Herbold pushes for funding records

BY AMY JENNINGS
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI Student Government President Nick Herbold requested financial records Monday for an account that a university administrator has dipped into for nearly $60,000 in order to assist private companies.

Herbold said he made the request because he was unhappy a recent internal audit on student fees did not examine the account that Phillip Jones, the vice president for Student Services, used to invest in Planet X and Uptown Bill's Small Mall.

Jones recently notified Herbold that the funds came from a separate account. Herbold has requested the records from this account in order to learn more about how it has been spent.

"Regardless of where the money was coming from, there was confusion about Planet X, and Dean Jones has the burden to clear it up," Herbold said. "I am still curious, and I still don't understand how the account that paid for Planet X works."

Jones said he did not request an audit of that account because it does not include Student Activity Fees and is not under the jurisdiction of UISG.

The account now in question is made up of accumulated revenues from old soft-drink vending contracts, Jones said. The commissions account pays for legitimate university expenses that aren't funded by appropriations and is monitored by the Business Office, he said.

NCS agrees to $7 million deal for bad scores

BY BRIAN BAKST
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. PAUL — The testing company that wrongly scored thousands of Minnesota high-school exams required for graduation has agreed to pay up to $7 million to students as part of a settlement, attorneys announced Monday.

The tests were scored in Iowa City.

Students will be eligible for up to $16,000. Those who experienced only some adverse consequences may receive only $362.50. Larger sums will go to students who didn't graduate on time or dropped out after being improperly failed.

Students who had to take summer-school classes will get $275 on top of the other money unless they're already getting the maximum. Out-of-pocket costs, such as lost wages, will also be covered as will an award to students who can prove they were treated for emotional distress.

"We think the results were outstanding. We're thrilled," said Joe Snodgrass, an attorney for the students.

He said the settlement is worth up to $12 million because NCS Pearson will pay attorneys' fees and try to reach students who may be eligible for part of the class-action settlement.

Lindsay Arthur, an attorney for NCS Pearson, said the company considers it a fair settlement and agreed to it as a way to move on.

"NCS is in the business of scoring tests, not in the business of litigating lawsuits," he said. "They wanted to put this behind them."

NCS Pearson announced last week that it received a five-year, $83 million contract from the federal government to score the National Assessment of Educational Progress exams, also known as "the nation's report card." The data help to gauge academic proficiency as part of the "No Child Left Behind" education legislation.

Since the error, Minnesota switched testing companies to Maple Grove-based Data Recognition Corp.

The settlement comes almost 2½ years after state education officials disclosed that NCS Pearson used the wrong answer key on 47,000 tests given in February and April 2000. Approximately 8,000 students, from eighth-graders to high-school seniors, were told they failed when they had actually passed. Several dozen missed their class graduation ceremonies because of it.

Jake Plumley, 21, of St. Paul, who now paints houses for a living, couldn't participate in his commencement at Harding High School because of the error.

Pierce jerseys leave local shops in bind

BY GRANT SCHULTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Several shops readying their merchandise for the Hawkeye basketball season are holding back Pierre Pierce jerseys until they decide how to handle a touchy ethical conundrum.

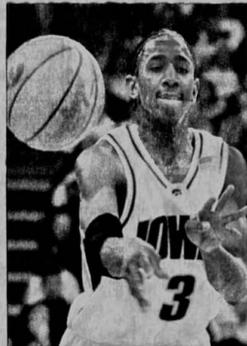

Do they sell the clothing and risk a public outcry and offending some customers, or lose thousands of dollars keeping the jerseys off their racks?

For Hawkeye men's basketball jerseys this year, Nike printed only the sophomore guard's, No. 3, because of a decision by the UI Athletics Department earlier this year, when Pierce was the team's rising star.

Pierce was sentenced Nov. 1 to 200 hours of community service and one year of probation as part of a plea bargain in which he admitted to "inappropriate sexual conduct" with a woman at his home. Pierce also agreed to red-shirt this season. The plea and the UI's decision to allow Pierce to retain his scholarship and rejoin the team next season has sparked a campuswide uproar.

Selling those jerseys for a profit, part of which ultimately ends up in the university's coffers, could add more fuel to protesters' fire.

"Any sort of team paraphernalia that glorifies him in any way is unacceptable," said Alicia Walker, a third-year law student who is spearheading a petition asking the university to re-evaluate its handling of Pierce's case. "It may be an awkward situation for [the university], but to me, the more awkward situation is the bad publicity the university would invite by selling them."

Local businesses face a tough choice deciding whether to sell Pierre Pierce's No. 3 jersey.

Though Pierce's name does not appear on the jerseys, the university should not sell the merchandise to avoid sending the wrong message to the community, she said. The university receives 7.5 percent in royalties on most Hawkeye apparel sales.

UI's panel interviewing candidates

BY TONY ROBINSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Members of the UI Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee are now traveling across the country to interview roughly a dozen potential candidates to become the next university president.

The candidates are qualified on paper, but panel members who selected Mary Sue Coleman in 1995 say that personality is an essential factor in selecting a new leader.

"Obviously, people are interviewed because of their impressive credentials, but our job was to see what a person was like," said cardiology Professor Donald Heistad, who participated in the off-campus interviews seven years ago.

Ex-UI worker charged with theft

Woman allegedly misused funds in the classics department

BY KELLEY CASINO
THE DAILY IOWAN

A former UI employee is accused of misusing more than $10,000 in university funds over a three-year period during which she controlled a checking account in the classics department.

Loretta Fay Gronewold, 35, has been charged with second-degree theft, tampering with records, and forgery for alleged actions between Dec. 1, 1998 and Feb. 8. She was arrested by UI police.

Reached at her Coralville home Monday, she said, "The account in question was opened because I was told to by my boss." She refused to answer any other questions.

Gronewold, who worked in Schaeffer Hall, allegedly misappropriated university checks from the account she oversaw in the amount of $7,171.81, police records show.

She also allegedly used a university credit card to purchase furniture for the department in the amount of $2,231.02. Staff members in that department were unable to locate the furniture, records show.

Additionally, Gronewold was charged with forging the signatures of three staff members on university vouchers to pay for various merchandise and a hotel room, totaling $510.53. She also allegedly forged the signature of another staff member on departmental checks payable to herself for a total of $582.86.

Staff members told police that their signatures had been forged.

Public Safety began investigating this case more than six months ago, said Capt. Larry Langley, adding that "the case is still an active investigation until the courts dispose of it."

University officials were tightlipped about the case Monday, not explaining how the case came to their attention and whether other employees were being investigated. Helena Dettmer, the former director of the classics department, could not be reached for comment Monday.

Steve Parrott, the director of University Relations, said the university would have no comment until the case was resolved in the courts. It marks the second time this fall that a former UI employee has been charged after allegedly misusing funds. Pat Palmer, a former researcher, allegedly embezzled more than $53,000 by falsifying travel vouchers from 1998 to 2000.

Gronewold spent the night in the Johnson County Jail on Nov. 23. She was released on her own recognizance after she went to court Sunday morning, a jail official said.

She faces up to two years in prison and a maximum fine of $5,000 for the tampering with records charge, an aggravated misdemeanor. The second-degree theft and forgery charges, both class D felonies, are each punishable by up to five years in prison and a maximum $7,500 fine.

3rd convenience store in 3 days hit

BY KELLEY CASINO
THE DAILY IOWAN

The third Iowa City convenience-store robbery in three days has police working around the clock to solve the rash of heists before another is committed.

Hawkeye Convenience Store, 300 Kirkwood Ave., reported to police that at 10:19 p.m. Sunday a lone, unarmed man robbed the store of an undisclosed amount of money and then fled the scene on foot. This is the second time the store has been hit in a month.

The incident directly follows the armed robberies of Gasby's, 2303 Muscatine Ave., and a Sinclair service station and convenience store, 2153 ACT Circle, on Nov. 23.

The descriptions of the suspects in all three cases may point to one person, police said.

Source: DI research CK/DI believe that it's one person or a small group responsible for all three robberies," said police Sgt. Mike Brotherton.

The motives, physical descriptions, and weapon(s) used in the robberies indicate that it could be the same person because few details have been released on the cases that would provoke copy cats to rob the stores using the same method, Brotherton said.

"We're hopeful that it's one person, but at this point, we don't know for sure," he said.

In each of the cases, only one clerk was on duty, and no one was injured during the incidents.

Brotherton said the Hawkeye Convenience Store clerk felt something on the small of her back during the holdup, but she did not see a weapon and was never directly threatened with one.

Police Lt. Richard Wyss said detectives Kristen Adkins and Steve Duffy are the two detectives assigned to the robbery cases.

Wyss said that in robbery cases, the police try to gather any type of physical evidence available at the scene as well as video surveillance and get the information out to the public to generate leads.

Detectives are following several leads, but no suspects have been arrested.

The suspect in the first robbery at the Hawkeye Convenience Store on Oct. 22, described as a black man in his 30s, has not been apprehended. No weapon was used in that case.

Anyone with information is asked to call the police at 356-5275.

Hawkeye fans rushing to smell the roses

BY PETER RUGG
THE DAILY IOWAN

As Hawkeye fans hope for the football team to receive a Rose Bowl invitation, some are passing the time by securing game tickets and booking reservations to Pasadena, Calif.

The UI Athletics Ticket Office has already taken 5,000 orders for bowl tickets, said David Sandstrum, the athletics ticket manager.

The office gives season-ticket holders two options: Either purchase a ticket for admission exclusively for the Rose Bowl or buy a general bowl ticket that guarantees entry into whichever bowl game the Hawkeyes play. Both $125 ticket options are refundable.

Nonseason-ticket holders may purchase Rose Bowl tickets at the office but not general bowl tickets.

The Bowl Championship Series will publish its final standings on Dec. 8.

UI sophomore Samantha Lane, a season-ticket holder who has already purchased Rose Bowl tickets through the ticket office, said the game is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

"I've always been a football fan, so if we go to a bowl game, I have to be there," she said. "I can always look back and say I was a sophomore in college the year Iowa went to the Rose Bowl, and I knew those people or I had class with some of them."

More than a dozen area travel agencies have reported a huge increase in business over the last week, with most deals concerning Iowa's postseason.

"We've been hopping since last week," said Vicki Smith, a manager at AAA Travel, 2620

Muscatine Ave. "Nine out of 10 calls have been about a Rose Bowl package."

Each agency reported an increase in inquiries, but none could estimate how many of the roughly 300 packages have been sold. Travel representatives said, however, that they expect the packages to sell out within the next few weeks.

Rose Bowl packages generally cost from $899 to $1,899. Some trips include tours of Pasadena, parade tickets, pep rallies, and cruises.

Packages are refundable, and fans have the option of redirecting their trips to whichever bowl game the Hawkeyes are invited to.

While the price of a bowl trip may be expensive, the cost is well worth it, said UI junior Mike Hensing, who plans on being in California this New Year's.

