Venter said. "Even though we've found all those genes in the human genome, we can't understand the most basic simple cell yet. That is what is driving this."

Some experts worry that by learning how to artificially create the basic genes essential to life, even in a fragile, obscure microbe, scientists may open a new door to biological hazards and, perhaps, put a new weapon into the hands of terrorists.

"We have to be very careful about controlling the purposes of this research," said Kathy Kinlaw, an executive in the Center for Ethics at Emory University. She said that science will ultimately achieve what Venter is attempting, but there must be careful oversight to prevent the technology from being misused.

The Energy Department grant was given to the Institute for Biological Energy Alternatives, a company founded by Venter. The organization now has 10 scientists, including Nobel laureate Dr. Hamilton Smith, an expert on genetic science who is famed for his skill in handling DNA in the laboratory. Eventually, the firm will grow to a scientific staff of approximately 25.

Rollercoaster season ends at home for Chesnut

BY ALI NOLLER
THE DAILY IOWAN

When the bleachers clear and the fluorescent lights go down in Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday night, it will not only be the end of a roller-coaster home season for the Iowa volleyball team, but the end of a career that has made a significant effect on the steadfast success of the Iowa program.

Kelli Chesnut, whose first brush with success came across town as a City High Little Hawk, will don the black and gold for the final time in front of her hometown crowd this weekend, when Iowa takes on the No. 25 Ohio State Buckeyes tonight and Indiana on Saturday.

lack of confidence as a freshman starter, has blossomed into a dominant player for the Hawkeyes, starting in every match this year and averaging 2.25 kills and 2.73 digs.

Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett said Chesnut's influence has spread further than the court.

"She's hardworking, positive, and always ready to go," Buck-Crockett said. "The other women have learned that from her this year."

Chesnut, who is joined only by Suzanne Bouchard in the team's senior class, said that despite tallying only 35 wins versus 75 losses in four years,

Iowa's Abby Tjaden goes up to block a spike.

IOWA BASKETBALL SEASON OPENERS

Ready or not

Iowa men host first game of regular season Sunday

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa men's basketball team is ready and willing but the question many have is, will the Hawkeyes be able to overcome the challenges that have held the Hawkeyes back in recent months as they prepare to begin nonconference play?

In the eyes of Iowa coach Steve Alford, his team is more than capable of surprising a few doubters this season.

"The guys have had six weeks [of practice], they've had their two dry runs, I think they're ready," he said.

Ready or not, Iowa hosts Florida Atlantic on Nov. 24 in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The opportunity to play in games where everything actually matters comes as a welcome change of pace for the Hawkeyes, who have spent the last several months in the headlines for their actions off the court.

"We're gonna have to prove a lot of people wrong," said freshman guard Jeff Horner.

Expectations are low as the Hawkeyes prepare for the Owls. Academic and legal problems as well as defections have left Iowa's roster depleted. Fall out from the Pierre Pierce situation still looms over the team. And to make matters worse, fan apathy resulting from the host of problems may prevent the Hawkeyes from continuing a string of regular-season sell-outs at home, which has lasted two full seasons.

"I think we're not worried about the fans right now, we're just worried about our first game," said guard Chauncey Leslie. "We're just trying to get the win, that's our main goal right now."

Alford, who has come under intense scrutiny over the past several months for the perceived plight of the program, said he knows the true Iowa fans will remain at his team's side as the young, outmanned Hawkeyes struggle to progress through the season.

"These kids have worked awfully hard, and the guys we

This year marks the 17th year Iowa will host the Hawkeye Challenge. Iowa has won 14 of the 16 tournaments, capturing the last four. It has a 29-3 record in the tournament.

Iowa will meet Indiana University Purdue University Indiana (IUPUI) in its first game of the tournament. Game time is slotted for 2:05 p.m. on Saturday. Iowa will start April Calhoun and Kristi Faulkner at guards, Jennie Lillis and Tiffany Reedy at forwards, and Tracy Schrupp at center.

"We're ready for the season to begin," coach Lisa Bluder said.

"We've been practicing a long time and we're excited about the tournament."

The Hawkeyes won their two exhibition games against Team Concept and Lithuania with Lillis and Faulker emerging as leaders. Lillis scored 17 points in the first game and 14 in the second. Faulkner put up similar numbers with 18 points in the first game and 10 in the second. "Our starting line-up isn't really safe, but we are building around Kristi and Jennie," Bluder said.

