Daily Iowan reporter Grant Schulte and Publisher William Casey were crowned for their efforts. It was the Daily Iowan Newspaper Foundation annual awards weekend.

Schulte, a 23-year-old UI student, was named Best Writer at the awards banquet. Casey, who has worked for the newspaper since 1974, was recognized as Best Publisher.

"I was ecstatic to be named a Spider-Man god..." said Schulte, adding that he was happy to be named.

Casey, who was named Best Publisher, said he was honored by the award, which is given to journalists under the age of 40.

Schulte said he was "shocked" and remembers applying but "never expected to win."

"A native of Iowa City, the journalist and German double major expanded his writing world. His first work was a bit smaller, 450-page novel about Spider-Man that he co-wrote with a friend who is in fifth grade.

"I was very much a part of a Spider-Man God... I actually still have it now in my closet," said Schulte, who submitted articles about his work.

Changes loom for local Gazette

BY CALVIN HENNICK
THE DAILY IOWAN

Somearea townshave been quizzing whether the Iowa City Gazette will still be in publication next month, especiallyafter the July 1st redesign change proposed in a Feb. 3 column by Gazette's Editor Mark Bowden.

Gazette officials stated that those changes included the end of a separate Iowa City edition and the addition of other changes, design changes promised in a Feb. 3 column by Gazette's Editor Mark Bowden.

Gazette officials noted that those changes included the end of a separate Iowa City edition and said the newspaper's Iowa City saleswoman, 311 E. Market St., would remain. They would not, however, outline that those changes specifically included the end of a separate Iowa City edition.

Gazette Communications began publishing the Iowa City Gazette, an edition of the Cedar Rapids-based newspaper which specifically served Iowa City's readers and advertisers, in 1986. According to the Gazette Web site, the Iowa City edition has a daily circulation of 28,000.

Dean blasts Bush & Dem opponents for being like Republicans

Howard Dean, the former Vermont governor and a current candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, blasted President Bush and accused his Democratic competitors of falling in line with the president's policies.

"We ought to be allowing our leaders to have the courage to stand up for our beliefs and values," Dean said. "And they shouldn't be running away from us.

Dean called the election bill an "unholy mandate" and voiced his opposition to provisions requiring school districts to allow the Boy Scouts to meet in school facilities and protecting students' rights to pray in classrooms without prior approval of the principal. He made a compelling case for using federal resources to help schools that lack the funds to focus on educating and involving students, especially when children are in desperate need of that education.

Dean called the administration's action "stunning" and said that it "ought to be a source of shame for our country.

"It's happening in Vermont because we put money in their pockets," he said.

Dean asserted that he would work to restore the budgets of schools and protect students' rights to pray in classrooms.

Dean said that he would oppose the election bill as well as the school choice bill. He said that he would oppose the school choice bill because it would allow private schools to be exempt from state regulations and requirements.

Dean also said that he would support the appointment of conservatives to the Supreme Court to protect the constitutional rights of all citizens.

Dean said that he would support the appointment of conservatives to the Supreme Court because it is a "national issue that affects all of us."

U.S. troops pack Kuwait

BY STEVEN GUTKIN

Kuwait — The key to winning an expected war in Iraq is ensuring that tens of thousands of U.S. and British soldiers have adequate supplies of food, water, quarters in addition to ensuring traffic throughout the oil-rich emirate and the words of an invasion. Britain is sending 35,000 troops - a quarter of its force in Iraq - to Kuwait, and the 6th Transportation Battalion, which is operating in Kuwait, is expected to climb to 113,000 U.S. troops by Feb. 15 - enough to launch at least the first stage of an invasion. Britain is sending 8,000 troops - a quarter of the army and the biggest naval task force in two decades.

The timing of any possible war could be driven by diplomatic maneuverings that may set up and supply an invasion force. In Iraq now are thousands of troops toward building new roads, camps, and living quarters in addition to ensuring adequate supplies of fuel, water, electricity, weaponry, ammunition, and volunteers. Judging from the intense activity at Kuwaiti ports, the massive military convoys blocking traffic throughout the oil-rich emirate and the words of an invasion may set up and supply an invasion force.