Rose Bowl travel package prices (per person) based on double occupancy:

Meacham Travel Services	$1,499
Airfare from Eastern Iowa Airport; game and parade tickets; three nights lodging; transportation in Pasadena; souvenirs; Hawkeye Huddle; arrival party.
Prime Time Tickets	$899
Game and parade tickets, five nights lodging.
Short's Travel Service	$1,549
Airfare from Cedar Rapids or Des Moines; game and parade tickets; four nights lodging; transportation in Pasadena; souvenirs; Hawkeye victory bash.
Travel Concepts	$1,695
Airfare from Des Moines, Cedar Rapids, or the Quad Cities; four nights lodging; game and parade tickets; transportation in Pasadena; pep rally.
Winebrenner Red Carpet Travel	$1,395
Airfare from Eastern Iowa Airport; game ticket; four nights lodging; transportation in Pasadena; souvenirs; Hawkeye Huddle.

"It's just the prestige of the game and the physical struggle it takes to get there," he said. "It's an honor to be invited. Especially when you look at where this team has come from in the last few years."

Thanks, but no thanks, say some American Indians

BY RYAN PARNELL
THE DAILY IOWAN

Pilgrims and Indians. To most Americans, the two go together like peas in a pod, but many American Indians say they believe the popular Thanksgiving image only misrepresents their cultural heritage.

"I get really irritated and tired of seeing the stereotypical little caricatures of little Indians with feathers holding hands with solemn Pilgrims," said UI graduate student Erin Contreras, a Sicangu Lakota Indian. "It's another falsehood that America has placed in its history books to smooth over the genocide."

Contreras, whose Indian name is Thin Elk, said her family does not celebrate Thanksgiving because of the whole falsehood of Pilgrims and Indians eating together.

"We have a traditional dinner to celebrate being with family, to be happy and healthy, and to eat a lot of food," she said. "The only thing we do differently is pray with sage and sweet grass and fix a spirit food plate that holds a small portion of each dish as an offering to the spirits."

Today, most American Indians have been assimilated into white culture and celebrate the same holidays such as Thanksgiving and Christmas just for fun, said UI senior Quannah Walker, a Meskwaki Indian.

"Thanksgiving is just a holiday we've adopted from American culture," he said. "It doesn't mean anything to us, but offers us time with family, time off work, and time away from school."

Walker said he and most American Indians, who number 121 at the UI, don't like being used as a symbol to represent Thanksgiving. They are especially bothered when people dress up as Indians and use their image as a source of cheap fun.

"It's not fair to have a bunch of little white kids running around dressed as Indians in elementary school and then not teach them the accurate history of our people," Walker said.

Although many American Indians wish accurate portrayals of Indians were taught in schools to help remove misconceptions, Contreras said it isn't likely to happen.

"Everyone probably wouldn't want to hear the truth, because it paints the 'holy' Pilgrims in a bad light, making them the antagonists," she said.

The first written description of Thanksgiving as it is now celebrated appears in a 1622 English publication Mourt's Relation. According to the document, the Pilgrims and Indians enjoyed a massive feast and were on friendly terms.

A differing account was given in an 1836 oration by activist William Apess from the American Indians' point of view. He was summarized as saying "the Pilgrims landed and without asking liberty of anyone, possessed land for themselves ... and yet the Indians without bloodshed or imprisoning anyone, accepted it. And yet for their kindness and resignation toward the whites, they were called savages."

While American Indians such as Contreras and Walker will continue to celebrate Thanksgiving and embrace their heritage, they hope society will someday recognize their true culture.

"People can't just pull us out and recognize us when they want to," said Walker. "It minimizes American Indians and takes away from our people."

CITY BRIEF

Facilities-services finalists named

A UI search committee has named the five finalists for the post of associate vice president for the Facilities Services Group after fielding 122 applications from across the country.

The finalists are Donald Guckert, the director of planning, design, and construction at the University of Missouri-Columbia; Theodore Weidner, the chief facilities officer for the University of Massachusetts-Amherst; Bobby Criminger, the executive director of facilities-management services at Cleveland State University; Steve Atkins, the Iowa City city manager; and Andrew Ives, UI business manager and interim associate vice president for UI facilities services.

Each candidate will visit campus for final interviews starting the week of Dec. 2.

"It's a job that includes a lot of complicated operations, such as design and construction of new buildings and operations management," said Barbara Eckstein, the chairwoman of the search committee. "It takes someone with an eye for architecture and very good leadership skills."

The director also is responsible for strategic and operational leadership.

"To be able to balance all these skills it takes a certain kind of character. The associate vice president is the umbrella of leadership for all [campus-building] activities," Eckstein said.

—by Christy B. Logg

POLICE LOGS

Paris Charles Roby, 30, address unknown, was arrested and charged Nov. 24 with possession of crack cocaine with intent to deliver and drug tax-stamp violation stemming from an alleged March 13 incident.

Brian Arthur Embree, 41, Oxford, was charged Sunday with violation of a domestic-abuse protective order on at least two occasions. A Johnson County sheriff's deputy allegedly witnessed Embree speaking to his ex-wife at Colonial Lanes, police records show. The woman has a no-contact order against him, and she was crying as Embree was talking to her, which prompted the deputy to approach them; records show.

Cody Ryan Marquette, 16, Cedar Rapids, was charged Monday with assault causing injury and public intoxication. Marquette was allegedly involved in a fight in the Dubuque Street parking ramp; Guadalupe Camarena Chavez, 32, 2018 Waterfront No. 55, was charged Tuesday with domestic assault causing injury. Chavez allegedly struck his live-in girlfriend in the side of the nose with an open hand and pushed her to the ground. He allegedly admitted to police that he assaulted the woman, according to police records.

Institute helps local woman clean up

BY JESSE HELLING
THE DAILY IOWAN

Bajric Cleaning Service is open for business.

One of 1,700 small enterprises started with the help of the Coralville-based Institute for Social and Economic Development, the cleaning business was launched last month out of the home of Nermina Bajric, the proprietor and sole employee.

"It's much better to be your own boss," said Bajric, who previously worked as a housekeeper for the Radisson Hotel, 2525 N. Dodge St. The development institute, a nonprofit organization that helps low-income families achieve financial stability, recently received a $500,000 grant from the Annie E. Casey Foundation, a Boston-based establishment that rewards organizations that help low-income families become more self-sufficient. The Coralville institute will determine how to use the money by January 2003, spokesman Mark Nolte said.

The institute is particularly known for helping families start small businesses, like Bajric.

Two nights a week, Bajric vacuums, dusts, and mops for Prudential, an insurance company in Iowa City. She said she hopes to expand her clientele in the coming months.

Originally from Bosnia, Bajric, her husband, Hasan, and their two daughters fled the war-torn country in May 1997.

"Before the war, we had a beautiful life," Bajric said. She and her husband worked in a textile factory in Bos Dubica, in northwest Bosnia.

After initially settling in Germany, the family members made their way to Waterloo in March 1999, staying with friends until moving to Coralville later that year.

Bajric, who also works as a part-time translator for the UI Hospitals and Clinics, participated in the development institute's 13-week small-business training course.

"All our training is provided free of cost," Nolte said. "We try to offer help at a basic, grassroots level."

In addition to training, the institute helps to secure funds for prospective entrepreneurs.

"We bring a variety of different funding options to the table," Nolte said. Since the organization was founded in 1988, nearly $9 million have been obtained by 8,000 Iowa families.

"They helped her do something

I don't think she could have done on her own," said Bajric's daughter Sarah, a senior at West High School. She and her younger sister, Zana, help their mother in her business.

"We're her slaves," Sarah said, laughing.

However, the cleaning service is unlikely to become a family tradition: Sarah hopes to become a lawyer, while Zana would like to become president of the United States.

Both girls speak highly of their mother's accomplishments.

"She really finds her way around," Sarah said. "She tries to do the best for us here, even though it's hard leaving your own country and trying to make a new start."

States face worst $ crunch since WWII

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — States are facing a budget shortfall of $40 billion this year, coming on the heels of a similar shortage last year, according to a National Governors Association report released Monday.

"Unfortunately, we think we've got the worst fiscal situation for the states since the Second World War," said Ray Scheppach, the group's executive director.

While the economy has been weak, that accounts for only part of the problem. Outdated tax systems and soaring health-care costs have aggravated state budget woes from coast to coast, Scheppach said.

"Most states have tax systems built for a manufacturing economy of the 1950s," he said. "Revenues are not keeping up with measures of normal economic output."

In addition, health care now amounts to as much as 30 percent of many state budgets.

"That's a national problem," Scheppach said.

The collapse of the stock market also put a big financial pinch on the states, he noted.

"There's been a virtual collapse of the capital-gains tax revenue," he said.

The structural problems facing the states was largely masked during the boom years of the 1990s.

State spending for the current year, as initially approved by legislatures across the country, was 1.3 percent larger than last year, but that won't last, he said.

"We've already got 23 states that have announced $8.3 billion in cuts," Scheppach said. "States are going to have to cut a lot more this year, and I think the average growth will be negative."

While a handful of states are weathering the fiscal crisis — largely those benefiting from special taxes such as energy — most are suffering from the pinch, he said.

"This is pretty much across the nation," he said.

Particularly grim is the soaring cost of Medicaid, which provides health care for the poor and elderly.

"We'll have 35 states that will have to cut Medicaid this year," Scheppach said.

Even key priorities like education will come under fire, he said.

"States are trying to protect education, but it's difficult and it may have to be on the table," he said.

Worse, Scheppach said, the numbers he cited are several months old and the financial picture for many states has deteriorated since that time.

Scheppach spoke during a conference call with Iowa reporters, a session arranged by Gov. Tom Vilsack's aides, likely to set the stage for yet another round of budget battling when the Iowa Legislature convenes in January.

There are estimates that the state faces a shortfall of up to $400 million, and Vilsack said the state is suffering from same economic woes that are hampering states across the country.

Litter cost Iowa $13 million, group reports

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Litterbugs cost the state almost $13.5 million last year, but very little of that was spent on litter prevention, a new study said Monday.

Activists said the report underscores the need for larger penalties and tighter enforcement of anti-littering laws, as well as a renewed focus on the issue.

"We're a state where we've become more comfortable being trash collectors than preventing it," said Gerald Schnepf, the executive director of Keep Iowa Beautiful, a nonprofit group dedicated to litter prevention and beautification projects.

At a news conference, the group released a series of studies depicting the breadth of the litter problem in Iowa, along with surveys showing that most Iowans would support tougher litter laws.

"Iowans have a deep concern over the beauty of their state and take great pride in helping to keep Iowa beautiful," said Donald Lamberti, the chairman of the group. Lamberti is the board chairman of Casey's

General Stores Inc. of Ankeny.