Iowa will meet IUPUI for the first time in team history. In IUPUI's only exhibition game of the season, the Jaguars defeated The Family, 92-69. Last season IUPUI finished with a record of 11-17. IUPUI's leader

Nationals give men chance to show skill

BY JEROD LEUPOLD
THE DAILY IOWAN

The first house, first child, and first "real" job are all things the men's cross-country team can look forward to in life.

First regional championship title is already checked off the list.

Last weekend, the Hawkeyes swept a field that included No. 1-ranked Minnesota to snare first place and become the first regional champions in Hawkeye history.

"It shows we can compete," coach Larry Wieczorek said. "We can say we are among the best in the country."

Trainer

Because of its stellar performance, Iowa will travel this weekend to nationals, where only the elite showcase their abilities. Every Hawkeye is going for the first time. Senior Joe Welter was on the 1998 team but didn't participate in the meet.

The rest of the starting seven are underclassmen. Dan Haut, Tony Rakaric, and Dan Trainor are sophomores. Matt Esche and Brian Rae are redshirt freshmen, and Micah VanDenend is a true freshman.

Alternate runner and senior Stephen Traphagen is waiting in the wings should someone falter before nationals, and that scenario isn't far-fetched.

Iowa runners have sustained injuries in the last two meets. Esche received six stitches after being spiked at the Big Ten meet. Haut is fighting breathing difficulties, and VanDenend is nursing a sore fibula after bone tests came back negative for a stress fracture. Trainor is currently wearing a plaster cast on his left wrist after being knocked down and spiked during regionals.

"I went down at the 1 kilometer mark," Trainor said. "I landed on my wrist and couldn't feel it. I put my hands up so my face or head wouldn't be stepped on. When I put my hand on the back of my leg, there was blood."

Trainor finished the race one minute out of serious competition. Trainor and Wieczorek are hoping that the cast can be cut off before nationals and put back on afterwards.

Fortunately, this week, the Hawkeyes are on easy training.

"We're still recovering from the 10,000-meter regionals," Wieczorek said. "It takes several days."

In an average workout, Iowa runners go three or four miles to warm up. Then they run one mile six times at a sub-five minute pace with two minutes is senior Tiffany Kyser, who averaged 15.3 points per game at the forward position.

"Tiffany Kyser is a two-time first-team all-conference player," Bluder said. "Jennie Lillis is going to get a matchup playing against her."

Like the Hawkeyes, the Jaguars are a team with many new faces. They have nine newcomers and return only six players from last year's team. The Jaguars lost over 55 percent of their scoring and 39 percent of their rebounding from last season. The nine new faces will be expected to play a lot of minutes this season.

The Jaguars led the Mid-Con in scoring offense, rebounding offense, and defensive rebounds last season. Natalie Hendricks and Amy Muehlhausen will also be a threat for the Hawkeyes, ranking among the career leaders in blocked shots and assists for IUPUI.

Iowa will face either Murray State University or UNC-Charlotte on Sunday. Should the Hawkeyes win on Saturday, they will play in the championship game on Sunday at 2:05 p.m. If they lose, they will play in the consolation game at 12 p.m.

Murray State comes into Iowa City with an identical record as the Jaguars last season with an 11-17 finish. If the Hawkeyes and Lady Racers meet, it will be for the first time. Murray State has eight new players on its team.

Eddie Fields is the head coach of Murray State. Bluder and Fields have former ties with each other. Fields was Bluder's assistant coach at Drake.

"I'm excited to play against Eddie," Bluder said. "We are good friends."

UNC-Charlotte will be making its second appearance in the Hawkeye Challenge. Charlotte lost to Iowa in the championship game, 60-38, in 1992.

Last season the 49ers finished with a record of 16-13. Unlike the Hawkeyes and the other two teams, UNC-Charlotte has played its first game this season, losing 67-57 to Georgia Tech.

Bluder said she was concerned with the upcoming schedule playing five games in eight days.

"I wish we didn't have quite so many games in a hurry," Bluder said. "But if we want to get all our games in, we have to play three non-conference games a week."

However, when it comes to this weekend or the rest of the season, Bluder is only hoping for one thing.

