Abduction story false; father apologizes

BY PHIL DAVIDSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

The father of a UI student who falsely reported being abducted apologized Sunday for making the story appear credible by allowing it to appear in numerous media outlets.

Kenneth Culp, a UI associate professor of nursing, said his interviews with the media legitimized the story his daughter, Tiffany Culp, told him.

The 19-year-old UI photo-journalism student walked out of a drawing class Feb. 4 and did not return home until the following night. She reported that she left class for a "breath of fresh air" when a gunman directed her to her car, tied and blindfolded her, and drove her to a house in Rock Island County, Ill., where she was held captive for 33 hours before escaping through a window.

Tiffany Culp made appearances on Feb. 6 on TV news in the Quad Cities. Her father's account of her story appeared on the Feb. 7 front page of The Daily Iowan, generating a lot of interest around campus and the state.

An investigation by UI police determined Feb. 7 that the story was false — information that appeared Feb. 8 as a headline on CNN.

"I'm very apologetic to the university community," Kenneth Culp said.

The Culp family filed a missing-persons report with Iowa City police Feb. 5 after losing contact with their daughter for 19 hours.

Tiffany Culp returned home late that night, minutes after news of her appearance was on the nightly news. Kenneth Culp reported her abduction story to

The Daily Iowan the next day.

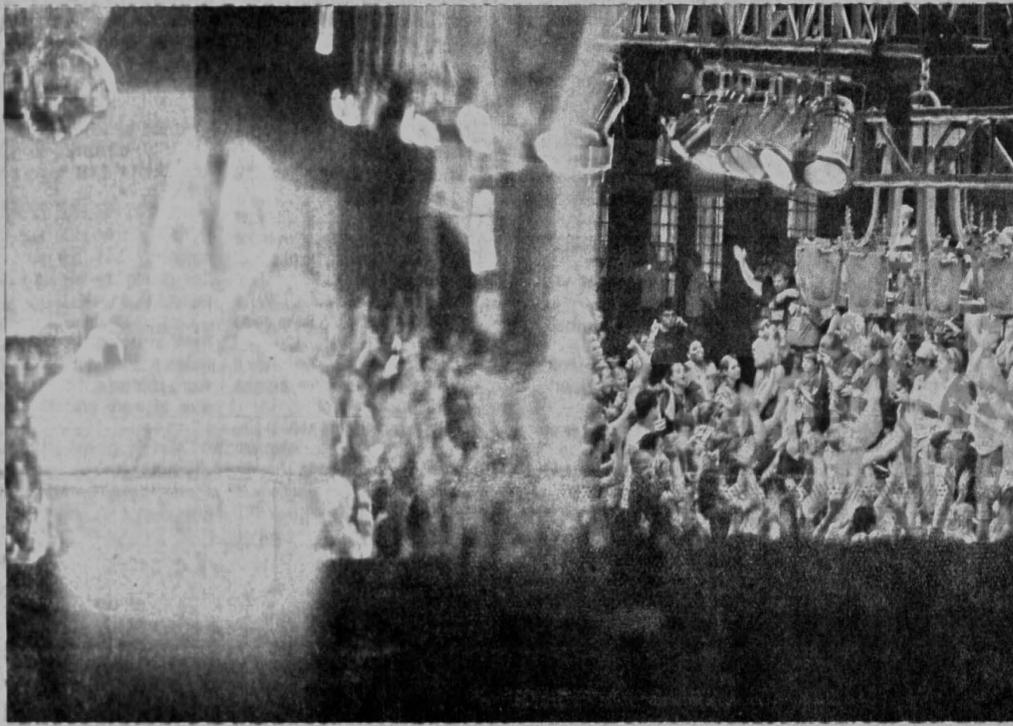

Kenneth Culp said he did not intentionally mislead or deceive the media with his report.

"The University of Iowa responded in an appropriate manner to the sequence of events as they unfolded," he said.

His comments Sunday were in stark contrast to those he

A candle in the balcony of the IMU Main Lounge burns to honor those children unable to attend the Dance Marathon festivities on Feb. 7 and 8 while Dance Marathon participants dance into the final hours of the event.

BY KAREN HEINSELMAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

After spending almost 24 sleepless hours on their feet last weekend, a fatigued and sweaty mass of dancers summoned enough energy to celebrate trouncing last year's Dance Marathon earnings by more than $80,000.

Almost 1,000 UI students roared when score cards flashed the 2003 record donation of $607,385.09 on Feb. 8.

A couple songs later, students and the families they sponsored poured out from the IMU Main Lounge in a sea of purple, red, green, white, and blue T-shirts. Some wore smiles of tired satisfaction — others walked arm-in-arm, crying quietly after a solemn tribute to the Dance Marathon children who have passed on.

The weekend was an emotional roller coaster for all participants.

Gretchen Thompson has attended numerous Dance Marathons with her 9-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, who has battled cancer, and she said she knows the routine.

"I'm pumped right now," she said with a grin, with two hours left to dance. The Dubuque mother said it gets better every year. "The love in everybody's hearts. The commitment of the kids, old friendships rekindled..."

Numerically, Dance Marathon is also growing.

In its first outing in 1994, Dance Marathon brought in $31,000 and sponsored 26 families. This year, the student-run philanthropy had more than 950 registered

Board's free bowl provokes questions

BY CASEY WAGNER
THE DAILY IOWAN

A dozen members of the board that governs UI athletics accepted free tickets to the Orange Bowl last month — and all but one brought along guests on the university's tab, UI records show.

At least one member of the Board in Control of Athletics refused the free trip, and he is raising questions about whether accepting the tickets was against board policy and/or compromises the mission of the panel.

UI law Professor James Tomkovicz said members of the Athletics Board could be influenced by the gifts and said that board policy prohibits members from accepting such perks as tickets.

Other board members said they were filling their obligations to the university by attending the south Florida bowl game.

The board recommends general policy guidelines for UI intercollegiate athletics.

"It wasn't just a trip to the beach," said Keith Carter, a UI

Officials expect large turnout in bond vote

BY JESSICA REESE
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Johnson County auditor is expecting the largest bond vote in Iowa City School District history to match or break all previous school-voting records by the time polls close Tuesday night.

But only a few of almost two dozen voters stopped on Iowa City streets said they feel informed enough to make a decision.

"I don't know anything about it," said Iowa City resident Ann Clemens, who said she still plans to vote Tuesday.

If passed, the $39 million school bond would raise property taxes by an annual average of $31.56 for residential and $63 for commercial property per $100,000 of appraised land value. The money would fund the construction of three new schools and improvements to existing buildings.

The bond was proposed in response to school overcrowding as well as limited accessibility, inadequate media centers, and insufficient storage space. The district has 12 schools over student capacity and 37 temporary classrooms.

As the final hours tick away, many voters said they are still

U.N. arms experts report no progress

BY RAJIV CHANDRASEKARAN
WASHINGTON POST

BAGHDAD, Iraq — The top U.N. arms experts said Sunday night that they were unable to reach agreement with Saddam Hussein's government on several key weapons issues they had traveled here to resolve in a bid to build support for continuing inspections.

The two chief U.N. inspectors, Hans Blix and Mohamed El Baradei, failed to come away with the top three items on their wish list during meetings with high-level Iraqi officials on Feb. 8 and Sunday: significant amounts of new evidence about Iraq's past weapons programs, safety guarantees from Iraq for reconnaissance aircraft they want to fly over the country, and a high-level declaration criminalizing the production of nuclear, chemical, or biological arms.

• Kuwait is bustling as troops arrive.
• France and Germany will propose way to avoid war.

Blix sought to cast the talks in the most positive light possible by saying he saw the beginning of an Iraqi understanding that it must seriously observe U.N. demands for disarmament, but he acknowledged at a news conference Sunday evening that he had not achieved a "breakthrough."

Iraqi concessions on substantive issues, he said, were "less good" than he was expecting.

The results of the meetings could have a far-reaching effect on the diplomatic brawl at the United Nations over U.S. demands that the inspections cease and that military force to topple Saddam be approved by the Security Council. U.N. officials said the discussions will play a significant role in shaping a crucial progress report that Blix plans to give the council on Friday, and lack of agreement likely will be seized upon by the Bush administration to reinforce its case that the inspections are not working.

In remarks delivered to congressional Republicans before Blix spoke Sunday, President

Bush said Saddam "wants the world to think that hide-and-seek is a game that we should play."

"It's over," Bush said. "It's a moment of truth for the United Nations. The United Nations gets to decide shortly whether or not it is going to be relevant in terms of keeping the peace, whether or not its words mean anything."

The inspectors did receive several documents that Iraqi officials said would answer long-standing questions about Iraq's past nuclear, biological, and chemical-weapons programs, specifically the production of anthrax bacteria and

DI reporter, publisher honored

BY LEA FITZGERALD
THE DAILY IOWAN

Daily Iowan reporter Grant Schulte and Publisher William Casey were rewarded for their contribution to journalism at the Iowa Newspaper Foundation annual conference over the past weekend.

Casey publisher

Schulte, a 20-year-old UI sophomore, was named Feb. 7 as one of three Young Iowa Journalist of the Year, making him one of the youngest recipients of the award, which is given to journalists under the age of 30.

Schulte said he was "shocked" and remembers applying but "never expected to win."

A native of Iowa City, the journalism and German double-major is no stranger to the writing world. His first work was a handwritten, 800-page novel about Spider-Man that he co-wrote with a friend when in fifth grade.