Schnepf said $13.5 million in tax dollars was spent on litter control last year, but barely $200,000 of that went to litter prevention or enforcement. He noted that at one time anti-litter signs dotted roadways, but they've largely disappeared.

The group also looked at what was being discarded and found clear trends. Roughly a third was tobacco-related and another third was associated with fast food, candy, or snacks.

The state's bottle-deposit law appears to be working, the group concluded, because only 2 percent of the litter collected was containers covered by the deposit law.

One of the key issues in the debate is the fine for littering, which is $35. That's probably not enough to deter littering and should be increased, Schnepf said.

Combining education programs with tighter enforcement could make a significant difference, he said.

"An ounce of prevention may be worth a pound of cure," he said. "It is obvious from the data that Iowa has not invested in that ounce of prevention."

Bush signs homeland bill

BY JOHN MINTZ
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Monday signed into law the long-awaited bill to create a new Department of Homeland Security, the cabinet-level superagency that will combine 22 separate federal agencies to protect America from terrorism. He nominated former Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Ridge to be its secretary.

Ridge, who has advised Bush on homeland defense for the past year as head of the Office of Homeland Security, now faces the mammoth task of melding together federal organizations with unique and, at times, conflicting mandates, traditions, and cultures.

"We're taking historic action to defend the United States and protect our citizens from the dangers of a new era," Bush said at a White House signing ceremony moments before he placed his signature on the new law. "We're showing the resolve of this great nation to defend our freedom, our security, and our way of life."

Ridge will take office on Jan. 24 and begin appointing top subordinates; on March 1, a number of the component agencies will be transferred into the new department. All the agencies will be merged into the department by Sept. 30, 2003.

Bush nominated two other senior members of his administration to join Ridge in the new agency: Navy Secretary Gordon England to be Ridge's deputy secretary, and Asa Hutchinson, the administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration and formerly an Arkansas congressman, to head the division that oversees border and transportation security.

Bush initially resisted calls to establish a homeland-security department, which was originally proposed by Sen. Joseph

Ken Lambert/Associated Press

President Bush on Monday looks up at Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., left, as Bush signs legislation creating the Department of Homeland Security. Lieberman first proposed creating the new Cabinet department.

Lieberman, D-Conn. But the president changed his mind last summer as congressional pressure grew and as criticism mounted of the performance of the CIA and the FBI before the Sept. 11 attacks. Ridge had said for months that he was not seeking the job of secretary of the new agency, but he, too, reversed course and ended up working for the appointment, government sources said.

Legislation to create the new department was delayed for months by Senate Democrats, who resisted demands by Bush for new authority to establish work-force rules for the department's employees. This month's election, which gave Republicans control of the Senate, guaranteed a victory for Bush, and Democrats quickly relented.

The new department will have 170,000 employees and bring together such agencies as the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Secret Service, the Customs Service, the Federal Emergency Management Administration, the Transportation Security Administration, and the Border Patrol. It will analyze terrorism intelligence to match it against the nation's vulnerabilities, develop new technologies to detect threats, coordinate the training and funding of state and local police and fire departments, and scrutinize America's borders and ports of entry.

A number of the largest agencies — the Coast Guard, the Secret Service, Customs, the INS, and the Transportation Safety Administration — will transfer to the new department on March 1, according to the master plan. Other agencies will make the move later; the Agriculture Department's Plum Island Animal Disease Center, among others, will join the department on June 1.

NATION BRIEF

Candidate pay OK'd

WASHINGTON — The Federal Election Commission voted Monday to allow challengers in congressional races to pay themselves a salary from their campaign funds, a move designed to enable more people with modest incomes to run for the House and Senate.

Republicans and Democrats described the 5-1 vote, which overturned past rulings, as a way to level the political playing field for middle-class Americans wanting to run against a senator or representative, whose annual salaries next year will grow to $155,000.

"This is very significant," said Sam Popkin, a University of California-San Diego political scientist who has advised several Democratic presidential candidates. "It helps a lot of candidates move up the food chain, risking a shot at Congress and still feeding the family."

Michael Toner, the FEC Republican member who pushed the regulation, said under the new rules, "blue collar workers, teachers, middle-class people" can afford to take time off from work to campaign. "Why should the only people running be incumbents or multimillionaires?" he asked.

Feds break huge ID-theft case

BY LARRY NEUMEISTER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Federal authorities broke up what they called the biggest identity theft case in U.S. history and charged three men Monday with stealing credit information from more than 30,000 people, draining victims' bank accounts, and ruining their credit.

U.S. Attorney James Comey said the losses were calculated so far at $2.7 million but would balloon to many more millions and affect consumers in every state. He called the case "every American's worst financial nightmare multiplied tens of thousands of times."

"With a few keystrokes, these men essentially picked the pockets of tens of thousands of Americans and, in the process, took their identities, stole their money, and swiped their security," the prosecutor said.

Authorities said the scheme began approximately three years ago, when Philip Cummings, a help-desk worker at Teledata Communications, a Long Island software company, sold passwords and codes for downloading consumer-credit reports to an unidentified person.

Cummings was allegedly paid roughly $30 for each report, and the information was then passed on to at least 20 other people, who set out to make money from the stolen information, prosecutors said.

"The potential windfall was probably far greater than the content of a bank vault, and they didn't even need a getaway car. All they needed was a phone and a computer, or so they thought," said FBI Assistant Director Kevin Donovan.

More than 15,000 credit reports were stolen from Experian, a credit-history bureau, using passwords belonging to Ford Motor Credit Corp., officials said.

They said thousands of other credit reports were stolen from companies such as Washington Mutual Finance Co. in Crossville, Tenn.; Dollar Bank in Cleveland; Sarah Bush Lincoln Health Center in Illinois; the Personal Finance Co. in Frankfort, Ind.; the Medical Bureau in Clearwater, Fla.; Vintage Apartments in Houston; and Community Bank of Chaska in Chaska, Minn.

Victims have reported losing money from their bank accounts, seeing their credit cards hit with unauthorized charges, and having their identities assumed by strangers.

Comey said one sobbing victim telephoned prosecutors to say someone stole her identity, opened a $35,000 line of credit, and cashed a check for $34,000.

"So that's now on her back, that $34,000," he said. "The people that take the hit ultimately will be all of us, although in the short term it will be the companies that paid on the credit cards, the banks that lent them money."

Comey said many victims may not yet know they were defrauded. He urged consumers to pay closer attention to their financial statements and credit histories and learn how to protect themselves through the Federal Trade Commission's Web site.

Comey said there was no reason to suspect a terrorism connection, with simple greed the apparent motive. He said prosecutors were sending letters to the more than 30,000 victims, offering help.

Senate finds breath of past

BY ALAN FRAM

WASHINGTON — The handwriting is a fastidious cursive, the signatures include those of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, the columns record an era when senators were paid the lofty wage of $6 a day.

Had Senate aides not stumbled upon the unassuming brown ledger on Nov. 19, lying on a shelf in a basement storage room, workers clearing space for construction of a new visitors' center would have tossed it into the trash two days later.

The volume covers 1790 through 1881, and it was surely considered mundane in its day. Its 400 neatly lined pages record senators' $6-a-day salaries and separate travel allowances of up to $6 a day, figured at 30 cents per mile for up to 20 miles a day, including food and lodging.

Viewed from the 21st century, the book is a window into a simpler time. So simple, in fact, that Adams, Jefferson, Aaron Burr, John C. Calhoun, and other vice presidents signed it to authorize the Treasury to pay lawmakers' salaries and expenses.

"Between two covers, you see a raw slice of how the Senate operated as an institution ... during its first 90 years of existence," Richard Baker, the Senate historian, said after a news conference Monday where it was exhibited for cameras.

The ledger itself is about two inches thick and its ink seeps with age.

The earliest entry is dated Jan. 19, 1790, and records the salaries and expenses of the 20 senators who made it to Philadelphia for the second session of the first Congress. The total came to $10,655.50.

Six dollars went a long way in those years, particularly at a time when being a senator was a part-time job.

In Philadelphia during the 1790s, a ship's captain earned $9 per month; a typical family of four would spend approximately $19 monthly for food, clothing, and firewood; and $6 would purchase six gallons of rum, said Karie Diethorn, chief curator at the Independence National Historical Park there.

Baker said lawmakers averaged about $1,000 a year in pay — excluding travel expenses — over the first decades of the title on its cover, was found when Clare Amoruso and Douglas Connolly, aides to the Senate Democratic Policy Committee, spied it on a shelf next to boxes of 1982 health-care enrollment forms for Senate employees.

"It was an 'Oh, my God' kind of moment," Amoruso said. "And I kept saying to Doug, 'They must be a copy.'"

"I mean, we're holding something in our hands that has, you know, John Adams' name on it," said Connolly, adding, "But by the time we got to Thomas Jefferson — I mean, that's a signature everybody knows, and that's the point we realized we have to tell somebody about this."

By the time Baker saw it, the book had been taken to the Senate curator's office. He said he knew instantly that the document was an original from the condition of the paper and the ink on it.

Besides dry accounting, the book offers a bit of insight to some of the period's historical chapters.

It contains notes written during the early 1830s from the Treasury Department's auditor, warning that the Senate had overstated its accounts and should return the funds within a month. Baker said he believes this was part of a battle between Congress and President Andrew Jackson over setting up a national bank.

Southern senators who joined the Confederacy simply stopped being paid, he said.

Approximately 60 other Senate record books of lesser historical value were also found.

Baker said he hopes to have the entire volume available on the Senate Web site within six months.

Senate's history. Today's senators are paid $150,000 a year plus some travel costs.

The document's existence was not a complete surprise because published congressional papers refer to such records being used by the office of Senate's financial clerk as late as the 1960s. Baker said officials believed in the 1980s that they had rescued all the records.

The book was probably rushed from the Capitol as the British were approaching the building to burn it in 1814, said Baker. It was re-bound in brown canvas in 1884, and somehow its cloth-based paper remains in excellent condition, despite its casual storage for so many years.

"This book is the ultimate survivor," he said.

What to do with $200 billion

Recent estimates have put the cost of war in Iraq at $200 billion and 500,000 lives lost, mostly Iraqi civilians. President Bush tells us that this is the cost of making the world a better place to live. That's a high cost for uncertain future benefits. Is it worth the gamble? Let's examine some more promising alternatives for spending $200 billion to improve the world and our nation. There are more than 40 million people across the globe living with HIV/AIDS. The cost of fully funding the under-funded global fight against HIV/AIDS — a mere $6.5 billion for 2003.

Millions of children die every year of hunger and preventable diseases. The U.N. Children's Fund assists children living in poverty in developing nations with a budget of $1.2 billion per year. In the United States, elderly citizens face skyrocketing prescription-drug prices. The Republican plan to offset these costs has a price tag of $350 billion over 10 years. That's just $35 billion per year.

Many of America's 50 million schoolchildren are being educated in chronically under-funded schools. The federal government plans to spend $56.5 billion on education in 2003.

