At the suggestion of Councilor Connie Champion, a majority of councilors expressed interest during their work session in possibly raising the age requirement for bars in an effort to expedite the fight against underage drinking. Councilors tabled proposed zoning regula-tions that would have restricted new bars from opening within a certain proximity (possibly 300 to 1,000 feet) of other establishments serving liquor. The city's investigation into the proposal revealed complexities that frustrated some councilors.

"Really, we would be putting in a long-term protection of the proliferation of the bars [with the zoning]," said Councilor Ross Wilburn. "[A 21-ordinance] may have a more immediate effect. The city's zoning regulation currently does not distinguish between bars and restaurants, meaning that definitions would have to be created to implement the zoning. Other issues that turned councilors away zoning inclus whether the zoning would create different classes of bars depending on occupancy load, if the zoning would apply to all commercial zones as well as downtown zones, and if liquor stores would also be regulated.

"I think we are trying to solve the problem the wrong way,' Champion said. "We are regulating to death, and I used to support [the zoning regulation], but the more I think about it, I'm just going crazy."

Councilors will discuss the 21ordinance at future work sessions.

Just prior to Monday's meeting, Councilor Dee Vanderhoef said she had received calls from Iowa City residents favoring the idea, which has been tossed around for years and is now being lobbied for by the Stepping Up Project, a community group working to combat and binge drinking "That's something we waited a long time to hear," said Jim Clayton, one of Stepping Up's coleaders. "[Alcohol] is a big business. It's industrial strength in Iowa City, and it's riding on the backs of underage students.

The former Illinois bar owner and current downtown businessman said a 21-only ordinance would force some bars out of town, stimulating

"It would change life as we know it downtown for the better," said Clayton, who owns the Soap Opera, 119 E. College St.

The city had 15 liquor licenses downtown when he opened the Soap Opera in 1981, Clayton said, adding that that number has now skyrocketed to approximately 40 in the three-block by three-block business district. The 21-only measure has

Boyd backs committee on athletics

BY LAURA JENSEN

THE DAILY IOWAN

UI interim President Sandy Boyd instructed athletics officials Monday to have a plan ready by the end of the semester to implement several new policies in response to Hawkeye basketball player Pierre Pierce's sexual-assault case.

Boyd endorsed recommendations made last week by a committee that said the university made errors handling the criminal case against Pierce. In particular, he "strongly" agreed that the university should find a new administrator to oversee athletics as well as bring back a committee that deals with athletes in legal trouble.

Those recommendations came from the Board in Control of Athletics last week in a report that said "Pierce's status as an athlete appears to have dominated the concerns" of administrators who were involved in settling the case. It also accused officials of making "inappropriate statements" during criminal proceedings.

Boyd did not address any errors made by school officials in a two-page letter to board Chairman Nicholas Colangelo and Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby, opting instead to focus on the recommendations to ensure cases are handled better in the future.

While praising the integrity of university General Counsel Mark Schantz, Boyd supported the recommendation that an official be appointed to replace Schantz as the liaison to the Athletics Department

BY JEFFREY PATCH THE DAILY IOWAN

About a dozen convicted rapists and pedophiles who represent some of the state's "most persistent" sexual offenders could be eligible for release soon if the Iowa Attorney General's Office does not successfully appeal a recent court ruling.

The sex offenders, nine of whom are housed at the Sexual Predator Unit in the Iowa Medical & Classification Center at Oakdale, are being held indefinitely in a rehabilitation program even though their latest crimes were not sex-related.

Critics say the state's 4-yearold state civil-commitment law sentences for crimes that aren't sex-related. The Iowa Supreme Court recently agreed in the case of Jessie Gonzales, ruling on Jan. 23 that the former child molester should be released from civil commitment because the state failed to show he is still a danger to society. State officials have until Thursday to ask the court for another hearing in the case. Or they could ask the U.S. Supreme Court to take up the case.

Gonzales served a 12-year prison term for sodomizing two children, ages 6 and 7, in 1981. He was charged again with two counts of indecent contact with a child in 1994, served time, and was released in 1997.

In 1999, he was sent back to prison for operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent. When his term ended in 2001, the state successfully petitioned to continue to hold him as a high-risk sex offender.

Powell: No smoking gun on Iraq

BY GLENN KESSLER WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON - Secretary of State Colin Powell said Monday that he will present "no smoking gun" when he tries to convince the U.N. Security Council Wednesday that Iraq is concealing weapons of mass destruction, but he will "offer a straightforward, sober, and compelling demonstration" that should persuade skeptics that Iraq is deliberately thwarting U.N. weapons inspectors.

Powell's statement, in an opinion article in the Wall Street Journal, appeared to be an attempt to dampen expectations for his high-stakes, one-hour appearance before many of his counterparts on the 15-nation council. The international response to his briefing will largely determine whether the administration decides to seek a second Security Council resolution authorizing an invasion of Iraq or whether it decides to bypass the United Nations. British Prime Minister Tony Blair, who is President Bush's closest ally but wants a second resolution to win over public opinion in the United Kingdom, Monday told Parliament, "The evidence of cooperation withheld is unmistakable ... We are entering the final phase of a 12year history of the disarmament of Iraq.'

The British believe enough votes exist for a second resolution, and some U.S. officials increasingly think they may be right. Blair will meet today with French President Jacques Chirac, a critic of imminent military action, in an effort to swing France's vote. Russian President Vladimir Putin on Monday again indicated he might support a second resolution.

Administration officials have worked past midnight many evenings in the past week to sift through the photographs, transcripts, and other classified material that Powell will use to bolster his case. Fierce

Mood not indigo after concert postponed

BY BETH HERZINGER THE DAILY IOWAN

Fans who braved the wind and blowing snow to see the Indigo Girls perform at the IMU Monday evening instead found a sign postponing the concert.

The band was unable to perform because member Emily Saliers has laryngitis, said Ben Van Dyke, the public-relations director of SCOPE. The performance has been rescheduled for Feb. 21 at 8 p.m. in the IMU Main Lounge.

"This really sucks," said UI sophomore Sarah Wambold. "I skipped my class to go to this

She purchased the concert tickets as a Christmas present for herself and her friend, Betsie Driscoll, a University of Northern Iowa student.

"I still like the Indigo Girls. I'm still a fan, and I'm going to come back," said Driscoll, who missed a test review for the concert. "But I'm also pretty mad. I mean, their job is to perform. They should stick it out.'

Tickets purchased for the performance will be honored on the new date, or patrons can opt for a refund, Van Dyke said.

The Indigo Girls — Saliers and Amy Ray - has progressed through its two-decade career playing an acoustic blend of folk, rock, and pop. The winter tour is in support of the band's latest album, Become You, which was released in March 2002.

Van Dyke said the decision to postpone the concert was "nothing we could control."

SCOPE was informed of the illness Monday afternoon and stopped selling tickets, he said.

Hannah Reha, a University Box Office assistant manager, said more than 60 tickets had been sold Monday before sales were stopped at 1 p.m. Approximately 1,300 tickets were sold in all for the 1,600-capacity show.

"We've had a lot of people trying to buy tickets since [1 p.m.], mostly over the phone," Reha said.

Disappointed fans arrived at the box office throughout the day, she said. Some had traveled from as far away as Des Moines and Omaha.

Van Dyke said the Feb. 21 performance, being on a Friday, may draw a larger crowd than the originally scheduled concert.

"That's what we hope," he said. Tickets for the Feb. 21 performance will be available after 10 a.m. Tuesday morning at the University Box Office, 1-800-346-4401 or (319) 335-3041.

Class pitches in to aid NY firehouse

BY PHIL DAVIDSON THE DAILY IOWAN

A 100-year-old firehouse in New York City is in need of restoration, and a group of UI students are revved-up about helping.

Heroes Wanted, a nonprofit corporation that grew out of the UI's Pappajohn Entrepreneurial Center, will raffle off a 2003 Harley-Davidson Fat Boy motorcycle with ticket proceeds going to the refurbishing of Engine Company 55's station.

New York firefighter John Olivero said the constant use of the firehouse makes for wear and tear, and with more than 200 stations in the New York metropolitan area, maintenance sometimes gets overlooked.

"The city doesn't get a chance to make improvements all that often," he said.

Joe Sulentic, a UI adjunct lecturer in the business school, teaches the Entrepreneurship and New Business Formations class, where 50 students are preparing strategies to raffle off the $20,000 motorcycle he purchased. Each ticket costs $20. Sulentic first got the idea to help out the New York Fire Department after heeding Mayor Rudolph Giuliani's call for aid in the aftermath of 9/11. He and 17 students drove to New York two weeks after the tragedy with money raised through T-shirt sales and magazine subscriptions and found Engine Company 55.

"It was so moving to go to firehouses and see notes from kids that said, 'Daddy, when will you come home?" Sulentic said. UI senior Kyle Ernst, a partner in Heroes Wanted, was one of the students on the trip to New York. He said the group originally wanted to fund a new fire truck but later learned about adopting a firehouse through Lt. Rocco Battista at Engine Co. 55.

The class hopes to raise $50,000 from ticket sales — 600 of which have already been sold, Sulentic said. The money raised will most likely go toward renovating the locker rooms and the kitchen of the firehouse, he said.

Last spring, UI students designed T-shirts costing $10 to $13 in support of the firehouse. Six thousand of the shirts have been sold in 31 states since last March, Sulentic said.

A 2003 100th anniversary edition Harley-Davidson Fat Boy sits on Monday in the office of Joe Sulentic, a UI adjunct lecturer. Sulentic and his students will raffle off the motorcycle in hopes of raising money for New York City firefighters.

