the Space Shuttle Challenger exploded shortly after takeoff.

James Van Allen's daughter called him from New Jersey on the morning of Feb. 1 and told him he should turn on the TV. When the UI professor emeritus tuned in, he saw what much of the country had already witnessed: the Space Shuttle Columbia disintegrating in the Texas sky.

"I recognize all the time that these are extremely perilous missions," said Van Allen, adding that he breathes a sigh of relief every time a crew lands safely. The complexity of space travel leads to inevitable uncertainty, he said.

"I was shocked," said Van Allen, who had been following the mission and its scientific experiments online.

"It's a tough business," he said. "Every element is working at the limit of its capacity. It's not like driving an automobile." Experts have speculated that rough or missing pieces of the shuttle's insulating tile may be connected to the shuttle's breakup on re-entering the Earth's atmosphere. Van Allen called such an explanation "plausible."

While working at the UI in 1958, Van Allen designed and built the instrumentation for Explorer I, the first successful satellite to be launched by the United States. Information from Explorer I led to the discovery of two radiation belts surrounding Earth, which now bear Van Allen's name.

"If a portion of the wing tears off, that's the end," he said. Van Allen said he expects NASA to launch an intensive investigation in the wake of the accident.

Although his initial reaction was shock, Van Allen said, he was not altogether astonished that NASA had experienced another tragedy, 17 years to the week after

2 doomed astronauts had Iowa ties

"Chawla was a beautiful, absolutely remarkable woman," Chen said.

Though hundreds of miles away from where debris from the Space Shuttle Columbia rained down on Feb. 1, Iowa felt the impact of the tragedy that killed seven astronauts.

Chen communicated from the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., for 48 hours, while Chawla conducted the experiment in outer space.

One of the seven astronauts inspired local elementary and college students during a visit five years ago in which she briefed UI researchers on a project she helped them conduct.

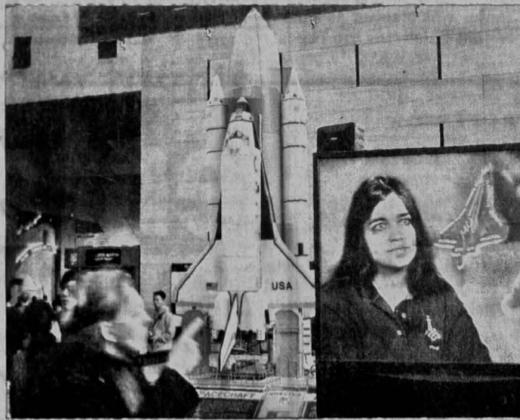

In 1998, Chawla held a seminar at the UI College of Engineering and had lunch with the UI Women in Science.

Another was born in Ames, where her aunt and uncle spent the weekend grieving their second tragic loss in 17 months: Their son was killed in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

While visiting Iowa, Kirkwood and Penn Elementary Schools also were graced with Chawla's slide show presentations, which included information about her 1997 space voyage on Columbia.

UI engineering Professor Lea-Der Chen conducted an experiment with Kalpana Chawla in November 1997 to determine how to stabilize flames in outer space. The goal of the project was to help design engines that burn more cleanly.

Dressed in a blue astronaut jump suit, Chawla encouraged children they could do whatever they wanted as long as they worked hard. Reach for the stars, she told them.

For one UI freshman, (Internet) speed thrills

Database speeds up download time of music and movies

BY CASEY WAGNER

For Jeff Nylen, it was all about the need for speed.

Unsatisfied with the capabilities and performance of the UI's Ethernet Internet connection system when downloading files onto his computer, the UI freshman created a new and faster way to download and share files with the 5,600 UI students living in the residence halls.

Nylen, an engineering major from Sioux City, began running the network server, HawkSearch, from his Mayflower dorm room in late September. The service, a Web site located at HawkSearch.kicks-ass.net, allows dorm residents to search, share, and download files from inside the university's computer network.

Approximately 1,500 different computers have logged onto the site since its inception, and around 30,000 visitors hit the site every day.

UI freshman Bae Jun recently downloaded a bootleg copy of the documentary Bowling for Columbine to fulfill a class assignment instead of shelling out a few bucks to catch the Michael Moore film currently in theaters.

Jun, a Mayflower resident, said he's not bothered by sharing and downloading copyrighted material on HawkSearch because the practice has become commonplace.

"It's so much faster," he said. "It's more like transferring files than downloading them."

HawkSearch uses the network's large bandwidth for faster connections and downloads, as opposed to using the smaller public bandwidth outside the UI campus. On HawkSearch, Nylen said, users can download a 700-megabyte file, the size of a full-length film, in 12-15 minutes instead of the two to 12 hours it takes to download the same file on programs that use public lines and smaller bandwidths, such as KaZaA or Limewire.

"... you'll never see speeds like that on anything else," Nylen said.

Getting the skinny on a good cause

BY GRANT SCHULTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Members of a Christian youth group bared more than their souls on Jan. 31 when they clustered in front of their church for a charitable cause.

Clad in shorts, sneakers, and little else, nearly a dozen members of the Christian Outreach Response and Education program endured temperatures in the 30s, working mostly in hour-long shifts to attract donors for their clothing drive at the Newman Catholic Student Center, 104 E. Jefferson St.

As of Sunday afternoon, the group had collected 25 boxes of clothing — "about enough to fill a little room," said UI senior Claire Heger, a social-work student who helped coordinate the church's second clothing drive. At one point during the six-hour event, she said, a woman passing the group literally gave them the sweatshirt off her back.

"Our big push was just to raise awareness," said Heger, who wore a thin gray T-shirt and red shorts on the drive's first day. "If everyone did something like that, we could really help a lot of people."

The idea to drop their winter duds came last year as group leaders sought creative ways to promote the three-day drive that ended Sunday, said participant and UI senior Sean Tehoke. The purpose, he said, was twofold: persuade students and community members to donate while learning firsthand about "what homeless people feel daily." "We're doing this to look further into our faith," he said, listing a number of causes the group has undertaken — prison pen pals, preparing meals for residents at the Iowa City Shelter House, and using their Spring Break for a service trip to Colorado, to name a few.

The donated clothes from this drive will go to various organizations including the Shelter House, 331 N. Gilbert St., and the Crowded Closet, 1213 S. Gilbert Court, which exchanges clothing for vouchers from people at the Crisis Center, Heger said. The amount of clothing they raised this year was roughly the same as their first drive, she said.

UI sophomore Dan Scholl spent four hours in the cold to promote the drive, his arms crossed and shoulders hunched to handle the nippy temperatures.

"I'm doing OK," he said, a condensation cloud rising from his mouth as he stood shivering in nothing but tennis shoes, black shorts, a purple stocking cap, and mittens. "This really puts things in perspective, though. It's one thing to be cold and know it will be over in a few hours, and another to have no end in sight."

W. Liberty man charged in local abduction

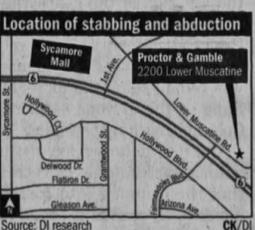

BY KELLEY CASINO
THE DAILY IOWAN

A West Liberty man charged in connection with a weekend abduction was arrested Sunday in Lincoln, Neb., while en route to Colorado.

Juan Perez, 30, allegedly stabbed Enrique Santos, 23, multiple times at the Iowa City Proctor & Gamble plant, 2200 Lower Muscatine Road, on Jan. 31 before allegedly abducting a woman at knifepoint, police reports show.

Both Santos, who is in serious condition at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, and the woman are employees of Proctor & Gamble.

West Liberty police discovered the woman at an undisclosed apartment Feb. 1 in West Liberty, located 18 miles southeast of Iowa City. During questioning, West Liberty and Iowa City police allegedly discovered that she had been sexually assaulted, said Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Lord. The woman received non-immediate medical attention following the incident, he said, adding that it is unclear how her whereabouts were determined.

West Liberty police were unavailable for comment.

Iowa City police obtained a warrant for Perez's arrest on Feb. 1 on a charge of first-degree kidnapping, a Class A felony punishable by life in prison.

Charges have not been filed against Perez in connection with the stabbing, Lord said, adding that additional charges could be possible, pending further investigation.

Iowa City police dispatchers received a call at 11:16 p.m. on Jan. 31 from the Proctor & Gamble plant, where officers found Santos, a Muscatine resident, suffering from stab wounds in the plant's break room.

Santos was stabbed at least once just below the rib cage, according to police reports.

Lord said the suspect and woman had a dating relationship in the past and that she and Santos were friends. But police are unsure whether Santos and Perez knew each other prior to the incident.

Police records show Perez was aboard an Amtrak train when he was found and apprehended by Lincoln police during a stop.

He remains in custody in Lincoln, Lord said.

"I would assume he would have to go through the normal extradition process to get back to Iowa," he said, adding that the timing of Perez's return to Iowa could depend on a number of factors.

There are often no symptoms of the disease until a fracture occurs. Osteoporosis is a condition of weak bones that can result in painful fractures of the hip, wrist and spine.

The University of Iowa Preventive Intervention Center in the College of Public Health invites postmenopausal women to participate in the LIFT Study, a 5-year research study about osteoporosis. You may qualify if you are:

- 60-85 years of age
- past menopause (at least 1 year without a menstrual period)
- not currently taking hormones or medication to treat or prevent osteoporosis

You will have a bone density test to see if you are eligible for the study. There are 13 visits to the research clinic in Iowa City during the 5 years. Some participants will receive a placebo (inactive pill). Compensation is available.

Future Hawkeye in middle of censorship flap

BY GRANT SCHULTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

A Michigan high-school senior who plans to attend UI next year is at the center of a controversy that pits freedom of speech against administrative desires to maintain a controlled campus atmosphere.

Alex Lang, an 18-year-old student at Grosse Pointe South High School in Grosse Pointe, Mich., said he and his co-workers at the school's weekly student newspaper, the Tower, are ready to take the school to court after the principal censored an article about a recent traffic accident that killed a 59-year-old man.

A lawyer from Michigan's largest daily newspaper, the Detroit Free Press, has promised to represent the 35-member staff, Lang said, though he hopes the conflict will end without litigation.

"I just hope it gets resolved,"

Lang said Sunday in a telephone interview. "We'd prefer just to reach a compromise."

Lang's three-paragraph story, which does not name anyone involved in the Jan. 6 accident, was scheduled to appear on the front page of the Jan. 15 issue of the school's award-winning newspaper. But administrators, fearing further outcries about an already sensitive topic, cut the article before it saw print — the first time they've done so in the paper's 75-year history, Lang said.

The managing editor of the sports section, Lang has worked at the paper in various capacities for three years. He said some of the Tower's articles have sparked controversy before, but only after they've been published. As a result, the Tower, which circulates every Wednesday to an audience of approximately 1,500 students, did not publish last week.

"We were shocked that they cut it," said Lauren Linsalata, an 18-year-old senior who edits with Lang. "I was very upset. My opinion was that we should have run it anyway."