"I was somewhat of a Spider-Man geek ... I actually still have it in my closet," said Schulte, a licensed pilot.

For his latest achievement, he submitted articles about UI alumnus and author Max Alan Collins, the trial of convicted double-murderer Jonathan Lee Memmer, and misappropriated funds. Schulte started his career at The Daily Iowan as a freshman and one of the student paper's scholarship recipients in June of 2001. He has covered courts, City Council, and cops.

"Grant Schulte is a good writer and a great reporter," judges said. "Every story was a delight to read, from beginning to end. Grant never failed to make you feel the emotions of his story subjects."

Schulte's future plans include studying abroad in Germany, working for a large daily newspaper, and eventually writing a novel.

Other Young Iowa Journalist of the Year recipients were Staci Hupp of the Des Moines Register and Erin Jordan of the Cedar Rapids Gazette.

The newspaper group's Distinguished Service Award was awarded Feb. 7 to Daily Iowan Publisher Casey. The UI alumnus started out at The Daily Iowan in 1972 as a truck driver, quickly ascending the ladder and becoming publisher in 1976. Casey will celebrate his 27th year as publisher in July.

Newspaper association officials praised Casey for helping start several journalism careers and launching a scholarship program in 1987 that has given more than $650,000 in tuition money to promising young journalists and Daily Iowan staffers.

The newspaper gives out three or four full in-state tuition scholarships every year to high-school seniors. They are eligible to receive the money until they graduate provided that they continue to make progress on the newspaper and in school.

"It has added bright and committed students and has served as a good cornerstone to the program," Casey said.

Others honored with the Distinguished Service Award include Pulitzer Prize-winner Michael Gartner, the former editor and president of the Des

STATE BRIEF

Statehouse Dems push education bills

DES MOINES (AP) — Democrats plan to focus on education in the fifth week of the legislative session by introducing bills in the House that require character training and community service to be part of a student's primary education.

"We promised to make character education and community service one of our cornerstones of school improvement efforts," said Rep. Dick Myers, D-Coralville. "We're making progress, and we're going to introduce legislation ..."

He said the bills have made it through the committee process with bipartisan support. Myers said schools need to play a role in teaching citizenship and character because some students do not get those values at home. "Some children don't have that advantage," he said. "We believe that teaching our children about community service, and citizenship, and trust, and responsibility, and respect for their teachers makes it easier for children to learn in school."

He said he supports making it part of a high-school curriculum for students to become involved in public service.

"I think it's important for children to have a connection with their community, and their state, and their country as they go through school," Myers said.

Senators also have begun to put together legislation that would make preschool available to more young children and college accessible to more graduating high-school seniors.

Called the 90/90 plan, the idea was introduced by Gov. Tom Vilsack in his Condition of the State address.

City, panel work to straighten out airport

BY INGA BEYER
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Airport Commission and Iowa City City Council will meet tonight in an attempt to turn the financially troubled Iowa City Municipal Airport into a self-sufficient, profitable endeavor.

The meeting is intended to clarify the airport's business-planning process and sale of the facility's aviation commerce park.

"We are hoping to find a way to make a plan to make the airport self-sufficient," said Councilor Connie Champion.

The airport, 1801 S. Riverside Drive, which operates semi-autonomously under the control of the five-member Airport Commission, receives up to 70 percent of its operational money from the city's general fund, which is derived from property taxes. For years, city officials have expressed concern about the airport's operation and management.

"I believe operational costs [taxpayer support] is the most critical immediate challenge," City Manager Steve Atkins wrote in a Jan. 21 letter to the airport's manager, Ron O'Neil. "Assessing regional roles and economic values may be important, but I don't see how that would generate income." Atkins has said O'Neil's approach to planning does not "satisfactorily address day-to-day operational needs" or generate income.

City officials hope the Aviation Commerce Park, a 54-acre area next to the airport, will soon generate income for the airport.

The commission wants to sell the land to pay off $1.6 million that was spent to install the park's infrastructure. Ideally, the commission visualized renting the 17 lots, which vary in size from 35,000 to 313,000-square-feet, with long-term leases for profit.

"[Leasing] wasn't a popular choice," said Tracy Overton, the regional director of Iowa Realty Co. Inc.

There were several interested buyers, but no one was willing to lease the land, said Overton, who has been working on the project for almost a year.

The Airport Commission then re-evaluated its strategy and got approval from the Federal Aviation Administration to sell the grounds.

"That has generated a lot of interest," Overton said. "We have a number of buyers we're working with who have expressed interest in the lots."

He said he couldn't reveal the names of possible buyers or elaborate on development for reasons of confidentiality.

O'Neil said he hopes the meeting will allow the commission to put together a formal business and strategic plan. The commission asked the council for funding to hire an outside consultant to assist it.

"We have heard no formal reply back yet [from the council]," O'Neil said.

Changes loom for local Gazette

BY CALVIN HENNICK
THE DAILY IOWAN

Some around town have been questioning whether the Iowa City Gazette will still be in publication next month, especially in light of major content and design changes promised in a Feb. 3 column by Executive Editor Mark Bowden.

Gazette officials denied that these changes included the end of a separate Iowa City edition and said the newspaper's Iowa City newsroom, 301 E. Market St., would remain open. They would not, however, confirm that there will still be a newspaper called the Iowa City Gazette in March.

Gazette Communications began publishing the Iowa City Gazette, an edition of the Cedar Rapids-based newspaper aimed specifically at Iowa City-Coralville readers and advertisers, in 1999. According to the Gazette Web site, the Iowa City edition has a daily circulation of 26,400.

Lyle Muller, the editor of the Iowa City Gazette, refused to comment on the changes and maintained that there will continue to be a separate Iowa City edition of the Gazette in the future. He accused the paper's competitors of spreading rumors.

However, one Gazette employee who spoke on the condition of anonymity said there will not be a separate Iowa City edition of the paper; rather, there will be one edition with localized sections.

"[Gazette officials] have made it pretty clear that it will be the Gazette with some zoned news," said the employee.

Joe Hladky, the president and publisher of the Gazette, said not all of the plans are completed but the changes will benefit all Eastern Iowa readers, including those in Iowa City.

"We'll have the same emphasis on Johnson County as we have today," he said. "The substance will all be there. Exactly how we name it and how we'll refer to it, we're still doing some tweaking."

Hladky said that in the future, stories will be given dominance based on their relevance to the region instead of the area from which they originate. This could lead to a restructuring of coverage areas, but no one has been laid off as of yet, he said.

"In some cases we're reassigning people, and in a limited situation, there may be a job or two eliminated," said Hladky. "The idea that we're having massive layoffs is wrong."

Chuck Peters, the Gazette's chief operations officer, said the changes were still being fine-tuned.

"People have been told that in the reshaping of the coverage, they should apply for other positions, that the beat they're on might not continue," he said.

Although Bowden's column identifies March 2 as the date when the changes will take place, Peters said that was only a "target date."

Among the changes announced in Bowden's column:

- "A sweeping change in the nameplate, page design, headline typography, and organization of the Gazette and Iowa City Gazette."

- "A laser-beam focus on coverage of the most important news of the region."

- "A new daily section to highlight the locally relevant community news."

Bowden refused to elaborate on the changes, including whether the nameplate change will include the removal of "Iowa City" from the Iowa City Gazette. He cited his paper's interest in announcing the specifics of the overhaul with its own marketing campaign and said he was "excited" about it.

"It's born out of a desire to do better, to serve our readers, to exceed expectations," he said.

Public pension fund faces $1.2 million hole

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Iowa taxpayers may have to help offset a $1.2 billion shortfall facing the state's largest employee-pension fund.

The Iowa Public Employees Retirement System, which has 328,800 members, is suffering from the effects of a three-year bear market on Wall Street, according to a copyright story in the Des Moines Sunday Register.

The pension fund includes employees from state and local governments and schools, retirees, and former public employees.

Greg Cusack, the system's chief benefits officer, said there is no immediate danger of defaulting on pension payments.

However, he said the fund faces many of the same long-term problems other state retirement funds are facing after a downturn in stocks.

A Register analysis showed that even if the state pension fund has an average investment return of 7.5 percent annually for the next five years, its financial shortfall for long-term obligations will grow to $3 billion by 2007. That means the fund's percentage of unfunded liabilities would increase from 7.4 percent in 2002 to 13.6 percent in 2007.

State officials have guaranteed payments to retired public employees, which should cause taxpayers some concern, said State Treasurer Michael Fitzgerald, a member of the system's board. He said the bull stock market in the 1990s added to the significant increases for Iowa's public employees.

Dean blasts Bush & Dem opponents for being like Republicans

BY CALVIN HENNICK
THE DAILY IOWAN

Howard Dean, the former Vermont governor and a current candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, blasted President Bush and accused his Democratic competitors of falling in line with the president, in appearances in Grinnell and Iowa City Sunday.

"We ought to stop being ashamed of being Democrats," Dean told 100 listeners at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., in reference to his competitors' congressional votes in favor of Bush's Iraq resolution and the bipartisan education bill.

Dean is battling Sen. Joseph Lieberman of Connecticut, Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts, Sen. John Edwards of North Carolina, and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri for the Democratic nomination. All have more name recognition than Dean and have led him in early polls.

Dean called the education bill an "unfunded mandate" and voiced his opposition to provisions requiring school districts to allow the Boy Scouts to meet in school facilities and protecting students' rights to pray on campuses.

