Poll: Residents support 21-only measure

But council receives barrage of e-mails opposing law

BY LEA FITZGERALD AND RYAN J. FOLEY
THE DAILY IOWAN

The public-relations battle to sway the Iowa City City Council on an ordinance that would raise the age for entrance to bars to 21 heated up from both sides on Thursday.

A poll released by the group leading the charge for the ordinance, the Stepping Up Project, showed that more than three-fifths of Iowa City and Coralville residents support the ordinance. Approximately the same number of the 400 residents polled consider underage drinking the biggest problem facing the community, believe binge drinking is a serious problem, and think access to bars is a major factor in student drinking.

But the City Council, which will get a first draft of the ordinance next month, also received a batch of e-mails on the issue from opponents of the measure, many of whom wrote as part of bar owners' "Save Downtown Iowa City" campaign.

Stepping Up contends that its poll shows widespread public support for its case that making the bars 21-only would deal a blow to binge and underage drinking and the reported consequences: vandalism, sexual and physical assault, drunk driving, property damage, and noise disturbances.

"This survey shows what we have believed all along — that there is concern in the community about the harmful effects of underage drinking and excessive drinking and that the people who live here want to take all reasonable steps to reduce those harmful effects," said Stepping Up co-director Carolyn Cavitt.

But the e-mail writers to the city councilors warned that those very problems would be made worse by a 21-only ordinance, which would fuel house parties in which binge drinking is less regulated, drugs are more common, and sexual assault is a big problem.

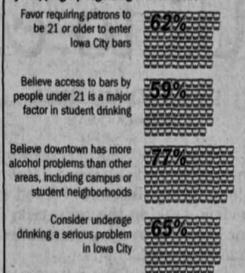

"In a town where intellect, open-mindedness, and culture have always ruled, I find it amazing that the council can look past all logic, history, and even common sense in its latest ploy against binge drinking," Kelly Mellecker wrote.

At off-campus parties, "people play drinking games and do beer bong; this only leads to people getting wasted," Justin Ruane wrote. "Not only that, but people are more likely to get into fights, take advantage of unsuspecting girls, and be exposed to illegal drug use."

In all, 29 writers urged the council to back off the measure, while three showed support. Many said the law would have

President Bush departs down the Cross Hall at the conclusion of his prime-time news conference in the White House East Room on Thursday. In the rare formal news conference, he made clear the U.S. will move to oust Saddam Hussein even without U.N. support.

Bush: U.S. to push on despite critics

BY DANA MILBANK AND MIKE ALLEN
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Thursday night he would press ahead with a U.N. Security Council vote on Iraq's disarmament despite formidable opposition, but he left no doubt whether he would act to oust Saddam Hussein even without the blessing of the world body.

"No matter what the whip count is, we're calling for the vote," the president said in a prime-time news conference in the East Room of the White House, a day after France, Russia, and Germany vowed to oppose the American resolution opening the way to an attack on Iraq. "We want to see people stand up and say what their opinion is about Saddam Hussein and the utility of the U.N. Security Council. And so, you bet. It's time for people to show their cards, let the world know where they stand when it comes to Saddam."

The rare formal news conference by Bush was an effort to regain momentum for the American position on the eve of chief U.N. weapons inspector Hans Blix's latest report on Iraq's compliance. Bush made clear his view that the inspections process has become a "willful charade" and that Saddam was "a cancer inside Iraq." He hinted that a military attack could be imminent. "After next week — we'll just wait and see."

Yet Bush's appearance was markedly subdued in an atmosphere designed to reassure Americans and allies that the American position was thoughtful and not rash. He spoke softly and slowly in a tone of sad resignation, eschewing the folksy phrases and "cowboy" rhetoric that often punctuate his off-the-cuff remarks. Instead, he delivered little new information and repeated passages from recent speeches on Iraq, sprinkling his remarks with qualifiers and reassurance.

Bush, in his 52-minute appearance, voiced the word "hope" 16 times and said eight times that he would only wage war "if we have to." Bush, in a gesture to his overseas critics, repeatedly used the word "peace" or "peacefully," declaring that his goal is peace, that Iraq is a threat to peace, and that if Saddam were forcibly disarmed, it would be "in the name of peace."

"I pray for peace," Bush said. "I pray for peace."

Shift on foreign students alarms some UI officials

BY AMIR EFRATI
THE DAILY IOWAN

The federal tracking of international students and scholars has shifted to the enforcement division of the new Department of Homeland Security, a move that has alarmed UI officials and foreign nationals.

As of March 1, the Student Exchange and Visitor Information System — Sevis — a central computer database containing the nation's nearly 600,000 foreign-student profiles, fell under the jurisdiction of Homeland Security's law-enforcement wing, the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement.

Signed into law in November 2002, the Homeland Security Act dissolved the Immigration and Naturalization Service and reorganized it into three bureaus under Homeland Security. It gave the Bureau of Citizenship and Immigration Services control over all responsibilities for international students except regulating Sevis.

Officials in the Office of International Students and Scholars describe the move as symbolic of the government's "aggressive" intentions. They say the move will cause complications and force them to work with personnel who are unfamiliar with student regulations.

Frosh dropouts point to money problems

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Most UI freshman students who drop out cite rising tuition and personal feelings as their reasons for departing, a new study reported Thursday.

More than 700 UI freshmen failed to return for their second year in the fall of 2002, 17.5 percent of the original class.

Almost 150 responded to surveys, citing three major reasons for leaving: They wanted to transfer to a lower-cost institution, they could not afford the tuition increases, and they felt they did not belong.

Out-of-state non-returnees identified financial problems as their biggest concern, but UI officials say they are most concerned about students feeling disconnected.

The UI has implemented several programs, such as the freshman course The College Transition and seven residence-hall communities, to help students adapt, said Lola Lopes, the associate provost for undergraduate education.

In-state students who left the university and were not on probation said class sizes were too large and the quality of instruction did not meet expectations.

Non-returnees who were on academic probation said they left because they were undecided about their majors, performed poorly, were academically unprepared, had inadequate study skills, had uninteresting courses, or didn't find their desired programs.

Lopes said many of these students recognized that their preparation left them liable for a weaker academic performance than their peers.

"At the very least, we should communicate as hard as we can to high schools around the state to make sure they help students understand that college is different from high school," she said.

Humor intact, Rhodes returns to UI's top tier

BY JOHN MOLSEED
THE DAILY IOWAN

Ann Rhodes is slowly climbing the university's chain of command after a controversial slip of the tongue three years ago sent her tumbling from one of the UI's highest-profile positions.

The UI alumna was named the university's assistant vice president for Health Affairs on Feb. 1, a promotion from the post she took in 2000 as a university counsel, where she helped rewrite the Iowa Code and responded to requests for information under open-record laws. In her newest position, restricts public access to an individual's health and insurance information.

"It's exciting," she said of the newly created position. "It's nice to get out more and work with people in the different institutions."

Rhodes will work with various university departments to ensure they comply with the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act, a new law that restricts public access to an individual's health and insurance information.

Rhodes departed her Jessup Hall office in January with mixed feelings. For 16 years, the building had been her home away from home, where she had served as vice president for University Relations, earning national praise for her calming response to the Nov. 1, 1991, Gang Lu shootings in which the former UI graduate student fatally shot five people in Van Allen and Jessup Halls and wounded one student before turning his gun on himself.

Rhodes spent the afternoon relaying information to the public, her face and name broadcast across the nation.

She served in that position for 11 years, stepping down months after making a controversial comment in April 2000 that will follow her to her grave.

In an address to the media and public regarding a rash of threatening e-mails sent to minority students in the College of Dentistry, Rhodes expressed surprise that Tarsha Clairborne, a black dental student, admitted to sending the threatening notes, including a bomb threat, and placing a bowl of dyed-red noodles on a black den-

Regents to increase UI fees

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

The state Board of Regents is considering four new fees and 11 fee increases to make up for increased costs, including an 8.5 percent room-and-board hike.

Hourly parking rates could also rise from $.60 to $.75 in public meters, monthly rates for faculty/staff surface reserved parking could increase from $26 to $30 per month.

Rates for reserved faculty/staff ramp parking could climb from $39 to $45. Commuter parking rates could grow from $13 to $14 per month.

The state board of Regents will consider the fees next week.