John Branham, a UI senior, said he will use his marketing background to help promote the

"It's going to be hard selling only to college students because of the $20 price," he said, adding that he planned to network with his parents and their friends, who have more disposable income than do students.

Branham said students will promote the motorcycle during halftime of the UI's wrestling meet with Minnesota on Feb. 14. Students have also been in contact with Pat McGrath Chevyland of Cedar Rapids and KCRG.

UI's theft/vandalism losses near $100,000

BY CASEY WAGNER THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI lost nearly $100,000 in the last fiscal year because of theft of university property, money, and vandalism - a cost that the university must pay out of its own pocket. The university's Department of Risk Management, which handles the school's insurance programs and all insurance claims, and the UI police reported 61 thefts of university property in fiscal 2002, totaling more than $65,000.

Items most commonly stolen from the university include laboratory balances, film projectors, scrubs and gowns from the UI Hospitals and Clinics, audio equipment, digital cameras, and laptop computers, said Diana Cook, the Risk Management director.

Telephones are also stolen but only rarely, she said.

The costs of all stolen or vandalized material must be covered by the university budget because the state does not reimburse loses of under $5,000, Cook said.

Brad Allison, a UI police crime-prevention officer, said thefts do not usually involve university students; they are most commonly committed by individuals not associated with the university.

UI police are called as many as six times a day to investigate an alarm, Allison said. He added that false alarms are common because of the sensitivity of security sensors in university

Risk Management also reported eight thefts of money for a total of $1,062, and 110 cases of vandalism, costing the university $31,583 to repair, repaint, or replace.
"We don't want to go to the state for every little thing that's missing," she said.

Cook said whether items are replaced or reimbursed depends on its importance to of their office to go to the bath-

The university will first look for an alternative or similar item on campus if the item stolen was for research. If a replacement or alternative cannot be found, the university will replace the stolen item.

Desks, chairs, and tables damaged by vandalism are commonly discarded and not replaced if they cannot be repaired, she said.

Cook said thefts rely on accessibility of items and the determination of the thief.

"Sometimes, people step out the department that owned it. room, and they come back, and their camera is missing," she said. "It's hard to know what's going on in the mind of a person who would steal something."

The number of thefts at the university are similar to those at universities from across the country, Cook said.

Even though the number of thefts and vandalism increased slightly over the previous year, the numbers collected from previous years do not suggest a rising pattern of thefts, said Steve Parrott, the director of University Relations.

In fiscal 2000, the university reported just under $165,000 worth of loses; in 2001, only $62,000 worth of items were lost or damaged.

"In the grand scheme of things, it doesn't make that much of a difference," Parrott said. "But it does make a difference in the budget. It's just a cost of doing business."

CARACAS, Venezuela -Workers in all sectors but the vital oil industry returned to their jobs Monday - abandoning a two-month general strike that devastated Venezuela's economy but failed to oust Presi-

Strike leaders are a mix of conservatives, leftists, business associations, labor unions, and civic groups. Their often conflicting petitions reflected their various agendas.

One called for a constitutional amendment declaring Chavez's term over. Another would cut his term from six years to four, allowing elections this year. A third would create a constituent assembly to rewrite the Constitution and call general elections.

NASA: Experts may have erred

BY MARCIA DUNN

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPACE CENTER, Houston NASA acknowledged Monday that its "best and brightest" minds may have gotten it wrong when they concluded in a report four days before Columbia disintegrated that a flying, 2/2-pound chunk of insulation did no serious damage to the shuttle's thermal tiles during liftoff.

Shuttle program manager Ron Dittemore said the agency will redo the entire analysis from scratch.

We want to know if we made any mistakes," he said.

Practically from the start, investigators have focused on the possibility that a 20-inch piece of foam insulation that fell off the shuttle's big external fuel tank during liftoff Jan. 16 doomed the spacecraft by damaging the heat tiles. The tiles are responsible for keeping the ship from burning up during re-entry into the atmosphere.

While Columbia was still in orbit, NASA engineers analyzed launch footage frame-by-frame and were unable to determine for certain whether the shuttle was damaged. But they ran computer analyses for different scenarios and different assumptions about the weight of the foam, its speed, and where under the left wing it might have hit, even looking at the possibility of tiles missing over an area of approximately 7 inches by 30 inches, NASA said.

The half-page engineering report - issued on Day 12 of the 16-day flight — indicated "the potential for a large damage area to the tile." But the analyses showed "no burnthrough and no safety-of-flight issue," the report concluded, according to a copy released by NASA on Monday.

High-level officials at NASA said they agreed at the time with the engineers' assessment.

"We were in complete concurrence," Michael Kostelnik, a NASA spaceflight office deputy, said at a news conference Monday with NASA's top spaceflight official, William Readdy.

The best and brightest engineers we have who helped design and build this system looked carefully at all the analysis and the information we had at this time and made a determination this was not a safety-of-flight issue."

The analyses spanned a week; no one on the team, to Dittemore's knowledge, had any reservations about the conclusions, and no one reported any concerns to a NASA hotline set up for just such occasions.

"Now I am aware, here two days later, that there have been some reservations expressed by certain individuals, and it goes back in time," Dittemore said. "So we're reviewing those reservations again as part of our data base. They weren't part of our playbook at the time because they didn't surface. They didn't come forward."

On Monday, Readdy said the damage done by the broken-off piece of insulation is now being looked at very carefully as a possible cause of the tragedy.

"Although that may, in fact, wind up being the cause — it may certainly be the leading candidate right now - we have to go through all the evidence and then rule things out very methodically in order to arrive at the cause," he said.

Bush budget: more for military, record deficit

BY TERRY M. NEAL WASHINGTON POST

President Bush on Monday

sent Congress a $2.23 trillion budget that will accelerate and expand tax cuts, increase spending on the military, and slow growth in social programs while racking up record deficits ($307 billion this year) that at this point don't even factor in the cost of a possible war with Iraq.

The budget was delivered to Congress and released to the media and public Monday as a stack of five bound books, nearly a half a foot high, weighing more than 13 pounds and consisting of nearly 3,000 pages. The release of the budget marks the beginning of what is sure to be months of partisan haggling on Capitol Hill. Democratic lawmakers Monday launched a broad attack on the administration Monday for what they consider reckless fiscal policies.

"Today's budget confirms that President Bush is leading the most fiscally irresponsible administration in history," said Senate Democratic Leader Tom statement Monday. "President Bush inherited a $5.6 trillion projected surplus. When the cost of the president's latest proposals is added to his already failed fiscal framework, the entire surplus disappears, and we will be forced to borrow $1.7 trillion. That's a downturn of $7.3 trillion in just two years — the worst fiscal collapse in our history."

The budget demonstrates stark differences in spending between the president's priorities and programs that are lower on his scale of importance. One of the starkest examples is the Pentagon budget, which would increase by more than $15 billion — 4.2 percent — over current spending for a total of $380 billion.

While the percentage increase is not huge, the figure is likely to increase even more because the administration plans to ask for $15 billion more in a supplemental budget to fight terrorism. And a military strike on Iraq would push the cost even further. After next year, the president proposes annual $20 billion increases over the next five years - a proposal likely to provoke intense partisan battles in Congress.

"That would take spending higher than the Cold War," said Steve Kosiak of the Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments. "And despite the new war on terror, it's going to be hard to sustain that."

Healthy nonpregnant females between the ages of 16 to 23 are invited to participate in a 4 year study (up to 8 visits). The research will compare a study approved quadrivalent HPV vaccine to placebo to determine if the vaccine will prevent HPV infection. Participants must agree to use an effective birth control method through month 7 of the study.

City Council talks 21-only

some restaurant and club owners worried. Many weren't happy when the council passed tougher alcohol laws in June 2001 that limited drink specials, among other measures, and this ordinance, some say, won't put a dent in underage drinking, either.

"I think this is all unnecessary," said Daryl Woodson, the owner of the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St. "There is no way the City Council will stop underage drinking. This new proposal will drive partying back into neighborhoods."

Mike Porter, the owner of two popular downtown clubs, the Summit Restaurant & Bar, 10 S. Clinton St., and One-Eyed Jakes, 18-20 S. Clinton St., echoed Woodson's sentiments while lamenting the council's lack of insight into his establishments' other features, which include dancing and live comedy.

"This will not solve underagedrinking problems, not even close," he said. "If anything, it will make it even worse. More and more house parties will pop up."

Woodson and Porter won't get much sympathy from Clayton, who said Stepping Up plans to present the council with a list of recommendations this spring to combat underage and binge drinking. The group's Community Policy Task Force will iterate its 21-only stance while also proposing keg registration and server training and re-introducing Monday's failed zoning proposal.

"That's something we'll come back to again and again," Clayton said about the zoning proposal.

Stepping Up's executive committee will vote on all task force recommendations before presenting them to the council.

"A lot of bars are skating on thin ice," Woodson said.

Boyd backs panel's recommendations

"I believe that the general counsel should not have administrative responsibility for any department other than his or her own," Boyd wrote.

The dual roles of Schantz, the university's top lawyer and top athletics administrator, have been criticized. In the letter, for instance, Boyd said he had to go to the law school for legal counsel because of the conflict of interest but would have preferred using Schantz.

Schantz maintained that in two years he had never encountered any significant problems and did not do anything wrong in the Pierce case. Schantz assumed the role after the UI vice president for University Relations resigned in 2000.

Keeping his promise not to change the administration during his stint as interim president, Boyd said he would pass the recommendation along to David Skorton, who will become the university's president March 1.

"I'm only going to be here another month, and they can't get it done in a month," Boyd said. "They have already formulated a direction of where they want to go, and now they have to make it work."