Bowl policy raises eyebrows

The Orange Bowl Committee reported a significant number of travelers from the UI to attend the events the committee had scheduled, such as team and administrative handshakes and running events, Carter said. However, Thawton said, he was so proud that the events at the Orange Bowl are beneficial to board members — or are even important at all.

The board did not accept his claim to Miami because he said a subcommittee investigated the members’ perks.

Kelsay said it is unusual for misuse to discourage abduction victims because an indictable criminal act is a necessary condition to warrant a prosecution.

Troy recorded a call to Miami, he said.

The Orange Bowl Committee subcommittee decided on a call to Miami a big winner, expecting over $378,000 in revenue from stamping expenses covered by the BCS game.

The UI Orange Bowl Committee reported a paid attendance of 19,384, the highest ever in the UI’s history.

Law group weighs in against terror policies

BY GINA HOLLAND

Seattle — The nation’s largest lawyers group is set to consider a resolution authorizing its government to give legal rights to Americans who are accused of terrorism.

The American Bar Association also is expected to pass for the first time a resolution it says would afford some constitutional rights to American enemy combatants.

The bar association would argue that the surveillance of American enemy combatants would ruin American foreign policy by discouraging allies from providing data on the terrorist networks.

"These reports are emerging now right now," said Neal Sonnett, a partner at Holland and Knight in Seattle, a large law firm.

"It’s too early to say if they mean anything.

The government will not be providing to Americans and order more oversight of wiretaps against Americans and order more oversight of wiretaps in the United States.

"We can not allow individual rights to be eroded as part of the war on terror."

Shuttle probe focuses on ice block

BY PAUL RECER

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Investigators are searching for evidence that a block of ice big enough to damage Columbia's wing may have formed in a wastewater vent, a problem that plagued an earlier shuttle flight.

They also are looking closely at what may be the low-pressure fuel tank, a fact that provided a similar issue on the Columbia's maiden voyage in February 2003, and a 300-pound mesh of a leading edge component, possibly it is a sudden temperature rise moments before the shuttle broke apart.

One day after Columbia’s Jan. 16, 2003, failure, military radar detected an object moving rapidly away from the shuttle. NASA said it was unknown what the object was, but the possibility it had been a piece from a wastewater vent investigation had a detailed surveillance for evidence that the shuttle may have lost ice.

"The wastewater vent investigation had a detailed surveillance for evidence that the shuttle may have lost ice," Rivkin said.

Intelligence officials were concerned the ice may break the shuttle wing during a critical entry that they entered the atmosphere and would result in a break of the ice block.

That they noted, which was not necessary for Columbia to go into a steady science mission, was left with ice on its belly and two pieces being added, and the wastewater vent could not be seen in the radar from the seven satellites.

Businessman Dad Bill Pullos contrives to the dinner table in the buff but only because he is an older brother Oliver (Owen Philips) longs to work with business dollars in order to give off the façade of being human, just like Igby’s godmother, D.H. Leslie Goldberg.

First time director/screenwriter Burr Steers biggest coup in Igby is that he seems to unexpectedly understand the life of an “old money” family. Like Robert Ballardbefore him with the movie Ordinary People, Steers is able to grasp the implied differences between Bouquettes girls and Walladdys girls. He knows where these families lean and what he refer once are they. He seems to comprehend how to throw a party in the Hamptons, how to deal a high-stakes drama and make folks play the dialogue, lonely world of privilege.

It’s this knowledge that lends credibility to Steers’ notion allowing the audience to feel comfortable and fully absorbed into the Slocomb’s whirled affair. It helps that Sloomb has an undeniably great cast. From Tuesday, February 11

In My Opinion
Should Iowa City bars become 21 and over?

Sara Mendoza

No, I feel that bars serve a social purpose and are a place to go to have a good time and to get rid of drinking at bars as an option for people to get drunk.

Nicholas Eggers

No, because I feel that bars are a place to go to have a good time and to get rid of drinking at bars as an option for people to get drunk.

Lindsey Wolf

No, because in my opinion bars are a place to go to have a good time and to get rid of drinking at bars as an option for people to get drunk.

Nick Dubbins

No, it's not something that I feel comfortable with as an option for people to get drunk.