University officials propose implementing a new $10 registration fee for class changes in addition to providing the service online. Although students previously could change classes up to six days after the start of the semester without financial consequences, documents released Thursday say the new fee will not generate additional revenue.

An $8 and $16 fee is currently charged for class changes made six and 16 days after the start of the semester respectively.

Other new fees regents will consider include a $20 College of Education fee for students enrolled in core teacher-education courses. Revenues from the fee will help to maintain and enhance the Web-based ePortfolio project and to help cover the costs associated with fingerprinting, criminal-background checks, and standardized testing.

A $250 admission/tuition deposit would be charged to students in the College of Pharmacy, and a $150 admission/tuition deposit is proposed for the College of Law. The fees would be credited toward tuition and establish nonrefundable payments to reduce late student withdrawals.

Graduation fees could increase from $15 to $25 to cover the rising costs associated with personal and mailings and also to improve diploma production.

Application fees for graduate and professional college could increase from $30 to $50 for U.S. students and $50 to $75 for international students to cover the cost of tracking foreign students and their families.

Regents will also consider proposed residence-hall rate increases. The university is looking at a $446 increase for a double-occupancy room with full board, bringing the next year's possible rate up to $5,701 from 2002's $5,255.

UI to examine diversity efforts

BY CASEY WAGNER
THE DAILY IOWAN

In keeping strong with his vow to promote diversity, new UI President David Skorton ordered a review gauging the university's success in attracting minorities and women to campus.

"Regardless of the outcome of the Supreme Court's deliberations on the affirmative-action case involving the University of Michigan, here at the UI we will not retreat from our long-standing commitment to diversity," Skorton said. "If we need to change how we pursue that goal, we will."

It will be the first time the university has attempted such a task, said Charlotte Westerhaus, the director of the school's Affirmative Action Office, and the information gathered from the review will help determine whether the university efforts are headed in the right direction.

The review will transcend sex and ethnicity, she said, and it will also look into the social and economic status of its students and employees. A cost, timeline, and other details for the review have not yet been completed, she said.

"A lot of good things have happened out there, and a lot of individuals have made a giant effort," Westerhaus said. "The best way for the UI to move forward is to look at where we are now."

However, the numbers of minorities are nowhere near where the university would like them to be, said Joe Coulter, the university's associate provost for diversity. The school's goal is to have 12 percent minority students and 15 percent minority faculty and staff, he said.

According to an annual snapshot profiling the university's students by the Registrar's Office, there were 2,568 minority students on campus in September 2002, not including international students, 9.1 percent of all students, slightly up from the previous year.

Minorities make up nearly 8 percent of the university's faculty and staff, while women account for more than 61 percent.

Coulter said one of the school's main obstacles in achieving diversity is overcoming the demographics of the state; minorities only account for 6 percent of Iowa's population.

"People need to be exposed to different backgrounds and cultures," he said. "In order to provide a good classroom experience, we need to have a diversity of viewpoints."

Outreach efforts by such programs as Opportunities at Iowa and the College Bound Program strive to get more minorities to visit the UI campus and discover the university's cultural centers and groups, Coulter said.

Krystal Jossell, the president of the Black Student Union, said the university needs to make more of an effort introducing minorities to those cultural resources.

The sophomore from Maywood, Ill., said she was not aware of any of the university's cultural centers or organizations until she became a student. Promoting the diversity and many cultural groups would help to improve the university's image among minorities, she said.

"It starts with the incoming freshmen and giving them a reason to come here," Jossell said. "You have to let minorities know they will feel comfortable here."

UI pushes ahead with biomass test

BY KELLEY CASINO
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI and the Quaker Oats Co. are negotiating terms of an agreement that could save the university $500,000 annually in energy costs.

The university and Quaker Oats are in the second testing phase of the Biomass Project, which burns byproducts from cereal production at the company's plant in Cedar Rapids, Fernan Milster, the Facilities Services Group's associate director of utilities, told the Campus Planning Committee on Thursday.

If approved permanently, the project is expected to replace 50 percent of the coal burned at the university's Power Plant per year — 30,000 tons, he said. The change would lower the cost of energy for the university and lower levels of carbon dioxide emissions by 72,000 tons.

"We can make this a win-win situation for not only Quaker and the UI, but the state of Iowa as well," Milster said, adding that it was unclear when the process could be put into effect permanently. Project managers are working to obtain environmental permits to continue the process, he said.

Committee Chairwoman Barbara Eckstein, an associate professor of English, voiced support for the project during the 30-minute presentation, but she questioned why only 50 percent of the coal would be replaced by the byproducts and not all of it.

"Fifty percent is what we thought we could burn without sacrificing any reliability," Milster said.

The university has already begun modifying Power Plant equipment to facilitate the change, he said, adding that the university's total investment is projected to be less than $500,000.

Quaker Oats approached the university in late 2001, looking for alternative uses and markets for material produced during the cereal-making process.

"Quaker has always been an environmentally conscious company," said Stephen Jenkins, the project leader for Quaker Oats. "This has presented us a great opportunity to remain environmentally conscious and to help out the UI."

The Power Plant's fluidized bed boiler proved to be ideal for burning the byproducts as an energy source, Milster said. A new silo and some of the interior machinery used for the process was paid for by Quaker Oats.

The second 90-day test burn of oat hulls using the new system and handling equipment is expected to end next month. The first test burn of resifil, a byproduct of oat hulls that have been processed to make various chemical products, was completed in the fall of 2002.

"We proved the concept, and we learned a lot about what doesn't work," Milster said of the first test burn.

Overall, he said, the biomass-burning trial is going well.

"We're still discovering things that need to be improved, but right now our greatest difficulty is the material-delivery process and making that more effective," he said. "That is limiting the rate at which we can burn biomass. We want to be able to burn it as fast as Quaker is delivering it."

Trial delayed in 1981 rape/homicide

A man accused of kidnapping and murdering a UI lab technician 22 years ago will wait another six months before standing trial, a District Court judge ruled Thursday.

Defense attorneys for Richard Dodd filed a motion to continue the first-degree kidnapping and first-degree murder trial, originally slated for March 24, to gain time to examine additional witnesses and DNA evidence.

"The state has indicated it has some more witnesses it will call, and it has notified us just very recently of that," defense attorney Richard Klausner said.

Dodd, 46, will stand trial in Johnson County on Sept. 8. He is serving a life sentence for kidnapping and raping a 10-year-old Des Moines girl.

Although the state has identified new witnesses, Assistant Johnson County Attorney Janet Lyness said she pared down the original 57-name list since filing the charges on Feb. 1, 2002.

The trial, expected to last two weeks, is the culmination of a nearly two-decade investigation into the death of 22-year-old Vicki Klotzbach. Three days after the Coralville woman disappeared, an Iowa State Patrol plane spotted her half-naked body in a field north of Interstate 80 on Oct. 23, 1981.

Law-enforcement officials said Klotzbach was attacked, sexually assaulted, and shot once in the back of the head on Oct. 20, 1981.

Coralville Police Chief Barry Bedford said officers struggled with the investigation until 1996, when state authorities used DNA testing to match Dodd to a Western-style revolver used in the alleged murder.

Dodd is serving his life sentence at the Iowa State Penitentiary in Fort Madison.

Mullen still fighting the 'unfriendly fire'

BY DONOVAN HANNAH
THE DAILY IOWAN

A nationally known antiwar activist fuels her fight with the memory of her son's death and the American government's potential war against Iraq.

At Thursday's International Women's Month event on Women and War, Peg Mullen told a crowd of more than 50 that President Bush's plan for war is the same one used in Texas while he was governor.

"He wants to execute the Iraq people the same way he did people in Texas," she said. "He put 150 people to death."

The founder of Mothers and Others for Ending the Draft said Bush has "no thought at all" and will have the U.S. military fighting against its own weapons.

"Our tanks are fighting each other," Mullen said. "The weapons used by the Iraqis and others are American."

An Iowa farm woman, Mullen became an activist after her son Michael, an Army soldier and UI graduate, was killed in 1970 by "friendly fire" in Vietnam. While he slept, a chunk of motor shrapnel ricocheted off a tree and struck him in the back, piercing his heart.

After learning that their son had been killed, Mullen and her husband, Gene, alienated the Iowa American Legion by refusing a military funeral and a posthumous Good Conduct Medal.