"We're looking for execution and the W's."

have in our locker room are pounding it every day in practice and are doing everything they can do to represent the UI in a very positive way," Alford said Thursday while challenging those fans sitting on the fence to buy tickets. "And I think they're going to do that in game play, so they deserve that [support]."

Regardless of the attendance on Nov. 24 the Hawkeyes have shown improvement over the course of two exhibition victories and six weeks of practice.

In fact, Alford said having only 11 players on this season's roster has helped get everyone on the team the number of touches they need in practice and game situations to get better.

"We've got a long way to go ... but there have been some encouraging things," he said.

Florida Atlantic should pose a worthy opening night adversary for the Hawkeyes, who have not lost a season-opening contest dating back to 1978.

The Owls, off to a 2-1 start, play at Drake tonight, and they will conclude an 11-day, five-game road trip this weekend in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. That experience means the untested Hawkeyes will have a battle on their hands.

"They're gonna have a lot of game experience under their belt," Alford said.

Last season at this time the Hawkeyes had already played five games thanks to participation in the Guardians Classic. Iowa would have participated in a similar tournament this season as well, but a preseason rule limited the number of non-exempt tournaments a school can play in over the course of several seasons, makes the Hawkeyes ineligible to participate in a non-exempt tournament this year.

"That's the hand we're dealt," Alford said.

But the Hawkeyes will have experience before they realize it. After hosting the Owls this weekend, Iowa will travel to Des Moines to face Drake on Nov. 26, then will welcome Tennessee State to town Nov. 30. Two days later, they will fly to Florida to face Florida State in the ACC-Big Ten Challenge.

"It's a very demanding stretch for this team," Alford said. "I think they're ready for it."

the experience made up for it.

"Freshman year, coming from City High and being state champions — it was hard, not winning," she said. "The losses were disappointing. But everything else — the great memories — outweigh the losses. Everyone on this team loves to play."

Despite the departure of Chesnut and Bouchard, Buck-Crockett has something to look forward to next season — the return of five starters along with three top-notch recruits, who all have the potential to make an impact right away.

Jessenia Eceda, a junior-college transfer from Indian Hills Community College, will join the Hawkeyes in the fall. Eceda competed in the 2000 Sydney Olympics for the Peruvian national team, and helped Indian Hills to a regional title.

"Jessenia will probably be one of the top three players, if not the best player in, the Big Ten next season," Buck-Crockett said. "She's been our recruit all along and is a very experienced player."

Joining Eceda will be Jacqueline Huguélet and Meredith Stach, both Illinois seniors who have seen significant success at the high-school and club level.

While things are looking brighter for next season, Buck-Crockett is not looking past the impending challenges facing her young Hawkeye squad this weekend.

"We're ready to go, and we're playing to win," Buck-Crockett said. "Our record doesn't show how much fun we're having. We're close to [Ohio State and Indiana]. They know how close we were, and we've had a chance to blend as a team. We're not going to roll over and die."

Both today's and Saturday's matches will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday's match with Indiana is also senior night and parent's weekend.

O'Neal could make debut Friday night

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Shaquille O'Neal could make his season debut Friday night, but if he plays he probably won't start the Lakers' home game against the Chicago Bulls.

O'Neal received a shoe support from his doctor Thursday to ease the pressure on his arthritic right foot, and he wore the device at practice.

"He said everything was OK," O'Neal said. "I played today, and I felt pretty good. We'll just see tomorrow. Tonight is the true test, when I'm sleeping."

Lakers spokesman John Black said O'Neal's availability will depend on how he feels after this morning's shootaround.

"We'll just hold our breath until tomorrow and find out what it's like and see how he responds after this practice," coach Phil Jackson said. "He's had some swelling a little bit after practice, and he's had some soreness, but he doesn't have soreness while he's running, and that's the positive aspect."

Jackson said if O'Neal does return, he would play only about 24 minutes and probably would come off the bench.

"But he's going to be upset about that," Jackson said. "He already told me he would be."

Jackson said he urged O'Neal not to rush back, even though his presence would help the struggling NBA champions, who are off to a 3-9 start.

of rest in between. For speed conditioning, four to six 100-meter sprints are used to improve a runner's burst at the end of a race. Finally, there is a two- to three-mile warm-down for a total of 13 miles for per training session. Another Iowa staple is the Sunday 12- to 16-mile run.

But for now, the intense workouts are suspended.