The proposed policy overhaul targets the miscues found by the committee. The recommendations include:

· Develop a detailed "crisisor event-management class."

 Train coaches and athletics personnel on how to make appropriate statements on sensitive issues.

· Create a new policy to immediately suspend athletes charged with serious crimes and give the athletics director the discretion to enforce the suspension after the criminal process.

Boyd was also "particularly happy" about the recommendation to reinstate the Student Athlete Welfare Committee because he feels it is an "important tradition in the Big Ten": his father served as a member of such a panel at the University of Minnesota from 1914 until 1952.

The committee's role is to provide direction and advice on all policies regarding crime, misconduct, and the general welfare of student-athletes," according to the Athletics Board.

The committee would include the athletics compliance officer for sexual assault and sexual harassment (a position the Athletics Board recommends creating), a representative of the Office of Affirmative Action, and other officials.

Boyd stressed that education and commitment are vital to successfully implementing the board's recommendations and that it is "imperative" that people in the university community respect each other.

"A university is about people, and sexual harassment and violence are basically unnecessary," Boyd said. "We have to learn to live together, and it is a never-ending process that we should always be embarked on."

Ruling may release sex offenders

Following the Supreme Court's ruling striking down his confinement, Gonzales could be released as early as Feb. 13, said public defender Mark Smith, whose office represents the men. Smith said his office would resist any appeal filed by the attorney general.

In addition to Gonzales, eight of the offenders, ranging in ages from 29 to 57, have been confined indefinitely for treatment at Oakdale after being released from prison on non-sex-related crimes. Two others are at a correctional facility in Newton facing possible commitment to Oakdale. Both are fighting possible commitment because their latest crimes were not sexual offenses.

Each of the offenders would have to convince a judge to strike down their confinements, but defense attorneys say that would be likely if the Gonzales case is

"We choose only the highestrisk people to put into the civilcommitment unit," she said. "[Their risk] is not something that you can quantify. As sex offenders go, these are among the most persistent. Many have spent most of their lives committing sex offenses.

Some state legislators also voiced their opposition to the prisoners' release

Rep. Gene Maddox, R-Clive, who chairs the House Judiciary Committee, said he is opposed to an across-the-board release of offenders because of a legal technicality. Instead, it should depend on whether they have rehabilitated, he said.

The Sexual Predator Unit at Oakdale, which is run by the Department of Health and Human Services, currently treats 38 patients with a fivephase program designed to minimize the risk they pose to society. If patients pass the program, doctors at the facility will recommend that they be released. None have been released since the program's inception in 1999.

Prisoners who have a history of sex crimes undergo psychiatric assessments before their release. A state review committee then can recommend whether to refer the prisoner to Oakdale. State lawyers must then ask judges for the confinement.

The law says sex offenders cannot be imprisoned past their release date unless they have committed a "recent overt act" that signals the likelihood of another offense.

Defense lawyers argue that it is being wrongly applied to punish people who have reformed. Civil libertarians say it amounts to a "double jeopardy."

Doctors at Oakdale expressed reservations about the possibility of patients being released before completing their treatment...

BY ARYN HENNING THE DAILY IOWAN

If you were to exhibit an art collection for public tours, it might consist of Van Gogh posters or something you created in art class.

In Tom and Kitty Stoner's personal collection, works by artists as well known as Pablo Picasso usually line the walls of three rooms in their home.

The Stoners, former Iowans who owned the Stoner Broadcasting System, which operated 27 radio stations nationally, have previously kept their collection within those walls. Now, it's on display at the UI Museum of Art through Feb. 23.

"Part of the enjoyment of owning such great works of art is that it becomes part of your daily life," said Kathleen Edwards, the museum's curator of prints, drawings, photographs, and new media. "It's a real hardship to live without them. But the Stoners decided they could part with them for three months, especially for the benefit of the students."

Top 40! The Stoner Collection of 20th Century Sculptors' Drawings highlights 40 drawings by 40 prominent European and American sculptors of the past 100 years in a show that was inspired by the concept of a radio-station play list.

The exhibit, exploring the relationship between drawing and sculpture, ranges from simple drawings to intricate plans of potential sculptures and even studies of the connection between form and space.

"This is a stunning show, Edwards said. "The potent relationship between drawing and sculpture is remarkably evident in this extraordinary collection. The show is like a repository of the major ideas of the 20th-century sculpture."

Public tours kicked off Jan. 26, and two more are set to follow on Feb. 9 and 23 at 2 p.m. Admission is free. Each tour grants the viewer a peek into the working processes of sculptors and into the history of the

Spector charged in slaying

BY ERICA WERNER

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALHAMBRA, Calif. - Phil Spector, the legendary record producer whose "Wall of Sound" helped change the sound of pop music in the 1960s, was arrested Monday for allegedly shooting a woman to death at his suburban Spector, 62, was seized at the castle-like estate around 5 a.m. after authorities were called about shots being fired, sheriff's Sgt. Joe Efflandt said. Spector was taken to the Alhambra Police Department and booked for investigation of murder.

Attorney Robert Shapiro, whose clients have included O.J. Simpson, said he was representing Spector but couldn't discuss the case until he talked to his client. Bail was set at $1 million.

Authorities did not immediately identify the woman or her relationship to Spector. A black Mercedes-Benz sedan with the passenger door open was parked in the driveway of the home, and police were searching the home.

Records show Spector bought the mansion for $1.1 million in 1998. A close friend, attorney Marvin Mitchelson, said Spector lived alone and didn't have a girlfriend.

Mitchelson said he and Spector had been trying to put together a movie about Spector's life. "His mental state has been great - very rational, very together," the attorney said.

Spector is famous for creating the "Wall of Sound" effect that involved overdubbing scores of musicians to create a full, dramatic sound. The technique combined instruments, vocals, and sound effects, and it changed the way pop records were produced while bringing fame to such singing groups as the Ronettes and the Crystals.

In his storied career, Spector produced records for Elvis Presley, Ike and Tina Turner, the

Biotechnology for Iowa means bustling business

In a move sure to bolster the state's and the UI's profiles in biotechnology, Gov. Tom Vilsack announced a bold plan to invigorate biotech companies and research. On Jan. 27, Vilsack and incoming UI President David Skorton presented Vilsack's $50 million initiative. If the Iowa Legislature approves the governor's plan, it will make Iowa a leader in this burgeoning science.

Biotechnology, which incorporates natural sciences with technological advances, is a growing and prosperous sector. It is key in developing medicines, as well as tinkering with genetics of plants to make them resistant to certain pests or to add vitamins that otherwise would not be present. Examples of biotech research include "golden rice," which enhances vitamin A levels so that blindness is rarer in countries that are heavily dependent on the grain.

Vilsack's initiative encompasses a variety of monetary pledges that will increase biotech's presence in the state, especially at the three regents' universities. Specifically, it allocates $4 million for a program that supports new businesses, $14 million for the construction of new research and production spaces, $15 million for a state-run pharmaceutical research laboratory, and $17 million for a state-run genetics-research laboratory. Of course, this is only a proposal and has not yet been approved by the Legislature.

If the Legislature takes a chance on biotech, it won't regret it. Vilsack's plan will shine a bright light on Iowa's potential as more than a farming and insurance state. Additionally, it will create new jobs and companies, especially in the Iowa City area, thus enhancing the state's economy. The governor said, "The regents' universities have enormous capabilities in plant sciences and in human health and medicine, and we have leading experts in private industry conducting cutting-edge research, development, and production in biotechnology right here in

The state will also receive biotech support from the federal government. Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, secured millions of dollars for Iowa on Jan. 24 in various areas including biotech. While the spending bill still has to be approved by a House-Senate conference committee and again by the Senate, it is likely that Grassley's efforts will also assist Iowa in becoming a major source of biotech research and production.

Vilsack's initiative is a risky venture for the Legislature, but if lawmakers are able to see the big picture, they will envision a bustling future for the state as a whole. In particular, of course, the UI will benefit from the chance to expand its research capabilities and its connections with the private sector. Biotech's wave, once it gets rolling, will lift all the ships - and the UI will be the front-runner.

10 questions for Bush before war

As a university community, we don't just "support" or "oppose" the war in Iraq. We value data and reasoned analysis. We ask Put aside the nukes in North Korea. Put aside the emotionally charged arguments. Not that they're irrelevant. But just consider these 10 questions you might want to ask your public officials, academic colleagues, any presidential candidates you happen upon - and yourself.

1. Al Qaeda is alive and well, just over the Afghanistan border and in 60 countries. Why start a new war before resolving the last? How is "homeland security" improved by diverting focus from Al Qaeda?

2. Global Muslim support is essential to a successful war on terrorism. Threatening war with Iraq increases Muslims' hatred - and terrorists' recruiting. What benefits from war in Iraq exceed the costs of increased terrorism here?

3. Iraqi war or not, our arrogant, go-it-alone saber-rattling has squandered valuable post-9/11 global good will. Our worldwide economic, democratic, military, and human-rights efforts require allies. How does alienating them serve our national interest?

4. President Bush says Saddam might use weapons of mass destruction. The president may be wrong; but especially if he's right, why fail to heed the CIA's warning: Saddam's most likely to do so only if attacked?

5. The administration's inherited budget surpluses have become deep deficits. War with Iraq adds billions to our grandchildren's national debt. Why abandon our relatively low-cost policy of containment? Why now? And, if so, why not increase taxes to pay as we go?

6. The administration's policy of global military domination and preemptive wars reverses 200 years of American policy, violates international law, the UN Charter, NATO Treaty, and possibly the U.S. Constitution. China could use the theory to justify attacking Taiwan. How is national security improved by setting back 50 years of progress in international relations?