The Waterloo resident had said in an interview with Newsweek in 1976, "Why should [the American Legion] award Michael an award after he was dead?"

The Mullens were also irate when they read an official notice from the Army stating that Michael was being docked pay for nine days advance leave he had taken but had not lived long enough to earn back.

"My son's life was only worth $1,800 to the army," said Mullen. "This was Michael's gratuity, which we used to pay for ads in the Des Moines Register to encourage parents to speak up against the war."

The Texas-born activist, who also protested the Gulf War in 1991, said that the Army in the 1970s didn't count soldiers who died at the hands of their own military.

"If you weren't shot in the eye, you weren't counted," she said.

This action prompted Mullen and her now-deceased husband to find out why their son and others were mistreated by their own country.

"I was in rage for two weeks, which made me want to fight," she said. "Sometimes you have to do things that you thought you would never have to do."

Being on the national stage has made Mullen a subject of a television movie and prompted her to write a book. On April 22, 1979, ABC aired Friendly Fire, which documented Mullen's campaign. She then wrote the acclaimed Unfriendly Fire, A Mother's Memoir, which highlights her fight to reveal what happened to her son in Vietnam.

X-walks to get lights, 'shark teeth'

BY JESSE HELLING
THE DAILY IOWAN

At the urging of local residents, approximately six Iowa City crosswalks will be part of a pilot program designed to increase pedestrian safety.

Funded by a $35,000 grant from the Iowa Department of Transportation, in-pavement lights, similar to those on a fashion runway, will be installed this summer on one or two crosswalks. Shark's-tooth yield lines on the pavement and "Turning Traffic Must Yield" signs will also be implemented on several other crosswalks.

In a March 5 memo, Jeff Davidson, a city assistant planning director, outlined the specific measures, saying crosswalks selected for upgrades will be videotaped before and after the implementation to monitor driver reactions. The city will examine whether drivers stop in Safer intersections?

In-Pavement Crosswalk Lights: LED lights triggered by a push button or infrared sensor, intended to make crosswalks and pedestrians within them more visible. To be tested at 1 (possibly 2) locations.

Shark's-tooth Yield Lines: Pavement markings used with crosswalk markings with the yield triangle in the direction of oncoming traffic. To be tested at approximately 5 locations.

"Turning Traffic Must Yield To Pedestrians" signs: Traffic signs intended to reinforce state law that motorists must always yield to a pedestrian within a marked crosswalk. Criteria for the installation of the signs to be developed.

Source: DI research CK/DI advance of the crosswalk, turn their heads to look for pedestrians, or yield, he said.

The Transportation Planning Division will study the measures for at least a year before possibly expanding to other crosswalks, said Beth Pfohl, a city traffic-engineering planner.

In addition to effectiveness, the lighted crosswalks will be analyzed to see how they stand up to snow and ice, she said, adding that the city has not determined where improvements will be made.

Intersections with large numbers of pedestrian and high traffic volume are the most likely candidates, Pfohl said.

"Every intersection should be treated by pedestrians with equal caution," she said.

One potentially dangerous crosswalk stands out in Mayor Ernie Lehman's mind.

Lehman owns Enzler's Inc., 118 S. Clinton St., in sight of the crosswalk between the Old Capitol Town Center and the Pedestrian Mall.

"It's bothered me for 22 years," he said, referring to the combination of high-speed vehicular traffic and massive number of pedestrians.

However, he said, the city has a strong record of pedestrian safety. Statistics on the number of pedestrians struck by vehicles in Iowa City were not available.

"In a community with the number of pedestrians we have, we do pretty well," Lehman said. "Pedestrian safety needs to be one of our highest priorities."

The current plan is the latest in a series of improvements to local crosswalks.

Over the past year, area "walk/don't walk" signals have been upgraded to include brighter lights.

In September 2002, countdown crosswalk signals were installed at four intersections on U.S. Highway 6 in southern Iowa City at a cost of $3,520. The latest measures will be discussed at a March 11 during a Iowa City Council work session.

"We want this to be a pedestrian-friendly community," Pfohl said.

Atkins: Proposal could city cost $4 million

BY PHIL DAVIDSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

A recently proposed bill that would completely overhaul Iowa's property-tax legislation could cost Iowa City $4 million and work against the state's economic growth, one city official says.

Senate File 41, introduced by Sen. David Miller, R-Fairfield, aims to "fairly" tax each class of property. The bill, filed Jan. 23, was sent to cities and counties across Iowa for analysis.

In a March 4 letter to Miller, Iowa City City Manager Steve Atkins said that if the legislation were enacted, it would result in a $4 million reduction in Iowa City's general-fund revenue.

"Easily translated, a reduction of this size would result in the layoff of employees and thereby a direct reduction in city-supported public services,"

Atkins wrote.

Miller's proposal would limit the percentage the state could tax different types of property, including commercial, agricultural, and residential land. A proposed 4 percent tax limitation on commercial land would give such property some relief, the state senator said.

Atkins said the proposal would be inflation-adjusted, which means the city's income could only grow at the amount equal to inflation regardless of other market-driven cost increases. This would not provide more revenue, he said.

Miller said the proposal is intended to get rid of unpredictable tax rates.

Under Miller's plan, a $100,000 home would have a $20,000 exemption, making $80,000 taxable at a 1.5 percent limit levied on residential property, he said.

He argues his bill is more beneficial to homeowners than the current system, under which a $100,000 home could be subject to a 50 percent roll-back, making the remaining $50,000 subject to unpredictable tax rates.

Miller sent a letter to Atkins on Thursday, asking him to re-evaluate the proposal. He said Atkins calculated the limitations for residential property incorrectly. Atkins projected the tax rate four years from now and applied it to current figures, overestimating the city's loss by $2 million, Miller said.

The bill, just one of several tax revisions being proposed by state legislators, has yet to be discussed in the state House.

Anti-21-only writers deluge council adverse economic consequences by driving many bars out of business. "If you move the bars to 21, I guarantee that the downtown will suddenly become a ghost town," Christina D. Preiss wrote.

Fewer bars will make for a safer downtown and open the way for private business to provide some alcohol-free alternatives for underage students, Stepping Up said.

"Reducing the low-cost alcohol access underage drinkers have will drive down the aggressive competition between bars and will raise the cost of alcohol," said Jim Clayton, a co-director of Stepping Up and the owner of the Soap Opera, 119 E. College St. "When the cost of alcohol goes up, the [amount] of excess drinking goes down.

"There is too much competition for those types of businesses today. Given the venue of alcohol, I can go buy a coke for $2 or go to a bar and buy a 64-ounce pitcher of beer for 50 cents."

The issue isn't beer prices because the majority of revenue that comes from underage people is from cover charges and food sales, said Mike Porter, the owner of the Summit and One-Eyed Jakes, who is the most active opponent of the measure.

Porter said existing laws are working, pointing to a recent police check of 20-30 bars that showed the bars were in compliance. "The bars and enforcement have gotten better," he said.

As the lobbying of the council intensified, Mayor Ernie Lehman, a member of Stepping Up, renewed his support for the measure.

"The biggest reason for the ordinance is the number of tickets given to underage drinkers is showing a huge population of illegal consumption; we need to make sure our state laws are enforced," he said, pointing to the 2,271 alcohol-possession tickets that Iowa City police gave out last year.

Five of seven councilors have shown support for the ordinance, which could go into effect as early as this summer. City Attorney Eleanor Dilkes is examining similar laws in other cities as she drafts the measure.

Many of the anti-ordinance e-mailers sought to put the councilors' jobs at stake, noting that they are against the measure and will vote in the next election. Some also said they were responding to published reports about the hundreds of e-mails from parents asking for the ordinance that the council has reportedly received.

At a news conference, Stepping Up said it paid Cogent

Research of Cambridge, Mass., approximately $20,000 for the random telephone poll, which was conducted in November 2002. It also found that most residents favor strict enforcement of laws prohibiting selling alcohol to minors and enforcing laws related to fake IDs.

"Hopefully, this will give further support for a 21-ordinance in Iowa City," Cavitt said.

But the council received mixed signals. Jay Boshara, 40, an Iowa City resident who said he does not patronize the bars, called a 21-ordinance "a ludicrous proposal that will do significant harm to this town."