Often, the Tower's adviser will run potentially controversial stories past school administrators to ensure that they don't violate Grosse Pointe's School policy, Linsalata said. In basic alignment with Michigan law, the policy states that administrators can censor an article if the content is obscene to minors, libelous, an invasion of privacy, inspires unlawful acts, advertises an illegal product, or creates a situation of clear-and-present danger.

The paper's faculty adviser had brought the article to the school's assistant principal, who in turn called Principal D. Allan Diver, who was out of the state at the time, talked to the school attorney, who suggested they pull the article, said Kathy Roberts, the high school's community-relations supervisor.

"We've had some conflicts before, but nothing like this," Roberts said, citing past issues in which the Tower ran articles on abortion, raves, and clubs that upset parents. "The administration censored the article because there were people who were very upset and reluctant to accept the facts as they were presented in the article."

The student involved in the accident, a 16-year-old male, was escorted by police to all of his classes in the days following the lunchtime accident because of several death threats made against him, Roberts said. The threats were later found to be without merit, she said.

Diver and Jeff Nardone, the paper's adviser, were both unavailable for comment. Both have turned down interview requests from other papers. In a statement, the Grosse Pointe Public School System said the school removed the story to protect the involved families from "considerable pain and suffering" and keep the story from "inflaming an already delicate situation."

Lang, who plans to major in journalism at the UI in hopes of becoming a professional newspaper journalist, said Diver gave two reasons for censoring the article: The article wasn't timely, and the witness reports Lang cited contended that the 59-year-old stepped in front of the car that hit him.

"It's not like I was making the stuff up," Lang said. "That's what the reports said."

The UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication recently sent Lang a letter of support after hearing of the situation.

Despite the pressure and sudden attention — the controversy has been covered by the Free Press and staff at the Student Press Law Center — Lang said his resolve and love for journalism remains strong.

During lunch on Monday, Jan. 6, a 59-year-old man was hit by an SUV driven by a 16-year-old South student, a source at the Grosse Pointe City police station said. Two days later, the man died from injuries he sustained.
The accident occurred on St. Clair in the Village of Grosse Pointe, the source said. According to witness reports, the man stepped into the path of the automobile after walking from behind a car moving in the opposite direction. He was approximately 90 feet from the crosswalk.
Charges have not been decided upon because of the ongoing investigation, the source said.

State faults county's repayment plan in mental-health imbroglio

BY CHOYON MANJREKAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

Johnson County's plan to recollect $417,599 in improperly allocated funds is inadequate, says the state's deputy auditor.

The money was distributed to local agencies in June 2002 in an effort to spend surplus funds before the end of the fiscal year and qualify for state allocations. Supervisors proposed Jan. 31 that the affected agencies repay the money over 10 years at a 1 percent interest rate. However, Warren Jenkins, the state's deputy auditor, said any time beyond five years is unreasonable because some of the agencies may not be doing business with the county in a decade.

"This is like giving gifts out of taxpayer money," he said. "The county will have to pay back the money if it cannot recover it."

State auditors are now working on a repayment plan for the county that will be subject to the approval of Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White.

"This was an administrative error," said Johnson County Supervisor Carol Thompson. "We will do our best to see if there are ways within the county to replace the funds."

Thompson said she will try to make the process of repayment as painless as possible for the agencies, which, she said, were "victims of the plan" to appropriate funds to ensure the county's Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities Department's budget was down to 10 percent of its yearly expenditures. The agency was required to spend at least 90 percent of its funds for fiscal 2002 in order to be eligible for a larger payment from the state. The department spent $1.03 million in questionable expenses hoping to meet the cutoff.

A portion of the funds the agencies must pay back were for consultants the mental-health department required the agencies to hire in order to ensure their organizations were compliant with the Health Insurance Portability Act. John Watson, the president of Goodwill Industries of Southeast Iowa, said the expense was needless because his agency could have found alternative methods to comply with the act.

"We understand the predicament of the county and the legalities behind the deal, but we are paying for its mistake," said Watson, whose group received $72,000 plus consultation fees.

An October state audit determined that the county's spending was improper and ordered the recipients to pay back the allocations.

In a similar situation, Johnson County missed out on state appropriations of $536,000 and $616,000 for the past two years respectively because of a large surplus.

Racine remembers shuttle's Clark

BY JULIET WILLIAMS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

RACINE, Wis. — As she orbited far above the planet in the Space Shuttle Columbia, astronaut Laurel Clark was sending "positive energy all the way down" to her loved ones on Earth.

During services Sunday at the church Clark attended as a teenager, the Rev. Tony Larsen read an e-mail she sent to family and friends from space Jan. 31.

She told loved ones she hoped they could feel the energy she was sending down as she circled the planet.

Clark, 41, was one of seven astronauts who perished Feb. 1 when Columbia disintegrated over Texas just minutes before it was scheduled to touch down in Florida. She considered Racine her hometown.

"I feel blessed to be here representing our country," Clark wrote from space. She described the magnificent sight as she crossed over the plains of Africa and the lights of Australia and saw "the scars of humanity" across North and South America. She also pointed out a childhood home in Wind Point, Wis.

Her brother, Dan Salton, who wore a space shuttle pin and cried quietly during the service, said he has been comforted to hear how many lives his sister touched.

"She was a role model in this community. We've had outpourings from people I've never met before," he said. "She was my big sister. Heroes to me are something other, something big."

Parishioners at Olympia Brown Unitarian Universalist Church shared prayers and lit candles in Clark's memory. Children in the Sunday school pasted hearts with their names on a remembrance quilt for Clark's family.

The school Clark graduated from in 1979, Racine's Horlick High, has become a focal point for mourners. A steady stream of adults and children brought flowers and candles Sunday to the base of a flag that rested at half-staff.

Clark was born in Ames while her father studied at Iowa State University. She lived in the central Iowa town for two years and later moved with her family to Racine.

UI scientists back manned flights

BY JESSE HELLING
THE DAILY IOWAN

Several UI researchers conducted a study that was tested on the Space Shuttle Columbia in 1999.

Mark Arnold, a UI professor of chemistry, developed an oxygen-sensing system that may enable researchers to accurately monitor and study human cell growth and metabolism in space.

Developed in collaboration with David Murhammer, a UI associate professor of chemical and biochemical engineering, and Michael Cohen, a UI professor of pathology, the system was tested aboard the Columbia during a July 1999 mission.

Despite the loss of the Columbia on Feb. 1, Arnold said he believes the benefits of manned space explorations outweigh the risks involved.

"The technological discoveries are very worthwhile," he said. "Unique things can be done in microgravity that need to be explored."

Arnold said the Feb. 1 tragedy would not have any short-term effects on his current projects.

His latest project, which began in 2001 and is also funded by NASA, involves infrared sensors that monitor human health. They will be used aboard the International Space Station.

Several other UI researchers conduct studies for NASA, and they received $9.1 million from NASA during fiscal 2002 to fund a variety of projects.

For the past 44 years, Donald Gurnett, a professor of physics and astronomy, has developed technology for use in space exploration.

Gurnett, who worked with Professor James Van Allen's Explorer I group in 1958, heads the Space Plasma Wave Group, which develops plasma-wave receivers for use on unmanned space probes. Gurnett's group, which has contributed to several NASA missions, received roughly $5 million in NASA funding in 2002.

The loss of the Columbia will not affect the group's work, he said. In May, a receiver developed by the group to detect underground water on Mars will be launched from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Kazakhstan aboard the Mars Express, a collaboration between NASA and the Russian and European Space Agencies.

In October 2001, NASA released the Safe Passage Report, detailing the provision of medical care during longer space missions. Carol Scott-Conner, the head of the UI surgery department, contributed to the report.

"I think [the loss of the Columbia] will be a temporary setback, but hopefully, it won't be a matter of years," she said, adding that the experimental possibilities in manned space missions are too valuable not to explore.

DOUGLASS, Texas — On horseback and in four-wheel-drives, hundreds of law officers and volunteers tromped through piney woods, over pastures, and through swamps Sunday, looking for pieces of Columbia that could explain what brought the shuttle down.

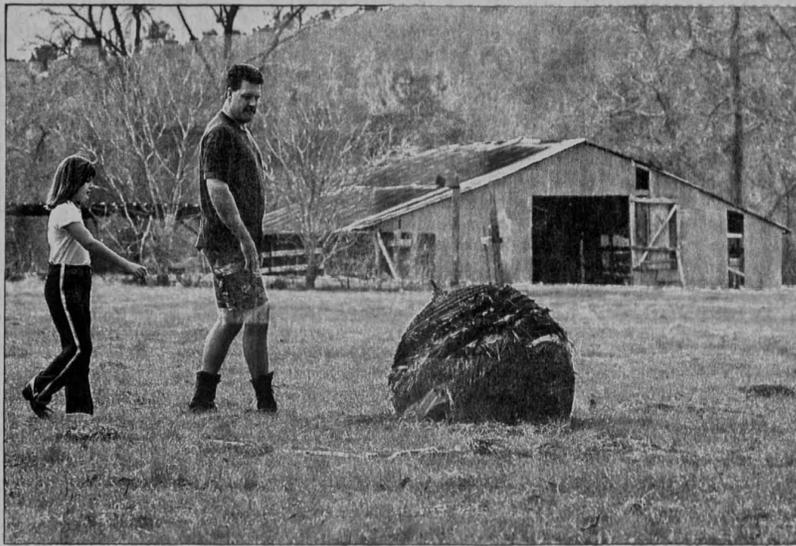

Pieces as small as a quarter and as big as a pickup were being secured; they will eventually be analyzed at Barksdale Air Force Base next door in Louisiana.

Experts will try to reassemble sections of the shuttle to figure out how it broke apart and why. Before the shuttle went up, every piece was numbered and carefully catalogued.

NASA space shuttle program manager Ron Dittmore called the salvage operation "the first step of piecing together the puzzle" of what sent Columbia spiraling from the skies over Texas on Feb. 1, killing all seven astronauts aboard.

NASA said remains of some of the astronauts have been recovered.

Through thick woods that are home to wild hogs and bobcats,

Eric Gay/Associated Press
Tommy Peltier and his daughter Alexis, 8, on Sunday approach a large piece of debris from Space Shuttle Columbia that fell close to their family's home near San Augustine, Texas.

75 volunteers and law officers carried out their hunt near Hemphill on the Louisiana line. Approximately 40 feet into the forest, a searcher shouted, "Hold," when he spotted a chunk of metal dangling from a limb. A volunteer marked it with a red flag.

Not too far away, in the community of Douglass, an 18-inch piece of what appeared to be duct piping put a dent in the roof of a school. Debris was also found near the pitcher's mound of the baseball field and the track. Little orange flags marked every piece.

NASA ponders what went wrong & how

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — If liftoff damage to Columbia's thermal tiles caused the disaster, was the crew doomed from the very start?

Or could NASA have saved all or some of the seven astronauts by trying some Hollywood-style heroics — a potentially suicidal spacewalk, perhaps, or a rescue mission by another shuttle?

Some of the ideas that have been suggested would have been highly impractical, dangerous, and perhaps futile.