"I feel kind of guilty only running five miles," Rae said. "But, we're really excited and proud to be going [to nationals]."

Wieczorek believes finishing in the top 24, the same as the Hawkeyes' national ranking, is a reasonable goal and one they can easily achieve. The runners are more ambitious.

"Finishing in the top 15 would be tremendous," Rae said. "Maybe we can get Coach W regional coach of the year. That would be an honor."

Even sports crowded with suits

BY JIM LITKE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

There are things that should make grown-ups ashamed, and sucking every last bit of sportsmanship out of kids' games must be near the top of the list.

Or maybe not. A judge will rule today in a lawsuit brought by parents of a Miami high-school team beaten by a field goal in the final seconds of a state playoff game a week ago.

Seven parents from Edison High contend game officials screwed up at least twice at the end and improperly gave Palm Beach Gardens Dwyer High the opportunity and time to kick the game-winner.

So they want a judge to halt the second round of the playoffs, scheduled to kick off later today, and order the final quarter of that game to be played over — at the very least.

Edison High Principal Santiago Corrada filed a protest immediately after the game, even though he knew the Florida High School Activities Association would not consider it. That lack of an appeals process became the basis for the parents' complaint.

"And I support them," he said. His school is one of the poorest in Miami, made up mostly of Haitian immigrants. In the few years he's been there, Corrada has seen the football program go from a source of embarrassment to one of great pride. It's also become his blind spot.

"We're supposed to teach young people about the rules of fair play, about the democratic process and how, if you follow rules, things will go your way," he said.

Just imagine if the parents prevail in court. The future of high-school sports will include at least one lawyer on each bench for each game. Every ref's decision will be subject to review until the end of time. No season at any level will ever end.

"True, it might set a precedent," lawyer Gordon Murray, representing the Edison High parents, said Thursday. "But I can't speak to that."

A Canadian parent named Michael Croteau could.

Reminding us that shame knows no national boundaries, the hockey dad sued the province of New Brunswick's amateur association for close to $300,000 because his 16-year-old son was not the league MVP last season.

Croteau asked the court to take the MVP trophy from the winner and give it to his son. He also wants the top-playmaker trophy taken from another undeserving winner and given to his son, plus a guaranteed roster spot for his son in the Canada Winter Games and compensation for his son's suffering.

But the real reason Croteau is doing all this?

"It will be an example to others," he told the Globe and Mail of Toronto.

Not that they needed much encouragement.

Because hockey is the only meal-ticket sport available to most Canadians, their courts have become the last resort for parents with too little sense and too much time and money invested in broken dreams.

Just days before Croteau's filing, a judge in Toronto threw out a case in which a coach and father of a 9-year-old player was accused of putting a bounty on the head of another 9-year-old player.

In the same province, a mother sued the Canadian Hockey Association to recover fees, the cost of lessons and damages for mental distress because her son was benched during a junior tournament. In Saskatchewan, the parents of a 15-year-old boy asked a court for $100,000 because he was denied a tryout with a traveling team, effectively derailing his career.

Considering how all these parents reacted to bad news, it's fortunate the mothers and fathers of the girls on Hart Lakeshore Public Academy's basketball team haven't been in touch with their lawyers — yet.

On Tuesday, Hart was beaten 115-2 in the Michigan state playoffs and afterward, Ron Stone-man, the athletics director for winning Walkerville High, said with a straight face, "It had the potential to be really, really bad."

What he meant was that Walkerville coach Steve Kirwin used players from both the junior varsity and freshmen teams and didn't press on defense the way his teams usually do.

At halftime, Kirwin noticed only three of his girls hadn't scored and decided they were the only ones allowed to shoot. After that, he was out of options.

"I'm not going to tell my kids to not continue to play," Kirwin said. "It's not that we wanted to score a ton of points."

Former division rivals clash when Packers take on Bucs

BY DAVE GOLDBERG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Green Bay Packers could have clinched the NFC North with a win last week. They didn't, and this week they go to Tampa in a game that could help determine whether Green Bay gets to spend the playoffs at Lambeau Field.

The Packers and Bucs share the NFL's best record (8-2) heading into their first non-division meeting since Tampa Bay joined the old NFC Central in 1977.

The Bucs are favored by three points, which is the home-field betting edge.

Folks in Florida seem to be getting excited about their team. Someone even asked coach Jon Gruden on Monday if it will be the biggest game of his career.