Another writer, Steve Locher, did not take a stand on the issue but sympathized as he forwarded an article about underage drinking: "I wouldn't want to be in your shoes when it comes to making a decision!"

BUSH

Yet while carefully qualifying his remarks at times, Bush at several points spoke of war as a fait accompli. In his discussion of a budget request for the cost of his war, which his staff has said will be sent to Congress only after hostilities begin, Bush said: "In terms of the dollar amount, well, we'll let you know here pretty soon."

At one point, he said flatly: "We will be changing the regime of Iraq for the good of the Iraqi people." Bush also suggested the inevitability of war when he said he thinks constantly about the responsibility of committing troops. "I believe we'll prevail. I know we'll prevail," Bush said.

As for inspections, he left no room for further discussion. "It makes no sense to allow this issue to continue on and on in the hopes that Saddam Hussein disarm," Bush said. "We gave him a chance. As a matter of fact, we gave him 12 years of chances."

The president repeatedly spoke of the national sovereignty of the United States, a signal that he would not be bound by international opposition to his Iraq campaign. "Saddam Hussein and his weapons are a direct threat to this country," he said, also vowing that "I will not leave the American people at the mercy of the Iraqi dictator and his weapons."

At one point, Bush raised his right hand as if taking the presidential oath, a gesture he made at the close of each of his campaign speeches. "My job is to protect America, and that's exactly what I'm going to do," he said. "People can ascribe all kinds of intentions. I swore to protect and defend the Constitution. ... And that's exactly what I am going to do."

U.S. switch on students alarms officials said losing the UT's positive reputation with INS employees will mean that new bureau officials who have enforcement backgrounds might not be flexible in dealing with unique visa-status problems encountered by the university's nearly 2,000 foreign students.

"The fact that it's the police makes you think twice," she said.

Bureau officials said Thursday that Sevis belongs in the enforcement wing because it is an "enforcement tool" to help manage foreign students and that it will continue to house the same information as before. Spokesman Chris Bentley said the ongoing governmental transitions should not burden college administrators because they will be working with the same INS employees.

"This should be a transparent change for universities," he said.

Another bureau spokesman, Tim Counts, echoed Bentley's statements, saying that placing the tracking system under an enforcement umbrella ensures that those students who are here will maintain their status and that, if they violate the terms of their stay, enforcement will not deviate from the pre-March incorporation of Sevis.

Although Bentley said the change wasn't meant as a surprise, UI international-student advisers said Monday's change caused "unexpected" frustration and disbelief. Adviser Susan Fullenkamp said she is scared that because government branches have not communicated effectively with each other in the past, the splintering of foreign-student functions will mean colleges will deal with disjointed Homeland Security bureaus.

"The one hand isn't going to know what the other is doing," she said.

As employees make the transition to Homeland Security, one national organization is beginning to fight against Sevis' inclusion in the law-enforcement division. Katherine Bellows, the vice president of public affairs at Nafsa: Association of International Educators, a group that networks foreign-student administrators — including the UTs — said she will lobby Congress to move the program to Immigration Services.

She has asked administrators to document all problems that occur as a result of poor Homeland Security training and jurisdiction, so she can back her case to make Sevis a service of Immigration Services.

"[Congress] sees [foreign students] not as an answer right now but as a threat, and I think that's a serious mistake," Bellows said.

tal student's doorstep with the note, "Dead Black Man's Brains."

When asked her feelings on the revelation, Rhodes cracked: "I figured it was going to be a white guy between 25 and 55 because they're the root of most evil."

The "joke" swept the nation, igniting a firestorm of criticism about a woman already familiar with fielding death threats and malice for some of her previous decisions.

"It never even occurred to me people would think it reflected my feelings," she said regarding the remark.

Indeed, her sense of humor surfaces easily, and friends knew her statement was meant as a harmless joke, she said, adding that she knew she made a mistake as soon as she spoke.

"I still hear about it," Rhodes said "It will be on my tombstone."

The statement wasn't the only time Rhodes found herself in the public's cross hairs. She experienced a harsh backlash as a member of the search committee that hired Kirk Ferentz in 1998 to replace longtime UI football coach Hayden Fry.

"It got pretty ugly," she said. "Criticisms, death threats — I ran the whole gambit."

She viewed the experience as character-building and used the sense of humor that would later be her downfall to get through it. She imagined the dozens of daily e-mails as part of her Lenten penance.

"I told myself every 'Die, bitch' gives me leave to eat some good chocolate," Rhodes said.

She said she didn't see Ferentz's and the Hawkeyes' success last season as vindication because she already knew he was a brilliant coach.

Robert Kelch, the vice president for Health Affairs, appointed Rhodes to her latest position based on her background in health and law. She earned a M.A. in nursing and a law degree from the UI. Rhodes' somewhat controversial background didn't affect his decision, he said.

"She's exceptionally qualified," said Kelch, who will directly oversee Rhodes. "She's already impressed me greatly. She's taken steps to develop a system to help make sure all institutions are in compliance."

Celebrating Afghan women's rights

BY BETH HERZINGER
THE DAILY IOWAN

Sunita Mehta's book has been her ticket to communities all over the world, including an anticipated return to Iowa City — the place in which her inspiration began.

She will read from Women for Afghan Women: Shattering Myths and Claiming the Future, at 8 p.m. today at Prairie Lights Books. The book, which Mehta edited, contains a collection of essays from a wide variety of women, both Afghan and American.

"I'm very excited to be in Iowa City for International Women's Day," she told The Daily Iowan in a phone interview Thursday. "It's the place on Earth where I decided to devote my life to women's issues."

She came to Iowa City in 1993 to work at the Emma Goldman Clinic as the community program assistant. She wrote press releases and spoke at such events as Take Back the Night. The job inspired her to realize the power and potential of grassroots women's organizations.

"It's such an honor that that's where I honed my skills," she said.

Mehta is a co-founder of Women for Afghan Women, a collective of Afghan and non-Afghan women committed to ensuring the human rights of women in Afghanistan. The group began in April 2001.

"Our work in New York led us to many amazing young women with concerns and energy but no organization through which to work," she said. "We began outreach to bring as many new and interesting women together as we could who were dedicated to working against the current human-rights violations in Afghanistan."

The group began work on a conference to bring together scholars and activists in a discussion forum. The 9/11 terrorist attacks in New York had a deep effect on the work of the organization.

"We are a New York-based group and experienced a double grief as a result of the horrific attacks," Mehta said. "First, there was the tragedy in our city. Second, we experienced grief knowing that the response would be an attack on the country in which our activism was based and that some of us called home."

The planned conference, "Securing Our Future," took place in November 2001 with the same speakers but a much different message and goal. Women for Afghan Women invited speakers with a variety of different views, including those with feminist, theological, and academic perspectives.

Women for Afghan Women: Shattering Myths and Claiming the Future was inspired and made possible by the conference.

A representative from St. Martin's Press attended the conference, and after witnessing the first panel discussion, he walked down the block to his office and returned in time for the second panel with a book deal.

"The book is our passport to getting audiences in small communities," Mehta said. "It helps us channel energy into communities we love and will not give up on."

In addition to planning a third annual conference in the fall, her group maintains a commitment to community outreach in New York City. The organization raises funds for the emerging women leaders in Afghanistan, and it is committed to personally delivering money to those who need it most.

at the SisterFund, a private women's fund that brings financial support to local grassroots projects. She sees her work as a bridge between organizations with different methods and ideas whose goal is the same.

"We really try to hold together various segments often severed against each other to create dialogue and to use our energy to reach out, rather than fighting each other," she said.

At tonight's event, she will read sections of the book that feature various and diverse voices of women involved in work for Afghanistan.

"At the end of the day, and at the end of the chapters, everyone is saying the same thing," Mehta said. "Women need to be a part of building our societies."

Women for Afghan Women will continue its activism to maintain a semblance of stability in Afghanistan while knowing that the future is fragile and could be taken away at any moment because of lack of funds or the possibility of war.

"The road we're on is divided, and the forces are against us," she said. "But the energy we feel is an experience of a moment of hope against all odds."

Despite Mehta's global focus, she looks forward to her return to Iowa City, bringing her life's passion full circle.

"I left a piece of my heart in Iowa City," she said. "It means the world to me."

'X' marks the suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comic book publisher Marvel and 20th Century Fox have settled a federal lawsuit over licensing rights to the X-Men characters.