In 2001, 32.9 million Americans were living in poverty. And last month, 8.2 million American workers were unemployed. "It's the economy, stupid."

Before we pursue violence abroad, perhaps we should consider the violence here at home. We all know that more than 3,000 people died in the Sept. 11 attacks. But did you know that we Americans murdered 16,000 of our own people that same year?

Don't let the president squander our money on an unjustified war against Iraq. Contact the president, and let him know how you want your tax dollars spent — (202) 456-1111 or president@whitehouse.gov.

Why not?

You turn on the television to watch UTV. Disappointed not to see students on television? Maybe. Would you like to watch newscasts, entertainment programs, or projects that are student-centered? Sure, why not?

University students have a common goal: to graduate. A number of majors correlate with the field of television. Communication studies has more than 900 undergraduates. Other majors correlating with television are English, journalism, theater, and film.

It's time, as mentioned in the Oct. 29 editorial, "UITV airtime proposal will broaden its appeal to students," that the university grants a proposal from Student Video Productions to share UITV airtime. The undergraduate programs, as mentioned above, can fully benefit from the proposal.

If one researched national universities, one would find student-centered television stations on campuses. Numerous television reporters had their first opportunities on their university campus. Higher education is about applying knowledge from the classroom, right?

With tuition on the rise, why not put some of the money into UTV? It's time to allow hard work in the classroom to pay off in the practical side. It would be great for the university to be known for the experiences and opportunities it offers in television besides hospitals and athletics programs. Why can't we have a television station where university students come together to carry out a goal: communicating to university viewers visually and verbally? It would be exciting for viewers to gain knowledge and an understanding of university-centered events, lectures, and projects only a click away on UTV. Wouldn't it? Sure, why not?

A new view

Katherine Peterson suggests we adopt a new perspective toward the celebration of Columbus Day (DI, Nov. 14). While we agree that existing beliefs surrounding this "holiday" should be challenged, misinformation must not be replaced with further inaccuracies. We'd like to pose a few questions concerning her proposal.

She implies that all Europeans came to the New World in search of freedom. Didn't Columbus, like the majority of European "explorers" and subsequent immigrants, traverse the ocean in search of personal gain and riches? Didn't Columbus spend his last years in Seville fighting for a larger share of New World property, not praying on his knees in Hispaniola?

Peterson suggests we celebrate "the political freedom that defines our country." Is political freedom something to celebrate in the United States? Aren't 280 million of us governed by a two-party system? Are third-party candidates given equal access to public debate? Wasn't a popularly elected candidate robbed of the 2000 election by an institution of nine? Do special interest and corporate dollars wield greater political power than the individual?

Peterson holds that "children need to be taught that peace between [American Indians and Europeans] did not immediately exist." When should they be taught that peace between these cultures prevailed? Was it with the birth of the reservation system? Or was it with the establishment of casinos that blatant racism and inequitable treatment subsided?

Peterson suggests an ideological maturation in the American power elite. Don't those in power continue to exhibit a colonizer mentality? Or don't we believe that the impending war in Iraq is one for oil?

Peterson's perspective is certainly the product of her "amazing life." She should be reminded that this amazing life is hardly a representative one.

PETA protest at fashion show fails in appeal to a would-be audience

Standing up for your beliefs is one thing. Making a mockery of your beliefs is something completely different. Protesting, to be effective, should be carried out in a responsible, mature manner and should expose others to your ideas logically and rationally. The protest on Nov. 14 at the Victoria's Secret fashion show was neither of these two things.

Members of PETA, People for Ethical Treatment of Animals, jumped on the runway with Gisele Bündchen, targeting the supermodel because of her recent affiliation with the fur company Blackgama. The protesters carried signs saying, "Gisele: fur scum." The model maintained her composure, making the protesters seem fanatical.

More and more, PETA is using inappropriate methods of protesting. One year ago, it launched a campaign to scare children away from drinking milk. Protesters went to schoolyards and handed out pictures of sickly children, contending that their illness was directly caused by drinking milk. It has also screened a video to be shown at elementary schools showing graphic scenes of a pig farm with the aim of dissuading children from eating meat. Apparently, PETA sees no moral problems with using propaganda on children when its tactics prove ineffective on adults.

The organization gets its points confused on more than one occasion. In 2001, PETA contended that being a compassionate Christian included being a vegetarian while simultaneously running an ad that showed a woman wearing a fur coat being clubbed to death. Gary Yourofsky, a national lecturer for the group, has said that if an "animal abuser" were killed in a research lab firebombing, he would "unequivocally support that, too." Since when did compassion extend to cute, cuddly animals but not to fellow human beings?

PETA asks a lot of relevant questions. Animals are slaughtered for our consumption. Is a fur coat really worth an innocent animal being killed? But if the group wants people to consider what it is saying, it needs to communicate with the public instead of forcing its message down our throats.

Disrupting a Victoria's Secret fashion show is nothing less than ridiculous. Instead of appealing to its would-be audience with scare tactics and absurd protests, PETA should appeal to the public's intellect with rational discourse.

Learning the painstaking geography of trivial pursuits

So I see that another one of those youth-bashing surveys has come out. You know the type: a report that demonstrates, percentage point by percentage point, just exactly how ignorant U.S. kids are. Sometimes, I think that adults put out these kinds of reports just to reassure themselves that they are, indeed, still smarter than the younger generation.

Of course, in this case, they probably are. The study in question was done by the National Geographic Society, and it didn't survey kids, it questioned young adults — 18- to 24-year-olds — about their geographic knowledge. Or lack thereof.

Lack thereof seems to have come away the clear winner. For instance, only 17 percent could find Afghanistan on a map.

Let's see, Afghanistan has been in the news a little bit recently. Wasn't there a war there or something?

That wasn't the only result to leave you slackjawed. Eleven percent couldn't find the United States on the map; the location of Japan was an utter mystery to 58 percent, France, to 65 percent, and Great Britain, to 69 percent.

And my absolute favorite: 29 percent couldn't find the Pacific Ocean.

No wonder people lose their cars in parking lots.

What's scary is not so much that 29 percent couldn't find the Pacific Ocean. What's scary is that they're old enough to vote.

The report does shed some light on one thing, though: why the 18-year-olds living in Parklawn don't seem to know their location. They seem to think they're residing next door to Coralville.

(They also complain that the freshman dorm doesn't have a condom machine or an ATM. You know what? My apartment doesn't have a condom machine or an ATM, either, but I somehow manage to struggle on.)

Not that I would ever suggest that some people are wimps, because my parents brought me up to have good manners and respect others — but sheesh.

From the way they tell it, Parklawn residents are living on the outskirts of nowhere. But a two-minute stroll straight down the hill puts them in the middle of the Hancher parking lot. From there, it's about an eight-minute saunter to the IMU through the most beautiful part of campus: along the river, past the Theatre Building (a WPA project that houses one of the few revolving stages in the Midwest — which I happen to know because I was once a theater major, back when the glacier was still receding), the museum, and the Art Building. The walk also affords you a great view of the one truly stunning architectural work on campus: the laser center. (Yeah, I know; like most UI administrators, the facility has an official and pompous title the length of a drive through Nebraska. In everyday argot, it's the laser center.) The laser center alone is worth the walk; on a campus filled with the bland (the Nursing Building), the ugly (EPB, Becker), and the truly horrendous (Pappajohn Business Building), the laser center stands out like the Taj Mahal.

I happen to know this about the location of Parklawn because my first childhood home in Iowa City was in the old Army barracks located roughly on what now is the Hancher lot, and the first things I'd see when I walked out the front door were St. Thomas

More Church and, slightly to the right, Parklawn. My friends and I (ages 5 and 6) would often walk up the hill and stand on the sidewalk across the street from Parklawn, wondering what went on inside. Now I know.

It's a wimp factory. Of course, to be fair to the Parklawners, they're not the only ones on campus who say things that leave you just shaking your head, wondering why it's so difficult for some people to find a life. Take the anti-ginkgo tribe.

They're a group of people who want to cut down the five ginkgos on the Pentacrest because for three whole weeks of the year, the trees drop smelly berries.

Oh, dear me; this world is certainly going to hell in a handbasket when you have to put up with smelly berries. The utter outrage of it all. Some would have it that the berries make people nauseated. Well, sure, if you eat them. But oddly enough, history demonstrates that people don't tend to eat things that smell like farts.

Somedays, you just gotta wonder about the human race — because so much of the time, it seems that Trivial Pursuit is more than just a board game.

Halle Berry's disembodied head almost ate me. Berry is gorgeous, probably the most stunning Bond girl the series has produced. She looks good no matter what she is asked to do on screen. But if you sit in the front row of a movie theater, as I did for Die Another Day, her head is 10 times the size of your body and so close you can see her pores. Anyway... Die Another Day has more of the same babes, explosions, and gadgets that transformed James Bond from a series into arguably its own genre over the past 40 years. But a problem occurs for the producers because a movie needs more than props to survive in an age in which another successful franchise (Austin Powers) exists merely to spoof the British intelligence agent. Older Bond flicks will always be popular because of their campy appeal to a modern audience, yet new films need to have something to draw in a crowd today.

A reasonable argument could be made that excessive advertising and merchandising tie-ins provide that draw, but the movie is trying to rebuild in other ways. Bond (Pierce Brosnan) wastes away for 14 months in a North Korean prison camp after a hovercraft chase scene over the demilitarized zone separating the two Koreas. He is still in remarkably good shape for such a long period of torture, but his face is haggard and hair unkempt, hardly the trademark of the suave spy.

Die Another Day follows Bond to Hong Kong, where he escapes detention from his own employers by lowering his heart rate to zero. He then dashes to Cuba, where gene therapy can apparently change a person's appearance, allow them to live forever, and render sleep unnecessary. If it sounds like I'm making this up, imagine how the pitch session went. But hey, it's Bond, so anything goes.

Of course the locations are breathtaking, though the filmmakers would have you believe Iceland, where the climax takes place, is, well, icy. The villain, Gustav Graves, has an ice palace there that is eerily similar to the metal spider-like structure in the sea used as Blofeld's lair from a Sean Connery-era Bond. Graves also has a type of body armor that emits a lethal shock with special effects similar to those of the emperor in Return of the Jedi.

The stunts are more outlandish, and while I applaud the bravura in manipulating them into the story line, they are also becoming more CGI-laden. This is especially noticeable if you sit in the front row, but computer graphics and the awkward feeling that you are watching a guy acting in front of a blue screen is unmistakable. To give you an idea, the most jaw-dropping stunt involves Bond surfing a tidal wave on a piece of metal siding after a laser from outer space chases him across a glacier.

Brosnan has the Bond character down pat in his fourth film in the series. The one-liners, the impeccable grooming, the devil-may-care attitude are all so perfected that one tends to interchange Brosnan and Bond in conversation, a tribute to his portrayal if not a cruel typecast legacy for his film career.