The shuttle does not carry spare tiles, and NASA insists there was nothing on board that the crew could have used to repair or replace missing or broken ones. In any case, the space agency believed at the time that the tile damage was nothing to worry about and thus nothing worth risking a life over.

Still, as James Oberg, a former shuttle flight controller and author who has been bombarded by "Armageddon"-type rescue ideas via e-mail, said Sunday: "They may be implausible but not by much." He added: "There's always the question of miracles."

NASA knew from Day Two of Columbia's 16-day research mission that a piece of the insulating foam on the external fuel tank peeled off just after liftoff and struck the left wing, possibly ripping off some of the tiles that keep the ship from burning up when it re-enters Earth's atmosphere.

A frame-by-frame analysis of launch video and film clearly showed a clump of something streaking away from Columbia 80 seconds into the flight.

Engineers spent days analyzing the situation and concluded that there was no reason for concern. The flight director in charge of Columbia's Jan. 16 launch and Feb. 1 descent from orbit, Leroy Cain, assured reporters as much on Jan. 31.

But hours after the disaster, shuttle program manager Ron Dittmore acknowledged that NASA might have been wrong and that wing damage on launch day might have contributed to or even caused Columbia to disintegrate on re-entry.

"It's one of the areas we're looking at first, early, to make sure that the investigative team is concentrating on that theory or that set of facts as we are starting to unfold," NASA Administrator Sean O'Keefe said Sunday.

Dittmore himself said: "My thoughts are on what we missed, what I missed, to allow this to happen."

Some facts remain:

- NASA did not attempt to examine Columbia's left wing with high-powered telescopes on the ground, 180 miles below, or with spy satellites. The last time NASA tried that, to check Discovery's drag-chute compartment during John Glenn's shuttle flight in 1998, the pictures were of little use, Dittmore said.

Besides, he said, "there was zero we could have done about it."

- Similarly, NASA did not ask the crew of international space station to use its cameras to examine the wing when the two ships passed within a few hundred miles of each other several times over the past two weeks.

- NASA did not consider a spacewalk by the crew to inspect the left wing. The astronauts are not trained or equipped to repair tile damage anywhere on the shuttle, least of all on a relatively inaccessible area like the underside of a wing, Dittmore said.

Could NASA have sent another shuttle to rescue Columbia's five men and two women?

In theory, yes.

Normally, it takes four months to prepare a shuttle for launch. But in a crisis, shuttle managers say they might be able to put together a launch in less than a week if all testing were thrown out the window and a shuttle were already on the pad.

while "mishap response" teams gathered at Barksdale Air Force Base near Shreveport, La., and in Lufkin, Fort Worth, and Dallas, Texas, to help collect information and debris. And in a number of NASA centers, numerous engineering teams were burrowing deeper and deeper into the available data from the flight.

As he disclosed the emerging details of the shuttle's last minutes, Dittmore cautioned that the engineering analysts were just beginning to assemble the pieces needed to complete the puzzle, and the evidence might seem contradictory from one day to the next. As they delve more deeply into the recorded data, he said, they expect to extract perhaps another half minute or so of data from the shuttle's final seconds.

Although the potential tile damage has drawn considerable attention, he said, engineers could not rule out other possibilities such as a structural or flight-control system failure.

"We've got some more detective work, but we're making progress inch by inch," he said.

The sensor data showed that at 7:53 a.m. CST on Feb. 1, as the shuttle passed over California, temperatures rose 20 to 30 degrees in five minutes inside the shuttle's left wheel well. "This is significant," he said, because the measurements were taken in a spot particularly vulnerable to heat if the tile shielding is failing. It was the first significant episode of unusual heating in the descent.

At 7:54, over eastern California and western Nevada, areas on the left fuselage around the wing also showed an unusual temperature rise. While the shuttle's right side showed a routine 15-degree rise, the left side warmed 60 degrees. Inside the shuttle's big cargo bay, temperatures were normal.

At 7:58 a.m. CST, over New Mexico, he said, "the roll trim and the elevons started to increase, indicating that we had an increase in drag on the left side of the vehicle ... At this time, we also lost the left, main landing gear tire pressure and wheel temperature measurements." The signs were that the tire was still there, but the sensors were somehow ruined.

At 7:59 a.m., over west Texas, there was another increase in drag on the left side, indicated by the flight-control system's struggle to counter the drag by commanding the vehicle to roll to the right.

Then the shuttle's radio signal was lost.

NASA on Sunday called on the public on the West Coast to provide photos or video of the shuttle as it hurtled overhead. Dittmore said the agency already has statements from several people who thought they saw something separate from the spacecraft.

Bush's budget: tax cuts, record deficits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will send Congress a $2.23 trillion spending plan today featuring new tax cuts, a conservative tilt to major social programs, and record deficits for the next two years — shortfalls that Democrats blame on Bush's tax cuts.

White House budget officials said Sunday the president's tax and spending blueprint, complete with dozens of agency briefings, will roll out as scheduled despite the Feb. 1 space-shuttle disaster.

Fifth- and sixth-graders listened to Chawla's discussion on what it is like to be an astronaut, in addition to participating in a question-and-answer seminar.

"I remember how Chawla was very pleasant and great with the children," said John Saehler, the Kirkwood principal.

Along with Chawla, Iowa native Laurel Clark, niece of Ames residents Doug and Betty Haviland, was one of the astronauts aboard the Columbia.

The Havilands also lost their son, Timothy, in the attack on the World Trade Center.

Clark, 41, was born in Ames; she moved at the age of 2 to Wisconsin. She enlisted in the Navy while attending medical school at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Clark kept in touch with the Havilands and routinely visited them for holidays, such as Thanksgiving.

"I admire how she would set such goals and achieve them," Betty Haviland said. "She was such a careful observer and would do anything to succeed."

The Havilands drew attention from the national media as well as Iowa politicians, including Sen. Tom Harkin, who said: "My friends in Ames have faced tragedy that most of us will never know, having lost a family member on 9/11 and today, in another public, national disaster. It is my hope and the hope of all Iowans that they will find peace in the wake of their loss."

Clark is survived by her husband and 8-year-old son.

In memory of the astronauts aboard the Columbia, a moment of silence will be held prior to the Cedar Rapids Science Station's showing of the Space Station until its final presentation on Feb. 28th.

The Science Station has posters on display for condolence notes that NASA officials will deliver to the families of the seven astronauts. A replica of the Columbia sits next to the posters.

The outer-space documentary was filmed by 25 astronauts working at the International Space Station and narrated by Tom Cruise.

"Numbers are higher, and traffic has increased since Saturday's tragedy," said Shirley Ryan, the weekend manager of the Science Station.

even possible," he said. "[NASA has] an enormous dedication to safety, but nobody's perfect."

Van Allen said the disaster will likely raise questions about the necessity of a manned flight program.

"I've been sort of a critic of manned flight for 40 years," he said. "Not on these grounds [of safety], but on the grounds of the extraordinary cost of these missions."

Van Allen's career has dealt exclusively with unmanned spacecraft. He said these have had more practical results than manned flights, including missions to other planets, global-positioning devices, and military reconnaissance.

"There have been relatively meager scientific results from the manned space flights," he said. "On the whole, the cost of the program has been vastly incommensurate with the results."

"It has nothing to do with science or practicality. It's sort of an entertainment thing."

Despite the Columbia tragedy and the high cost of manned flights, Van Allen said, he does not expect NASA to discontinue its shuttle program. For one, the United States is already committed to the completion of the International Space Station, which requires manned flights. But also, there is more public interest when humans are involved, he said.

"It's very glamorous," he said, adding that he keeps a log of all shuttle flights and the names of the crew.

"I'm a critic but not an opponent," he said. "It's sort of like a religion, in a way. It's this ideal of exploration and human achievement and being at the forefront of human capability."

Although Van Allen said he would cut manned flights if he ran NASA, he has utmost respect for the organization.

"I've been one of the most durable advocates of the space program of anyone still living," he said. "And I still am."

Technology Services, said the speeds capable on HawkSearch can be attributed to the fiber-optic cables installed between UI buildings that yield higher bandwidth than conventional telephone lines.

Franke said the cables are similar to pipes and that bandwidth represents the amount of information that can travel through the pipe. He compared the university's system with a large sewer pipe, while conventional telephone lines are similar in size to a house's water pipes.

Jun has only one thing to say about HawkSearch's speed: "It's great."

Only students living in the dorms can access HawkSearch's 800,198 files, which total 1,846 gigabytes, because Nylén said he has been able to restrict the IP addresses of other university buildings. The site also serves as a message board for general student comments and hosts various features on its main page, including a "Rate Me" beauty contest.

Nylén said there are no restrictions or legal complications to sharing files, including copyrighted movie and song files, over an internal network like the university's. However, Franke said, large companies can still monitor and track their copyrighted files over internal networks, and they could contact the university and have it investigate file sharing.

Last month, Iowa State University officials were able to track files and charge students who were sharing them over StrangeSearch, the ISU version of HawkSearch. ISU officials obtained warrants to confiscate the students' computers when they left their dorm rooms.

"It's no big deal if it's personal documents," Franke said of file sharing. "But if it's copyrighted material like songs or movies, then we get calls from the companies and are asked to do something."

But Nylén said because HawkSearch is only a database and is not involved with the actual downloading of files, neither he or the network would be in legal trouble.

Iraq: U.S. to fake evidence

BY RAJIV CHANDRASEKARAN
WASHINGTON POST

BAGHDAD, Iraq — A senior Iraqi official said Sunday that he expects Secretary of State Colin Powell to present the U.N. Security Council with fabricated evidence this week alleging that the country possesses weapons of mass destruction.

Gen. Hussam Mohammed Amin, the director of Iraq's weapons-monitoring directorate and the chief liaison with U.N. weapons inspectors, said the U.S. government would show the council "planted photos" to make its case that Iraq still has banned arms.

"I think they will be fabricated," Amin said. "They will be space photos, aerial photos, of some vehicles that could be interpreted in different ways just to create suspicion around the Iraqi declaration. They will not be real evidences because we have nothing. We have no weapons of mass destruction."

Powell plans on Wednesday to present to the Security Council what U.S. officials have said will be strong evidence that Iraq is working to impede the inspectors and conceal prohibited weapons. The officials have said that Powell probably would brandish satellite images and electronic intercepts of Iraqi communications.

Amin said, however, that his government would demonstrate a "willingness to cooperate" with the U.N.'s top two weapons inspectors, who intend to arrive here Saturday for another round of talks before they deliver their next progress report to the council on Feb. 14. The inspectors, Hans Blix and Mohamed ElBaradei, want Iraq to allow the United Nations to conduct U-2 surveillance flights over Iraq and to make Iraqi scientists available for unmonitored interviews. They also want Iraq to provide more evidence about its past efforts to convert anthrax and the VX nerve agent into weapons.

Blix and ElBaradei had insisted earlier they would not travel to Baghdad until Saddam Hussein's government agreed to relent on those issues, but after meeting with Iraq's U.N. ambassador on Feb. 1, the two men indicated they would make the trip.