7. Once the dogs of war are unleashed, there's no controlling where they go. If we let the dogs out, minimally we lose Middle East stability. Worst case, we start World War III. How does risking either serve our interests?

8. What's "war" in a city? We can level Baghdad, as we did Dresden and Hiroshima. That's lots of "collateral damage." We can send in ground troops. But even a weakened Hitler was able to kill the 10,000 Russian soldiers who tried that strategy in Berlin. What military strategy makes a Baghdad war "winnable" - with acceptable levels of civilian and U.S. casualties?

9. Assume the improbable: a war that's quick, cheap, decisive, and contained. What then? Why will Saddam's successor be better? How can he prevent civil war among Iraq's factions, let alone Middle East chaos? Our man in Afghanistan is still under attack even in Kabul. Why will our man in Baghdad do better? What will it cost us to rebuild Iraq? Will we keep bases there forever? Or will we abandon Iraq for wars elsewhere - as we've done in Afghanistan? 10. Iraq sits atop the world's second-largest oil reserves. How much of this proposed war is about oil? How will U.S. occupation of Iraq affect the interests of U.S. oil companies - and consumers? Which campaign contributors profit from this war?

Washington hasn't, yet, provided satisfactory (to me) answers to these and other questions. Maybe we can find them in Iowa City.

FCC COMMISSIONER WHO TEACHES AT THE UI COLLEGE OF LAW.

Borges & Kafka, at play in the Wizard of Oz

o here we are, stuck in a world in which the top-flight American high-school basketball teams range far and wide across the country to play other top-flight high-school basketball teams and rack up frequentflier miles. No, I don't know how we got to this point, either - no more than I know who invented the DNA for strip malls. Damn successful DNA, you gotta admit.

I suppose we'll have a better idea about who's to blame once scientists complete the strip-mall genome project. I'd say that person ought to be hung, but I'm one of those wishy-washy liberals who's against the death penalty, even for such egregious crimes as creating strip malls. A far better punishment would be a life sentence involving chaining the person in front of a TV and forcing her or him to watch reruns of "The Bachelorette" and "Joe Millionaire" until toxic imbecility set in.

Of course, I suppose you could rather successfully argue that anyone who came up with the notion of strip malls already suffered from toxic imbecility.

Meanwhile, back at our wandering high-school hoopsters just contemplate that for a moment. High-school kids? Traveling across the nation to play hoops? Has this society gone entirely, utterly, over-thetop bonkers? Who's running the country, Nike? OK, it was a rhetorical question. But Borges and Kafka couldn't have written this world any better. So it should come as no surprise that the next big-hit "reality" TV show, coming soon to a screen near you, will be known as "Bombs Over Baghdad."

It'll feature all the usual suspects: an ambitious, arrogant king, selected in a faux election, who has only a glancing acquaintance with the truth, a Stealth President whose past business practices were, well, "interesting" would be the polite word, some assorted sycophants and cheerleaders, a leader of a has-been empire known by his own people as Tony BEAU ELLIOT Blur, and a malicious dictator in a far-away land who starves his nation while building nukes. Some cast, huh?

Oops, no. Wrong malicious dictator. So hard to keep them straight, you know? North Korea's Kim Jong Il will not be starring in this series because ... well ... because ... well, just because.

Our leader has his reasons, so we can trust him. Pay no attention to the man behind the curtain. He's just Rove-ing around.

Of course, our leader is the same guy who, a year ago in his State of the Union address, warned us about the "Axis of Evil," which included North Korea. King George doesn't talk about the Axis anymore, just as he never allows the words "Osama bin Laden" to pass over his tongue. A year ago, it was "Osama, dead or alive." Now, as Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., points out, it's Osama bin Forgotten.

But then, King George also promised in that 2002 speech that "our budget will run a deficit that will be small and short-lived." He also said, "... my economic security plan can be summed up in one word: jobs.

We now know that the deficit is $300 billion and will be $300 billion next year and, for that matter, will be $300 billion each year for the foreseeable future. Jobs? In King George's economy, the United States has lost 1.7 million jobs. But not to worry. "Bombs Over Baghdad" will be a big hit. In many, many ways. The king is so not worried that he didn't even bother to put any money in his budget for fighting and rebuilding Iraq. Don't you feel all safe and secure now? I know I do. We should all feel so safe and secure that we should zip around the country and catch some high-school basketball games. It feels like the patriotic thing to do. Far-flung high-school hoopsters, strip malls, "reality" TV, the obsessions of King George - man. I'm going back to read some Borges and Kafka.

I need a dose of reality.

Hmm. As I have found it severely to my disadvantage to unquestionably support, well, anything and anyone, especially the president, I was instantly skeptical of Bush's uncharacteristic desire to help others without expecting an immediate monetary reward. That AIDS has reached epidemic proportions in Africa is hardly breaking news. I wondered why Bush was so eager to play the humanitarian to developing countries, especially because that one of his first acts as president was to reinstate the Mexico City Policy.

Commonly known as the Global Gag Rule, the Mexico City Policy that former President Reagan initiated in 1984 disqualifies overseas family planning organizations from receiving U.S. funds if they, with their own money (that is, without any U.S. government cash), lobby to change abortion laws, provide legal abortion services in their countries, or refer people to an abortion provider. In other words, the United States took money away from educational agendas, programs to promote women's empowerment, efforts toward sustainable development, and contraceptive tools and information.

As time and statistics have shown, it did not prevent abortions or even slow them down a significant amount. In fact, according to Action Canada for Population and Development, evidence from Russia and several Eastern European countries shows that in regions where family planning is widely available, abortion rates plummet.

This should not be a surprise; people, especially women, who lack family planning resources, empowerment programs, and contraceptive tools and knowledge are more likely to find themselves dealing with unwanted pregnancies and/or HIV/AIDS. Many of those women turn to abortion, whether it's legal or not.

In addition, many of the religious far right, big supporters of Bush, oppose such contraceptives as the pill and condoms, ity. So when Bush advocated more money to HIV/AIDS relief and prevention, I was intrigued to see how he planned to skirt the whole condom issue, as barrier-method birth control obviously plays a crucial role in HIV prevention. To my great surprise (and to the great chagrin of the far right, I'm sure) the proposal will supposedly include condom distribution and education.

My skepticism was further diluted when I discovered that Bush was allowing the use of generic drugs, which the current administration has hitherto opposed on the global market because of the brand-name pharmaceutical companies that eagerly throw campaign money at fat cats like Bush so they can continue exploiting poor folks by selling them overpriced drugs. Although realistically, $15 billion over five years really isn't that much, given the massive amount of work to be done, and many critics say that the proposed amount allotted to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis, and Malaria ($1 billion outta the new $10 billion) is too small to keep this gem of an NGO going keep this gem of an NGO going at a steady pace, it is a stumble in the right direction.

The next step needs to go beyond the typical methods of HIV prevention, i.e., barriermethod birth control and abstinence. We need to look at the socioeconomic conditions that cultivate the spread of HIV and seriously put into the practice the international slogan that development is the best contraceptive.

Real action involving the emergency aid to Real action involving the emergency aid to Africa and the Caribbean remains to be seen, but I'm grasping this thread of hope that perhaps, with the careful counsel of HIV/AIDS experts and activists, W. can do something not entirely motivated by greed and hubris. Unfortunately, the noose of a threatening war feels a helluva lot more tangible than my little thread of hope, and I can only pray that this promise of aid isn't forgotten in the midst of another foolish battle.

Bixby an example of mediocrity

Being a cat owner, I must admit I'm a little hot under the collar about The Daily lowar's lack of cat coverage in the Arts and Entertainment section. Honestly, Ruff 'N' Stuff was really cute, and by the end of his column, Drew Bixby (Jan. 30) inspired me to not only love doggies but to put on a shirt. Regardless, I'm still upset about my cat's lack of coverage because he's been spinning records at Gabe's for a semester now, DJ Lix Hizaz, and The Daily lowan has failed to notice. Also, he lost his tail in a fight earlier this year and was born cross-eyed, and I still love him. Isn't that really great of me to show love to a creature less fortunate than the rest of us? I think I'll write about it in my diary that doubles as a column for a Big Ten university newspaper.

Big Ten university newspaper.

Dear Diary: After I gave 10 back rubs to freshmen girls on the Cambus today, I went home and hugged my cat because I love him so much, not in a chocolate milk kind of way, but more in a sexually frustrated, I'll-use-any-cheap-trick-to-get-attention-fromgirls kind of way.

Tim Shaw

When I woke up on Jan. 31, my roommate was posting Drew Bixby's column on the message board in our house. He had taken the trouble to ght and annotate the passages that he found particularly repulsive. I, on the other hand, could not help remembering some of the lessons that I believe that nearly all UI students learn as part of their freshman that whole bit about "pathos." Now I know I'm not exactly an expert on good of Aristotle - and I'm too oor to own an Oxford English Dictionary — but it seems to me that sixby has, in the course of his colmn, run the etymological gamut of he Greek (which means "to suffer," an irony not lost on all of his readers 'm sure) to end up somewhere between pathetic and pathological.

Everyone knows what pathetic means, but the subtleties of "pathological" are worth bringing up as well. "Of, relating to, or manifesting behavior that is habitual and compulsive," is the way my dictionary spells it out. People with only a cursory knowledge of Bixby's work might do well to notice the "habitual and compulsive" employment of sentiment so dripping with pathos that it might well be compared to a wet dog. But then again, Ruffy can hardly be blamed for having a picture taken that belongs more in a Chippendale calendar than a newspaper. Beau Elliot may be affecting a pose with his dangling cigarette, but at least he has a shirt on. I'd cancel my subscription, but The Daily Iowan is free.