Berry fits the role of the new Bond girl-with-an-attitude as Jinx, while Toby Stephens fills his niche as Graves, the rogue villain. I don't know when over-acting became a requirement to be the bad guy (anybody else remember Gert Fröbe as Goldfinger?) but Stephens is certainly giving it all he's got.

Michael Madsen is overbearing as Damian Falco, an American intelligence administrator. The cameo interests me mainly because of the caricature of the headstrong American official — movies take around a year from the time the script is finished to hit theaters, so the writing had to be finished before America even threatened to declare war on Iraq.

One more bonus to sitting in the front row of this movie: Though it reinforces a stereotype already given much play in Austin Powers, there is a distinct difference between the teeth of actors from the UK and the Americans. Dig in.

Jackass: The Movie

When:

Where:
Coral Ridge 10
★★ out of ★★★★★

Jackass: The Movie begins with a disclaimer that explains to the audience that all the stunts performed in the movie were done by professionals and that no one, under any circumstances should attempt to recreate what they are about to see on film. Although this disclaimer serves a very important purpose, a paraphrased line from Billy Madison might have served better. Perhaps the real disclaimer should have read, "Everyone in this room is now dumber for having seen this, and may God have mercy on your souls."

But regardless of how insanely dim-witted and obtuse Jackass is, it is still able to bring about some of the most outrageous and uproarious laughter of the season, and it marks the first time that Tom and Jerry antics have been brought to life, in radiant camcorder color, for the world to see.

Jackass follows the same basic formula of the hit MTV series "Jackass." Johnny Knoxville and his band of merry men wreak complete havoc from the United States to Tokyo, doing anything that they can for their own amusement. The three- to five-minute vignettes that make up the movie run from "Rental Car Demolition Derby" to "Wasabi Snorting," "Golf Cart Rally" to "Yellow Snow Cone Eating" without too much left out in between. The movie runs the gauntlet from the extreme (Knoxville gets his lights punched out by Butterbean) to the pure silly (Wee man kicks himself in the head), and brings both laughter and squirms from the audience almost simultaneously.

Unlike many contemporary films, Jackass is able to deliver on exactly what it promises. People who go to this movie are expecting to see the most shocking and unpleasant stunts ever performed on screen; for the most part, they will not be disappointed. Everything is done out in the open, and what is left is raw and sickly humorous comedy. In this day of over-hyped, drawn-out, and pretentious movie making, this truthfulness is in itself commendable to a point.

But what is missing is any sort of psychological understanding of why these guys insist on doing stunts that cause such pain to themselves and to those around them. Although the reason seems to lie in the boredom of suburban life, a true documentary with a plot and some background about these folks could have cleared up many of the questions regarding the psyche of the characters. Perhaps The Making of Jackass could have brought the audience into the friendship of these audacious and foolhardy individuals, and maybe that would have allowed the film to appeal to members outside of the 13- to 25-year-old age group.

NCS agrees to settlement for tests

TESTS

He'll be eligible for $16,000. Plumley picked up his diploma, and an apology, two months late in a near-empty school. He said the settlement helps ease the pain, and he hopes it teaches the testing company and others a lesson. But he said it can't put everything right. "It's a big gap in my life that I wish I wouldn't have gone through," he said. "Nothing can pay back what was taken from me." Plumley said he'll probably reward himself with some of the money and put the rest away for his 2-year-old daughter.

The class-action lawsuit against NCS Pearson, formerly National Computer Systems Inc., was due for trial in early October when attorneys for the students and the company reached the settlement. NCS Pearson is a British company with an office in Eden Prairie. Hennepin County Judge Allen Oleisky gave the settlement preliminary approval. The company, beginning Dec. 4, will try to reach out to the affected students, and the students can submit objections until early January. The final approval hearing is scheduled for Jan. 24. Students could expect to receive at least some money next spring.

It's a big gap in my life that I wish I wouldn't have gone through. Nothing can pay back what was taken from me.

Jake Plumley, St. Paul student

Arthur said the company will send letters to the students and publish newspaper notices. "Our goal is to reach everybody," he said. The class involved approximately 7,700 students. Another 200 students affected by the error opted out of the settlement. The testing giant has already given checks to more than 60 families and granted college-tuition vouchers to at least a dozen seniors. Affected students and their families can find out more about the settlement by calling 1-877-265-3429 or going to the Web site, <http://www.mntestsettlement.com>, which will be operational after Dec. 3. The settlement doesn't force NCS Pearson to change any of its testing procedures for other states.

Pierce jerseys place shops in quandary

and the Iowa Hawk Shop in Coralville, ordered the jerseys and catalogued the apparel nine months ago, long before charges against Pierce were filed, said George Herbert Jr., the general manager of the stores. "We haven't made up our minds yet," he said, adding that not selling the jerseys would have no major financial effect. "Right now, we're only selling them upon customer requests." A few customers have requested the jersey, he said, adding that he couldn't recall how many. The Iowa Hawk Shop's online catalogue, www.hawkshop.com, shows 538 replica jerseys in stock at $50 apiece. Other businesses have committed to selling the replicas but only at sharply reduced prices in an effort to get rid of them. Kurt Vanderhoef, the apparel manager at Iowa Book, 8 S. Clinton St., said he will mark his $45 jerseys down by 25-30 percent "just to get them off the floor." If the black, gold, and white jerseys still don't sell, he said he will lower the price further. "That incident was a good part of why the product isn't out, but we're also more focused on the possible Rose Bowl bid now," he said, adding that a handful of patrons have requested the jersey. The Pierce case marks the second time this year UI officials have been unlucky in picking whose number to feature on jerseys. For football, it was No. 34 for Aaron Greving, who quit the team Oct. 24. His jersey still appears in stores, not the No. 7 of Brad Banks, a contender for the Heisman Trophy.

Herbold wants Jones' funding records

AUDIT

Herbold said Jones has been reluctant to discuss the commissions account, and he vowed to ask for an internal audit if questionable expenditures are found. "Money is tight right now, and if money is being spent on something students don't want, it should be disclosed to the public," Herbold said. After a request by The Daily Iowan, Jones' office released a list of expenditures from the account for last year. It shows that most of the money in the fiscal year that ended June 30 went towards non-alcoholic entertainment options. A loan of $50,000 was given to Planet X to help the family fun center relocate downtown; $13,000 has been paid back. Jones also invested $8,500 in Uptown Bill's to finance a venue for student performances. Other expenditures included $8,299.05 to send Jones as a representative of the university to the U.N. Conference Against Racism in South Africa. Catering for staff events accounted for more than $900. Monday's development signaled that an audit performed earlier this year did not clear up the confusion between Jones and student leaders over money. The review, conducted by the University Internal Audit Division, scrutinized fiscal 2001 and 2002 expenses subsidized by activity fees charged to every student, totaling more than $858,000 last year. The audit, released in July, found that all expenditures were appropriate, created a separate account to hold leftover student activity fees, forced Jones to issue quarterly financial reports to UISG, and will require monthly reviews of the accounts, said Carol Senneff, the director of the audit division. Former UISG President Nick Klenske, who spearheaded the 2001 campaign to prevent Jones from using student fees to fund Planet X, said he is satisfied with the audit's results although it did not include the controversial Planet X expenditures. "If the commissions account is something that UISG doesn't have control over, I don't think it's worth it," he said. E-MAIL DI REPORTER AMY JENNINGS AT: AMY.JENNINGS@UIOWA.EDU

Panel begins interview process

SEARCH

A group of roughly 12 committee members flies to a city and meets with a potential candidate in a hotel conference room. After the person is allotted time for opening comments, panel members question the candidate on a variety of topics, including affirmative action, athletics, and the person's plans to communicate with local legislators and the state Board of Regents. "The meetings are somewhat formal, but we try to keep it relaxed to see what a person is really like," Heistad said, adding that the panel tries to maintain a "conversational" tone. He added that diversity in each subcommittee is necessary to ensure that the candidate can relate to students, faculty, staff, and alumni. The search committee is in the process of replacing Mary Sue Coleman, who left Iowa City in August to take the helm at the University of Michigan. Former UI President Sandy Boyd is serving as the interim leader. Search committee Chairman Jonathan Carlson announced last week that small subcommittees within the group had been created and were in the process of interviewing candidates. Upon completion of the off-campus interviews, the committee will make the names of the final four to eight candidates public and invite them to campus for second interviews during the weeks of Dec. 9 and Dec. 16. Carlson said the final candidates will probably attend forums and field questions from the university community during their stays in Iowa City. The committee will then recommend at least four names to the regents, which will pick the university's next president by December or January. # Rehnquist's daughter pushed back audit at Governor Bush's request

BY LARRY MARGASAK ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — At the request of Gov. Jeb Bush's office, the inspector general of the Health and Human Services Department ordered delays in a federal audit of Florida's pension fund that ensured the review wouldn't be completed before Bush won re-election, officials say. The delays by Janet Rehnquist, the daughter of Chief Justice William Rehnquist, are now being investigated by Congress. A former Rehnquist deputy, who recently retired, told the Associated Press he couldn't recall another case during his quarter-century career with the watchdog agency in which an inspector general intervened personally to postpone an audit. "I began to smell politics," said Tom Roslewicz, the now retired deputy inspector general for audits in the agency that primarily investigates fraud, waste, and abuse in Medicare, Medicaid, and other social programs. A spokeswoman for Gov. Bush, the president's brother, said the Florida governor's office requested the delay because the pension agency was in the middle of a transition between its old and new directors. "It had nothing to do with the election," spokeswoman Elizabeth Hirst said. Bush easily won re-election to a second term on Nov. 5, capturing 56 percent of the vote. Ben St. John, a spokesman for Rehnquist's office, said the inspector general wouldn't comment on the matter. But he said he is confident investigations will conclude there was "no misconduct on the part of anyone in the office of the inspector general." St. John said that because similar audits usually take about nine months, the Florida audit would not have been finished before Election Day even if the delays hadn't been ordered. The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, and the FBI-led Integrity Committee of the President's Council on Integrity and Efficiency are investigating aspects of Rehnquist's conduct. The president's council monitors the conduct of inspectors general. The audit of Florida's state employee pension fund was scheduled to have begun April 15 but did not start until five months later. Roslewicz, who had been at the inspector general's office since its inception in 1976, said he was ordered by Rehnquist to approve two delays to the audit before he retired in the summer. He and other officials interviewed by AP said the audit could have been completed before Election Day if enough staff had been provided.

Iowa now No. 5 in BCS, Buckeyes No. 2

Ohio State may be headed for the BCS national title game in the Fiesta Bowl, but Miami still sits atop the Bowl Championship Series standings.

The defending national champion Hurricanes increased their lead over the Buckeyes to 1.32 points Monday from the slimmest margin of 0.01 points last week, when they moved ahead of Ohio State for the first time.