Terms of the settlement were not released, but the dispute was "amicably resolved," and both sides are looking forward to expanding the relationship, according to a Fox statement issued this week.

Fox produced the 2000 film X-Men, a hit based on the comic-book characters. A sequel is scheduled for release this year.

Marvel and the studio sued each other in 2001. Fox sued Marvel Enterprises, Tribune Entertainment, and Fireworks Entertainment, claiming the syndicated TV show "Mutant X" violated an agreement licensing the X-Men characters for future films.

horoscopes

Friday, March 7, 2003 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look at your options for the future and begin planning. This is a good day to start new ventures, such as education or travel in pursuit of business.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will be emotional today, but if you channel that energy into being affectionate, great things can happen. The more creative you are in whatever you do today, the better the results will be.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be a bit fickle today, especially if you have more than one love interest in your life. Try not to be indecisive with the ones that mean the most to you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your ability to say what you think in a most eloquent way will aid you in getting things done. Plan to take a trip; it will be good for you to venture out.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone you know through work may try to make you look bad. Don't rely on anyone to pick up the slack. It will be up to you to see matters through to the end.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You will have excellent ideas for furthering your career or making money by freelancing or starting your own business. Lots of new contacts can be made that will be beneficial to you down the road.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you have overspent, you may have to put in extra hours. You can make financial gains through your career choices today if you are willing to apply for a better position.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Partnerships may be a reason for concern if you haven't done your research well. Just because someone tells you that he or she can do certain jobs doesn't mean that the job will be done well.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your fast retorts and action will give you the edge today. You will have a lively approach to everything you do, but don't let your enthusiasm lead you down an unrealistic path.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will be in an entrepreneurial mood today. Everything you touch will turn in your favor. You will have the know-how when it comes to making extra cash.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may want to bury your head in a good book and forget about what's going on in the world around you. This can be a favorable day to go over your important papers.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ask friends and relatives for advice. Once you set your mind on what you are doing, you should be able to make headway with confidence. This can be a progressive day.

BCS forms group to discuss plans

College football's Bowl Championship Series announced Thursday the formation of a Presidential Committee to discuss the sport's postseason structure when contract with ABC expires after the 2005 season, reported Sports Illustrated.

Mike Tranghese, chairman of the BCS, said an advisory committee consisting of athletics directors from the six BCS conferences will be formed in the near future.

Tranghese first announced plans for the committee and its mission at the Fiesta Bowl in January, mentioning that a long-debated playoff could be a possibility.

"There are four options," he said then. "We can go back to the old system, we can stay where we are, we can tweak it, or we can go to a playoff. We're going to spend some time and talk about all of [the possibilities]."

The presidents are: N.C. State's Marye Anne Fox, Miami's Donna Shalala, Penn State's Graham Spanier, Nebraska's Harvey Periman, Ole Miss' Robert Khayat, and Oregon's David Frohnmayer.

Hawkeyes face Wildcats in regular season finale

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
 THE DAILY IOWAN

After Wednesday night's atrocious outing in East Lansing, Iowa fans find themselves asking if things could get any worse. It would be hard to rival the 82-54 drubbing Michigan State handed the Hawkeyes, but it could be done.

How about a loss at home on Senior Day to lowly Northwestern?

It could happen, but the likelihood of the Wildcats humiliating the Hawkeyes like that Saturday is about as good as finding an Iowa player to say something positive about the team's last outing.

The Hawkeyes (14-12, 6-9) limp into Carver-Hawkeye Arena for their Big Ten regular-season finale against Northwestern (11-15, 3-12) in search of answers as the team prepares for next week's conference tournament. They'll also be looking to stave off a repeat of Wednesday night's performance.

"There's not much we can say about the way we came out and played [Wednesday]," said center Jared Reiner. "I don't know where we were."

Iowa committed a season-high 19 turnovers against the Spartans and suffered miserably against Michigan State's zone defense, shooting just 35.3 percent from the floor — its worst showing in Big Ten play this season.

"We expected a zone, and we prepared for it," said guard Chauncey Leslie, who along with Josh Kimm will play his final regular-season game in Iowa City on Saturday. "We just didn't execute."

But Iowa isn't the only team that struggles against the zone. Many Big Ten teams have

Faulkner shines in Iowa's first Big Ten Tournament matchup

INDIANAPOLIS — In the first half, Iowa shot enough bricks that Northwestern could have built a house.

The Hawkeyes only shot 35.7 percent from the field and turned the ball over 10 times, allowing the Wildcats to carry a 34-28 lead into halftime.

Northwestern guard Kristin Ambrose was the chief house-builder in the first half for the Wildcats, scoring 19 points and going 4-5 in 3-point attempts.

In the second half however, Hawkeyes Tracy Schrupp and Kristi Faulkner handily demolished Northwestern's cozy bungalow. The Hawkeyes erased the Wildcats' lead early in the second half and took over the game in a 70-58 victory.

"I'm thrilled to come in here and have a good first-round win," Iowa coach Lisa Bluder said. "It's a very nice win — hopefully, we have the jitters out of the way."

Iowa will play No. 2 seed Minnesota today at Consecro Field House at 5 p.m. CST. The Gophers received a first-round bye.

One of the biggest strengths for the Hawkeyes on Thursday was on the boards, out-rebounding the Wildcats 52-22.

"I am extremely pleased with our board work," Bluder said.

Schrupp had only two points in the first half, but she came out in the second like a bulldozer with Faulkner as her assistant. Faulkner was the only Hawkeye to have a solid first half with 17 points, shooting 6-8 from the field.

Iowa's regular-season leading scorer, Jennie Lillis, didn't get good looks at the basket, going 3-12 for the game and scoring 11 points.

Bluder said she felt Schrupp's good game was a result of Lillis'

Iowa's win brought on by personal heroics

Kristi Faulkner didn't give up on her teammates. And she didn't allow them to give up on themselves.

When the guard stood at the free-throw line with 4.8 seconds left in the Hawkeyes' first game at the Big Ten Tournament in Indianapolis on Thursday, she smiled, satisfied.

Faulkner clanked the first free throw, but by then, it didn't really matter.

She'd done all she could — and it was more than enough.

The game featured personal heroics, including key contributions from a Tracy Schrupp few fans have seen before. She didn't take elbows or bungled up shots personally — she just kept coming at Wildcat defenders in the low post, as a center should do.

Jennie Lillis moved the defense and ruled the boards, even though her game in the rim wasn't king.

Down the stretch, Johanna Solverson laid in foul shots,

History runs deep for Moore, Hawkeyes in Big Ten Tournament

BY JEROD LEUPOLD
 THE DAILY IOWAN

History is very important for the Iowa wrestling team this weekend at the Big Ten championships.

Last year, Iowa beat Michigan by 7.5 points and lost to Minnesota by 45.

"What we found out the last two years at the Big Ten is that we had two weight classes that didn't score points," coach Jim Zalesky said. "We had a lot of guys in the finals, but getting zero in two events is going to hurt you. We need to score in every weight class to be champions."

Junior Cliff Moore, is steeped in history of the sport. Moore began his wrestling career in kindergarten with his uncle Denny Moore who organized a YMCA program.

Even then, Moore was a competitor.

"I'd push myself hard," Moore said. "I used to get headaches and throw up all the time."

But as he grew older the pressures of competition went away.

"I was nervous because my dad and uncle always watched me," Moore said. "But when you win tournaments, it keeps you going."

When he graduated from high school, Moore amassed a 139-2 record and knew where he wanted to go.

"[It's the] tradition here," Moore said. "I always wanted to come here and work hard with Iowa wrestlers."

Moore's freshman year inundated him with the pride of the Hawkeyes because of Doug Schwab, Eric Juergens, and Jody Strittmatter. Moore said they helped him make the jump from high school to college, specifically in technique and mental toughness.

"It's not what you don't do," Moore said. "It's what you do — the will to succeed."

His attitude and controlled wrestling reflects his 25-6 record. Moore's staunch defense and deceptively quick shots has cata-pulted him to No. 3 in the nation.

"He's never been a flashy wrestler," Zalesky said. "I'll be watching his matches not thinking that much is happening. Then I'll look at the score and he's up 10-2."