Speaking to reporters Sunday, Amin said Iraq cannot guarantee the safety of the U-2s if U.S. and British warplanes do not suspend patrols in parts of the country that both governments have deemed to be "no-fly zones" for Iraqi aircraft. And he said that Iraq "can't force" scientists to meet privately with inspectors despite a promise that it would encourage participation in confidential questioning sessions.

Rangel reopens debate on draft

BY DAVID CRARY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — During the Vietnam War, presidents and the Pentagon defended the draft, while the peace movement assailed it. As America edges toward a possible new war, roles have reversed.

Backed by other opponents of a war with Iraq, Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., has proposed that the draft — shelved since 1973 — be reinstated in the name of "shared sacrifice."

The Pentagon disagrees, insisting that today's all-volunteer forces are more efficient and professional than conscripts.

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld has gone further, asserting at a news conference that draftees added "no value, no advantage" to the military because they served for such brief periods. After members of Congress and veterans groups protested, Rumsfeld apologized, but he made it clear he opposes a return to conscription.

Still, Rangel's proposal — though unlikely to win passage — has revived a dormant national debate about the concept of mandatory national service. It is a discussion that creates unusual allies and goes to the heart of American citizenship.

While the Pentagon and the Bush administration support an all-volunteer military, a broad constituency favors some type of universal national service, either military duty or a civilian alternative.

"The problem with the all-volunteer force is that the children of America's elite are not serving," said Charles Moskos, a Northwestern University sociologist who studies military issues. "It's not good for the military, and it's not good for the nation."

Moskos has proposed a three-tiered draft — specifically designed to include college graduates — with the choice to serve with the armed forces, a homeland-security agency such as the Border Patrol, or a public-service organization such as the Peace Corps.

On college campuses, opinions about the draft are deeply divided.

"I don't object to the argument that there's a socioeconomic bias in the military, but remedying that with a draft is ridiculous," said University of Virginia sophomore Chris Wilson. "I would protest every step of the way."

Mark Schantz's bad joke

I fully agree with Mark Schantz's charge that the Athletics Board's findings in the Pierre Pierce case are so enmeshed in bureaucratism that they will fan the flames of this controversy rather than provide closure. Instead of deleting the vaguely worded findings, as Schantz suggests, the board should make specific allegations of who made inappropriate statements, how the victim's needs were underserved, and why Pierce's status as an athlete affected the way his case was handled.

What I can't get over, however, is that Schantz begins his well-argued rebuttal of the board's findings with a poorly timed joke. To the board's quite specific recommendation that Schantz not serve simultaneously as UI general counsel and as the vice president overseeing athletics, Schantz quips, "Do you really think I can afford to forego the huge bonuses I get from taking on this extra work?" I can only assume that the statement is sarcastic and that Schantz does not receive any bonuses for his work, because such a blunt admission of greed from a university official would be unthinkable.

Yet, especially as sarcasm, the statement is inappropriate. While I can appreciate Schantz's attempt to lighten the mood, I can only think of Ann Rhodes' earlier attempt to lighten the mood after the threats against students of color in the dental school. Her ill-timed humor eventually led to her resignation as vice president — a decision that ironically led to Schantz assuming oversight of athletics in the first place.

Why, in the middle of such controversies, do UI administrators assume that people have the emotional and intellectual wherewithal to make distinctions between official university statements and offhanded quips? People should be able to tell the difference, of course, but by telling jokes about situations in which very few people find anything funny, these administrators seem to be just asking for trouble. Schantz's statement was already pulled out as a quote in a DI article ("Panel: UI erred in Pierce case," Jan. 31), and I'm sure it will become the source of ire to many who assume it to be a confession rather than a wise-crack. By failing to realize that he should not make public statements that need to be followed by the phrase "but seriously folks," Schantz deserves a barrage of negative opinion.

Editorial

UI's last-place finish in health-care coverage is unacceptable

The UI is known throughout the world as a center of medicine. Our hospital is renowned as one of the best in the Midwest, and patients come from hundreds of miles away in order to receive top-notch care from some of the world's best specialists. Behind the scenes, highly skilled research scientists invest millions of dollars and hours creating cures and treatments. Altogether, the UI is a highly efficient machine for stamping out the maladies of the human race.

It is quite ironic, therefore, that the university lags far behind in medical coverage for its employees. Under the current plan, university employees are covered for 68 percent of their medical bills, while their families are covered for 54 percent. Not only are these the lowest figures among all of Iowa's public universities, they are in fact the lowest in the Big Ten, which averages 89 percent for single plans and 72 percent for families.

The UI administration's obvious lack of support for health coverage flies directly in the face of its seeming commitment to medicine. Every year, the university receives millions of dollars in grant money for medical research. However, the administration turns around and denies its employees adequate access to the fruits of this research. Such hypocrisy is intolerable.

In defense of the administration, many are quick to point to current budget difficulties that make it nearly impossible to increase funding to any programs, including health-care coverage. This, however, is not an adequate excuse for the university's shameful last-place position. After all, both the University of Northern Iowa and Iowa State University are experiencing the same dreadful budget cuts as the UI, but they still manage to provide better coverage for their employees.

Medical bills are steadily climbing, and they show no sign of abating in the near future. For 2004, costs are expected to increase 15 percent and continue rising in subsequent years. Employees' salaries are not climbing nearly as fast, and those without adequate coverage are left to bear the burden.

Ultimately, the UI's appalling last-place position in health-care coverage means that its employees are hit especially hard. They work hard every day to cure the ills of the human race, but, in the end, they are denied access to the very treatments they helped to create.

Kids and condoms — the need for change in sex ed

On Jan. 31, the Associated Press reported that high-school officials in Naples, Fla., fired a health teacher who had his ninth-grade class practice condom application using bananas. According to the AP article, Colin Nicholas maintains that he was "never told condoms weren't allowed in classrooms. [He] has also said his intent was to simulate situations his students might face, because he believes teaching safe sex benefits students."

Administrators at Gulf Coast High School began their investigation of Nicholas in December after some parents complained. The School Board's decision in this case cannot be appealed, so a well-intentioned man has lost his job trying to make life a little safer for a small group of 14- and 15-year-olds.

But the safety of these children is apparently something that school officials in Naples failed to take into account.

Whether these administrators and parents want to face it, children are having sex. As the "sex sells" attitude pervades our culture, children are exposed to sexuality at a much younger age. Need proof? Seven-year-olds are imitating Britney Spears, complete with halter-tops and makeup. And with that heightened sense of sexuality comes an increased interest in sex itself. And so, children have sex.

Sooner or later, it's going to happen. And chances are, it'll be sooner.

What is the high-school answer to this naked truth? Abstinence-only education. That's right: Kids are having sex, but let's tell them not to have sex. Of course, abstinence is the only 100 percent guarantee to avoiding pregnancy and STDs. And children should know that it's a choice — you don't have to have sex. But abstinence-only education denies the reality of life. And if we really want to make these kids safe — and smart — we have to teach them about condoms.

It doesn't matter if we're uncomfortable teaching condom use in the classroom. How much more uncomfortable will it be to have hundreds of children pregnant with their own children, knowing we could have given them the tools to prevent it?

AMANDA MITTLESTADT

How uncomfortable will it be, knowing our kids are out there, doing what kids do, and we have denied them the means to save their lives?

Sex education in this country has to change. We cannot turn our backs on our children, turn a blind eye to the truth of their lives. If they are seeking information, our schools must provide it to them — that is, after all, a school's job. We have to teach them abstinence, yes; but we must also teach them safe sex. And we have to teach them at a younger age.

A 2000 study funded by the U.S. Public Health Service found that young girls become fertile soon after they begin menstruation. Over generations, the age of menstruation has decreased. Girls today are having their periods nine months earlier than their mothers did. This means that many girls begin menstruation around age 13 — and are fertile at 13. Some girls, however, menstruate as early as age 11, some sooner. Whatever the age, a period means one thing: If she has unprotected sex, the girl can become a mother.

Further, I can't imagine anything more hypocritical than the situation society puts young girls in if they become pregnant. There's no practical sex education, but if an unwanted pregnancy occurs, many young girls are thrown headfirst into the abortion debate. You cannot simultaneously tell a girl not to have sex and when she does — because she will — discourage her from obtaining an abortion. There's no "I told you so." Because we didn't.

But because there is no end to the abortion debate in sight, we can start somewhere else — the classroom. It makes sense to teach safe sex to younger children — start complete sex education in middle school. There's no reason we should teach sixth-graders about drug abuse but not about the proper way to put on a condom. Both things are equally important to their health.

Colin Nicholas, it seems, was on the right track. Florida school officials didn't recognize this. Hopefully, the rest of us will.

In My Opinion

Should condom demonstrations be a part of high-school sex-education classes?

"Yes, because more than 60 percent of the population has an STD, so it's very important to teach protection."

Jess Stoffel
 UI senior

"Definitely. Kids are going to have sex anyway, and it's important that they are informed."

Sarah Miller
 UI senior

"I believe it's realistic. If they are morally opposed to it, it won't make them have sex."

Lauren Levin
 UI graduate student

"They are having sex at young ages, so that's when they should learn."

Amy Kincaid
 UI sophomore

"Yes, because it's a public-health issue that will affect their lives; it will affect all of us."

Darkness Falls — falls down a lot

FILM REVIEW

by Nate Yapp

Darkness Falls

When:

Where:

Cinema 6

★½ out of ★★★★★

Darkness Falls is a 85-minute excuse to show a 20-minute short film.

After a rather bland prologue (that is never really dealt with afterwards; it merely explains the beast of the movie, which is a bad way to begin anything horror-related), we are introduced to a young boy who is doing something very familiar to practically everyone — wiggling a loose tooth into submission.

Beginning with that simple moment, director Jonathan Liebesman guides us into the very definition of childhood fear, carefully building suspense and repeatedly producing moments of terror in which the strain of waiting becomes unbearable. Several interesting visual motifs are set up, particularly one involving viewing faces.

With such a delightfully strong opening, which easily ranks among the very best in horror history, the rest of the film must be just as exciting, right?

Nope. And nope again.

Darkness Falls's narrative jumps ahead 12 years and starts indulging in idiocy and predictably numbing action sequences. A few moments almost cash in on the early promise of excellence, but they're infrequent, disappearing entirely by the last half-hour.

This being a horror flick, there's a monster — the Tooth Fairy, actually (the previews intimate as much, and they really shouldn't), and she's a frightening visage at first. However, Liebesman shows too much too soon, and pretty quickly we've seen everything this fiend can do — and she keeps doing it. Over and over. She swoops, she kills. Oh boy.

Also following the traditions of the terror genre, Ms. Fairy has a weakness — she can't stand even the mildest luminosity. Although that's nothing new, handled properly it can be excellent (Pitch Black, for instance). Alas, Darkness Falls fails to capitalize on this potential (except, of course, in the first act — did I mention how spookily fantastic the first act was?), and the movie becomes about the characters getting stuck in darkness and trying to get to some nearby light source, a scenario that becomes more and more difficult to do believably as the film progresses.