Dean also said Bush has not made a compelling case for using force in Iraq and that the U.S. should focus its efforts on dismantling Al Qaeda instead. The Bush administration cannot stop Saudi funding of terrorism without an oil-conservation plan, he said.

"This president believes in speaking loudly and, evidently, carrying a very small stick," Dean said.

A self-proclaimed "fiscal conservative," he said financial planning is necessary to avoid the budget shortfalls affecting Iowa and many other states. These budgetary woes are forcing states to cut health care and education, he said.

"It's not happening in Vermont because we put money aside," he said.

Dean asserted that he would not cater to special interests or public opinion, citing his support of Vermont's controversial civil-union law. The law, the first of its kind in the U.S., gave same-sex partners legal rights equal to those of married couples.

Earlier in the day, Dean spoke to nearly the 200 students packed into Grinnell College's cozy South Forum Lounge. Dean said he was "shocked" at the size of the crowd.

"I'm delighted the fire marshals aren't here yet," he joked.

Dean devoted much of his Grinnell speech to health care and affirmative action.

He said he wanted health insurance "for every man, woman, and child" and that past attempts have failed because they focused on reform of the current system.

"Let's get everybody in the system first," he said. "And then we'll have a big fight over how to change the system."

Dean also said Bush owed the country an apology for talking about "quotas" on national television in connection with the University of Michigan affirmative-action case. Dean called "quota" a "race-loaded word" and said that it did not accurately reflect Michigan's admissions policies.

"If you want the best people in America, you have to reach out and make sure everybody's included in the pool," he said. "That's what affirmative action is about."

The speech drew a standing ovation from the crowd.

CAMP VIRGINIA, Kuwait — The key launch pad for a future war on Iraq bustles with tens of thousands of U.S. and British soldiers. Military convoys clog highways, and the entire northern half of Kuwait is sealed off as a military-operations zone.

"Every day, this thing grows by leaps and bounds," Lt. Col. Jeffrey Helmick said.

"We're bursting at the seams," said Helmick, the commander of the U.S. Army's 6th Transportation Battalion, which helps truck tons of supplies from ports of entry to desert camps near the Iraqi border.

Officials will say little about the total number of U.S. troops being dispatched to Kuwait in the run-up to a possible war. Washington says war is likely to begin soon because Iraq has failed to destroy all its biological, chemical, and nuclear weapons — weapons Iraq denies it has.

troops are now in the Gulf, and that number is expected to climb to 150,000 by Feb. 15 — enough to launch at least the first stage of an invasion. Britain is sending 35,000 troops — a quarter of its army and its biggest naval task force in two decades.

When troops arrive in Kuwait — usually in cargo planes or in commercial jets chartered by the military — they travel to base camps in civilian buses with curtains that are drawn so potential terrorists don't see in.

The timing of any possible war could be driven less by diplomatic maneuverings than by the complicated logistics required to set up and supply an invasion force. Bringing in tens of thousands of troops involves building new roads, camps, and living quarters in addition to ensuring adequate supplies of food, water, electricity, weaponry, ammunition, and vehicles.

Judging from the intense activity at Kuwaiti ports, the massive military convoys blocking traffic throughout the oil-rich emirate and the words of U.S. soldiers on the ground, the job is just about done.

"We've got enough for whatever needs to be done. Now we're just continuing to reinforce it," said Sgt. Maj. Larry Stevens, a spokesman for the 6th Transportation Battalion. "If the commander in chief gives the order, we don't have to wait for anything."

Camps are being set up throughout northern Kuwait, where a large ground force is massing in white tents, bustling mess halls, and training grounds with shooting ranges, mock cities, and Bradley Fighting Vehicles.

At base camps there are gyms with state-of-the-art cardiovascular machines, movie theaters, fast-food restaurants set up in trailers, and PXs stocked with everything from Coca Cola to DVDs to Mideastern tobacco pipes. A chapel set up in a tent at Camp Arifjan, the U.S. military's main logistics base south of Kuwait City, has heat, air conditioning, and a digital hymn player.

U.S. allies move to avert war

BY COLLEEN BARRY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MUNICH, Germany — Germany said Sunday that it and France would present to the U.N. Security Council an initiative to disarm Iraq without war, a proposal that has heightened resentment between the United States and the two main European allies resisting military action.

The same split was playing out within the NATO alliance and could come to a head today, when France, Germany, and Belgium must decide whether to keep up their obstruction of a U.S. plan to protect Turkey during an Iraqi war.

U.S. officials bluntly dismissed the French-German proposals — which reportedly include the deployment of U.N. soldiers and would require Iraqi cooperation — as ineffective and a ploy to delay military action opposed by Berlin and Paris.

Ahead of a key Security Council session on Iraq on Friday, Russia — which like France holds veto power on the council — joined Germany in iterating its strong opposition to war.

After talks in Berlin with German Chancellor Gerhard Schröder, Russian President Vladimir Putin warned Washington against a unilateral attack and said he saw "no basis for the use of force at this time."

As elements of the German-French plans trickled out at a security conference in Munich over the weekend, German Defense Minister Peter Struck said the initiative builds on a French proposal to triple the number of weapons inspectors. He said it would be presented in the council on Friday after chief weapons inspector Hans Blix gives a new report on Iraqi cooperation.

"We are standing shoulder to shoulder with France, and we hope that this initiative will be positively received in the Security Council," Struck told Germany's Phoenix television.

According to the German news magazine Der Spiegel, the French-German proposal would also call for deploying thousands of U.N. soldiers in Iraq, reconnaissance flights, and declaring all of Iraq a no-fly zone — a vigorous U.N. regime that would effectively sideline Saddam Hussein.

Increasing the number of U.N. inspectors would be "a diversion, not a solution," Secretary of State Colin Powell said in Washington on American television.

"The issue is not more inspectors. The issue is compliance on the part of Saddam Hussein," he said.

Powell iterated the Bush administration's position that time is running out for Saddam to comply or face a U.S.-led military invasion.

"It's a plan as far as we can tell whose purpose is to block U.S. military action and not make meaningful inspections — but we don't know," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., who attended the Munich conference, which ended Sunday.

And even as German officials revealed the emerging initiative, French officials insisted there was "no secret plan" and said they could not confirm details — presenting an appearance of disarray in the recently reinvigorated French-German alliance.

U.S. officials were miffed that neither country's Defense ministers was prepared to brief Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld on details of the plan on the sidelines of the Munich conference.

"Rumsfeld was here for 24 hours meeting with German and French officials, and no one told him anything. That was not an auspicious start," a senior U.S. official in Munich said on the condition of anonymity.