"Yesterday's game has been the biggest game that I have ever been involved in," replied Gruden, who two years ago at Oakland coached in a legitimately big game, for the AFC championship.

Despite Gruden's offensive expertise, his Bucs are performing in much the same way as they did under defensive-minded Tony Dungy — they win with defense. They could be vulnerable to Brett Favre this week because Ronde Barber, their best cornerback, has a broken thumb and will be hampered if he plays at all.

This series definitely has a home flavor to it. Since 1998, the Packers and Bucs are 4-4 against each other, with the home team winning every game.

If they meet in January, the Bucs very much want not to go to Green Bay. They have yet to break their losing streak in cold weather: 21 straight in temperatures under 40 degrees.

That's enough incentive. BUCS, 19-14

Woods shoots par at Dunlop Phoenix

BY JIM ARMSTRONG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIYAZAKI, Japan — Tiger Woods was happy to be at par after the way he played Thursday.

Woods, in his first tournament since the Tour Championship in Atlanta almost three weeks ago, settled for a 71 Thursday at the $1.65 million Dunlop Phoenix. He is seven strokes behind leader Darren Clarke of Northern Ireland.

"To shoot even par is a minor miracle," Woods said. "I didn't hit it well and didn't putt well but managed to salvage the round with a couple of birdies near the end."

Clarke, who is competing in his fifth Dunlop Phoenix, has a two-stroke lead over England's Justin Rose and Japan's Kaname Yokoo and Tsukasa Watanabe. Spanish star Sergio Garcia topped a five-player group at 67.

Clarke had six birdies on the front nine. He dropped a stroke with a bogey on No. 16, but rebounded with birdies on Nos. 17 and 18.

"The changes they've made to this course make it a lot more tricky," Clarke said. "But I putted as well as I have in years and got a couple of breaks that I made the most of."

Woods, playing in his third tournament in Japan, had four birdies and four bogeys in wet conditions at the 6,917-yard, par-71 Dunlop Phoenix Country Club.

West Virginia fans set campus fires

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — West Virginia students set fires on campus and hundreds tore down the goal posts at Mountaineer Field after the football team's road upset of No. 13 Virginia Tech on Wednesday night.

Emergency dispatchers reported that at one point there were fires burning throughout the city. Flames from one reached about 10-feet high as fans threw couches, mattresses, doors, clothes, carpets, firecrackers, and anything else they could find into the blaze.

Three people were arrested, but police did not disclose the charges. A dispatcher said the department would issue no more information Thursday morning.

"We do not condone the type of destructive behavior that occurred last night," West Virginia president David Hardesty said Thursday. "Celebrating a great victory is one thing, but doing it irresponsibly is another. We regret the actions of a few are reflecting poorly on others."

Bumper-to-bumper traffic packed downtown streets as drivers honked their horns in celebration of the win in Blacksburg, Va., hindering emergency response.

Firefighters had to use water hoses to disperse the crowds and gain access to a fire that burned too close to a house.

Senators beat Montreal on late goal

OTTAWA (AP) — Chris Phillips scored his first goal of the season late in the second period to lift the Ottawa Senators to a 3-2 victory over the Montreal Canadiens on Thursday night.

Phillips, a defenseman held to two assists through 16 games, scored 18:33 into the second to break a 2-2 tie.

Montreal's Jeff Hackett made 34 saves.

Petr Schastlivy and Daniel Alfredsson also scored for Ottawa.

Marian Hossa extended his point streak to eight games with an assist on Alfredsson's goal.

Murray scored off a faceoff, tying it at 1-1 at 8:45 of the second period. Joe Thornton won the draw over to Murray, who fired a slap shot past Kevin Weekes.

Philadelphia 2, San Jose 2

PHILADELPHIA — Jeremy Roenick's power-play goal with 7:29 left in regulation lifted the Philadelphia Flyers into their fourth tie in five games, 2-2 against the San Jose Sharks on Thursday night.

Teemu Selanne and Patrick Marleau each scored for the Sharks. Goaltender Robert Esche had 27 saves.

Selanne gave the Sharks a 1-0 lead three minutes into the second period with a power-play goal. Marleau made it 2-0 midway through the second period with his eighth goal.

John LeClair cut it to 2-1 with 6:14 left in the second. He stole a pass from goaltender Evgeni Nabokov behind the net, and backhanded a shot into an empty net.