Of course, this shouldn't matter. If there are interesting characters whom the audience can care about, the monster becomes scarier by association. Unfortunately, this is another example of screenwriters not knowing what little things such as "dimension" and "good dialogue" are.

All of the characters in Darkness Falls are blandly drawn, and their eventual fates are non-issues. If they die, so what? Nobody here's making a personal journey, learning about herself or himself, or even cracking open a brain cell for later use. There's no complexity — everyone is either an asshole or devoid of personality in that special stick-figure way. There's no fun in seeing anyone die, either, because this is a PG-13 flick, and the gory death factor is pretty much nil.

Film: Darkness Falls
Director: Joe Liebesman
Writers: John Fasano and James Vanderbilt
Starring: Chaney Kley, Emma Caulfield, and Lee Cormie
Length: 85 minutes

After the beautiful first act, it's difficult to forget that Liebesman might actually be talented, but he tries hard to remind us that he's merely competent. All of his shots seem framed for television, and only occasionally (and briefly) does he hint at his previously displayed skill. Missing in action are the intriguing visual ideas and the disquieting pacing. Even the quick shocks are less than intense. It's frustrating to see such a drop-off in quality — and it's distracting.

As a weak way of excusing this exasperating situation, it should be noted that the opening of the movie is actually based on a short film by Joe Harris called The Tooth Fairy. I can't help but think that the excellent direction and pacing in Darkness Falls (as concentrated as it is to the front of the flick) originates from Harris and not Liebesman (although, not having seen the earlier movie, I can't confirm my suspicion).

Much like Star Wars: Episode II, Darkness Falls is nearly worth the price of admission just for one sequence alone. In this age of rising theater prices, though, it's probably best to wait for the DVD.

Shutting it off after the first 20 minutes is highly recommended.

Indigo Girls Emily Saliers and Amy Ray bring their Southern rock roots to the IMU with the first Midwestern stop of their acoustic tour.

IMU's mood to be Indigo

Indigo Girls Emily Saliers and Amy Ray will stop at the IMU Main Ballroom tonight on their winter acoustic tour — which is featuring songs from the group's latest album, Become You.

Released in March 2002, the album is reminiscent of the group's early work and the beginnings of a two-decade career that has shown a true progression in musicianship.

Fans' last helping of the women came in 2001 with Ray's solo album, Stag, which had a more plugged-in sound and a depth of songwriting.

The latest disc includes the tight, almost dissonant harmonies and thoughtful lyrics that have become an Indigo signature. The title track explores sounds that reflect Ray's and Saliers' Southern roots.

Divided equally, with six of the 12 tracks written by Saliers and six by Ray, Become You demonstrates their differing but complementary styles.

Tonight's show comes at the beginning of a Midwestern leg of the acoustic tour, which will include large and small venues.

Doors will open at 7 p.m.; the show will begin at 8 p.m. Tickets are still available at the University Box Office.

Oh yes, I drink Less!

That's right, much Less drinking goes on these days. When I drink Less, I enjoy myself more. Come to think of it, when I drink Less, my friends enjoy me more. Apparently, when I drink Less, I spend more time having fun and not so much time trying to remember what exactly I did that caused my pants to catch on fire.

So now when I go out, I drink Less. It saves me money, and it means I don't wake up the next morning with a tongue that feels like it's 3 sizes too big for my mouth. Try it, and you'll agree.

What you'll see in downtown Iowa City after midnight

- People slipping on the metal plates of the literary walk on Iowa Avenue.
- Blonde girls on cell phones.
- At least five cop cars.
- At least one guy passed out on the table at Taco Bell.
- At least one fight.
- People eating grilled cheese like it was French Silk Pie.
- Some guy, probably from Cedar Rapids, pissin' behind a Dumpster.
- High-school kids in black hoodies huddled around, smoking cigarettes.
- People buying cases of Busch Light from the Mighty Shop.
- No old people.
- Some really bad dancing.
- The downfall of Western civilization.

UConn remains atop Division-I women

After defeating No. 1 Duke on Feb. 1, UConn remains the only unbeaten team in Division I women's college basketball. Today, the Huskies will replace Duke as the No. 1 team in the polls; the 77-65 victory maintained UConn's streak of 59-consecutive wins. But Duke did not surrender its top spot without a fight. Alana Beard scored 21 of her 26 points in the final 13:33, and Duke cut the lead as the Huskies came unglued almost as quickly as they buried Duke in a 28-point hole. "We obviously proved tonight that we can play with anyone and beat anyone in the country," said UConn's Diana Taurasi, who had 17 points and seven turnovers. "But we don't have that sense that we're unbeatable and no one can touch us."

Laid-back atmosphere positive for Pro Bowl

BY GREG BEACHAM

Williams

HONOLULU — Ricky Williams' first trip to the Pro Bowl was worth the wait. The Miami Dolphins' star running back rushed for 56 yards, scored two touchdowns, and forced a fumble on special teams to earn the MVP award in the AFC's 45-20 victory over the NFC on Sunday. The AFC had six interceptions while beating the NFC for its sixth victory in the last seven Pro Bowls. Starting quarterback Rich Gannon, the MVP of the regular season and the previous two Pro Bowls, went 12-18 for 102 yards and two TDs as the NFL wrapped up its season with another high-scoring, entertaining, all-star game. Williams, who led the NFL in rushing after three tough seasons in New Orleans, also caught three passes as the AFC jumped to a 28-6 halftime lead and eliminated the tension — already minor at best — from this good-natured exhibition. "What's fun is how laid-back everything is," Williams said. "It's always great to get in the end zone, but it's especially great to do it against the best players in the world with mil-ions of people watching." The AFC nearly broke the Pro Bowl record of 51 points set by the NFC in 2000. But Buffalo's Eric Moulds was ruled out of bounds in the end zone with 1:24 left after a 36-yard pass from Indianapolis' Peyton Manning. A sellout crowd at Aloha Stadium enjoyed another blowout victory for the AFC, which has dominated the matchup in recent years. Each of the AFC's players earned $30,000 for the win, with the NFC's stars receiving $15,000 apiece. Neither team took the annual post-Super Bowl event too seriously, however. Buffalo guard

'E' for effort

Hawkeyes hang with Indiana but struggle with rotation

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Steve Alford got "maximum effort" from the Iowa Hawkeyes on Feb. 1, and at times he got a little too much effort. Such as when walk-on Kurt Spurgeon stepped to the charity stripe with 15 seconds remaining in overtime and sailed his first free-throw attempt past the rim, clanking it off the back iron. The junior hit his second try to pull Iowa within one point of Purdue, but a pair of free throws by the Boilermakers' Kenneth Lowe with 13 seconds left in the extra period gave the visiting team with an 80-77 victory. Spurgeon had played sparingly this season as the eighth man in Alford's seven-man rotation, but both he and guard Josh Kimm were forced into bigger roles as the Hawkeyes struggled in their first game without center Jared Reiner, who is out two to three weeks with a knee injury. "They gave us everything they possibly had," Alford said of the eight Iowa players that saw action. "I don't think it was a lack of effort on our kids' part." No, effort wasn't a problem for the Hawkeyes (11-6, 3-3) as they took the Big Ten leading Boilermakers (14-4, 6-1) into an extra period of play, but staying out of foul trouble was. Lacking Reiner's presence, Iowa needed Glen Worley, Greg Brunner, and Sean Sonderleiter to avoid the ire of the officials, but both Worley and Brunner fouled out late in the game. Worley, who exited his third-consecutive game with five fouls, and Brunner kept Sonderleiter from getting much rest on

Illinois avenges years of losses at Carver

BY MICHELLE YONG
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The Illinois women's basketball team hadn't won in Iowa since Feb. 4, 1983 — until Sunday. The Hawkeyes trailed Illinois 71-70 with 3:30 remaining in the game when the Illini went on an 11-2 run to win, 82-72, and hand Iowa its first home loss of the season. Illinois shot 50 percent from the field, while Iowa only made 36.4 percent. The Hawkeyes started the game slowly and trailed by as many as 11 points with a little over five minutes remaining in the half before they put on a run of their own and pulled within three at halftime, 34-31. With the momentum from the first half carrying over to the second, Iowa grabbed a three-point lead, before the final battle began. The Hawkeyes and Fighting Illini exchanged baskets until Illinois finally pulled away. "If we would have shot a little bit better, it could have been a different story for us," Iowa coach Lisa Bluder said. "It's a tough team to shoot over; they have very long arms and are very athletic." Illinois guard Angelina Williams scored a career-high 24 points, going 10-16 from the field. Center Cindy Dallas followed closely behind, scoring 19 points, collecting 14 rebounds, and making all seven of her free throw attempts. Free throws by Dallas and other Illini players down the stretch killed the Hawkeyes. Dallas and teammate Tiffanie Guthrie converted on nine of 10 free throws for the Illini with less than a minute and a half remaining in the game. "They made a lot of their free throws," Iowa forward Jennie

Gophers buried, but in no easy win

BY KELLY BEATON
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The Gophers have been exterminated. The No. 5-ranked Hawkeye men's gymnastics team defeated Minnesota on Feb. 1 in the Field House, yet it was anything but a cakewalk. Despite an afternoon that featured some uncharacteristic spills by the likes of co-captains Cameron Schick and Eric Block, the Hawkeyes were able to claw out a 210.475-206.900 victory over their neighboring-state nemesis. The scariest moment for the Hawkeyes from a scoring and an emotional standpoint occurred when Block landed awkwardly during the conclusion of his vault routine. "I landed short and rolled my ankle," he said. "It's a bad sprain." He added that he hopes to return within a couple of weeks. Aside from their notable missteps, the captains did help guide their squad to an important victory over No. 8 Minnesota with impressive work on other routines. Block took third in the pommel horse with a score of 8.850, while Schick garnered a second-place finish. Overall, coach Tom Dunn said, the meet demonstrated that the Hawkeyes still need to smooth a few rough edges before the NCAA championships in April. Dunn expressed a slight disappointment that the team didn't show overwhelming improvement over their Jan. 18 defeat of Nebraska. "Some guys were a little rough, maybe a little nervous after taking a week off," he said. "We missed some key routines that really hurt our score, but we are trying some hard stuff, and it's still early."

That the Gophers weren't at full strength added to Dunn's concern about the narrow victory. Two key Minnesota gymnasts, junior Eric Steele and sophomore Bill Callahan, were recently declared academically ineligible. Steele was the Big Ten Freshman of the Year in 2000-01, while Callahan was a strong all-around performer as well for the Gophers. "They'd be a better team today if they had those two guys," Dunn said. Linas Gaveika and Matt Metzger gave Dunn reason to smile with strong performances. Gaveika earned first-place finishes in both the pommel horse, where he tallied a 9.325, and the horizontal bar with a

Women split against tough opponents

BY DREW MANROE
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa women's swimming team endured intense competition from Missouri and Truman State over the weekend and emerged with one loss and one victory.