John Cline UI student

In The Daily lowan on Jan. 30, Drew Bixby's extensive column about how much he loves puppies was matched in length by the international news story "Iraq's window closing, U.S. says." The disparity in import between the two could not possibly be turther apart, but they do share some

The landlord is equivalent to the U.N. weapons inspectors, and Ruffy would be the illegal weapons of mass destruction. In this scenario, Bixby, of course, would be Saddam Hussein. There are a few differences between Bixby and Saddam (namely that Saddam has the decency not to print shirtless pictures of himself in the paper), but I do not make the comparison lightly. They share a unique ability to inflict psychological damage, Saddam through intimidation, repression, and threats of violence and Bixby by writing columns so bad that they make one question a God that would allow such spirit-killing, maudlin garbage to appear in a college newspaper rather than relegating it to its rightful place in the universe — a mass e-mail to those unfortunate enough to be Bixby's friends and family. Instead of utilizing the 80 hours section for record reviews, coverage of events at Prairie Lights, or anything else that actually related to the arts, Bixby consistently subjects the public to his Chicken-Soup-for-the-Self-Involved-Soul reflections. I would draw a line in the sand, but Bixby has consistently not only crossed the line into irrelevance but left it so far behind him that it recedes behind the horizon. His columns are not just bad, they are not so bad they are good, they are not even so bad that they go past good and back to bad again. They verge on crimes against humanity. To paraphrase, this mediocrity will not stand.

Human life has value

I am writing to make it clear that there are a number of UI medical students who do not share the views expressed by Nick Ettinger and Emily Norland in their letters to the editor (DI, Jan. 30 and 31). I think it is disturbing that as members of society in general, and as future physicians in particular, some of us should hold that the destruction of innocent life is a fundamental human right. While the issues associated with unplanned pregnancies are indeed complicated and emotional, no argument can obviate the truth that stands in stark contrast to the anecdotal justifications of the pro-choice movement. That truth is simply this: The deliberate killing of the innocent is murder, whether done for its own sake or as a means to some other end. This is not a fundamental human right — to kill those who are weak, who cannot speak for themselves, who cannot raise a hand in defense of their own lives.

I speak especially to my fellow students who would mourn the loss of innocent Iragi children to U.S. bombs. the loss of innocent Sudanese children to war and famine, the loss of innocent inner-city children to guns and violence. Why is it fashionable to weep for some innocent victims of violence while quietly disposing of the bodies of 1.2 million aborted children every year? There are medical students who value the lives of both mother and child, who would do everything in their power to make this a society where an unplanned child is not a burden or a shame, not something of which to quietly dispose, but a beautiful human being to love and to cherish.

Tuesday, February 4, 2003 by Eugenia Last ARIES (March 21-April 19): Financial gains can be made, but you must take a conservative approach. Engage in conversations with people in the know, and attend financialstrategy seminars. Avoid risky ventures.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may be swept off your feet by someone who is a real player. Be careful, and keep in mind that the way this person treats her or his family is an indication of how you will be treated in the future.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep your work and your emotional problems separate, or you may not do the best job. A fellow worker has a vested interest in you. Be careful that it's to your advantage.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take time out from doing for everyone else and do for yourself. Pamper yourself, and make those improvements you've been contemplating.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't close your eyes to any minor ailments that have been lingering. An older relative will need your guidance. Your effort and your time will be appreciated.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take the initiative and make things happen. Everyone will appreciate the plans you have taken the trouble to make.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put your business plans in motion. You will meet some exciting people, and any extra effort or time you invest in your career will not be wasted. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Share your knowledge with others. Your creative outlook and talent are obvious, and it's time to believe in yourself and follow your dreams.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Matters relating to how you earn your living may be unstable. Don't be afraid to modify or change completely your professional direction. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You need to interact with new people or join new groups. Relationships will evolve if you are open and talkative with people you meet along the way. Do as much socializing as possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take care of any issues that have been eating away at you. Illness is likely to follow if you allow everything around you to take its toll. Stop letting others walk all over you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Romantic encounters are looking good today. Don't hesitate to take a position of leadership. Others will see your genuine warmth and compassion.

UConn's Calhoun has cancer, will take break

STORRS, Conn. (AP) Connecticut men's coach Jim Calhoun has prostate cancer and is leaving the team to undergo surgery. "I want to attack this thing, Calhoun said Monday at practice.

"I'm going after it." The 60-year-old Calhoun will take a three-to-four week medical leave, with assistant George Blaney taking over as coach on an interim basis. Surgery was scheduled for Thursday.

Calhoun's doctor, UConn Heafth Center urologist Peter Albertsen, said the cancer was detected early and was "relatively low-grade."

"Coach Calhoun's condition appears to be very treatable and we anticipate his return to normal job-related activities within three or four weeks," said Albertsen, who will perform the surgery.

Keep hands to yourself, Alford tells Worley

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP

THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa coach Steve Alford says Glen Worley is an outstanding player in the minutes he spends on the court. The only problem with what sounds to be a ringing endorsement is that the talented junior spends almost as much time on the bench battling foul trouble as he does playing games.

Alford expressed his growing frustration over Worley's problems once again during his Monday news conference. He had also made it a point of contention following Iowa's 80-77 loss to Purdue on Feb. 1.

"I think this is something Glen can definitely handle, and something that he ought to handle if he wants to be one of the premier players in the league," Alford said.

PIERCE'S ALLY: Should Alford have supported Pierre Pierce? Page 28.

Worley has been plagued by foul problems throughout the course of his two-and-a-halfyear career at Iowa, but his struggles have been put under the microscope more than ever this season with Alford using just a seven-man rotation because of Iowa's depleted roster. Worley has fouled out of six games this season, including five of Iowa's six losses, and he has finished another six games with four violations. In six Big Ten games, he has averaged four and a half fouls per contest.

He played just 24 minutes against the Boilermakers after picking up two fouls in the game's first four minutes, eventually fouling out just prior to the end of regulation on what Worley himself termed a "dumb foul." And that may be the biggest problem Worley's coach has with his play.

"He's a very smart player," said Alford. "That's the thing that's frustrating."

When Worley is in games, he is definitely an impact player. He scored a career-high 29 points in Iowa's 68-64 victory over Michigan State on Jan. 11, and he averages 12.4 points and 4.8 rebounds per game. But those numbers would be much better if Worley played more than the 27.8 minutes per game he is currently averaging. Alford even went so far as to say on Monday that Worley would be one of the most talented, productive players in the conference if he weren't constantly on the bench because of fouls. That responsibility falls on his shoulders," Alford said.

For his part, Worley has no immediate answers. He was Living the dream

College student coaches outside the campus boundaries

BY ROSEANNA SMITH

THE DAILY IOWAN

TIFFIN, Iowa - Matt Haddy will tell you his forwards are a little undersized, but his guards are stellar. He'll emphasize a slow game with a lot of press. He hates to see a missed lay-up, and more than that, he hates to lose. A 21-year-old UI junior,

Haddy already has the job of his dreams - as a coach. He is in charge of the sophomore boy's basketball team at Clear Creek-Amana High School and spends between 25-35 hours a week coaching and preparing for practices and games.

"He's very good," freshman coach B.J. Supple said. "He puts everything he has into it. He cares a lot for the kids; he likes kids a lot. That makes you a good coach."

After moving to Iowa City from Marion, Iowa, Haddy found an ad in the newspaper for a freshman coaching job and after a successful interview, was hired. "I'll be the first to admit I was very lucky," he said. "The first day was a 6:30 a.m. practice. I was scared out of my mind. It was really tough, but it was a learning experience. This season, the Clippers are 6-8 with six games remaining. Ask Haddy how the season is going, and he'll say this is the best yet.

"Last year, there were a couple sophomore teams head and shoulders above everybody else in the league," Haddy said. "This year, the most we've been beaten by is 13. Last year, we were losing by 20-25 points against those good teams. Part of it is that this group doesn't try to do too much; they take what they're given and don't force things."

With a T-shirt and basketball shorts hanging to his knees, Haddy joins his assistant coach and roommate Joey Akers and Supple for another day in the gym. While Akers gets the team warmed up under the hoop with box-out drills, Haddy and Supple discuss the game plan for the six sophomores and 12 freshmen.

The team forms a circle in the middle of the gym and the boys goof around while they loosen hamstrings and quadriceps. Someone is likely to set off the group laughing, which translates into a sharp look and the start of drills.

In unison, the five rows of boys begin the foot fire before yelling "push, push, push, shot" as they slide to the left and right, jump, and make a shot motion. When the whistle blows, the group remains statuesque, knees bent, arms out, head up in a squatting position. This Zen-like meditation, beads of sweat hanging from each boy's brow, lasts until Haddy releases each from his trance for a water break. Some days they move on with defense, rebounding, or motion offense, but everything is done competitively.

"He'll tell you the right thing to do, tell you straight out what to do next," forward Andy Stockman said. "I think that's the best way to do it - as soon as you see something [wrong], stop and change it so you don't go back out there and do it again."

Sometimes Haddy lets the groups redeem themselves with free throws; other times, he pushes timed sprints. But no matter what the drill, Haddy captures everyone's attention. "He gets very emotional," forward Andy Stockman said. "He's an effective person; he rubs off on you. In practice, we're joking around, and the next minute he's serious, and we are, too."

Game time

Haddy's influence strengthens when the team steps out onto the blue and white gym floor. In the locker room, the boys sit in a semicircle nestled between the jeans and shirts to listen to his pregame routine.

First Haddy talks to the boys about being strong with the ball, making lay-ups, showing a presence in the post and giving intensity, but he stays no longer than five minutes. This is just the beginning.