Moore has only been defeated in the Big Ten by Minnesota's No. 1 nationally ranked Ryan Lewis. Lewis owns a 2-1 advantage in their last three meetings. Moore is looking forward to a fourth.

"We're No. 1 and No. 2 seeds, that's what it should be in the finals," Moore said. "You have to believe that you're the best and be prepared for any possibility."

Iowa applies breaks with basics

BY KELLY BEATON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Nathan Blair
Tom Dunn

The No. 6 Hawkeye men gymnasts will try to remedy their three-meet losing streak when they take on the University of Illinois-Chicago tonight at the UI Field House.

Coach Tom Dunn hopes a heavy dose of getting back to basics will be just what the doctor ordered for Iowa.

"We have to be more consistent and make fewer mistakes," he said. "It's that time of year where our focus is on consistency, and we're going to forget about new things in their skills and routines."

Pommel horse and floor exercise "have been pretty rough" for the Hawkeyes of late, Dunn said. That was especially the case last week in Champaign, Ill., where the Hawkeyes fell to No. 2 Penn State and No. 7 Illinois. Iowa's 213,750 total team points were not enough to compete with either the Nittany Lions' 217,250, nor the Illini's 216,450.

The Hawkeyes were also stung with some uncharacteristically poor performances in the vault last weekend, where they scored just 35.700 as a team.

"Vaulting was very bad for us last weekend, but against Michigan the week before it was excellent, so I don't understand that," said a concerned Dunn.

The Hawkeyes will use tonight's meet to workout the final kinks of the season and assess their total roster in preparation for the Big Ten championships in Columbus, Ohio, March 28-29.

"We'll use this meet to prepare, try to correct some problems we've been having, and try out some new guys to see if they can help us out during the championship season," Dunn said.

pare, try to correct some problems we've been having, and try out some new guys to see if they can help us out during the championship season," Dunn said.

Linus Gaveika will continue his gradual comeback from the two dislocated ankles he suffered Dec. 7 at the Black-and-Gold intrasquad meet by performing in vault competition.

Albuquerque, N.M., native Jacques Bourchard, who is in his first semester at Iowa, will likely see action on the still rings for the Hawkeyes. Fellow freshman Eric Bourland may see action as well on the high bar.

Illinois-Chicago is coming off a season-best 209.6 effort against Air Force. Although UIC won't present the toughest challenge the Hawkeyes have faced this season, it does possess talent, especially all-around performer Neil Faustino. He leads UIC in the still rings with a 9.4 average, which is better than any member of the Hawkeyes, and he has scored as high as 52.65 in the of 196.675, which the Hawkeyes recorded on March 3, 2001, still remains a record.

Iowa women's gymnastics coach Mike Lorenzen admitted there was a rivalry between his Hawkeyes and Big Ten foe Illinois, but he described it as "fun and friendly."

"It was a very similar situation to this one where we had been struggling a little bit earlier in the year with consistency, and then all of the sudden we just really got on a roll, and the roll really got kicked off when we went to Illinois," Lorenzen said.

"It's not like some of the other schools that we have rivalries with, who shall remain nameless," he said.

The pace is beginning to pick up for the Hawkeyes, who had what Lorenzen called their best meet

One reason Lorenzen gave for the fun and friendly attitude was that he and Fighting Illini coach Bob Starkell are good friends. But chances are another reason the Hawkeyes enjoy competing against Illinois is their vivid memory of recording the highest team score in school history the last time they traveled to compete in Champaign.

Although the No. 21-ranked Iowa squad has continued to improve vastly over the past few years under Lorenzen, the score of the season at Illinois-Chicago last weekend despite scoring lower than the team felt it deserved.

It was a very similar situation to this one where we had been struggling ... all of a sudden we just got on a roll, and the roll, got kicked off when we went to Illinois.

With three meets remaining before the Big Ten championships, the Hawkeyes are focusing on the minor details in order to clean up their routines, and the team's general consensus is that everything is falling into place at the right time.

"We work on [details] every day in practice," said junior All-American Alexis Maday. "It just depends on whether or not it comes out Havelkova and Valerie Vladea is ranked No. 58 nationally.

The No. 54 Iowa women's tennis team looks to nab its second Big Ten victory of the season when the Hawkeyes host No. 47 Minnesota this weekend.

"It'll be a hard match," coach Paul Wardlaw said. "I think they'll be one of the favorites to win the Big Ten. It'll be another even match."

The Gophers are 6-3 this season and 1-1 in the Big Ten, with wins over Marshall, Harvard, Denver, Purdue, Wake Forest, and Drake. Angela Buergis, the No. 69 singles player in the country, leads the team. The doubles team of Michaela Steinbock with a final score of (6-3, 5-7, 7-6 [8-6]). Haas is ranked No. 107 in the latest ITA Collegiate Division I rankings.

Minnesota coach Tyler Thomson said he believes that the No. 1 singles duel will be a key matchup.

"The results I've seen suggest that Cassie Haas is playing well, so I would expect it will be competitive," he said.

Wardlaw said he thinks the Big Ten tournament will give his team some extra confidence.

"I think we'll be ready for the match," he said. "Big Ten matches always bring out the best in teams. We know the importance of the match."

He said he has been focusing on competitive intensity, discipline, and shot selection with the team in practice this week.

"The key to the match for us is to become more disciplined and to improve our response to situations that are unsettling," he said.

Haas said she believes a sense of fortitude would greatly help the team.

IOWA MEN'S AND WOMEN'S TRACK

Last chance for Hawks to qualify

BY J.K. PERRY
THE DAILY IOWAN

We wanted to experiment to see if things could be faster. If we can't beat 11:30 then we'll know we did something wrong.

Wayne Angel,
assistant track coach

The Iowa track women and men will be down to their final opportunity this weekend to qualify for the NCAA championships.

Not all members of the team will compete at the Last Chance Meet in Ames — only those with a shot at qualifying.

Included in the mix for the women will be an experimental distance medley relay team, Sarah Steffen in the 60-meter hurdles, and Jessie Strand in the pole vault.

The distance medley relay team of the past few weeks has consisted of Becca Thompson, Aisha Hume, Atalie Barber, and Michelle Lahann. This weekend, coaches are going to take a risk and change things around.

Barber, who is normally reserved for the 800-meter portion of the race, will replace Thompson in the 1,200 meter first leg of the race. Nicole

Charles will move into the lineup for the 400-meter leg of the race, Hume will run the third leg instead of the second, and Lahann will remain in the fourth position.

"We wanted to experiment to see if things could be faster," said assistant coach Wayne Angel. "If we can't beat 11:30, then we'll know we did something wrong."

Last year at the Last Chance Meet, Steffen nearly qualified for the NCAAs, only missing the provisional mark of 8.43 by one hundredth of a second. She looked strong in practice this week after a long weekend at the Big Tens, coach James Grant said.

The largest improvement of all will have to come from pole vaulter Jessie Strand. She has been consistent all year, but has not been near the provisional mark of 3 meters 90 centimeters, or around 12 feet 9.50 inches. Her best so far came at the Cyclone Classic where she went 12 feet flat.

"I know from being a pole vaulter that your biggest improvements can come from one day to the next," said assistant coach Steve Callaway.

The men's track team will be bring Derrick Burks in the 60, Adam Thomas in the mile, and Joe Welter in the 5,000 to the meet.

Burks ran well at the Big Tens last weekend, where he sprinted a 6.84 in the preliminaries. The time gave him the fourth best time in Big Ten competition. He looks to reach the provisional qualification mark of 6.72.

Ken Kemeny will not be competing at this weekend's meet. Kemeny already provisionally qualified for the NCAAs, but his best throw puts him at No. 28 nationally. The NCAA only selects the top 16-20 finishers.

Kemeny and his coaches felt that he had given his all at the Big Tens, and competing in this weekend's meet would be redundant.

"We're calling it quits for the indoor season," said coach Larry Wiczorek about the rest of the team not competing this weekend.

NFL

Redskins still going after players

(AP) — The Washington Redskins, by far the most active team in the first week of free agency, struck again Thursday, signing New York Jets' return man Chad Morton to an offer sheet.

Washington promised Morton, a restricted free agent, he'll have a chance to double as a running back.

The Jets have a week to match the five-year, $8 million offer to the player who had two kickoff returns for touchdowns — including the game-winner in overtime — in last year's season opener in Buffalo. Asked if the Jets would match the offer, general manager Terry Bradway said, "We will make a decision at the appropriate time."