The Hawkeyes faced off against the Tigers on Jan. 31 for what they thought would be a close meet. But despite some excellent swimming, Iowa fell to Missouri, 175-125.

Hawkeyes' coach Garland O'Keeffe said a lack of depth played a factor in the Hawkeyes' troubles.

"Missouri is deeper than we are," she said. "We have to rely on the same four or five people, and they can rely on a number of different individuals. It's tough to win meets without second-, third-, and fourth-place finishes. But I was really proud of how we swam."

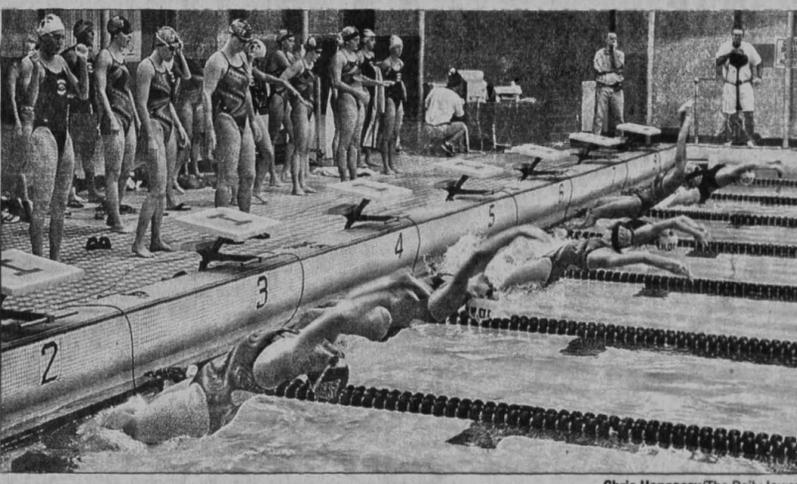

Senior Michele Schermbach agreed that the Hawkeyes turned in a strong performance, despite the final score.

"It wasn't that we swam poorly," she said. "We swam well and lost."

On Feb. 1, Iowa rebounded with a victory, scraping out a 138-136 win over Truman State.

The meet carried extra significance for both teams, because the Bulldogs' head coach, Colleen Murphy, was a Hawkeye assistant coach during the 2001-02 season.

"We knew it would be a tough

The Iowa women's swimming team split over the weekend against a pair of tough opponents.

meet," O'Keeffe said. "And with Colleen as head coach, it was a highly charged, emotional meet. We wanted to do some different things with our lineup and still pull off a victory — and we did."

Sophomore Jennifer Skolaski was victorious in the 200 free and 400 IM, and freshman Kelly Werner pulled off wins in the 100 and 200 back.

Werner, who also won the 200 breast against Missouri, had a breakthrough weekend, O'Keeffe said.

"I was really encouraged by her performance," she said.

"She's really stepping up to be a big leader in the freshman class." "I don't think about [being a leader]," Werner said. "I just go out and swim. I had more confidence going into those meets."

The Truman State meet was the last home competition in the college careers of seniors Erin Strub and Schermbach.

Schermbach said the meet was emotional for her personally but also an important one for the team.

"It's sad when it all comes to an end — it's a part of me, and it's hard to let go," she said. "We wished we would have won more decisively [over the Bulldogs], but we really got behind each other and came together as a team. That's great for team unity, and we need that going into Big Tens."

The Hawkeyes have a two-week rest period before the Big Ten championships — the World Series of Big Ten college swimming — on Feb. 19-22.

"We'll be doing real light training," O'Keeffe said. "But it's time to let them rest."

Hawkeye men dominate weekend foes

BY DREW MANROE
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa men's swimming team succeeded in evening its record after dominant victories over Missouri and Truman State on Jan. 31-Feb. 1.

The Hawkeyes trounced the Tigers, 183-117, on Jan. 31, riding the momentum of a fast start in which Iowa won the first nine events.

Freshman Konrad Kazmierczak added to an already excellent season with two first-place finishes in the 50 and 100 free, against a Missouri team he expected to be more competitive.

"We expected more resistance from them, but they didn't show anything special," he said. "We've been working hard, and we were prepared for the meet."

"Missouri is a little bit of a rival," Iowa coach John Davey said. "Some of our guys know people on their team, and they wanted to beat them pretty bad. They took care of business."

Senior Chris Brunson, who also shone with a first-place finish in the 100 breast and a second-place showing in the 200 breast, said the strong start set the tone for the meet.

"That was huge for us — it is any time you get out to a big lead," he said. "And there was a lot of motivation to get our record up and get more respect. We're a better team than our record shows."

A triumphant 169-95 victory over Truman State on Feb. 1 brought the Hawkeyes' record to an even 3-3.

Iowa — led by junior Andrei Prada and Kazmierczak, who had two wins apiece — raced to wins in 14 of the 15 events, only falling short in the 100 fly.

The Hawkeyes' seniors — swimmers Brunson and Chris George, and diver Roberto Gutierrez — also put on a show in what would be the last home competition of their college careers.

On Senior Day, Brunson

nabbed a first-place finish in the 200 breast, George was victorious in the 50 free, and Gutierrez set a Field House pool platform diving record with a score of 498.50.

"Those three guys have been great leaders," Davey said. "That's how we hope to see our guys go out."

"It was a moment of sadness, but it was also nice to get that recognition [on Senior Day]," Brunson added. "I've been proud to represent the University of Iowa."

The Hawkeyes next compete at Northwestern on Feb. 7-8.

No first-place finishes at Panther Classic

The men's track team was unable to gain a win in a single event Feb. 1 at the Panther Classic, but the Hawkeyes were still able to put up some good finishes.

Highlighting the meet at the UNI Dome in Cedar Falls for Iowa was Ken Kemeny, who took second in the shot put with a toss of 58 feet, 3 inches. Kemeny was bested by Karl Erickson of Minnesota, who threw 59 feet, 3 inches.

"Ken is a standout," said assistant coach Scott Cappos. "Karl beat Ken on his last throw."

Kemeny has already qualified for the NCAA championships in March.

Other notables include Zac Digney taking third place with a time of 21.94 seconds in 200 meters.

Hawkeyes take to the road in search of lost confidence

Lillis said. "They showed a lot more maturity than we did." Dallas said her team knew the significance of the game.

"Road wins are extremely important," she said. "We knew coming in here we had to get a win; we said, 'We aren't going to lose this game.'"

Although the Hawkeyes lost the game, for the first time all season four players scored in double digits. Lillis led the way with 22 points and eight rebounds, Tracy Schrupp and April Calhoun each added 10 points for the Hawkeyes.

Iowa guard Kristi Faulkner, who played for Illinois during her freshman year, had an on-and-off night. She made only 6-20 shot attempts and scored 13 points. Faulkner said she was pushing herself too hard and wasn't playing her kind of basketball.

"They played really good defense," she said. "Personally, I think I was forcing things and just didn't let it come."

The Hawkeyes now go on the road for three games beginning Thursday at Michigan; they don't return home until Feb. 16. On the road this season, Iowa is 1-7.

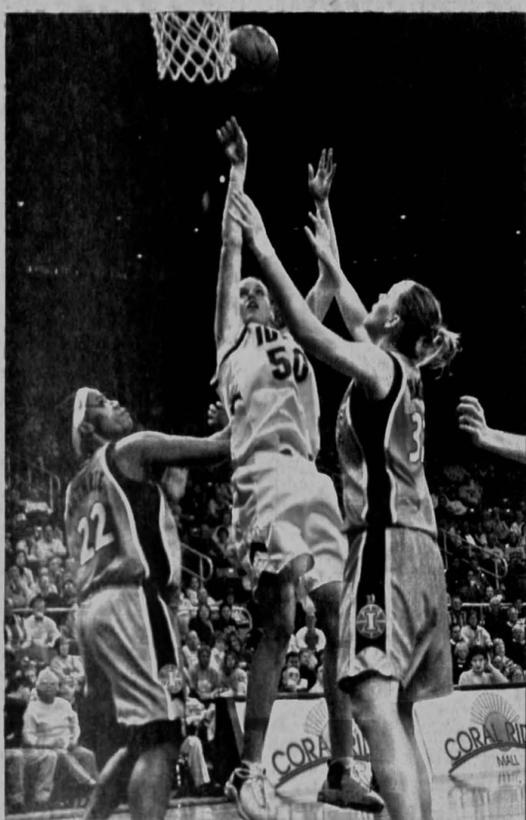

If the Hawkeyes want to stay in the running for a top spot in the Big Ten Tournament, Bluder said, they know how important it is to change those statistics.

"Now, we are going to have to go on the road and change our mentality," she said. "It depends on us. If we can turn it around and get our confidence back up to go on the road, then we have potential. But we have to change the way we think we play on the road."

Philly's Akers sets new record with kick

Ruben Brown took a camera onto the field during pregame warmups, snapping pictures of himself joking around with players on both teams.

Williams got the AFC off to a fast start. After Miami teammate Jason Taylor intercepted Jeff Garcia's pass near midfield on the opening possession, Williams broke an 18-yard run on the AFC's first offensive play before scoring easily three plays later.

In the second quarter, Williams even forced a fumble while playing on the kickoff coverage team. Williams also scored with 47 seconds left in the first half to give a 28-6 lead to the AFC — though he ran the wrong direction on the play before simply bowling over Washington's Champ Bailey.

Garcia, making his first Pro Bowl start, threw three interceptions in the first 17 minutes. Donovan McNabb wasn't much better for the NFC, and New England's Ty Law returned one of Buccaneers QB Brad Johnson's passes for a touchdown in the fourth quarter.

The Super Bowl champions were well-represented, with six Buccaneers in the lineup. Linebacker Shelton Quarles was a last-second addition; he already was in Hawaii for a vacation when Atlanta's Keith Brooking dropped out.

Philadelphia's David Akers set a Pro Bowl record by kicking a 53-yard field goal against a strong crosswind in the second quarter. Morten Andersen held the previous record with a 51-yarder that was matched by Jason Hanson in 2000.

There was even a shoving match, something rarely seen in the friendly exhibition. San Francisco center Jeremy Newberry got a personal foul for shoving New England's Richard Seymour in the face during the final minute of the first half, hurting the NFC's hopes for a late score.

Keady: Boilermakers secure 'gutsiest' win ever at Carver

the bench as the junior played a career-high 42 minutes. Sonderleiter finished the game with 10 points and eight rebounds, but he shot just 4-15 from the floor with many of his misses coming late in the game.

Alford had hoped employing a zone defense for the entire game — something he said he had never done in 11 years of coaching — would help prevent his big men from running afoul, but that was not the case.

"We're going to have to come up with a new defense to keep some of these guys out of foul trouble," he said.

Purdue appeared to struggle with Iowa's new defense look early as the Hawkeyes jumped to a 12-3 lead at the game's onset, but both Worley and Brunner picked up their third fouls early and combined to play just 18 minutes in the opening period.

Their absence allowed Purdue to push to a 33-32 lead with a 13-2 run just prior to halftime.

The Boilermakers used another streak midway through the second half in which they outscored Iowa 12-0 after the Hawkeyes went almost four minutes without a basket.