Mocco proves he's one of the best in the nation

berg with his last win occurring

BY JEROD LEUPOLD THE DAILY IOWAN

The stage was set for a test of the titans Monday night as Iowa wrestlers Jessman Smith and Steve Mocco stepped foot on the mat for the Cape Cod Potato Chip/NCWA All-Star Classic.

Both No. 1 nationally ranked grapplers were slated to battle with No. 2's. But on Sunday, heavyweight defending champion Tommy Rowlands was pulled from competition because of a shoulder injury. Instead, No. 5 Pat Cummins from Penn State was thrown to "The Bear."

Mocco met Cummins in the last rumble of the night. The first period set the tone with a single takedown by Mocco and escape by Cummins. Late in the third period, Mocco nailed his second takedown with 30 seconds remaining. With riding points added in, Mocco won 6-2. Unfortunately,

Smith didn't fare as well. Smith was pinned in four minutes, 59 seconds. The pin came after a mad scramble that looked like a Smith takedown.

Smith is 3-1 against Wattenin the Midlands tournament. The difference between this dual and Midlands is an extra one minute of wrestling time. "It's time to separate the distance," Hawk coach Jim Zalesky said. "One minute is a big deal. It's an eternity in wrestling."

Mocco kept his perfect record intact this season at 23-0. Along with his dominant record, he also leads the Hawkeyes with team points at 71, pins with 12, and quickest pin time - 16 sec-

LeBron decision postponed

CLEVELAND - LeBron James has yet to appeal his banishment from playing highschool basketball, keeping the 18-year-old superstar off the James had been expected to appeal the decision Monday, but Ohio High School Athletics Association spokesman Bob Goldring said the organization did not hear from him or his lawyer by late afternoon.

"Everything is status quo," Goldring said. "We have not heard anything about an appeal or any legal action."

James' attorney, Fred Nance, did not return phone messages.

James, regarded as the nation's top player and the next No. 1 NBA draft pick, was ruled ineligible on Jan. 31 by the association for accepting two free sports jerseys worth a combined $845 from a clothing store.

As of late Monday afternoon, Nance had not filed for a temporary restraining order with Summit County Common Pleas Court, which would block the order so James could continue playing.

If James plans to appeal the decision, he must do so to the agency in writing. The appeal would be heard by a state panel on Feb. 13 in Columbus.

James sat out the first game of his career Sunday, and his Akron lay's Games orado at Boston, 6 p.m ladelphia at N.Y. Island

St. Vincent-St. Mary teammates barely won without him, beating Canton McKinley, 63-62.

Afterward, University of Akron police and James' own security personnel kept reporters away from him. He agreed to an exclusive interview with former NFL star Deion Sanders for CBS News' "The Early Show."

In the interview, scheduled to air this morning, James expresses remorse for accepting the trendy retro jerseys.

"If I had known I was violating anything, I would've never done it," James told Sanders. "I would've never jeopardized my eligibility. I would've never jeopardized my team.

"When I went in [the store], you know, I was just going in there as being, you know, another player, and they was trying to reward me for my good grades," added James, who has said he has a 3.5 grade-point average.

The athletics group found that the Cleveland store gave James the Gale Sayers and Wes Unseld jerseys for free in exchange for James posing for pictures to be

In addition to ruling James ineligible, association Commissioner Clair Muscaro ordered his school to forfeit its Jan. 26 win over Akron Buchtel. The Fighting Irish (14-1) entered Monday ranked No. 1 by USA Today but could drop in today's rankings because of the forfeit and James' ineligibility.

James' team is scheduled to play Saturday night at the Isles Prime Time Shootout in Trenton, N.J., a charity tournament featuring 11 of the top 25 highschool teams nationally.

Martin Johnson, the president of the Isles Inc., a nonprofit community-development group, said he expects James to not only appeal his punishment but win.

"I'm optimistic about the chances of LeBron playing here this weekend," Johnson said.

Should Alford have publicly supported Pierce?

Hawkeye men's basketball coach Steve Alford is being attacked for doing his only job — building winning teams to generate gobs of money for the UI. I come not to praise him, but I won't bury

The phrase "[Pierce] is a great kid," uttered by Alford, has been blown up, autopsied, and dragged before a council of his peers. The Board in Control of Athletics seemed to put Alford in the cast of The Usual Suspects. But what did he do?

Alford stood side by side with his contract and the present and perhaps future of Iowa basketball. Professionally, he stood stalwart to maintain team unity. A team divided plays selfishly, perhaps best illustrated by Iowa's blamefest last year. Alford also paved the way for new recruits.

A player is more receptive to coaches who stick by their players through final Four bick des and a season-on-the brink thinness. and a season-on-rating his commitment to the-brink thinness the program, Alfo tion for player's trust something t ting the E Pluribus Unums for is dictating the state of health for the home of the Hawkeyes.

With all due respect, Alford is a basketball coach. When I want public policy, I'll ask university spokesperson Steve Parrott. Alford made a statement about his backyard, and those four words are the only correct ones he could've said.

If Alford had told reporters that he thought Pierce was a sketchy character, coach/player relationships would go down the proverbial porcelain throne. If he'd declined to make a statement, Pierce would still be trying to dig the dagger from between his shoulder blades.

The next time, God forbid, a situation arises of this magnitude, Alford will think twice about saying anything. But I'm guessing Alford will again face the hail of bullets next to his players.

- by Jerod Leupold

We all need the support of others, especially in rough times. But it was not Steve Alford's job to elevate Pierre Pierce onto a pedestal for everyone to see as he heartily patted him on the back, gave a 10,000 watt smile, and waved off any wrongdoings in a

Pierce's family, friends, and highly paid lawyers should've been making a protective armor around him and crooning out support oodles of it. That was their right.

But instead, one of the highest-paid state employees and a role model for thousands of people nationwide used his public personality to sashay into the picture, leaving a very important person in the shadows

While people were focusing on Pierce and feeling sympathy for perhaps the perpetrator of a sexual assault, the victim was forced to cower in the shadows. She was forced to live without anyone in her . Not one person could stand up and tell her side or give her the same kind of glimmering recommendation. No one was standing up to tell how much of an upstanding person she was or how much they loved her. Her parents couldn't even do it. Everyone — her teammates and coaches included — had to stay silent, lest she be subject to more humiliation and

But all the while, she was scrutinized on message boards, in classrooms at the UI, and gossiped about at bars. Her motivations and even her story were questioned because, after all, how could a shining citizen such as Pierce ever commit such a heinous crime?

Amid the fanfare and circus showcase of support by Alford for Pierce, how could the victim not bargain for herself? Instead of being treated like a victim, she was treated like a criminal.

And because of it, not one single person could stand up for her.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. - The Gators finally made it.

The team that spent its formative years being coached by assistants from the football staff and playing in a dingy, dimly lit gym made it to No. 1 in the AP poll Monday for the first time in its 88-year history.

"I think we made it by a process of elimination," Florida coach Billy Donovan said.

The Gators (18-2, 7-0 Southeastern Conference) jumped from fourth to first after a week in which the three teams ahead of them - Arizona, Pittsburgh, and Texas - all lost, while they won twice to stretch their winning streak to 14 games.

College

Lest they get too excited, Florida's first game as a top-ranked team comes today at No. 6 Kentucky in a game that will decide the leader in the SEC East.

"The key is to be humble," Donovan said, "or this could be the shortest-lived stay at No. 1 in the history of college basketball."

Either way, it has been a long time coming. Before 1980, Florida played in the old Alligator Alley, a dusty little gym that seated 7,000. The Gators liked to schedule games for midday, hoping to gain an advantage from the sunlight shining through the windows and temporarily blinding opposing players.

It wasn't until 1960 that Florida emerged from the dark ages and hired a full-time basketball coach, Norm Sloan. Before that, the Gators normally found their Florida received 50 first-place votes and 1,764 points from the 72member national media panel to easily outdistance Arizona (16-2), which dropped after losing at home to Stanford on Jan. 30.

The Wildcats had 1,687 points, 130 more than Texas (14-3), which held third despite a loss at Kansas on Jan. 27.

Pittsburgh (15-2) dropped two places to fourth following a 67-65 loss to Syracuse.

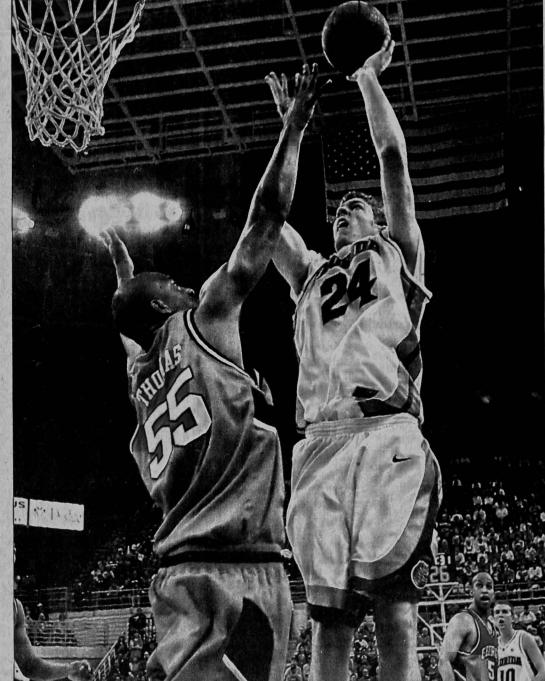

Led by Donovan's old boss, Rick Pitino, Louisville (16-1) jumped from eighth to No. 5, the Cardinals' highest ranking since being fifth in the poll released Feb. 14, 1994.