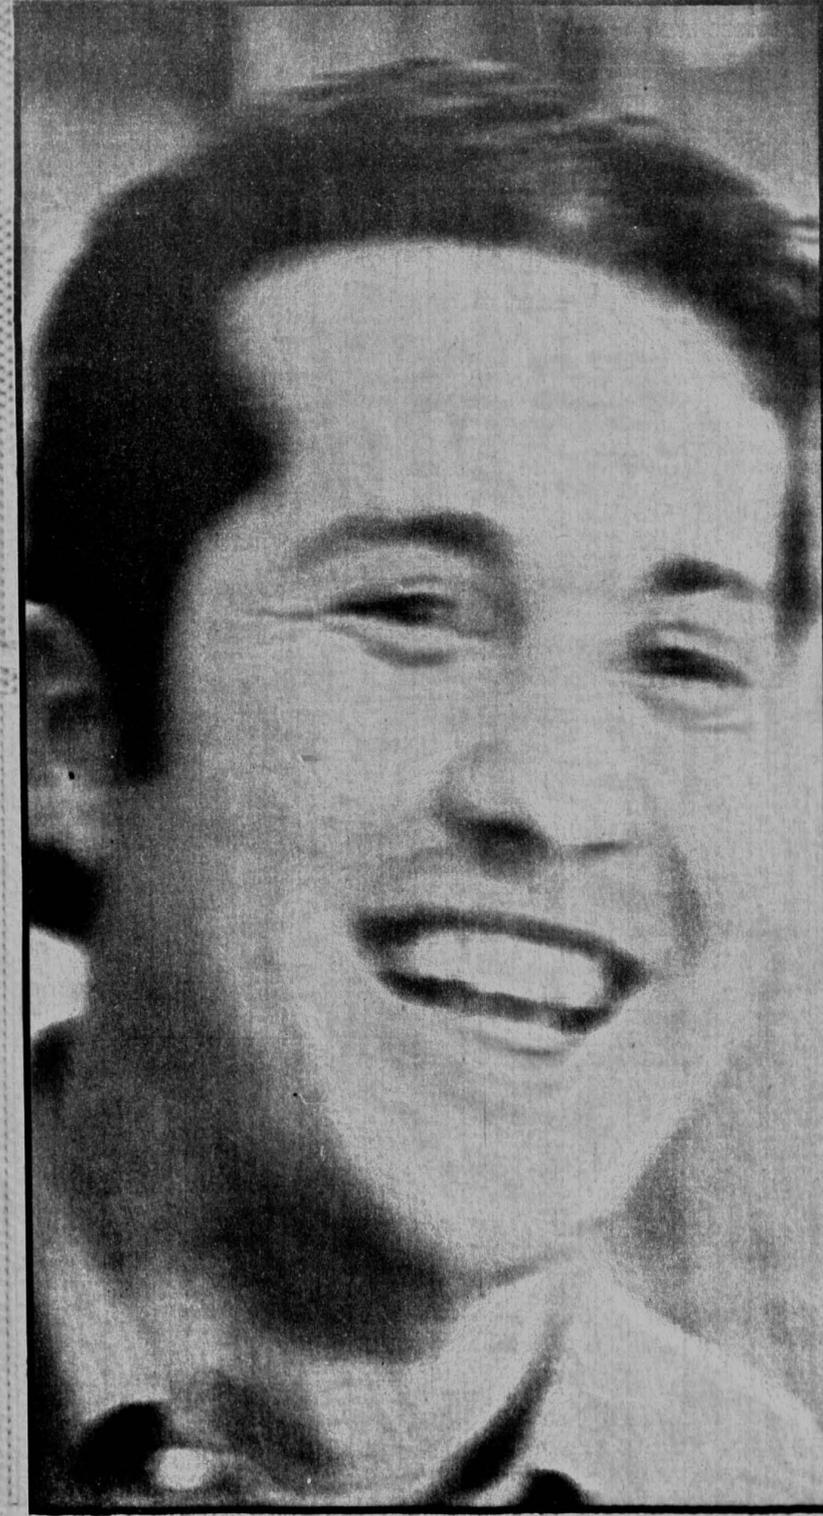

The United States is also in a standoff with European opponents of war over NATO plans to prepare to defend Turkey against the threat of Iraqi missile attacks.

Belgium has joined France and Germany in blocking the preparations.

Father apologizes for false abduction story made last week, when he criticized the university for lax security and vowed that his daughter would never return to school.

Duane Papke, the associate director of UI police, said the investigation into the matter is closed and that no other information regarding the case will be released. He refused to elaborate on the evidence that led to UI police's conclusions.

No charges will be filed against Tiffany Culp for the false report, police said.

Iowa City police Sgt. Troy Kelsay said it is unusual for charges to be filed in such cases because authorities don't want to discourage abduction victims from stepping forward.

He said filing charges for false reports isn't uncommon in Iowa City and that most involve the misuse of 911. Whether charges are filed is decided on a case-by-case basis. Falsely reporting an indictable criminal act is a serious misdemeanor.

UI students' reactions were mixed Sunday over whether Culp should be charged for the false story.

"She should be fined or expelled for throwing people false leads because it trivializes the whole issue of female safety on campus," said UI freshman Adam Jira.

UI senior Nathan Lindsay said: "I think the embarrassment she and her family will face after this incident will be punishment enough. It didn't cause much of an inconvenience to anyone around here. Her initial story seemed like it had a lot of holes."

Kenneth Culp declined to comment on whether his daughter would return to school.

"Tiffany is receiving care and support from her family and is getting all she needs to deal with the situation," he said.

Bowl policy raises eyebrows

However, even though he was able to bring one guest, Colangelo said he personally funded his wife's travel expenses because he did not like the idea that the university paid for guests.

"I was there to represent the board," he said. "I thought that taking a paid guest would be contrary to what the university represents."

Carter took his wife, Cheryl, saying the option to take one guest was available because of the timing of the game over the winter holidays.

The Orange Bowl Committee expected a certain number of travelers from the UI to attend the events the committee had scheduled, such as team and administrative luncheons and evening events, Carter said.

However, Tomkovicz said, he saw no proof that the events at the Orange Bowl are beneficial to board members—or are even important at all.

He said he did not accept his tickets to Miami because he is on a board subcommittee investigating the members' perks.

Also, he said, board members should not have traveled for free while other faculty members are excluded.

Despite the Hawkeyes' loss, the UI was able to come back from Miami a big winner, expecting over $378,000 in surplus from unspent expenses covered by the BCS game.

Estimates show that of the $1.65 million the UI was given by the Orange Bowl Committee, just over $1.27 million was spent.

No accord with Iraq, U.N. says

VX nerve gas as well as the development of two rockets U.N. experts believe can exceed a 93-mile limit imposed on Iraqi missiles. But one U.N. official who saw the papers characterized them as "talking points" and not the sort of new evidence the inspectors had been seeking.

"They are welcomed," Blix said of the documents, "but they are not the answer."

He also said the issue of private interviews with Iraqi scientists now appeared to be a "mixed bag." Of the five non-nuclear scientists inspectors sought to interview in confidence since Feb. 6, only three agreed to do so without a government official present, U.N. sources said.

Despite the overall lack of progress, Blix and El Baradei said they still held out hope that Iraq would relent on some their key demands over the coming days. A senior Iraqi official said tonight that his government hoped to reach a deal on the reconnaissance flights before Blix speaks to the council on Friday. The Iraqi government also said it would set up a commission to find and hand over documents wanted by the inspectors.

"I would say I'm beginning to see a change of heart on the part of Iraq," El Baradei said.

In this weekend's meetings with Blix and El Baradei, Iraqi officials for the first time stopped dismissing the contention that Iraq still has unresolved disarmament issues, a senior U.N. official said. "They finally acknowledged there were issues that needed to be resolved," the official said.

But El Baradei, who heads the International Atomic Energy Agency, expressed frustration that Iraq still was not moving with enough alacrity to address those issues. "At this crucial time, at this critical time, we need 100 percent Iraqi cooperation," he said.

El Baradei said he and Blix were mindful of the desire of the Security Council "to see quick progress," saying he told Iraqi officials that the world would "need to see ... drastic change" in the coming days. "Something spectacular has to happen," he said.

Igby Goes Down

In Igby Goes Down, a mix of eclectic emotional losers makes up the branches of the Slocomb family tree.

Insubordinate Igby (Kieran Culkin) strives and succeeds in getting kicked out of every private school on the Eastern Seaboard. Socialite mom Mimi (Susan Sarandon) rules the family with an iron fist full of different colored pills. Businessman Dad (Bill Pullman) comes to the dinner table in the buff but only because he is a depressed schizophrenic. Golden older brother Oliver (Ryan Phillippe) longs to work with big business dollars in order to give off the façade of being happy just like Igby's godfather, D.H. (Jeff Goldblum).

First time director/screenwriter Burr Steers' biggest asset in Igby is that he seems to unequivocally understand the life of an "old money" family. Like Robert Redford before him with the movie Ordinary People, Steers is able to grasp the implied differences between Bennington girls and Wellesly girls. He knows where these families lunch and what they order once they are there. He seems to comprehend how to throw a party at the Hamptons, how a feed a high-class drug habit, and how to properly display the desolate, lonely world of public functions.

It is this knowledge that lends credibility to Steers' script, allowing the audience to feel completely and totally absorbed into the Slocombs' selfish selves.

It also helps that Steers has an undeniably great cast. From Sarandon's flippant air to Goldblum's slippery smiles to Phillippe's country club chatter, Igby is an ensemble piece, one of the best ones of last year. Yale student Claire Danes, who stars as Igby's girlfriend, Sookie Sapperstein, does a fine job at nailing down a character whose love of life is overshadowed only by her love of money. British actor Jared Harris also draws a wonderful caricature of a bumming Soho artist and friend to D.H.'s heroin-riddled trophy girl, Rachel (Amanda Peete).

But the film truly belongs to Culkin's Igby. He employs the uneasiness of Dustin Hoffman's Benjamin Braddock from The Graduate, the restlessness of Mark Twain's Huck Finn, and the humor of J.D. Salinger's Holden Caulfield.

Culkin has done his research, and he is able to encompass each one of these timeless characters with apparent ease while still leaving room for his own understanding of teenage angst. Culkin, who was last seen in the cult favorite The Dangerous Lives of Altar Boys, has seemingly grown up overnight into a full-fledged actor whose understanding of the craft cannot be denied. Culkin's work has already garnered him a Golden Globe nomination and should win him an Academy Award nomination, making him a dark horse and art-house favorite.

While Igby turns in some riveting performances from about midway on, the film becomes hit-and-miss, especially because the climax and eventual resolution seem like obvious retreads. Steers also struggles with pacing in the last quarter of the film; while everything is supposed to fall apart for the characters, the film itself falls apart. Depression and matricide go hand-in-hand, and although we as audience members understand why, we still look for something fresher.

Igby doesn't necessarily fail, but it isn't exactly a true hit, either. What it does do is establish Culkin's potential to be one of the best actors of his generation and create a place in the world for Igby Slocomb, for better and for worse.