"That was probably the gutsiest win we've had here, and we've had a few," said legendary longtime Purdue coach Gene Keady.

"We came back four times from double digits, and any time you do that, usually your energy is gone. But we had more depth than them."

Purdue's victory marks the third-consecutive Big Ten setback for Iowa as well as the third-straight time the Hawkeyes have lost a game they led at intermission. That made Iowa's most recent loss even harder to grasp.

"Purdue's a great team, and they're doing a good job of getting wins," said guard Chauncey Leslie. "But we should've had this win, and we let them come and take it away from us."

Leslie was 4-15 from the field with his final miss coming on an open look for 3 at the buzzer that would have tied the game and forced a second overtime.

"I thought it was in," guard Jeff Horner said. "I was looking at it going, 'That's going in. That's going in.' Things just didn't work out."

Horner had a team-high 17 points and eight rebounds in 43 minutes of play, including a buzzer-beating 3 at halftime that gave Iowa a 41-36 advantage.

The Hawkeyes now face the daunting task of playing three-consecutive conference road games, the first of which will come Wednesday evening when Iowa travels to Penn State.

score of 9.150. Metzger took first in still rings and parallel bars with scores of 8.950 and 9.050 respectively.

The Gophers were led, as usual, by 2002 Big Ten Freshman of the Year Guillermo Alvarez and four-time NCAA Champion Clay Strother. Alvarez took first in the all-around with a score of 53.600 and also earned first-place honors in the vault with a score of 9.475. Strother placed first in the floor exercise with a score of 9.550.

Despite solid performances by their tandem of Alvarez and Strother, the Gophers contingent left Iowa City with a bad taste in their mouths. Gophers head assistant Kyle Zak said the Minnesota coaching staff was not pleased with the team's performance.

"I thought we were shaky in some areas, and obviously, we have a lot of improvement to do," he said frustrated.

On Thursday, four Hawkeyes will head to Las Vegas to compete in the United States Association of Gymnastics Winter Nationals. Seniors Schick and Ryan Meeks, as well as freshmen Michael Reavis and Michael McNamara will participate in hopes of making the U.S. National Team. Schick, Reavis, and McNamara will participate in the all-around competition, while Meeks will compete as a pommel-horse specialist.

The Hawkeyes will begin competing at 1 p.m. Friday.

"It's an opportunity to get experience and compete at the national level," Dunn said. "If we perform well, we could possibly have someone make the national team."

Cyclones tromp past Hawkeye women

The Iowa women's gymnastics team is 0-3 on the season after a 196.425-195.275 loss to intrastate rival Iowa State on Jan. 31 at the Hilton Coliseum.

Coach Mike Lorenzen was pleased with his team's performance, however, and said the Hawkeyes took some steps in the right direction.

"I'd be lying if I didn't say we'd like to beat Iowa State sometime," he said. "We didn't execute quite as well as we could have, but that's just a question of time."

The Hawkeyes kept close with the Cyclones on three of the events but struggled some on the beam.

"I'd say we had three terrific events," Lorenzen said. "Among the best three since I've been here."

Although all-American Alexis Maday only competed on the uneven bars and the balance beam, she either tied or set personal bests in both events, tying for first place on the bars with a 9.950 and taking sole possession of first on the balance beam with a 9.900.

Iowa sophomore Annie Rue finished first place in the all-around with a 39.325, with teammates Stephanie Gran and Michelle Conway following close behind with their third and fourth place all-around finishes.

Freshman Tiffany Kwan and Kortny Williamson also made an impact with strong performances. Williamson finished in second place on the vault with a 9.825 — .025 points short of first place — and Kwan finished in the top 10 in three separate events.

"Tiffany Kwan had a phenomenal meet," Lorenzen said.

Gran was Iowa's top performer on the floor exercise with a score of 9.900 for a third-place finish.

The Hawkeyes next competition will be on Saturday, when they host Michigan State at Carver-Hawkeyes Arena.

Women defeated by Vanderbilt, Tulsa

The Iowa women's tennis team fell to No. 8 Vanderbilt and No. 56 Tulsa on Jan. 31 and Feb. 1. The 58th-ranked Hawkeyes were not able to contain either team, but they still put in some positive individual performances.

Freshman Gloria Okino, the only Iowa player to go undefeated at the Hawkeye Invitational a week ago, was able to grab two wins against Tulsa, one at the No. 4 singles spot and the other at the No. 2 doubles spot with teammate Steffi Hoch. Okino defeated Tulsa's Tiffany Smith in straight sets (6-3, 7-6). Okino and Hoch fought a hard battle against Tulsa's Mariana Barrios and Daniela Muscolino, finally pulling out a 9-7 victory.

"Every year, you need a player to rise out of the pack," coach Paul Wardlaw said. "Gloria's been that for us this year. It's great to see her playing really well in both singles and doubles."

The only other Hawkeye to snatch a victory from Tulsa was sophomore Jennifer Hodgman. She held on for a close victory over Timberly Greenly (6-3, 4-6, [10-6]).

"The Tulsa match was one that could have gone either way," Wardlaw said. "It was close because of the three set matches that both Steffi [Hoch] and Deni [Alexandrova] played."

The Hawkeyes were only able to come away with one win via default against a tough Vanderbilt team, which dominated the entire match, not allowing one match to get to a third set.

"I felt we competed well against Vanderbilt," Wardlaw said. "We put in a good effort, but they're just a better team. There's a reason that they're ranked No. 8 in the country."

The Hawkeyes will return to action Saturday, when they travel to Atlanta to take on Georgia Tech and Texas A&M.

Depleted 'Wolves oust Sixers

Associated Press
MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin Garnett had 30 points and 17 rebounds as the short-handed Minnesota Timberwolves won their eighth-straight home game, beating the Philadelphia 76ers on Sunday, 99-91.

Marc Jackson had 14 points, and Gary Trent made all six shots he took for 12 points to offset the absence of Joe Smith, who sprained his ankle Jan. 31; he will miss at least three weeks. The Wolves dressed only 10 players, with Rod Strickland on the bench because of a strained groin.

"They made good decisions," Sixers coach Larry Brown said. "They outrebounded us. They had more assists. They shot 55 percent. That usually leads to good outcomes."

Allen Iverson had 21 points on 7-23 shooting for the 76ers, whose four-game road winning streak ended.

"We couldn't get stops when we needed them down the stretch," Iverson said. "K.G. got open, and he knocked down all the open shots they needed."

Derrick Coleman, who had 15 points and 11 rebounds, scored four-straight points to pull Philadelphia to 95-91 with 1:24 left, but Garnett made a long jumper on the other end to give Minnesota some breathing room.

Houston 105, Sacramento 89

HOUSTON — Eddie Griffin scored 22 points, and Steve Francis and Cuttino Mobley each scored 21 as the Rockets got out to a big lead early and held off the Kings.

Yao Ming added 18 points and 10 rebounds for the Rockets. Peja Stojakovic led the Kings with 31 points.

Houston took an early 13-2 lead as the Kings missed eight of their first nine shots from the field.

Yao, Griffin, and Francis sparked a 12-3 run late in the period as the Rockets expanded their lead to 29-9 with 2:47 left in the quarter. Houston had a 32-12 lead at the end of the period as Griffin had 11 and Yao 8.

Houston shot 65 percent (15-of-23) in the first; Sacramento hit only 22 percent (5-23) in the quarter and just 29 percent (12-42) for the half.

Toronto 100, Los Angeles 86

TORONTO — Voshon Lenard scored 23 of his season-high 30 points in the second half to lead the Raptors to a victory over the Clippers.

Vince Carter added 14 points in 28 minutes for the Raptors, winners of three of four since the All-Star forward returned after missing 23 games with a strained right knee.

Lenard scored 11-straight points to give Toronto a 66-62 lead late in the third quarter. He opened the fourth with a short jumper, and later added a jumper and a 3-pointer to extend Toronto's lead to 10 points with 8:08 left.

Carter added a jumper and Lenard hit a 3-pointer and two free throws to give Toronto a 95-77 lead with 4:25 remaining.

Jerome Williams added 16 points and nine rebounds for the Raptors. Elton Brand finished with 17 points and 19 rebounds for the Clippers.

Notes: The Clippers placed forward Cherokee Parks on the injured list with back spasms, and activated rookie forward Chris Wilcox. ... Just two days after Morris Peterson got into a fight with Indiana's Al Harrington, Brand and Carter wrestled each other on the floor while trying to grab a loose ball in the third quarter. No fouls were called, and Brand won the ensuing jump ball. ... Brand outrebounded Toronto 8-7 in the first quarter. ... Lenard also had six rebounds.

Atlanta 97, Orlando 89

ATLANTA — Shareef Abdur-Rahim scored 23 points, and Dion Glover added 22 as the Hawks overcame a 38-point performance by Tracy McGrady to beat the Magic.

"The game is an emotional game," he said. "Even if I'm not shooting it, I'm fired up inside."

McGrady broke the team record he set earlier this season with his eighth-straight game of at least 30 points, but the NBA's leading scorer missed his last three shots after his 3-pointer cut Atlanta's lead to 82-76 with 4:44 remaining.

"I didn't have that much left in the tank at the end," McGrady said. "If we had had someone rolling, I would have come out of the game."

Atlanta center Theo Ratliff tied a career high with nine blocked shots, the last of which came with 6:05 remaining and led to Abdur-Rahim's hard dunk over Andrew DeClercq that gave the Hawks an 80-73 lead.

Orlando, which never led, tied it at 62 on Shawn Kemp's 20-footer with 2:51 left in the third quarter, but Nazr Mohammed's 8-footer put the Hawks up 73-64 early in the fourth.

Portland 114, Cleveland 95

CLEVELAND — Rasheed Wallace scored 14 of his 29 points in the first 10 minutes to lead the Trail Blazers to a victory over the Cavaliers.

Wallace, in his second game back after a seven-game suspension for confronting a referee, shot 10-13 from the field in 32 minutes as Portland won for the seventh time in eight games.

"It's good to see him back in the flow," said Portland guard Derek Anderson, who scored 13 points. "He doesn't have to force his way back. We know we are coming to him. He's that good."

Wallace's first points came on a 3-pointer, and then the 6-11 forward-center pounded his way to the basket in a dominating first 10 minutes. Zydrunas Ilgauskas scored 20 points to lead Cleveland.

Ann Heisenfelt/Associated Press
Philadelphia guard Allen Iverson, center, gets off a pass as he is pressured by Minnesota forward Kevin Garnett.

NHL

New Jersey Devils goalie Martin Brodeur, right, makes a save against Dallas Stars Bill Guerin.

West claims All-Star title

BY ALAN ROBINSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SUNRISE, Fla. — In a trying, troubling season, the NHL almost got the All-Star game wrong, too. Even if Dany Heatley didn't.

Heatley, a not-so-well known star from a last-place team playing in his first All-Star game, joined hockey greats such as Wayne Gretzky and Mario Lemieux by scoring a record-tying four goals Sunday, though he couldn't prevent the Western Conference from beating the East in the first All-Star shootout in NHL history.