Miami, ranked No. 1 in the AP media and coaches' polls, has 2.89 points, 0.80 points better than last week's total. Ohio State has 4.21 points, with Oklahoma moving up to third with 9.09 points.

The Buckeyes (13-0) completed their regular season with a 14-9 victory over Michigan on Nov. 23. As one of only two unbeaten teams remaining —

Miami (10-0) is the other — Ohio State assured itself of at least a second-place finish when the final BCS standings are released Dec. 8.

The top two teams in the final rankings head to Tempe, Ariz., for the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 3.

If the Hurricanes win their final games against Syracuse and Virginia Tech on Dec. 7, they will play the Buckeyes for the national championship.

A loss by Miami, and Oklahoma (10-1) stands the best chance of the one-loss teams to move into the title game. The Sooners, who beat Texas Tech 60-15, benefited most by Washington State's 29-26 triple-overtime loss to Washington. The Cougars tumbled to eighth from third in the latest BCS standings.

Ohio State dropped farther behind Miami primarily because of Washington State's loss. The Buckeyes only received a 0.3 bonus-point deduction for an earlier win over the Cougars. Last week, the deduction was 0.8.

Miami, after a 28-21 win over Pittsburgh on Nov. 21, was first in five of the seven computer polls and its computer average dropped to 1.17 from 1.33. The Hurricanes also saw their strength of schedule rank improve — to 0.72 from 1.36.

The BCS formula uses the AP media and coaches' polls, computer polls, strength of schedule, won-loss record, and a bonus-point system.

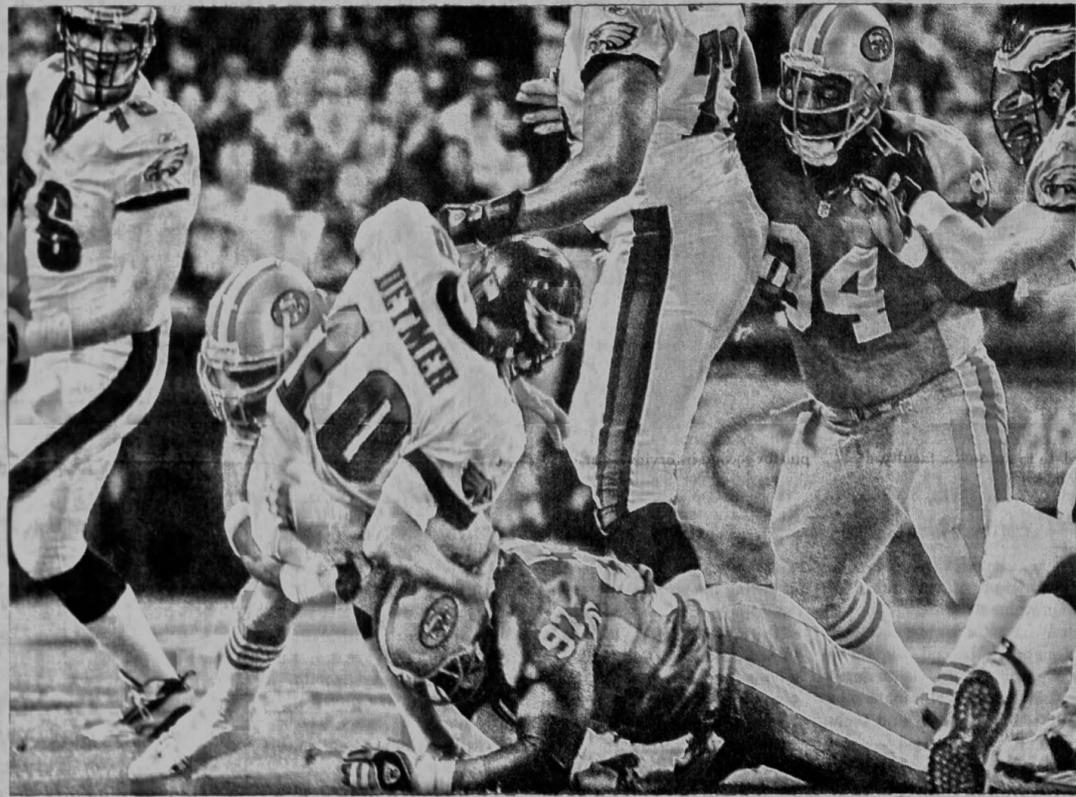

Miami has 2.89 points — 1 for poll average, 1.17 for computer-rank average, 0.72 for strength of schedule, zero for losses, and no bonus-point deduction.

Ohio State has 4.21 points — 2 for poll average, 1.67 for computer-rank average, 0.84 for strength of schedule, and a 0.3 bonus-point deduction.

While the Sooners are next in line to move up, other teams looking for help are No. 4 Georgia, No. 5 Iowa, No. 6 USC, and No. 7 Notre Dame (13.83).

Philadelphia loses another QB but still beats 49ers

BY GREG BEACHAM

SAN FRANCISCO — When the game of Koy Detmer's life abruptly ended with a scary elbow injury, A.J. Feeley capably backed up the backup — and the Philadelphia Eagles rolled on to an impressive win.

Filling in tremendously for Donovan McNabb, Detmer passed for 227 yards and two touchdowns and rushed for another score before leaving with a dislocated left elbow late in the Eagles' 38-17 win over San Francisco on Monday night.

McNabb is expected to miss the rest of the regular season with a broken ankle, but in Detmer's first start since 1999, he was outstanding for nearly three quarters. Using all of his receivers in coach Andy Reid's unpredictable game plan, Detmer carved up the 49ers' confused secondary and staked the Eagles (8-3) to a big lead in a one-sided meeting of division leaders.

Detmer, a career backup who had thrown just 17 passes since 1999 completed 18 of his 26 throws — until he landed heavily on his left arm as Chike

Okefor knocked him to the ground after completing a 24-yard pass to Jeff Thomason.

Detmer flailed his legs in pain on the ground as team doctors rushed to him. When he was loaded onto a cart with tears in his eyes, the Eagles' entire roster and the Niners' defense wished him well at midfield.

Feeley, the third-stringer who hadn't thrown a pass all season, hit Chad Lewis for a 1-yard TD moments later — and the Eagles were all but assured of a conference victory that might turn out to be very important when playoff seedings are determined in five weeks.

Team doctors popped Detmer's elbow back into place, and he wore a grin on his unshaven face while watching from the sideline as Feeley finished off the rout. It wasn't immediately clear when Detmer might be able to return to action.

Brian Mitchell returned a punt 76 yards for a touchdown, while Todd Pinkston and Antonio Freeman caught TD passes from Detmer as the Eagles mowed down the 49ers' defense even without McNabb or a consistent running game.

UNI rivalry renewed tonight at Carver

BY ROSEANNA SMITH
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The Interstate-380 trail to and from Northern Iowa has not been darkened for 19 years.

Tonight, the Iowa-UNI rivalry will once again be renewed, and women's basketball coach Lisa Bluder is more than ready to revisit old roots.

"It was so long ago the last time they played in Carver, I played here — and that was a long time ago," Bluder said. "I think it's natural we play this game; basically, we dropped Southwest Missouri State to play UNI. I think this game makes more sense because UNI is a better team this year."

The Panthers are led by outplayed in high school with former Hawkeye great Lindsey Meder, averaged 12.1 points and 4.9 rebounds per game.

Hawkeye freshman Tiffany Reedy and junior Kristi Faulkner are expected to match up against the Panther pair.

In last weekend's opening tournament championship, Reedy led the Hawkeyes in the first round, scoring 18 points, and she was named to the all-tournament team. The Union, Iowa, native said she would be prepared to guard Miller.

"My confidence is getting there," Reedy said. "All those games have helped me adjust."

"I'll be motivated because I grew up watching UNI because I lived just up the road."

However, Bluder said one of the major challenges besides the quick turnaround in games would be motivating the team.

"With five freshmen and only one from Iowa, only one really understands the importance of this rivalry," she said. "I have to do a good job of bringing their emotion level up for this game. If we go into this game like any other one, we're not going to be as emotionally charged as they

Runner falters but finishes at NCAAs

BY JEROD LEUPOLD
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Seven cross-country runners traveled to Terre Haut, Ind., to compete against the best runners in the country. Six returned.

As the rest of the squad traveled back to Iowa, senior Joe Welter waited in an emergency room for sutures and hoping for negative X-rays of his tibia. The team captain crumpled 2,000 meters into nationals and is the third Hawkeye to be spiked in the previous three matches.

But all seven Hawkeyes still crossed the finish line.

"Welter is one tough guy," Tony Rakaric said. "Finishing the race definitely proves that. I really look up to him."

Even with Welter's heroics, Iowa placed No. 29 out of 31 teams Nov. 25 at the NCAA Tournament.

Matt Esche led the Hawkeyes for the fourth time in the last five meets. Esche finished No. 109 with a time of 31 minutes, and six seconds, almost one minute slower than his Big Ten meet time on Nov. 17, and two minutes behind national champion Jorge Torres of Colorado.

"I'm sure Esche is not pleased with his time," Wiecezorek said. "He's run faster, but he's a red-shirt freshman and one of six returning starters for next year. We gave our best effort."

"Overall, it's a huge step forward for the program."

It's also an improvement. Last year Iowa finished fourth regionally and wasn't invited to the NCAA Tournament. This year, Wiecezorek and the Hawkeyes won regional coach of the year for the season's efforts, placed first at regionals, and defeated two nationally ranked teams.

"I keep thinking of the football team," Wiecezorek said. "Going 1-10, 3-9, 4-4, and then winning the Big Ten. We have something to build on."

Iowa striders agree after witnessing firsthand the competitive level of other national teams.

"We can do that too," Haut said. "Next year, we're going to place higher."

Being invited to the country's premier running event — where the crowd rivals Kinnick Stadium and a Jumbotron relays the action — has other benefits, too.

"It was amazing to be one of the top teams," Dan Haut said. "It was really neat watching the women run before we did and having a banquet Saturday night."

Tony Rakaric delved deeper.

"It was the greatest experience I've ever had," he said. "This is what running is all about — runners who love to run working together through the blood, sweat, and tears. It was awesome."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Iverson leads 76ers in win with 29 points

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Allen Iverson had 29 points on 11-of-20 shooting as the Philadelphia 76ers avenged an earlier loss to New Orleans with a 108-87 victory that extended its home record to 8-0.

Iverson made 7-of-9 free throws and had four assists. Several other spectacular passes went unconverted by his teammates.

Todd MacCulloch had 15 points, Keith Van Horn and Aaron McKie 14 apiece, and Eric Snow had 12 points and 10 assists for Philadelphia. The 76ers last won eight straight at home in 2000.

Jamal Mashburn scored 18, but only two in the second half. Baron Davis added 17 points and Jamaal Magloire 11 for the Hornets, who had a three-game losing streak snapped.