Letters to the Editor

Jingoistic jargon

Christian Kurasek's Feb. 7 column is probably one of the most blindly jingoistic things I've ever read on an editorial page. It seems that he has taken personally Dominique Chagnollaud's characterization of Americans as "ignorant." To prove that this is not so, Kurasek points out that the United States not only has a space program but has seen the creation of several useful inventions within its borders. Europeans, he says, are not capable of matching these achievements because they are constantly fighting wars, waiting in breadlines, and frittering time away with international affairs. The United States, on the other hand, because of its "isolationist tendencies," is free to pursue the advancement of the sciences. The irony of Kurasek's use of the term "isolationist" to describe a country that is on the verge of war in the Middle East and contemplating war in Korea and whose CIA has been responsible for numerous coups d'état in countries across the globe is simply painful. He claims that Europeans resent the United States because we are not adequately educated about their cultures, but having recently spent four months in Europe, I feel qualified to say that this is simply untrue. I spent most of my time in Spain, where I met scores of friendly people eager to have a conversation with me. Although I'm aware that attitudes vary from country to country, the Spanish, at least, are generally free of sentiments against the American people. However, during my conversations, the topic of our government would invariably come up, and here, they expressed universal disapproval. They don't hate us for not knowing enough about them, they simply disapprove of our government because they feel it interferes in places it shouldn't. On a final note, I'd like to register my surprise that in a column containing so few actual facts, one of them is wrong. Werner von Braun did not flee Germany for the United States; he was arrested by the American Army and obligated to emigrate to this country. Kurasek's opinions are ridiculous, but nevertheless have their place on the editorial page. Misinformation does not.

the government is trying to convince a reluctant populace of the wisdom of going to war, it is not a good time for a student newspaper to go even further than Colin Powell in its assertions. The government has accused Iraq of having "weapons of mass destruction" for months. When you title an article "Powell: Iraq armed to the teeth," you lend credibility to the hawks who are in favor of attacking Iraq, a sovereign nation. I listened to Powell's speech and didn't hear those words. All I heard was the radio intercepts (in Arabic, translated into English) that could lead Powell to infer that Iraq had vacated weapons (we don't know which) and the same old story of what could happen if Iraq should lend its help to Al Qaeda. There was more talk of aluminum rods, which we now know can be used for other purposes than for "weapons of mass destruction." There is nothing new here. This is what the White House has been claiming for months. But getting back to The Daily Iowan: Why add fuel to the pro-war chorus? Shouldn't a student newspaper be held to a higher standard?

Underage drinking would not be curbed by 21-only bar ordinance

After previous failed attempts, numerous proposed alcohol-related ordinances, and a lot of controversy, the Iowa City City Council is at it again. At a recent council meeting, many councilors expressed frustration with a proposed zoning ordinance discouraging new bars and voiced their desire to go with a much simpler, more direct method to rectify the city's perceived alcohol problem: simply raising the age of bar admittance to 21. As in previous attempts, city officials continue to miss the complexity involved and try to reduce the entire issue of underage drinking to a simple problem of access to bars.

Before passing any new ordinances, the City Council should wait to see if current laws will produce the desired effect. Recently, Iowa City police have done an excellent job of enforcing current regulations. Partly due to a $55,000 grant from the Governor's Traffic Safety Bureau, citations for possession of alcohol under the legal age more than doubled last year. More importantly, the police are beginning to pin the responsibility where it belongs: on the bars themselves. Recently, many Iowa City bars, including Morgan's and the Vine, have been cited for selling alcohol to minors. By suspending their liquor licenses, city officials have hit them where it hurts, rather than just giving them a slap on the wrist. Needless to say, a bar without liquor is like an airport without planes. No one is going to go for the ambiance. By taking a hard-line stance with the bar owners, police and city officials are sending the message that selling alcohol to underage patrons is a very unwise business practice.

Current alcohol regulations should be given a chance, because the controlled atmosphere of a bar is safer for underage drinkers than an unsupervised house party.

tenders, bouncers, and regular police patrols, the downtown bars are a relatively safe environment. Overly intoxicated patrons are refused service, belligerent patrons are thrown out, and downtown is close enough for most people to walk home after closing time. Outside the bar environment, however, drinking can be deadly. At house parties, the all-you-can-drink pricing encourages dangerous binge drinking, while the remote locations promote drunk driving. Police regulation of house parties is also much more tenuous. Altogether, bars are much safer than the alternatives.

Depending on whom you ask, the "problem" of underage drinking is anything from a dangerous plague sweeping our college campuses to a benign pastime enjoyed by responsible adults. From its persistently heavy-handed efforts to regulate drinking, the City Council's position is obvious. Unfortunately, its single-minded offensive against downtown bars, if successful, would serve only to drive underage drinkers into more dangerous environments. Perhaps it is time for councilors to realize that if the safety of young adults is truly their main concern, then allowing minors into the bars is simply better than all of the alternatives.

More importantly, councilors must realize that keeping underage patrons out of bars does not equal keeping them away from alcohol. There are many alternative routes to intoxication, including tailgating before sporting events, having a legal-age friend buy alcohol for you, and the most popular, house parties. Of course, these routes have much less supervision than bars. Because of the control provided by bar-

The penultimate frontier

We all knew the truth but we insisted on distorting things to make it seem like we were all, with each other, in such profound disagreement about everything — that first and foremost there are two sides to everything, when of course there were not; there was one side only, one side always: Just as this Earth is round, the truth is round, not two-sided but round ...

— Dave Eggers, You Shall

shapes radiating 190 miles in diameter. Because sprites and elves are invisible to the naked eye, Brown didn't see the luminosities or realize he had photographed them until scientists on the ground downloaded and analyzed the pictures. "One has to be extremely lucky to catch it because it lasts less than a thousandth of a second," Yair said. "Luckily, God was on our side this time, and we caught one."

When Yair made the comment that "God was on our side," it first struck me as ugly. It was nationalistic, I thought. And then I thought some more, and it struck me as beautiful, as I realized that Yair's "our" referred to no less than the sum total of all humanity, as embodied by one transcendent extra-national astronaut. One human being, alone with the universe, floating beyond the boundaries of earthly existence.

Within days of the discovery, the astronauts would be brought back down to Earth, horrifically, and it would be unclear exactly whose side God was on after all. Who will be celebrating this? I thought, and at that first nasty thought I knew I had been sucked into the bitterest game. It was a simple game: I pictured a map, nations of the world lighting up, one by one, for or against, like the blues and reds of a November winner-take-all horse race, thumbs up or thumbs down, clear-cut, either mourning or celebrating. France? Germany? China? Iraq? Afghanistan? Venezuela? Which way would each fall? There were only two sides; you were either for us or against us. Most countries would probably go "for," would mourn, whether out of political calculation or plain and simple decency. But you never knew for certain ...

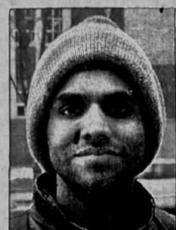

If there is one thing that extra-terrestrial travel reminds us, it's that Space is not the Final Frontier. We have only just begun to see how many frontiers there are out there and how many there are here, right at home, inside of us and between us. With any luck — and with a measure of work on our part — the Earth will be on "our" side the next time around. Because for a moment there, with Israelis and Indians and Americans and Russians, by science and by serendipity, we were moving beyond a global history of Columbian conquest and into the realm of cosmic comprehension. We were all of us dancing with sprites and elves on thunderclouds, and it was out of this world.

School-bond vote expected to be large, county auditor says

The public's understanding about the bond has been a concern since it was first proposed last year. After the School Board originally considered a mid-December 2002 vote, a 300-voter poll reported that 52 percent of respondents had not seen, read, or heard anything about the referendum. The vote was then pushed back to Feb. 11 to allow the Yes For Kids campaign, a committee formed by the School Board to advocate for the bond, more time to lobby the public.

Although some worried that Tuesday's election would have a negative effect on the bond's outcome, coming so close to tax season, early voting statistics are leaving others optimistic. More than 2,800 votes have been tallied since satellite-voting stations opened Feb. 3, and almost 3,000 absentee ballots have been requested — six times as many as the early votes in last fall's School Board election. Absentee ballots have historically had a nearly perfect return rate.

"This will probably be one of the biggest, if not the biggest, Iowa City school elections ever," said Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett.

The voter record in a school election was set in December 1992, when more than 13,000 voters turned out to barely pass a $7.9 million bond issue to build a new elementary school and improve four schools. The bond passed by a slim 4 percent margin; bonds must receive 60 percent voter approval to pass. Between 13,000 and 15,000 ballots are expected to be cast Tuesday.

Voters who are still shaky on the bond's details said they are planning to discuss the issues with friends and relatives or dig up informational mailings.

"I received something in the mail, but I don't remember if it was pro or con for the vote," said Iowa City resident Warren Ness. "I'm paying more attention now. Being away from the holidays, I'm more receptive to what they're saying because I said. "We expect first-rate class quality and education — but we want a plan that reflects that."

The Yes For Kids campaign held rallies over the weekend and distributed literature door-to-door in a last-minute attempt to sway voters.

"A lot of people don't make up their minds until a few days before the election," said Sarah Swisher, a co-chairwoman of the group. "We can't let up. This is a full-force, get-out-the-vote organization."

More than 250 Yes For Kids volunteers have worked on the campaign since October 2002, promoting the bond through mailings, a Web site, and daily phone calls. Right now will be the busiest time yet for the group, Swisher said.

"We will be phone-calling and knocking on doors to get every last voter down to the last three minutes before 8 Tuesday night," she said.

Many school officials said both committees have done an adequate job in getting information out to voters.

Hills Elementary School Principal John Marshall said he's pleased with the efforts to educate district parents about the vote. Schools in the district have sent students home with information for their parents concerning the issues and voting locations.

"I think people are as informed as we can make them," he said. "As always, there are people who are really well-informed and some who are still confused. That's normal for an issue like this."

dancers, 200 leaders, 600 family members, and 400 volunteers.

Dance Marathon and the Children's Miracle Network have raised more than $2.2 million for pediatric oncology and bone-marrow transplant patients at the UI Hospitals and Clinics. The funds cover everything from movie nights and cafeteria vouchers to hospital bills. Dance Marathon aids families of children who have passed away by paying up to $10,000 of remaining hospital bills. In January, a second payment plan was launched for children still under treatment, covering up to $500 of expenses after insurance.