If Morton moves to Washington, he would join a corps of unproven running backs — Ladell Betts and Kenny Watson, backups last year, and Trung Canidate, obtained in a trade from St. Louis. Stephen Davis, the team's starter for the last five years, was cut last week in a salary-cap move.

In the week since the NFL's free agent period began, the Skins have added nine players, eight as free agents and Canidate in the trade. In addition to Morton, they gave an offer sheet to another restricted free agent, Green Bay safety Matt Bowen.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL BIG TEN TOURNAMENT

Determined Faulkner sets the pace

April Calhoun commanded plays, and Schrupp took more of her newfound game groove to the boards.

But Faulkner ruled her team with the right amount of patience and the seasoned sensibility of a junior who wised up on the bench, watching as she put in her time after transferring from Illinois in 2000. She rooted on the sideline when the Hawkeyes won the Big Ten Tournament under the charge of point guard Cara Consuegra and drummed out a thunderous run to the NCAA Tournament in 2001.

Schrupp

This year is her year to lead, and Faulkner showed her young teammates what it takes to be a contender and a competitor.

Every time the Hawkeyes needed an extra push in the climactic back-and-forth rendezvous, the junior with the quick-draw jumper put in her reassurance to rattled teammates.

From the opening minutes, Faulkner muscled in for rebounds and baseline lay-ups and traded treys with early hot-hand Kristin Ambrose. She demonstrated ultimate finesse after traveling for a Hawkeye turnover, then recovering on the next Iowa drive with a 3-pointer for emphasis.

Sometimes, she lay low enough to allow the glow of other players to shine through, and other times, she resurrected tired teammates and stripped the ball past the momentum-driven Wildcats.

Faulkner frosted her 20 points from the field with an additional seven from the free-throw line, but as her last arced into the iron, the junior's face was already fixed in tight concentration.

The Hawkeyes and Faulkner will play another day.

poor outing.

"I think they were so worried about Lillis that they didn't concentrate on Tracy," Bluder said. "She got some good looks, too. When Tracy got the ball, she didn't have too much attention."

The two-woman wrecking machine got to work quickly. Schrupp scored four of Iowa's first six points in the half. Faulkner backed her up to tie the game at 41 with 14:58 remaining in the game. But Schrupp wasn't done destroying the Wildcats yet — she converted two free throws to give the Hawkeyes their first lead, 43-42, since 9-8 at the 12:35 mark in the first half.

Faulkner made two free throws to give the Hawkeyes a 53-51 lead, and after a Wildcat turnover, the 5-8 junior made a 3-point shot for Iowa's biggest lead to that point, 58-53, with 5:35 remaining.

The Hawkeyes held Ambrose to only three points in the second half.

"We had to concentrate on Ambrose in the second half because of her great first half," Lillis said.

The home wreckers secured the win for Iowa. Faulkner finished with 27 points and Schrupp scored a career-high 18.

"Schrupp had the second half of her life," Bluder said.

Wildcats to focus on Iowa's defense shown a lack of success when the zone has been employed against them, including Northwestern. The Wildcats saw plenty of the defense from Ohio State during their 52-48 loss on Wednesday. And they know they'll see even more of it on Saturday.

"The zone can sometimes neutralize our team a little bit," said Northwestern coach Bill Carmody. "I told them, 'You're going to play Iowa, which plays a 2-3 zone, and then Minnesota or Ohio State [in Chicago] which plays a 2-3 zone.' So we're going to have to get together and come up with some sort of remedy."

Breaking through Iowa's defense will be priority No. 1 for Carmody's team. His Princeton-style offense, which relies on a bevy of backdoor cuts and precision timing is just the style of play that could thrive against a slow-to-react Iowa team. And it's also the type of system that can stall miserably against a strong defense.

The unique style of play nearly helped Northwestern upset Iowa in Evanston on Jan. 8, when the Hawkeyes had to throw together a frenzy of defensive stops to hold off the Wildcats, 68-63.

Not much hinges on the outcome of Saturday's battle. Both Iowa and Northwestern will begin play at next week's Big Ten Tournament on Thursday with their respective opponents as yet to be determined.

NBA ROUNDUP

Chicago 119, Washington 105

CHICAGO (AP) — Eddy Curry had 24 points and 10 rebounds Thursday night as the Chicago Bulls beat Golden State 119-105 and snapped the Warriors' six-game winning streak.

Tyson Chandler added 23 points and 14 rebounds.

Jamal Crawford had 15 points and a career-high 10 assists in 31 minutes, while Jason Williams scored nine points with three assists in 17 minutes. Jalen Rose scored all 21 of his points in the second half.

Gilbert Arenas scored 28 to lead

Golden State and Antawn Jamison added 22.

Leading by five at the half, the Bulls ran out to 16-point lead after three quarters, getting a pair of 3-pointers from Donyell Marshall and one each from Crawford and Rose.

But the Warriors turned to their bench and scored the first seven points of the fourth quarter to make it 88-79 with just under 10 minutes remaining.

Then Williams and Rose hit jumpers as the Bulls regained control and pulled away again.

San Antonio 92, New Jersey 78

SAN ANTONIO — Tim Duncan scored 21 points and grabbed 21 rebounds, and Tony Parker added 21 points, 10 in the fourth quarter, as San Antonio held off a late charge by New Jersey.

The Nets cut the Spurs' margin to 83-77 with 1:41 left on consecutive jumpers by Jason Collins and Kenyon Martin. But San Antonio finished with a 9-1 run capped by a 3-pointer by Duncan at the final buzzer.

Jason Kidd shot 4-for-19 for 13 points, but had 13 assists.

IOWA MEN'S SWIMMING

Last chance to qualify for NCAAs

BY DREW MANROE
THE DAILY IOWAN

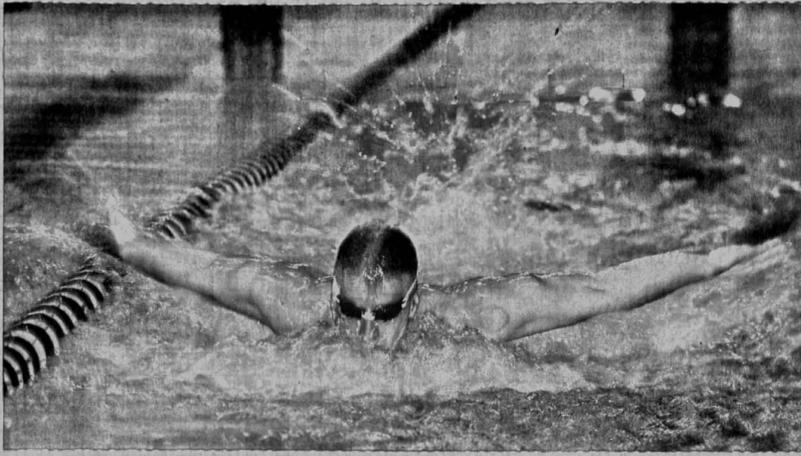

The atmosphere at the Iowa Senior championships will be very different for the Iowa men's swimming team from that of the women's.

The meet — which will begin tonight and continue through March 9 — isn't a college competition. Instead, the Hawkeye men will compete against a number of Iowa's best club teams, which would ordinarily make the meet a fun one bereft of pressure.

But unlike the Iowa women's team, the tournament will also serve as a last chance to qualify for the NCAA championships — held March 27-29 — for the Hawkeye men, and this adds a great deal of suspense to the meet.

The swimmers with no chance of qualifying for the NCAA's will swim "off" events — events they don't normally swim in the season. But coach John Davey said the swimmers on the cusp of qualifying will go full-throttle in their usual events.

"There are still some guys who have a chance to make it [to the NCAA's]," Davey said. "I'm not too concerned about the team score — this is more about individual accomplishments. Some guys are going to be swimming off events, but many of the guys will be swimming the same events as at Big Tens."

Davey mentioned junior Andrei Prada and sophomore Calvin Shelangoski as swimmers with the greatest chances of making the cut for the NCAA's. Davey said their ticket to the meet would rest on their times in the 100 breast.

At the Big Ten championships on Feb. 28, Shelangoski and Prada recorded the Hawkeyes' first- and second-best season times in the event, with times of 55.53 and 55.56, respectively.