Jesse Elliott

There's no reason that we should ban drinking that isn't already illegal. It's just a matter of personal choice and preference in a safe environment. If we were to ban it, it would simply drive people to more remote areas, which can be dangerous. We should focus on education and awareness instead of prohibition. IOWA WOMEN’S GYMNASTICS

BY BRIAN TRIPPLET

It was clear the Iowa women’s gymnastics team did something special on the campus of Michigan State University during the recent NCAA championships, the second time in three years that the Hawkeyes steamrolled past the Rockets.

The No. 15 Hawkeyes accomplished the rare feat by placing first in all four events during the meet at the East Lansing, Mich., campus.

The women’s Big Ten meet at Michigan State was the third-highest scoring team in team history for Iowa. Iowa scored a team season-high 193.825 for first place in the all-around competition, with the rest of the team placing third (188.325). Iowa also won the floor exercise (49.25), the bars (48.15) and the beam (49.15) events.

Iowa started its streak of success off the vault where the Hawkeyes posted a score of 45.775, the highest score in school history. Iowa led the event, with team mates Annie Rutt and Kortney Wilbourn tying for second place.

Alex Mady took first place on the uneven bars, and team mates Nicole Wong scored a career-high 9.925 in the event. Iowa gymnastics coach Kevin Cole帮忙 in the competition, said it was an overall team effort.

"We’re happy with the way we’ve been doing everything in the event," Cole said. "I think we’re ready to take on the challenge of the next few meets and we’ve been able to get better each time out."

New Mariners manager ready for spring start

BY TIM KORTE
ASSOCIATE NEWS

PEORIA, Ariz. — Bob Melvin has spent the last three months reaching out to players. Finally, it's time to put on the Mariners and get to work.

"I've been getting out, and just trying to get out, to see what they hired me to do, Meelman said Thursday. "I'm anxious to get out on the field."".

The Mariners are getting an early start on spring training. Practice and catchers reported Sunday, and work begins today as Seattle prepares for a season-opening series against the Angels in Anaheim, Calif.

For Melvin, hired to replace the departed Lou Piniella, this day couldn't have come soon enough.

"I'm still sleeping but not too much," he said.

Melvin is taking over the Mariners after four seasons as a major-league bench coach, the last two with the Arizona Diamondbacks. He played 18 years in the majors with seven teams, a journeyman catcher who had a brief stint in the majors in Seattle.

Now, he's managing age 41, one year younger than when Mariners players Edgar Martinez and Jamie Moyer retired. Melvin replaced the elegant Martinez, who played in the majors for 18 years. He took over the team last season as one of the best closer to his form.

Melvin was involved if he will throw better kick balls, as he did the batting order or how he pitch in certain situations last season, and Melvin often stops whatever he's doing in places statistically. "It almost makes you hang your head because you have so many left-handed options here," he said, "and you have to play different positions. I had a tough week, too. I finally quit doing it.".

Melvin has asked the first office to do something to make his job easier. He has had to relearn the ropes for seven years.

"I do have that to draw on," Melvin said. "I think we have an intangible boost.".

The Mariners are getting an assistant catcher who had a decent career to show them what they can provide a little help. Melvin said, "I've got to get on this team with a lot of heart."

"I don't think they're that right," Melvin said. "I think they're doing the right thing to do.

"His plate to delegate to Joe Mauer, the former Minnesota manager," Melvin said. "He's not a catcher. I've got to get a handle on that."

Melvin's Mariners expectations haven't changed in Seattle. "I don't feel like we won last year either, but we didn't enough good to reach the playoffs," Melvin said. "But at least we can see the playoffs last season didn't get them to the playoffs from the AL West.

"Seattle has the time with the Diamondbacks, which included a fall from the 2001 World Series.

"We're trying to win a World Series with the Mariners," Melvin said. "I'm happy. I'm happy with the way they're able to do it.

"The Mariners is a great team," Melvin said. "I think we have a chance to do that."

"We're getting a great team," Melvin said. "I think we have a chance to do that."

"Every opportunity they're able to do it," Melvin said. "We have a chance to do that."

"The Mariners is looking for part-time work."