But what some kids like best about Dance Marathon can't be measured in numbers.

"Tootsie Rolls," Mackenzie Grace Hill, 4, replied happily, blowing bubbles from a pink wand.

For UIHC doctors, the day was about getting a laugh. Hospital staff exchanged white coats for togas and olive gigantic disco ball. Dancers toted kids around on their hips and shoulders as music blared.

Approximately 20 hours into the marathon, UI senior Brian O'Leary said he was tired. With not a clock in sight, he had to measure the hour by the amount of light in the sky and the meal he had just finished eating.

O'Leary leaned against a table to gather his energy before returning to the dance floor.

"I'm exhausted but not going to give up," he said. "[The kids] are what it's all about."

UI sophomore Laine De Leo said she has never felt so drained, even after receiving the courtesy foot, calf, and shoulder massages four times. And yet, she was grinning.

"I'm so happy I can do this," she said. "Dance Marathon is really amazing."

Williams finds Gaz friendly in France

PARIS (AP) — Serena Williams defeated France's Amelie Mauresmo Sunday to win the Gaz de France, her first tournament since the Australian Open.

The world's top-ranked woman was undeterred by a noisy, partisan crowd, winning in 64 minutes for her second title in this event and the 21st of her career.

Williams has won 11-straight matches this year — seven at Australia and four in Paris.

"I'm real pleased to win here," said Williams, who has won five-straight majors.

Hawks, Horner get painful lessons on the road

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Every game brings a new experience for college freshmen, a chance to learn, a chance to grow. Some of those lessons are painful.

So it was for Iowa's Jeff Horner in the Hawkeyes' 70-62 loss at Michigan on Feb. 8.

Iowa had cut an eight-point lead to 58-54 and Horner had just picked off a Michigan pass. He drove downcourt but instead of taking the ball to the basket, he stopped and put up a 3-point shot.

"If I had to do it all over again, I probably would have gone to the basket strong. Use my body and try to get a foul," Horner said. "But when you're in the middle of a game, you're not really thinking about it.

Leslie

"I was kind of feeling it, so I pulled up and shot it. I missed it and right after that, I knew I had made a mistake."

A costly one, too.

Michigan rebounded the miss and Bernard Robinson hit a jumper with the shot clock running down, giving the Wolverines a 60-54 lead. Iowa never made a serious run again and lost for the fourth time in five games.

That certainly wasn't the only mistake by Iowa (12-7, 4-4 Big Ten), which led by six points in the second half.

Coach Steve Alford said senior guard Chauncey Leslie lost his composure while jawing with Michigan freshman Daniel Horton. Horton drew the third and fourth fouls on Leslie only 28 seconds apart and Leslie went to the bench.

Just before the fouls, an official had lectured Leslie about going at it with Horton. He was out for much of an 18-4 run that pulled Michigan from a 46-40 deficit into a 58-50 lead.

"That was Chauncey's mistake. Chauncey has got to grow from that," Alford said. "But it's the same thing. You always catch the second guy and that's really what happened."

Alford found it remarkable that Michigan wasn't called for a foul in the final 9:43. Michigan shot 12

ALL-STAR GAME

Saying goodbye

Jordan starts, scores 20 in final All-Star appearance

BY CHRIS SHERIDAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — On a night for Michael Jordan, all he was missing was the game-winning shot.

Jordan said goodbye to the All-Star game with his eyes teary and his game a bit blemished as the West beat the East, 155-145, in double overtime Sunday night.

A last-minute starter after Vince Carter relinquished his spot, Jordan had a poor start, a bad finish, and then a good one. After clanging the potential winning shot off the iron at the end of regulation, Jordan made a high-arching 15-footer with 4.8 seconds left in overtime to give the East a two-point lead.

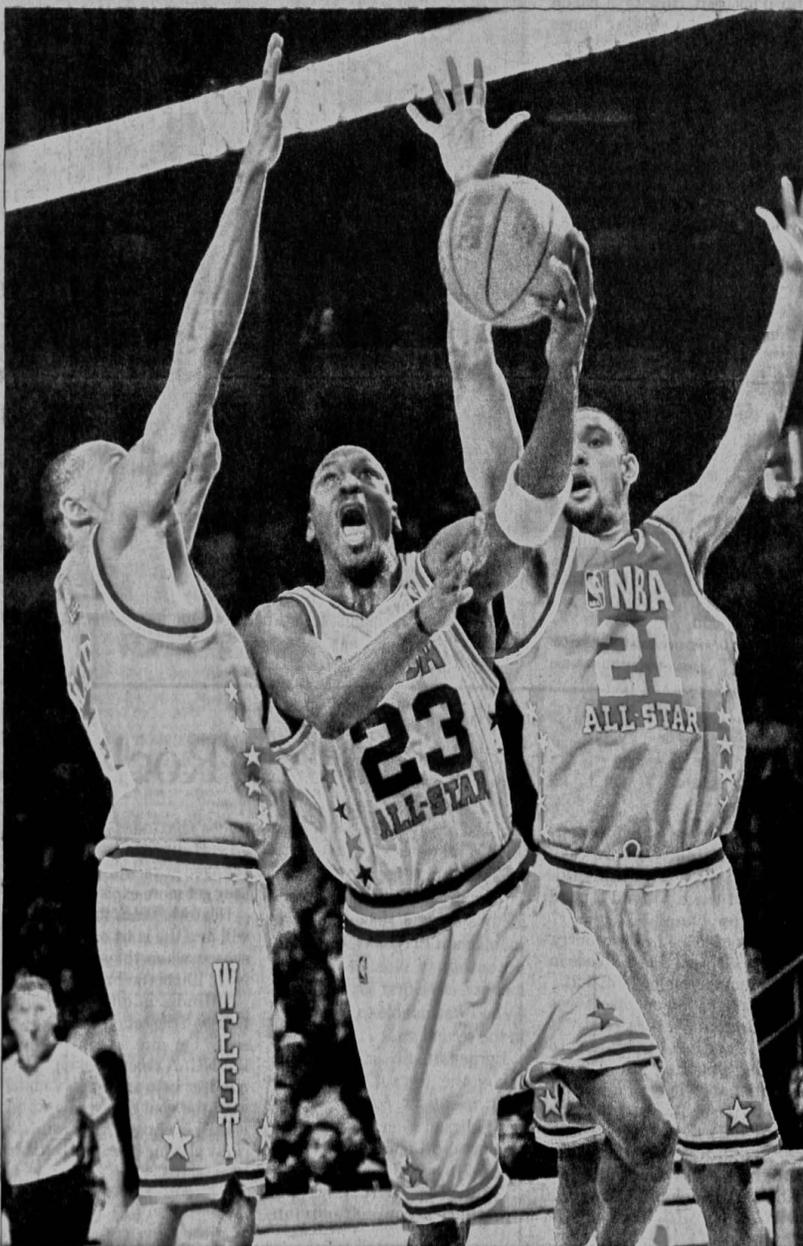

Kobe Bryant tied it, however, by making two foul shots with 1 second left, and Jordan's final shot of the first overtime was blocked just before the buzzer.

MVP Kevin Garnett scored nine of his 37 points in the second overtime as Jordan watched the final five minutes from the bench. It was the first double-overtime game in All-Star history.

Although Jordan missed his first seven shots, had four others rejected, and blew a dunk, he did score 20 points to move past Kareem Abdul-Jabbar for most total points in All-Star history. But he needed to take 27 shots from the field — making only nine — in order to do it.

His most memorable moment came late in the first overtime, while the most poignant one came at halftime. Jordan joined singer Mariah Carey at center court, took the microphone after an extended ovation, and bid a public farewell as Yao Ming, Kobe Bryant, and basketball's future stood and watched.

"I leave the game in good hands," Jordan said. "So many great stars rising and playing the game. I have passed on the things that Dr. J and some of the great players — Magic Johnson, Larry Bird — have passed on to me, I pass on to these All-Stars here, as well as to the rest of the players in the NBA."

For the third time this season, Hawkeye wrestlers had a dual decided by a tie.

Michigan State claimed a win on Feb. 7 after the meet deadlocked at 19.

The Hawkeyes came close to winning the scrum with Steve Mocco almost pinning John Wechter in the last battle of the night. Instead, Mocco had to settle for a 27-11 technical fall.

"He got him flat [on his back]," Hawkeye coach Jim Zalesky said. "But [Wechter] stalled out. It was some of the worse officiating I've ever seen. But that's no excuse."

Spartans Arsen Aleksanyan ended up deciding the win with a pin over Jason D'Agata during the 165-pound fracas.

But, the blame doesn't fall on his shoulders alone.

"It was a team defeat," Zalesky said. "We could've picked up points here and there — up the whole lineup."

No. 8 Nick Simmons began the night with an 11-0 upset over No. 6 Luke Eustice. Simmons accumulated more than five minutes of riding time during the seven-minute match.

Another Michigan State upset was unranked Ryan L'Amoreaux defeating No. 11 Luke Moffitt.

Close duels included No. 6 Joe Johnston losing to No. 5 Gray

Maynard and unranked Ryan Fulsaa losing to No. 6 Nik Fekete by two.

Cliff Moore, Ty Eustice, Tyler Nixt, Jessman Smith, and Mocco all recorded Iowa wins. Smith's major decision helped close the gap to two points in team scores with two matches left in the event.