Their rise to the top has been sparked by a pair of freshmen, Matt Walsh and Anthony Roberson, who are the best first-year players at Florida since the arrival of Matt Bonner, Brett Nelson, and Justin Hamilton, who are seniors now.

Donovan said neither freshman has been jaded by the highly touted recruiting process they went through or the successes they enjoyed in high school.

"I think they both feel like they have something new to prove to people every day they walk out there," Donovan said.

Walsh, who started the season hot, isn't scoring so much but is still in the starting lineup.

The Florida Gators finally made it. The team was named No. 1 in the AP poll Monday for the first time in its 88-year history.

The Penn State's women's basketball team stayed in the AP poll this week, moving up to 13th place.

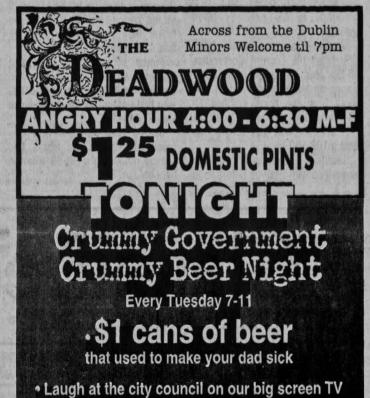

SPORTS BRIEF

Peyton claims Mike's booze did the talking

HONOLULU (AP) - Peyton Manning called teammate Mike Vanderjagt an "idiot kicker" at the Pro Bowl on Sunday, three days after Vanderjagt apologized for making disparaging remarks about the Indianapolis Colts quarterback.

Manning made the comment during a live interview on ABC. He also contended that Vanderjagt was "liquored up" at the time of the Canadian cable TV interview earlier this week in which he said Manning hould show more emotion.

"Here we are," Manning said. "I'm out at my third Pro Bowl, I'm about to go in and throw a touchdown to Jerry Rice, we're honoring the Hall of Fame, and we're talking about our idiot kicker who got liquored up and ran his mouth off."

After an impressive victory at Duke, the Huskies were a unanimous choice to replace the Blue Devils at No. 1 in the AP women's basketball poll on Monday.

Connecticut (20-0) is the only unbeaten team in Division I and has won a women's record 59straight games. The Huskies received all 44 first-place votes from a national media panel and had 1,100 points.

Duke (20-1), No. 1 in the first 12 polls of the season, slipped to second with 1,038 points.

This season marked the first time the Blue Devils had been ranked No. 1. Their hopes of staying there ended with a 77-65 loss to UConn on Feb. 1 in front of a full house at Cameron Indoor Stadium.

Connecticut's move to the top was expected and certainly nothing new for the Huskies, who coming into this season had been No. 1 in 49 of the previous 56 polls. They were No. 1 all last season, when they went 39-0 in winning their third national championship.

Does this mean UConn is the best team again?

"I have no idea," coach Geno Auriemma said. "Tye coached a lot of No. 1 teams in the country, and this one has a lot of those pieces missing. But so do a lot of other people.

"Who ever knows on Feb. 1 or 2? It just happens to be who's playing well at the time. If we played Duke again, who knows? If we played Tennessee on a neutral court, who knows what would happen? We're as good as anybody out there. Are we better? I don't know.

Connecticut beat Tennessee, 63-62, in overtime in Hartford on Jan. 4. Tennessee (18-3) has won nine straight since and moved up one spot to third with 997 points — 41 behind Duke.

No. 4 LSU also climbed one spot, while Kansas State slipped two places to fifth after a 74-69 loss at unranked Iowa State. The Wildcats bounced back with a 74-45 victory at then-No. 19 Oklahoma.

Stanford remained sixth, while North Carolina and Texas

Tech tied for seventh. Louisiana Tech was ninth and Purdue

Texas led the second 10 at No. 11, and Mississippi State moved up one place to 12th. Then it was Penn State, Arkansas, and Minnesota, followed by South Carolina, Georgia, Vanderbilt, UC Santa Barbara, and Washington.

The final five were Wisconsin-Green Bay, Villanova, Boston College, Oklahoma, and

Ohio State. Boston College (15-4), winner of four straight and eight of nine, returned after a two-week absence. The Eagles appeared in the first eight polls, dropped out for a week, came back at No. 24, then fell out the following week.

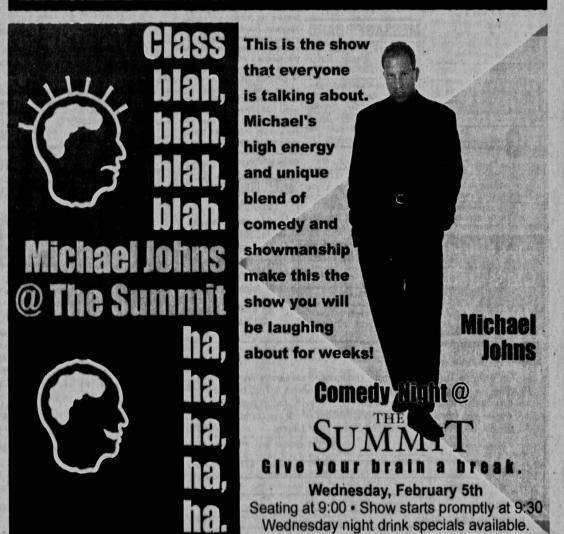

Arizona, 24th last week. dropped out after splitting two road games. The Wildcats (14-6), who had been ranked for nine weeks, lost at Oregon State in overtime and beat Oregon.

Washington (17-3) made the biggest jump within the poll, climbing from 25th to 20th after decisive victories over Southern California and UCLA. Washington's only loss in the last nine games was to Stanford.

Oklahoma, which lost to Texas in addition to Kansas State, fell five places to 24th for the biggest drop.

Connecticut lost national player of the year Sue Bird and three other starters from last season's team, but Auriemma has the program to the point where he can just plug in replacements and keep going.

MIAMI — In need of a spark, the Miami Heat got one from an unlikely source.

LaPhonso Ellis keyed a pivotal first-half burst, and Eddie Jones continued his strong play of late with 26 points as the Heat posted a 99-79 triumph over the Atlanta Hawks Monday night.

Miami trailed, 22-13, in the final minute of the first quarter, but Ellis had eight points in a 17-0 spurt that gave the Heat a lead they never relinquished. Ellis, who had just 20 points in his last four games combined, buried a pair of 3-pointers in the burst and finished with a season-high 15 points.

Jones made 7-11 shots, including 5-8 from 3-point range, in his 600th game. He has at least 22 points in four of his last six games and helped the Heat beat the Hawks in Atlanta for the 19th time in 28 meetings.

Shareef Abdur-Rahim had 19 points and 10 rebounds for the Hawks, who had a three-game winning streak snapped.

New Jersey 109, Seattle 108

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. -Jason Kidd's return did not cool Kenyon Martin's hot streak.

Kidd made a pair of 3-pointers in overtime, and Martin had a careerhigh 35 points as the New Jersey Nets held on for a victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

Kidd had missed the previous two games after straining his groin in the Nets' Jan. 29 victory over Washington. Martin took over as the team's leader during Kidd's absence, averaging 23.6 points and 16.3 rebounds in his previous three Martin — angered by his omission from the Eastern Conference All-Star team — continued his dominance on Monday. He made 13-18 shots from the floor, grabbed 12 rebounds, and started the overtime with a three-point play to give the Nets a 103-100 edge.

Seattle's Desmond Mason responded with a lay-up before Kidd buried a 3-pointer. The Sonics made consecutive baskets for a 106-106 tie, and Kidd sank another shot from beyond the arc with 91 seconds to Former Net Kenny Anderson made a running lay-up with 30 seconds left, and Kidd missed a potential game-sealing 3-pointer with 12 seconds remaining. Mason, who scored 16 of his 30 points after the third quarter, missed an open 3pointer as time expired.

Kidd finished with 20 points and 12 assists, and Kerry Kittles scored 17 points for New Jersey, which squandered a 17-point lead in the second half but held on for its fifth

Rashard Lewis scored 25 points, and Anderson collected 15 and eight assists as Seattle lost its thirdstraight visit to Continental Airlines

New Orleans 103, Boston 96

NEW ORLEANS — The Boston Celtics could not handle Jamal Mashburn. Now they will have to handle a season-high losing streak.

Mashburn collected 30 points, eight assists, and six rebounds as the New Orleans Hornets dealt the Celtics a season-worst fourthstraight defeat.

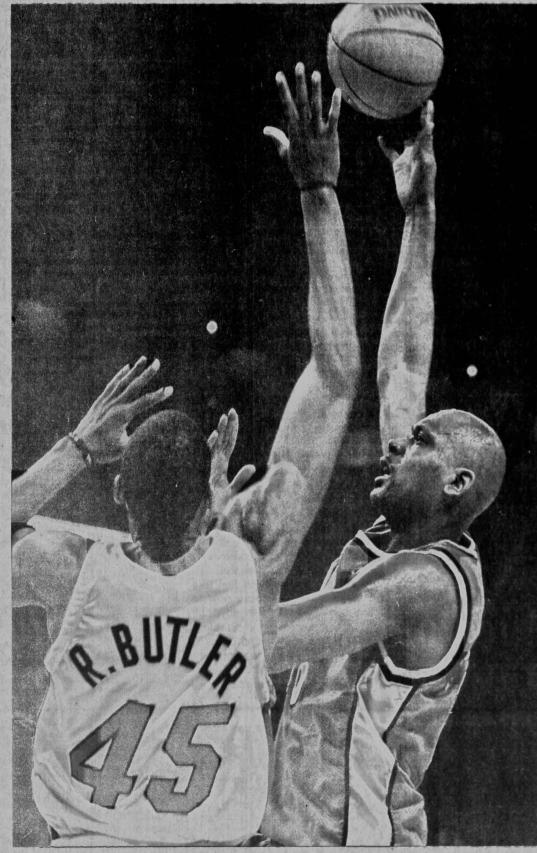

David Wesley added 18 points and P.J. Brown 12 and 12 rebounds as the Hornets, who had lost four of five, avoided falling below .500 for the first time this season.

