UI pushes ahead with biomass test

The UI and the Quaker Oats Co. are negotiating terms of an agreement that would allow the university $800,000 annually in energy costs.

The university and Quaker Oats are in the second testing stage of a process that began two years ago with an initial test of a 200-kilowatt system. The system is a part of a larger process that would transform corn stover into electricity.

The process is expected to be up and running within the first decade of the 21st century.

However, the university has yet to receive any formal requests from the state to begin the process.

Mullen still fighting the 'unfriendly fire'

A seriously injured Vietnam veteran activist finds her fight with the memory of her son's death and the American government's perception of her son's death.

At Thursday's International Women's Month event on Women and War, Peg Mullen told a crowd of more than 60 that President Bush's plan for war is the same one used in Vietnam. She also declared that the Iraqis are fighting each other.

"If you weren't shot in the eye, you weren't counted," she said. This action prompted Mullen and her non-combat veteran husband to find out why their son and the other soldiers at his age were counted only by their own country.

"It was in the time of two wars, which made me look for a solution," she said. "Sometimes you have to do things that you thought you would never have to." Being on the national stage has made Mullen a subject of a number of articles, which then wrote the acclaimed Unfriendly Fire. A Vietnam Veteran's Memoir, which lights her fight to reveal what happened to her son in Vietnam, and which was published by Simon & Schuster.

IOWA MEN'S AND WOMEN'S TRACK

Last chance for Hawkeyes to qualify

Iowa's men's and women's track teams remain

BY J.K. PERRY

The Iowa track women and men have one last opportunity this weekend to qualify for the NCAA meet. Nine members of the team will compete at the Last Roundup this weekend, another shot at qualifying.

Indoor track will have an obvious advantage for the women as an experimental day will await to see. Sarah Stiffen in the 400-meter hurdles, and Sami Haid in the triple vault, will attempt to improve those performances.

This year's medley relay teams of the past few weeks have consisted of freshman Amanda Harris, senior Abby Hare, senior Nicole Barbor, and freshman Sarah Baer. This weekend, coaches are taking a risk and changing things around.

Barbor, who is normally reserved for the 1,600-meter portion of the race, will replace Thomas in the 1,200-meter first leg of the race. Nicole Consuegra will move into the lineup for the 440-meter leg of the second, and Amanda Harris will run the third leg of the championship.

"We wanted to experiment to see if solutions could be found," Iowa assistant coach Wande Angel. "If we can beat 1:10, that would be something wrong.

Last year at the Last Roundup, Stiffen nearly qualified for the NCAA's, only missing the provisional qualification of 1:54 by one-hundredth of a second. The Hawks won a championship this year, I'm very confident this team can win the next one."

We wanted to experiment to see if solutions could be found."