Minnesota 4, Washington 3

WASHINGTON — Pascal Dupuis had a goal and two assists as the Minnesota Wild held off the Washington Capitals for a 4-3 victory Thursday night.

Dupuis gave the Wild a 4-2 lead at 9:52 of the third period.

Minnesota took a 1-0 lead when Antti Laaksonen scored 53 seconds into the game. They stretched it to 2-0 when Stephane Veilleux put slick moves on both defenseman Brendan Witt and goalie Olaf Kolzig to score at 6:30 of the second period.

Dupuis scored the insurance goal when his shot bounced off the stick of Washington's Rick Berry and in. Mika Grier scored for the Capitals with 5:33 left.

Miami dodges Pitt, 28-21

MIAMI (AP) — Pittsburgh threatened, and Miami held on.

Willis McGahee ran 19 times for 159 yards and scored two touchdowns as the top-ranked Hurricanes overcame another slow start and a frantic finish to earn a 28-21 win over the Panthers (No. 19 ESPN/USA Today, No. 17 AP) Thursday night at the Orange Bowl.

In a nationally televised game that gave Miami a chance to showcase Heisman Trophy teammates Ken Dorsey and McGahee, the sophomore running back had the majority of the highlights. But Rod Rutherford had almost as many for Pitt.

McGahee had a 69-yard touchdown run that tied the game just before halftime and added a leaping 4-yard score in the fourth quarter. After his second TD run, McGahee placed his fingers in the shape of a diamond — a pop-culture symbol that represents a dynasty.

The gesture might have been appropriate for the Hurricanes, but a bit premature.

The defending national champions extended their nation-best winning streak to 32 games, their Big East-record streak to 22 games, and moved two victories away from a berth in the Jan. 3 Fiesta Bowl. They finish the season at Syracuse and at home against struggling Virginia Tech. Miami also took over sole possession of first place in the Big East.

Pitt lost for just the third time in 17 games and had its conference winning streak snapped at nine games.

But after falling behind 28-14, the Panthers had a chance to tie in the final minutes. Rutherford scored on a 3-yard run with 4:37 to play, cutting it to 28-21. The Hurricanes had to punt, giving the Panthers the ball with 2:12 left.

They drove to the Miami 25, and Rutherford misfired on two consecutive passes. Then he connected with Yogi Roth for a 5-yard gain to set up a fourth-and-5 from the 20. Roth was wide open again, this time on a slant pass at the goal line, but Rutherford's pass sailed past his outstretched arms and through the end zone.

Mavs overcome Ming's 30 points

DALLAS (AP) — Not even 30 points from Yao Ming could stop the unbeaten Dallas Mavericks, who got 28 from Michael Finley and improved to 12-0 with a 103-90 victory Thursday night over the Houston Rockets.

Finley had six 3-pointers, and Dirk Nowitzki added 24 points for the Mavericks.

Ming had his best night as a pro, logging highs for points, rebounds with 16, and playing time with 33 minutes.

Dallas set a franchise record for consecutive wins at any point in a season, and tied for the fourth-best start in league history.

Their biggest obstacle to reaching the latest milestone was Ming.

He was 10-of-12 from the field, making him 31 of his last 35, and he hit 10-of-12 free throws.

Yao changed the game as soon as he entered late in the first quarter. Houston was trailing by 10, but he scored the game's next seven points and nine straight for the Rockets.

Sorenstam leads after first round, seeking 11th win

BY DOUG FERGUSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — The end of the year is no different from the beginning or any part in the middle. Annika Sorenstam is on her game, contending for yet another title in the ADT Championship.

Sorenstam gave herself ample birdie chances Thursday at Trump International and converted enough of them for a 5-under 67, giving her a share of the first-round lead with an ailing Se Ri Pak and Meg Mallon.

It was a solid showing by the top two players on the LPGA Tour.

Sorenstam already has won 10 times this year, the most on the LPGA in 34 years. Pak has had her best season with five victories, including her fourth major.

The South Korean was particularly impressive Thursday, considering an impacted tooth and a wrist injury nearly forced her to withdraw before she got to the first tee.

"I've never played golf when it was so difficult," Pak said.

Pak had the outright lead until driving into the rough on the final hole, hitting her approach into the bunker and failing to make a 7-foot par putt.

At least she finished — tied for the lead, no less.