The Hornets went on a 28-7 run bridging the first and second quarters and took their biggest lead, 43-27, on a pair of free throws by Jerome Moiso with 7:27 left in the

The Celtics got within 69-68 on a 3-pointer by Paul Pierce with 3:09 left in the third quarter, but New Orleans scored the final five points of the period, and Boston got no closer than three points over the final 12 minutes.

Pierce scored 27 points, and Antoine Walker and rookie J.R. Bremer had 20 apiece for the Celtics, who had not lost four in a row since Feb. 21-March 1.

Boston had won the first two meetings between the teams this season, including a 93-83 triumph here on Jan. 8.

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. - Detroit Pistons center Ben Wallace left the Feb. 1 game against New Jersey at halftime after learning that his mother had been taken to an Alabama hospital, where she later died.

Pistons President Joe Dumars who was in contact with Wallace's siblings throughout the game said Wallace's mother, Sadie Wallace, passed away Feb. 1 in Dumars said Wallace and his wife flew to Alabama on the team plane to be with his family.

Wallace, who will start for the East in the All-Star Game next week, tied a team record with seven blocks in the first half against the Nets. He also grabbed seven rebounds and scored two points.

Baseball commissioner brings out big guns

NEW YORK (AP) - The baseball commissioner's office has hired a former federal prosecutor to work on its evaluation of Pete Rose's application for reinstatement.

Martin Weinstein, a partner in the Washington office of Foley & Lardner, has been working on the Rose case since shortly after the career hits leader applied for reinstatement in 1997, according to Bob DuPuy, baseball's chief operating officer.

"We hired him when Rose filed the application, because he has experience in white-collar areas," DuPuy said Monday night. Weinstein's involvement was first reported by The New York Times in Tuesday's editions. DuPuy played down Weinstein's

"He's not in charge of any investigation," DuPuy said. "There's an ongoing process of reviewing Peter's application." In addition to his work for baseball, DuPuy is a partner at Foley & Lardner. Weinstein is a former assistant U.S. attorney in Atlanta. Baseball officials were surprised by recent revelations that the IRS had placed a lien on a home Rose owns in suburban Los Angeles, and that Rose was seen gambling in a Las Vegas casino last month and also spotted in sports book. The IRS claims Rose owes $151,689 in federal taxes from 1998, according to the lien.

touted two other No. 1 and No. 2 matchups. Greg Jones of West Virginia and Chris Pendleton of Oklahoma State butted heads for the 174-pound bragging rights, and Jon Trenge of Lehigh scrambled against Muhammad Lawal of Oklahoma State.

Jones kept Pendleton scoreless in the first period before opening up a 3-1 lead in the second. Pendleton escaped twice from Jones takedowns. Jones was victorious with a score of 7-3.

Lawal lost to No. 2 Jon Trenge, 6-4. The match went to sudden victory conditions during the third period when the score was tied, 4-4. Trenge shot a takedown with 13 seconds left for the win.

clearly frustrated when speaking about the issue on Jan. 29, and it's evident that the person who most wants to fix the situation is the forward himself. He has committed himself to watching game tapes and working with coaches to help him stay out of precarious spots.

"I've just got to put myself in a position not to get those fouls," Worley said.

Alford said he and his staff may be forced to begin taking preventative measures such as calling a time-out after Worley's first foul or immediately sending in a substitution after his first infraction to avoid a snowball effect like the one during the opening minutes of the Purdue game.

Neither Alford nor Worley think the blame lies with Big Ten officials, who often are accused of labeling players with reputations - though Alford did say his forward is the subject of some conversations between his bench and certain referees who claim Worley is fouling on "every play."

"If they call a foul, it's obviously a foul," Worley said. "There's not much you can say

While battling his troubles on the court, Worley is also fighting inner demons about his play. He wants to be the leader Alford so desperately hoped he would be at the onset of the season and feels he can't be that go-to man while on the bench. Still, teammates remain positive when it comes to Worley's effort and demeanor.

"Everyone has his bad games, and he'll definitely bounce back," said center Jared Reiner. "You've just got to worry about the things you can control, not the ones that are out of your control."

Worley and the Hawkeyes will travel to Penn State on Wednesday.

Robbins has bipolar disorder, apologizes agent for Barret Robbins confirmed Monday that the Oakland Raiders' All-Pro center has bipolar disorder, and that he expressed "remorse and deep sadness" for missing the Super Bowl.

Robbins remains hospitalized because of his condition, agent Drew Pittman said in a statement to ESPN. "Barret would like to express his events surrounding the Super Bowl," the statement said. "He knows many people have been hurt by his actions, including his family, his teammates, the Raider organiza-

Haddy motivates players and himself

"He gets us motivated," forward Jason Stuzynski said, who has been traveling back and forth from the sophomore and varsity squads. "He starts out talking, but the closer it gets to being time, he gets us going so we're ready to play."

Close to tip-off, Haddy gives a composed lecture highlighting atchup and more fun damentals, voice increasing as he draws the attention of every student. "Thirty-two minutes of Clipper basketball" ends the speech and the boys run down the corridor to begin.

After a 5-0 Iowa City Regina run, Haddy takes a time-out to emphasize settling down, but the boys turn the ball over and soon are down by 10.

In the second quarter, the team looks rattled on a strong defensive press, isn't making rebounds, and is forcing shots in the lane. Halftime: 29-21.

Despite first-half struggles, Haddy focuses on the facts: Three Clear Creek turnovers to Regina's 11, a need to box out, find shooters, and be a halfcourt team. Positivity flows into the second half, but the deficit increases to 49-32. Haddy's blood pressure boils as he yells about playing defense and attempts to recharge the tired group. But there seems to be hope in the final quarter, as Stuzynski turns a three-point play, Mark Pitlick makes a steal, and Trey Scheetz and Stuzynski pair for a lay-up to cut the score to 55-51 with under two minutes remaining. Stockman connects for a 3pointer with one minute left, and after a near pickoff at half-court, Regina calls a time-out.

After a pair of rebounds, the remain for a final play, but the Clippers lose the ball out of bounds and the game, 55-54. "I'm upset," Haddy says to the slumping players back in the locker room. "I hate to lose, but I can't fault the effort in the fourth quarter." Stockman bites his lip, Pitlick fights off tears, and Stuzynski adjusts the athletic tape in his hand. "I know you're upset about this and it will drive us to be better," Haddy says.

Road to coaching

The words come easily to the Clippers coach — he's been living the mantra for years.

In high school, Haddy was a four-sport jock — baseball, basketball, golf, and football. But as a basketball player, he spent most of his time sitting on the bench.

"I never quit," Haddy said. "I was always hustling, but I had the bad combination of not being tall or fast, so I tried to be smarter. I wanted to stay involved with basketball, and I believed I had the tools to do it. I knew always wanted to coach whether I was All-State or never played."

And he's doing it. In his first year with 10 freshmen, Haddy went 9-7. Afterwards, he was promoted to coaching the sophomore team.

"I had too high of expectations. I didn't push enough and was more friends with the guys and less of a coach. Going 4-17 that year really hurt, but you have to make yourself better. You have to continue teaching and studying at the same time.' So Haddy continued his offseason tradition of going to coaching clinics, watching colleges, and trying to draft new ideas. Even the Iowa basketball team gave him some inspiration.

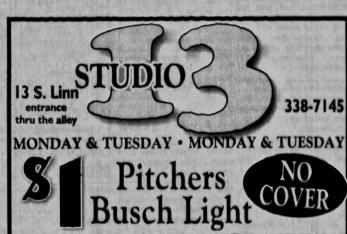

"We went to an Iowa game," freshmen coach Supple said. "Illinois ran an out-of-bounds play, and we looked at each other and said, 'We're going to put that in practice tomorrow.' And we did.'

But more than his eagerness to learn from the coaching-rich university atmosphere, Supple said, his colleague took in information from everyone. "He's always saying, What do you do?' I think older coaches wouldn't ask for suggestions, but he's like a sponge. He always wants to know more."

Family ties

Growing up, Matt and his father, Wayne Haddy, had a sports connection — rooting for the Jets, Yankees, and Iowa teams.

plays as well as the coaches a week after the season started." Now that his son is coaching, Wayne Haddy isn't too surprised, but he said he gets more nervous watching Matt Haddy coach than when he and his wife, Charlotte Haddy, would

"I could tell early on he had an aptitude for sports," Wayne

Haddy said. "His natural skills in the sport were OK, but were never as good as his being able to understand the nuances of the plays. He would know the watch their son in high school. "I think it's because the consequences are more dependent on him. He's more emotional now. I remember times he was wishing he could play more, I told him, No one will remember much in high school; they remember after that. Put your training into the future."

Charlotte Haddy admits she doesn't know much about the game, but after receiving a book about basketball for Christmas. she can identify the traveling call and the 3-point line. Mostly though, she worries about his education.

"I wish he would study as hard as he works on coaching he'd be at Harvard instead of Iowa," she said. Matt Haddy says his UI coursework in history and political science comes first, but he seldom questions his chosen after-hours vocation.

"It's outstanding that an 18year-old kid has the chance to coach. I haven't seen many problems with it - sometimes I'm not taken so seriously, and sometimes I wonder if getting a job so early will hurt me, but I really think I'm doing what I want to do."