On Sunday, Iowa bounced back, defeating Penn State, 26-10, and let old acquaintances spark a new rivalry.

Finding nothing against Illinois

BY MICHELLE YONG
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa women's basketball team couldn't do to Illinois what it did to the Hawkeyes a week ago — beat the Illini at home.

The Illini came to Iowa City on Feb. 2 and handed Iowa its first home loss. On Feb. 9, Illinois didn't allow for revenge, ending with a 73-58 win.

The Hawkeyes found themselves in a huge hole during the first half and never dug their way out of it. Iowa took a quick 5-2 lead before Illinois went on a 9-0 run.

Illinois put together three strings of runs in the first half, outscoring the Hawkeyes by at least eight in each.

With Illinois taking a commanding 37-23 lead into halftime, Iowa had a lot of work to do in the second half.

Sunday's first half was Iowa's lowest scoring of the season. Iowa committed 13 turnovers in the first half, which Illinois turned into 12 points — a concern for Iowa coach Lisa Bluder at halftime.

"Coach Bluder made sure we were aware of how many turnovers we had," assistant coach Michael Morgan said. "We had to match Illinois' intensity and be strong with the ball and rebound with authority."

The second half didn't start any better than it ended for the Hawkeyes. The 14-point lead ballooned into 17 points until Iowa finally made a run. The Hawkeyes put together a 9-0 run to close the lead to just six, making it 56-50 with a three-point field goal from guard Jenna Armstrong.

"We battled back and got within six," Morgan said. "I applaud their effort, but we need to put two halves together."

The run didn't last long for the Hawkeyes.

Illinois answered with an 8-0 run and didn't look back.

"I thought there were spurts that we gutted it out and had transition baskets to get us back in the game," Morgan said. "But we shouldn't put ourselves in that position, and we can't put ourselves in a hole."

Jennie Lillis and Kristi Faulkner, Iowa's two leading scorers, had off days for the Hawkeyes. Lillis went 2-for-12 from the field scoring only 4

WEEKEND ROUNUPS

Wildcats oust Iowa swimmers in Evanston

The Hawkeyes couldn't overcome a strong second day of competition from Northwestern as they fell, 196-153, on Feb. 7-8, in Evanston, Ill. In Iowa's last meet before the Big Ten championships, the team finished day one with a 104-99 lead.

The Hawkeyes took first-place in both relays, with divers Timo Klami and Roberto Gutierrez grabbing first- and second-place in diving.

"Our divers did a great job and kept us close on the first day," coach John Davey said.

However, only freshman Konrad Kazmierczak managed a victory in the 100 free on Feb. 8.

There were no diving contests on this second day of competition, and this — combined with Iowa's inability to win either relay — hurt the Hawkeyes.

"We won both relays on the first day, but lost both on the second day," he said. "That was the difference."

Iowa finished within one minute of the Wildcats in each relay, and Davey said he was pleased with his team's performance. "On the whole, I was pretty happy with how we swam going into Big Tens," he said.

The Hawkeyes have two-and-a-half weeks to rest before the Big Tens, on Feb. 27 through March 1, in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Reavis sweeps Vegas

Michael Reavis put his chips down and went all-out on Feb. 8 in Las Vegas. He walked away with a nice reward.

The Iowa men's gymnast took first place on the vault in the event finals of the 2003 U.S. Gymnastics Association Winter Cup.

But Reavis' three teammates failed to enlarge their trophy cases. Senior Cameron Schick's best finish was on the parallel bars, where he garnered a 29th-place finish. Ryan Meeks finished 46th on the pommel horse, while Michael McNamara finished 27th in the parallel bars.

The No. 7 nationally ranked Hawkeyes will return to regular dual meet action Friday at Oklahoma.

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

GymHawks rowdy against MSU

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
THE DAILY IOWAN

It was clear the Iowa women's gymnastics team did something special as the names of Hawkeye gymnasts continued to be called during the results ceremony on Feb. 8 against Michigan State.

The Hawkeyes recorded their third-highest score in team history for their first victory of the season, defeating the Spartans, 196.55-193.925.

The No. 18-ranked Hawkeyes dominated the Spartans in every event, with junior Stephanie Gran finishing in first place in every event but one, including taking the all-around competition title.

"I'm actually really more excited about our team score," she said. "We've been trying to put together our team the whole year, and we finally hit."

Iowa started things off on the vault where the team posted a score of 48.8, tying for the seventh-highest score in school history. Gran led the event, with teammates Annie Rue and Kortny Williamson trailing close behind.

Alexis Maday took first place on the uneven bars, and teammate Nicole Wong scored a career-best 9.85 for second. Michelle Conway helped continue the Hawkeyes' domination with her third-place finish to give Iowa its fourth-best score ever in the event — a 49.2.

Iowa recorded its best score of the night and its second best in team history with a 49.3 on the balance beam. Gran and Maday tied for first place.

Maday, who was an All-American as a sophomore, competed in only two events against the Spartans because of some minor injuries, but Hawkeye coach Mike Lorenzen said he hopes that she will be ready to compete in the all-around in Friday's meet at Oklahoma.

The Hawkeyes finished the night strong by recording a 49.25 on the floor, tying for Iowa's third-highest score ever in the event. Gran once again took first place with a 9.95, and freshmen Elizabeth Grajewski and Kortny Williamson tied for second place with scores of 9.85.

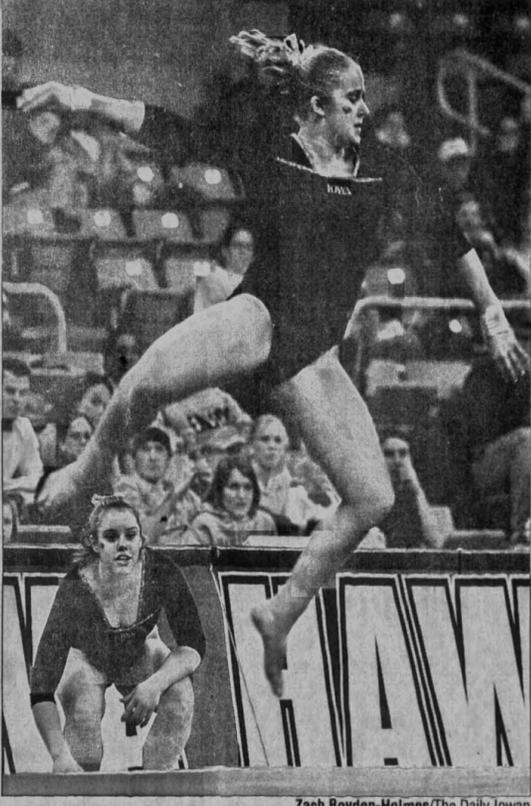

Conway, a transfer from UCLA, got the crowd going before the meet as she took hold of the microphone.

"I've been on a lot of different teams and I've always been the loud one who gets everybody riled up," Conway said.

The team was happy with the effectiveness of the people who did show up, but was a bit disappointed with the numbers.

"I'm disappointed because it feels like we're doing everything we can to create interesting events for people to come to," Lorenzen said.

MEN'S TENNIS

Unbeaten Hawkeyes steamroll past Rockets

BY KATIE LOW
THE DAILY IOWAN

The undefeated No. 74 Iowa men's tennis team blew away its second nonconference opponent of the spring season, trouncing the Toledo Rockets, 5-2, at home on Sunday.

The team's three seniors, Stuart Waters, Hunter Skogman, and Pete Rose, all nabbed victories at the No. 1, 2, and 3 singles spots respectively. All three were also winners in doubles, with Waters and Skogman teaming up at the No. 1 position and Rose playing with freshman Parker Ross at the No. 3 spot.

"The seniors did particularly well today," Hawkeye coach Steve Houghton said. "Each of them played a good strong opponent."

Waters, No. 65 in the country, defeated Dipesh Rao of Toledo in a hard-fought match (6-4, 6-2).

"I thought my opponent was dangerous," Waters said. "It took a while to get used to playing him. He didn't have a traditional style because he hit the ball so hard from very weird angles."

Skogman secured another tough match over Toledo's Khalid Al Nabhani, taking the win (6-3, 6-3). Rose easily grabbed a 6-1, 6-1 decision over Todd Wojtkowski.

Unlike the top three, the lower part of the lineup struggled; Ross and redshirt freshman Johan Bergenas were both defeated at Nos. 4-5. Ross fought a close first set, losing (7-5), and was unable to come back in the second set.

Bergenas started out great, taking the first set (6-0), but he was unable to contain opponent Mirsad Begic for the next two sets, dropping them (3-6, 6-7 [5-7]).

"In the lower part of the lineup, there's some freshman issues that need to be worked on," Houghton said. "These younger guys will get better as they get more experience."

Next weekend, the Hawkeyes will face the start of the Big Ten season when they will take on No. 2 Illinois on Friday.

"Illinois is one of the best teams in the country," Houghton said. "I'm sure its goal is to win the NCAA championships. Our mindset is to enter every match with the goal of winning it, but it will be a huge challenge, especially playing [the Illini] on their home court."

WEEKEND ROUNUPS

Quinn, Zoelle honored

Two Iowa women's soccer players were honored by Soccer Buzz, the women's collegiate Web publication for soccer.

Redshirt forward Katelyn Quinn and defender Kristin Zoelle were named to the Great Lakes region all-freshman team. Quinn was also named an honorable mention to the freshman All-America team.