"For her to play this well is pretty incredible," Sorenstam said.

The Swede wasn't too shabby herself. Sorenstam only missed one green in regulation, made her only bogey by three-putting on No. 14, and was never too far away from the cup.

Was she upset at missing so many birdie chances, or happy that she hit the ball well enough to have that many looks at birdie?

"It depends on what kind of mood you're in," she said. "I was patient on the front nine, but on the back nine it started to eat a little bit on the inside."

Pak would like to eat anything besides protein shakes, the only nutrition she can handle with a tooth that has been aching for two weeks.

That wasn't even the worst of it. Pak hurt her right wrist while warming up, blaming that on a body so weak she can't hold the club properly.

Oh, one other thing: She had to play with the best player in women's golf.

"I can't eat at all," she said. "It's hard to walk. It's hard to swing. The club feels so heavy. I'm trying to focus because I'm not feeling well. And playing with Annika made me more focused."

Pak certainly held up her end of the bargain. They spent most of a balmy, breezy afternoon trading birdies and limiting mistakes, taking advantage of the Trump at its tamest.

Defending champion Karrie Webb had a 3-under 69, despite taking bogey on the 18th hole and missing a 2-foot par putt on No. 14. She was joined by good friend Kelly Robbins, Lorie Kane of Canada, Rosie Jones, and Patricia Meunier-Lebouc of France.

"This is probably as tame as this course will probably be," Sorenstam said.

Sorenstam again was a model of consistency — fairways, greens, and making enough putts to wind up where everyone expected her to be.

Mallon didn't make too many mistakes. She thought this might be her day when she saved par with a 16-foot putt on the opening hole. It really started looking bright when she holed a wedge from 89 yards out of a sand-filled divot for eagle on No. 12.

Mallon was the only other player to get to 6 under, but she gave back a stroke on the 18th, through no fault of her own. Her chip from 30 yards short of the green hit the pin and bounced 10 feet away.

Still, she couldn't argue with the results.

Neither could Pak, especially since she thought about not returning to the United States for the final tournament of the year.

"It's too much pain. I shouldn't be here," Pak said before managing a bright smile. "However, I'm here. I'll try my best."

Divots: Patricia Meunier-Lebouc is considering a move to a better golf climate than her native France, narrowing her choices to two very different parts of the world — Palm Beach County or Australia. "I love Australia," she said. "You don't feel that stress" ... No one is at the whim of the LPGA Tour schedule like Mallon, who last year had time to attend the Ohio State-Michigan game. This time, the ADT Championship falls on the same weekend, and the hardcore Buckeyes fan is in a jam. "I'm going to videotape it," she said. "Please don't tell me what the score is Saturday."

Man convicted after early fight with Wells

BY SAMUEL MAULL ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A man was convicted of assault Thursday for punching Yankees pitcher David Wells and knocking out two of his teeth during an early morning fight in a diner.

harassment and possession of a weapon — a butter knife he was accused of waving at Wells after knocking the pitcher to the ground on Sept. 7.

The trial began with Mazurek telling the jury that Wells was "stinking drunk" on the morning of the fracas inside an Upper East Side diner in Manhattan.

It was the 6-foot-4, 245-pound Wells, according to Mazurek and friends of Graziosa, who grabbed the smaller man. Graziosa struck Wells in self-defense, the lawyer contended.

Rocco Graziosa was acquitted of two other charges after a weeklong trial in Manhattan Criminal Court. The 27-year-old Graziosa faces up to a year in jail when he is sentenced Jan. 15. He will remain free on $1,500 bail and was ordered to stay away from Wells.

The Yankees' star was not in court Thursday, and Graziosa showed no emotion when the verdict was read. He and defense attorney Harry Mazurek had no comment.

Graziosa was acquitted of

by Cathie Hennrich

Why the revolution will not be televised

- All the major news networks will be busy covering the Winona Ryder trial.
- Executives at MTV will mistake the footage for an outdated Rage Against the Machine video.
- Networks will be uneasy showing burning of the American flag because they're currently using it as their primary logo.
- Student government won't be able to cut through the bureaucratic red tape to get the footage on UTV.
- There won't be enough nudity, violence, and foul language to attract viewers.
- Michael Eisner thinks that the age-old socioeconomic struggle of the proletariat against the oppression of the bourgeois "just isn't Disney."