And both swimmers are working as hard in preparation for this meet as they would any other.

"My approach is to try and make the NCAA's," Shelangoski said. "I'm going to do everything I can to make that happen."

"All the meets are important, and this one's no different," Prada added.

For seniors, such as Chris Brunson, the meet will mean more than a last chance at making the NCAA's.

"I'd like to believe that I have a shot at the NCAA's — it's what I've worked all year for," Brunson said. "But for me, it's one last shot at improving on some of my lifetime bests. So I'm going to be swimming all on events."

Competition begins this evening at 5 p.m. at the Field House pool. Admission is free.

IOWA WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Top Iowa clubs prepare for relaxing season finally

BY DREW MANROE
THE DAILY IOWAN

After months of grueling training — which culminated in an eighth-place showing at the Big Ten championships on Feb. 19-22 — the Iowa women's swimming team is finishing off its season in a more relaxed fashion at the Iowa Senior championships, taking place beginning tonight through March 9.

Iowa will be the only college team competing in the meet. The rest of the competition will be composed of some of the best club teams Iowa has to offer.

For this reason, winning the meet isn't of prime importance to the Hawkeyes, although they are expected to dominate.

Sophomore Jennifer Skolaski has already been named the lone Iowa swimmer to qualify for the NCAA championships on March 21-23, so there is no pressure on the Hawkeyes to post season-best times in hopes of making the NCAA cut.

Coach Garland O'Keefe said the theme of the meet will simply be to have fun, while giving the team's younger swimmers more college experience.

"We really swim [the Iowa Senior championships] for fun," O'Keefe said. "Also, there are freshmen, and even some sophomores, who need more experience, and it's my goal to get that for them. So they'll be competing this weekend."

Another aspect of the meet appealing to many of the swimmers is that it offers them a chance to compete in events they don't get to focus on in the heart of the season.

"I'm going to get to compete in events I haven't swum since I used to swim on club teams," senior Michele Schmerbauch said. "In college you have to focus on just a few events — so I'm excited to see what I can do." While the majority of the swimmers' seasons are winding down, Skolaski is in the midst of difficult training as she prepares to face some of the best college competition in the country.

"But for everyone else, the focus of this weekend is strictly to have fun."

The competition begins tonight at 5 p.m. at the Field House pool in Iowa City. Admission is free.

IOWA MEN'S TENNIS

Waters and Haug due for spectacular show

BY KATIE LOW
THE DAILY IOWAN

A ranked Big Ten opponent stands in the way of the Iowa men's tennis team this weekend. Iowa (3-3 overall, 0-2 Big Ten) will take on No. 13 Minnesota (8-2) in Minneapolis on Saturday.

The Hawkeyes are hoping to capitalize off the momentum from last weekend's victory and grab a win against the Golden Gophers.

However, the team continued to struggle with doubles, losing two of three matches and giving Drake the doubles point. Iowa has been able to win the doubles point only twice so far this season. The team is 1-1 when it wins the doubles point.

"We're still fiddling with the doubles lineup, and hopefully, we can put something together that will do well this weekend," coach Steve Houghton said.

The Gophers will most likely be a very formidable opponent for the Hawkeyes. Minnesota holds a 45-33-3 series advantage over Iowa. Last year it defeated the Hawkeyes, 5-2, in Iowa City. All of the Gophers' opponents this season have been nationally ranked.

"They're good from top to bottom," Houghton said. "They've got good depth. Their guys at the bottom could conceivably be playing at the top for other teams."

However, Minnesota is not taking the match lightly either.

"I expect it to be a very tough match," Minnesota coach David Geatz said. "They are well coached and always play us tough."

Iowa boasts an intimidating presence in No. 1 singles player Stuart Waters. The senior is 5-1 in singles competition this year, with his lone loss coming at the hands of Michael Calkins of No. 2 Illinois. He has defeated four of his six opponents in straight sets.

Geatz believes that Waters and Minnesota's No. 1 singles player Thomas Haug will give the spectators a show.

"I think Waters and Haug will be a great match," he said. "Haug is playing well, and Waters is one of the top players in the Big Ten."

Ultimately, Houghton said, he believes the fate of the match for the Hawkeyes lies not in their physical abilities but in their mental strength.

"We need to play with confidence at key points in the match," he said. "Our guys need to believe in their shots and play aggressively in those situations."

IOWA BASEBALL

Weather allows Iowa chance to change gears

BY KELLY BEATON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Throughout the majority of this young season, the Hawkeye baseball team has been stuck in neutral.

Iowa's first six games were either canceled or postponed. Finally, the Hawkeyes got a chance to hit the field March 3 against the Wichita State Shockers. Unfortunately for Iowa, its opponent on the day was far more battle-tested, having already played 10 games. The Shockers swept the Hawkeyes, 3-2, and 13-2.

Now that the Hawkeyes (0-2) have their bearings, they look to make the season's initial mark in the win column against the 4-4 Southern Illinois Salukis. The series will get underway in Carbondale, Ill., with a doubleheader Saturday starting at noon and concluding with a single game the next day beginning at 1 p.m.

According to Iowa coach Scott Broghamer, the Hawkeyes are eager after the last couple of weekends, much of which they spent sitting on their hands waiting out delays.

"One thing you can't control is the weather, and we certainly think our administration did everything it could to help us get our games in," he said. "We just need to play games."

A glance at the current Big Ten standings shows the Hawkeyes may have been put at a disadvantage by Mother Nature. Meanwhile, Northwestern, Michigan, Michigan State, and 2002 Big Ten regular season champion Minnesota have all played at least seven.

"I don't think it's going to hurt us in the long run," said Broghamer. "We've got the Bubble [to practice in] and we've been outside for a couple of games now. We just need to take care of business when we're on the field."

Broghamer said Iowa will contact neighboring state schools already on their schedule, such as Western Illinois and Northern Illinois about adding games, as well as other schools looking to make up losses.

The Salukis took a different route from the Hawkeyes, to get last weekend's games under their belt. Coach Dan Callahan chose to have his squad charter a bus to Memphis, Tenn. He ended up regretting the decision.

"We had a very disappointing loss last weekend," he said. "We drove three and a half hours south just to play, and we lost to a Division III school, Blackburn College."

The Salukis are led by Greg Andrews, batting .419, and P.J. Finigan, batting .316, who also serves as the squad's closer, where he has recorded one save. Finigan was a freshman All-American last year.

"They're very competitive, and they're in the same boat we are; they've had some games rained out," he said. "I think everyone in this area right now needs to play games and see how their kids react to [game] situations."

IOWA SOFTBALL

Six over .300 proves Hawkeyes progress

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

Nearly a month into the season the Iowa softball team continues to make needed improvements that will serve the team well once Big Ten play starts later this month.

The Hawkeyes will look to keep making those positive strides with a trip to the Seminole Invite in Tallahassee, Fla., this weekend. The tournament field promises to give Iowa its toughest competition yet this season, provided that Iowa advances out of pool play and into the championship round. Among the 16 teams participating in the tournament are traditional powerhouses Michigan and Nebraska, as well as host Florida State and fellow Big Ten foe Penn State.

Iowa will face off with Florida A&M today at 2 p.m. before facing Texas A&M at 6 p.m. On Saturday, Iowa faces Georgia State, a team the Hawkeyes defeated twice earlier this season in Atlanta.

Last weekend saw the Hawkeyes brave frigid temperatures, rain, and snow in Louisville at the Cardinal Spring Classic, in which Iowa improved to 6-5 overall with a pair of wins over the host Cardinals and Indiana State. In Louisville, the Hawkeyes had no problem scoring runs as they combined for 20 in the two games. Over those two games, Iowa managed a remarkable .516 on-base percentage, which included 22 hits and 11 walks.

Pitching continues to come around for the team; sophomore ace Lisa Birocci shaved an entire point from her earned-run average last weekend. Her ERA now stands at a paltry 0.98 to go along with 74 strikeouts in just 43 innings of work.

After a slow start during the season's opening week, the offense has come on as well; a grand total of six Hawkeye batters hitting at or above a .300 clip. In the starting lineup only No. 3 hitter, Jessica Bashor, and No. 9 hitter, Laura Chipman, are below the current standard, though Bashor's .241 average includes a pair of home runs and five runs batted in.