Quinn led the Hawkeyes in scoring, netting 11 goals on 63 shots for 27 points in 2002. Zoelle was an integral part of a defense, allowing 1.18 goals per game. She scored one goal on 12 shots and played all but one game of the season.

Georgia Tech takedown

The No. 58 Iowa women's tennis team suffered another disappointing loss at the hands of No. 24 Georgia Tech team.

Iowa (0-3) was dominated in doubles play as all three teams fell to their Yellow Jacket opponents.

points. Faulkner returned to her old school for the first time since she transferred to Iowa in 2000 and scored 10 points on 4-for-12 from the field.

In the offensive absence of Lillis and Faulkner, freshman Johanna Solverson had one of her better games in weeks, scoring 13 points and went 6-for-11 from the field. Solverson was Iowa's leading scorer for the third time this season. Forward Jamie Cavey came off the bench and scored 10 points for Iowa.

"Jamie did a good job," Morgan said. "When one player isn't playing well we need someone else to step up."

Aminata Yanni was Illinois' leading scorer with 17 points followed by Cindy Dallas with 15 and Angelina Williams with 13. "Illinois did a good job of forcing us into things not typical of our offense creating 17 first-half turnovers," Bluder said. "We did not do a good job of transition defense, especially in the first half, but we did improve in the second half. I feel like we were not patient offensively."

Iowa ends its three game road trip on Thursday when it travels to Indiana. The Hawkeyes defeated the Hoosiers, 78-62, on Jan. 30 in Iowa City.

"We have to bounce back and get ready to play at Indiana," Bluder said.

Montreal snaps four-game losing streak

NHL

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Mathieu Garon made 25 saves in his first start of the season as the Canadiens snapped their four-game losing streak with a 2-0 win over the Capitals. Saku Koivu and Jan Bulis scored for Montreal, which moved within a point of Tampa Bay and the New York Islanders in the Eastern Conference standings.

It was the third shutout of Garon's career and first since Jan. 12, 2001 against Atlanta.

Garon was tested throughout by Washington. In the first period alone, Garon was forced to turn away two short-range chances from Jaromir Jagr and Michael Nylander.

New Jersey 3, Minnesota 2

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Patrik Elias scored a second-period goal and Martin Brodeur stopped 19 shots for his league-leading 30th win of the season, leading the Devils to a 3-2 victory over the Wild.

The victory moved New Jersey within a point of the Ottawa Senators for the best record in the NHL.

The Devils took a 1-0 lead in the first period on defenseman Colin White's fifth goal of the season.

John Madden got the play going by winning the faceoff and gave it to Turner Stevenson, who made the pass back to White at the right point. White then rifled a high shot to the right corner of the net that eluded goaltender Dwayne Roloson.

Dallas 3, Los Angeles 1

DALLAS — Mike Modano and Rob DiMaio scored in a 48-second span of the second period, and Modano added a third-period goal as the Stars opened a six-game home-stand with a victory.

Los Angeles took a 1-0 first-period lead on Derek Armstrong's eighth goal, but the Stars took control on the rapid-fire scores from Modano and DiMaio.

Modano took a lead pass from Claude Lemieux, skated in alone and beat goaltender Jamie Storr at 8:43.

DiMaio went hard to the net and converted a return pass from Ulf Dahlen, set up along the left boards, to put Dallas in front for good at 9:31.

Modano wrapped up the victory with 2:19 to play, working his way from the right boards to the front of the net for his 23rd goal.

Marty Turco made 24 saves for the Stars, who are 17-0 at home when leading after two periods.

Anaheim 2, Carolina 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Paul Kariya scored his 20th goal, and Jason Krog got his first career short-handed goal as the Mighty Ducks dealt the Hurricanes their sixth-straight loss.

Jean-Sebastien Giguere made 28 saves for the Ducks, who have won five of their last six games and 10 of 14 after going 0-6-1 in their previous seven. They have a two-point edge over Chicago for the eighth and final Western Conference playoff spot.

The Hurricanes, who have gone from Stanley Cup finalists to bottom-feeders, are last in the Southeast Division after their 14th loss in 15 games. They have dropped eight straight on the road getting outscored 37-14, and are only four points ahead of last-place.

EDITOR WANTED

An aggressive, talented individual is sought as editor of The Daily Iowan, Iowa City's largest newspaper, with an editorial staff of more than 60 young professionals, an editorial budget exceeding $300,000 and circulation of 20,500. free throws in that stretch.

Iowa shot only 12 free throws in the entire game, making 11. The Hawkeyes had been averaging 28 free throws a game in Big Ten play.

"They kept us out of the bonus both halves," Alford said. "There was apparently a memo sent out that I didn't see. Because that's been our strength all year, getting to the free-throw line."

Michigan (14-8, 7-2) pulled into a tie with Purdue for first place in the league. The Wolverines shot 61.5 percent in the second half, helped by converting turnovers and Iowa misses into fast-break points.

"We were winning by six with like 11 [minutes] left and playing good basketball," Horner said. "Then we just kind of hit a slump there with some bad basketball. We turned the ball over and they made lay-ups on us — lots of lay-ups."

Iowa again played without center Jared Reiner, who missed his third-straight game with a sprained right knee. Sean Sonderleiter led Iowa with 16 points, while Horner and Brody Boyd each scored 12.

Robinson led Michigan with 21 points and Horton had 16.

second time in one week. They met on Feb. 3 at the Cape Cod Potato Chip/NWCA All-Star Classic, winning, 6-2. Mocco repeated with a 5-3 win Sunday.

Luke Eustice and Moore kicked off the meet with two wins. Nittany Lion Scott Moore tied the score by pinning Moffitt in 4 minutes, 23 seconds. Iowa only allowed four more points the whole meet.

Unflappable and No. 1 ranked Smith beat No. 3 Mark Becks, 6-4, keeping his season record perfect at 25-0. Ty Eustice and Nixt each added four points of their own with major decisions.

Zalesky said the Feb. 7 loss may have spurred on the win.

"We made a break today. We wrestled better, with more emotion. The loss may have helped a little bit."

New Mariners manager ready for spring start

BY TIM KORTE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PEORIA, Ariz. — Bob Melvin has spent the last three months shaking hands and posing for photos. Finally, it's time to put on his new uniform as manager of the Mariners and get to work. "I've done everything except what they hired me to do," Melvin said. "I'm very, very anxious to get on the field."

The Mariners are getting an early start on spring training. Pitchers and catchers reported Sunday, and workouts begin today as Seattle prepares for a season-opening series in Japan against the Athletics.

Melvin

For Melvin, hired to replace the departed Lou Piniella, this day couldn't have come soon enough.

"I'm still sleeping but not as much," he said.

Melvin takes over the Mariners after four seasons as a major-league bench coach, the last two with the Arizona Diamondbacks. He played 10 years in the majors with seven teams, a journeyman catcher who had a career .233 batting average.

Now, he's managing at age 41, only one year older than Mariners players Edgar Martinez and Jamie Moyer. And he's replacing the colorful Piniella, who left for Tampa Bay after last season to live closer to his family.

Melvin was asked if he will throw hats or kick bases, as Piniella sometimes did.

"I really don't know," he said. "I know I'm going to be very positive and upbeat. I know I'm going to stick up for our players. How upset and what I'm going to do, that's uncharted waters."

For months, Melvin has had the Mariners on his mind. Around the house, ideas often pop into his head. Maybe it's the batting order or how a pitcher threw in certain situations last season, and Melvin often stops whatever he's doing to glance at statistics.

"It almost makes your head spin," he said. "You have so many left-right options here. You have so many guys who can play different positions. I had a whole notebook. I finally quit doing it."

Melvin asked the front office to pursue versatile bench players such as Gregg Colbrunn and John Mabry to improve team depth, and the Mariners landed outfielder Randy Winn as compensation for releasing Piniella.

At the same time, Melvin knows better than to tinker too much with a successful formula. Ichiro Suzuki is still expected to bat leadoff, and Melvin is counting on Gold Glove infielders Bret Boone and John Olerud.

"You've got to run this team the way they're able to do things," Melvin said. "For me to come into a winning situation and say I've got to put my stamp on it, I don't think that's the right thing to do."

He plans to delegate to friends, bringing in former Mariners manager Rene Lachemann as bench coach. He also trusts incumbent pitching coach Bryan Price, who's entering his 14th season in the Seattle organization.

"He's almost going to be like a bench coach," Melvin said. "The most important thing in the American League, as far as the manager is concerned once the game has started, is the pitching changes."

Melvin knows expectations haven't changed in Seattle, where 116 wins two years ago wasn't good enough to reach the World Series. And 93 victories last season didn't even get the Mariners into the playoffs from the AL West.

Perhaps his time with the Diamondbacks, which included a ring from the 2001 World Series, can provide an intangible boost.

"This team is trying to win a World Series," Melvin said. "Some of my experiences in Arizona, depending on the time and situation, I do have that to draw from. And this is a similar club to what we had in Arizona — a veteran club."

What your adviser doesn't want to hear

- So, if I sign the four-year plan, in how many years do I have to graduate?
- I'm just here to nab a husband.
- I'm just here to party.
- I'm just here cuz my parents made me.
- Which classes can I sleep through?
- Where's the library?
- If I flunk, do I get a refund?
- I want to be an actor.
- When was the deadline?
- What's a resumé?
- Dude, but I studied for like two hours.
- Can I study abroad in Cancún?
- Is English considered a foreign language?