A 3-pointer by Davis pulled the Hornets within 78-71 early in the fourth quarter. But a fastbreak lay-up by Iverson and five-straight points by McKie paced a 12-0 run and extended the lead to 19 points.

NFL will not fine Sapp for hit on Clifton

NEW YORK — Warren Sapp will not be fined for a hit that badly injured Green Bay offensive tackle Chad Clifton and prompted an angry postgame exchange between the Tampa Bay lineman and Packers

Utah fires McBride

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah fired football coach Ron McBride on Monday, two days after the Utes' finished with their second losing record in three seasons.

McBride coached Utah for 13 seasons and took the Utes to six of their nine bowl appearances. He won 88 games, second only to Mike Tomlin of the Drake Bulldogs, who coached the team from 1925-49. But the Utes had a six-game losing streak this season that led to its failure to make a bowl game.

Even though the Utes won their final three games, including a Nov. 23 13-6 victory over state rival Brigham Young, they finished 5-6.

CART drops English race from calendar

LONDON — CART dropped the Rockingham 500 from next season's calendar on Monday, leaving the troubled open-wheel series without any races in Europe in 2003.

CART, however, hopes to announce shortly that it will hold at least two races in Europe next year.

The Rockingham 500, run the last two seasons in central England, has drawn small crowds. Ashley Pover, chief operating officer of the track, called the 2003 race "fiscally unviable" but left open the possibility of a return in 2004.

IOWA WRESTLING

Hawks ready to rumble in Carver

BY JEROD LEUPOLD
THE DAILY IOWAN

Carver Hawkeye Arena will open its doors for the first time for Iowa wrestlers this season. Lehigh and Arizona State enter the house that Dan Gable built Dec. 1 for Iowa's inaugural home meets of the season. New and veteran wrestlers look forward to Carver noise.

"I've never wrestled here before as a Hawkeye," said red-shirt freshman Ty Eustice. "You try not to worry about the crowd. It was good at Lehigh. Carver will be the same experience."

Junior Ryan Fulsaa has experienced the magic before.

"Carver affects you quite a bit," Fulsaa said. "It's an awesome feeling."

Both of the Hawkeyes' weekend opponents are trying to nullify home-mat advantage by bringing potent contenders for Eustice and Fulsaa.

Lehigh touts national No. 1, 197-pound John Trengre and a No. 9 national team ranking. Erik Larkin and Kellan Fluckiger support a No. 12-ranked Arizona State. Larkin and Trengre hammered Iowa wrestlers at the Ryan Kaufman Open with a combined 16-2 point total. Fluckiger met defeat during the championship at the hands of Hawkeye heavyweight Steve Mocco.

Iowa's Cliff Moore works on pinning Minnesota's Ryan Lewis during Iowa's 24-11 victory over the Golden Gophers.

Iowa coach Jim Zalesky acknowledged the need for improvement.

"We're not wrestling at the top of our game," he said. "Right now, we're waiting for style [to develop]. We need to eliminate mistakes, both mental and technique. We've sat on leads without attacking, gave up big moves, and had to play catch up."

respect, or the lack of it, in preparing his wrestlers for top-tier grapplers.

"I've just been talking to them," Zalesky said. "Wrestling ranked opponents changes your style. Respecting someone makes your chances to win a lot less."

Eustice is altering his technique for the upcoming match. "He rode me for five to six minutes in a match that was only six minutes long," he said. "I need to be attacking more. Attacking is where you get the points. I want to make him work."

Fulsaa is working on strength and is fueled by faith.

"I believe every day I can win," Fulsaa said. "You've got to wrestle like every match is the championship."

Are the Bucs the best team in the NFC?

The ghosts of Captain Hook, Blue Beard, and Errol Flynn are wreaking their vengeance. The NFL-leading Tampa Bay Buccaneers, with their 9-2 record, are pillaging their way to NFC, if not Super Bowl, riches.

My esteemed counterpoint varlet will use sleight-of-mind and tell you only offense wins big games. Brett Favre, the most brilliant QB to grace our generation, handed out interceptions faster than a pirate spreads syphilis during his shore leave. Not only is the secondary-skewering offensive coordinator scheming with an NFL-leading 25 picks, the front seven are perforating the front line.

Simeon Rice rules the league with 11.5 sacks and contributes to an NFL pinnacle 253.5 yards allowed per game. Linebacker Derrick Brooks is cashing in the booty with three defensive touchdowns. But, every vessel of scurvy dogs needs a captain.

Pundits, Coach Tony Dungy proves that defense is the sturdy mast to hang your opponents from. When Dungy ran the Viking defense the Norsemen cruised to playoffs annually. Currently Minnesota is the NFL's paragon of offense,

Hawkeyes take to the road to reclaim state pride at Drake

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

State bragging rights will be on the line tonight for the Iowa men's basketball team as it plays the first of three intrastate rivalries.

The Hawkeyes will travel to Des Moines for a 7:05 meeting with the Drake Bulldogs, a team eager to host the school that handed them a lopsided 101-59 loss last season in Iowa City.

"There are a lot of high expectations there," said Iowa coach Steve Alford. "This is their chance to send a message."

The situation is ripe for an upset. With the suspension of forward Sean Sonderleiter for violating team policy, the Hawkeyes carry just six scholarship players to the Knapp Center. The Bulldogs, on the other hand, have a fully loaded roster of veteran players who remember last season's debacle in Iowa City all too well.

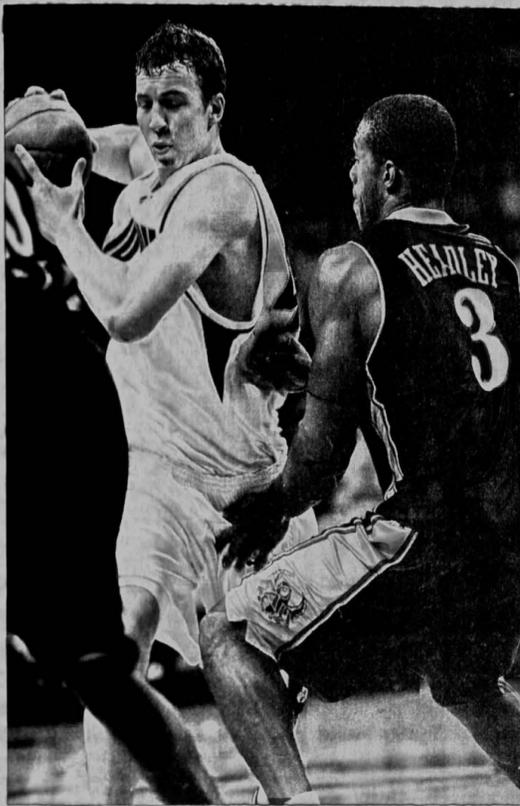

Add to that the fact a capacity crowd of more than 7,000 people is expected, and the Hawkeyes will face an uphill climb in their drive for the mythical state championship this season.

"That's a beehive for us," Alford said of the close and hostile confines of Drake's basketball facility. "[Drake] has a lot of easy motivation."

The Bulldogs also have a lot of talent. Sophomore guard Lonnie Randolph scored 29 points in Drake's season-opening victory over Florida Atlantic on Nov. 22, and junior guard Luke McDonald added 17 points. McDonald teams with David Newman to provide solid guard play, and Drake has plenty of talented athletes who should match up well with the Hawkeyes.

"It's a big difference from this year to last year," said Randolph after the Bulldogs defeated the Owls. "This team is more athletic; we're a lot quicker, bigger, stronger, and faster."

Alford said he hopes the unselfishness the Hawkeyes displayed in their season-opening victory against the same Florida Atlantic team that Drake played carries over into tonight's game. Iowa had four players reach double figures in scoring.

"We've got to hope that stays consistent, because you've got a whole new animal on the road," Alford said.

The matchup also will be Iowa's first taste of intrastate rivalry this year. The Hawkeyes will host Northern Iowa on Dec. 10 and Iowa State on Dec. 13.

"I think it's going to be pretty exciting," said freshman guard Jeff Horner, a native of Mason City. "It's instate; they're going to be battling against us and we're going to be battling against them."

"It's going to be a dog fight." Guard Brody Boyd is expected to return to the Iowa lineup tonight after serving a three-game suspension stemming from an alcohol citation he received during the summer.

Video released of riots

BY JOHN MCCARTHY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Police reviewed video footage Monday to try to identify more people who overturned and burned cars and pelted officers with bottles and rocks after Ohio State's football victory over Michigan.

Fans set more than 100 street fires that started minutes after a 14-9 win Saturday, police said. The Buckeyes completed an unbeaten regular season and clinched a spot in a national championship game.

There also was weekend fan trouble at Cal-Stanford in Berkeley, Calif.; Clemson-South Carolina in Clemson, S.C.; and North Carolina State-Florida State in Raleigh, N.C. Players from both teams fought after Hawaii's 20-19 win over Cincinnati.

In Columbus, police said the mood was peaceful for several hours after the game, but after midnight cars were overturned and burned. Officers used tear gas and wooden pellets to disperse a crowd of several hundred near the campus.

Police in riot gear escorted firefighters through clouds of tear gas to the fires as crowds off campus tossed bottles and rocks.

About 20 cars were damaged by fire or overturning, and at one time a chain of nine cars was burning, police said. The fires were so intense a section of one street buckled. No serious injuries were reported.

The president of the Fiesta Bowl, John Junker, called the disturbances regrettable, but said bowl officials were not worried about the conduct of Ohio State fans.

"They happened in a lot of events across the nation," Junker said. "No community has a monopoly on knuckleheads. By and large, people around college football are reasonable and honorable."

The damage amount in Columbus had not been estimated, police and fire officials said Monday, but fire Capt. Steve Saltsman said the total most likely will surpass tens of thousands of dollars.

Only one fire was in a home, Saltsman said. Someone entered the open door of a duplex south of the stadium where a party was going on and set fire to a pile of clothes in the basement, causing about $4,000 damage.

Police arrested 49 people, mainly on charges of having open alcoholic beverage containers or drinking underage, police spokeswoman Sherry Mercurio said.

Authorities earlier said more charges would be filed as people were identified on amateur and news video. Police are asking that landlords whose apartment buildings were damaged provide lists of tenant names, Mercurio said.

"Even if you had a minor role in it, if you had any role at all, we're going to prosecute," Mercurio said.

The university determined 10 of those arrested attended Ohio State. Those students will be suspended and could be expelled if convicted, Ohio State President Karen Holbrook said.

The disturbance was the latest of more than a dozen postgame flare-ups, dating to the 1960s.

Holbrook, on the job since July, apologized Sunday to the city and the school's surrounding neighborhood.

"Yesterday afternoon, we witnessed all that's great about intercollegiate athletics," she said. "Last night ... we witnessed the very worst in reaction to what had been a joyful occasion."