Just like baseball's All-Star tie fiasco of last summer, there was considerable confusion at the finish. At least the NHL had a winner — a big relief for a league embarrassed twice this season by teams going bankrupt.

After a 5-all regulation tie set up the fourth overtime All-Star game, the West won, 6-5, when Markus Naslund, Bill Guerin, and Paul Kariya scored in the shootout against goalie Patrick Lalime. Only Heatley — of course — scored for the East against goalie Marty Turco.

Though Heatley put the puck in the net five times, the NHL announced several minutes after the game he would be credited only with four goals — the fifth player to do so.

Most of the fans left thinking the score was 8-6, as the West outscored the East 3-1 in the shootout; that was changed by the NHL's hockey operations department after most departed.

No, Bud Selig wasn't running the show, either, even if it might have seemed like it amid the confusion.

"You heard the fans, they didn't want to go home without somebody winning this game," Turco said. "They wanted the East to win, but they were definitely excited and that got me pumped."

Even Gretzky got excited. The Great One went to the East's locker room before the third period and urged Heatley to go for the record.

"He told me to get five, six, or seven," Heatley said. "It was unbelievable for him to come down. Too bad I couldn't get the fifth one."

Players on both sides said that, unlike the cruise control level of most All-Star games, both teams really wanted to win.

"All of a sudden, with 12 to 15 minutes to go, everybody was getting in front of everything, there was a little more stick work and the competitive juices got flowing," the West's Al MacInnis said.

Olli Jokinen said, "It was a lot faster and we even saw a few hits. It's a game for the fans, and I think this was the best in many years."

Heatley, a 22-year-old overshadowed at times on his own Atlanta Thrashers team by Ilya Kovalchuk, matched Gretzky (1983), Lemieux (1990), Vincent Damphousse (1991), and Mike Gartner (1993) as the only players in the All-Star game's 53-year history with four goals.

He's also the youngest at 22 years and 13 days, or one day younger than Gretzky was in '83. "I was pretty relaxed," Heatley said. "After I got the first one [against Patrick Roy], I was pretty relaxed, and the chances kept coming, and I put a few in."

By taking away Heatley's shootout goal, the NHL also prevented him from matching Lemieux's 1988 record of six points in a game.

After getting his fourth goal with six minutes still remaining in the second period, Heatley flashed a typical hockey player's missing-tooth grin, then spent the rest of the fast-moving and relatively low-scoring game trying to get his record fifth goal.

His linemates, who usually included Jokinen of Florida and Washington's Jaromir Jagr, tried to get it for him too, repeatedly giving him the puck.

He didn't get that fifth goal in regulation, but Heatley did set up Jokinen's first career All-Star goal midway through the third period. Jokinen, a late addition to the game when Saku Koivu pulled out with an injury, also had a memorable debut with a goal and three assists.

Heatley's big game came only one year after he played in the Young Stars game, held the night before the All-Star game.

Weir remains steady for win at Bob Hope Classic

BY KEN PETERS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LA QUINTA, Calif. — Mike Weir, who stayed steady down the stretch while Jay Haas and Tim Herron shot themselves into trouble, won the Bob Hope Classic on Sunday.

Weir shot a closing 5-under par 67 to finish at 30-under 330 and two strokes in front of Haas, who was tied for the lead until he hit into the water in front of the 18th green.

It was the second year in a row Haas, the 1988 Hope champion, held the lead only to lose it late in the final round, this time despite shooting a 69.

Herron, four shots ahead of Weir and Haas heading into the final round of the five-day tournament, struggled to a 75 that included a quadruple bogey on No. 16.

He finished tied for third at 25 under with Chris DiMarco, who shot 70.

The win by Weir, a native of Sarnia, Ontario, marks the sixth-straight tour event won by a foreigner, dating back to the final two tournaments of last year.

PGA officials believe foreign players have never won six tour tournaments in a row, and the last time foreigners took the first four events of the year was in 1927 when Tommy Armour and Bobby Cruickshank of Scotland each won twice to begin the season.

Haas' shot was short as he went for the green over the water on the 543-yard, par-5 No. 18. Then Weir, who had hit his second shot into the fairway, knocked his third shot onto the right fringe of the green and drilled a 35-foot birdie putt into the center of the cup.

Haas took a bogey because of the penalty stroke when he hit into the water.

Weir, who trailed Haas by three shots at the turn, caught him by making a short birdie putt on No. 17 to go 29 under while Haas took a par on the hole.

Playing conditions were ideal for the first four days of the 90-hole tournament, but gusting winds early in the day made club selection difficult for much of the final round.

David Gossett matched par to finish fifth at 24 under, and defending champion Phil Mickelson, who came on strong after an opening 70, had a 67 to finish in a tie with Pat Perez for sixth at 23 under. Perez shot 71.

Herron's troubles on the 364-yard, par-4 No. 16 ran the gamut of hazards — sand, rocks, and water — as he took eight shots to get down.

He hit his tee shot into the bunker, wedged his next shot under a large rock, took a penalty, then hit over the green and into the water. After another penalty, he pitched to within 15 feet of the hole, but his putt from there curled just over the rim of the cup, and he finally puttied out.

at 26 under with eight holes to go, but bogeyed No. 13 to start a slide that wound up in a 74 that dropped him into a tie for 16th.

Divots: The winners of the year's first four tournaments have an aggregate score of 100 under par. The 48-year-old Jacobsen, who has played in the event 25 times, shot a closing 83 to finish far back in the pack at 10 under. ... Singer Alice Cooper, one of the celebrities in the program the first four days of the tournament, said he would like to see the pros react more with the fans, like Fuzzy Zoeller, Chi Chi Rodriguez, and Lee Trevino did, saying the tour could use some more "characters."

James sits out on sidelines for now

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — LeBron James sat in the bleachers Feb. 1, watching as his high school's freshmen basketball team warmed up for a game.

For now, it's as close as the 18-year-old superstar can get to the court.

Akron St. Vincent-St. Mary coach Dru Joyce told ESPN's Jay Bilas that LeBron James on Jan. 31 returned the two jerseys to the Next Urban Gear and Music store in Shaker Heights, Ohio, before he was ruled ineligible.

Joyce also said that James faxed a letter to the Ohio High School Athletic Association informing the group that James had returned the merchandise.

An employee at the store said "no comment" when asked to confirm if James had returned the jerseys.

James, widely acknowledged as the nation's top prep player, spent his first day on the sideline after being ruled ineligible by state officials for accepting two vintage jerseys worth $845.

The Ohio High School Athletics Association ruled Jan. 31 that James violated a state bylaw on amateurism by accepting the trendy, "throwback" jerseys from a clothing store on Jan. 25.

The decision came four days after James was cleared following a two-week investigation for accepting a $50,000-plus sport utility vehicle as an 18th birthday gift from his mother.

Everyone to blame for LeBron mess

BY MARK HEISLER
LOS ANGELES TIMES

If you want to know who's to blame in the LeBron James mess, as an ESPN "SportsCenter" anchor bleated on Feb. 1, the short answer is: "Who isn't?"

Let's start with ESPN, which is hardly a detached innocent in this story, after it jumped into the hype with both feet, adding telecasts of James' games as fast as it could count the bumper ratings and secure the rights, pooh-poohing the debate about propriety.

The problem is, ESPN was just doing what it does, as was everyone else — networks, cable companies, agents, the media, relatives, and friends. This means no one will feel responsible, nothing will be done to make sure this can never happen again, and some day, it'll happen again, but worse.

This wasn't a tragedy, because in the end nothing will have been hurt except some feelings. James will still go No. 1 in this spring's NBA draft, the money tap will open legally, and all of this will be a messy moment in time.

What this was was a farce. If you can tell me how the world got so crazy that two "retro" uniform tops could be valued at $845 in the first place, I'll tell you how we can turn this thing back around.

In the meantime, all the principals in this story are going to be bashed for the sins of all of us. Here they are, in what I would argue was reverse order of actual responsibility.

LeBron James — He's poor, he's 18, the world spreads itself out before him like a banquet table and starts passing him the delicacies, and he's supposed to know better?

Gloria James — As outrageous as she was, she's just a mom, if a particularly exuberant one who yells, "What've you got for me, playa?" to Nike's Phil Knight at Magic Johnson's charity game last summer. She delivered LeBron when she was 17, never had anything, and, it's abundantly clear, is still a child herself.

Coach Dru Joyce and the St. Vincent-St. Mary's High administration — They didn't do James any favors by scheduling games all over the country.

The entourage — This is a big favorite. Who can resist trashing a bunch of "yes" men, teenaged and older, with dollar signs in their eyes?

The media — It was a show people wanted to see, which is what the networks are in business to provide. It was a legitimate, if revolting story, so the media couldn't duck it, which, of course, just made it bigger and more revolting.

The bird-dog industry — These are your basic AAU coaches, tournament organizers, and newsletter publishers.

The sneaker companies — Now here are some guys who, as Desi said, got some 'splainin' to do. Not that they ever do.

You'd think they could operate their billion-dollar businesses without running around bribing every prep star and his high school with their equipment. Not that you should hold your breath waiting for reforms.

The companies have been exposed in scandal after scandal, but if they ever slowed down, it wasn't because of shame but the economic downturn.

As this story shows, they're still around and more irresponsible than ever. Had James said he would sign a $20-million deal last summer, they would have fought one another to take him up on it. Had he demanded that Knight and Adidas' Sonny Vaccaro fight a duel to see who got him, they'd have asked, "To the death?"

Thankfully, James is such a singular talent, we're not likely to see anything like this soon. With that in mind, Westchester (Calif.) High boys' basketball Coach Ed Azzam told Ben Bolch of the LA Times, "I don't know if it sends up a red flag."

More like a white one. This story wasn't as much a revelation to Azzam and his nationally ranked team as it was to people who think of high-school ball as what it was, circa 1965 or 1975.

Like most powerhouses, Westchester goes out-of-state, too. The Comets were in Las Vegas and Houston in December, and they'll be in Trenton, N.J., next week for the Prime-Time Shootout, where James' reputation exploded a year ago.

The bad news is, the sports world has run off the tracks.

The really bad news is, it's not coming back, either.

EDITOR WANTED

An aggressive, talented individual is sought as editor of The Daily Iowan, Iowa City's largest newspaper, with an editorial staff of more than 60 young professionals, an editorial budget exceeding $300,000 and circulation of 20,500. The board of Student Publications Incorporated and the publisher of The Daily Iowan will soon interview candidates for the position of editor for the term beginning June 1, 2003 and ending May 31, 2004.

The editor of The Daily Iowan must have strong journalistic abilities, skills in management and a clear sense of editorial responsibility. The board will weigh heavily scholarship, previous newswriting and editing experience (including working at The Daily Iowan or another daily newspaper), and proven ability to lead, organize and inspire a staff.

Applicants must be enrolled in a UI undergraduate or graduate degree program. Candidates must submit completed applications and supporting materials by noon, Friday, February 28, 2003.