McPherson released from team

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida State quarterback Adrian McPherson was dismissed from the team Monday amid reports that police planned to question him in the theft and forgery of a blank check.

Coach Bobby Bowden would not give details of the violation, but he said McPherson would remain in school and on scholarship through the end of the semester.

"That's about all I can say," Bowden said. "This is kind of new to me, too."

WOMEN

are, and I think that will be detrimental to the result.

"I think we'll probably use the men's game last year as an example."

In the 2001 meeting between the Iowa men at UNI, the Hawkeyes were defeated, 78-76, after two previous meetings resulting in wins. In 2000, Iowa defeated Northern Iowa at Carver, 74-42.

Iowa guard Faulkner said there was little chance the women's team would look past tonight's meeting.

"I think we're familiar with the players and their style of play," she said. "We have a lot of respect for the team and players."

"I think it's mostly about bringing mental focus and intensity."

Notes: Freshman Crystal Smith will not join the Hawkeyes again tonight. Bluder said Smith's recovery from a high ankle sprain was not as speedy as anticipated ... Over Thanksgiving Break, the Hawkeyes will travel to California to play in a tournament against N.C. State, LMU, and Southern Alabama; they play their first game of the tournament on Friday at 7 p.m. ... On Thursday, the team will eat dinner with Lindsay Geoffroy's family ... Bluder is just three wins from reaching her 400th career victory; Iowa's two wins over the weekend improved her overall coaching record to 391-163.

COMMENTARY

Painting comes to life

BY JIM LITKE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Figuring out where Jim Tressel came from was easy.

He rose through the ranks from assistant to head coach, from small school to big one, but never lost the look. Prowling the Ohio State sideline in a crisp white shirt, red jacket, and tie, he looks like a Norman Rockwell painting come to life, like the son of one coaching lifer and the younger brother of another.

But where Tressel was going — that was another story. His plans were so grand and his approach so small-town, so shamelessly upbeat that it seemed wasted on a generation that considers Woody Woodpecker old-school and Woody Hayes a fossil. And yet ...

"He's like no other coach in the way he can bring a team together to focus on one collective goal while putting their individual goals aside," safety Donnie Nickey said moments after Ohio State beat Michigan and booked passage to a national-championship game for the first time in more than 30 years.

"He makes you realize what's really important," Nickey added. "Like this feeling I have right now."

Tressel expected nothing less. "I knew it was going to be a slugfest at the end," he said. "And anyone who thought it would be anything other than that hasn't been around Ohio State-Michigan very long."

Tressel is 13-0 in only his second season in Columbus, and he'd be the odds-on favorite for Division I coach of the year if not for Ty Willingham at Notre Dame.

For all the talk about player-friendly coaches in college, it's worth noting that both lead teams that have adopted their personalities. Even more noteworthy, perhaps, is that both exceeded expectations stressing virtues such as sacrifice and loyalty, qualities usually in short supply at programs with reputations for cranking out NFL-ready prospects.

As if to make a point about accountability, Tressel was on the job only a few hours in January 2001, when he took the microphone at halftime of a Michigan-Ohio State basketball game and promised a team that would make Buckeyes fans proud.

Then he hung out signs reminding his players that OSU-Michigan was the "greatest rivalry in college football," a reference that became easier to believe when the Buckeyes won at Michigan for the first time since 1987.

Great as the risk seemed the first time around, Tressel had no problem raising the stakes as this season's game approached. In the spring, a reporter mentioned Michigan and Tressel said without hesitation there were 174 days left before the rematch.

"We all have idiosyncrasies," he said. "Mine might be keeping track of that."

In Tressel's case, it was more a birthright. He was born and raised in Ohio and his future was pretty much assured the moment his father let him tag along at work. Lee Tressel was a legend in Ohio high-school ranks by then, about to repeat the feat as a bow-tied presence on the sideline at Baldwin Wallace, a Division III powerhouse in the making.

Wisconsin moves into top 25

BY JIM O'CONNELL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

The top six teams in the Associated Press college basketball poll held their spots from last week, and the only change in the rankings came at the bottom with Wisconsin moving in at No. 25.

Arizona, Kansas, Texas, Alabama, Pittsburgh, and Duke were Nos. 1-6 for the second-straight week.

The Wildcats (1-0) opened the season with a 107-68 victory over Western Kentucky, a loss that dropped the Hilltoppers out of the Top 25. Arizona received 60 first-place votes and 1,740 points from the national media panel.

Kansas (2-0), which beat Holy Cross and North Carolina-Greensboro to advance to the semifinals of the Preseason NIT, had nine first-place votes and 1,679 points.

Pittsburgh, which beat Duquesne, 82-67, in its opener last week, was the only other team to receive a No. 1 vote.

A convincing victory over Tennessee moved No. 1 Duke even further ahead of the pack Monday in the AP women's basketball poll.

Kansas State jumped to second, its highest ranking ever, and BYU joined the poll at No. 22, just the second time the Cougars have been ranked.

Duke (2-0) received 42 of 44 first-place votes from a national media panel after rolling past Tennessee, 76-55, on Sunday in an early matchup of No. 1 vs. No. 2.

The Blue Devils had 1,097 points — 98 more than Kansas State (4-0), which climbed two spots after winning the preseason WNIT. Last week, Duke had 37 first-place votes and led No. 2 Tennessee by 33 points.

LSU remained third with 989 points and received one first-place vote, while Tennessee slipped to fourth with 938 points. Defending national champion Connecticut climbed one spot to fifth and received the other first-place vote.

The victory over Tennessee was the first of two major nonconference showdowns for Duke, which had never been No. 1 before this season. The Blue Devils will play Connecticut on Feb. 1.

"If you want to be mentioned in the same vein with Tennessee and UConn, you have to play Tennessee and UConn," Duke coach Gail Goetsenkos said.

"We've made an effort to play those two teams because we want to be like them. We're trying to build that same tradition that they already have. To do that, we've got to go head-to-head with them."

Kansas State also is trying to establish itself among the nation's elite and is on its way this season. The Wildcats beat then-No. 14 Penn State, 88-66, in the WNIT championship game Sunday. They won their four WNIT games by an average of 17 points.

Purdue climbed one spot to sixth and was followed by Stanford, Georgia, Vanderbilt, and Notre Dame. Stanford fell two places after escaping with a 59-57 victory over San Francisco.

North Carolina climbed four spots to 11th, and Texas Tech was 12th. Then it was Penn State, Minnesota, Louisiana Tech and Texas, followed by Arkansas, Boston College, Mississippi State, and Iowa State.

George Washington, BYU, Oklahoma, Cal Santa Barbara, and Cincinnati held the final five places.

Detroit falls in overtime to Edmonton

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — A rare goal by defenseman Jason Smith gave the Edmonton Oilers an even rarer road win over the Detroit Red Wings.

Smith scored 88 seconds into overtime as the Oilers defeated the Red Wings, 5-4, for just their fourth win in 12 years at Joe Louis Arena.

Coming off a 1-1 tie on Nov. 23 in the first half of this home-and-home series, Edmonton squandered three leads before pulling out its first overtime victory of the season.

Smith had three chances from the top of the crease before finally flipping a backhand past goaltender Manny Legace for his third goal of the season and 17th in 270 games with the Oilers.

Defenseman Steve Staios and Janne Niinimaa and Michigan State product Anson Carter also scored for Edmonton, which extended its unbeaten streak to four (3-0-1) in the opener of a two-game road trip.

Brendan Shanahan's goal with 6:28 left in regulation helped secure a point for the Red Wings, who are 0-1-1 following a five-game winning streak.

New York Rangers 3, Carolina 1

NEW YORK — Eric Lindros finally may be getting it going.

Lindros scored his second goal in four games to break a third-period tie and lead the Rangers to a victory over the Hurricanes.

During a power play, Lindros — who had just two goals in his first 19 games — grabbed the puck among three Carolina players at the edge of the left faceoff circle and surprised goaltender Kevin Weekes with a quick shot at 1:41.

It was the second power-play goal of the night for the Rangers, who are ranked 28th in the NHL and had none in the previous six games.

Just 62 seconds later, defenseman Dale Purinton moved past Carolina's Erik Cole, used Lindros as a screen and fired a slap shot past Weekes from the left circle.

Ronald Petrovicky had tied it for New York with a power-play tally with 4:52 to go in the second period, banking the puck off Weekes' left skate from behind the net.

Defenseman Glen Wesley scored his first goal of the season for the Hurricanes, a point shot that deflected off Petrovicky and eluded Petrovicky.

Ottawa 2, Toronto 0

OTTAWA — Patrick Lalime made 22 saves as the Senators extended their season-high unbeaten streak to seven games with a victory over the Maple Leafs.

Mike Fisher and Peter Schaefer scored the goals.

Lalime got his 21st career shutout.

Fisher scored his third goal in the first period, and Schaefer got his second goal in the second.

Ottawa right wing Marian Hossa extended his points streak to 10 games with an assist on Schaefer's goal. Hossa has nine goals and seven assists over the course of the streak.

Fisher opened the scoring 8:01 in after Senators right wing Magnus Arvedson pushed the puck back to defenseman Chris Phillips.

Vancouver 2, Minnesota 1

ST. PAUL, Minnesota — Trevor Linden broke one team record and helped the Vancouver Canucks tie another.

Linden's shorthanded goal early in the third period turned out to be the difference as the Canucks held on for their seventh-straight victory, 2-1 over the Minnesota Wild in a battle of the top teams in the Northwest Division.

Linden beat Manny Fernandez on a shorthanded breakaway for his 263rd goal as a Canuck, breaking the record he shared with Stan Smyl. It gave the Canucks a 2-0 lead and became the game-winner when Andrew Brunette spoiled Dan Cloutier's shutout bid with 4:59 to play.

Henrik Sedin scored the other goal on a deflection for Vancouver, whose winning streak matches the longest in club history, established from February 10-23, 1989.

Oilers goalie Jussi Markkanen is beaten for a goal by Red Wings forward Luc Robitaille in the first period on Monday. Robitaille is only the 22nd player in the NHL to achieve the 1,300-point milestone.

quote of the day

People must know these animals are terribly abused ... Turkeys have been transformed from a sleek, adaptive wild animal into a Frankenstein monster, so obese it can barely stand.

- Wayne Pacelle,
the Humane Society's senior vice president.

The Ledge

by Nick Narigon

The hazards of eating too much turkey

- You might sleep through the Lions/Patriots game.
- Grandma gets gas.
- The more you eat, the less you have left over to take back to school.
- Overdosing on cranberry sauce.
- You won't have time to lose the weight by the time the Yule season hits.
- Less room for pie.
- You could poke an eye out with the buttons popping off your pants.
- You're too slow to run from rioting vegetarians.
- You could develop an addiction to Butterball.
- Reports have linked excessive turkey consumption to belching and tendencies to rest your hand in your pants.
